The Complete Poetical Works of

Spenser

The poetry of Edmund Spenser was born out of the struggle between two warring elements in his nature: that of worldly ambition — dreams of preferment, wealth, importance, titles — as opposed to his mystical idealism. In a supreme measure he possessed the gift of song and imagination with which he infected his own generation and those that have followed. Called "The Poet's Poet," Spenser thought in poetry, permeating his writing with a sensuous delightsomeness and a grave moral charm, giving that which Dante spoke of as "a residuum of prose in the depths of poetry."

Spenser clothed his idealism in gorgeous allegorical raiment. Loving the wild green beauty of Ireland that stimulated his imagination, yet hating her never-ending troubles, he clothed her in the rich poetry of old legends. He disliked the seamy side of the court, but he was able to recognize its finer spirits. Like his contemporaries he found it difficult to distinguish his chivalric idealization of Queen Elizabeth from that of England herself. In the Faery Queen Spenser hoped to charm the imagination and action of the prominent personalities of his time into better things, and in so doing realize his dream of an empire of order, power, and prosperous peace.

PREFACE

THE text of Spenser given in this volume is the result of a double collation. First, the copy to be sent to the printer was collated throughout with the original editions in the British Museum; then the proof-sheets of the greater part, as they came from the press, were collated with other copies of the same editions obtained in this country. The Faery Queen (except for a few pages), Complaints, Colin Clout's Come Home Again, Astrophel, and the Four Hymns were thus collated a second time, and, in effect, the Shepherd's Calendar, too, though, for that, recourse was had not to the original itself, but to the photographic facsimile of Dr. Sommer. Daphnaïda, the Amoretti and Epithalamion, the Prothalamion, the four Commendatory Sonnets, and the matter in the Appendix could not be collated twice, because copies of the original editions were not in this country accessible.

For most of these separate volumes or single pieces there could be no dispute about the text to be adopted as standard, for they were published but once during the poet's lifetime, and the collected folios of 1609 and 1611, issued ten years after his death, could pretend to no superior authoritativeness. For them the standard text was manifestly that of the first edition. Three, however, were published during his lifetime more than once: the Shepherd's Calendar in 1579, 1581, 1586, 1591, and 1597; Daphnaïda in 1591 and 1596; the first three books of the Faery Queen in 1590 and 1596. Concerning these there might be doubt. As to the Shepherd's Calendar, whoever will study the long list of variants of all kinds in the successive editions of that volume will probably note (1) that the first edition contains several perfectly obvious misprints or blunders corrected in the later; (2) that of those changes in the later editions which are not the mere correction of obvious blunders in the first, a considerable proportion are changes which mar the style; (3) that most others are changes which are neither for the better nor for the worse, which are mere changes; (4) that not more than one or two could fairly be called improvements. A poet, for instance, who has written

does not deliberately change thou to the ; and if a poet has written of Abel

‘So lowted he unto his Lord,
Such favour couth he fynd,
That sithens never was abhord
The simple shepheards kynd,’

he does not take the trouble to change sithens never to never sithens. When one notes, too, that these changes are mostly such as might result from careless reading of copy, and that those which cannot be misreadings merely reduce archaic irregularities to the level of academic evenness, one inclines to attribute them to the printer. When one notes, finally, that the first edition contains fewer obvious blunders and misprints than the later, these later will hardly seem more trustworthy. The same is true of Daphnaïda: the two or three changes found in the second edition by no means bear the mark of authenticity. If, indeed, we had any fair reason to suppose that Spenser, like Ronsard and Tasso, was given to the revision of his work, that after he had once completed a poem and seen it in print, he would study it anew with an eye to perfecting it in detail, we might give more credit to the variants of these later editions. Such revision as we know him to have undertaken, however, was confined to bringing unpublished manuscript, as the phrase goes, 'up to date,' for printing. We have no reason to suppose that, if the printed poem were reissued, he at all concerned himself with revision of its text. For the Shepherd's Calendar and Daphnāida, therefore, the text adopted is in each case that of the first edition.

For the first three books of the Faery Queen the problem is somewhat different. Since these were not an independent poem, but merely the first installment of his magnum opus, Spenser found occasion, when he republished them in 1596 along with the first issue of the second three books, to make certain changes. He altered the original conclusion of Book III, that it might lead up more directly to Book IV. Certain inconsistencies of detail having perhaps been pointed out to him, he got rid of them with as little effort as might suffice — somewhat clumsily. He rewrote a line or two which did not please him. In one place he inserted a new stanza. These changes, not more than a dozen or so in all, are unmistakably his work. Unfortunately, there are many others in this second edition which resemble only too closely the variants in later editions of the Shepherd's Calendar. They bear every mark, that is, of being mere blunders of the printer due to hasty reading of copy: they do not spoil the sense, but they are too trivial and purposeless to be ascribed to the poet himself; sometimes they spoil the poetry. Under these circumstances the problem of the editor was not simple. He could not follow the first edition and ignore the authentic changes of the poet; nor did he wish to follow the second into all the changes that were mere printer's blunders; nor, of course, was there any certain test by which the changes of the poet might be distinguished from those of the printer. In the end, it seemed best to adopt the readings of the second edition as generally authoritative, but occasionally to retain those of the first when they were beyond fair question more characteristic, when, that is, one could not believe that Spenser would deliberately change from the earlier to the later.

It is not only in verbal readings, however, that the two editions differ; they differ also in spelling. The spelling of 1590 is somewhat like that of the Shepherd's Calendar, markedly archaic; that of 1596 is like that of the second three books of the poem, published at the same time, very much more modern. The difference extends to the forms of words: hether usually becomes hither; lenger, longer; then, than, etc. Now, it may be that the poet, having adopted for his second three books more modern spelling, and, in some cases, more modern forms of words, authorized his printer to reprint the first books in that style. Nobody who knows his work will for one minute suppose that he went through the first books himself and made all the changes necessary, together with hundreds of others absolutely unnecessary — for a good quarter of the differences in spelling are altogether without significance. In any case, the first edition of these books is printed much more correctly than the second; it represents a definite stage in Spenser's spelling and use of archaic word-forms; and there appears to be no compelling reason why, when an editor adopts the changes in phrasing, not more than two or three to the canto, which appear in the later edition, he should also adopt extensive changes in spelling which are of altogether doubtful authenticity and which serve no other purpose than to give a kind of external uniformity of appearance to the first and the second three books. The spelling of 1590 has therefore been retained.

The cantos on Mutability first appeared in the folio of 1609. In general, however, that and the folio of 1611 do no more than emend for the first time (without known authority) certain readings of the earlier texts which are untenable. Some of these emendations have been adopted — for want of better. Another set, adopted or suggested at random by various modern editors, calls for particular notice. Here and there in the Faery Queen, in perhaps twenty cases, the system of the stanza is shattered by an impossible rhyme, by a rhyme-word which does not even make assonance with its fellows. In some instances the blunder is beyond all correction; in most the correction lies open to every eye. Play is set down where the rhyme calls for sport; enclose where the rhyme calls for contain, spyde for saw, place for stead, etc. Some editors have treated these cases capriciously, now correcting, now leaving uncorrected; some have systematically refrained from correction, on the ground that the carelessness was probably of the poet's own commission. And so it may have been: in copying his manuscript fair he may have set down one word for another of the same meaning, or if he worked his stanza out in his mind before committing it to paper, he may have blundered in the mere writing. To maintain, however, that when he set down play as a rhyme to support, resort, port, he did not really intend to set down sport, is to credit him with singular obtuseness, and to print play, when there is at least an even chance that the blunder was the printer's, is surely to push fidelity to one's text beyond the bounds of reason. In these cases, therefore, the word demanded by rhyme and declared by sense is in this edition unhesitatingly adopted. All such emendations, and others, are noted, of course, in the List of Rejected Readings.

For the spelling, it is that of the original texts, but with three modifications: (1) the old use of capitals is made to conform to modern practice; (2) contractions are commonly expanded (e. g. Lo. to Lord); and (3) in some few cases, when the old division of words might puzzle the reader, it is disregarded — e. g. for thy (therefore) is uniformly printed forthy. The punctuation is modernized — with care not to falsify the sense.

The Glossary was built up on the principle of recording all words and phrases which in modern poetry would be obsolete or markedly archaic. Later, some of this material was transferred to the Notes. The scheme of division is that all words obsolete in form will be found in the Glossary, and such words, modern in form but obsolete in sense, as are of frequent occurrence. Rarer examples of modern words in obsolete senses will be found in the Notes, with due machinery of cross references. It is hoped that without much difficulty the 'general reader' may be able to acquaint himself with the exact meaning of any word or phrase which puzzles him. If he is annoyed by the inclusion of much that he could understand unaided, he is begged to remember that one purpose of Notes and Glossary is to furnish an approximately complete list of Spenser archaisms.

The debt of the editor of any classic to his predecessors must necessarily be great. That of the present editor was too great to be acknowledged in detail. To indicate in the Notes and elsewhere the source of every explanation or idea would have been to load them with the names of most who have labored in this field: all that could be done was to mark direct quotations. For some of the matter here offered for the first time he is furthermore indebted to various learned colleagues and friends, who helped him to what he could not find unaided; to others he owes much in the way of criticism and direct assistance. His thanks are particularly due to the Principal Librarian of the British Museum and to the Librarian of Harvard College for the use of those early editions of Spenser without which he could never have undertaken the most important part of his work.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

WHEN we read, toward the close of Hesperides,

'A wearied pilgrim, I have wandered here Twice five-and-twenty, bate me but one year,' we are sure that at the time of so writing Robert Herrick was forty-nine years old. If we could put equal trust in the similar record of sonnet LX of the Amoretti, we should know the exact year of the birth of Edmund Spenser, for beyond reasonable doubt that sonnet dates from the closing months of 1593. The record is, that

'since the winged god his planet cleare Began in me to move, one yeare is spent:
The which doth longer unto me appeare,
Then al those fourty which my life outwent.'

In prose: it is now a year since I fell in love; that twelvemonth seems longer to me than all the forty of my previous life. To deduct 41 from 1593 is to get 1552, which has accordingly found general acceptance as the poet's birth-year, and indeed is not in any respect improbable. One need only note that 'al those fourty' is a phrase somewhat too conveniently round to inspire confidence, that it might serve equally well for thirty-nine or forty-one, and thereby spoil the foregoing calculation.

The place of his birth is recorded in the classic passage of the Prothalamion: —

'At length they all to mery London came,
To mery London, my most kyndly nurse,
That to me gave this lifes first native sourse;
Though from another place I take my name,
An house of auncient fame.'

That is, though he was born, and presumably bred, in the capital, his paternal forbears were not Londoners. What was their native seat he nowhere tells us, but his most assiduous biographer, Dr. Grosart, has collected sufficient evidence to place them in eastern Lancashire, where, among many families of the name, were the Spensers of Hurstwood, lesser gentry of that region. These might well enough stand for the 'house of auncient fame.' It is likely, though, that this phrase includes a more distinguished family, the Spencers of Althorpe, with whom the poet frequently claims kinship. To the three daughters of that house are dedicated 'The Tears of the Muses,' 'Mother Hubberd's Tale,' and 'Muiopotmos,' and they are the 'Phyllis, Charillis, and sweet Amaryllis' of Colin Clout's Come Home Again,

'the sisters three,
The honor of the noble familie
Of which I meanest boast my selfe to be,
And most that unto them I am so nie.'

In any case, it is obvious that Spenser held himself to be of gentle birth. He never felt the need of establishing his gentility after the manner of Shakespeare.

That the name of his mother was Elizabeth¹ is all he tells us about either parent. We know, however, that his father most probably belonged to the guild of the Merchant

Tailors, and Dr. Grosart seeks to identify him with a John Spenser mentioned in the guild records, October, 1566, as 'a free journeyman' in the 'arte or mysterie of cloth-makynge.' Whoever he may have been, the poet's father was not well-to-do, for as late as the early months of 1569, the name of his son is entered among the 'poore scholars' in the 'scholls about London' who were presented with gowns from the estate of Robert Nowell; and in the accounts of the same fund, for the same year, is a second charitable item: '28 Aprill. To Edmond Spensore, scholler of the M'chante Tayler Schoole, at his gowinge to Penbrocke Hall in Chambridge, Xs.' At the university, too, in November, 1570, and in April, 1571, we find the poet still receiving aid from this fund.

Narrowness of means, however, did not harm the boy's education. The school of the Merchant Tailors, founded in 1560, was taught by Richard Mulcaster, and under his charge was becoming as good as any in London. Mulcaster, indeed, was in every way a remarkable teacher—a man of system, strict, even harsh, a believer in the educative powers of the rod, master, too, of wide and thorough learning. He certainly could train efficient scholars and men, and if he did not do well by Edmund Spenser, his pupil's later achievement does not declare the failure. It was while still under his training, that the youthful poet first appeared in print. The verse translations in Van der Noot's *Theatre*¹ cannot claim the dignity of an independent volume of juvenilia; they were quite possibly paid for at the classic rate of a penny a line; they cannot be said to bear witness to even the most ordinary knowledge of French; yet they do make evident that the boy's schooling, formal or informal, had brought him a very pretty command of his mother tongue and the faculty of turning out good verse to order.

On May 20, 1569, a short while before the Theatre was put on the market, Spenser matriculated at Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, as a sizar. There he remained for seven years. In January, 1573, he proceeded B. A., in June, 1576, he commenced M. A.; then, whether that a fellowship was denied him, or that he did not care for one, he left the university for good. His life there cannot have been always pleasant. As a sizar, or 'poor scholar,' his circumstances, if not painfully narrow, were at any rate far from easy. His health, too, was apparently uncertain, for at intervals we find his name on the sick list, once for seven weeks. On one occasion he seems to have been in trouble with the authorities for neglect of curriculum work or other such offence. That, in his own way, he nevertheless studied and read effectively is obvious from the varied learning which he later made manifest.

It was at Cambridge that Spenser first met Gabriel Harvey, the Hobbinol of his pastoral verse. Harvey was older than he by at least a year or two and much his senior in academic rank, for he came to Pembroke as fellow in November, 1570, when Spenser was still very far from his B. A. How early they became friends we cannot tell; it is sufficiently curious that they ever became friends at all. For Harvey was one of those exorbitantly superior people who make enemies right and left without knowing why, and, in spite of all that can be said for him, a 'ferocious pedant;' about the last man, one would think, to win the regard of Spenser. Yet he seems to have been kindly enough at bottom, and perhaps his serene self-conceit was offensive chiefly to the commonplace. As for his pedantry (which is nowadays being denied), one must bear in mind Spenser's own predilection for learning, which in those early years, before his genius had humanized his knowledge, may well have been somewhat indiscriminating. The course of their friendship was long. For a period, while Spenser was feeling his way to full self-possession, Harvey played the part of counsellor and guide, a part which found half-jesting, half-serious acceptance. Then, at about the time when their fundamental differences were becoming too seriously apparent, Spenser went to Ireland, and thereafter there could be no occasion for breach.

From Harvey's letters of 1573 we learn of a singular war at Pembroke. It was brought on, to his own wondering dismay, by Harvey himself, who, in the normal and unconscious exercise of his self-conceit, had contrived to exasperate some of his colleagues beyond all measure. When the time came for him to commence M. A., these men suddenly broke out, and for three months succeeded in blocking his path; then, having been discomfited, avenged themselves by shabby persecution. Nor did their enmity subside, for when, in 1578, his tenure of the fellowship expired, not even the influence of Leicester could secure its extension for a year. Such open animosities as these can hardly have failed to involve or affect Spenser. They and his supposed conflict with the authorities may serve to explain why, instead of taking a fellowship, the natural goal of such a career as his, he left the university on obtaining his second degree.

In any case, it was apparently not to a regular occupation that he retired, but to a sojourn of several months among his kinsfolk of eastern Lancashire. In that out-of-the-way and unpromising corner of the country there could of course be no settled career for a man of his gifts; there could at best be leisure for infinite verse-making, and, as auxiliary interest, leisure to fall in love. He seems to have found both. Who Rosalind was and what befell him at her hands are topics that belong rather to the history of the Shepherd's Calendar than to the concrete life of the poet: at all events, she furnished him matter for verses a plenty. In the end, 'for speciall occasion of private affayres,' says E. K. in the gloss to 'June,' 'and for his more preferment, removing out of the North-parts, [he] came into the South, as Hobbinoll indeede advised him privately.' Hobbinol, that is Harvey, might well think it time that his friend should begin life in earnest.

To do that it was not sufficient that he should compose poems and put them on the market. In those days the reading public was almost ludicrously small; even pamphletting and playwriting were not yet recognized occupations, and pure poetry, however popular, would not keep a man in bread. All the poets of that day were first men of another calling, then poets. For any impecunious young bard who could claim gentility and whose tastes were aristocratic, the natural course was to attach himself to the service of some nobleman, and to use his poetry, as best he might, for the furthering of his personal claims. To barter it for money was moreover in some degree to discredit his gentility.

When, therefore, Spenser came south again, perhaps in 1577, it was to obtain preferment with the great. We have evidence, not altogether conclusive, that in that year he was with Sir Henry Sidney in Ireland, acting as one of his secretaries; in any case, by 1578 we get a glimpse of him as secretary to Bishop Young of Rochester (the Roffynn of the September eclogue), who, as Master of Pembroke, had known him from the outset of his university days. Then, in the autumn of 1579, when the first of his extant letters is sent to Cambridge, we find him 'in some use of familiarity' with 'the two worthy gentlemen,' Philip Sidney and Edward Dyer, admitted to audience with the Queen, and employed as confidential emissary by the Earl of Leicester. There is reference in that letter to a coming mission to France; he is on the point of setting out; and in the Epistle of E. K., prefixed to the Shepherd's Calendar and dated in the preceding April, he is said to be 'for long time furre estraunged,' that is, far away from home, or out of the country, and not soon to return. It is evident that he was cultivating aristocratic connections to some purpose.

He was also cultivating the Muse, and with assiduity. These years are the period of his most multifarious poetizing. They are marked not only by the publication of the Shepherd's Calendar, but by the beginnings of the Faery Queen, by the first two Hymns, by 'Virgil's Gnat,' 'Mother Hubbard's Tale,' and the 'Tears of the Muses' (all five not to be published till long years later), and by a notable array of 'lost works,' recorded here and there in the Harvey letters, in the commentary of E. K., and in Ponsonby's preface to Complaints. Many of these last, indeed, presumably belong to other periods of his life, but a number may fairly be set down to the years from 1577 to 1580. Some may possibly have survived under the disguise of other titles; one, at least, the Pageants, of which E. K. quotes a line,¹ would seem to have been used for the building up of the Faery Queen.² Another, Dreams (of which *My Slumber*³ may be no more than an earlier title), is mentioned in the postscript of the second letter to Harvey as equipped with commentary and illustrations, all ready for the press. Then there are Legends and the Court of Cupid,⁴ the latter title suggestive of a well-known episode in the Faery Queen,⁵ and the Dying Pelican.⁶ A Sennight's Slumber, The Hell of Lovers, and Purgatory, mentioned by Ponsonby,⁷ would seem, by evident subject matter, to belong also to this early period; the others on Ponsonby's list, except the Dying Pelican, already noted, may be later. Harvey has not a little to say⁸ about nine comedies named after the Muses, which he likens, somewhat ambiguously, to those of Ariosto. Finally, there are Stemmata Dudleiana,⁹ which may have been utilized in 1590 for the 'Ruins of Time,' though it was probably composed in neo-classical metre; Epithalamion Thamesis,¹⁰ also in that metre, a work projected, but probably cut off by the departure, within a brief space, for Ireland; and a treatise entitled The English Poet,¹¹ which, together with the nine comedies, may be regarded as the most serious loss of all. Even if we attribute most of these works to an earlier period, it is evident that, once embarked upon his career in London, Spenser plied his various faculties with keen enthusiasm.

That with so much poetry on hand he should have given so little to the press, was due apparently to discretion. In the circle to which he was now beginning to be admitted on terms of some familiarity, publication in print would probably be regarded as not quite 'the thing,' if it were made the deliberate means of earning money. A passage in the first letter to Harvey¹² is suggestive. The poet hesitates to publish his Calendar because, among other considerations, 'I was minded for a while to have intermitted the uttering [i. e. giving out] of my writings; leaste, by over-much cloying their [his patrons'] noble eares, I should gather a contempt of my self, or else seeme rather for gaine and commoditie to doe it, for some sweetnesse that I have already tasted.' The 'uttering' referred to is probably not by means of the press, but by more or less public presentation to the patron; yet if such could by too great frequency win a poor gentleman contempt, much more would the other. Except, then, for the Calendar, Spenser contented himself with seeing his poems circulate in manuscript among the literary coteries at court; even Dreams, reported as ready for the press, was apparently, in the end, withheld.

The letters to and from Harvey, which tell us so much about Spenser's literary activities, tell us also of a certain club, founded, it would appear, by Philip Sidney and Edward Dyer, and named the Areopagus. Just what it stood for is not altogether clear; perhaps its founders, inspired by the recent work of the Pléiade in France, aimed at a general reformation of English poetry, then, beyond doubt, in very debatable plight. If so, they soon became involved, to the exclusion of almost all other topics, in the problem of prosody. England had produced but one really eminent poet, Chaucer, and his metres could no longer be perfectly understood; the great bulk of contemporary verse was metrically thin or slipshod. Might it not be true, then, as Roger Ascham had maintained in his Schoolmaster a few years before, that English poetry could never hope to rival that of Greece and Rome till it had discarded barbarous rhyme and equipped itself with genuine quantitative measures? These young men were poets, but they had not yet found themselves in poetry. They were also good scholars. To them, therefore, the doctrine of Ascham seemed worth putting to the proof. What should determine English quantities, whether, as Archdeacon Drant maintained, the law of Rome, or, as Harvey would have it, the natural accent of words, was matter for excellent debate. In the mean time experiment in various metres went on apace, the results of which now chiefly survive in the pages of Sidney's Arcadia.

What may have been the membership of the Areopagus we have now small means of determining. Fulke Greville was probably of the number, and almost all accounts of the club reckon in Spenser, too, perhaps with reason. He was certainly much interested in the proceedings, avowed himself a convert to its main doctrine, composed and projected works in the new style, and discussed quantitative standards with Harvey — all as if he were considerably more than half in earnest. Yet when he refers to this foundation of Sidney and Dyer he speaks of it as 'their' club;¹ and though he writes that they have 'drawn mee to their faction,'² he apparently means no more than that they have converted him to their views; and the total impression left by the letters is that he was an interested outsider, admitted to a kind of indirect participation in the debates, by favor of the two leaders. They had him, he says, 'in some use of familiarity.' Perhaps, however, in the interval between the first of these epistles and his departure for Ireland, he may have been received into formal membership. It may be, too, that in the same period his relations with Sidney became more intimate, though to speak, as some biographers do, of 'friendship' (in the sense in which Fulke Greville styled himself 'the friend of Sir Philip Sidney') is surely to exaggerate. Sidney was his especial patron in letters, had possibly been the means of his finding employment with Leicester; but if there had been any substantial friendship between them, Spenser would hardly have waited till 1590 to commemorate that chivalric death which in 1586 so stirred all England.

At the time of his second letter to Harvey, Spenser might seem, to all appearances, in very prosperous trim. The Shepherd's Calendar, recently given out, had been accorded a veritable triumph, and had moreover brought him in enough money to make Harvey almost jealous. He was under the direct patronage of Sidney, in confidential employment by the powerful Earl of Leicester, on good terms at the court, and able, if we are to trust the gallant messages of Harvey, to live only too agreeably in private. Yet in the later passages of the letters there are signs of disquietude, if not disappointment. His project for an Epithalamion Thamesis in neo-classic measures, 'a worke, beleewe me, of much labour,' ends

' O Tite, siquid ego, Ecquid erit pretij?'

which might be taken for motto to the melancholy October eclogue of the Calendar; and in Harvey's reply the note is unmistakable: 'I have little joy to animate and encourage . . . you . . . to goe forward, unlesse ye might make account of some certaine ordinarie wages, or at the leastwise have your meate and drinke for your dayes workes.' 'Certaine ordinarie wages' were just what Spenser lacked. His verse had brought him reputation and some money; but he could not expect to live by it, and it was apparently not helping him to preferment in active service, to a really settled career. Work as confidential emissary for Leicester might be very pleasant, but it was precarious, and unless the earl secured for him some regular office, his future would be very doubtful. When next we hear of him, accordingly, he has left England, as secretary to Arthur Lord Grey of Wilton, the Queen's new Deputy to Ireland. Thenceforth his life is one of virtual exile.

It was on August 12, 1580, that Grey, with his numerous viceregal suite, landed at Dublin. The sword of state was in the south, with his predecessor Pelham, who was ravaging Munster in hopes of starving out the great Desmond rebellion; and till Pelham's return there could be no formal investiture. But between them lay the rebel Baltinglas, newly revolted, and Grey was not the man to wait upon a ceremony, when he had the power to act. By virtue of his patent, he at once assumed control, and gathering such forces as were at hand, marched into Wicklow. There in the savage valley of Glendalough, or Glenmalure, he came upon the rebel forces. Against the advice of his oldest captains, he rashly attacked in front. His men, partly raw recruits, were disconcerted by the roughness of the ground and the fire of hidden enemies; in the end, 'through God's appointment,' they were completely routed. The loss of life was not great, but several distinguished officers fell, shot down in the action or captured and killed in cold blood. Returning to Dublin, he had barely time to be formally installed in office, when news arrived that a body of Spaniards had landed on the coast of Kerry, for the support of the Desmond rebels. Here was a danger far more serious than any temporary check by the Irish. In slow and painful marches, impeded by the autumn floods, he made his way across the island toward the southwest, to find, upon arrival, that the foreigners were blockaded by an English fleet in a little fort on the shores of Smerwick Bay, the so-called Fort del Oro. The sequel was short and stern. Two days of regular siege and bombardment reduced the garrison to extremities. They surrendered at discretion. Their leaders came out and were held for ransom; the remainder, some six hundred in all, mostly Italians (for the expedition had been set afoot by the Pope), were simply massacred. A number of non-combatants, including women, were hanged. Three special victims, a renegade Englishman, an Irishman of some note, and a Catholic friar, before hanging had their arms and legs broken.

From the account which Spenser gives of this affair in his treatise on Ireland, it has been inferred that he was present in person. Since he was not the official secretary, who might be expected to remain chiefly at the capital, but secretary by private appointment, he would be likely enough to follow his patron about. If he did, he must have seen rapid and rough service in most quarters of the island, for Grey went to and fro like a shuttle. The hanging of rebels, the pressing of men to death, the cutting off of the ears of rascally purveyors, the burning of crops in Munster, and the horrible desolation of that region, where those who had escaped the sword were barely able to drag themselves about, for famine, — sights like these must have become as familiar to the poet as the dense forest valleys, the bogs, and the innumerable streams of his new home. His picture of the famine in the south is evidently that of an eyewitness: 'Out of every corner of the woodes and glinnes they came creeping foorthe upon theyr handes, for theyr legges could not beare them; they looked like anatomys of death; they spake like ghostes crying out of theyr graves; they did eate of the dead carrions; happy were they yf they could finde them; yea, and one another soone after, insoemuch as the very carcasses they spared not to scrape out of theyr graves; and yf they founde a plotte of water-cresses or sham-rokes, there they flocked as to a feast for the time, yet not able long to continue therewithall; that in shorte space there were none allmost left, and a most populous and plentifull countrey suddaynly made voyde of man or beast.' At the capital itself he might witness conditions not altogether different, for there the streets were full of Irish 'poor souls,' so famished that once, when a horse was burned in its stable, a crowd of them set upon the half-roasted carcass and devoured it whole. Barnaby Googe, the eclogue writer, who reports this scene in August, 1582, remarks that Dublin is so changed for the worse (since 1574) that he hardly knows it.

This general misery Spenser saw only through the eyes of Grey, whose policy was that there could be no talk of building up 'before force have planed the ground for the foundation.' Years later, when he came to elaborate a scheme of his own for the reformation of the island, he could conceive of no other beginning than the absolute and final putting down of rebellion by the sword and by famine. That done, there would be opportunity to reform with some effect, upon a settled and orderly plan. What the Irish thought of Grey there can be no need to ask. Burghley and the Queen called his severity mere violence and his rule 'a gulf of consuming treasure,' — ignorant that, in their day, the gulf was not to be closed, though they sent into it Curtius after Curtius. To the poet, this 'bloody man' was one 'whom, who that well knewe, knewe him to be most gentell, affable, loving, and temperate, but that the necessitye of that present state of thinges enforced him to that violence, and allmost changed his very naturall disposition.' The stern Puritan Deputy, who could not away with the Queen's desire to be lenient in matters of religion, he transfigured, years later, into Arthegall, the champion of Justice, the real, though not the titular, hero of the Faery Queen.

When Grey left Ireland in August, 1582, Spenser remained behind. His service had brought him various grants of lands and houses forfeited by rebels, and he had been appointed, in March, 1581, Registrar or Clerk of the Faculties in the Court of Chancery, a position of honor and profit. In Ireland he might now look to a career: if he returned to England, he could have no serious prospects at all. Much, therefore, as he must have regretted his exile, he found resolution to bear with it for at least some years longer. How he might fare for intellectual companionship may be guessed from the account of the gathering at Lodowick Bryskett's cottage near Dublin, (probably of this same year,) quoted at length in all the longer biographies. There we see a party of English officers and civilians, among them the poet himself, listening to a three-day discourse on moral philosophy and discussing the same with the zest of amateurs temporarily unoccupied. They are all very respectful to Spenser, who is recognized as a professional. He, one suspects, must have been thinking the while of his former intercourse with Sidney and Dyer. He was, of course, not the only man of letters at the Irish capital, but in that raw and provincial atmosphere he must often have felt himself very much alone. Luckily, he could have the new books sent over to him from London without great difficulty.

Spenser was not dependent altogether upon the proceeds of his office: grants had been made him, as aforesaid, from time to time, out of various forfeited estates of rebels, which he must have had opportunity enough to profit by. Finally, in June, 1586, his name appears among those of the English 'undertakers' who were to colonize the attainted Desmond lands in Munster. Just two years from then, in June, 1588, he resigned his Dublin clerkship, which he had originally obtained by 'purchase' from his friend Lodowick Bryskett, and obtained, again by 'purchase' from the same friend, the office of

Clerk of the Council of Munster. It is perhaps from this time that he began to reside regularly upon his new estate, at the castle of Kilcolman.

It was a 'seignory' of a little over three thousand acres. To the north stood the western end of the Ballahoura hills, the 'Old Father Mole' of his verse, from which the river Awbeg, his 'Mulla,' flowed in a great half-circle to the west and south. To the east another stream, the Bregog, ran down from the same hills, to meet the Awbeg, their united waters then flowing off southeast for a few miles to the great river of the district, the Blackwater. Toward the centre of this rough circle of hills and streams stood the castle, on a rise of ground. Thirty miles to the southeast, near Youghal, lay the twelve-thousand-acre seignory of Sir Walter Raleigh, also an undertaker, and beyond him the eleven thousand acres allotted to Sir Christopher Hatton. Twenty-five miles to the south lay the city of Cork, the fairest of those parts; to the north, at an equal distance, the city of Limerick, the capital of the Munster presidency and therefore the place of his official duties as Clerk of the Council. To the west and northeast lay wilder country.

These seignories were held upon a rental proportioned to their size, and upon condition that the land be colonized by English households, also in proportion. Great pains were taken that the 'mere Irish' should not find means to get a fresh foothold. The undertakers were to furnish their quota of armed men to the regular forces, but, in the early years, if need be, they were also to be protected by garrisons. They were to pay no taxes for a time, and were to be allowed, for a time, the free importation of goods from England. Some, of course, like Hatton and Raleigh, were absentees, but the great majority were supposed to be in residence, and perhaps did mainly reside.

The situation of the latter was not altogether pleasant. About them on every side were native gentry who, having come through the storm of the late rebellion without attainder, were disposed to defend as they best might what little power was left them. These men saw land to which they had claims, real or imaginary, absorbed into this seignory or that, and when they protested, were asked by the commissioners for their title deeds, or other proof of ownership, as little to be expected in that country as Irish glibs in England. Hence hard words, jealousies, and fears on both sides. The special antagonist of Spenser was Lord Roche. They were at law more than once. Roche accused the poet of trying to steal land from him by false representations of title, of occupying the said land, of threatening his tenants and taking away their cattle, and of beating the servants and bailiffs who resisted. On his side, the poet filed countercharges: they are interesting. 'He [Roche] relieved one Kedagh O'Kelley, his foster brother, a proclaimed traitor; has imprisoned men of Mr. Verdons, Mr. Edmund Spenser, and others. He speaks ill of Her Majesty's government and hath uttered words of contempt of Her Majesty's laws, calling them unjust. He killed a fat beef of Teig O'Lyne's, because Mr. Spenser lay in his house one night as he came from the sessions at Limerick. He also killed a beef of his smith's for mending Mr. Piers' plough iron. He has forbidden his people to have any trade or conference with Mr. Spenser or Mr. Piers or their tenants.' To seek for the right and the wrong in such quarrels is to find a hopeless mixture. Roche, no doubt, was a violent man; yet it was surely hard dealing to bring against him as a crime that he had protected his own foster brother. In any case, with feuds like this on their hands, with outlaws in every recess of that thickly forested region, with native discontent and sense of injury awaiting another chance to rebel, the undertakers can hardly have expected a life of settled peace.

It was after a year of this colonizing that, in the summer of 1589, Spenser was visited by Sir Walter Raleigh. The two had probably met before in service under Lord Grey, perhaps at the gloomy Fort del Oro, where Raleigh was one of the two captains 'put in' for the work of general slaughter. A twelvemonth afterward, the brilliant officer had gone to court, where he had quickly made himself the leading favorite of the Queen. Now, being driven from court, as the gossips said, by the new favorite, Essex, he was back for a time in Ireland, on a visit to the estates recently granted him there as undertaker. He found his old acquaintance at Kileolman near by, and his old acquaintance showed him the manuscript of the Faery Queen.

Spenser had begun this poem ten years back, in England; since coming over with Grey he had worked at no other poetry or prose that we know of, except perhaps a casual sonnet or two; yet he had been able to complete only three books of the projected twelve. Probably he had found the early years of his service in Ireland too distracting for sustained poetical effort. Parts of the work he had shown long before this to various friends of his exile, perhaps even to Raleigh, but the three books as a whole Raleigh must now have seen for the first time. Their effect upon his imaginative and sanguine mind can easily be guessed. Here was a poet, once famous, with a new magnificent poem, hidden away in a God-forsaken corner among savages. He must be taken to court, he must present his work to the Queen; she could not fail to find room in her service for the author of Gloriana. In any case, he must make himself known again at the capital, where by this time he and the old fame of his Shepherd's Calendar were 'quite forgot.' But Raleigh's visit and the sequel are best read between the lines of Colin Clout's Come Home Again.

Spenser and his new friend crossed the seas together in the autumn. On December 1 the Faery Queen was registered with the Stationers' Company for publication, and about that time, or earlier, the poet was doubtless being accorded those audiences with Elizabeth of which Colin Clout informs us, audiences for the reading of his poem, which she was graciously pleased to applaud. With her graciousness to cheer him, and with the backing of Raleigh, he is not likely to have missed very much his old patrons, Sidney and Leicester, by this time dead. In their place was the Countess of Pembroke (for whom he now commemorated them in belated panegyric, at the suggestion of friends), and besides her, there were his noble relatives, the three daughters of Sir John Spencer of Althorpe—and others. The list of distinguished personages, indeed, whose names appear in his verse, or in the inscriptions of his longer poems and sonnets, makes clear that he was now at the very centre of courtly life. Meanwhile he was working with a will. There was his Faery Queen to see through the press, and he was also revising old poems and composing new, as means of commending himself. He probably hoped for a substantial reward.

What he hoped for chiefly was perhaps some place in the government service at the capital. For this, however, he had to reckon with Burghley, and Burghley did not believe in poets. The great lord treasurer might recollect him, too, as a former protégé of his old enemy, Leicester; possibly he had, ten years earlier, set a precedent for denying him office—when the poet had been obliged to content himself with a private secretaryship in Ireland. An uncompromising biographer might also note the later complaint of Bacon (himself a disappointed suitor for office) that 'in the times of the Cecils able men were, of purpose, suppressed.' In any case, whatever the cause, there can be no doubt that Burghley showed himself unfavorable to Spenser. An apocryphal story relates that when the Queen ordered the payment of a hundred pounds, in recognition of the poet's genius, the treasurer objected to the amount; whereupon she replied, 'Then give him what is reason;' whereupon the treasurer let the matter rest altogether, till the poet, by a rhymed appeal to his sovereign, secured the hundred pounds and a censure for his enemy. The truth, as far as we know it, is, that in February, 1591, some sixteen months after his arrival in London and nearly, if not quite, a year after the appearance of his poem, Spenser received the grant of a pension of £50, and that he received no other substantial recognition of his genius. Fifty pounds a year and the doubtful profits of a small Munster seignory would not support him suitably in London. He was no more inclined than he had been ten years earlier to attempt literature as a profession. If he had hoped to get footing at the capital, therefore, he bore the disappointment as he might, and set out for home. His opinion of Burghley he left behind him in 'Mother Hubberd's Tale.'

This poem appeared in the volume entitled Complaints, which was entered upon the Stationers' register, as approved by the official censors, December 29, 1590. Since Ponsonby, in his opening address, speaks of the poet's 'departure over sea,' and since the volume bears the date of 1591, which would not be given it till the official beginning of the new year on March 25, it may be supposed that Spenser went home in the late winter or early spring, before the volume was ready for sale. On the preceding New Year's¹ he had signed the dedication of Daphnœida at London; on the following 27th of December, he signed the dedication of Colin Clout's Come Home Again at Kilcolman. This poetic acknowledgment of Raleigh's patronage was presumably sent over to his friend in manuscript at once, though it was not to be published till 1595.

Back at Kilcolman again, Spenser fell into the old round of official duties (executed in part, no doubt, by deputy) and of seignorial cares. By this time he could probably command more leisure, much of which he would give to pushing on with his Faery Queen. But a new adventure now befell him: he met the woman whom he was to marry. She was a certain gentlewoman, Elizabeth Boyle, of kin to that Richard Boyle who later became the first Earl of Cork. Her home seems to have been at Kilcoran, near Youghal, on the coast to the southeast of Spenser's domain. If we are to believe the story of the Amoretti, which is altogether consistent, he began his wooing late in 1592; the marriage was of June 11, 1594. These are the bare facts. Those who wish the romance, which rests upon well-documented facts of its own, must turn to the Amoretti and Epithalamion themselves and read with the inward eye.

Before his marriage Spenser had contrived, with commendable foresight, to finish the second three books of his Faery Queen. These he kept by him till he could take them to London himself. The Amoretti and Epithalamion he sent over to Ponsonby without delay, and Ponsonby published them in the spring of 1595. In the same year, or early in 1596 (for according to the old style the computation was from March 25 to March 24), Ponsonby also brought out Colin Clout's Come Home Again and Astrophel. By January 20 (old style 1595, new style 1596) the poet himself was in London, for on that date there was registered with the Stationers' Company the second part of the Faery Queen. Since one of the main objects of his coming over would be the publication of this work, it is not likely that he had arrived much earlier.

Another object was undoubtedly the furtherance of his material welfare. Not content with what had been done for him in 1591, he was set upon urging his claims a second time. On that former occasion he had appeared under the patronage of Raleigh, which not only had not helped him to full success, but had prevented his wooing the apparently greater influence of Essex; for the two favorites were bitter rivals. Except, then, for a very flattering sonnet to the young earl, he seems at that time to have paid him no court.

Perhaps it is to exaggerate to say that he paid him court now, or that Essex was the patron of his second venture. In the Prothalamion, his first thought concerning Essex House is that it was once the abode of Leicester, and his following panegyric upon Leicester's successor contains no hint of patronage. Yet it was Essex who, a little over two years later, was to pay his funeral expenses. In any case, Spenser gained no further reward. The second part of the Faery Queen did not heighten the wonder of the first, and therefore did not move Elizabeth to fresh bounty. As for her lord treasurer, the poet could hope for nothing from him after ‘Mother Hubbard's Tale.’ The references to his ill humor, set at the beginning and the end of this part, read, in fact, like a challenge.

‘Whose want too well now feesles my freendles case;’

Spenser was not a lucky courtier. One could wish, indeed, that he had never tried courting, for its influence upon his spirit was malign. Naturally high-minded, he reveals here and there in his verse, under the sting of disappointment, a petulance, somewhat unmanly, that his most radical admirers would fain argue away. Others would fain forget the adulation, sometimes offensive, into which the pursuit of reward too often tempted him. Loitering about the court, in hopes of preferment, was surely no fit business for the poet of the Faery Queen. Happily, his experiences there stirred him less often to petulance or gross flattery than to manly disdain.

The dedication of the Four Hymns is dated from Greenwich (where the court often lay), September 1, 1596; the Prothalamion is probably of the early autumn. Not long afterward Spenser may be thought to have given up his suit and gone home. If he had written less poetry during this second visit than in 1590, one cause may have been that he was busied in prose, for it is probably to 1596 that one must assign his View of the Present State of Ireland.¹ This elaborate survey and plan of reform would explain, if further explanation were needed, why the poet was so ill content with his lot. Fifteen years of life in Ireland had not reconciled him in the slightest to Irish manners and customs, or taught him the smallest sympathy with the Irish temperament. Not to speak of his plan for the systematic starving out and strangling of rebellion and for systematic colonizing, he would carry reform even to the point of cutting off the glibs of the natives and taking away their long mantles, because both were convenient to thieves. Even their easy-minded laziness was offence to him. In his general contempt for the Irish and in his advocacy of the sternest measures of repression, he was, of course, not alone among the English of his day; but one judges that he also lacked that faculty of compromise which might have moved him to make the most of disagreeable neighbors.

In 1593, or thereabouts, Spenser had disposed of his clerkship of the Munster Council. On September 30, 1598, not quite two years after his return from England, he was appointed Sheriff of Cork. Within a week the revolt broke out which was to ruin the undertakers of Munster.

The original grants had provided that every undertaker should people his estate with English. A seignory of twelve thousand acres called for the establishment of ninety-two families; smaller seignories, of a number proportionately less. Whether by negligence or sheer inability, however, the undertakers had failed to observe this condition of their tenure. After bringing over a few families, often anything but respectable and sober, they had commonly let their remaining land to natives, just the folk whom the government aimed to supplant, or had allowed it to lie idle. Most of them, perhaps, had not the means of financing their venture properly. They had almost all counted on peace and neglected to make provision against attack. When, therefore, the victory of Tyrone in the north inflamed the Irish of Munster to rebellion, the undertakers, who lived far apart, were helpless. The Lord President, Sir Thomas Norris, might have organized them for defence, but the storm came on so rapidly that he lost heart, they thought of nothing but escape to Cork and Waterford with their families, and the whole province, outside the walled towns, was left open to pillage. Here and there an undertaker defended himself as he best might, but the majority simply ran away, if they could. The Irish tenants whom they had admitted upon their estates commonly joined the rebels in the general work of pillage, burning, mutilation, and murder.

With his wife and four children Spenser escaped to Cork. Whether or not he attempted to defend his castle we do not know; we hear only of a certain Edmund M'Shee 'killed by an Englishman at the spoil of Kilcolman.' The story told by Ben Jonson, that an infant child of the poet perished in the flames, is probably apocryphal. At Cork he found time and composure to prepare a review of the situation, for the Queen; then he was sent to London with despatches, which he delivered the day before Christmas. On the 16th of the following January (in modern style, 1599) he died at Westminster. The Earl of Essex took charge of his funeral. Poets attended him to his grave in the Abbey, near Chaucer, and threw in elegies, with the pens that had written them. Queen Elizabeth ordered him a monument — which was never erected.

Spenser's reputation among his contemporaries was of the highest. No other English poet ever won more immediate and abiding recognition than he. The Shepherd's Calendar was at once accepted as a masterpiece, and when the Faery Queen appeared, there was no one to dispute his right to the heritage of Chaucer. Between 1590 and his death he was held, by general consent, the supreme poet of his time in England. This unanimity of acceptance was due, perhaps, in some measure, to the fact that he was not of that quarrelsome community which praised him, the turbulent literary world of London, but an exile. He had left England at a time when most of the men now seeking fame for themselves were mere youths, and when he returned to their world, at intervals, with fresh poetry, their feeling was in part enthusiasm for its magic, and in part reverence for their senior, who had no share in their quarrels, and whose art was not of their schools, though it instantly made disciples. To speculate how far his remoteness from the growing world of letters may have been favorable to his originality would be futile: it most certainly was favorable to his immediate fame.

What his fame may be to-day is a topic more engaging, but less tangible, and not to be discussed in extenso here. One aspect of it, however, may be glanced at. There are some who go to him, as they go to Keats, for the 'life of sensations' which they prefer to the 'life of ideas,' who appreciate nothing but his sensuous delightsomeness. Others, who feel also his grave moral charm, are, like Lowell, impatient of his too overt moralizing. Others yet, like Dowden, accept the moralizing and all. In the main, the trend of unofficial contemporary opinion seems to be against that element in Spenser's poetry which he himself took for the chief of all. He had run the length of the full university curriculum of his day. If one had talked to him of the cultivation of the sensibilities, he would have stared: he had been feeding his brain. To be able to think in poetry, that, he would have said, was the chief end of the poet; and it would grieve him now in Elysium, could he know what moderns have thought about his thinking. Perhaps these moderns are, after all, wrong. It is well enough to say that his thinking too often pro-trudes through his art, like ill-covered wire framework, — but why then, in Dante, call the same phenomenon ‘a residuum of prose in the depths of his poetry’? The failing is all but inevitable to poetic dogmatists. In Spenser, too, as in others, it is merely one manifestation of the faculty that directs his noblest work, that informs the superb energy of the conflict between the Redcross Knight and Despair, and the serenities of the Hymn in Honor of Beauty.

[The Shepherd's Calendar was entered on the books of the Stationers' Company December 5, 1579, and was probably published before the end of the following March, when the old year officially expired. The little volume must have had a certain attraction of mysteriousness. It was full of veiled allusions and the secret of its authorship was enticingly dangled before the eyes of readers. The author of the eclogues signed himself 'Immeritô' and was styled by the author of the commentary 'the new poet.' This other signed himself E. K. Yet though the book thus challenged curiosity, the secret seems to have been well enough kept. At court, perhaps, or at Cambridge, it would be penetrated in time by a few, but generally, and at least as a matter of form, the anonymity was acknowledged for a full decade to come. Spenser's main share in the work was confessed when the Fairy Queen came out in 1590.

For E. K., his initials seem to have been left, even then, to explain themselves — or perhaps real explanation was not greatly heeded. In either case, who he may have been is now beyond absolute proof. Some recent scholars, arguing from a few special passages and from the apparent intimacy of his knowledge, an intimacy in no way contradicted by occasional rather arch professions of ignorance, have maintained that he was Spenser himself, acting as his own commentator. Their theory is plausible — but only at first sight. It cannot meet the fact that E. K. has in several places plainly misunderstood his text, and it implies that Spenser could write about the men he imitated and about his own work in the tone of such slurs as those, in the beginning of the 'January' gloss and in the argument of 'November,' on the genial Marot. Most critics, therefore, abide by the older opinion that E. K. was Edward Kirke, a contemporary of Spenser and Harvey at Cambridge (sizar, for a time, in their own hall, Pembroke) and of kin, perhaps, to the 'Mistresse Kerke' of Spenser's first letter. This opinion, though but conjectural, clashes with neither fact nor sentiment.

The main riddle of the eclogues themselves is, of course, Rosalinde. Who she was, and how seriously the tale of which she is the faithless heroine must be taken, have busied, it may be thought, only too many minds. For her identity, the evidence comprises three points: that, according to the gloss on 'January,' her poetic name is an anagram of her real; that, according to the gloss on 'April,' she was 'a gentlewoman of no meane house'; and that, to judge by the general tenor of the narrative, her home was in that northeast corner of Lancashire which is unmistakably the scene of the love-eclogues. Yet after much patient work, the most recent of investigators has produced no one but a quite supposititious Rose Dineley, of a surname common in those parts, — and there the matter may rest. Nor need the love-story itself be discussed, or the depth of the poet's passion. Concerning this last, however, one point may be noted. That Rosalinde is celebrated as late as Colin Clout's Come Home Again, in 1591, need mean no more than that she was then still, in a sense, the poet's official mistress, remembered with kindly appreciation and not yet displaced by the woman whom shortly afterwards he wooed to good purpose.

Though we do not know her name or the real facts of her story, and though the pastoral disguise of the eclogues is quite baffling. Rosalinde is none the less a curiously distinct personage. E. K. and Harvey have both recorded her qualities. 'Shee is a gentlewoman of no meane house,' says E. K. in his gloss for 'April,' 'nor endewed with anye vulgare and common gifts both of nature and manners.' Harvey speaks more intimately — in a letter to Spenser of April, 1580. In one part of this, extolling the charms of that mysterious beauty with whom the poet was then solacing his wounded heart, he declares her to be 'another litle Rosalinde' (altera Rosalindula — the diminutive suggests that the true Rosalinde was of more native dignity); and in another part, upon a matter of literary interest, he appeals to 'his conceite whom gentle Mistresse Rosalinde once reported to have all the intelligences at commaundement, and at another time christened her Segnior Pegaso.' That last fragment tells us more about the real qualities of this 'gentlewoman of no meane house,' and suggests more about her probable dealings with the poet, than all the tuneful lamentations of the eclogues.

The love-story of Rosalinde and Colin Clout is the central theme of the Calendar. It gives to what might else have been a collection of independent eclogues the appearance of dramatic continuity, and at the end, in 'December,' it broadens into a kind of tragic allegory of life which closes the round of the months with philosophic dignity. For purposes of artistic centralization, indeed, it was undoubtedly the fittest theme that Spenser could have selected, and it had the special appeal to him of a fresh and perhaps poignant experience. It is not the only theme, however, to be developed with recurrent emphasis. That of the central eclogues, 'May,' 'July,' and 'September,' is elaborated with almost equal amplitude, and with such apparent earnestness that these eclogues have very generally been held to express sincere personal convictions. If that opinion be true (and there is certainly some truth in it), Spenser was, at this stage of his life, more or less a Puritan.

Nothing, indeed, would be more natural than that, in 1579, when the Elizabethan Church was but just emerging from its earlier days of uncertainty, a young man of generous moral instincts, a seeker of the ideal, should sympathize with the main attitude of the Puritans. Among the several parties of the composite and still rather incoherent Anglican communion, they stood most typically for moral earnestness. This temper might sometimes run to extremes; the more violent of them, Cartwright and such, might be root and branch reformers, hewers of Agag in pieces before the Lord; but the greater part were men whose zeal showed itself chiefly in diligent preaching and urging of their convictions — the need of simplicity in the worship and of earnestness in the service of God. Compared with these men, those higher ecclesiastics who had the difficult task of maintaining the Queen's policy of compromise, and of preserving what could be preserved of the older ceremonies and dignities of religion, might conceivably seem lukewarm and worldly-minded. And among the lower clergy, especially in the rural districts, there were still but too many like the priest in 'Mother Hubbard's Tale,' who had been Catholic and were now half Protestant, ignorant, lazy, worthless. The energy of vital religion might at this time seem to be with the Puritans. The objects of their denunciation were, moreover, not all mere matters of ritual and form, but, many of them, very real abuses.

To what extent Spenser may have held with the Puritans is nevertheless a somewhat perplexed question. One could wish that the allegory of the three eclogues were clearer. A few specific allusions, to be sure, give it an air of actuality, but they do not carry us very far. 'Old Algrind,' the type of the pious and venerable shepherd, is beyond fair question Grindal, Archbishop of Canterbury, then in utter disgrace with the Queen for having refused to put down Puritan 'prophesyings.' Morrell, the 'gotheheard prowde,' is quite probably Aylmer, Bishop of London, one of those who helped to do the work that Grindal declined. When we look for definite ideas, however, we find ourselves continually at a balance between the Puritan and the more broadly Protestant. If the sentiment of the first part of 'May' is distinctly Puritan, the remainder of that eclogue, which inveighs against the wiles of the Papists, conveys little more than the general sentiment of the English Reformation. As for the main burden of the eclogues, against the pride, luxury, and corruption of a worldly priesthood, one is perpetually in doubt whether it be directed against the orthodox clergy of the Church of England or against the clergy of the Church of Rome. This ambiguity, to be sure, may be the poet's safeguard against possible ill-consequences: it suggests, however, that he was not a thorough-going partisan. With those who held Anglicanism to be mere Popery he of course had no ties at all, or he would not have admitted E. K.'s comment in 'May' upon Some gan, etc. On the whole, then, beyond strong disapproval of abuses in church patronage, such as those described in 'Mother Hubbard's Tale,' and of high living and laziness and spiritual dullness among the clergy, Spenser's Puritan sympathies do not seem to have extended far. Except for a brief passage upon the intercession of saints, the thought of which is broadly Protestant, there is hardly a glance at dogma.

In two out of the three eclogues, in 'July' and 'September,' Spenser borrows themes and even whole passages from his pastoral forerunner, Mantuan, the satirist of the Roman clergy. How far this borrowing may make against his sincerity is matter for individual judgment. In any case, it exemplifies one of the fundamental characteristics of the Calendar. When young Alexander Pope, in the days of his ardent reading among the classics, undertook to compose a set of pastorals, he first fixed his attention on 'the only undisputed authors' of that genre, Theocritus and Virgil, then, from a study of their eclogues, derived four absolute types, comprehensive of 'all the subjects which the critics upon Theocritus and Virgil will allow to be fit for pastoral.' Young Spenser, equally ardent with his books and living in a less formally critical age, proceeded on quite another principle. Since the days of the Greek and Latin fathers of the pastoral there had been a goodly line of successors, under whom the genre had developed in many directions. Petrarch, Mantuan, Sannazaro, Marot, to mention but a few of the chief, had each contributed his share of themes and methods. The main development had been in allegory, the use of the pastoral form, that is, for the discussion of contemporary or personal affairs and the introduction of real people. By the time Spenser came to write, then, the literature of the pastoral was immense and surpassingly diverse; it had, moreover, quite lost the peculiar quality of its earliest days, when an idyll was a direct poetic rendering of real life, and had crystallized into a system of conventional symbols, which might still be used by a master with living imaginative effect, but which, without a radical reversion, could hardly again render real life. Out of this literature Spenser adopted types and definite themes, and imitated special passages, with studied care for variety. The types need not here be particularized, but of definite themes, elaborated in part by direct translation or paraphrase, we have, for instance, the religious satire of 'July' and 'September,' out of Mantuan, the complaint of the hard lot of poets, in 'October,' also out of Mantuan, the dirge in 'November' and parts of 'December,' in imitation of Marot, 'March' after Bion. For the general scheme of straggling the loose eclogues on a slight thread of romance, that, too, though perhaps mainly original, had been, in a way, anticipated by Boccaccio and Sannazaro. Of real contributions to the genre we find few beyond the use of the fable and the idea of making an eclogue-series a calendar.

This imitativeness, the eagerness to appropriate interesting or otherwise attractive themes by which to give his work variety, to experiment in various acknowledged styles, is, indeed, the most distinguishing characteristic of the Calendar. It is one manifestation of what may be called the voracity of taste in youth. Spenser was doing what Stevenson, in a well-known essay, has told us that he, in his time, did, and that every active young follower of letters must inevitably do, what, in the various performances of his early period, Pope did himself. And as imitation goes hand in hand with experiment, the impulse toward variety in his work shows itself not merely in themes and styles appropriated from earlier pastoral poets, but in the very measures and stanza-forms of his verse. These are strikingly various. There is the irregular accentual verse of 'February' and other eclogues, side by side with the even, finely modulated ten-syllable iambic. There is the ballad measure and stanza of 'July,' side by side with the elaborate and musical eight-line stanza of 'June.' Formal quatrains, now separate, now linked by rhyme; the stanzas, equal in length but vitally different in harmonic effect, of 'January' and 'October'; a lively roundelay, a starched sestina — one could hardly be more varied. Then there are the hymn-strophes of 'April' and 'November.' The strophe of this last, opening sonorously with an alexandrine, sinking through melodious decasyllables to the plaintive shorter verses, and rising at the close into another decasyllable, to fall away in a brief refrain, is as noble a prophecy of the larger stanzaic art of the Epithalamion as a young poet could conceivably give. Spenser, indeed, won his supreme mastery of the stanza by long and honest experiment.

The youthfulness of the art is finally evident in the mere arrangement of the eclogues. This reminds one of nothing so much as of that almost mathematical balance with which, as Professor Norton has pointed out, Dante disposed the poems of his Vita Nuova. Formality of structure is of course one of the most common characteristics of youthful art. In the Calendar, this formality, though less exact than in the Vita Nuova, is rather more obvious. The series of eclogues, being in number twelve, has naturally, if one may use the phrase, two centres, 'June' and 'July.' Spenser's plan of arrangement is to place, approximately at a balance on either of these centres, such eclogues as stand in contrast or are supplementary to each other. The eclogues, for instance, in which Colin Clout laments his wretched case are three: two must round out the series in 'January' and 'December;' the third is placed at one of the centres, 'June.' The two at the extremes are monologues and both in the crude six-line stanza of even iambs that is used nowhere else: the third, at the centre, is a dialogue in an elaborate eight-line stanza that is also used only here. The three religious eclogues, two in accentual couplets, one in ballad measure, balance in like manner upon 'July.' One may note, too, the hymn of praise in 'April' over against the dirge in 'November,' and may feel, perhaps, a balance in the complaint for poets, of 'October,' and the two main tributaries, in 'February' and 'June,' to Chaucer. But one might easily push the analysis too far.

It is with Chaucer, the Tityrus of the eclogues, that any survey of them most naturally concludes. Barring a certain mysterious Wrenock, he is the one master whom Colin Clout acknowledges.

'The god of shepherds, Tityrus, is dead,
Who taught me, homely as I can, to make.'

So says Colin in 'June,' and in 'December' it is said of him that 'he of Tityrus his songs did lere.' How far, then, we inevitably ask ourselves, is Spenser really the disciple of his one great English forerunner? In two prominent characteristics, more or less external, Chaucer's influence upon the Calendar is, of course, generally admitted. The irregular accentual verse, which is managed so well in 'February' and often so poorly in other eclogues and incidental passages, though in general of the decadent Chaucerian school, seems to owe much to direct study of the master himself. And for the diction, in its varying degrees of strangeness, if Spenser, to the discontent of Sidney, 'framed his style to an old rustic language,' it was in the main by authority of Chaucer, whose English, now rustic to the modern Elizabethans, was yet their greatest literary tradition. So much can hardly be disputed, and so much does not carry us very far: those who stop there, indeed, must view the professed discipleship as more or less a sentiment. Yet one may fairly believe that

Chaucer's influence is wider and deeper than that. We doubt its extent, perhaps, chiefly when we consider the Calendar too much by itself. As, in the Faery Queen, the strongest immediate influence might be thought to be that of Ariosto, so, in the Calendar, it is unquestionably that of the great pastoral school. If, however, we look, not to themes and methods and merely occasional characteristics of style in this one poem, but to the persistent characteristics of style in Spenser's total achievement, may we not fairly see the influence of Chaucer dominating all others? That archaism which is held to be the chief note of his influence on the Calendar is not a garb assumed for the time as appropriate: it is the very body of Spenser's speech. E. K., early in the epistle to Harvey, has suggested its natural growth, which indeed is clear. Reading and rereading the 'ancient poetes' of his own tongue, in chief the master of them all, Spenser's imagination and native sense for language were so saturated with the charm of that older speech that to him it became in the end more real than the speech of his contemporaries, and attracting to itself, by force of sympathetic likeness, provincialisms from a dozen sources, grew to be the living language of his genius. To this, the largest artistic contribution would be Chaucer's. And for that other element of poetry, verse, we can hardly think that Spenser derived from his great forerunner nothing but models for the measures of 'February' and 'August.' It is frequently said that, when the final e died out and was forgotten, Chaucer's verse could be read only by accent and with a kind of popular lilt. Yet there were long passages that would still preserve almost their full metrical flow and beauty. If Spenser, then, became master of a verse ideally flowing and musical, he assuredly learned the art of it in no small measure from the golden cadences of Chaucer. From foreign poets, in brief, he might learn and borrow much in a hundred ways, but the one master who can teach a native style is a native artist, and the one great artist of England, prior to 'the new poet,' was Chaucer.]

TO HIS BOOKE

GOE, little booke: thy selfe present,
As child whose parent is unkennt,
To him that is the president Of noblesse and of chevalree:
And if that Envie barke at thee,
As sure it will, for succoure flee Under the shadow of his wing;
And asked, who thee forth did bring,

A shepherds swaine, saye, did thee sing,
All as his straying flocke he fedde:
And when his honor has thee redde, Crave pardon for my hardyhedde.
But if that any aske thy name,
Say thou wert base begot with blame:
Forthy thereof thou takest shame.
And when thou art past jeoparddee, Come tell me what was sayd of mee:
And I will send more after thee.

IMMERITŌ.

TO THE MOST EXCELLENT AND LEARNED BOTH ORATOR AND POETE, MAYSTER GABRIELL HARVEY,

HIS VERIE SPECIAL AND SINGULAR GOOD FRIEND E. K. COMMENDETH THE GOOD LYKING OF THIS HIS LABOUR, AND THE PATRONAGE OF THE NEW POETE

UNCOUTHE, UNKISTE, sayde the olde famous poete Chancer: whom for his excellencie and wonderfull skil in making, his scholler Lidgate, a worthy scholler of so excellent a maister, calleth the loadestarre of our language: and whom our Colin Clout in his æglogue calleth Tityrus the god of shepheards, comparing hym to the worthines of the Roman Tityrus, Virgile. Which proverbe, myne owne good friend Maister Harvey, as in that good old poete it served well Pandares purpose, for the bolstering of his budy broeage, so very well taketh place in this our new poete, who for that he is uncouth (as said Chancer) is unkist, and unknown to most men, is regarded but of few. But I dout not, so soone as his name shall come into the knowledg of men, and his worthines be sounded in the tromp of Fame, but that he shall be not onely kiste, but also beloved of all, embraced of the most, and wondred at of the best. No lesse, I thinke, deserveth his wittinesse in devising, his pithinesse in uttering, his complaints of love so lovely, his discourses of pleasure so pleasantly, his pastorall rudenesse, his morall wisenesse, his dewe observing of decorum everye where, in personages, in seasons, in matter, in speach, and generally in al seemely sim- plicity of handeling his matter, and framing his words: the which, of many things which in him be straunge, I know will seeme the straungest, the words them selves being so auncient, the knitting of them so short and intricate, and the whole periode and compasse of speache so delightsome for the roundnesse, and so grave for the straungenesse. And firste of the wordes to speake, I graunt they be something hard, and of most men unused, yet both English, and also used of most excellent authors and most famous poetes. In whom whenas this our poet hath bene much traveled and throughly redd, how could it be, (as that worthy oratour sayde,) but that walking in the some, although for other cause he walked, yet needes he mought be sunburnt; and, having the sound of those auncient poetes still ringing in his eares, he mought needes in singing hit out some of theyr tunes. But whether he useth them by such casualtye and custome, or of set purpose and choyse, as thinking them fittest for such rusticall rudenesse of shepheards, eyther for that they rough sounde would make his rymes more ragged and rustical, or els because such olde and obsolete wordes are most used of country folke, sure I think, and think I think not amisse, that they bring great grace and, as one would say, auctoritie to the verse. For albe amongst many other faultes it specially be objected of Valla against Livie, and of other against Saluste, that with over much studie they affect antiquitie, as coveting thereby credence and honor of elder yeeres, yet I am of opinion, and eke the best learned are of the lyke, that those auncient solemne wordes are a great ornament both in the one and in the other; the one labouring to set forth in hys worke an eternall image of antiquitie, and the other carefully discoursing matters of gravitie and importaunce. For if my memory fayle not, Tullie, in that booke wherein he endeavoureth to set forth the paterne of a perfect oratour, sayth that oftentimes an auncient worde maketh the style seeme grave, and as it were reverend: no otherwise then we honour and reverence gray heares, for a certain religious regard which we have of old age. Yet nether every where must old words be stuffed in, nor the common dialecte and maner of speaking so corrupted therby, that, as in old buildings, it seme disorderly and ruinous. But all as in most exquisite pictures they use to blaze and portraiet not onely the daintie lineaments of beautye, but also rounde about it to shadow the rude thickets and craggy cliffs, that, by the basenesse of such parts, more excellency may accrew to the principall (for oftimes we fynde our selves, I knowe not how, singularly delighted with the shewe of such naturall rudenesse, and take great pleasure in that disorderly order) even so doe those rough and harsh termes enlumine and make more clearly to appeare the brightnesse of brave and glorious words. So ofentimes a dischorde in musick maketh a comely concordance: so great delight tooke the worthy poete Alceus to behold a blemish in the joynt of a wel shaped body. But if any will rashly blame such his purpose in choyse of old and unwonted words, him may I more justly blame and condemne, or of witlesse headinesse in judging, or of heedelesse hardinesse in condemning: for not marking the compasse of hys bent, he wil judge of the length of his cast: for in my opinion it is one special prayse, of many which are dew to this poete, that he hath laboured to restore, as to theyr rightfull heritage, such good and naturall English words as have ben long time out of use and almost cleare disherited. Which is the onely cause that our mother tonge, which truly of it self is both ful enough for prose and stately enough for verse, hath long time ben counted most bare and barrein of both. Which default when as some endeoured to salve and recure, they patched up the holes with peeces and rags of other languages, borrowing here of the French, there of the Italian, every where of the Latine; not weighing how il those tongues accorde with themselves, but much worse with ours: so now they have made our English tonge a gallinaufroy or hodgepodge of al other speches. Other some, not so wel seene in the English tonge as perhaps in other languages, if they happen to here an olde word, albeit very naturall and significant, crye out streight way that we speak no English, but gibbrish, or rather such as in old time Evanders mother spake. Whose first shame is, that they are not ashamed, in their own mother tonge straungers to be counted and alienes. The second shame no lesse then the first, that what so they understand not, they streight way deeme to be sencelesse, and not at al to be understode. Much like to the mole in Æsopes fable, that, being blynd her selfe, would in no wise be perswaded that any beast could see. The last more shameful then both, that of their owne country and naturall speach, which together with their nources milk they sucked, they have so base regard and bastard judgement, that they will not onely themselves not labor to garnish and beautifie it, but also repine that of other it shold be embellished. Like to the dogge in the maunger, that him selfe can eate no hay, and yet barketh at the hungry bullock, that so faine would feede: whose currish kinde, though it cannot be kept from barking, yet I conne them thanke that they refrain from biting.

Now, for the knitting of sentences, which they call the joynts and members thereof, and for al the compasse of the speach, it is round without roughnesse, and learned wythout hardnes, such ineede as may be perceived of the leaste, understode of the moste, but judged onely of the learned. For what in most English wryters useth to be loose, and as it were ungyrt, in this authour is well grounded, finely framed, and strongly trussed up together. In regard whereof, I scorne and spue out the rakehellye route of our ragged rymers (for so themselves use to hunt the letter) which without learning boste, without judgement jangle, without reason rage and fome, as if some instinct of poetically spirite had newly ravished them above the meauenesse of common capacite. And being in the midst of all theyr bravery, sodenly eyther for want of matter, or of ryme, or having forgotten theyr former conceipt, they seeme to be so pained and traveled in theyr remembrance as it were a woman in childebirth, or as that same Pythia, when the trounce came upon her: 'Ôs rabidum fera corda domans,' &c. Nethelless, let them a Gods name feede on theyr owne folly, so they seeke not to darken the beames of others glory. As for Colin, under whose person the Authour selfe is shadowed, how furre he is from such vaunted titles and glorious shoves, both him selfe sheweth, where he sayth,

'Of Muses, Hobbin, I conne no skill,' and

'Enough is me to paint out my unrest,' &c.,

and also appeareth by the basenesse of the name, wherein, it semeth, he chose rather to unfold great matter of argument covertly then, professing it, not suffice thereto accordingly. Which moved him rather in æglogues then other wise to write, doubting perhaps his habilitie, which he little needed, or mynding to furnish our tongue with this kinde, wherein it faulteth, or following the example of the best and most auncient poetes, which devised this kind of wryting, being both so base for the matter, and homely for the manner, at the first to trye theyr habilities, and, as young birdes 210 that be newly crept out of the nest, by little first to prove theyr tender wyngs, before they make a greater flyght. So flew Theocritus, as you may perceiue he was all ready full fledged. So flew Virgile, as not yet well feeling his winges. So flew Mantuane, as being not full somd. So Petrarque. So Boeace. So Marot, Samazarus, and also diuers other excellent both Italian and French poetes, whose foting this author every 220 where followeth, yet so as few, but they be wel sented, can trace him out. So finally flyeth this our new poete, as a bird whose principals be scarce growen out, but yet as that in time shall be hable to keepe wing with the best.

Now, as touching the generall dryft and purpose of his Eglogues, I mind not to say much, him selfe labouring to conceale it. Onely this appeareth, that his unstayed 230 yough had long wandred in the common labyrinth of Love; in which time, to mitigate and allay the heate of his passion, or els to warne (as he sayth) the young shepheards, se. his equalls and companions, of his unfortunat folly, he compiled these xij Eglogues, which, for that they be proportioned to the state of the xij monethes, he termeth the Shepheards Calendar, applying an olde name to a new worke. Hereunto 240 have I added a certain glosse or scholion, for the exposition of old wordes and harder phrases: which maner of glosing and commenting, well I wote, wil seeme straunge and rare in our tongue: yet for somuch as I knew many excellent and proper devises, both in wordes and matter, would passe in the speedy course of reading, either as unknown, or as not marked, and that in this kind, as in other, we might be equal to the 250 learned of other nations, I thought good to take the paines upon me, the rather for that, by meanes of some familiar acquaintance, I was made privie to his counsell and secret meaning in them, as also in sundry other works of his: which albeit I know he nothing so much hateth as to promulgate, yet thus much have I adventured upon his friendship, him selfe being for long time furre estranged; hoping that this will the rather 260 occasion him to put forth diuers other excellent works of his, which slepe in silence, as his Dreames, his Legendes, his Court of Cupide, and sondry others; whose commendations to set out were verye wayne, the thinges, though worthy of many, yet being known to few. These my present paynes if to any they be pleasurable or profitable, be you judge, mine own good Maister Harvey, to whom I have, both in respect of 270 your worthinesse generally, and otherwyse upon some particular and special considerations, vowed this my labour, and the maydenhead of this our commen frends poetrie, himselfe having already in the beginning dedicated it to the noble and worthy gentleman, the right worshipfull Maister Philip Sidney, a special favourer and maintainer of all kind of learning. Whose cause, I pray you sir, yf envie shall stur up any wrongful 280 accusation, defend with your mighty rhetoricke and other your rare gifts of learning, as you can, and shield with your good wil, as you ought, against the malice and outrage of so many enemies as I know wilbe set on fire with the sparks of his kindled glory. And thus recommending the Author unto you, as unto his most special good friend, and my selfe unto you both, as one making singuler account of two so very good and 290 so choise frends, I bid you both most hartely farwel, and commit you and your most commendable studies to the tuicion of the Greatest.

Your owne assuredly to be commaunded, E. K.

POST SCR.

Now I trust, Maister Harvey, that upon sight of your speciall frends and fellow poets doings, or els for envie of so many 300 unworthy quidams, which catch at the garland which to you alone is dewe, you will be perswaded to pluck out of the hatefull darknesse those so many excellent English poemes of yours which lye hid, and bring them forth to eternal light. Trust me, you doe both them great wrong, in depriving them of the desired sonne, and also your selfe, in smothering your deserved prayses; and all men generally, in withholding 310 from them so divine pleasures which they might conceive of your gallant English verses, as they have already doen of your Latine poemes, which, in my opinion, both for invention and elocution are very delicate and superexcellent. And thus againe I take my leave of my good Mayster Harvey. From my lodging at London, thys 10 of April, 1579.

THE GENERALL ARGUMENT OF THE WHOLE BOOKE

LITTLE, I hope, needeth me at large to discourse the first originall of Æglogues, having already touched the same. But, for the word Æglogues, I know, is unknownen to most, and also mistaken of some the best learned (as they think) I wyll say somewhat thereof, being not at all impertinent to my present purpose.

They were first of the Greekes, the inventours of them, called Æglogai, as it were ¹⁰ αἴγων, or αἰγονόμων, λόγοι, that is, Goteheards tales. For although in Virgile and others the speakers be more shepherds then goatheards, yet Theocritus, in whom is more ground of authoritie then in Virgile, this specially from that deriving, as from the first head and welspring, the whole invention of his Æglogues, maketh goteheards the persons and authors of his tales. This being, who seeth not the grossenesse ²⁰ of such as by colour of learning would make us beleve that they are more rightly termed Eclogai; as they would say, extraordinary discourses of unnecessarie matter? which definition, albe in substance and meaning it agree with the nature of the thing, yet no whit answereth with the ἀνάλυσις and interpretation of the word. For they be not termed Eclogues, but Æglogues: which sentence this author very well observ- ³⁰ ing, upon good judgement, though indeede few goteheards have to doe herein, nethelesse doubteth not to cal them by the used and best known name. Other curious discourses hereof I reserve to greater occasion.

These xij Æglogues, every where answering to the seasons of the twelve monthes, may be well divided into three formes or ranekes. For eyther they be plaintive, as the first, the sixth, the eleventh, and the ⁴⁰ twelfth; or recreative, such as al those be which containe matter of love, or commendation of special personages; or moral, which for the most part be mixed with some satyricall bitterness: namely the second, of reverence dewe to old age, the fift, of coloured deceit, the seventh and ninth, of dissolute shepherds and pastours, the tenth, of contempt of poetric and pleasaunt wits. And to this division may every thing ⁵⁰ herein be reasonably applied: a few onely except, whose speciall purpose and meaning I am not privie to. And thus much generally of these xij Æglogues. Now will we speake particularly of all, and first of the first, which he calleth by the first monethes name, Januarie: wherein to some he may seeme fowly to have faulted, in that he erroneously beginneth with that month which beginneth not the yeare. For it ⁶⁰ is wel known, and stoutely mainteyned with stronge reasons of the learned, that the yeare beginneth in March; for then the some reneweth his finished course, and the seasonable spring refresheth the earth, and the plesaunce thereof, being buried in the sadnessde of the dead winter now worne away, reliveth. This opinion maynteine the olde astrologers and philosophers, namely the reverend Andalo, and Macrobius in ⁷⁰ his holydayes of Saturne; which account also was generally observed both of Grecians and Romans. But saving the leave of such learned heads, we mayntaine a custome of counting the seasons from the moneth January, upon a more speciall cause then the heathen philosophers ever coulde conceive, that is, for the incarnation of our mighty Saviour and eternal Redeemer, the Lord Christ, who, as then renewing the ⁸⁰ state of the decayed world, and returning the compasse of expired yeres to theyr former date and first commencement, left to us his heires a memoriall of his birth in the ende of the last yeere and beginning of the next: which reckoning, beside that eternall monument of our salvation, leaneth also upon good prooffe of special judgement. For albeit that in elder times, when as yet the count of the yere was not perfected, ⁹⁰ as afterwarde it was by Julius Cæsar, they began to tel the monethes from Marches beginning, and according to the same, God (as is sayd in Scripture) comaunded the people of the Jewes to count the moneth Abib, that which we call March, for the first moneth, in remembrance that in that moneth he brought them out of the land of Ægypt, yet according to tradition of latter times it hath bene otherwise observed, ¹⁰⁰ both in government of the Church and rule of mightiest realmes. For from Julius Cæsar, who first observed the leape yeere, which he called Bissextilem Annum, and brought into a more certain course the odde wandring dayes which of the Greekes were called ὄπρβαλοντες, of the Romanes intercalares (for in such matter of learning I am forced to use the termes of the learned) the monethes have bene nombred xij, which in the first ¹¹⁰ ordinance of Romulus were but tenne, counting but ccciiij dayes in every yeare, and beginning with March. But Numa Pompilius, who was the father of al the Romain ceremonies and religion, seeing that reckoning to agree neither with the course of the sonne, nor of the moone, thereunto added two monethes, January and February: wherein it seemeth, that wise king minded upon good reason to begin the yeare at ¹²⁰ Januarie, of him therefore so called tantumquam janua anni, the gate and entrance of the yere, or of the name of the god Janus, to which god for that the old Paynims attributed the byrth and beginning of all creatures new comming into the worlde, it seemeth that he therefore to him assigned the beginning and first entrance of the yeare. Which account for the most part hath hitherto continued: notwithstanding that ¹³⁰ the Ægyptians beginne theyr yeare at September, for that, according to the opinion of the best rabbins and very purpose of the Scripture selfe, God made the worlde in that moneth, that is called of them Tisri. And therefore he commaunded them to keepe the feast of Pavilions in the end of the yeare, in the xv. day of the seventh moneth, which before that time was the first.

But our authour, respecting nether the ¹⁴⁰ subtiltie of those parte, nor the antiquitie of thother, thinketh it fittest, according to the simplicitie of commen understanding, to begin with Januarie, wening it perhaps no decorum that shepheard should be seene in matter of so deepe insight, or canvase a case of so doubtful judgment. So therefore beginneth he, and so continueth he throughout.

ÆGLOGA PRIMA

ARGUMENT

In this fyrst Æglogue Colin Cloute, a shepherdes boy, complaineth him of his unfortunate love, being but newly (as semeth) enamoured of a countrie lasse called Rosalinde: with which strong affection being very sore traveled, he compareth his careful case to the sadde season of the yeare, to the frostie ground to the frosen trees, and to his owne winter-beaten flocke. And lastlye, fynding himselfe robbed of all former pleasance and delights. hee breaketh his pipe in peeces, and casteth him selfe to the ground.

COLIN CLOUTE.

A SHEPEHEARDS boye (no better doe him call)

When winters wastful spight was almost spent,

All in a sumeshine day, as did befall,
Led forth his flock, that had bene long ypent.

So faynt they woxe, and feeble in the folde,

That now unmethes their feete could them uphold.

All as the sheepe, such was the shepeheards looke,

For pale and wanne he was, (alas the while!)
May seeme he lov'd, or els some care he tooke:

Well couth he tune his pipe, and frame his stile.

Tho to a hill his faynting flocke he ledde,
And thus him playnd, the while his shepe there fedde.

‘Ye gods of love, that pitie lovers payne, (If any gods the paine of lovers pitie,) Looke from above, where you in joyes remaine,

And bowe your eares unto my dolefull dittie.

And Pan, thou shepheards god, that once didst love,

Pitie the paines that thou thy selfe didst prove.

‘Thou barrein ground, whome winters wrath hath wasted,

Art made a myrrhour to behold my plight:
Whilome thy fresh spring flowrd, and after hasted

Thy sommer prowde with daffadillies dight,
And now is come thy wynters stormy state,

Thy mantle mard wherein thou maskedst late.

‘Such rage as winters reigneth in my heart.
My life bloud frieing with unkindly cold:

Such stormy stoures do breede my balefull
 smart,
 As if my yeare were wast and woxen old.
 And yet, alas! but now my spring be-
 gonne,
 And yet, alas! yt is already donne. 30

' You naked trees, whose shady leaves are lost, Wherein the byrds were wont to build their
 bowre,
 And now are clothd with mosse and hoary frost, Insteade of bloosmes, wherwith your buds did flowre:
 I see your teares, that from your boughes doe raine,
 Whose drops in drery ysicles remaine.

' All so my lustfull leafe is drye and sere, My timely buds with wayling all are wasted;
 The blossome which my braunch of youth
 did beare
 With breathed sighes is blowne away and blasted; 40
 And from mine eyes the drizzling teares descend,
 As on your boughes the ysicles depend.

' Thou feeble flocke, whose fleece is rough and rent,
 Whose knees are weake through fast and evill fare,
 Mayst wisse well by thy ill government, Thy maysters mind is overcome with care.
 Thou weake, I wanne; thou leane, I quite
 forlorne:
 With mourning pyne I; you with pyning mourne.

' A thousand sithes I curse that carefull hower Wherein I longd the neighbour towne to
 see: 50
 And eke tenne thousand sithes I blesse the stoure
 Wherein I sawe so fayre a sight as shee.
 Yet all for naught: such sight hath bred my bane.
 Ah, God! that love should breede both joy and payne!

' It is not Hobbinol wherefore I plaine, Albee my love he seeke with dayly suit:

His clownish gifts and curtsies I disdaine, His kiddes, his cracknelles, and his early fruit.
 Ah, foolish Hobbinol! thy gyfts bene
 vayne:
 Colin them gives to Rosalind againe. 60

' I love thilke lasse, (alas! why doe I love?)
 And am forlorne, (alas! why am I lornd?) Shee deignes not my good will, but doth reprove,
 And of my rurall musick holdeth scorne.
 Shepherds devise she hateth as the snake,
 And laughes the songes that Colin Clout doth make.

' Wherefore, my pype, albee rude Pan thou
 please,
 Yet for thou pleasest not where most I would:
 And thou, unlucky Muse, that wontst to ease
 My musing mynd, yet canst not, when thou should: 70
 Both pype and Muse shall sore the while abye.'
 So broke his oaten pype, and downe dyd lye.

By that, the welked Phæbus gan availe His weary waine, and nowe the frosty
 Night
 Her mantle black through heaven gan over-haile.
 Which seene, the pensif boy, halfe in des-
 pight,
 Arose, and homeward drove his souned
 sheepe,
 Whose hanging heads did seeme his care-full ease to weepe.

COLINS EMBLEME.

Auchōra speme.

GLOSSE

Colin Cloute is a name not greatly used, and yet have I sene a poesie of Maister Skeltons under that title. But indeede the word Colin is Frenche, and used of the French poete Marot (if he be worthy of the name of a poete) in a certein æglogue. Under which name this poete secretly shadoweth himself, as sometime did Virgil under the name of Tityrus, thinking it much fitter then such Latine names, for the great unlikelyhoode of the language. ¹⁰

Unnethes, scarcely.

Couthe commeth of the verbe Conne, that is, to know or to have skill. As well interpreteth the same the worthy Sir Tho. Smith, in his booke of government : wherof I have a perfect copie in wryting, lent me by his kinseman, and my verye singular good freend, Maister Gabriel Harvey : as also of some other his most grave and excellent wrytings.

Sythe, time. ²⁰

Neighbour towne, the next towne : expressing the Latine vicina.

Sloure, a fit.

Sere, withered.

His clownish gifts imitateth Virgils verse,

'Rusticus es Corydon, nec namera curat Alexis.'

Hobbinol is a fained country name, whereby, it being so commune and usuall, seemeth to be hidden the person of some his very speciall and most familiar freend, whom he entirely and ³⁰ extraordinarily beloved, as peradventure shall be more largely declared hereafter. In thys place seemeth to be some savour of disorderly love, which the learned call pæderastice : but it is gathered beside his meaning. For who that hath red Plato his dialogue called Aleybiades, Xenophon, and Maximus Tyrius, of Socrates opinions, may easily perceive that such love is muche to be allowed and liked of, specially so meant as Socrates used it : who sayth, that ⁴⁰ in deede he loved Aleybiades extremely, yet not Aleybiades person, but hys soule, which is Aleybiades owne selfe. And so is pæderastice much to be preferred before gynerastice, that is, the love whiche enflameth men with lust toward womankind. But yet let no man thinke, that herein I stand with Lucian, or his develish disciple Unico Aretimo, in defence of execrable and horrible sinnes of forbidden and unlawful fleshlinesse. Whose abominable error is ⁵⁰ fully confuted of Perionius, and others.

I love, a prety epanorthosis in these two verses, and withall a paronomasia or playing with the word, where he sayth, I love thilke lasse (alas, &c).

Rosalinde is also a feigned name, which, being wel ordered, wil bewray the very name of hys love and mistresse, whom by that name he coloureth. So as Ovide shadoweth hys love under the name of Corynna, which of some ⁶⁰ is supposed to be Julia, thenperor Augustus his daughter, and wyfe to Agryppa. So doth Aruntius Stella every where call his lady Asteris and Ianthis, albe it is wel known that her right name was Violantilla : as witnesseth Statius in his Epithalamium. And so the famous paragone of Italy, Madonna Cælia, in her letters envelopeth her selfe under the name of Zima : and Petrona under the name of Bell-ochia. And this generally hath bene a com- ⁷⁰ mon custome of counterfeiting the names of secret personages.

Avail, bring downe.

Overhaile, drawe over.

EMBLEME.

His Embleme or poesye is here under added in Italian, Anch'ora speme : the meaning wherof is, that notwithstanding his extreme passion and lucklesse love, yet, leaning on hope, he is some what recomforted.

FEBRUARIE

ÆGLOGA SECUNDA

ARGUMENT

THIS Æglogue is rather morall and generall then bent to any secrete or particular purpose. It specially conteyneth a discourse of old age, in the persone of Thenot, an olde shepheard, who, for his crookednesse and unlustinesse, is scorned of Cuddie, an unhappy heardmans boye. The matter very well accordeth with the season of the moneth, the yeare now drouping, and, as it were, drawing to his last age. For as in this time of yeare, so then in our bodies, there is a dry and withering cold, which congealeth the crudled blood, and frieseth the wether-beaten flesh, with stormes of fortune and hoare frosts of care. To which purpose the olde man telleth a tale of the Oake and the Bryer, so lively and so feelingly, as, if the thing were set forth in some picture before our eyes, more plainly could not appeare.

CUDDIE. THENOT.

Cud. Ah for pittie ! wil rancke winters
rage

These bitter blasts never ginne tasswage ?
The kene cold blowes through my beaten
hyde,

All as I were through the body gryde.
My ragged rontes all shiver and shake,
As doen high towers in an earthquake :
They wont in the wind wagge their wrigle tailes,

Perke as peacock : but nowe it avales.

The. Lewdly complainest thou, laesie ladde,

Of winters wracke, for making thee sadde.
Must not the world wend in his commun
course,

From good to badd, and from badde to worse,

From worse unto that is worst of all,
 And then returne to his former fall?
 Who will not suffer the stormy time,
 Where will he live tyll the lusty prime?
 Selfe have I worne out thrise threttie
 yeares,

Some in much joy, many in many teares;
 Yet never complained of cold nor heate;
 Of sommers flame, nor of winters threat; 20
 Ne ever was to fortune foeman, But gently tooke that ungently came:
 And ever my flocke was my chiefe care;
 Winter or sommer they mought well fare.

Cud. No marveile, Thenot, if thou can
 beare

Cherefully the winters wrathfull cheare:
 For age and winter accord full nie, This chill, that cold, this crooked, that wrye;

And as the lowring wether lookes downe, So semest thou like Good Fryday to frowne. 30

But my flowring youth is foe to frost,
 My shippe unwont in stormes to be tost.

The. The soveraigne of seas he blames in vaine,

That, once seabate, will to sea againe.
 So loytring live you little heardgroomes, Keeping you bestes in the budded broomes:

And when the shining sunne laugheth once,
 You deemen the spring is come attonce.
 Tho gynne you, fond flies, the cold to scorne,
 And, crowing in pypes made of greene corne, 40

You thincken to be lords of the yeare.

But eft, when ye count you freed from feare, Comes the breme winter with chamfred browes,

Full of wrinckles and frostie furrowes, Drerily shooting his stormy darte, Which cruddles the blood, and pricks the harte.

Then is your carelesse corage accoied, Your carefull heards with cold bene annoied:

Then paye you the price of your surquedrie,
 With weeping, and wayling, and misery. 50

Cud. Ah, foolish old man! I scorne thy
 skill,

That wouldest me my springing youngth to spill.

I deeme thy braine emperished bee Through rusty elde, that hath rotted thee:
 Or sicker thy head veray tottie is,

So on thy corbe shoulder it leanes amisse.
 Now thy selfe hast lost both lopp and topp, Als my budding braunch thou wouldest cropp:

But were thy yeares greene, as now bene myne,

To other delights they would incline. 60
 Tho wouldest thou learne to caroll of love,
 And hery with hymnes thy lasses glove:
 Tho wouldest thou pype of Phyllis prayse:
 But Phyllis is myne for many dayes:

I wonne her with a gyrdle of gelt, Embost with buegle about the belt:
 Such an one shepheards woulde make full
 faine,

Such an one would make thee younge
 againe.

The. Thou art a fon, of thy love to boste;

All that is lent to love wyll be lost. 70

Cud. Seest howe brag yond bullocke beares,

So smirke, so smoothe, his pricked eares?
 His hornes bene as broade as rainebowe
 bent,

His dewelap as lythe as lasse of Kent.

See howe he venteth into the wynd.

Weenest of love is not his mynd?

Seemeth thy flocke thy counsell can,

So lustlesse bene they, so weake, so wan,

Clothed with cold, and hoary wyth frost.

Thy flocks father his corage hath lost: 80

Thy ewes, that wont to have blownen bags, Like wailefull widdowes hangen their crags:

The rather lambes bene starved with cold,

All for their maister is lustlesse and old.

The. Cuddie, I wote thou kenst little good,

So vainely tadvaunce thy headlessehood.

For youngth is a bubble blown up with breath,

Whose witt is weakenesse, whose wage is death,

Whose way is wilderness, whose ynne penance,

And stoopegallaunt age, the hoste of greevance. 90

But shall I tel thee a tale of truth,

Which I cond of Tityrus in my youth,

Keeping his sheepe on the hils of Kent?

Cud. To nought more, Thenot, my mind is bent,

Then to heare novells of his devise:

They bene so well thewed, and so wise,

What ever that good old man bespake.

The. Many meete tales of youth did he make,

And some of love, and some of chevalrie:
But none fitter then this to applie. ¹⁰⁰
Now listen a while, and hearken the end.

There grewe an aged tree on the greene,
A goodly Oake sometime had it bene, With armes full strong and largely displayd,

But of their leaves they were disarayde:
The bodie bigge, and mightely pight, Thoroughly rooted, and of wonderous hight:
Whilome had bene the king of the field,
And moebell mast to the husband did yelde,
And with his nuts larded many swine. ¹¹⁰

But now the gray mosse marred his rine, His bared boughes were beaten with stormes,

His toppe was bald, and wasted with wormes,

His honor decayed, his braunches sere.

Hard by his side grewe a bragging Brere, Which proudly thrust into thelement,
And seemed to threat the firmament.

Yt was embellisht with blossomes fayre,
And thereto aye wommed to repayre ¹¹⁹

The shepheards daughters, to gather flowres,
To peinct their girlonds with his coloures:
And in his small bushes used to shrowde
The sweete nightingale singing so lowde:
Which made this foolish Brere wexe so
bold,

That on a time he cast him to scold
And snebbe the good Oake, for he was old.

'Why standst there,' quoth he, 'thou brutish blocke ?

Nor for fruit nor for shadowe serves thy stocke.

Seest how fresh my flowers bene spredde, Dyed in lilly white and cremsin redde, ¹³⁰

With leaves engrained in lusty greene, Colours meete to clothe a mayden queene ?
Thy wast bignes but combers the grownd, And dirks the beauty of my blossomes
round.

The mouldie mosse, which thee accloieth,
My sinamon smell too much annoieth.

Wherefore soone, I rede thee, hence remove, Least thou the price of my displeasure prove.'

So spake this bold Brere with great dis-
daine:

Little him answered the Oake againe, ¹⁴⁰
But yielded, with shame and greefe adawed,
That of a weede he was overawed.

Yt chaunced after upon a day,
The husbandman selfe to come that way,
Of custome for to survewe his grownd,
And his trees of state in compasse rownd.
Him when the spitefull Brere had espyed, Causlesse complained, and lowdly cryed Unto his lord, stirring up sterne strife:

'O my liege lord, the god of my life, ¹⁵⁰ Pleaseth you ponder your suppliants plaint, Caused of wrong, and cruell constraint,
Which I your poore vassall dayly endure:
And but your goodnes the same recure, Am like for desperate doole to dye,
Through felonous force of mineemie.'

Greatly aghast with this piteous plea, Him rested the goodman on the lea,
And badde the Brere in his plaint proceede.
With painted words tho gan this proude weede ¹⁶⁰

(As most usen ambitious folke)
His coloured crime with craft to cloke.

'Ah my soveraigne, lord of creatures all,
Thou placer of plants both humble and tall,
Was not I planted of thine owne hand,
To be the primrose of all thy land, With flowring blossomes to furnish the prime,

And searlot berries in sommer time ?
How falls it then, that this faded Oake, Whose bodie is sere, whose braunches broke, ¹⁷⁰

Whose naked armes stretch unto the fyre, Unto such tyramie doth aspire; Hindring with his shade my lovely light,
And robbing me of the swete sonnes sight ?
So beate his old boughes my tender side,
That oft the bloud springeth from wounds
wyde:

Untimely my flowres forced to fall,
That bene the honor of your coronall.
And oft he lets his cancker wormes light Upon my braunches, to worke me more spight: ¹⁸⁰

And oft his hoarie locks downe doth cast, Where with my fresh flowretts bene defast.
For this, and many more such outrage, Craving your goodlihead to aswage
The ranckorous rigour of his might, Nought aske I, but onely to hold my right; Submitting me to your good sufferance,
And praying to be garded from greevance.'

To this the Oake cast him to reple
Well as he couth: but his enimie ¹⁹⁰
Had kindled such coles of displeasure,
That the good man noulde stay his leasure,

But home him hasted with furious heate, Encreasing his wrath with many a threate.
 His harmefull hatchet he hent in hand, (Alas, that it so ready should stand !)
 And to the field alone he speedeth, (Ay little helpe to harme there needeth.) Anger would let him speake to the tree, Enaunter his rage mought cooled bee; ²⁰⁰
 But to the roote bent his sturdy stroke,
 And made many wounds in the wast Oake.
 The axes edge did oft turne againe,
 As halfe unwilling to cutte the graine:
 Semed, the sencelesse yron dyd feare,
 Or to wrong holy eld did forbear.
 For it had bene an auncient tree, Sacred with many a mysteree,
 And often crost with the priestes crewe,
 And often halowed with holy water dewe.
 But sike fancies weren foolerie, ²¹¹
 And broughten this Oake to this miserye.
 For nought mought they quitten him from
 decay:

For fiercely the goodman at him did laye.
 The blocke oft groned under the blow,
 And sighed to see his neare overthrow.
 In fine, the steele had pierced his pitth:
 Tho downe to the earth he fell forthwith:
 His wonderous weight made the grounde to quake, Thearth shronke under him, and seemed to shake. ²²⁰

There lyeth the Oake, pitied of none.
 Now stands the Brere like a lord alone, Puffed up with pryde and vaine pleasaunce:
 But all this glee had no continuance.
 For eftsones winter gan to approche,
 The blustering Boreas did encroche,
 And beate upon the solitarie Brere:
 For nowe no succoure was seene him nere.
 Now gan he repent his pryde to late:
 For naked left and disconsolate, ²³⁰
 The byting frost nipt his stalke dead,
 The watrie wette weighed downe his head,
 And heaped snowe burdned him so sore,
 That nowe upright he can stand no more:
 And being downe, is trodde in the durt
 Of cattell, and brouzed, and sorely hurt.
 Such was thend of this ambitious Brere,
 For scorning eld —

Cud. Now I pray thee, shepheard, tel it not forth:
 Here is a long tale, and little worth. ²⁴⁰
 So longe have I listened to thy speche, That grafted to the ground is my breche:
 My hartblood is welnig^b frorne, I feele,

And my galage growne fast to my heele:
 But little ease of thy lewd tale I tasted.
 Hye thee home, shepheard, the day is nigh wasted.

Kene, sharpe.

Gride, perced: an olde word much used of Lidgate, but not found (that I know of) in Chaucer.

Foeman, a foe.

Thenot, the name of a shepheard in Marot his Æglogues. ¹¹

Heardgromes, Chaucers verse almost whole.

Fond Flyes: He compareth carelesse slug-gardes, or ill husbandmen, to flyes, that so soone as the sunne shineth, or yt wexeth any thing warme, begin to flye abroad, when sodeinly they be overtaken with cold. ²¹

But eft when, a verye excellent and lively description of winter, so as may bee indifferently taken, eyther for old age, or for winter season.

Breme, chill, bitter.

Accoied, plucked downe and daunted.

Surquedrie, pryde.

Elde, olde age. ³⁰

Sicker, sure.

Lytte, soft and gentile.

Venteth, snuffeth in the wind.

Crags, neckes.

Rather lambs, that be ewed early in the beginning of the yeare.

Youth is, a very moral and pittie allegorie of youth, and the lustes thereof, compared to a wearie wayfaring man.

Tityrus: I suppose he meanes Chancer, 50 whose prayse for pleasant tales cannot dye, so long as the memorie of hys name shal live, and the name of poetrie shal endure.

Well thewed, that is, bene morate, full of morall wisenesse.

There grew: This tale of the Oake and the Breere he telleth as learned of Chaucer, but it is cleane in another kind, and rather like to Æsops fables. It is very excellent for pleasant descriptions, being altogether a 60 certaine icon or hypotyposis of disdainfull younkers.

Embellisht, beautified and adorned.

To wonne, to haunt or frequent.

Sneb, checke.

Why standst: The speach is scornefull and very presumptuous.

Glee, chere and jollitie.

For scornng eld: And minding (as shoulde seme) to have made ryme to the former verse, he is comingly cutte of by Cuddye, as disdainning to here any more. 110

Galage, a startuppe or clownish shoe.

EMBLEME.

This embleme is spoken of Thenot, as a moral of his former tale: namelye, that God, which is himselfe most aged, being before al ages, and without beginninge, maketh those whom he loveth like to himselfe, in heaping yeares unto theyre dayes, and blessing them wyth longe lyfe. For the blessing of age is not given to all, but unto those whome God will so blesse: and albeit that many evil men 120 reache unto such fulnesse of yeares, and some also wexe olde in myserie and thraldome, yet therefore is not age ever the lesse blessing. For even to such evil men such number of yeares is added, that they may in their last dayes repent, and come to their first home. So the old man checketh the rashheaded boy for despysing his gray and frosty heares.

Whom Cuddye doth counterbuff with a bytting and bitter proverbe, spoken indeede at 130 the first in contempt of old age generally. For it was an old opinion, and yet is continued in some mens conceipt, that men of yeares have no feare of god at al, or not so much as younger folke. For that being rypened with long experience, and having passed many bitter brunts and blastes of vengeance, they dread no stormes of Fortune, nor wrathe of gods, nor daunger of menne, as being eyther by longe and ripe wisdome armed against all mis- 140 channes and adversitie, or with much trouble hardened against all troublesome tydes: lyke unto the Ape, of which is sayd in Æsops fables. That oftentimes meeting the Lyon, he was at first sore aghast and dismayed at the grimmes and austeritie of hys countenance, but at last being acquainted with his lookes, he was so furre from fearing him, that he would familiarly gybe and jest with him: suche longe experience breedeth in some men securitie. Although 150 it please Erasmus, a great clerke and good old father, more fatherly and favourably to construe it, in his Adages, for his own behoofe, that by the proverbe, 'Nemo senex metuit Jovem,' is not meant, that old men have no feare of God at al, but that they be furre from superstition and idolatrous regard of false gods, as is Jupiter. But his greate learning notwithstanding, it is to plaine to be gainsayd, that olde men are muche more enclined to such fond fooleries, then younger heades.

MARCH

ARGUMENT

In this Æglogue two shepherds boyes, taking occasion of the season, beginne to make purpose of love, and other pleasance which to springtime is most agreeable. The special meaning hereof is to give certaine markes and tokens to know Cupide, the poets god of love. But more particularlye, I thinke, in the person of Thomalin is meant some secrete freend, who scorned Love and his knights so long, till at length him selfe was entangled, and unwares wounded with the dart of some beautifull regard, which is Cupides arrow.

WILLYE. THOMALIN.

Wil. Thomalin, why sytten we soe, As weren overwent with woe, Upon so fayre a morow ?
The joyous time now nigheth fast,
That shall alegge this bitter blast,
And slake the winters sorowe.
Tho. Sicker, Willye, thou warnest well:
For winters wrath beginnes to quell,
And pleasant spring appeareth.
The grasse nowe ginnes to be refresht, 10
The swallow peepes out of her nest,
And clowdie welkin cleareth.
Wil. Seest not thilke same hawthorne stude, How bragly it beginnes to budde,
And utter his tender head ?
Flora now calleth forth eche flower,
And bids make ready Maias bowre,
That newe is upryst from bedde.
Tho shall we sporten in delight,
And learne with Lettice to wexe light, 20
That scornefully lookes askaunce; Tho will we little Love awake,
That nowe sleepeth in Lethe lake,
And pray him leaden our daunce.
Tho. Willye, I wene thou bee assott:
For lustie Love still sleepeth not,
But is abroad at his game.
Wil. How kenst thou that he is awoke ?
Or hast thy selfe his slomber broke ?
Or made previe to the same ? 30
Tho. No, but happely I hym spyde, Where in a bush he did him hide,
With wings of purple and blewe.
And were not that my sheepe would stray,
The previe marks I would bewray, Whereby by chaunce I him knewe

Wil. Thomalin, have no care forthy;
My selfe will have a double eye, Ylike to my flocke and thine:
For als at home I have a syre, 40
A stepdame eke, as whott as fyre, That dewly adayes counts mine.
Tho. Nay, but thy seeing will not serve,
My sheepe for that may chaunce to swerve,
And fall into some mischiefe.
For sithens is but the third morowe
That I chaunst to fall a sleepe with sorowe, And waked againe with griefe:
The while thilke same unhappye ewe, Whose clonted legge her hurt doth shewe, 50 Fell headlong into a dell,
And there unjoynted both her bones:
Mought her necke bene joynted attones,
She shoulde have neede no more spell.
Thelf was so wanton and so wood, (But now I trowe can better good) She mought ne gang on the greene.
Wil. Let be, as may be, that is past:
That is to come, let be forecast.
Now tell us what thou hast seene. 60
Tho. It was upon a holiday, When shepheardes groomes han leave to
play,
I cast to goe a shooting.
Long wandring up and downe the land,
With bowe and bolts in either hand,
For birds in bushes tooting,
At length within an yvie todde (There shrouded was the little god)
I heard a busie bustling.
I bent my bolt against the bush, 70 Listening if any thing did rushe, But then heard no more rustling.
Tho peeping close into the thlicke, Might see the moving of some quicke, Whose shape appeared not:
But were it faerie, feend, or snake,
My courage earnd it to awake,
And manfully thereat shotte.
With that sprong forth a naked swayne,
With spotted winges like peacocks trayne,
And laughing lope to a tree, 80
His gylden quiver at his backe,
And silver bowe, which was but slacke,
Which lightly he bent at me.
That seeing I, levelde againe,
And shott at him with might and maine,
As thicke as it had hayed.
So long I shott that al was spent:
Tho pumie stones I hastily hent,
And threwe; but nought availed: 90

He was so wimble and so wight,
From bough to bough he lepped light,
And oft the pumies latched.

Therewith affrayd I ranne away:
But he, that earst seemd bot to playe,

A shaft in earnest snatched,
And hit me running in the heele:
For then, I little smart did feele;

But soone it sore encreased.
And now it ranckleth more and more, 100
And inwardly it festreth sore, Ne wote I how to cease it.

Wil. Thomalin, I pittie thy plight.
Perdie, with Love thou diddest fight:
I know him by a token.

For once I heard my father say, How he him caught upon a day, (Whereof he wilbe wroken)

Entangled in a fowling net, 110
Which he for carrion crowes had set,
That in our peeretree haunted.

Tho sayd, he was a winged lad, But bowe and shafts as then none had,
Els had he sore be daunted.

But see, the welkin thicks apace,
And stouping Phebus steepes his face:
Yts time to hast us homeward.

WILLYES EMBLEME.

*To be wise and eke to love,
Is graunted scarce to god above.*

THOMALINS EMBLEME.

*Of hony and of gaule in love there is store:
The honye is much, but the gaule is more.*

GLOSS

This Eglogue seemeth somewhat to resemble that same of Theocritus, wherein the boy likewise telling the old man, that he had shot at a winged boy in a tree, was by hym warned to beware of mischief to come.

Overwent, overgone.

Alegge, to lessen or aswage.

To quell, to abate.

Welkin, the skie.

The swallow, which bird useth to be counted the messenger, and as it were, the fore-runner, of springe.

Flora, the goddesse of flowres, but indede (as saith Tacitus) a famous harlot, which, with the abuse of her body having gotten great riches, made the people of Rome her heyre: who, in remembrance of so great beneficence, appointed a yearly feste for the memoriall of her, calling her, not as she was, nor as some doe think, Andronico. but Flora: making 20 her the goddesse of all floures, and doing yerely to her solemne sacrifice.

Maias bower, that is, the pleasaunt field, or rather the Maye bushes. Maia is a goddess and the mother of Mercurie, in honour of whome the moneth of Maye is of her name so called, as sayth Macrobius.

Lettice, the name of some country lasse.

Ascaunce, askewe or asquint.

Forthy, therefore. 30

Lethe is a lake in hell, which the poetes call the lake of forgetfulnes. For Lethe signifieth forgetfulnes. Wherein the soules being dipped, did forget the cares of their former lyfe. So that by Love sleeping in Lethe lake, he meaneth he was almost forgotten, and out of knowledge, by reason of winters hardnesse, when all pleasures, as it were, sleepe and weare oute of mynde.

Assotte, to dote. 40

His slomber: To breake Loves slomber is to exercise the delightes of love and wanton pleasures.

Winges of purple, so is he feyned of the poetes.

For als: He imitateth Virgils verse,

'Est mihi namque domi pater, est injusta noverca, &c.'

A dell, a hole in the ground.

Spell is a kinde of verse or charme, that in elder tymes they used often to say over every thing that they would have preserved, as the nightspel for theeves, and the woodspell. And herehence, I thinke, is named the gospell, as it were Gods spell or worde. And so sayth Chaucer, 'Listeneth Lordings to my spell.'

Gange, goe.

An yvie todde, a thicke bush.

Swaine, a boye: for so is he described of the poetes to be a boye, sc. alwayes freshe and lustie: blindfolded, because he maketh no difference of personages: wyth divers coloured winges, sc. ful of flying fancies: with bowe and arrow. that is, with glaunce of beautye, which prycketh as a forked arrowe. He is sayd also to have shafts, some leaden, some golden: that is. both pleasure for the gracious and loved, and sorow for the lover that is disdayned or forsaken. But who liste more at large to behold Cupids colours and furniture, let him reade either Propertius, or Moschus his Idyllion of wandring Love, being now most excellently translated into Latine, by the singular learned man Angelus Politianus: which worke I have seene, amongst other of thys poets doings, very wel translated also into Englishe rymes.

Wimble and wighte, quicke and deliver.

In the heele is very poetically spoken, and not without speciall judgement. For I remember that in Homer it is sayd of Thetis, that shee tooke her young babe Achilles, being newly 80 borne, and, holding him by the heele, dipped him in the River of Styx. The vertue whereof is, to defend and keepe the boydes washed therein from any mortall wound. So Achilles being washed al over, save onely his hele, by which his mother held, was in the rest invulnerable: therefore by Paris was feyned to bee shotte with a poysoned arrowe in the heele, whiles he was busie about the maryng of Polyxena in the temple of Apollo: which mysticall ⁹⁰ fable Enstathius unfolding sayth: that by wounding in the hele is meant lustfull love. For from the heele (as say the best phisitions) to the previe partes there passe certaine veines and slender synnewes, as also the like come from the head, and are carryed lyke little pypes behynd the eares: so that (as sayth Hipocrates) yf those veynes there be cut asonder, the partie straighte becometh cold and unfruitful. Which reason our poete wel weighing, mak- ¹⁰⁰ eth this shepheards boye of purpose to be wounded by Love in the heele.

Latched, caught.

Wroken, revenged.

For once: In this tale is sette out the simplicitie of shepheards opinion of Love.

Stouping Phœbus is a periphraſis of the sunne setting.

EMBLEME.

Hereby is meant, that all the delights of love, wherein wanton youth walloweth, be but ¹¹⁰ follye mixt with bitternesse, and sorow sawced with repentaunce. For besides that the very affection of love it selfe tormenteth the mynde, and vexeth the body many wayes, with unrestfulnesse all night, and wearines all day, seeking for that we can not have, and fynding that we would not have: even the selfe things which best before us lyked, in course of time and chaung of ryper yeares, whiche also therewithall chaungeth our wonted lyking and ¹²⁰ former fantasies, will then seeme lothsome and breede us annoyaunce, when yongthes flowre is withered, and we fynde our bodies and wits aunswere not to suche vayne jollitie and lustfull pleasauce.

ÆGLOGA QUARTA

ARGUMENT

THIS Æglogue is purposely intended to the honor and prayse of our most gracious soveraigne, Queene Elizabeth. The speakers herein be Hobbinoll and Thenott, two shepheardes: the which Hobbinoll, being before mentioned greatly to have loved Colin, is here set forth more largely, complayning him of that boyes great misadventure in love, whereby his mynd was alienate and withdrawn not onely from him, who moste loved him, but also from all former delightes and studies, aswell in pleasaunt pyping as conning ryming and singing, and other his laudable exercises. Whereby he taketh occasion, for prooffe of his more excellencie and skill in poetrie, to recorde a songe which the sayd Colin sometime made in honor of her Majestie, whom abruptly he termeth Elysa.

THENOT. HOBBINOLL.

The. Tell me, good Hobbinoll, what garres thee greeete?

What! hath some wolfe thy tender lambes ytorne?

Or is thy bagpype broke, that soundes so sweete?

Or art thou of thy loved lasse forlorne?

Or bene thine eyes attempted to the yeare, Quenching the gasping furrowes thirst with rayne?

Like April shoure, so stremes the trickling
teares

Adowne thy cheeke, to quenche thy thristye payne.

Hob. Nor thys, nor that, so muche doeth make me mourne,

But for the ladde whome long I lovd so
deare

Nowe loves a lasse that all his love doth
scorne:

He, plongd in payne, his tressed locks dooth teare.

Shepheards delights he dooth them all for-swear,

Hys pleasaunt pipe, whych made us meri-
ment,

He wylfully hath broke, and doth forbear
His wonted songs, wherein he all outwent.

The. What is he for a ladde you so lament?
Ys love such pinching payne to them that
prove?

And bath he skill to make so excellent,
Yet hath so little skill to brydle love? ²⁰

Hob. Colin thou kenst, the southerne shep-heardes boye:

Him Love hath wounded with a deadly darte.

Whilome on him was all my care and joye, Forcing with gyfts to winne his wanton heart.

But now from me hys madding mynd is starte,
And woes the widdowes daughter of the glenne:
So nowe fayre Rosalind hath bredde hys
smart,
So now his frend is chaunged for a frenne.

The. But if hys ditties bene so trimly dight, I pray thee, Hobbinoll, recorde some one,
The whiles our flockes doe graze about in sight,
And we close shrowded in thys shade alone.

Hob. Contented I: thou will I singe his laye
Of fayre Elisa, queene of shepherdes all;
Which once he made, as by a spring he laye,
And tuned it unto the waters fall.

'Ye daynty Nymphs, that in this blessed brooke
Doe bathe your brest, Forsake your watry bowres, and hether
looke,
At my request.
And eke you Virgins that on Parnasse dwell, Whence floweth Helicon, the learned well, Helpe me to blaze
Her worthy praise
Which in her sexe doth all excell.

'Of fayre Elisa be your silver song,
That blessed wight:
The flowre of virgins, may shee flourish long In princely plight.
For shee is Syrinx daughter without spotte, Which Pan, the shepherds god, of her begot:
So sprong her grace
Of heavenly race,
No mortall blemishe may her blotte.

'See, where she sits upon the grassie greene, (O seemely sight!)
Yelad in scarlot, like a mayden queene
And ermines white.
Upon her head a cremosin coronet,
With damaske roses and daffadillies set: 60

Bayleaves betweene,
And primroses greene, Embellish the sweete violet.

'Tell me, have ye seene her angelick face, Like Phœbe fayre?
Her heavenly haveour, her princely grace,
Can you well compare?
The redde rose medled with the white yfere,
In either cheeke depeincten lively chere.
Her modest eye,
Her majestie,
Where have you seene the like, but there?

'I sawe Phœbus thrust out his golden hedde, Upon her to gaze:
But when he sawe how broade her beames did spredde,
It did him amaze.
He blusht to see another sunne belowe, Ne durst againe his fyrye face out showe:
Let him, if he dare,
His brightnesse compare With hers, to have the overthrowe.

'Shewe thy selfe, Cynthia, with thy silver rayes,
And be not abasht:
When shee the beames of her beauty displays,
O how art thou dasht!
But I will not match her with Latonaes seede;
Such follie great sorow to Niobe did breede:
Now she is a stone,
And makes dayly mone, Warning all other to take heede.

'Pan may be proud, that ever he begot Such a bellibone,
And Syrinx rejoyse, that ever was her lot To beare such an one.
Soone as my younglings cryen for the dam,
To her will I offer a milkwhite lamb:
Shee is my goddesse plaine,
And I her shepherds swayne, Albee forswonck and forswatt I am.

'I see Calliope speede her to the place, 100 Where my goddesse shines,
And after her the other Muses trace,
With their violines.
Bene they not bay braunches which they doe beare,
All for Elisa in her hand to weare?

So sweetely they play,
And sing all the way,
That it a heaven is to heare.

‘Lo, how finely the Graces can it foote
To the instrument: 110
They dauncen deffly, and singen soote,
In their meriment.
Wants not a fourth Grace, to make the daunce even?
Let that rowme to my Lady be yeven:
She shalbe a Grace,
To fyll the fourth place,
And reigne with the rest in heaven.

‘And whither rennes this bevie of ladies
bright,
Raunged in a rowe?
They bene all Ladyes of the Lake behight, That unto her goe. 121
Chloris, that is the chiefest nymph of al,
Of olive braunches beares a coronall:
Olives bene for peace,
When wars doe surcease:
Such for a princesse bene principall.

‘Ye shepheards daughters, that dwell on the greene,
Hye you there apace:
Let none come there, but that virgins bene,
To adorne her grace. 130
And when you come whereas shee is in place, See that your rudenesse doe not you disgrace:
Binde your fillets faste,
And gird in your waste,
For more finesse, with a tawdrie lace.

‘Bring hether the pincke and purple cullambine,
With gelliflowres;
Bring coronations, and sops in wine, Worne of paramoures; Strowe me the ground with daffadowndillies, 140
And cowslips, and kingcups, and loved lillies:
The pretie pawnee,
And the chevisaunce,
Shall match with the fayre flowre delice.

‘Now ryse up, Elisa, decked as thou art,
In royall aray;
And now ye daintie damsells may depart Echeone her way.

I feare I have troubled your troupes to longe:

Let Dame Eliza thanke you for her song:
And if you come hether 151
When damsines I gether, I will part them all you among.’

The. And was thilke same song of Colins owne making?
Ah, foolish boy, that is with love yblent!
Great pittie is, he be in such taking,
For naught caren, that bene so lewdly
bent.

Hob. Sicker, I hold him for a greater fon,
That loves the thing he cannot purchase.
But let us homeward, for night draweth on, 160
And twincing starres the daylight hence chase.

THENOTS EMBLEME.

O quam te memorem, virgo?

HOBBINOLS EMBLEME.

O dea certe!

GLOSSE

Gars thee greeete, causeth thee weepe and complain.

Attempred to the yeare, agreeable to the season of the yeare, that is Aprill, which moneth is most bent to shoures and seasonable rayne:
to quench, that is, to delaye the drought, caused through drynesse of March wyndes.

The Ladde, Colin Clout.

The Lasse, Rosalinda. 10

Tressed locks, wrethed and curled.

Is he for a ladde? A straunge manner of speaking, sc. what maner of ladde is he?

To make, to rime and versifye. For in this word, making, our olde Englishe poetes were wont to comprehend all the skil of poetrye, according to the Greeke woorde ποιεῖν, to make, whence commeth the name of poetes.

Colin thou kenst, knowest. Seemeth hereby that Colin perteyneth to some Southern noble 20 man, and perhaps in Surrye or Kent, the rather because he so often nameth the Kentish downes, and before. As lythe as lasse of Kent.

The widowes: He calleth Rosalind the widowes daughter of the glenne, that is, of a country hamlet or borough, which I thinke is rather sayde to coloure and concele the person, then simply spoken. For it is well knowen, even in spighte of Colin and Hobbinoll, that shee is a gentlewoman of no meane house, nor ³⁰ endowed with anye vulgare and common gifts both of nature and manners: but suche indeede, as neede nether Colin be ashamed to have her made knowne by his verses, nor Hobbinoll be greved, that so she should be commended to immortalitie for her rare and singular vertues: specially deserving it no lesse then eyther Myrto, the most excellent poete Theocritus his dearling, or Lauretta, the divine Petrarches goddesse, or Himera, the worthy poete ⁴⁰ Stesichorus hys idole: upon whom he is sayd so much to have doted, that, in regard of her excellencie, he scorned and wrote against the beauty of Helena. For which his præsumptuous and unheedie hardnesse, he is sayde by vengeance of the gods, thereat being offended, to have lost both his eyes.

Frenne, a straunger. The word, I thinke, was first poetically put, and afterwarde used in commen custome of speach for forenne. ⁵⁰

Dight adorned.

Laye, a songe, as roundelays and virolays. In all this songe is not to be respected, what the worthinesse of her Majestie deserveth, nor what to the highnes of a prince is agreeable, but what is moste comely for the meanesse of a shepheards witte, or to conceive, or to utter. And therefore he calleth her Elysa, as through rudenesse tripping in her name: and a shepheards daughter, it being very unfit that a ⁶⁰ shepheards boy, brought up in the shepefold, should know, or ever seme to have heard of a queenes roialty.

Ye daintie is, as it were, an exordium ad preparandos animos.

Virgins, the nine Muses, daughters of Apollo and Memorie, whose abode the poets faine to be on Parnassus, a hill in Greece, for that in that cuntry specially florished the honor of all excellent studies. ⁷⁰

Helicon is both the name of a fountaine at the foote of Parnassus, and also of a mountaine in Bæotia, out of which floweth the famous spring Castalius, dedicate also to the Muses: of which spring it is sayd, that, when Pegasus, the winged horse of Perseus, (whereby is meant fame and flying renowne) strooke the grownde with his hoofe, sodenly thereout sprange a wel of moste cleare and pleasaunte water, which fro thence forth was consecrate to the ⁸⁰ Muses and ladies of learning.

Your silver song seemeth to imitate the lyke in Hesiodus ἀργύρεον μέλος.

Syrinx is the name of a nymphe of Arcadie, whom when Pan being in love pursued, she, flying from him, of the gods was turned into a reede. So that Pan, catching at the reedes in stede of the damosell, and puffing hard, (for he was almost out of wind) with hys breath made the reedes to pype: which he seeing, tooke of ⁹⁰ them, and, in remembrance of his lost love, made him a pype thereof. But here by Pan and Syrinx is not to bee thoughte, that the shephearde simplye meante those poetically gods: but rather supposing (as seemeth) her graces progenie to be divine and immortall (so as the paynims were wont to judge of all kinges and princes, according to Homeres saying,

‘Θυμὸς δὲ μέγας ἐστὶ διοτρεφέος βασιλῆος Τιμὴ δ’ ἐκ Διὸς ἐστί, φιλεῖ δὲ ἐμῆγιστα Ζεὺς,’) ¹⁰⁰ could devise no parents in his judgement so worthy for her, as Pan the shepheards god, and his best beloved Syrinx. So that by Pan is here meant the most famous and victorious king, her highnesse father, late of worthy memorye, King Henry the Eyght. And by that name, oftymes (as hereafter appeareth) be noted kings and mighty potentates; and in some place Christ himselfe, who is the very Pan and god of shepheardes. ¹¹⁰

Cremosin coronet: He deviseth her crowne to be of the finest and most delicate flowers, in stede of perles and precious stones, wherewith princes diademes use to bee adorned and embost.

Embellish, beautifye and set out.

Phebe, the moone, whom the poets faine to be sister unto Phæbus, that is, the sunne.

Medled, mingled.

Yfere, together. By the mingling of the ¹²⁰ redde rose and the white is meant the uniting of the two principall houses of Lancaster and of Yorke: by whose longe discord and deadly debate this realm many yeares was sore travailed, and almost cleane decayed. Til the famous Henry the Seventh, of the line of Lancaster, taking to wife the most vertuous Princesse Elisabeth, daughter to the fourth Edward of the house of Yorke, begat the most royal Henry the Eyght aforesayde, in whom was ¹³⁰ the firste union of the whyte rose and the redde.

Calliope, one of the nine Muses; to whome they assigne the honor of all poetical invention, and the firste glorie of the heroicall verse. Other say that shee is the goddesse of rhetoric: but by Virgile it is manifeste, that they mystake the thyng. For there, in hys Epigrams, that arte semeth to be attributed to Polymnia, saying, which seemeth specially to be meant of action and elocution, both special partes of rhetoric: besyde that her name, which (as some construe it) importeth great remembrance, containeth another part; but I holde rather with them, which call her Polymnia, or Polymnia, of her good singing.

Bay branches be the signe of honor and victory, and therefore of myghty conquerors worn in theyr triumphes, and eke of famous 150 poets, as saith Petrarch in hys Sonets,

'Arbor victoriosa triumphale, Honor d'imperadori e di poeti,' &c.

The Graces be three sisters, the daughters of Jupiter, (whose names are Aglaia, Thalia, Euphrosyne; and Homer only addeth a fourth, sc. Pasithea) otherwise called Charites, that is, thanks: whom the poetes feyned to be the goddesses of al bountie and comelines, which therefore (as sayth Theodontius) they make three, 160 to wete, that men first ought to be gracious and bountiful to other freely, then to receive benefits at other mens hands courteously, and thirdly, to requite them thankfully: which are three sundry actions in liberalitee. And Bocace saith, that they be painted naked (as they were indeede on the tombe of C. Julius Cæsar) the one having her backe toward us, and her face fromwarde, as proceeding from us: the other two toward us, noting double thanke 170 to be due to us for the benefite we have done.

Deaffly, finelye and nimbly.

Soote, sweete.

Meriment, mirth.

Bevie: A beavie of ladyes is spoken figuratively for a company or troupe: the terme is taken of larkes. For they say a bevie of larkes, even as a covey of partridge, or an eye of pheasants.

Ladies of the Lake be Nymphes. For it 180 was an olde opinion amongst the auncient neathen, that of every spring and fountaine was a goddesse the soveraigne. Whiche opinion stucke in the myndes of men not many yeares sithence, by meanes of certain fine fablers and lowd lyers, such as were the authors of King Arthure the Great, and such like, who tell many an unlawfull leasing of the Ladies of the Lake, that is, the Nymphes. For the word Nymphie in Greeke signifieth well water, or 190 otherwise a spouse or bryde.

Behight, called or named.

Cloris, the name of a nymph, and signifieth greenesse; of whome is sayd, that Zephyrus, the westerne wind, being in love with her, and coveting her to wyfe, gave her for a dowrie the chiefedome and soveraintye of al flowres and greene herbes, growing on earth.

Olive bene: The olive was wont to be the ensigne of peace and quietnesse, eyther for 200 that it cannot be planted and pruned, and so carefully looked to as it ought, but in time of peace: or els for that the olive tree, they say, will not growe neare the firre tree, which is dedicate to Mars the god of battaile, and used most for speares and other instruments of warre. Whereupon is finely feigned, that when Neptune and Minerva strove for the naming of the cite of Athens, Neptune striking the ground with his mace, caused a 210 horse to come forth, that importeth warre, but at Minervaes stroke sprong out an olive, to note that it should be a nurse of learning, and such peaceable studies.

Binde your: Spoken rudely, and according to shepheardes simplicitie.

Bring: All these be names of flowers. Sops in wine, a flowre in colour much like to a coronation, but differing in smel and quantity. Floure delice, that which they use to mis- 220 terme Floure de Luce, being in Latine called Flos delitiarum.

A bellibone, or a bonibell, homely spoken for a fayre mayde or bonillasse.

Forswonck and forswatt, overlaboured and sunneburnt.

I saw Phæbus, the sunne. A sensible narration, and present view of the thing mentioned, which they call παρρησία.

Cynthia, the moone, so called of Cynthus a hyll, where she was honoured. 231

Latonaes seede was Apollo and Diana. Whom when as Niobe the wyfe of Amphion scorned, in respect of the noble fruiet of her wombe, namely her seven sonnes, and so many daughters, Latona, being therewith displeased, commaunded her sonne Phæbus to slea al the sonnes, and Diana all the daughters: whereat the unfortunate Niobe being sore dismayed, and lamenting out of measure, was feigned 240 of the poetes to be turned into a stone upon the sepulchre of her children: for which cause the shepheard sayth, he will not compare her to them, for feare of like mysfortune.

Now rise is the conclusion. For having so decked her with prayes and comparisons, he returneth all the thanck of hys labour to the excellencie of her Majestie.

When damsins, a base reward of a clownish giver. 250

Yblent, Y is a poetical addition: blent, blinded.

EMBLEME.

This poesye is taken out of Virgile, and there of him used in the person of Æneas to his mother Venus, appearing to him in likeness of one of Dianaes damosells: being there most divinely set forth. To which similitude of divinitie Hobbinnoll comparing the excelency of Elisa, and being through the worthynes of Colins song, as it were, overcome with the huge- 260 nesse of his imagination, brusteth out in great admiration, (O quam te memorem virgo?) being otherwise unhable, then by soddein silence, to expresse the worthinesse of his conceipt. Whom Thenot answereth with another part of the like verse, as confirming by his graunt and approvaunce, that Elisa is no whit inferiour to the majestic of her of whome that poete so boldly pronounced O dea certe.

MAYE

ARGUMENT

IN this fift Æglogue, under the persons of two shepheards, Piers and Palinodie, be represented two formes of pastoures or ministers, or the Protestant and the Catholique: whose chiefe talke standeth in reasoning whether the life of the one must be like the other. With whom having shewed that it is dangerous to mainteine any felowship, or give too much credit to their colourable and feyned goodwill, he telleth him a tale of the Foxe, that by such a counterpoynt of craftines deceived and deuoured the credulous Kidde.

PALINODE. PIERS.

Pal. Is not thilke the mery moneth of May,

When love lads masken in fresh aray?
How falles it then, we no merrier bene, Ylike as others, girt in gawdy greene?
Our bloncket liveryes bene all to sadde
For thilke same season, when all is yeladd With pleasaunce: the grownd with grasse, the wods

With greene leaves, the bushes with blooming buds.

Yongthes folke now floeken in every where,
To gather may baskets and smelling brere:
And home they hasten the postes to dight,¹¹
And all the kirke pillours eare day light,
With hawthorne buds, and swete eglantine,

And girlonds of roses and soppes in wine.
Such merimake holy saints doth queme,
But we here sytten as drownd in a dreme.

Piers. For younkens, Palinode, such folles fitte,

But we tway bene men of elder witt.

Pal. Sicker, this morrowe, ne lenger agoe,
I sawe a shole of shepeheardes outgoe²⁰
With singing, and shouting, and jolly chere:
Before them yode a lusty tabrere,
That to the many a horne pype playd, Whereto they dauncen eche one with his mayd.

To see those folkes make such jouysaunce,
Made my heart after the pype to daunce.

Tho to the greene wood they speeden hem all,

To fetchen home May with their musicall:
And home they bringen in a royall throne, Crowned as king; and his queene attone,³⁰
Was Lady Flora, on whom did attend A fayre flocke of faeries, and a fresh bend Of lovely nymphs. O that I were there, To helpen the ladyes their maybush beare!

Ab, Piers! bene not thy teeth on edge, to thinke How great sport they gaynen with little swinck?

Piers. Perdie, so farre am I from envie,
That their fondnesse inly I pitie.
Those faytours little regarden their charge, While they, letting their sheepe runne at large,
Passen their time, that should be sparely spent,⁴⁰

In lustibede and wanton meryment.
Thilke same bene shepeheardes for the Devils stedde,

That playen while their flockes be unfedde.
Well is it seene, theyr sheepe bene not their owne,

That letten them runne at randon alone.
But they bene hyred for little pay Of other, that caren as little as they What fallen the flocke, so they han the fleece,⁴⁹

And get all the gayne, paying but a peece.
I muse what account both these will make,
The one for the hire which he doth take,
And thother for leaving his lords taske,
When great Pan account of shepherdes shall aske.

Pal. Sicker, now I see thou speakest of spight,

All for thou lackest somedele their delight.
I (as I am) had rather be envied,
All were it of my foe, then fonly pitied:
And yet, if neede were, pitied would be,
Rather then other should scorne at me:⁶⁰
For pittied is mishappe that nas remedie, But scorned bene dedes of fond foolerie.

What shoulde shepheards other things tend,

Then, sith their God his good does them send,

Reapen the fruite thereof, that is pleasure,
The while they here liven, at ease and leasure?

For when they bene dead, their good is ygoe,
They sleepe in rest, well as other moe.

Tho with them wends what they spent in cost,

But what they left behind them is lost. 70

Good is no good, but if it be spend:

God giveth good for none other end.

Piers. Ah, Palinodie! thou art a worldes child:

Who touches pitch mought needes be de-filde.

But shepherds (as Algrind used to say)

Mought not live ylike as men of the laye:

With them it sits to care for their heire,

Enaunter their heritage doe impaire:

They must provide for meanes of mainte-naunce,

And to continue their wont countenance. 80

But shepheard must walke another way,

Sike worldly sovenance he must foresay.

The sonne of his loines why should he regard

To leave enriched with that he hath spard?

Should not thilke God that gave him that
good

Eke cherish his child, if in his wayes he stood?

For if he mislive in leudnes and lust,

Little bootes all the welth and the trust

That his father left by inheritaunce:

All will be soone wasted with misgovernaunce. 90

But through this, and other their miscre-
aunce,

They maken many a wrong chevisaunce,

Heaping up waves of welth and woe,

The floddes whereof shall them overflowe.

Sike mens follie I cannot compare

Better then to the apes folish care,

That is so enamoured of her young one,

(And yet, God wote, such cause hath she none)

That with her hard hold, and straight embracing,

She stoppeth the breath of her young-ling. 100

So often times, when as good is meant,

Evil ensueth of wrong entent.

The time was once, and may againe re-torne,

(For ought may happen, that hath bene beforne)

When shepheards had none inheritaunce,

Ne of land, nor fee in sufferaunce,

But what might arise of the bare sheepe,

(Were it more or lesse) which they did keepe.

Well wvis was it with shepherds thoe:

Nought having, nought feared they to for-
goe. 110

For Pan himselfe was their inheritaunce, And little them served for their mayntenaunce.

The shepheards God so wel them guided,

That of nought they were unprovided,

Butter enough, honye, milke, and whay,

And their flockes fleeces, them to araye.

But tract of time, and long prosperitie,

(That nource of vice, this of insolencie,) Lulled the shepheards in such securitie,

That not content with loyall obeysaunce, 120

Some gan to gape for greedie governaunce,

And match them selfe with mighty poten-tates,

Lovers of lordship and troublers of states.

Tho gan shepheards swaines to looke a loft,

And leave to live hard, and learne to ligge soft:

Tho, under colour of shepheards, some-while

There crept in wolves, ful of fraude and
guile,

That often devoured their owne sheepe,

And often the shepheards that did hem
keepe.

This was the first sourse of shepheards sorowe, 130

That now nill be quitt with baile nor bor-rowe.

Pal. Three things to beare bene very burdenous,

But the fourth to forbear is outrageous:

Wemen that of loves longing once lust,

Hardly forbearen, but have it they must:

So when choler is inflamed with rage,

Wanting revenge, is hard to asswage:

And who can counsell a thristie soule,

With patience to forbear the offred bowle?

But of all burdens that a man can beare, 140

Moste is, a fooles talke to beare and to heare.

I wene the geaunt has not such a weight,

That beares on his shoulders the heavens height.

Thou findest faulte where nys to be found,

And buildest strong warke upon a weake
ground:

Thou raylest on right withouten reason,

And blamest hem much, for small encheason.

How shoulden shepheardes live, if not so?

What! should they pynen in payne and
woe?

Nay saye I thereto, by my deare bor-
rowe, 150

If I may rest, I nill live in sorrowe.

Sorrowe ne neede be hastened on:

For he will come, without calling, anone.

While times enduren of tranquillitie,

Usen we freely our felicitie.

For when approchen the stormie stowres,

We mought with our shoulders beare of the sharpe showres.

And sooth to sayne, nought seemeth sike strife,

That shepheardes so witen ech others life,

And layen her faults the world beforne, 160

The while their foes done eache of hem
scorne.

Let none mislike of that may not be mended:

So conteck soone by concord mought be ended.

Piers. Shepheard, I list none accordaunce
make

With shepheard that does the right way forsake.

And of the twaine, if choice were to me,

Had lever my foe then my freend he be.

For what concord han light and darke sam?

Or what peace has the lion with the lambe?

Such faitors, when their false harts bene hidde, 170

Will doe as did the Foxe by the Kidde.

Pal. Now Piers, of felowship, tell us that saying:

For the ladde can keepe both our flocks from straying.

Piers. Thilke same Kidde (as I can well devise)

Was too very foolish and unwise.

For on a tyme in sommer season,

The Gate her dame, that had good reason,

Yode forth abroade unto the greene wood,

To brouze, or play, or what shee thought
good.

But, for she had a motherly care 180

Of her young sonne, and wit to beware,

Shee set her youngling before her knee,

That was both fresh and lovely to see,

And full of favour as kidde mought be.

His vellet head began to shoote out,

And his wreathed horns gan newly sprout;

The blossomes of lust to bud did beginne,

And spring forth ranckly under his chinne.

'My sonne,' quoth she, (and with that gan
weepe;

For carefull thoughts in her heart did creepe) 190

'God blesse thee, poore orphane, as he mought me,

And send thee joy of thy jollitee.

Thy father,' (that word she spake with
payne;

For a sigh had nigh rent her heart in twaine)

'Thy father, had he lived this day,

To see the braunche of his body displaie,

How would he have joyed at this sweete
sight!

But ah! false Fortune such joy did him
spight,

And cutte of hys dayes with untimely woe,

Betraying him into the traines of hys foe.

Now I, a wayfull widdowe behight, 201

Of my old age have this one delight,

To see thee succede in thy fathers steade,

And florish in floures of lustyhead:

For even so thy father his head upheld,

And so his haucy hornes did he weld.'

Tho marking him with melting eyes,

A thrilling throbbe from her hart did aryse,

And interrupted all her other speache

With some old sorowe that made a newe breache: 210

Seemed shee sawe in the younglings face

The old lineaments of his fathers grace.

At last her solein silence she broke,

And gan his newe budded beard to stroke.

'Kiddie,' quoth shee, 'thou kenst the great
care

I have of thy health and thy welfare,

Which many wyld beastes ligger in waite

For to entrap in thy tender state:

But most the Foxe, maister of collusion;

For he has voned thy last confusion. 220

Forthy, my Kiddie, be ruld by mee,

And never give trust to his trecheree.

And if he chaunce come when I am abroade,

Sperre the yate fast, for feare of fraude;

Ne for all his worst, nor for his best,

Open the dore at his request.'

So schooled the Gate her wanton sonne,

That answerd his mother, all should be done.

Tho went the pensife damme out of dore,

And chaunst to stamble at the threshold
flore: 230

Her stombling steppe some what her amazd,

(For such as signes of ill luck bene dis-praised)

Yet forth shee yode, thereat halfe aghast:

And Kiddie the dore sperred after her fast.

It was not long after shee was gone,

But the false Foxe came to the dore anone:

Not as a foxe, for then he had be kend,
But all as a poore pedler he did wend, Bearing a trusse of tryfles at hys backe, As bells, and babes, and glasses, in hys packe. 240

A biggen he had got about his brayne,
For in his headpeace he felt a sore payne:
His hinder heele was wrapt in a clout,
For with great cold he had gotte the gout.
There at the dore he cast me downe hys paek,

And layd him downe, and groned, 'Alack!
alack!

Ah, deare Lord! and sweete Saint Charitee!

That some good body woulde once pitie
mee!

Well heard Kiddie al this sore constraint,
And lengd to know the cause of his complaint: 250

Tho, creeping close behind the wickets clink,

Prevelie he peeped out through a chinke:
Yet not so prevelie but the Foxe him spied:
For deceitfull meaning is double eyed.

'Ah, good young maister!' then gan he crye,

'Jesus blesse that sweete face I espye, And keepe your corpse from the carefull stounds

That in my carrion carcas abounds.'

The Kidd, pitting hys heavinesse, Asked the cause of his great distresse, 260
And also who and whence that he were.

Tho he, that had well ycond his lere, Thus medled his talke with many a teare:
'Sieke, sieke, alas! and little lack of dead,
But I be relieved by your beastlyhead.
I am a poore sheepe, albe my coloure dome:
For with long travcile I am brent in the sonne.

And if that my grandsire me sayd be true, Sieker, I am very sybbe to you:
So be your goodlihead doe not disdayne 270
The base kinred of so simple swaine.

Of mereye and favour then I you pray,
With your ayd to forstall my neere decay.'

Tho out of his packe a glasse he tooke, Wherein while Kiddie unwares did looke,
He was so enamored with the newell,
That nought he deemed deare for the jewell.
Tho opened he the dore, and in came
The false Foxe, as he were starke lame. 279
His tayle he clapt betwixt his legs twayne, Lest he should be descried by his twayne.

Being within, the Kidde made him good glee,

All for the love of the glasse he did see.
After his chere, the pedler can chat,
And tell many lesings of this and that,
And how he could shewe many a fine knack.
Tho shewed his ware and opened his packe,
All save a bell, which he left behind In the basket for the Kidde to fynd.

Which when the Kidde stooped downe to catch, 290

He popt him in, and his basket did latch;
Ne stayed he once, the dore to make fast,
But ranne away with him in all hast.

Home when the doubtfull damme had her
hyde,

She mought see the dore stand open wyde.
All agast, lowdly she gan to call

Her Kidde; but he nould answere at all.

Tho on the flore she sawe the merchandise
Of which her sonne had sette to dere a prise.
What helpe? her Kidde shee knewe well was gone: 300

Shee weeped, and wayled, and made great
mone.

Such end had the Kidde, for he nould warned be

Of craft coloured with simplicitie:
And such end, perdie, does all hem remayne
That of such falsers freendship bene fayne.

Pal. Truly, Piers, thou art beside thy wit, Furthest fro the marke, weening it to hit.

Now I pray thee, lette me thy tale borrowe For our Sir John to say to morrowe
At the kerke, when it is holliday: 310
For well he meanes, but little can say.

But and if foxes bene so crafty as so,
Much needeth all shepheards hem to knowe.

Piers. Of their falshode more could I recount:

But now the bright sunne gynneth to dismount;

And, for the deawie night now doth nye,
I hold it best for us home to hye.

Great Pan is Christ, the very God of all shepherds, which calleth himselfe the greate and good shepherd. The name is most rightly (me thinkes) applyed to him, for Pan signifieth all, or omnipotent, which is onely the Lord Jesus. And by that name (as I remember) he is called of Ensebins, in his fift booke De Preparat. Evang.; who thereof telleth a proper storye to that purpose. Which story is first recorded of Plutareh, in his booke of the ceasing of oracles, and of Lavetere translated, in his booke of walking sprights. Who sayth, that about the same time that our Lord suffered his most bitter passion for the redemption of man, certein passengers, sayling from Italy to Cyprus and passing by certain isles called Paxæ, heard a voyce calling alowde 'Thamus, Thamus!' (now Thamus was the name of an Egyptian, which was pilote of the ship) who, giving eare to the cry, was bidden, when he came to Palodes, to tel that the great Pan was dead: which he doubting to doe, yet for that when he came to Palodes, there sodeinly was such a calme of winde, that the shippe stooode still in the sea unmoved, he was forced to cry alowd, that Pan was dead: wherewithall there was heard suche piteous outeryes and dreadfull shriking, as hath not bene the like. By whych Pan, though of some be understoode the great Satanas, whose kingdome at that time was by Christ conquered, the gates of hell broken up, and death by death delivered to eternal death, (for at that time, as he sayth, all oracles surceased, and enchanted spirits, that were wont to delude the people, thenceforth held theyr peace) and also at the demaund of the Emperoure Tiberius, who that Pan should be, answere was made him by the wisest and best learned, that it was the sonne of Mercurie and Penelope, yet I think it more properly meant of the death of Christ, the onely and very Pan, then suffering for his flock.

I as I am seemeth to imitate the common proverb, Malim invidere mihi omnes, quam miserescere.

Nas is a syncope, for ne has, or has not: as nould for would not.

Tho with them doth imitate the epitaph of the ryotous king Sardanapalus, whych he caused to be written on his tombe in Greeke: which 70 verses be thus translated by Tullie.

'Hæc habui quæ edi, quæque exaturata libido Hausit, at illa manent multa ac præclara relicta.'

Which may thus be turned into English.

'All that I eate did I joye, and all that I greedily gorged:
As for those many goodly matters left I for others.'

Much like the epitaph of a good olde Erle of Devonshire, which, though much more wisdom bewraith then Sardanapalus, yet hath a smacke of his sensuall delights and beastliness. The rhymes be these:

'Ho, ho! who lies here?
I the good Erle of Devousshire,
And Maulde my wife, that was ful deare.
We lived together Iv. yeare.
That we spent, we had:
That we gave, we have:
That we left, we lost.'

Algrind, the name of a shepherd.

Men of the lay, lay men. 90

Enaunter, least that.

Sovenance, remembrance.

Miscraunce, despire, or misbeliefe.

Chevisaunce, sometime of Chaucer used for gaine: sometime of other for spoyle, or bootie, or enterprise, and sometime for chiefdome.

Pan himselfe, God: according as is sayd in Deuteronomie, that, in division of the lande of Canaan, to the tribe of Levie no portion of heritage should bee allotted, for GOD himselfe was their inheritance. 100

Some gan, meant of the Pope, and his Antichristian prelates, which usurpe a tyrannical dominion in the Church, and with Peters counterfet keyes open a wide gate to al wickednesse and insolent government. Nought here spoken, as of purpose to deny fatherly ruie and godly governaunce (as some maliciously of late have done, to the great unreste and hinderance of the Church) but to displaye the pride and disorder of such as, in steede of feeding their sheepe, indeede feede of theyr sheepe. 110

Sourse, welspring and originall.

Borrore, pledge or suertie.

The geaunte is the greate Atlas, whom the poetes feign to be a huge geant, that beareth Heaven on his shoulders: being in deede a merveilous highe mountaine in Mauritania, that now is Barbarie, which, to mans seeming, perceeth the cloudes, and seemeth to touch the heavens. Other thinke, and they not amisse. 120 that this fable was meant of one Atlas, king of the same countrie, (of whome may bee, that that hil had his denomination) brother to Prometheus, who (as the Grekes say) did first fynd out the hidden courses of the starres, by an excellent imagination: wherefore the poetes feigned, that he susteyned the firmament on hys shoulders. Many other conjectures needlesse be told hereof. 130

Warke, worke.

Encheason, cause, occasion.

Deare borrow, that is our Saviour, the common pledge of all mens debts to death.

Wyten, blame.

Nought seemeth, is unseemely.

Conteck, strife, contention.

Her, theyr, as useth Chaucer.

Han, for have.

Sam, together. 140

This tale is much like to that in Æsops fables, but the catastrophe and end is farre different. By the Kidde may be understoode the simple sorte of the faythfull and true Christians. By hys dame, Christe, that hath alreadie with careful watchewords (as heere doth the gote) warned his little ones, to beware of such doubling deceit. By the Foxe, the false and faithlesse Papistes, to whom is no credit to be given, nor fellowship to be used. 150

The Gate, the Gote: northerly spoken, to turne O into A.

Yode, went: afforesayd.

She set, a figure called Fictio, which useth to attribute reasonable actions and speaches to unreasonable creatures.

The bloosmes of lust be the young and mossie heares, which then begynne to sproute and shoote fourth, when lustfull heare beginneth to kundle.

And with, a very poetical πάθος. 160

Orphane, a youngling or pupill, that needeth a tutour and governour.

That word, a pathetical parenthesis, to encrease a careful hyperbaton.

The branch of the fathers body is the child.

For even so alluded to the saying of Andromache to Aneas in Virgile.

'Sic oculos, sic ille manus, sic ora ferebat.'

A thrilling throb, a percing sighe.

Liggen, lye. 170

Maister of collusion, sc. coloured guile, because the Foxe, of al beasts, is most wily and crafty. Sperre the yate, shut the dore.

For such: The gotes stombling is here noted as an evill signe. The like to be marked in all histories: and that not the leaste of the Lorde Hastingues in King Rycharde the Third his dayes. For beside his dangerous dreame (whiche was a shrewde prophetic of his mishap that folowed) it is sayd that in the morning, 180

ryding toward the Tower of London, there to sitte upon matters of counsell, his horse stombled twice or thrise by the way. which of some, that, ryding with hym in his company, were privie to his neere destemie, was secretly marked, and afterward noted for memorie of his great mishap that enseeded. For being then as merye as man might be, and least doubting any mortall daunger, he was, within two howres after, of the tyranne put to a shamefull deathe. 190

As belles: By such trifles are noted, the reliques and ragges of popish superstition, which put no smal religion in belles, and babies, sc. idoles, and glasses, sc. paxes, and such lyke trumperies.

Great cold: For they boast much of their outward patience, and voluntarye sufferance, as a worke of merite and holy humblenesse.

Sweete S. Charitie, the Catholiques comen othe, and onely speache, to have charitye 200 always in their mouth, and sometime in their outward actions, but never inwardly in fayth and godly zeale.

Clincke, a key hole. Whose diminutive is cliket, used of Chaucer for a key.

Stoundes, fittes: aforesayde.

His lere, his lesson.

Medled, mingled.

Bistihead, agreeing to the person of a beast. 210

Sibbe, of kynne.

Newell, a newe thing.

To forestall, to prevent.

Glee, chere: aforesayde.

Deare a price, his lyfe, which he lost for those toyes.

Such ende is an epiphonema, or rather the morall of the whole tale, whose purpose is to warne the Protestaunt beware, howe he geveth credit to the unfaythfull Catholique: whereof we have dayly proofes sufficient, but one 220 moste famous of all, practised of late yeares in France, by Charles the Nyth.

Fayne, gladd or desyrous.

Our Sir John, a Popishe priest. A saying fit for the grosnesse of a shepheard, but spoken to taunte unlearned priestes.

Dismount, descende or set.

Nye, draweth nere.

EMBLEME.

Both these emblemes make one whole hexametre. The first spoken of Palinodie, as in 230 reproche of them that be distrustfull, is a peece of Theognis verse, intending, that who doth most mistrust is most false. For such experience in falshod breedeth mistrust in the mynd, thinking no lesse guile to lurke in others then in hymselfe. But Piers thereto strongly replyeth with another peece of the same verse, saying, as in his former fable, what fayth then is there in the faythlesse? For if fayth be the ground of religion, which fayth they dayly ²⁴⁰ false, what hold then is there of their religion? And thys is all that they saye.

JUNE

ARGUMENT

THIS Æglogue is wholly vowed to the complayning of Colins ill successe in his love. For being (as is aforesaid) enamoured of a country lasse, Rosalind, and having (as seemeth) founde place in her heart, he lamenteth to his deare friend Hobbinoll, that he is nowe forsaken unfaithfully, and in his steede Menalcas, another shepheard, received disloyally. And this is the whole argument of this Æglogue.

HOBBINOL. COLIN CLOUTE.

Hob. Lo, Collin, here the place whose pleasaunt syte From other shades hath weand my wandring mynde.

Tell me, what wants me here to worke de-lyte?

The simple ayre, the gentle warbling wynde,
So calme, so coole, as no where else I fynde,
The grassye ground with daintye daisies dight,

The bramble bush, where byrds of every kynde

To the waters fall their tunes attemper right.

Col. O happy Hobbinoll! I blesse thy state, That Paradise hast found, whych Adam lost. ¹⁰

Here wander may thy flock, early or late, Withouten dreade of wolves to bene ystost:
Thy lovely layes here mayst thou freely boste.

But I, unhappy man, whom cruell Fate
And angry gods pursue from coste to coste, Can nowhere fynd to shroude my lucklesse pate.

Hob. Then if by me thou list advised be,
Forsake the soyle that so doth the bewitch; Leave me those hilles, where harbrough nis to see,
Nor holybush, nor brere, nor winding witche. ²⁰

And to the dales resort, where shepheards ritche,
And fruitfull flocks, bene every where to see.

Here no night ravens lodge, more black then pitche, Nor elvish ghosts, nor gastly owles doe flee.

But frendly Faeries, met with many Graces,
And lightfote Nymphes, can chace the lingering night

With heydeguyes and trimly trodden traces:
Whilst systers nyne, which dwell on Parnasse hight,

Doe make them musick for their more delight;

And Pan himselve, to kisse their christall faces, ³⁰

Will pype and daunce, when Phœbe shineth bright:

Such pierlesse pleasures have we in these places.

Col. And I, whylst youth and course of carelesse yeeres

Did let me walke withouten linkes of love,
In such delights did joy amongst my peeres:
But ryper age such pleasures doth reprove;
My fancy eke from former follies move To stayed steps: for time in passing weares, (As garments doen, which wexen old above)

And draweth newe delightes with boary heares. ⁴⁰

Tho couth I sing of love, and tune my pype

Unto my plaintive pleas in verses made;
Tho would I seeke for queene apples unrype,

To give my Rosalind, and in sommer shade Dight gaudy girlonds was my comen trade,
To crowne her golden loeks; but yeeres more rype,

And losse of her, whose love as lyfe I wayd, Those weary wanton toyes away dyd wype.

Hob. Colin, to heare thy rymes and roundelayes,

Which thou were wont on wastfull hylls to singe, ⁵⁰

I more delight then larke in sommer dayes:
Whose echo made the neyghbour groves to ring,

And taught the byrds, which in the lower spring
 Did shroude in shady leaves from soumy
 rayes,
 Frame to thy songe their chereful cherip-
 ing,
 Or hold theyr peace, for shame of thy swete
 layes.

I sawe Calliope wyth Muses moe, Soone as thy oaten pype began to sound, Theyr yvory luyts and tamburins forgoe,
 And from the fountaine, where they sat around, 60
 Renne after hastely thy silver sound.
 But when they came where thou thy skill didst showe,
 They drewe abacke, as halfe with shame
 confound,
 Shepheard to see, them in theyr art outgoe.

Col. Of Muses, Hobbinol, I come no
 skill:
 For they bene daughters of the hyghest
 Jove,
 And holden scorne of homely shepherds quill.
 For sith I heard that Pan with Phœbus strove,
 Which him to much rebuke and daunger drove,
 I never lyst presume to Parnasse hyll, 70
 But, pyping lowe in shade of lowly growe,
 I play to please my selfe, all be it ill.

Nought weigh I, who my song doth prayse or blame, Ne strive to winne renowne, or passe the
 rest:
 With shepheard sittes not followe flying
 fame,
 But feede his flocke in fields where falls hem best.
 I wote my rymes bene rough, and rudely
 drest:
 The fyttter they my carefull ease to frame:
 Enough is me to paint out my unrest, And poore my piteous plaints out in the
 same. 80

The god of shepherds, Tityrus, is dead,
 Who taught me, homely as I can, to make.
 He, whilst he lived, was the soveraigne
 head Of shepherds all that bene with love ytake:

Well couth he wayle his woes, and lightly slake
 The flames which love within his heart had bredde,
 And tell us mery tales, to keepe us wake,
 The while our sheepe about us safely fedde.

Nowe dead he is, and lyeth wrapt in lead, (O why should Death on hym such outrage showe?) 90
 And all hys passing skil with him is fledde,
 The fame whereof doth dayly greater growe.
 But if on me some little drops would flowe
 Of that the spring was in his learned hedde, I soone would learne these woods to wayle my woe,
 And teache the trees their trickling teares to shedde.

Then should my plaints, causd of discourte-
 see,
 As messengers of all my painfull plight, Flye to my love, where ever that she bee,
 And pierce her heart with poynt of worthy
 wight, 100
 As shee deserves, that wrought so deadly
 sight.
 And thou, Menalcaas, that by trecheree Didst underfong my lasse to wexe so light.
 Shouldest well be knowne for such thy vil-lanee.

But since I am not as I wish I were, Ye gentle shepherds, which your flocks do feede,
 Whether on hylls, or dales, or other where,
 Beare witness all of thys so wicked deede;
 And tell the lasse, whose flowre is woxe a weede,
 And faultlesse fayth is turned to faithlesse fere, 110
 That she the truest shepherds hart made bleede
 That lyves on earth, and loved her most dere.

Hob. O carefull Colin! I lament thy case: Thy teares would make the hardest flint to flowe.
 Ah, faithlesse Rosalind, and voide of grace,
 That art the roote of all this ruthfull woe!
 But now is time, I gesse, homeward to goe:
 Then ryse, ye blessed flocks, and home apace.

Least night with stealing steppes doe you forsloe,
And wett your tender lambes that by you trace. 120

COLINS EMBLEME.

Giù speme spenta.

GLOSSE

Syte, situation and place.

Paradise. A Paradise in Greeke signifieth a garden of pleasure, or place of delights. So he compareth the soyle wherein Hobbinoll made his abode, to that earthly Paradise, in Scripture called Eden, wherein Adam in his first creation was placed: which, of the most learned, is thought to be in Mesopotamia, the most fertile and pleasaunte country in the world (as may appeare by Diodorus Syeulus description of it, in the hystorie of Alexanders conquest thereof:) lying betwene the two famous ryvers, (which are sayd in Scripture to flowe out of Paradise) Tygris and Euphrates, whereof it is so denominate.

Forsake the soyle. This is no poetical fiction, but unfeynedly spoken of the poete selfe, who for speciaall occasion of private affayres, (as I have bene partly of himselfe informed) and for his more preferment, removing out of the Northparts, came into the South, as Hobbinoll indeede advised him privately.

Those hylles, that is the North countrye, where he dwelt.

Nis, is not.

The dales, the Southpartes, where he nowe abydeth, which thoughte they be full of hylles and woodes (for Kent is very hyllye and woodye; and therefore so called: for Kantsh in the Saxons tongue signifieth woodie,) yet in respecte of the Northpartes they be called dales. For indeede the North is counted the higher countrye.

Night ravens, &c. By such hatefull byrdes, hee meaneth all misfortunes (whereof they be tokens) flying every where.

Frenly faeries. The opinion of faeries and elves is very old, and yet sticketh very religiously in the myndes of some. But to roote that raneke opinion of elves onte of mens hearts, the truth is, that there be no such thinges, nor yet the shadowes of the things, but onely by a sort of bald friers and knavish shavelings so feigned; which, as in all other things, so in that, soughte to nonsell the comen people in ignorance, least, being once acquainted with the truth of things, they woulde in tyme smell out the untruth of theyr packed pelfe and massepenie religion. But the sooth is, that when all Italy was distraicte into the 50 factions of the Guelfes and the Gibelins, being two famous houses in Florence, the name began, through their great mischiefes and many outrages, to be so odious, or rather dreadfull, in the peoples eares, that if theyr children at any time were frowarde and wanton, they would say to them that the Guelfe or the Gibeline came. Which words nowe from them (as many thinge els) be come into our usage, and, for Guelfes and Gibelines, we say elves and goblins. No otherwise then the Frenchmen used to say of that valiaunt captain, the very scourge of Fraunce, the Lord Thalbot, afterward Erle of Shrewsbury; whose noblesse bred such a terrour in the hearts of the French, that oft times even great armies were defaicted and put to flyght at the onely hearing of hys name. In somuch that the French women, to affray theyr chyldren, would tell them that the Talbot commeth. 70

Many Graces. Though there be indeede but three Graces or Charites (as afore is sayd) or at the utmost but foure, yet in respect of many gyftes of bounty, there may be sayde more. And so Musæus sayth, that in Heroes eyther eye there satte a hundred Graces. And by that authority, thys same poete, in his Pageaunts, saith: 'An hundred Graces on her eyellette satte,' &c.

Haydeguyes, a country daunce or rownd. So The conceipt is, that the Graces and Nymphes doe daunce unto the Muses and Pan his musieke all night by moonelight. To signifie the pleasauntesse of the soyle.

Peeres, equalles and fellow shepherds.

Queeneapples unripe, imitating Virgils verse,

'Ipse ego cana legam tenera lanugine mala.'

Neighbour groves, a straunge phrase in English, but word for word expressing the Latin vicina nemora. 90

Spring, not of water, but of young trees springing.

Calliope, afforesayde. Thys staffe is full of verie poetical invention.

Tamburines, an olde kind of instrument, which of some is supposed to be the clarion.

Pan with Phæbus. The tale is well knowne, howe that Pan and Apollo, striving for excellencie in musieke, chose Midas for their judge. Who, being corrupted wyth partiall affection, gave the victorye to Pan undeserved: for which Phæbus sette a payre of asses eares upon hys head, &c.

Tityrus. That by Tityrus is meant Chaucer, hath bene already sufficiently sayde, and by thys more playne appeareth, that he sayth, he tolde merve tales. Such as be hys Canterburie Tales. Whom he calleth the god of poetes for hys excellencie, so as Tullie calleth Lentulus, Deum vite sue, sc. the god of hys lyfe. 110

To make, to versifie.

O why, a pretye epanorthosis or correction.

Discurtisie. He meaneth the falsenesse of his lover Rosalinde, who, forsaking hym, hadde chosen another.

Poynte of worthy wite, the pricke of deserved blame.

Mencas, the name of a shepheard in Virgile; but here is meant a person unknowne and secrete, agaynst whome he often bit-terly invayeth.

Underfonge, undermynde and deceive by false suggestion.

EMBLEME.

You remember that in the fyrst Æglogue, Colins poesie was Anchora speme: for that as then there was hope of favour to be found in tyme. But nowe being cleane forlorne and rejected of her, as whose hope, that was, is cleane extinguished and turned into despeyre, he renounceth all comfort, and hope of goodnesse to come: which is all the meaning of thys embleme.

JULYE

ARGUMENT

THIS Æglogue is made in the honour and commendation of good shepheardes, and to the shame and dispraise of proude and ambitious pastours: such as Morrell is here imagined to bee.

THOMALIN. MORRELL.

Thom. Is not thilke same a gotheard prowde,

That sittes on yonder bancke,
Whose straying heard them selfe doth shrowde

Among the bushes rancke?

Mor. What ho! thou jollye shepherds wayne,

Come up the hyl to me:

Better is then the lowly playne,

Als for thy flocke and thee.

Thom. Ah, God shield, man, that I should clime,

And learne to looke alofte; 10

This reede is ryfe, that oftentime

Great clymbers fall unsoft.

In humble dales is footing fast,

The trode is not so tickle,

And though one fall through heedlesse hast,

Yet is his misse not mickle.

And now the Sonne hath reared up

His fyriefooted teme,

Making his way betweene the Cuppe

And golden Diademe: 20

The rampant Lyon hunts he fast,

With Dogge of noysome breath,

Whose balefull barking brings in hast

Pyne, plagues, and dreery death.

Agaynst his cruell scortching heate

Where hast thou coverture?

The wastefull hyls unto his threate

Is a playne overture.

But if thee lust to holden chat

With seely shepherds swayne, 30

Come downe, and learne the little what

That Thomalin can sayne.

Mor. Syker, thous but a laesie loord,

And rekes much of thy swinck,

That with fond termes, and weetlesse words,

To blere myne eyes doest thinke.

In evill houre thou hentest in hond

Thus holy hylles to blame,

For sacred unto saints they stond,

And of them han theyr name. 40

St. Michels Mount who does not know,

That wardes the westerne coste?

And of St. Brigets Bowre, I trow,

All Kent can rightly boaste:

And they that con of Muses skill

Sayne most-what, that they dwell

(As gotheards wont) upon a hill,

Beside a learned well.

And womned not the great god Pan

Upon Mount Olivet, 50

Feeding the blessed flocke of Dan,

Which dyd himselfe beget?

Thom. O blessed sheepe! O shepheard great,

That bought his flocke so deare,

And them did save with bloudy sweat

From wolves, that would them teare!

Mor. Besyde, as holy fathers sayne,

There is a hylle place,

Where Titan ryseth from the mayne,

To renne hys dayly race: 60

Upon whose toppe the starres bene stayed,

And all the skie doth leane;

There is the cave where Phebe layed

The shepheard long to dreame.

Whilome there used shepherds all

To feede theyr flocks at will,

Till by his foly one did fall,

That all the rest did spill.

And sithens shepheardes bene foresayd

From places of delight: 70

Fortly I weene thou be affrayd To clyme this hilles height.
 Of Synah can I tell thee more,
 And of Our Ladyes Bowre:
 But little needes to strow my store, Suffice this hill of our.
 Here han the holy Faunes recourse,
 And Sylvanes haunten rathe;
 Here has the salt Medway his source, Wherein the Nymphes doe bathe; 80
 The salt Medway, that trickling stremis Adowne the dales of Kent, Till with his elder brother Themis His brackish waves be meynt.
 Here growes melampode every where,
 And teribinth, good for gotes:
 The one, my madding kiddes to smere,
 The next, to heale theyr throtes.
 Hereto, the hills bene nigher heven,
 And thence the passage ethe: 90
 As well can prove the piercing levin, That seeldome falls byneth.
Thom. Syker, thou speakes lyke a lewde lorrell,
 Of heven to demen so:
 How be I am but rude and borrell, Yet nearer wayes I knowe.
 To kerke the narre, from God more farre,
 Has bene an old sayd save,
 And he that strives to touch the starres Oft stumbles at a strawe. 100 Alsoone may shepheard clymbe to skye, That leades in lowly dales,
 As goteherd proud, that, sitting hye,
 Upon the mountaine sayes.
 My seely sheepe like well belowe,
 They neede not melampode:
 For they bene hale enough, I trowe,
 And liken theyr abode.
 But, if they with thy gotes should yede,
 They soone myght be corrupted, 110
 Or like not of the frowie fede, Or with the weedes be glutted.
 The hylls where dwelled holy saints
 I reverence and adore:
 Not for themselfe, but for the saynets Which han be dead of yore.
 And nowe they bene to heven forewent, Theyr good is with them goe, Theyr sample onely to us lent,
 That als we mought doe soe. 120 Shepheards they wren of the best,
 And lived in lowlye leas:
 And sith theyr soules bene now at rest,
 Why done we them disease?

Such one he was (as I have heard Old Algrind often sayne) ✓ That whilome was the first shepheard, And lived with little gayne:
 As meeke he was as meeke mought be,
 Simple as simple sheepe, 130 Humble, and like in eche degree
 The flocke which he did keepe.
 Often he used of hys keepe
 A sacrifice to bring,
 Nowe with a kidde, now with a sheepe
 The altars hallowing.
 So lowted he unto hys Lord,
 Such favour couth he fynd,
 That sithens never was abhord
 The simple shepheards kynd. 140
 And such, I weene, the brethren were That came from Canaan,
 The brethren twelve, that kept yfere
 The flockes of mighty Pan.
 But nothing such thilk shepheard was Whom Ida hyll dyd beare, That left hys flocke to fetch a lasse, Whose love he bought to deare.
 For he was proude, that ill was payd, (No such mought shepheards bee) 150
 And with lewde lust was overlayd: Tway things doen ill agree.
 But shepheard mought be meeke and mylde,
 Well eyed as Argus was,
 With fleshly follyes undefyled,
 And stoute as steede of brasse.
 Sike one (sayd Algrin) Moses was,
 That sawe hys Makers face,
 His face, more cleare then christall glasse,
 And spake to him in place. 160
 This had a brother, (his name I knewe)
 The first of all his cote, A shepheard trewe, yet not so true
 As he that earst I hote.
 Whilome all these were lowe and lief,
 And loved their flocks to feede,
 They never stroven to be chiefe,
 And simple was theyr weede.
 But now (thanked be God therefore)
 The world is well amend, 170 Theyr weedes bene not so nighly wore;
 Such simplesse mought them shend:
 They bene yelad in purple and pall,
 So hath theyr God them blist, Theyr reigne and rulen over all.
 And lord it as they list Ygyrt with belts of glitterand gold, (Mought they good shepheards bene)

Theyr Pan they sheepe to them has sold;

I saye as some have scene. 180

For Palinode (if thou him ken)

Yode late on pilgrimage

To Rome, (if such be Rome) and then

He sawe thilke misusage.

For shepheards, sayd he, there doen leade,

As lordes done other where;

Theyr sheepe han crustes, and they the bread;

The chippes, and they the chere:

They han the fleece, and eke the flesh;

(O seely sheepe the while!) 190

The corne is theyrs, let other thresh,

Their hands they may not file.

They han great stores and thriftye stockes,

Great freendes and feeble foes:

What neede hem caren for their flocks?

Theyr boyes can looke to those.

These wisards wltre in welths waves,

Pampred in pleasures deepe;

They han fatte kernes, and leany knaves,

Their fasting flockes to keepe. 200

Sike mister men bene all misgone,

They heapen hylles of wrath:

Sike syrlye shepheards han we none,

They keepen all the path.

Mor. Here is a great deale of good matter

Lost for lacke of telling.

Now sicker I see, thou doest but catter:

Harme may come of melling.

Thou meddest more then shall have cranke,

To wyten shepheards welth: 210

When folke bene fat, and riches rancke,

It is a signe of helth.

But say me, what is Algrin, he

That is so oft bynempt?

Thom. He is a shepheard great in gree,

But hath bene long ypent.

One daye he sat upon a hyl,

As now thou wouldest me:

But I am taught, by Algrins ill,

To love the lowe degree. 220

For sitting so with bared scalpe,

An eagle sored hyc,

That, weening hys whyte head was chalke,

A shell fish downe let flye:

She weend the shell fishe to have broake,

But therewith bruzd his brayne;

So now, astonied with the stroke,

He lyes in lingring payne.

Mor. Ah, good Algrin! his hap was ill,

But shall be bett in time. 230

Now farwell, shepheard, sith thys hyll Thou hast such doubt to climbe.

Lion. Thys is poetically spoken, as if the 20 Sunne did hunt a Lion with one dogge. The meaning whereof is, that in July the some is in Leo. At which tyme the Dogge starre, which is called Syrius, or Canicula, reigneth with immoderate heate, causing pestilence, droughth, and many diseases.

Overture, an open place. The word is borrowed of the French, and used in good writers.

A loorde was wont among the old Britons 30 to signifie a lorde. And therefore the Danes, that long time usurped theyr tyrannie here in Brytanie, were called, for more dread and dignitie, Lurdanes, sc. Lord Danes. At which time it is sayd, that the insolencie and pryde of that nation was so outragious in thys realme, that if it fortunued a Briton to be going over a bridge, and sawe a Dane set foote upon the same, he muste retorne back, till the Dane were cleane over, or els abyde the pryce of 40 his displeasure, which was no lesse then present death. But being afterwarde expelled, that name of Lurdane became so odious unto the people, whom they had long oppressed, that even at this daye they use, for more reproche, to call the quartane ague the Fever Lurdane.

By thys poesye Thomalin confirmeth that which in hys former speach by sondrye reas¹⁷⁰ sons he had proved. For being both hymselfe sequestred from all ambition, and also abhorring it in others of hys cote, he taketh occasion to prayse the meane and lowly state, as that wherein is safetie without feare, and quiet without danger; according to the saying of olde philosophers, that vertue dwelleth in the middest, being environed with two contrary vices: whereto Morrell replieth with continuance of the same philosophers opinion,¹⁸⁰ that albeit all bountye dwelleth in medioeritie, yet perfect felicity dwelleth in supremacie. For they say, and most true it is, that happynesse is placed in the highest degree, so as if any thing be higher or better, then that streight way ceaseth to be perfect happines. Much like to that which once I heard alleaged in defence of humilitey, out of a great doctour, 'Suorum Christus humillimus:' which saying a gentle man in the company taking at the rebownd,¹⁹⁰ beate backe again with lyke saying of another doctoure, as he sayde, 'Suorum Deus altissimus.'

AUGUST

ÆGLOGA OCTAVA

ARGUMENT

In this Æglogue is set forth a delectable controversie, made in imitation of that in Theocritus: whereto also Virgile fashioned his third and seventh Æglogue. They choose for umpere of their strife, Cuddie, a neatheards boye, who, having ended their cause, reciteth also hymselfe a proper song, whereof Colin, he sayth, was authour.

WILLYE. PERIGOT. CUDDIE.

Wil. Tell me, Perigot, what shalbe the game,

Wherefore with myne thou dare thy musick matche?

Or bene thy bagpipes renne farre out of frame?

Or hath the crampe thy joynts benomd with ache?

Per. Ah! Willye, when the hart is ill assayde,

How can bagpipe or joynts be well apayd?

Wil. What the foule evill hath thee so bestadde?

Whilom thou was peregall to the best, And wont to make the jolly shepheards gladde

With pyping and dauncing, didst passe the rest.

Per. Ah! Willye, now I have learnd a newe daunce:

My old musick mard by a newe mischaunce.

Wil. Mischiefe mought to that newe mischaunce befall,

That so hath raft us of our meriment! But reede me, what payne doth thee so appall?

Or lovest thou, or bene thy younglings miswent?

Per. Love hath misled both my younglings and mee:

I pyne for payne, and they my payne to see.

Wil. Perdie and wellawaye! ill may they thrive:

Never kneve I lovers sheepe in good plight.

But and if in rymes with me thou dare strive,

Such fond fantasies shall soone be put to flight.

Per. That shall I doe, though mochell worse I fared:

Never shall be sayde that Perigot was dared.

Wil. Then loe, Perigot, the pledge which I plight!

A mazer ywrought of the maple warre: Wherein is enchased many a fayre sight Of beres and tygres, that maken fiers warre;

And over them spred a goodly wild vine,

Entrailed with a wanton yvie-twine.

Thereby is a lambe in the wolves javes: But see, how fast remeth the shepheard swayne,

To save the innocent from the beastes pawes;

And here with his shepooke hath him slayne.

Tell me, such a cup hast thou ever sene?

Well mought it beseme any harvest queene

Per. Thereto will I pawne yonder spotted lambe;
Of all my flocke there nis sike another;
For I brought him up without the dambe.
Per. But Colin Clout rafte me of his brother, ⁴⁰
That he purchast of me in the playne field:
Sore against my will was I forst to yield.

Wil. Sicker, make like account of his brother.

But who shall judge the wager wonne or lost?

Per. That shall yonder heardgrome, and none other,

Which over the pousse hetherward doth post.

Wil. But, for the sunnebeame so sore doth us beate,

Were not better to shunne the scortching heate?

Per. Well agreed, Willy: then sitte thee downe, swayne:

Sike a song never heardest thou but Colin sing. ⁵⁰

Cud. Gynne when ye lyst, ye jolly shepheards twayne:

Sike a judge as Cuddie were for a king.

Per. It fell upon a holly eve,

Wil. Hey ho, hollidaye!

Per. When holly fathers wont to shrieve:

Wil. Now gynmeth this roundelay.

Per. Sitting upon a hill so hye,

Wil. Hey ho, the high hyl!

Per. The while my flocke did feede thereby,

Wil. The while the shepheard selfe did spill; ⁶⁰

Per. I saw the bouncing Bellibone,

Wil. Hey no, bonibell!

Per. Tripping over the dale alone;

Wil. She can trippe it very well:

Per. Well decked in a frocke of gray,

Wil. Hey ho, gray is greeete!

Per. And in a kirtle of greene saye;

Wil. The greene is for maydens meete.

Per. A chapelet on her head she wore,

Wil. Hey ho, chapelet! ⁷⁰

Per. Of sweete violets therein was store,

Wil. She sweeter then the violet.

Per. My sheepe did leave theyr wanted foode,

Wil. Hey ho, seely sheepe!

Per. And gazd on her, as they were wood,

Wil. Woode as he that did them keepe.

Per. As the bonilasse passed bye,

Wil. Hey ho, bonilasse!

Per. She rovde at me with glauncing eye,

Wil. As cleare as the christall glasse: ⁸⁰

Per. All as the sunnye beame so bright,

Wil. Hey ho, the summe beame!

Per. Glaunceth from Phæbus face forth-
right,

Wil. So love into thy hart did streame:

Per. Or as the thonder cleaves the cloudes,

Wil. Hey ho, the thonder!

Per. Wherein the lightsome levin shroudes,

Wil. So cleaves thy soule a sonder:

Per. Or as Dame Cynthia silver raye,

Wil. Hey ho, the moonelight! ⁹⁰

Per. Upon the glyttering wave doth playe:

Wil. Such play is a pitteous plight.

Per. The glaunce into my heart did glide,

Wil. Hey ho, the glyder!

Per. Therewith my soule was sharply gryde:

Wil. Such woundes soone wexen wider.

Per. Hasting to raunch the arrow out,

Wil. Hey ho, Perigot!

Per. I left the head in my hart roote:

Wil. It was a desperate shot. ¹⁰⁰

Per. There it ranckleth ay more and more,

Wil. Hey ho, the arrowe!

Per. Ne can I find salve for my sore:

Wil. Love is a curelesse sorrowe.

Per. And though my bale with death I bought,

Wil. Hey ho, heavie cheere!

Per. Yet should thilk lasse not from my thought:

Wil. So you may buye gold to deare.

Per. But whether in paynefull love I pyne,

Wil. Hey ho, pinching payne! ¹¹⁰

Per. Or thrive in welth, she shalbe mine:

Wil. But if thou can her obtaine.

Per. And if for gracelesse greefe I dye,

Wil. Hey ho, gracelesse grieffe!

Per. Witnesse, shee slewe me with her
eye:

Wil. Let thy follye be the priefe.

Per. And you, that sawe it, simple shepe,

Wil. Hey ho, the fayre flocke!

Per. For priefe thereof, my death shall
weepe,

Wil. And mone with many a moeke. ¹²⁰

Per. So learnd I love on a holly eve,

Wil. Hey ho, holidaye!

Per. That ever since my hart did greve.

Wil. Now endeth our roundelay.

Cud. Sicker, sike a roundle never heard I none.

Little lacketh Perigot of the best,
And Willye is not greatly overgone,
So weren his undersongs well adrest.

Wil. Herdgrome, I fear me thou have a squint eye:

Areede uprightly, who has the victorye? ¹³⁰

Cud. Fayth of my soule, I deeme ech have gayned.

Forthy let the lambe be Willye his owne;

And for Perigot so well hath hym payned,
To him be the wroughten mazer alone.

Per. Perigot is well pleased with the doome,

Ne can Willye wite the witelesse herd-groome.

Wil. Never dempt more right of beautye, I weene,

The shepheard of Ida that judged beauties queene.

Cud. But tell me, shepherds, should it not yshend

Your roundels fresh to heare a doolefull verse ¹⁴⁰

Of Rosalend, (who knowes not Rosalend?)
That Colin made, ylke can I you rehearse.

Per. Now say it, Cuddie, as thou art a ladde:

With mery thing its good to medle sadde.

Wil. Fayth of my soule, thou shalt yerounded be

In Colins stede, if thou this song areede:
For never thing on earth so pleaseth me
As him to heare, or matter of his deede.

Cud. Then listueth ech unto my heavy laye,

And tune your pypes as ruthful as ye may.

‘Ye wastefull woodes beare wisse of my woe, ¹⁵¹

Wherein my plaints did oftentimes resound:

Ye carelesse byrds are privie to my cryes,
Which in your songs were wont to make a part:

Thou pleasaunt spring hast luld me oft a sleepe,

Whose streames my tricklinge teares did ofte augment.

‘Resort of people doth my greefs augment,
The walled townes do worke my greater woe:

The forest wide is fitter to resound
The hollow echo of my carefull cryes: ¹⁶⁰
I hate the house, since thence my love did part,

Whose waylefull want debarres myne eyes from sleepe.

‘Let stremes of teares supply the place of sleepe:

Let all, that sweete is, voyd: and all that may augment

My doole drawe neare. More meete to wayle my woe

Bene the wild woddes, my sorrowes to resound,

Then bedde, or bowre, both which I fill with cryes,

When I them see so waist, and fynd no part ‘Of pleasure past. Here will I dwell apart In gastfull grove therefore, till my last sleepe ¹⁷⁰

Doe close mine eyes: so shall I not augment,

With sight of such a change, my restlesse woe.

Helpe me, ye banefull byrds, whose shrieking sound

Ys signe of dreery death, my deadly cryes

‘Most ruthfully to tune. And as my cryes (Which of my woe cannot bewray least part)

You heare all night, when nature craveth sleepe,

Increase, so let your yrksome yells augment.

Thus all the night in plaints, the daye in woe

I vowed have to wayst, till safe and sound

‘She home returne, whose voyces silver sound ¹⁸¹

To cheerefull songs can change my cherelesse cryes.

Hence with the nightingale will I take part,
That blessed byrd, that spends her time of sleepe

In songs and plaintive pleas, the more taugment

The memory of hys misdeede, that bred her woe.

'And you that feele no woe, / when as the sound
Of these my nightly cryes / ye heare apart, Let breake your sounder sleepe / and pitie augment.' 189

Per. O Colin, Colin, the shepherds joye, How I admire ech turning of thy verse !
And Cuddie, fresh Cuddie, the liefest boye, How dolefully his doole thou didst rehearse !
Cud. Then blowe your pypes, shepherds, til you be at home:
The night nigheth fast, yts time to be gone.

A mazer. So also do Theocritus and Virgile feigne pledges of their strife. 9

Enchased, engraven. Such pretie descriptions every where useth Theocritus to bring in his Idyllia. For which speciall cause, iudede, he by that name termeth his Æglogues: for Idyllion in Greke signifieth the shape or picture of any thung, wherof his booke is ful. And not, as I have heard some fondly guesse, that they be called not Idyllia, but Hædilia, of the goteheards in them.

Entrailed, wrought betwene. 19

Harvest queene, the manner of country folke in harvest tyme.

Pousse, pease.

EMBLEME.

The meaning hereof is very ambiguous: for Perigot by his poesie claming the conquest, and Willye not yeelding, Cuddie the arbiter of theyr cause, and patron of his own, semeth 50 to chalenge it, as his dew, saying, that he is happy which can. — so abruptly ending; but hee meaneth eyther him that can win the beste, or moderate him selfe being best, and leave of with the best.

SEPTEMBER

ÆGLOGA NONA

ARGUMENT

HEREIN Diggon Davie is devised to be a shepherd that, in hope of more gayne, drove his sheepe into a farre countrye. The abuses whereof, and loose living of popish prelates, by occasion of Hobbinols demaund, he discourseth at large.

HOBBINOL. DIGGON DAVIE.

Hob. Diggon Davie, I bidde her god day:

Or Diggon her is, or I missaye.

Dig. Her was her while it was daye light,

But now her is a most wretched wight.

For day, that was, is wightly past,

And now at earst the dirke night doth hast.

Hob. Diggon, areede, who has thee so dight?

Never I wist thee in so poore a plight.

Where is the fayre flocke thou was wont to leade?

Or bene they chaffred? or at mischief dead?

Dig. Ah! for love of that is to thee moste leefe,

Hobbinol, I pray thee gall not my old grieffe:
Sike question ripeth up cause of newe wee,
For one opened mote unfold many moe.

Hob. Nay, but sorrow close shrouded in
hart,

I know, to kepe is a burdenous smart.
Eche thing imparted is more eath to beare:
When the rayne is faln, the cloudes wexen
cleare.

And nowe, sithence I sawe thy head last, Thrise three moones bene fully spent and
past: 20

Since when thou hast measured much
grownd,

And wandred, I wene, about the world rounde,

So as thou can many things relate:
But tell me first of thy flocks astate.

Dig. My sheepe bene wasted, (wae is me therefore !)

The jolly shepheard that was of yore Is nowe nor jollye, nor shephearde more.

In forrein costes, men sayd, was plentye:
And so there is, but all of miserye.

I dempt there much to have eeked my store, 30

But such eeking hath made my hart sore.

In tho countryes whereas I have bene,
No being for those that truly mene,

But for such as of guile maken gayne,
No such cuntrye as there to remaine.

They setten to sale their shops of shame,
And maken a mart of theyr good name.

The shepheards there robben one another,
And layen baytes to beguile her brother.

Or they will buy his sheepe out of the cote, 40

Or they will carven the shepheards throte.
The shepheards swayne you cannot wel ken,

But it be by his pryde, from other men:

They looken bigge as bulls that bene bate,
And bearen the cragge so stiffe and so
state

As cocke on his dunghill crowing cranck.

Hob. Diggon, I am so stiffe and so stanck, That uneth may I stand any more:

And nowe the westerne wind bloweth sore,
That nowe is in his chiefe sovereigntee, 50

Beating the withered leafe from the tree.

Sitte we downe here under the hill:

Tho may we talke and tellen our fill,

And make a mocke at the blustering blast.

Now say on, Diggon, what ever thou hast.

Dig. Hobbin, ah, Hobbin! I curse the stounde

That ever I cast to have lorne this grounde.

Wel-away the while I was so fonde

To leave the good that I had in hande,

In hope of better, that was uncouth: 60

So lost the dogge the flesh in his mouth.

My seely sheepe (ah, seely sheepe !)

That here by there I whilome usd to keepe,

All were they lustye, as thou didst see,

Bene all sterved with pyne and penuree.

Hardly my selfe escaped thilke payne,

Driven for neede to come home agayne.

Hob. Ah, fon! now by thy losse art taught

That seeldome chaunge the better brought.

Content who lives with tryed state 70

Neede feare no chaunge of frowning fate;

But who will seeke for unknowne gayne,

Oft lives by losse, and leaves with payne.

Dig. I wote ne, Hobbin, how I was bewicht

With wayne desyre and hope to be enrich;

But, sickler, so it is as the bright starre

Seemeth ay greater when it is farre.

I thought the soyle would have made me rich;

But nowe I wote it is nothing sich.

For eyther the shepheards bene ydle and
still, 80

And ledde of theyr sheepe what way they wyl,

Or they bene false, and full of covetise,

And casten to compasse many wrong emprise.

But the more bene fraight with fraud and
spight,

Ne in good nor goodnes taken delight,

But kindle coales of conteck and yre,

Wherewith they sette all the world on fire:

Which when they thincken agayne to quench,

With holy water they doen hem all drench.

They saye they con to heaven the high way, 90

But, by my soule, I dare undersaye

They never sette foote in that same troade,

But balk the right way and strayen abroad.

They boast they han the devill at commaund,

But aske hem therefore what they han paund:

Marrie! that great Pan bought with deare borrow,

To quite it from the blacke bowre of sor-rowe.

But they han sold thilke same long agoe:

Forthy woulden drawe with hem many moe.

But let hem gange alone a Gods name; ¹⁰⁰
As they han brewed, so let hem beare blame.

Hob. Diggon, I praye thee speake not so dirke.

Such myster saying me seemeth to mirke.

Dig. Then, playnely to speake of shepheards most what,

Badde is the best (this English is flatt.)

Their ill haviour garres men missay

Both of their doctrine, and of their fayre.

They sayne the world is much war then it wont,

All for her shepherds bene beastly and blont:

Other sayne, but how truely I note, ¹¹⁰

All for they holden shame of theyr cote.

Some sticke not to say, (whote cole on her tongue !)

That sike mischiefe graseth hem emong,

All for they casten too much of worlds
care,

To deck her dame, and enrich her heyre:

For such encheason, if you goe nye,

Fewe chymneis reeking you shall espye:

The fatte oxe, that wont ligge in the stal,

Is nowe fast stalled in her crumenall.

Thus chatten the people in theyr steads, ¹²⁰

Ylike as a monster of many heads:

But they that shooten neerest the pricke

Sayne, other the fat from their beards doen lick:

For bigge bulles of Basan brace hem about,
That with theyr hornes butten the more stoute;

But the leane soules treaden under foote.

And to seeke redresse mought little boote;

For liker bene they to pluck away more,

Then ought of the gotten good to restore:

For they bene like foule wagmoires overgrast, ¹³⁰

That if thy galage once sticketh fast,

The more to wind it out thou doest swinek,

Thou mought ay deeper and deeper sink.

Yet better leave of with a little losse,

Then by much wrestling to leese the grosse.

Hob. Nowe, Diggon, I see thou speakest to plaine:

Better it were a little to feyne,

And cleanly cover that cannot be cured:

Such il as is forced mought nedes be endured.

But of sike pastoures howe done the flocks creepe ? ¹⁴⁰

Dig. Sike as the shepherds, sike bene her sheepe:

For they will listen to the shepherds voyce,
But if he call hem at theyr good choyce:

They wander at wil and stray at pleasure,
And to theyr foldes yeed at their owne leasure.

But they had be better come at their eal;

For many han into mischiefe fall,

And bene of ravenous wolves yrent,

All for they nould be buxome and bent.

Hob. Fye on thee, Diggon, and all thy foule leasing ! ¹⁵⁰

Well is knowne that sith the Saxon king,

Never was wolfe seene, many nor some,

Nor in all Kent, nor in Christendome:

But the fewer wolves (the soth to sayne,)

The more bene the foxes that here remaine.

Dig. Yes, but they gang in more secrete
wise,

And with sheepes clothing doen hem disguise:

They walke not widely as they were wont,

For feare of rangers and the great hunt,

But prively prolling to and froe, ¹⁶⁰

Enaunter they mought be inly knowe.

Hob. Or prive or pert yf any bene,

We han great bandogs will teare their skimme.

Dig. Indeede, thy Ball is a bold bigge curre,

And could make a jolly hole in theyr furre.

But not good dogges hem needeth to chace;

But heedy shepherds to discernen their face:

For all their craft is in their countenance,

They bene so grave and full of mayntenauce.

But shall I tell thee what my selfe knowe ¹⁷⁰

Chaunced to Roffynn not long ygoe?

Hob. Say it out, Diggon, what ever it
hight,

For not but well mought him betight:

He is so meeke, wise, and merciable,

And with his word his worke is convenable.

Colin Clout, I wene, be his selfe boye,

(Ah for Colin, he whilome my joye!)

Shepherds sich, God mought us many send,

That doen so carefullyr theyr flocks tend.

Dig. Think same shepherd mought I well marke: ¹⁸⁰

He has a dogge to byte or to barke;

Never had shepherd so kene a kurre,

That waketh and if but a leafe sturre.

Whilome there wonned a wicked wolfe,

That with many a lambe had glutted his gulfe.

And ever at night wont to repayre Unto the flocke, when the welkin shoue
faire,

Ycladde in clothing of seely sheepe,
When the good old man used to sleepe.
Tho at midnight he would barke and ball, ¹⁹⁰ (For he had eft learned a curre call,) As if a wolfe were emong the sheepe.
With that the shepheard would breake his
sleepe,

And send out Lowder (for so his dog hote)
To rauge the fields with wide open throte.
Tho, when as Lowder was farre awaye, This wolvishe sheepe would catchen his
pray,

A lambe, or a kiddie, or a weanell wast:
With that to the wood would he speede him fast.

Long time he used this slippery pranck, ²⁰⁰
Ere Roffy could for his laboure him thanck.
At end, the shepheard his practise spyed, (For Roffy is wise, and as Argus eyed)
And when at even he came to the flocke, Fast in theyr folds he did them locke,
And tooke out the wolfe in his counterfect
cote,

And let out the sheepes bloud at his throte.

Hob. Marry, Diggon, what should him affraye

To take his owne where ever it laye ?
For had his wesand bene a little widder, ²¹⁰ He would have devoured both hidder and shidder.

Dig. Mischiefe light on him, and Gods great curse!

Too good for him had bene a great deale
worse:

For it was a perilous beast above all,
And eke had he cond the shepherds call,
And oft in the night came to the shepecote,
And called Lowder, with a hollow throte,
As if it the old man selve had bene.

The dog his maisters voice did it weene,
Yet halfe in doubt he opened the dore, ²²⁰
And ranne out, as he was wont of yore.
No sooner was out, but, swifter then
thought,

Fast by the hyde the wolfe Lowder caught:
And had not Roffy renne to the steven, Lowder had be slaine thilke same even.

Hob. God shield, man, he should so ill have thrive,

All for he did his devoyre belive.
If sike bene wolves as thou hast told,
How mought we, Diggon, hem behold ?

Dig. How, but with heede and watch-fulnessse ²³⁰

Forstallen hem of their wilnesse ?
Forthy with shepheard sittes not playe,
Or sleepe, as some doen, all the long day:
But ever ligger in watch and ward,
From soddein force theyr floeks for to gard.

Hob. Ah, Diggon ! thilke same rule were too straight,

All the cold season to wach and waite:
We bene of fleshe, men as other bee:
Why should we be bound to such miseree ?
What ever thing lacketh changeable rest, ²⁴⁰

Mought needes decay, when it is at best.

Dig. Ah ! but Hobbinol, all this long tale Nought easeth the care that doth me for-haile.

What shall I doe ? what way shall I wend, My piteous plight and losse to amend ?
Ah, good Hobbinol ! mought I thee praye Of ayde or counsell in my decaye.

Hob. Now by my soule, Diggon, I lament
The haplesse mischief that has thee hent.
Nethelisse thou seest my lowly saile, ²⁵⁰
That froward fortune doth ever availe.

But were Hobbinol as God mought please, Diggon should soone find favour and ease.
But if to my cottage thou wilt resort,
So as I can I wil thee comfort:

There mayst thou ligg in a vetchy bed,
Till fayrer fortune shewe forth her head.

Dig. Ah, Hobbinol, God mought it thee requite !

Diggon on fewe such freendes did ever lite.

Nowe I thinke no man doubteth but by Colin is ever meante the anhour selte: whose especiall good freend Hobbinoll sayth he is, or more rightly Mayster Gabriel Harvey: of whose speciall commendation, aswell in poetrye as rhetorike and other choyce learning, we have lately had a sufficient tryall in di- 90 verse his workes, but specially in his Musarum Lachryma. and his late Gratulationum Valdensium, which boke, in the progresse at Audley in Essex, he dedicated in writing to her Majestie. afterward presenting the same in print unto her Highnesse at the worshipfull Maister Capells in Hertfordshire. As also, by the names of other shepheardes, he covereth the persons of divers other his familiar freendes and best acquayntance.

This tale of Roffy seemeth to colour some particular action of his. But what, I certeinlye know not.

EMBLEME.

This is the saying of Narcissus in Ovid. For when the foolish boye, by beholding hys face in the brooke, fell in love with his owne likeness: and not hable to content him selfe with much looking thereon, he cryed out, that plentye made him poore, meaning that much gazing had bereft him of sence. But our Dignon useth it to other purpose, as who that by tryall of many wayes had founde the worst, and through greate plentye was fallen into 130 great penurie. This poesie I knowe to have bene much used of the author, and to suche like effecte as fyrste Narcissus spake it.

OCTOBER

ÆGLOGA DECIMA

ARGUMENT

In Cuddie is set out the perfecte paterne of a poete, whiche, finding no maintenaunce of his state and studies, complayneth of the contempte of Poetrie, and the causes thereof: specially having bene in all ages, and even amongst the most barbarous, alwayes of singular account and hour, and being indede so worthy and commendable an arte: or rather no arte, but a divine gift and heavenly instinct, not to bee gotten by labour and learning, but adorned with both, and poured into the witte by a certain ἐνθουσιασμός and celestiall inspiration; as the author hereof els where at large discourseth in his booke called The English Poete, which booke being lately come to my hands, I mynde also by Gods grace, upon further advisement, to publish.

PIERCE. CUDDIE.

Piers. Cuddie, for shame! hold up thy heavey head,
And let us cast with what delight to chace
And weary thys long lingring Phæbus race.
Whilome thou wont the shepherds laddes to leade
In rymes, in riddles, and in bydding base:
Now they in thee, and thou in sleepe art dead.

Cud. Piers, I have pyped erst so long with payne,
That all mine oten reedes bene rent and wore:
And my poore Muse hath spent her spared store, Yet little good hath got, and much lesse gayne.¹⁰
Such pleasaunce makes the grashopper so poore,
And ligge so layd, when winter doth her straine.

The dapper ditties that I wont devise,
To feede youthes fancie and the flocking fry,
Delighten much: what I the bett forthy?
They han the pleasure, I a slender prise:
I beate the bush, the byrds to them doe fy:
What good thereof to Cuddie can arise?

Piers. Cuddie, the prayse is better then the price,
The glory eke much greater then the gayne:
O what an honor is it, to restraine²¹
The lust of lesse youth with good advice,
Or pricke them forth with pleasaunce of thy vaine, Whereto thou list their trayned willes entice!

Soone as thou gynst to sette thy notes in
frame,
O how the rurall routes to thee doe cleave!
Seemeth thou doest their soule of sense bereave,
All as the shepheard, that did fetch his
dame
From Plutoes balefull bowre withouten
leave:
His musicks might the hellish hound did tame.³⁰

Cud. So praysen babes the peacocks spotted traine,
And wondren at bright Argus blazing
eye;
But who rewards him ere the more forthy?
Or feedes him once the fuller by a graine?
Sike prayse is smoke, that sheddeth in the
skye, Sike words bene wynd, and wasten soone in
vayne.

Piers. Abandon then the base and viler clowne:
Lyft up thy selfe out of the lowly dust,
And sing of bloody Mars, of wars, of giusts: Turne thee to those that weld the awful crowne,⁴⁰
To doubted knights, whose woundlesse armour rusts,
And helmes unbrazed wexen dayly browne.
There may thy Muse display her fluttryng wing,
And stretch her selfe at large from east to west:
Whither thou list in fayre Elisa rest,
Or if thee please in bigger notes to sing, Advance the worthy whome shee loveth
best,
That first the white beare to the stake did bring.

And when the stubborne stroke of stronger
 stounds
 Has somewhat slackt the tenor of thy string, ⁵⁰
 Of love and lustihead tho mayst thou sing,
 And carrol lowde, and leade the myllers rownde,
 All were Elisa one of thilke same ring.
 So mought our Cuddies name to heaven sownde.

Cud. Indeede the Romish Tityrus, I
 heare,
 Through his Meeenas left his oaten reede, Whereon he earst had taught his flocks to
 feede,
 And laboured lands to yield the timely care,
 And eft did sing of warres and deadly drede, So as the heavens did quake his verse to here. ⁶⁰

But ah! Meeenas is yelad in claye,
 And great Augustus long ygoe is dead,
 And all the worthies ligger wrapt in leade,
 That matter made for poets on to play:
 For, ever, who in derring doe were dreade,
 The loftie verse of hem was loved aye.

But after vertue gan for age to stoupe, And mighty manhode brought a bedde of
 ease,
 The vaunting poets found nought worth a pease
 To put in preace among the learned troupe.
 Tho gan the streames of flowing wittes to cease, ⁷¹
 And sonnebright honour pend in shamefull coupe.

And if that any buddes of poesie
 Yet of the old stocke gan to shoote agayne,
 Or it mens follies mote be forst to fayne,
 And rolle with rest in rymes of rybaudrye,
 Or, as it sprong, it wither must agayne:
 Tom Piper makes us better melodie.

Piers. O pierlesse Poesye, where is then thy place?
 If nor in princes pallace thou doe sitt, ⁸⁰ (And yet is princes pallace the most fitt) Ne brest of baser birth doth thee embrace.
 Then make thee winges of thine aspyring
 wit,
 And, whence thou camst, flye backe to heaven apace.

Cud. Ah, Perey! it is all to weake and wanne,
 So high to sore, and make so large a
 flight;
 Her peeceed pyneons bene not so in plight:
 For Colin fittes such famous flight to scame:
 He, were he not with love so ill bedight, Would mount as high and sing as soote as swanne. ⁹⁰

Piers. Ah, fon! for love does teach him climbe so hie,
 And lyftes him up out of the loathsome
 myre:
 Such immortall mirrhor as he doth admire Would rayse ones mynd above the starry
 skie,
 And cause a caytive corage to aspire;
 For lofty love doth loath a lowly eye.

Cud. All otherwise the state of poet stands:
 For lordly Love is such a tyranne fell,
 That, where he rules, all power he doth ex-pell.
 The vaunted verse a vacant head demaundes, ¹⁰⁰
 Ne wont with crabbed Care the Muses
 dwell:
 Unwisely weaves, that takes two webbes in hand.
 Who ever casts to compasse weightye
 prise,
 And thinks to throwe out thondring words of threate, Let powre in lavish cups and thriftie bitts of meate;
 For Bacehus fruite is frend to Phœbus
 wise,
 And when with wine the braine begins to sweate,
 The numbers flowe as fast as spring doth ryse.

Thou kenst not, Percie, howe the ryme should rage.
 O if my temples were distaind with wine,
 And girt in girlonds o' wild yvie twine, ¹¹¹
 How I could reare the Muse on stately stage,
 And teache her tread aloft in buskin fine,
 With queint Bellona in her equipage!

But ah! my corage cooles ere it be warne;

Forthy content us in thys humble shade, Where no such troublous tydes han us assayde.

Here we our slender pipes may safely charme.

Piers. And when my gates shall han their bellies layd,

Cuddie shall have a kiddie to store his farme.

CUDDIES EMBLEME.

Agitante calescimus illo, &c.

GLOSSE

This Æglogue is made in imitation of Theocritus his xvi. Idilion, wherein hee reproved the tyranne Hiero of Syracuse for his nigardise towarde poetes, in whome is the power to make men immortal for their good dedes, or shameful for their naughty lyfe. And the lyke also is in Mantuane. The style hereof, as also that in Theocritus, is more loftye then the rest, and applied to the heighte of poeticall witte.

Cuddie. I doubte whether by Cuddie be 10 specified the authour selfe, or some other. For in the eyght Æglogue the same person was brought in, singing a cantion of Colins making, as he sayth. So that some doubt that the persons be different.

Whilome, sometime.

Oaten reedes, Avena.

Ligge so layde, lye so faynt and unlustye.

Dapper, pretye.

Frye is a bold metaphore, forced from the 20 spawning fishes: for the multitude of young fish be called the frye.

To restraine. This place seemeth to conspyre with Plato, who in his first booke de Legibus sayth. that the first invention of poetry was of very vertuous intent. For at what time an infinite number of youth usually came to theyr great solemne feastes called Panegyrica, which they used every five yeere to hold, some learned man, being more hable then the rest for spe- 30 ciall gyftes of wytte and musicke, would take upon him to sing fine verses to the people, in prayse eyther of vertue or of victory or of immortality, or such like. At whose wonderful gyft al men being astonied and as it were ravished with delight, thinking (as it was indeed) that he was inspired from above, called him vatem: which kinde of men afterwarde framing their verses to lighter musick (as of musick be many kinds, some sadder, some 40 lighter, some martiall, some heroical: and so diversely eke affect the myndes of men) found out lighter matter of poesie also, some playing wyth love, some scorning at mens fashions, some powred out in pleasures: and so were called poetes or makers.

Sence bereave. What the secrete working of musick is in the myndes of men, aswell appeareth hereby, that some of the auncient philosophers, and those the moste wise, as 50 Plato and Pythagoras, held for opinion, that the mynd was made of a certaine harmonie and musicall numbers, for the great compassion and likenes of affection in thone and in the other, as also by that memorable history of Alexander: to whom when as Timotheus the great musitian playd the Phrygian melodie, it is said that he was distraught with such unwonted fury, that streight way rysing from the table in great rage, he caused himselfe to be 60 armed, as ready to goe to warre, (for that musick is very warlike:) and immediatly when as the musitian chaunged his stroke into the Lydian and Ionique harmony, he was so furr from warring, that he sat as styl, as if he had bene in matters of counsell. Such might is in musick. Wherefore Plato and Aristotle forbid the Arcadian melodie from children and youth. For that being altogether on the fyft and vii. tone, it is of great force to molifie 70 and quench the kindly courage, which useth to burne in yong brests. So that it is incredible which the poete here sayth, that musick can bereave the soule of sence.

The shepheard that, Orpheus: of whom is sayd, that by his excellent skil in musick and poetry, he recovered his wife Eurydice from hell.

Argus eyes. Of Argus is before said, that Juno to him committed hir husband Jupiter 80 his paragon, Iô. because he had an hundred eyes: but afterwarde Mercury, wyth hys musick lulling Argus aslepe, slew him and brought Iô away, whose eyes it is sayd that Juno, for his eternall memory. placed in her byrd the peacocks taylor: for those coloured spots indeede resemble eyes.

Woundlesse armour, unwounded in warre, doe rust through long peace.

Display, a poeticall metaphore: whereof 90 the meaning is, that, if the poet list showe his skill in matter of more dignitie then is the homely Æglogue, good occasion is him offered of higher veyne and more heroicall argument in the person of our most gratiuous soveraign, whom (as before) he calleth Elisa. Or if mater of knighthoode and chevalrie please him better, that there be many noble and valiaunt men, that are both worthy of his payne in theyr deserved prayses, and also favourers of hys 100 skil and faculty.

The worthy. He meaneth (as I guesse) the most honorable and renowned the Erle of Leyecester, whom by his cognisance (although the same be also proper to other) rather then by his name he bewrayeth, being not likely that the names of noble princes be known to country clowne.

Slack, that is when thou chaungest thy verse from stately discourse, to matter of more 110 pleasaunce and delight.

The millers, a kind of daunce.

King, company of dauncers.

The Romish Tityrus, wel knowne to be Virgile, who by Mecenas means was brought into the favour of the Emperor Augustus, and by him moved to write in loftier kinde then he erst had doen.

Wharcon. In these three verses are the three severall workes of Virgile intended. For 120 in teaching his flocks to feede, is meant his Eglogues. In labouring of lands, is hys Bucoliques. In singing of wars and deadly dreade, is his divine Æneis figured.

In derring doe, in manhoode and chevalrie.

For ever. He sheweth the cause why poetes were wont be had in such honor of noble men. that is, that by them their worthines and valor shold through their famous posies be commended to al posterities. Wherefore it is 130 sayd, that Achilles had never bene so famous, as he is, but for Homeres immortal verses: which is the only advantage which he had of Hector. And also that Alexander the Great, comming to his tombe in Sigens, with naturall teares blessed him, that ever was his hap to be honoured with so excellent a poets work, as so renowned and ennobled onely by hys meanes. Which being declared in a most eloquent oration of Tullies, is of Petrarch no 140 lesse worthely sette forth in a sonet.

'Giunto Alexandro a la famosa tomba Del fero Achille, sospirando disse:
O fortunato, che si chiara tromba Trovasti,' &c.

And that such account hath bene alwayes made of poetes, aswell sheweth this, that the worthy Scipio, in all his warres against Carthage and Numantia, had evermore in his company, and that in a most familiar sort, the good olde poet Ennius: as also that Alexander, destroy- 150 ing Thebes, when he was enformed, that the famous lyrick poet Pindarus was borne in that citie, not onely commaunded streightly, that no man should, upon payne of death, do any violence to that house, by fire or otherwise: but also specially spared most, and some highly rewarded, that were of hys kinne. So favoured he the only name of a poete. Whych prayse otherwise was in the same man no lesse famous, that when he came to ransacking of King 160 Darius coffers, whom he lately had overthrowen, he founde in a little coffer of silver the two bookes of Homers works, as layd up there for speciall jewels and riches, which he, taking thence, put one of them dayly in his bosome, and thother every night layde under his pillowe. Such honor have poetes alwayes found in the sight of princes and noble men: which this author here very well sheweth, as els where more notably. 170

But after. He sheweth the cause of contempt of poetry to be idlenesse and basenesse of mynd.

Pent, shut up in slouth, as in a coope or cage.

Tom Piper, an ironical sarcasmus, spoken in derision of these rude wits, whych make more account of a ryiming ryband, then of skill grounded upon learning and judgment.

Ne brest, the meaner sort of men.

Her peececd pinecons, unperfect skil. Spoken wyth humble modestie. 181

As soote as swanne. The comparison seemeth to be strange: for the swanne hath ever wonne small commendation for her swete singing: but it is sayd of the learned that the swan, a little before hir death, singeth most pleasantly, as prophecing by a secrete instinct her nere destinie. As wel sayth the poete elsewhere in one of his sonetts.

'The silver swanne doth sing before her dying day, As shee that feeles the deepe delight that is in death,' &c. 191

Immortall myrrhour, Beauty, which is an excellent object of poeticall spirites, as appeareth by the worthy Petrarchs saying,

'Fiorir faceva il mio debile ingegno,
A la sua ombra, et crescer ne gli affanni.'

A captive corage, a base and abject minde.

For lofty love. I think this playng with the letter to be rather a fault then a figure, aswel in our English tongue, as it hath bene al- 200 wayes in the Latine, called Cocozelon.

A vacant imitateth Mantuanes saying, 'vacuum curis divina cerebrum Poscit.'

Lavish cups resembleth that comen verse, 'Fœcundi calices quem non fecere disertum?'

Oif my. He seemeth here to be ravished with a poeticall furie. For (if one rightly mark) the numbers rise so ful, and the verse groweth so big, that it seemeth he hath forgot the meane- 210 nesse of shepheards state and stile.

Wild yvie, for it is dedicated to Bacchus, and therefore it is sayd, that the Mænades (that is, Bacchus franticke priestes) used in their sacrifice to carry thyrsos, which were pointed staves or javelins, wrapped about with yvie.

In buskin. It was the maner of poetes and plaiers in tragedies to were buskins, as also in comedies to use stockes and light shoes. So that the buskin in poetry is used for tragical matter, as is said in Virgile, 'Sola Sophocleo 220 tua carmina digna cothurno.' And the like in Horace, 'Magnum loqui, nitique cothurno.'

Queint, strange. Bellona; the goddess of battaile, that is, Pallas, which may therefore wel be called queint, for that (as Lucian saith) when Jupiter hir father was in traveile of her, he caused his sonne Vulcane with his axe to hew his head. Out of which leaped forth lustely a valiant damsell armed at all poyntes, whom seeing Vulcane so faire and comely, lightly ²³⁰ leaping to her, proferred her some cortesie, which the lady disdeigning, shook her speare at him, and threatned his saucinesse. Therefore such straungenesse is well applied to her.

Equipage, order.

Tydes, seasons.

Charme, temper and order: for charmes were wont to be made by verses, as Ovid sayth, 'Aut si carminibus.'

EMBLEME.

Hereby is meant, as also in the whole ²⁴⁰ course of this Æglogue, that poetry is a divine instinct and unnatural rage passing the reache of comen reason. Whom Piers answereth epiphonematos, as admiring the excellency of the skylle, whereof in Cuddie hee hadde alreadye hadde a taste.

NOVEMBER

ÆGLOGA UNDECIMA

ARGUMENT

In this xi. Æglogue he bewayleth the death of some mayden of greate bloud, whom he calleth Dido. The personage is secrete, and to me altogether unknowne, albe of him selfe I often required the same. This Æglogue is made in imitation of Marot his song, which he made upon the death of Loys the Frenche Queene: but farre passing his reache, and in myne opinion all other the Eglogues of this booke.

THENOT. COLIN.

The. Colin, my deare, when shall it please thee sing,

As thou were wont, songs of some iouissance?

Thy Muse to long slombreth in sorrowing, Lulled a sleeper through loves misgovernance:

Now somewhat sing whose endles sovernaunce

Among the shepheards swaines may aye remaine,

Whether thee list thy loved lasse advaunce,
Or honor Pan with hymnes of higher vaine.

Col. Thenot, now nis the time of merimake,

Nor Pan to herye, nor with love to playe: Sike myrth in May is meetest for to make,
Or summer shade, under the cocked laye.

But nowe sadde winter welked hath the day,

And Phœbus, weary of his yerely taske, Ystabled hath his steedes in lowlye laye,
And taken up his ynne in Fishes haske.

Thilke sollein season sadder plight doth aske,

And loatheth sike delightes as thou doest prayse:

The mornefull Muse in myrth now list ne maske,

As shee was wont in youngeth and sommer dayes.

But if thou algate lust light virelayes, ²⁰
And looser songs of love, to underfong, Who but thy selfe deserves sike Poetes prayse?

Relieve thy oaten pypes that sleepen long.

The. The nightingale is soveraigne of song,

Before him sits the titmose silent bee:

And I, unfitte to thrust in skilfull thronge, Should Colin make judge of my fooleree.

Nay, better learne of hem that learned bee,
And han be watered at the Muses well: ³⁰

The kindlye dewe drops from the higher tree,

And wets the little plants that lowly dwell
But if sadde winters wrathe, and season chill,

Accorde not with thy Muses meriment,
To sadder times thou mayst attune thy quill,

And sing of sorrowe and deathes dreeriment:

For deade is Dido, dead, alas! and drent, Dido, the greate shephearde his daughter sheene:

The fayrest may she was that ever went,
Her like shee has not left behinde I weene.

And if thou wilt bewayle my wofull tene, ⁴¹
I shall thee give yond cosset for thy payne:

And if thy rymes as rownd and rufull bene
As those that did thy Rosalind complayne, Much greater gyfts for guerdon thou shalt gayne

Then kidde or cosset, which I thee bynempt.

Then up, I say, thou jolly shepeheard
swayne,

Let not my small demaund be so contempt.

Col. Thenot, to that I choose thou doest me tempt:

But ah! to well I wote my humble vaine,
And howe my rymes bene rugged and unkempt: 51

Yet, as I come, my coming I will strayne.

Up, then, Melpomene, thou mournefulst Muse of nyne!

Such cause of mourning never hadst afore:

Up, grieslie ghostes! and up my ruffall ryme!

Matter of myrth now shalt thou have no
more:

For dead shee is that myrth thee made of yore.

Dido, my deare, alas! is dead,

Dead, and lyeth wrapt in lead:

O heavie herse! 60

Let streaming teares be poured out in store:

O carefull verse!

Shepheards, that by your flocks on Kentish downes abyde,

Waile ye this wofull waste of Natures warke:

Waile we the wight whose presence was our pryde:

Waile we the wight whose absence is our carke.

The sonne of all the world is dimme and
darke:

The earth now lacks her wonted light,

And all we dwell in deadly night:

O heavie herse! 70

Breake we our pypes, that shrild as lowde as larke:

O carefull verse!

Why doe we longer live, (ah, why live we so long?)

Whose better dayes death hath shut up in
woe?

The fayrest floure our gyrlond all emong

Is faded quite, and into dust ygoe.

Sing now, ye shepheards daughters, sing no
moe

The songs that Colin made in her
prayse,

But into weeping turne your wanton
layes:

O heavie herse! 80

Now is time to die. Nay, time was long ygoe:

O carefull verse!

Whence is it that the flouret of the field doth fade,

And lyeth buried long in winters bale:

Yet soone as spring his mantle doth dis-playe,

It floureth fresh, as it should never fayle?

But thing on earth that is of most availe,

As vertues braunch and beauties budde,

Reliven not for any good.

O heavie herse! 90

The braunch once dead, the budde eke needes must quaille:

O carefull verse!

She, while she was, (that was, a woful word to sayne!)

For beauties prayse and plesaunce had no pere:

So well she couth the shepherds entertayne

With cakes and cracknells and such country chere.

Ne would she scorne the simple shepheards
swaine,

For she would cal hem often heame,

And give hem curds and clonted creame.

O heavie herse! 100

Als Colin Cloute she would not once disdayne.

O carefull verse!

But nowe sike happy cheere is turnd to heavie chaunce,

Such plesaunce now displast by dolours dint:

All musick sleepes where Death doth leade the daunce,

And shepherds wonted solace is extinct.

The blew in black, the greene in gray, is tinct;

The gaudie girlonds deck her grave,

The faded flowres her corse embrave.

O heavie herse! 110

Morne nowe, my Muse, now morne with teares besprint.

O carefull verse!

O thou greate shepheard, Lobbin, how great is thy grieffe!

Where bene the nosegayes that she dight for thee?

The colourd chaplets, wrought with a chiefe,
The knotted rushrings, and gilte rose-marce ?

For shee deemed nothing too deere for thee.
Ah ! they bene all yclad in clay,
One bitter blast blew all away.
O heaue herse ! 120
Thereof nought remaines but the memoree.
O carefull verse !

Ay me ! that dreerie Death should strike so mortall stroke,
That can undoe Dame Natures kindly
course:

The faded lockes fall from the loftie oke,
The fouds do gaspe, for dryed is theyr sourse,
And fouds of teares flowe in theyr stead perforse.

The mantled medowes mourne, Theyr sondry colours tourne.
O heaue herse ! 130
The heavens doe melt in teares without remorse.
O carefull verse !

The feeble flocks in field refuse their former foode,
And hang theyr heads, as they would learne to weepe:

The beastes in forest wayle as they were woode, Except the wolves, that chase the wandring
sheepe,

Now she is gon that safely did hem keepe.
The turtle, on the bared braunch, Laments the wound that Death did launch.

O heaue herse ! 140
And Philomele her song with teares doth steepe.
O carefull verse !

The water nymphs, that wont with her to sing and daunce,
And for her girlond olive braunches beare, Now balefull boughes of cypres doen advaunce:

The Muses, that were wont greene bayes to weare,

Now bringen bitter eldre braunches seare:
The Fatall Sisters eke repent
Her vitall threde so soone was spent.
O heaue herse ! 150

Morne now, my Muse, now morne with heavie cheare.
O carefull verse !

O trustlesse state of earthly things, and slipper hope
Of mortal men, that swincke and sweate for
nought,
And shooting wide, doe misse the marked scope:

Now have I learnd, (a lesson derely bought)
That nys on earth assuraunce to be sought:
For what might be in earthlie mould,
That did her buried body hould.

O heaue herse ! 160
Yet saw I on the beare when it was brought.
O carefull verse !

But maugre Death, and dreaded sisters deadly spight,
And gates of Hel, and fyrie furies forse,
She hath the bonds broke of eternall night,
Her soule unbodied of the burdenous corpse.
Why then weepes Lobbin so without remorse ?

O Lob ! thy losse no longer lament; Dido nis dead, but into heaven hent.
O happy herse ! 170
Cease now, my Muse, now cease thy sor-rowes sourse:
O joyfull verse !

Why wayle we then ? why weary we the gods with playnts,
As if some evill were to her betight ?

She raignes a goddessse now emong the saintes,
That whilome was the saynt of shepherds
light:

And is entalled nowe in heavens hight.
I see thee, blessed soule, I see,
Walke in Elisian fieldes so free.
O happy herse ! 180

Might I once come to thee ! O that I might !
O joyfull verse !

Unwise and wretched men, to weete whats good or ill,

Wee deeme of death as doome of ill desert:

But knewe we, fooles, what it us brings until,

Dye would we dayly, once it to expert.

No daunger there the shepheard can astert: Fayre fieldes and pleasaunt layes there
 bene,
 The fieldes ay fresh, the grasse ay greene:
 O happy herse! ¹⁹⁰
 Make hast, ye shepheards, thether to revert:
 O joyfull verse!

Dido is gone afore (whose turne shall be the next?)

There lives shee with the blessed gods in blisse,

There drincks she nectar with ambrosia
 mixt,

And joyes enjoyes that mortall men doe misse.

The honor now of highest gods she is,
 That whilome was poore shepheards
 pryde,

While here on earth she did abyde.
 O happy herse! ²⁰⁰

Ceasse now, my song, my woe now wasted
 is.

O joyfull verse!

The. Ay, francke shepheard, how bene thy verses meint

With doolful pleasaunce, so as I ne wotte Whether rejoyce or weepe for great constrainte!

Thyne be the cossette, well hast thow it gotte.

Up, Colin, up, ynough thou morned hast: Now gynnes to mizzle, hye we homeward fast.

GLOSSE

Jouisaunce, myrth.

Sovenaunce, remembraunce.

Herie, honour.

Welked, shortned, or empayred. As the moone being in the waine is sayde of Lidgate to welk.

In lowly lay, according to the season of the moneth November, when the sonne draweth low in the south toward his tropick or returne.

In Fishes haske. The sonne reigneth, that 10 is, in the signe Pisces all November. A haske is a wicker pad, wherein they use to cary fish.

Virelaies, a light kind of song.

Bee watred. For it is a saying of poetes, that they have dronk of the Muses well Castalias, whereof was before sufficiently sayd.

Dreriment, dreery and heavy cheere.

The great shepheard is some man of high degree, and not, as some vainely suppose, God Pan. The person both of the shepheard and 20 of Dido is unknowen, and elosely buried in the authors conceipt. But out of doubt I am, that it is not Rosalind, as some imagin: for he speaketh soone after of her also.

Shene, fayre and shining.

May, for mayde.

Tene, sorrow.

Guerdon, reward.

Bynempt, bequethed. 29

Cosset, a lambe brought up without the dam.

Unkempt, incompit; not comed, that is, rude and unhansome.

Melpomene, the sadde and wayefull Muse, used of poets in honor of tragedies: as saith Virgile,

'Melpomene tragico proclamat mesta boatu.'

Up griesly gosts, the maner of tragicall poetes, to call for helpe of furies and damned ghostes: so is Hecuba of Euripides, and Tantalus brought in of Seneca; and the rest of 40 the rest.

Herse is the solemne obsequie in funeralles.

Wast of, decay of so beautifull a peece.

Carke, care.

Ah why, an elegant epanorthosis, as also soone after: ay, time was long ago.

Flouret, a diminutive for a little floure. This is a notable and sententious comparison 'A minore ad majus.'

Reliven not, live not againe, sc. not in theyr 50 earthly bodies: for in heaven they enjoy their due reward.

The braunch. He meaneth Dido, who being, as it were, the mayne braunch now withered, the buddes, that is, beautie (as he sayd afore) can no more flourish.

With cakes, fit for shepheards bankets.

Heame, for home: after the northerne pronouncing.

Tinct, deyed or stayned. 60

The gaudie. The meaning is, that the things which were the ornaments of her lyfe are made the honor of her funerall, as is used in burials.

Lobbin, the name of a shepherd, which seemeth to have bene the lover and deere frende of Dido.

Rushrings, agreeable for such base gyftes.

Faded lockes, dryed leaves. As if Nature her self bewyald the death of the mayde.

Sourse, spring. 70

Mantled medowes, for the sondry flowres are like a mantle or coverlet wrought with many colours.

Philomele, the nightingale: whome the poetes faine once to have bene a ladye of great beauty till, being ravished by hir sisters husbände

she desired to be turned into a byrd of her name. Whose complaintes be very well set forth of Maister George Gaskin, a wittie gentleman, and the very chefe of our late rymers, so who, and if some partes of learning wanted not (albee it is well knowen he altogyther wanted not learning) no doubt would have attayned to the excellencye of those famous poets. For gifts of wit and naturall promptnesse appeare in hym abundantly.

Cypresse, used of the old paynims in the furnishing of their funerall pompe, and properly the signe of all sorow and heavinesse.

The fatall sisters, Clotho, Lachesis, and 90 Atropos, daughters of Herebus and the Nighte, whom the poetes fayne to spinne the life of man, as it were a long threde, which they drawe out in length, till his fatal howre and timely death be come; but if by other casuallie his dayes be abridged, then one of them, that is, Atropos, is sayde to have cut the threde in twain. Hereof commeth a common verse.

'Clotho colum bajulat, Lachesis trahit, Atropos occat.'

O trustlesse, a gallant exclamation, moral- 100 ized with great wisdom, and passionate wyth great affection.

Beare, a frame, wheron they use to lay the dead corse.

Furies, of poetes be feyned to be three, Persephone, Alecto, and Megera, which are sayd to be the authours of all evill and mischiefe.

Eternall night is death or darknesse of hell.

Betight, happened. 110

I see, a lively icon or representation, as if he saw her in heaven present.

Elysian fieldes be devised of poetes to be a place of pleasure like Paradise, where the happye soules doe rest in peace and eternal happynesse.

Dye would, the very expresse saying of Plato in Phædone.

Astert, befall unwares.

Nectar and ambrosia be feigned to be the 120 drink and foode of the gods: ambrosia they liken to manna in scripture, and nectar to be white like creme, whereof is a proper tale of Hebe, that spilt a cup of it, and stayned the heavens, as yet appeareth. But I have already discoursed that at large in my Commentarye upon the Dreames of the same authour.

Meynt, mingled.

EMBLEME.

Which is as much to say as, death biteth not. For although by course of nature we be 130 borne to dye, and being ripened with age, as with a timely harvest, we must be gathered in time, or els of our selves we fall like rotted ripe fruite fro the tree: yet death is not to be counted for evill, nor (as the poete sayd a little before) as doome of ill desert. For though the trespasse of the first man brought death into the world, as the guerdon of sinne, yet being overcome by the death of one that dyed for al, it is now made (as Chaucer sayth) the 140 grene path way to life. So that it agreeth well with that was sayd, that Death byteth not (that is) hurteth not at all.

DECEMBER

ÆGLOGA DUODECIMA

ARGUMENT

THIS Æglogue (even as the first begame) is ended with a complaynte of Colin to God Pan: wherein, as weary of his former wayes, he proportioneth his life to the foure seasons of the yeare, comparing hys youthe to the spring time, when he was fresh and free from loves follye; his manhoode to the sommer, which, he sayth, was consumed with greate heate and excessive drouth, caused through a comet or blasinge starre, by which hee meaneth love, which passion is comenly compared to such flames and immoderate heate; his riper yeares hee resembleth to an unseasonable harveste, wherein the frutes fall ere they be ripe; his latter age to winters chyll and frostie season, now drawing neare to his last ende.

THE gentle shepheard satte beside a springe,
All in the shadowe of a bushye breere, That Colin hight, which wel could pype and singe,
For he of Tityrus his songs did lere.
There as he satte in secreate shade alone, Thus gan he make of love his piteous
mone.

'O soveraigne Pan, thou god of shepheards
all,
Which of our tender lambkins takest keepe,
And when our flocks into mischance mought fall, Doest save from mischief the unwary
sheepe, 10
Als of their maisters hast no lesse regard Then of the flocks, which thou doest watch and ward:

'I thee besече (so be thou deigne to heare Rude ditties, tund to shepheards oaten reede,

Or if I ever sonet song so cleare
As it with pleasaunce mought thy fancie
feede)

Hearken awhile, from thy greene cabinet,
The rurall song of carefull Colinet.

' Whilome in youth, when flowrd my joyfull
spring,
Like swallow swift I wandred here and
there: 20

For heate of heedlesse lust me so did sting,
That I of doubted daunger had no feare.
I went the wastefull woodes and forest
wyde, Withouten dreade of wolves to bene espyed.

' I went to raunge amydde the mazie thickette,

And gather nuttes to make me Christmas
game;

And joyed oft to chace the trembling pricket,

Or hunt the hartlesse hare til shee were tame.

What reeked I of wintrye ages waste?
Tho deemed I, my spring would ever laste. 30

' How often have I sealed the craggie oke,
All to dislodge the raven of her nest!
Howe have I wearied, with many a stroke, The stately walnut tree, the while the
rest

Under the tree fell all for nuts at strife!
For ylike to me was libertee and lyfe.

' And for I was in thilke same looser yeares, (Whether the Muse so wrought me from my birth,

Or I to much beleaved my shepherd peres, Somedele ybent to song and musicks mirth, 40

A good olde shephearde, Wrenock was his
name,
Made me by arte more cunning in the
same.

' Fro thence I durst in derring doe compare With shepheards swayne what ever fedde in field:

And if that Hobbinol right judgement bare,
To Pan his owne selfe pype I neede not yield:

For if the flocking nymphes did folow Pan,
The wiser Muses after Colin ranne.

' But ah! such pryde at length was ill re-payde:

The shepheards god (perdie, god was he
none) 50

My hurtlesse pleasaunce did me ill up-
braide;

My freedome lorne, my life he left to
mone.

Love they him called that gave me checkmate,

But better mought they have behote him
Hate.

' Tho gan my lovely spring bid me farewell,
And sommer season sped him to display (For Love then in the Lyons house did
dwell)

The raging fyre that kindled at his ray.
A comett stird up that unkindly heate, That reigned (as men sayd) in Venus seate. 60

' Forth was I ledde, not as I went afore, When choise I had to choose my wandring waye,

But whether Luck and Loves unbridled lore Would leade me forth on Fancies bitte to playe.

The bush my bedde, the bramble was my
bowre,

The woodes can wnesse many a wofull
stowre.

' Where I was wont to seeke the honey bee, Working her formall rowmes in wexen
frame,

The grieslie todestoole growne there mought I se,

And loathed paddocks lording on the
same: 70

And where the chaunting birds luld me a
sleepe,

The ghastlie owle her grievous ynne doth
keepe.

' Then as the springe gives place to elder time,

And bringeth forth the fruite of sommers
pryde,

Also my age, now passed youngthly pryde,
To thinges of ryper reason selfe applyed,

And learnd of lighter timber cotes to
frame,

Such as might save my sheepe and me fro
shame.

'To make fine cages for the nightingale,
 And baskets of bulrushes, was my wont: 80
 Who to entrappe the fish in winding sale Was better seene, or hurtful beastes to hont ?
 I learned als the signes of heaven to ken, How Phœbe fayles, where Venus sittes and when.

'And tryed time yet taught me greater thinges:
 The sodain rysing of the raging seas, The soothe of byrds by beating of their wings,
 The power of herbes, both which can hurt and ease,
 And which be wont tenrage the restlesse
 sheepe,
 And which be wont to worke eternall
 sleepe. 90

'But ah, unwise and witlesse Colin Cloute !
 That kydst the hidden kinds of many a wede,
 Yet kydst not ene to cure thy sore hart roote,
 Whose rancckling wound as yet does rifelye
 bleede !
 Why livest thou stil, and yet hast thy deathes wound ?
 Why dyest thou stil, and yet alive art founde ?

'Thus is my sommer worne away and wasted,
 Thus is my harvest hastened all to rathe:
 The care that budded faire is burnt and blasted,
 And all my hoped gaine is turnd to scathe.
 Of all the seede that in my youth was sowne, 101
 Was nought but brakes and brambles to be mowne.

'My boughes with bloosmes that crowned were at firste,
 And promised of timely fruite such store, Are left both bare and barrein now at erst:
 The flattring fruite is fallen to grownd before,
 And rotted ere they were halfe mellow ripe:
 My harvest, wast, my hope away dyd wylc

'The fragrant flowres that in my garden grewe Bene withered, as they had bene gathered
 long: 110
 Theyr rootes bene dreyed up for lacke of dewe,
 Yet dewed with teares they han be ever among.
 Ah ! who has wrought my Rosalind this
 spight,
 To spil the flowres that should her girlond
 dight ?

'And I, that whilome wont to frame my pype Unto the shifting of the shepheards foote, Sike follies nowe have gathered as too
 ripe,
 And cast hem out as rotten and unsoote.
 The loser lasse I cast to please nomore:
 One if I please, enough is me therefore. 120

'And thus of all my harvest hope I have Nought reaped but a weedye crop of care:
 Which, when I thought have thresht in swelling sheave, Coekel for corne, and chaffe for barley,
 bare.
 Soone as the chaffe should in the fan be
 fynd,
 All was blowne away of the wavering wynd.

'So now my yeare drawes to his latter terme,
 My spring is spent, my sommer burnt up quite,
 My harveste hasts to stirre up Winter
 sterne,
 And bids him clayme with rigorous rage hys right: 130
 So nowe he stormes with many a sturdy
 stoure,
 So now his blustering blast eche coste doth scoure.

'The carefull cold hath nypt my rugged rynde,
 And in my face deepe furrowes eld hath
 pight:
 My head besprent with hoary frost I fynd,
 And by myne eie the crow his clawe dooth wright.
 Delight is layd abedde, and pleasure past;
 No sonne now shines, cloudes han all overcast.

'Now leave, ye shepheards boyes, your merry glee;
My Muse is hoarse and weary of thys stounde:

Here will I hang my pype upon this tree;¹⁴⁰
Was never pype of reede did better sounde.
Winter is come, that blowes the bitter blaste,
And after winter dreerie death does hast.

'Gather ye together, my little flocke,
My little flock, that was to me so liefe:
Let me, ah! lette me in your folds ye lock,
Ere the breme winter breede you greater grieve.

Winter is come, that blowes the balefull breath,¹⁴⁹
And after winter commeth timely death.

'Adieu, delightes, that lulled me asleepe; Adieu, my deare, whose love I bought so deare;

Adieu, my little lambes and loved sheepe; Adieu, ye woodes, that oft my witness were;

Adieu, good Hobbinol, that was so true:
Tell Rosalind her Colin bids her adieu.'

COLINS EMBLEME.

GLOSSE

Tityrus, Chaucer, as hath bene oft sayd.

Lambkins, young lambes.

Als of their semeth to expresse Virgils verse.

'Pan curat oves oviumque magistros.'

Deigne, voutehsafe.

Cabinet, Colinet, diminutives.

Mazie: For they be like to a maze whence it is hard to get out agayne.

Peres, felowes and companions.

Musick, that is poetry, as Terence sayth, ¹⁰
'Qui artem tractant musicam,' speaking of poetes.

Derring doe, aforesayd.

Lions house. He imagineth simply that Cupid, which is Love, had his abode in the whote signe Leo, which is in midst of somer; a pretie allegory, whereof the meaning is, that love in him wrought an extraordinarie heate of lust.

His ray, which is Cupides beame or flames of love. ²⁰

A comete, a blasing starre, meant of beautie, which was the cause of his whote love.

Venus, the goddesse of beauty or pleasure. Also a signe in heaven, as it is here taken. So he meaneth that beautie, which hath always aspect to Venus, was the cause of all his inquietnes in love.

Where I was, a fine discription of the change of hys lyfe and liking; for all things nowe seemed to hym to have altered their kindly ³⁰ course.

Lording: spoken after the maner of pad-docks and frogges sitting, which is indeed lordly, not removing nor looking once a side, unlesse they be sturred.

Then as: the second part. That is, his manhoode.

Cotes, sheepecotes: for such be the exercises of shepheards.

Sal, or salow, a kind of woodde like wyl-⁴⁰ low, fit to wreath and bynde in leapes to catch fish withall.

Phæbe fayles, the eclipse of the moone, which is always in Cauda or Capite Draconis, signes in heaven.

Venus, sc. Venus starre, otherwise called Hesperus, and Vesper, and Lucifer, both because he seemeth to be one of the brightest starres, and also first ryseth, and setteth last. All which skill in starres being convenient ⁵⁰ for shepheards to knowe, Theocritus and the rest use.

Raging seas. The cause of the swelling and ebbing of the sea commeth of the course of the moone, sometime encreasing, sometime wayning and decreasing.

Sooth of byrdes, a kind of sooth saying used in elder tymes, which they gathered by the flying of byrds: first (as is sayd) invented by the Thuscanes, and from them derived to the ⁶⁰ Romanes, who, (as is sayd in Livie) were so superstitiously rooted in the same, that they agreed that every noble man should pnt his sonne to the Thuscanes, by them to be brought up in that knowledge.

Of herbes: That wonderous thinges be wrought by herbes, aswell appeareth by the common working of them in our bodies, as also by the wonderfull enchantments and sorceries that have bene wrought by them; insomuch ⁷⁰ that it is sayde that Circe, a famous sorceresse, turned men into sondry kinds of beastes and monsters, and onely by herbes: as the poete sayth,

'Dea sæva potentibus herbis,' &c.

Kidst, knewest.

Eare, of corne.

Scathe, losse, hinderance.

Ever among, ever and anone.

Thus is my, the thyrd part, wherein is set ⁸⁰ forth his ripe yeres as an untimely harvest, that bringeth little fruite.

The fragrant floures, sundry studies and laudable partes of learning, wherein how our poete is seene, be they witsnesse, which are privie to his study.

So now my yeere, the last part, wherein is described his age, by comparison of wyntrye stormes.

Carefull cold, for care is sayd to coole the blood.

Glee, mirth.

Hoary frost, a metaphore of hoary heares scattered lyke to a gray frost.

Breeme, sharpe and bitter.

Adiew delights is a conclusion of all, where in sixe verses he comprehendeth briefly all that was touched in this booke. In the first verse his delights of youth generally: in the second, the love of Rosalind: in the thyrde, the keeping of sheepe, which is the argument of all Æglogues: in the fourth, his complaints: and in the last two, his professed friendship and good will to his good friend Hobbinoll.

EMBLEME.

The meaning wherof is, that all thinges perish and come to theyr last end, but workes of learned wits and monuments of poetry abide for ever. And therefore Horace of his Odes, a work though ful indede of great wit and learning, yet of no so great weight and importance, boldly sayth,

'Exegi monumentum ære perennius, Quod nec imber [edax], nec aquilo vorax,' &c.

Therefore let not be envied, that this poete in his Epilogue sayth, he hath made a Calendar that shall endure as long as time, &c., folowing the ensample of Horace and Ovid in the like.

'Grande opus exegi, quod nec Jovis ira, nec ignis, Nec ferrum poterit nec edax abolere vetustas,' &c.

LOE! I have made a Calender for every yeare,

That steele in strength, and time in durance, shall outweare:

And if I marked well the starres revolution,
It shall continewe till the worlds dissolution,

To teach the ruder shepheard how to feede his sheepe,

And from the falsers fraud his folded flocke to keepe.

Goe, lyttle Calender! thou hast a free passeporte:

Goe but a lowly gate emongste the meaner sorte:

Dare not to match thy pype with Tityrus hys style,

Nor with the Pilgrim that the Ploughman playde awhyle:

But followe them farre off, and their high steppes adore:

The better please, the worse despise; I aske no more.

MERCE NON MERCEDE.

THE PRINTER TO THE GENTLE READER

SINCE my late setting foorth of the Faerie Queene, finding that it hath found a favourable passage amongst you, I have sithence endeouored by all good meanes (for the better encrease and accomplishment of your delights,) to get into my handes such smale poemcs of the same authors as I heard were disperst abroad in sundrie hands, and not easie to bee come by, by himselfe; some of them having bene diverslie imbeziled and purloyned from him, since his departure over sea. Of the which I have by good meanes gathered together these fewe parcels present, which I have caused to bee imprinted altogether, for that they al seeme to containe like matter of argument in them, being all complaints and meditations of the worlds vanitie, verie grave and profitable. To which effect I understand that he besides wrote sundrie others, namelie, Ecclesiastes and Canticum Canticorum translated, A Senights Slumber, The Hell of Lovers, his Purgatorie, being all dedicated to ladies, so as it may seeme he ment them all to one volume: besides some other pamphlets looselie scattered abroad: as The Dying Pellican, The Howers of the Lord, The Sacrifice of a Sinner, The Seven Psalmes, &c., which when I can either by himselfe or otherwise attaine too, I meane likewise for your favour sake to set foorth. In the meane time, praying you gentlie to accept of these, and graciouslie to entertaine the 'new poet,' I take leave.

[Though Complaints was not published till 1591, a year after the first issue of the Faery Queen, the poems of which it is composed are more properly to be classed with the Shepherd's Calendar. Most of them might have been printed, though perhaps not exactly as they now stand, before 1580; the others are best understood in company with these. The Calendar and Complaints, indeed, taken together, are the record of Spenser's growth to maturity.

The circumstances of the publication are very oddly confused. In the opening address the credit for the whole enterprise is assumed by 'the Printer,' Ponsonby, who, we are told, hunted the poems out and made up and issued the volume by his own efforts. This work, we gather, was mainly prosecuted after the poet's 'departure over sea'—his return, that is, to Ireland early in 1591. And the volume certainly was published after his 'departure.' Yet we know that it had been made ready for printing while he was still in England. It appears on the Stationers' Register for December 29, 1590, as approved by one of the official censors: at that time, therefore, the copy must have been at least approximately complete. Three of the poems, moreover, 'The Tears of the Muses,' 'Mother Hubbard's Tale,' and 'Mniopotmos,' the central poems of the volume, bear signs of having been prepared for the press by himself and issued individually — 'Mniopotmos' in 1590. The plausible address of 'the Printer,' in fine, is not wholly to be trusted. What, then, is to be made of it? According to Dr. Grosart, it was devised by the poet as a blind, in the manner of Swift. For such a device one seeks a reason. May this be that, as, in 1579 (by the first letter to Harvey), he was shy of 'seeming to utter his writings for gaine and commoditie,' so now, but a year after the issue of the Faery Queen, he was loth to accept the full responsibility of a second considerable volume? Any account of the publication, however, must be very largely conjectural.

The chronology of the poems is less in doubt. Though two or three of them are somewhat hard to place, the majority can at least be grouped in certain main periods with reasonable probability. First of all is the group that belongs to his university days, 1570-1576, and his subsequent sojourn in Lancashire: 'The Visions of Petrarch,' 'The Visions of Bellay,' 'Ruins of Rome,' and, perhaps, 'Visions of the World's Vanity.' Following upon these days is what may loosely be called his first London period, during which, until it ended with his departure for Ireland in 1580, his headquarters were probably in the capital. These three years were of marked literary activity. To them belong most, if not all, of the Calendar, and presumably the greater number of his so-called 'lost works,' besides the beginnings of the Faery Queen; to them belong also some of the most important 'complaints,' 'Virgil's Gnat,' 'Mother Hubbard's Tale,' and, less certainly, 'The Tears of the Muses.' Then follow the years of service in Ireland, till Raleigh brought him back in 1589. During this period he would seem to have given his leisure for poetry almost exclusively to the Faery Queen. Of the two remaining 'complaints,' 'The Ruins of Time' was written shortly after his return to England, and 'Mniopotmos' perhaps at about the same time.

'The Ruins of Time' and 'Mniopotmos' were composed not long before publication and probably needed no retouching. 'Mother Hubbard's Tale' and 'The Tears of the Muses,' early poems, were to some extent revised for the press. The others, one may think, were allowed to appear as first finished, or were at most but casually retouched. For, from the general tenor of his output, one infers that Spenser was not very sedulous in the revision of work once completed, and these poems were relatively unimportant—all but one, translations. They are not, like their companions, dedicated to people alive and influential in 1590: their chief function, indeed, would seem to be to fill out the volume. If Ponsoby really had a share in the collecting of Complaints, it must have been these, or some of them, that he gathered.

To the reader of Complaints one name recurs more frequently than others, that of Joachim Du Bellay, who, from 1549 to his early death in 1560, was one of the leaders of the new school of poetry in France. From him Spenser translated 'The Visions of Bellay' and 'Ruins of Rome,' and from him chiefly he must have acquired those poetic theories of the Pléiade which are the staple of 'The Tears of the Muses.' Du Bellay is a personality of great attractiveness. Not so distinguished an artist as his colleague Ronsard, he had qualities of mind and character that win us more: dignity untouched by arrogance, guarded from it by native sense of fitness, the distinction of a finely congruous nature; in especial, a singularly penetrating and human melancholy. On any Elizabethan author of a volume of 'complaints' his influence might be among the deepest of that day. It is noteworthy, however, that his really central work, the Régrets, does not seem to have touched Spenser at all. And indeed, the 'life-long vein of melancholy' which Dr. Grosart detects in 'the newe poete' must have been, at best, rather thin. His elegies are hardly convincing. When he strikes the note of personal disappointment, his verse occasionally betrays a feeling akin to sadness, but the bulk of his really characteristic and genuine work is anything but sad. In the Faery Queen one may search far and wide, in vain, for a touch of that peculiar feeling which pervades the romance-epic of the genuinely melancholy Tasso. His most constant mood would seem rather to have been a serenity neither sad nor cheerful. In any case, one will not infer his temperament from the professed melancholy of his earlier work. That much of the Calendar is gloomy, that he wrote a whole volume of 'complaints,' was to have been expected: work in that vein was a convention of the days into which he was born. The cosmopolitan pastoral invited, if it did not impose, a strain of lamentation, and in England, since the days of Sir Thomas Wyatt, love-poetry in the manner and tone of the plaintive Petrarch, meditations upon the vanity of life, elegies, stories of the falls of the mighty had formed, in good measure, the staple of serious poetry. Spenser's early work but continues a convention already well established.]

THE RUINES OF TIME

DEDICATED

TO THE RIGHT NOBLE AND BEAUTIFULL LADIE, THE LADIE MARIE
COUNTESS OF PEMBROOKE

MOST honourable and bountifull Ladie, there bee long sithens deepe sowed in my brest the seede of most entire love and humble affection unto that most brave knight, your noble brother deceased; which taking roote began in his life time somewhat to bud forth, and to shew themselves to him, as then in the weakenes of their first spring: and would in their ripper strength (had it pleased High God till then to drawe out his daies) spired forth fruit of more perfection. But since God hath disdeigned the world of that most noble spirit, which was the hope of all learned men, and the patron of my young Muses; together with him both their hope of anie further fruit was cut off, and also the tender delight of those their first blossoms nipped and quite dead. Yet sithens my late cumming into England, some frends of mine (which might much prevaile with me, and indeede commaund me) knowing with howe straight bandes of duetie I was tied to him, as also bound unto that noble house, (of which the chiefe hope then rested in him) have sought to revive them by upbraiding me, for that I have not shewed anie thankfull remembrance towards him or any of them, but suffer their names to sleep in silence and forgetfulness. Whome chiefflie to satisfie, or els to avoide that fowle blot of unthankfulness, I have conceived this small poeme, intituled by a generall name of The Worlds Ruines: yet speciallie intended to the renoming of that noble race, from which both you and he sprong, and to the eternizing of some of the chiefe of them late deceased. The which I dedicate unto your Ladiship as whome it most speciallie concerneth, and to whome I acknowledge my selfe bounden, by manie singular favours and great graces. I pray for your honourable happinesse: and so humble kisse your handes.

Your Ladiships ever humble at commaund,

E. S.

['The Ruins of Time' is mainly official verse, melodious and uninspired. It is the one poem of the volume confessedly written to order—confessedly, in the frank and dignified letter of dedication. Had Sidney alone been Spenser's theme, or Sidney and Leicester, both his early patrons, this poem might perhaps have been comparable with Daphnaida, but the great house to which they belonged having recently lost other distinguished members besides, Spenser saw fit to undertake a sort of necrology of the Dudleys, and the issue was perfunctoriness. Perhaps he was busy with other matters. Perhaps, too, as some have inferred, he built his poem up in good part of earlier material. It certainly is composite and ill-digested, and the device of the 'visions' clearly harks back to the days of his artistic apprenticeship. If he did take recourse to his early manuscripts, he may possibly have helped himself with Stemmata Dudleiana, mentioned in the postscript of the second letter to Harvey. On these points, however, we have ground for nothing more definite than surmise.]

THE RUINES OF TIME

It chaunced me on day beside the shore
Of silver streaming Thamesis to bee, Nigh where the goodly Verlaune stood of
yore,

Of which there now remaines no memorie, Nor anie little monument to see,
By which the travailer that fares that way
This once was she may warned be to say.

There on the other side, I did behold
A woman sitting sorrowfullie wailing, Rending her yeolow locks, like wyrie golde About her shoulders careleslie downe trail-

ing,
And streames of teares from her faire eyes forth railing.

In her right hand a broken rod she held,
Which towards heaven shee seemd on high to weld.

Whether she were one of that rivers nymphes,

Which did the losse of some dere love la-
ment,

I doubt; or one of those three fatall impes Which draw the dayes of men forth in extent;

Or th' auncient genius of that citie brent;
But seeing her so piteouslie perplexed,
I (to her calling) askt what her so vexed.

'Ah! what delight,' quoth she, 'in earthlie thing, Or comfort can I, wretched creature, have?
Whose happines the heavens envying,
From highest staire to lowest step me drave,
And have in mine owne bowels made my grave,
That of all nations now I am forlorne,
The worlds sad spectacle, and Fortunes scorene.'

Much was I mooved at her piteous plaint,
And felt my heart nigh riven in my brest ³⁰
With tender ruth to see her sore constraint;
That shedding teares a while I still did rest,
And after did her name of her request.
'Name have I none,' quoth she, 'nor anie being, Bereft of both by Fates unjust decreeing.

'I was that citie which the garland wore Of Britaines pride, delivered unto me
By Romane victors, which it womne of yore; Though nought at all but ruines now I bee,
And lye in mine owne ashes, as ye see: ⁴⁰ Verlaine I was; what bootes it that I was, Sith now I am but weedes and wastfull gras?

'O vaine worlds glorie, and unstedfast state
Of all that lives on face of sinfull earth!
Which from their first untill their utmost date Tast no one hower of happines or merth,
But like as at the ingate of their berth
They crying creep out of their mothers woomb, So wailing backe go to their wofull toomb.

'Why then dooth flesh, a bubble glas of breath, ⁵⁰ Hunt after honour and advauncement vaine,
And reare a trophee for devouring death
With so great labour and long lasting paine,
As if his daies for ever should remaine?
Sith all that in this world is great or gaie Doth as a vapour vanish, and decaie.

'Looke backe, who list, unto the former ages,
And call to count, what is of them become:
Where be those learned wits and antique sages,
Which of all wisdomes knew the perfect somme? ⁶⁰

Where those great warriors, which did over-comme
The world with conquest of their might and
maine,
And made one aneare of th' earth and of their raine?

'What nowe is of th' Assyrian Lyonesse, Of whome no footing now on earth ap-
peares?
What of the Persian Beares outrageous-
nesse,
Whose memorie is quite worne out with
yeares?
Who of the Grecian Libbard now ought
heares,
That overran the East with greedie powre, And left his whelps their kingdomes to de-voure? ⁷⁰

'And where is that same great seven headded beast,
That made all nations vassals of her pride,
To fall before her feete at her behest, And in the necke of all the world did ride?
Where doth she all that wondrous welth nowe hide?
With her own weight down pressed now shee lies,
And by her heaps her hugeness testifies.

'O Rome, thy ruine I lament and rue,
And in thy fall my fatall overthrowe, That whilom was, whilst heavens with equall vewe ⁸⁰ Deignd to behold me, and their gifts bestowe,
The picture of thy pride in pompous shew:
And of the whole world as thou wast the empresse,
So I of this small Northerne world was princesse.

'To tell the beawtie of my buildings fayre, Adorn'd with purest golde and precious stone,
To tell my riches, and endowments rare, That by my foes are now all spent and gone,
To tell my forces, matchable to none, Were but lost labour, that few would be-leeve, ⁹⁰
And with rehearsing would me more agreeve.

‘High towers, faire temples, goodly theaters,
 Strong walls, rich porches, princelie pallaces, Large streetes, brave houses, sacred sepulchers,
 Sure gates, sweete gardens, stately galleries Wrought with faire pillours, and fine imageries,
 All those (O pitie!) now are turnd to dust,
 And overgrown with blacke oblivions rust.

‘Thereto, for warlike power and peoples
 store,
 In Britannie was none to match with mee,
 That manie often did abie full sore: 101
 Ne Troynovant, though elder sister shee, With my great forces might compared
 bee;
 That stout Pendragon to his perill felt,
 Who in a siege seaven yeres about me dwelt.

‘But long ere this, Bouduca Britonnesse Her mightie hoast against my bulwarkes
 brought,
 Bouduca, that victorious conqueresse,
 That, lifting up her brave heroïck thought Bove womens weaknes, with the Romanes fought, 110
 Fought, and in field against them thrice prevailed:
 Yet was she foyled, when as she me assailed.

‘And though at last by force I conquered were
 Of hardie Saxons, and became their thrall, Yet was I with much bloodshed bought full deere,
 And prize with slaughter of their generall:
 The monument of whose sad funeral, For wonder of the world, long in me lasted;
 But now to nought, through spoyle of time, is wasted.

‘Wasted it is, as if it never were, 120
 And all the rest that me so honor made,
 And of the world admired ev’rie where,
 Is turnd to smoake, that doth to nothing
 fade;
 And of that brightnes now appears no
 shade,

But greislie shades, such as doo haunt in hell
 With fearfull fiends, that in deep darknes
 dwell.

‘Where my high steeples whilom usde to stand,
 On which the lordly faulcon wont to towre,
 There now is but an heap of lyme and sand,
 For the shriche-owle to build her balefull
 bowre: 130
 And where the nightingale wont forth to
 powre
 Her restles plaints, to comfort wakefull lovers,
 There now haunt yelling mewes and whining plovers.

‘And where the christall Thamis wont to slide
 In silver channell, downe along the lee, About whose flowrie bankes on either side A thousand nymphes, with mirthfull jollitee,
 Were wont to play, from all annoyance free,
 There now no rivers course is to be seene, But moorish fennes, and marshes ever
 greene. 140

‘Seemes that that gentle river, for great griefe
 Of my mishaps, which oft I to him plained,
 Or for to shunne the horrible mischiefe,
 With which he saw my cruell foes me pained,
 And his pure streames with guiltles blood oft stained,
 From my unhappie neighborhood farre fled,
 And his sweete waters away with him led.

‘There also where the winged ships were
 seene
 In liquid waves to cut their fomie waie, And thousand fishers numbred to have been, 150
 In that wide lake looking for plenteous praie
 Of fish, which they with baits usde to betraie,
 Is now no lake, nor anie fishers store,
 Nor ever ship shall saile there anie more.

‘They all are gone, and all with them is gone:
 Ne ought to me remaines, but to lament

My long decay, which no man els doth
mone,
And mourne my fall with dolefull dreriment.

Yet it is comfort in great languishment,
To be bemoaned with compassion kinde, ¹⁶⁰
And mitigates the anguish of the minde.

‘But me no man bewaileth, but in game, Ne sheddeth teares from lamentable eie:
Nor anie lives that mentioneth my name
To be remembred of posteritie, Save one, that maugre Fortunes injurie,
And Times decay, and Envies cruell tort,
Hath writ my record in true-seeming sort.

‘Cambden, the nourice of antiquitie,
And lanterne unto late succeeding age, ¹⁷⁰
To see the light of simple veritie Buried in ruines, through the great outrage
Of her owne people, led with warlike rage, Cambden, though Time all monuments obscure,
Yet thy just labours ever shall endure.

‘But whie (unhappie wight) doo I thus crie,
And grieve that my remembrance quite is raced
Out of the knowledge of posteritie,
And all my antique monuments defaced?
Sith I doo daillie see things highest placed, So soone as Fates their vitall thred have shorne, ¹⁸¹
Forgotten quite as they were never borne.

‘It is not long, since these two eyes beheld A mightie Prince, of most renowned rae, Whom England high in count of honour
held,
And greatest ones did sue to gaine his
grace;
Of greatest ones he greatest in his place,
Sate in the bosome of his Sovereaine, And Right and loyall did his word main-
taine.

‘I saw him die, I saw him die, as one ¹⁹⁰ Of the meane people, and brought fourth on beare;
I saw him die, and no man left to mone His dolefull fate that late him loved deare:
Searse anie left to close his eyelids neare; Searse anie left upon his lips to laie
The saered sod, or requiem to saie.

‘O trustlesse state of miserable men, That builde your blis on hope of earthly thing,
And vainly thinke your selves halfe happie then,
When painted faces with smooth flattering ing ²⁰⁰
Doo fawne on you, and your wide praises
sing,
And when the courting masker louteth
lowe,
Him true in heart and trustie to you trow!

‘All is but fained, and with oaker dide, That everie shower will wash and wipe
away,
All things doo change that under heaven abide,
And after death all friendship doth decaie.
Therefore, what ever man bearest worldlie
sway,
Living, on God and on thy selfe relie;
For when thou diest, all shall with thee die. ²¹⁰

‘He now is dead, and all is with him dead, Save what in heavens storehouse he up-laid:
His hope is faild, and come to passe his
dread,
And evill men (now dead) his deeds upbraid:
Spite bites the dead, that living never baid.
He now is gone, the whiles the foxe is crept
Into the hole the which the badger swept.

‘He now is dead, and all his glorie gone,
And all his greatnes vapoured to nought,
That as a glasse upon the water shone, ²²⁰ Which vanisht quite, so soone as it was sought:
His name is worne alreadie out of thought, Ne anie peet seekes him to revive;
Yet manie poets honourd him alive.

‘Ne doth his Colin, carelesse Colin Cloute, Care now his idle bagpipe up to raise,
Ne tell his sorrow to the listning rout Of shepherd groomes, which wont his songs to praise:
Praise who so list, yet I will him dispraise, Untill he quite him of this guiltie blame: ²³⁰ Wake, shepheard boy, at length awake for
shame!

‘And who so els did goodnes by him gaine,
 And who so els his bounteous minde did trie,
 Whether he shepheard be, or shepherds
 swaine,
 (For manie did, which doo it now denie) Awake, and to his song a part applie:
 And I, the whilest you mourne for his decease,
 Will with my mourning plaints your plaint increase.

‘He dyde, and after him his brother dyde, His brother prince, his brother noble peere, ²⁴⁰
 That whilst he lived was of none envyde,
 And dead is now, as living, counted deare, Deare unto all that true affection beare,
 But unto thee most deare, O dearest dame,
 His noble spouse and paragon of fame.

‘He, whilst he lived, happie was through thee,
 And, being dead, is happie now much more; Living, that lineked chaunst with thee to
 bee,
 And dead, because him dead thou dost adore
 As living, and thy lost deare love deplore. ²⁵⁰
 So whilst that thou, faire flower of chastitie, Dost live, by thee thy lord shall never die.

‘Thy lord shall never die, the whiles this verse
 Shall live, and surely it shall live for ever:
 For ever it shall live, and shall rehearse His worthie praise, and vertues dying never, Though death his soule doo from his bodie sever.
 And thou thy selfe herein shalt also live;
 Such grace the heavens doo to my verses give.

‘Ne shall his sister, ne thy father die, ²⁶⁰ Thy father, that good earle of rare renouwe,
 And noble patrone of weake povertie; Whose great good deeds, in country and in towne,
 Have purchast him in heaven an happie
 crowne;
 Where he now liveth in eternall blis,
 And left his sonne t’ ensue those steps of his.

‘He, noble bud, his grandsires livelie hayre, Under the shadow of thy countenance

Now ginnes to shoote up fast, and flourish
 fayre
 In learned artes and goodlie govern-aunce, ²⁷⁰
 That him to highest honour shall advaunce.
 Brave inne of Bedford, grow apace in bountie,
 And count of wisdomes more than of thy countie.

‘Ne may I let thy husbands sister die,
 That goodly ladie, sith she eke did spring
 Out of this stocke and famous familie, Whose praises I to future age doo sing,
 And fourth out of her happie womb ²⁸⁰
 bring
 The sacred brood of learning and ²⁸¹
 honour,
 In whom the heavens powrde all their gifts upon her. ²⁸⁰

‘Most gentle spirite breathed from above,
 Out of the bosome of the Makers blis,
 In whom all bountie and all vertuous
 love
 Appeared in their native propertis, And did enrich that noble breast of his With treasure passing all this worldes worth, Worthie of heaven it selfe, which brought it forth.

‘His blessed spirite, full of power divine And influence of all celestially grace, Loathing this sinfull earth and earthlie slime, ²⁹⁰
 Fled baek too soone unto his native place, Too soone for all that did his love embrace,
 Too soone for all this wretched world, whom he Robd of all right and true nobilitie.

‘Yet ere his happie soule to heaven went Out of this fleshlie goale, he did devise Unto his heavenlie Maker to present His bodie, as a spotles sacrifice;
 And chose, that guiltie hands of enemies Should powre forth th’ offering of his guilt-les blood: ³⁰⁰
 So life exchanging for his countries good.

‘O noble spirite, live there ever blessed,
 The worlds late wonder, and the heavens new joy,

Live ever there, and leave me here distressed With mortall cares, and cumbrous worlds anoy.

But where thou dost that happines enjoy,
Bid me, O bid me quicklie come to thee, That happie there I maie thee alwaies
see.

‘Yet, whilst the Fates affoord me vitall
breath,

I will it spend in speaking of thy praise, ³¹⁰
And sing to thee, untill that timelie death By heavens doome doo ende my earthlie
daies:

Thereto doo thou my humble spirite raise,
And into me that sacred breath inspire, Which thou there breathest perfect and entire.

‘Then will I sing; but who can better
sing

Than thine owne sister, peerles ladie bright, Which to thee sings with deep harts sorrow-
ing,

Sorrowing tempered with deare delight,
That her to heare I feele my feeble spright Robbed of sense, and ravished with joy: ³²¹ O sad joy, made of mourning and anoy!

‘Yet will I sing; but who can better sing, Than thou thy selfe, thine owne selves valiance,

That, whilst thou livedst, madest the forrests ring,
And fields resownd, and flockes to leap and daunce,

And shepherds leave their lambs unto mis-chance,

To runne thy shrill Arcadian pipe to heare:
O happie were those dayes, thrice happie
were!

‘But now more happie thou, and wretched wee, ³³⁰

Which want the wonted sweetnes of thy voice,

Whiles thou now in Elisian fields so free, With Orpheus, and with Linus, and the choise

Of all that ever did in rimes rejoyce, Conversest, and doost heare their heavenlie
layes,

And they heare thine, and thine doo better
praise.

‘So there thou livest, singing evermore,
And here thou livest, being ever song
Of us, which living loved thee afore, And now thee worship, mongst that blessed throng ³⁴⁰

Of heavenlie poets and heroes strong.
So thou both here and there immortall
art,
And everie where through excellent desart.

‘But such as neither of themselves can
sing,

Nor yet are sung of others for reward,
Die in obscure oblivion, as the thing Which never was, ne ever with regard Their names shall of the later age be heard,
But shall in rustie darknes ever lie, Unles they mentioend be with infamie. ³⁵⁰

‘What booteth it to have been rich alive?
What to be great? what to be gracious?
When after death no token doth survive
Of former being in this mortall hous,
But sleeps in dust dead and inglorious, Like beast, whose breath but in his nos-trels is,
And hath no hope of happinesse or blis.

‘How manie great ones may remembred be,
Which in their daies most famouslie did florish,

Of whome no word we heare, nor signe now see, ³⁶⁰

But as things wipt out with a sponge to-perishe,

Because they, living, cared not to cherishe
No gentle wits, through pride or covetize, Which might their names for ever memorize!

‘Provide therefore (ye princes) whilst ye live,

That of the Muses ye may friended bee, Which unto men eternitie do give;

For they be daughters of Dame Memorie And Jove, the father of Eternitie,

And do those men in golden thrones repose,
Whose merits they to glorifie do chose. ³⁷¹

‘The seven fold yron gates of grislie Hell,
And horrid house of sad Proserpina,
They able are with power of mightie spell To breake, and thence the soules to bring awaie

Out of dread darknesse to eternall day.

And them immortall make, which els would die

In foule forgetfulnesse, and nameles lie.

'So whilome raised they the puissant brood Of golden girt Alcmena, for great merite, Out of the dust to which the Oetaean wood Had him consum'd, and spent his vitall spirite,

To highest heaven, where now he doth inherite ³⁸²

All happinesse in Hebes silver bowre, Chosen to be her dearest paramoure.

'So raise they eke faire Ledaes warlick twinnes,
And interchanged life unto them lent, That, when th' one dies, th' other then beginnes

To shew in heaven his brightnes orient;
And they, for pittie of the sad wayment, ³⁹⁰ Which Orpheus for Eurydice did make,
Her back againe to life sent for his sake.

'So happie are they, and so fortunate, Whom the Pierian sacred sisters love,
That freed from bands of impacable fate,
And power of death, they live for aye
above,

Where mortall wreakes their blis may not remove:

But with the gods, for former vertues
meede,

On nectar and ambrosia do feede.

'For deeds doe die, how ever noble donne, And thoughts of men do as themselves
decay,

But wise wordes taught in numbers for to runne, ⁴⁰¹

Recorded by the Muses, live for ay, Ne may with storming showers be washt
away;

Ne bitter breathing windes with harmfull
blast,

Nor age, nor envie, shall them ever wast.

'In vaine doo earthly princes then, in vaine, Seeke with pyramides, to heaven aspired,
Or huge colosses, built with costlie paine,
Or brasen pillours, never to be fired, ⁴¹⁰ Or shrines, made of the mettall most desired,

To make their memories for ever live:
For how can mortall immortalitie give?

'Such one Mausolus made, the worlds great wonder,

But now no remnant doth thereof remaine: Such one Marcellus, but was torne with thunder:

Such one Lisippus, but is worne with raine: Such one King Edmond, but was rent for
gaine.

All such vaine moniments of earthlie masse, Devour'd of Time, in time to nought doo passe. ⁴²⁰

'But Fame with golden wings aloft doth
flie,

Above the reach of ruinous decay,
And with brave plumes doth beate the azure skie,

Admir'd of base-borne men from farre
away:

Then who so will with vertuous deeds assay
To mount to heaven, on Pegasus must ride,
And with sweete poets verse be glorifide.

'For not to have been dipt in Lethe lake Could save the sonne of Thetis from to die;
But that blinde bard did him immortall make ⁴³⁰

With verses, dipt in dew of Castalie: Which made the Easterne conquerour to
crie,

O fortunate yong-man, whose vertue found
So brave a trompe thy noble acts to sound!

'Therefore in this halfe happie I doo read Good Melibæ, that hath a poet got To sing his living praises being dead, Deserving never here to be forgot, In spight of envie, that his deeds would spot:

Since whose decease, learning lies unregarded, ⁴⁴⁰

And men of armes doo wander unrewarded.

'Those two be those two great calamities, That long agoe did grieve the noble spright Of Salomon with great indignities;
Who whilome was alive the wisest wight:
But now his wisdom is disprooved quite:
For he that now welds all things at his will Scorns th' one and th' other in his deeper
skill.

'O grieve of griefes! O gall of all good heartes!

To see that vertue should dispised bee ⁴⁵⁰

Of him that first was raise for vertuous parts,
And now, broad spreading like an aged tree,
Lets none shoot up, that nigh him planted
bee.
O let the man of whom the Muse is scorned,^b Nor alive nor dead, be of the Muse adorned !

‘ O vile worlds trust, that with such vaine illusion
Hath so wise men bewiteht and overkest, That they see not the way of their confusion !
O vainesse to be added to the rest, That do my soule with inward grieffe infest !⁴⁶⁰
Let them behold the piteous fall of mee,
And in my case their owne ensample see.

‘ And who so els that sits in highest seate
Of this worlds glorie, worshipped of all, Ne feareth change of time, nor fortunes
threate,
Let him behold the horror of my fall,
And his owne end unto remembrance call;
That of like ruine he may warned bee,
And in himselfe be moov’d to pittie mee.’

Thus having ended all her piteous plaint,⁴⁷⁰
With dolefull shrikes shee vanished away, That I, through inward sorrowe wexen
faint,
And all astonished with deepe dismay
For her departure, had no word to say; But sate long time in sencelesse sad af-fright,
Looking still, if I might of her have sight.

Which when I missed, having looked long,
My thought returned greeved home againe, Renewing her complaint with passion
strong,
For ruth of that same womans piteous paine;⁴⁸⁰
Whose wordes recording in my troubled
braine,
I felt such anguish wound my feeble heart,
That frozen horror ran through everie
part.

So inlie greeving in my groning brest,
And deepe lie mizing at her doubtfull
speach,

Whose meaning much I labored fourth to wreste,
Being above my slender reasons reach,
At length, by demonstration me to teach,
Before mine eies strange sights presented
were,
Like tragiecke pageants seeming to appeare.

I

I saw an image, all of massie gold,⁴⁹¹ Placed on high upon an altare faire, That all which did the same from farre beholde Might worship it, and fall on lowest staire.
Not that great idoll might with this com-
paire,
To which th’ Assyrian tyrant would have made
The holie brethren falslie to have praid.

But th’ altare on the which this image staid
Was (O great pitie!) built of brickle clay,
That shortly the foundation decaid,⁵⁰⁰ With showres of heaven and tempests worne away:
Then downe it fell, and low in ashes lay, Scorned of everie one which by it went;
That I, it seing, dearelie did lament.

II

Next unto this a statelie towre appeared, Built all of richest stone that might bee
found,
And nigh unto the heavens in height up-reared,
But placed on a plot of sandie ground:
Not that great towre which is so much renownd

For tongues confusion in Holie Writ,⁵¹⁰ King Ninus worke, might be compar’d to it.

But O vaine labours of terrestriall wit, That buidles so stronglie on so frayle a
soyle,
As with each storme does fall away and flit,
And gives the fruit of all your travailes
toyle,
To be the pray of Tyme, and Fortunes
spoyle !
I saw this towre fall sodainlie to dust,
That nigh with grieffe thereof my heart was brust.

III

Then did I see a pleasant paradize, Full of sweete flowres and daintiest delights, 520
 Such as on earth man could not more devise,
 With pleasures choyce to feed his cheerefull
 sprights:
 Not that which Merlin by his magicke slights
 Made for the gentle Squire, to entertaine His fayre Belphebe, could this gardine staine.

But O short pleasure bought with lasting
 paine!

Why will hereafter anie flesh delight
 In earthlie blis, and joy in pleasures vaine, Since that I sawe this gardine wasted quite,
 That where it was scarce seemed anie
 sight? 530

That I, which once that beautie did beholde, Could not from teares my melting eyes withholde.

IV

Soone after this a giaunt came in place, Of wondrous power, and of exceeding stature,

That none durst vewe the horror of his face; Yet was he milde of speach, and meeke of nature.

Not he, which in despite of his Creatour With railing tearmes defied the Jewish hoast, Might with this mightie one in hugenes boast.

For from the one he could to th' other coast 540
 Stretch his strong thighe, and th' ocean overstride,

And reach his hand into his enemies hoast.
 But see the end of pompe and fleshlie pride:
 One of his feete unwares from him did
 slide,
 That downe hee fell into the deepe abisse, Where drownd with him is all his earthlie blisse.

V

Then did I see a bridge, made all of golde, Over the sea from one to other side, Withouten prop or pillour it t' upholde, But like the coulored rainbowe arched wide: 550

Not that great arche which Trajan edifide,
 To be a wonder to all age ensuing,
 Was matchable to this in equall vewing.

But ah! what bootes it to see earthlie thing
 In glorie or in greatnes to excell, Sith time doth greatest things to ruine
 bring?

This goodlie bridge, one foote not fastned
 well, Gan faile, and all the rest downe shortlie
 fall,

Ne of so brave a building ought remained,
 That griefe thereof my spirite greatly pained. 560

VI

I saw two beares, as white as anie milke, Lying together in a mightie cave, Of milde aspect, and haire as soft as silke,

That salvage nature seemed not to have,
 Nor after greedie spoyle of blood to crave:
 Two fairer beasts might not elsewhere be
 found,

Although the compast world were sought
 around.

But what can long abide above this ground
 In state of blis, or stedfast happinesse?
 The cave in which these beares lay sleeping
 sound 570

Was but earth, and with her owne weighti-
 nesse

Upon them fell, and did unwares oppresse; That, for great sorrow of their sudden fate,

Henceforth all worlds felicitie I hate.

¶ Much was I troubled in my heavie
 spright,
 At sight of these sad spectacles forepast,
 That all my senses were bereaved quight,
 And I in minde remained sore agast, Distraught twixt feare and pitie; when at last

I heard a voyce, which loudly to me called, 580
 That with the suddein shrill I was appalled.

'Behold,' said it, 'and by ensample see,
 That all is vanitie and griefe of minde.'

Ne other comfort in this world can be,
 But hope of heaven, and heart to God inclinde;
 For all the rest must needs be left behinde,⁷
 With that it bad me to the other side To cast mine eye, where other sights I spide.

I

Upon that famous rivers further shore, There stood a snowie swan, of heavenly hiew 590
 And gentle kinde, as ever fowle afore;
 A fairer one in all the goodlie crew Of white Strimonian brood might no man
 view:
 There he most sweetly sung the prophecie
 Of his owne death in dolefull elegie.

At last, when all his mourning melodie He ended had, that both the shores resounded,
 Feeling the fit that him forewarnd to die, With loftie flight above the earth he bounded,
 And out of sight to highest heaven mounted, 600
 Where now he is become an heavenly signe:
 There now the joy is his, here sorrow mine.

II

Whilst thus I looked, loe ! adowne the lee I sawe an harpe, stroong all with silver twyne,
 And made of golde and costlie yvorie, Swimming, that whilome seemed to have been
 The harpe on which Dan Orpheus was
 seene Wylde beasts and forrests after him to lead,
 But was th' harpe of Philisides now dead.

At length out of the river it was reard, 610
 And borne above the clondes to be divin'd, Whilst all the way most heavenly noyse was heard Of the strings, stirred with the warbling wind,
 That wrought both joy and sorrow in my
 mind:
 So now in heaven a signe it doth appeare,
 The Harpe well knowne beside the Northern Beare.

III

Soone after this I saw on th' other side
 A curious coffer made of heben wood,
 That in it did most precious treasure hide, Exceeding all this baser worldes good: 620 Yet through the overflowing of the flood
 It almost drowned was and done to nought, That sight thereof much griev'd my pensive
 thought.

At length, when most in perill it was
 brought,
 Two angels, downe descending with swift
 flight,
 Out of the swelling streame it lightly caught,
 And twixt their blessed armes it carried
 quight
 Above the reach of anie living sight:
 So now it is transform'd into that starre,
 In which all heavenly treasures locked are.

IV

Looking aside I saw a stately bed, 631 Adorned all with costly cloth of gold,
 That might for anie princes couche be red,
 And deckt with daintie flowres, as if it shold
 Be for some bride, her joyous night to hold:
 Therein a goodly virgine sleeping lay;
 A fairer wight saw never summers day.

I heard a voyce that called farre away,
 And her awaking bad her quickly dight,
 For lo ! her bridegrome was in readie ray To come to her, and seeke her loves de-
 light: 641
 With that she started up with cherefull
 sight;
 When suddenly both bed and all was gone,
 And I in languor left there all alone.

V

Still as I gazed, I beheld where stood A knight all arm'd, upon a winged steed,
 The same that was bred of Medusaes blood, On which Dan Perseus, borne of heavenly seed,
 The faire Andromeda from perill freed:
 Full mortally this knight ywounded was,
 That streames of blood fourth flowed on the gras. 651
 Yet was he deckt (small joy to him, alas !)
 With manie garlands for his victories,

And with rich spoyles, which late he did purchas Through brave atcheivements from his enemies:
 Fainting at last through long infirmities, He smote his steed, that straight to heaven
 him bore,
 And left me here his losse for to deplore.

VI

Lastly, I saw an arke of purest golde Upon a brazen pillour standing hie, ⁶⁶⁰ Which th' ashes seem'd of some great prince to hold,
 Enclosde therein for endles memorie
 Of him whom all the world did glorifie: Seemed the heavens with the earth did disagreee,
 Whether should of those ashes keeper bee.

At last me seem'd wing footed Mercurie, From heaven descending to appease their
 strife,
 The arke did beare with him above the
 skie,
 And to those ashes gave a second life, ⁶⁶⁹
 To live in heaven, where happines is rife:
 At which the earth did grieve exceedingly,
 And I for dole was almost like to die.

L'ENVOY

Immortall spirite of Philisides, Which now art made the heavens orna-
 ment,
 That whilome wast the worldes chiefst riches,
 Give leave to him that lov'de thee to lament
 His losse, by lacke of thee to heaven hent,
 And with last duties of this broken verse, Broken with sighes, to decke thy sable herse.

And ye, faire ladie, th' honor of your daies ⁶⁸⁰
 And glorie of the world, your high thoughts
 scorne,
 Vouchsafe this moniment of his last praise
 With some few silver dropping teares t' adorne:
 And as ye be of heavenlie off-spring borne,
 So unto heaven let your high minde aspire,
 And loath this drosse of sinfull worlds desire.

THE TEARES OF THE MUSES

LONDON

IMPRINTED FOR WILLIAM
 PONSONBIE, DWELLING IN PAULES CHURCHYARD AT THE SIGNE OF THE BISHOPS HEAD

1591

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE THE LADIE STRANGE

MOST brave and noble Ladie, the things that make ye so much honored of the world as ye bee, are such as (without my simple lines testimonie) are throughlie knowne to all men; namely, your excellent beutie, your vertuous behavior, and your noble match with that most honourable lord, the verie paterne of right nobilitie: but the causes for which ye have thus deserved of me to be honoured (if honour it be at all) are, both your particular bounties, and also some private bands of affinitye, which it hath pleased your Ladiship to acknowledge. Of which whenas I found my selfe in no part worthe, I devised this last slender affection to your Ladiship, and also to make the same universallie knowne to the world; that by honouring you they might know me, and by knowing me they might honor you. Vouchsafe, noble Lady, to accept this simple remembrance, though not worthy of your self, yet such as perhaps, by good acceptance therof, ye may hereafter cull out a more meet and memorable evidence of your own excellent deserts. So recommending the same to your Ladiships good liking, I humbly take leave.

Your Ladiships humbly ever

[To what period this poem may belong has been somewhat disputed. On the whole, it would seem, like 'Mother Hubbard's Tale,' to be early work revised, for though the allusions in the lament of Thalia refer that passage to 1589 or 1590, there are good grounds for believing that the poem first took form before 1580. Its doleful account of the state of literature, for instance, is quite at odds with that survey in Colin Clout's Come Home Again (of 1591) wherein Spenser deals so sympathetically with his fellow poets, and is not unlike in tone to various passages in the Calendar. One can hardly understand, moreover, how, in 1590, even as a matter of convention, he could take so dismal a view of English literature. In 1580, on the other hand, before Sidney, Greene, Marlowe, and their fellows of the first great generation had begun to write, when, Spenser himself excepted, Lyly with his Euphues was the one brilliant name in English letters, such a view is quite conceivable. The matter might be argued much further, to the same result.

The general tone of the poem, its mental attitude, cannot but impress a modern reader somewhat unpleasantly. The complaint that 'mightie peeres' no longer care for the immortality which only poets can confer, that poets and scholars, 'the learned,' are left without patronage, may be set down partly to a trying personal experience. The note of contempt, however, and of arrogance that one is glad to believe youthful, the complaint of universal vulgarity, the cry that Ignorance and Barbarism have quite laid waste the fair realm of the Muses — all this comes near, in the end, to seeming insufferable. If the Areopagus, the select literary club in which Sidney and Dyer and Fulke Greville, with perhaps Spenser himself, discussed the condition of English letters and planned great reforms, if this cénacle is fairly represented by 'The Tears of the Muses,' it must have been, one thinks, a more than usually supercilious clique of young radicals. Yet what may be distasteful in the poem is not so much the underlying opinions, which for 1579 or 1580 are quite intelligible, as the particular tone or mood. In this one almost suspects an echo of Ronsard. For in the great movement by which, thirty years before the Areopagus and in much the same way, the Pléiade endeavored to regenerate French literature, Ronsard is notably distinguished from his colleagues by an odd faculty for making their common views offensive or ridiculous. His rampant egotism and utter deficiency in the sense of humor hured him at times, like his greater descendant Victor Hugo, into strange extravagances. Now, the members of the Areopagus knew the poets of the Pléiade well, especially Ronsard and Du Bellay. They seem to have felt that their own problem in England was not unlike that which these men had met in France. In them they found ideals with which they sympathized, opinions which seemed to be of value for their own difficulties. That the poet was directly inspired of God (or the gods), that great men could obtain immortality from the poets alone, that poetry must go hand in hand with learning, that the arch enemy of the Muses was Ignorance, that poetry in their day languished because the great were given over to luxury and the vulgar would listen only to a horde of unlearned and base rhymesters, — these theories of the Pléiade and various precepts for the elevation of their own mother tongue to a place beside the tongues of Greece and Rome were caught at by the youthful members of the Areopagus with very lively interest. In the work of Spenser they may be traced unmistakably, chiefly in 'October,' 'The Ruins of Time,' and 'The Tears of the Muses.' This last, unhappily, voices them in a tone which, as so often in Ronsard and rarely in Du Bellay, makes sympathy quite impossible.]

THE TEARES OF THE MUSES

REHEARSE to me, ye sacred sisters nine,
The golden brood of great Apolloes wit, Those piteous plaints and sorowfull sad
tine,

Which late ye powred forth as ye did sit Beside the silver springs of Helicone, Making your musick of hart-breaking mone.

For since the time that Phœbus foolish
sonne, Ythundered through Joves avengefull
wrath,

For traversing the charret of the Sunne Beyond the compasse of his pointed path, Of you, his mournfull sisters, was lamented, 11
Such mournfull tunes were never since invented.

Nor since that faire Calliope did lose Her loved twinnes, the dearlings of her joy,
Her Palici, whom her unkindly foes,
The Fatall Sisters, did for spight destroy, Whom all the Muses did bewaile long space,
Was ever heard such waying in this place.

For all their groves, which with the heavenly noyses
Of their sweete instruments were wont to
sound, 20
And th' hollow hills, from which their silver voyses
Were wont redoubled echoes to rebound,

Did now rebound with nought but rufull cries,
And yelling shrieks throwne up into the skies.

The trembling streames which went in chanel cleare
To romble gently downe with murmur soft,
And were by them right tunefull taught to
beare
A bases part amongst their consorts oft,
Now forst to overflowe with brackish teares, With troublous noyse did dull their daintie cares. 30

The joyous nymphes and lightfoote faeries Which thether came to heare their musick
sweet,
And to the measure of their melodies Did learne to move their nimble shifting feete,
Now hearing them so heavily lament,
Like heavily lamenting from them went.

And all that els was wont to worke de-
light
Through the divine infusion of their skill, And all that els seemd faire and fresh in
sight,
So made by nature for to serve their will, 40
Was turned now to dismall heavinesse, Was turned now to dreadfull uglinesse.

Ay me! what thing on earth, that all thing breeds,
Might be the cause of so impatient plight?
What furie, or what feend with felon deeds Hath stirred up so mischievous despight?
Can griebe then enter into heavenly harts, And pierce immortall breasts with mortall smarts?

Vouchsafe ye then, whom onely it concernes,
To me those secret causes to display; 50
For none but you, or who of you it learns,
Can rightfully aread so dolefull lay.
Begin, thou eldest sister of the crew,
And let the rest in order thee ensew.

CLIO.

Heare, thou great Father of the Gods on
hie,
That most art dreaded for thy thunder
darts:

And thou our syre, that raigest in Castalie And Monnt Parnasse, the god of goodly arts:

Heare and behold the miserable state
Of us thy daughters, dolefull desolate. 60

Behold the fowle reproach and open shame,
The which is day by day unto us wrought
By such as hate the honour of our name, The foes of learning and each gentle
thought;
They, not contented us themselves to scorne, Doo seeke to make us of the world forlorne.

Ne onely they that dwell in lowly dust,
The sonnes of darknes and of ignorance;
But they whom thou, great Jove, by doome unjust 69
Didst to the type of honour earst advance;
They now, puft up with sdeignfull insolence, Despise the brood of blessed Sapience.

The seetaries of my celestial skill,
That wout to be the worlds chiefe orna-
ment,
And learned impes that wont to shoote up
still,
And grow to light of kingdomes government,
They underkeep, and with their spreading armes
Doo beat their buds, that perish through their harmes.

It most behoves the honorable race Of mightie peeres true wisdomes to sus-
taine, 80
And with their noble countenance to grace The learned forheads, without gifts or
gaine:
Or rather learnd themselves behoves to
bee;
That is the girlond of nobilitie.

But ah! all otherwise they doo esteeme Of th' heavenly gift of wisdomes influence,
And to be learned it a base thing deeme;
Base minded they that want intelligence: For God himselfe for wisdomes most is praised,
And men to God thereby are nighest raised.

But they doe onely strive themselves to raise 91
Through pompous pride, and foolish vanitie;

In th' eyes of people they put all their
praise,
And onely boast of armes and auncestrie:
But vertuous deeds, which did those armes first give
To their grandsyres, they care not to atchive.

So I, that doo all noble feates professe
To register, and sound in trump of gold, Through their bad dooings, or base slothfulnessse, Finde nothing worthie to be writ, or told:
For better farre it were to hide their names, 101
Than telling them to blazon out their blames.

So shall succeeding ages have no light
Of things forepast, nor monuments of time,
And all that in this world is worthie hight Shall die in darknesse, and lie hid in slime: Therefore I mourne with deep harts sorrow-
ing,
Because I nothing noble have to sing.

With that she raynd such store of streaming teares,
That could have made a stonie heart to weep, 110
And all her sisters rent their golden heares,
And their faire faces with salt humour steep.
So ended shee: and then the next anew Began her grievous plaint, as doth ensew.

MELPOMENE.

O who shall powre into my swollen eyes
A sea of teares that never may be dryde,
A brasen voice that may with shrilling cryes Pierce the dull heavens and fill the ayer
wide,
And yron sides that sighing may endure,
To waile the wretchednes of world impure? 120

Ah, wretched world! the den of wicked-
nesse,
Deformd with filth and fowle iniquitie; Ah, wretched world! the house of heavi-
nesse,
Fild with the wreacks of mortall miserie;
Ah, wretched world, and all that is therein!
The vassals of Gods wrath, and slaves of sin.

Most miserable creature under sky Man without understanding doth appeare;
For all this worlds affliction he thereby, And Fortunes freakes, is wisely taught to
beare: 130
Of wretched life the onely joy shee is,
And th' only comfort in calamities.

She armes the brest with constant patience Against the bitter throwes of dolours darts, She solaceth with rules of sapience The gentle minds, in midst of worldlie
smarts:
When he is sad, shee seeks to make him merie,
And doth refresh his sprights when they be verie.

But he that is of reasons skill bereft, And wants the staffe of wisdoms him to stay, 140
Is like a ship in midst of tempest left Withouten helme or pilot her to sway:
Full sad and dreadfull is that ships event:
So is the man that wants intendment.

Whie then doo foolish men so much despize
The precious store of this celestiall riches?
Why doo they banish us, that patronize
The name of learning? Most unhappie wretches!
The which lie drowned in deep wretchednes, Yet doo not see their owne unhappines. 150

My part it is and my professed skill
The stage with tragick buskin to adorne, And fill the scene with plaint and outeries shrill
Of wretched persons, to misfortune borne:
But none more tragick matter I can finde Than this, of men depriv'd of sense and minde.

For all mans life me seemes a tragedy,
Full of sad sights and sore catastrophees; First comming to the world with weeping
eye,
Where all his dayes, like dolorous tro-phees, 160
Are heapt with spoyles of fortune and of
feare,
And he at last laid forth on balefull beare

So all with rufull spectacles is fild, Fit for Megera or Persephone:

But I, that in true tragedies am skild,
The flowre of wit, finde nought to busie me:
Therefore I mourne, and pitifully mone, Because that mourning matter I have none.

Then gan she wofully to waile, and wring Her wretched hands in lamentable wise; 170
And all her sisters, thereto answering, Threw forth lowd shrieks and drierie dole-full cries.

So rested she: and then the next in rew
Began her grievous plaint, as doth ensew.

THALIA.

Where be the sweete delights of learnings treasure,
That wont with comick sock to beautifie
The painted theaters, and fill with pleasure
The listners eyes, and eares with melodie;
In which I late was wont to raine as queene, And maske in mirth with graces well be-scene? 180

O, all is gone! and all that goodly glee,
Which wont to be the glorie of gay wits,
Is layd abed, and no where now to see;
And in her roome unscenly Sorrow sits,
With hollow browes and greisly counte-
naunce,
Marring my joyous gentle dalliaunce.

And him beside sits ugly Barbarisme,
And brutish Ignorance, yerept of late
Out of dredd darknes of the deep abyssme, Where being bredd, he light and heaven does hate: 190

They in the mindes of men now tyrannize,
And the faire scene with rudenes foule disguize.

All places they with follie have possesst,
And with vaine toyes the vulgare enter-
taine;

But me have banished, with all the rest
That whilome wont to wait upon my traine, Fine Counterfesaunce and unhurtfull Sport, Delight and Laughter deckt in seemly sort.

All these, and all that els the comick stage With seasoned wit and goodly pleasance graced, 200

By which mans life in his likest image
Was limned forth, are wholly now defaced;

And those sweete wits which wont the like to frame
Are now despizd, and made a laughing game.

And he, the man whom Nature selfe had
made

To mock her selfe, and truth to imitate,
With kindly counter under mimick shade,
Our pleasant Willy, ah! is dead of late:
With whom all joy and jolly meriment
Is also deded, and in dolour drent. 210

In stead thereof scoffing Scurrilitie, And scornfull Follie with Contempt is crept, Rolling in rymes of shameles ribaudrie Without regard, or due decorum kept;
Each idle wit at will presumes to make,
And doth the learneds taske upon him take.

But that same gentle spirit, from whose pen Large streames of honnie and sweete nectar
flowe,

Scorning the boldnes of such base-borne men,

Which dare their follies forth so rashlie throwe, 220

Doth rather choose to sit in idle cell, Than so himselfe to mockerie to sell.

So am I made the servant of the manie, And laughing stocke of all that list to seorne,

Not honored nor cared for of anie;
But loath'd of losels as a thing forlorne: Therefore I mourne and sorrow with the
rest,

Untill my cause of sorrow be redrest.

Therewith she lowdly did lament and shriek Pouring forth streames of teares abundantly; 230

And all her sisters, with compassion like,
The breaches of her singulfs did supply.
So rested shee: and then the next in rew
Began her grievous plaint, as doth ensew.

EUTERPE.

Like as the dearling of the summers pryde, Faire Philomele, when winters stormie
wrath

The goodly fields, that earst so gay were dyde

In colours divers, quite despoyled hath,

All comfortlesse doth hide her chearlesse
head

During the time of that her widowhead: 240

So we, that earst were wont in sweet accord
All places with our pleasant notes to fill, Whilist favourable times did us afford Free libertie to chaunt our charmes at
will,

All comfortlesse upon the bared bow,
Like wofull culvers, doo sit wayling now.

For far more bitter storme than winters
stowre

The beantie of the world hath lately wasted,
And those fresh buds, which wont so faire to flowre,

Hath marred quite, and all their blossoms
blasted: 250

And those yong plants, which wont with fruit t' abound,

Now without fruite or leaves are to be
found.

A stonie coldnesse hath benumbd the sence
And livelie spirits of each living wight,
And dimd with darknesse their intelligence, Darknesse more than Cymerians daylie
night:

And monstrous Error, flying in the ayre, Hath mard the face of all that semed fayre.

Image of hellish horroure, Ignorance, 259 Borne in the bosome of the black abyссе,
And fed with Furies milke, for sustenance
Of his weake infancie, begot amisse
By yawning Sloth on his owne mother
Night;

So hee his sonnes both syre and brother
hight:

He, armd with blindnesse and with boldnes
stout,
(For blind is bold) hath our fayre light defaced;

And gathering unto him a ragged rout Of faunes and satyres, hath our dwellings raced,

And our chast bowers, in which all vertue rained,

With brutishnesse and beastlie filth hath stained. 270

The sacred springs of horsefoot Helicon, So oft bedewd with our learned layes,

And speaking streames of pure Castalion,
The famous witsnesse of our wonted praise, They trampled have with their fowle footings trade,
And like to troubled puddles have them made.

Our pleasant groves, which planted were with paines,
That with our musick wont so oft to ring,
And arbors sweet, in which the shepheards swaines

Were wont so oft their pastoralls to sing, They have cut downe, and all their plea-sance mard, 281
That now no pastorall is to bee hard.

In stead of them, fowle goblins and shriekowles

With fearfull howling do all places fill;
And feeble Echo now laments and howles,
The dreadfull accents of their outeries shrill.
So all is turned into wildernesses, Whilist Ignorance the Muses doth oppresse.

And I, whose joy was earst with spirit full
To teach the warbling pipe to sound aloft, My spirits now dismayd with sorrow dull, Doo mone my miserie in silence soft. 292
Therefore I mourne and waile incessantly, Till please the heavens affoord me remedy.

Therewith shee wayled with exceeding woe,
And pitious lamentation did make,
And all her sisters, seeing her doo soe,
With equall plaints her sorrowe did partake.
So rested shee: and then the next in rew
Began her grievous plaint, as doth ensew. 300

TERPSICHORE.

Who so hath in the lap of soft delight Beene long time ludd, and fed with pleasures
sweet,

Feareles through his own fault or Fortunes
spight,

To tumble into sorrow and regret,
Yf chauce him fall into calamitie, Findes greater burthen of his miserie.

So wee, that earst in joyance did abound,
And in the bosome of all blis did sit,
Like virgin queenes with laurell garlands croud,

For vertues meed and ornament of wit, 310

Sith Ignorance our kingdome did confound, Bee now become most wretched wightes on
ground.

And in our royall thrones, which lately
stood In th' hearts of men to rule them carefully,
He now hath placed his accursed brood,
By him begotten of fowle Infamy; Blind Error, scornfull Follie, and base
Spight,
Who hold by wrong that wee should have by right.

They to the vulgar sort now pipe and sing,
And make them merrie with their fooleries; 320
They chereleie chaunt and rymes at randon fling,
The fruitfull spawne of their ranke fantasies;
They feede the eares of fooles with flattery,
And good men blame, and losels magnify.

All places they doo with their toyes pos-sesse,
And raigne in liking of the multitude;
The schooles they fill with fond newfangle-
nesse,
And sway in court with pride and rashnes rude; Mongst simple shepherds they do boast their skill,
And say their musicke matcheth Phœbus
quill. 330

The noble hearts to pleasures they allure, And tell their Prince that learning is but
vaine;
Faire ladies loves they spot with thoughts impure,
And gentle mindes with lewd delights dis-
taine;
Clerks they to thoughtly idlenes entice,
And fill their booke with discipline of vice.

So every where they rule and tyrannize,
For their usurped kingdomes maintenaunce, The whiles we silly maides, whom they dispize
And with reprochfull scorne discountenaunce, 340

From our owne native heritage exile, Walk through the world of every one re-vilde.

Nor anie one doth care to call us in,
Or once vouchsafeth us to entertaine, Unless some one perhaps of gentle kin,
For pitties sake, compassion our paine,
And yeeld us some reliefe in this distresse; Yet to be so reliev'd is wretchednesse.

So wander we all carefull comfortlesse, Yet none doth care to comfort us at all; 350
So seeke we helpe our sorrow to redresse, Yet none vouchsafes to answere to our call:
Therefore we mourne and pittillesse com-
plaine,
Because none living pittietieth our paine.

With that she wept and wofullie way-
mented,
That naught on earth her grieffe might pacifie;
And all the rest her dolefull din augmented With shrikes and groanes and grievous agonie.
So ended shee: and then the next in rew Began her piteous plaint, as doth ensew. 360

ERATO.

Ye gentle spirits breathing from above,
Where ye in Venus silver bowre were bred, Thoughts halfe devine, full of the fire of
love,
With beawtie kindled and with pleasure-
fed,
Which ye now in securitie possesse, Forgetfull of your former heavinesse:

Now change the tenor of your joyous layes,
With which ye use your loves to deifie,
And blazon forth an earthlie beauties
praise
Above the compasse of the arched skie: 370 Now change your praises into piteous cries,
And eulogies turne into elegies.

Such as ye wont, whenas those bitter
stounds
Of raging love first gan you to torment, And launch your hearts with lamentable wounds
Of secret sorrow and sad languishment,

Before your loves did take you unto grace;
Those now renew, as fitter for this place.

For I that rule in measure moderate
The tempest of that stormie passion, ³⁸⁰ And use to paint in rimes the troublous
state

Of lovers life in likest fashion, Am put from practise of my kindlie skill, Banisht by those that love with leawdnes
fill.

Love wont to be schoolmaster of my skill,
And the devicefull matter of my song;
Sweete love devoyd of villanie or ill,
But pure and spotles, as at first he sprong Out of th' Almighties bosome, where he nests;

From thence infused into mortall breasts. ³⁹⁰

Such high conceipt of that celestial fire, The base-borne brood of Blindnes cannot gesse,

Ne ever dare their dunghill thoughts aspire Unto so loftie pitch of perfectnesse, But rime at riot, and doo rage in love;
Yet little wote what doth thereto behove.

Faire Cytheree, the mother of delight And queene of beautie, now thou maist go pack;

For lo! thy kingdome is defaced night,
Thy scepter rent, and power put to wrack;
And thy gay sonne, that winged God of Love, ⁴⁰¹
May now goe prune his plumes like ruffed dove.

And ye three twins, to light by Venus
brought,

The sweete companions of the Muses late,
From whom what ever thing is goodly
thought

Doth borrow grace, the fancie to aggrate, Go beg with us, and be companions still,
As heretofore of good, so now of ill.

For neither you nor we shall anie more Finde entertainment, or in court or schoole:
For that which was accounted heretofore ⁴¹¹

The learneds meed is now lent to the foole;
He sings of love, and maketh loving layes,
And they him heare, and they him highly
praise.

With that she powred foorth a brackish flood

Of bitter teares, and made exceeding mone;
And all her sisters, seeing her sad mood,
With lowd laments her answered all at one.
So ended she: and then the next in rew
Began her grievous plaint, as doth ensew. ⁴²⁰

CALLIOPE.

To whom shall I my evill case complaine,
Or tell the anguish of my inward smart, Sith none is left to remedie my paine,
Or deignes to pitie a perplexed hart;
But rather seekes my sorrow to augment With fowle reproach, and cruell banish-
ment?

For they to whom I used to applie
The faithfull serviee of my learned skill,
The goodly off-spring of Joves progenie, That wont the world with famous acts to fill; ⁴³⁰
Whose living praises in heroïck style,
It is my chiefe profession to comyle;

They all corrupted through the rust of time,
That doth all fairest things on earth deface,
Or through unnable sloth, or sinfull crime,
That doth degenerate the noble race,
Have both desire of worthie deeds forlorne,
And name of learning utterly doo scorne.

Ne doo they care to have the auncestrie
Of th' old heroës memorizde anew; ⁴⁴⁰
Ne doo they care that late posteritie Should know their names, or speak their praises dew:

But die forgot from whence at first they sprong,
As they themselves shalbe forgot ere long.

What bootes it then to come from glorious Forefathers, or to have been nobly bredd?
What oddes twixt Irus and old Inachus, Twixt best and worst, when both alike are dedd,

If none of neither mention should make,
Nor out of dust their memories awake? ⁴⁵⁰

Or who would ever care to doo brave deed,
Or strive in vertue others to excell, If none should yeeld him his deserved
meed,

Due praise, that is the spur of dooing well?

For if good were not praised more than ill, None would choose goodnes of his owne freewill.

Therefore the nurse of vertue I am hight,
And golden trompet of eternitie,
That lowly thoughts lift up to heavens hight,
And mortall men have powre to deifie: 460 Bacehus and Hercules I raisd to heaven, And Charlemaine, amongst the starris seaven.

But now I will my golden clarion rend,
And will henceforth immortalize no more, Sith I no more finde worthie to commend For prize of value, or for learned lore:
For noble peeres, whom I was wont to raise, Now onely seeke for pleasure, nought for
praise.

Their great revenues all in sumptuous pride They spend, that nought to learning they may spare; 470
And the rich fee which poets wont divide
Now parasites and sycophants doo share:
Therefore I mourne and endlesse sorrow
make,
Both for my selfe and for my sisters sake.

With that she lowdly gan to waile and shrike,
And from her eyes a sea of teares did powre,
And all her sisters, with compassion like,
Did more increase the sharpnes of her showre.
So ended she: and then the next in rew
Began her plaint, as doth herein ensew. 480

URANIA.

What wrath of gods, or wicked influence Of starres conspiring wretched men t' afflict, Hath powrd on earth this noyous pestilence,
That mortall mindes doth inwardly infect With love of blindnesse and of ignorance, To dwell in darkenesse without sovenance?

What difference twixt man and beast is left, When th' heavnelie light of knowledge is put out,
And th' ornaments of wisdoms are bereft?
Then wandreth he in error and in doubt, 490 Unweeting of the danger hee is in,
Through fleshes frailtie and deceit of sin.

In this wide world in which they wretches
stray,
It is the onelie comfort which they have,
It is their light, their loadstarre and their
day;
But hell and darkenesse and the grislie grave Is ignorance, the enemy of grace, That mindes of men borne heavnelie doth debace.

Through knowledge we behold the worlds creation,
How in his cradle first he fostred was; 500
And judge of Natures cunning operation, How things she formed of a formelesse mas;
By knowledge wee do learne our selves to knowe,
And what to man, and what to God, wee owe.

From hence wee mount aloft unto the skie,
And looke into the christall firmament;
There we behold the heavens great hierarchie,
The starres pure light, the spheres swift movement,
The spirites and intelligences fayre, And angels waighting on th' Almightyes chayre. 510

And there, with humble minde and high in-
sight,
Th' eternall Makers majestie wee viewe, His love, his truth, his glorie, and his might,
And mercie more than mortall men can vew, O soveraigne Lord, O soveraigne happinesse,
To see thee, and thy mercie measurelesse!

Such happines have they that doo embrace
The precepts of my heavnelie discipline;
But shame and sorrow and accursed case Have they that scorne the schoole of arts divine, 520
And banish me, which do professe the skill To make men heavenly wise through humbled will.

How ever yet they mee despise and spight,
I feede on sweet contentment of my thought,
And please my selfe with mine owne selfe-
delight,
In contemplation of things heavnelie
wrought:
So loathing earth, I looke up to the sky,
And being driven hence, I thether fly.

Thence I behold the miserie of men, Which want the blis that wisdom would them breed, ⁵³⁰
And like brute beasts doo lie in loathsome den
Of ghostly darkenes, and of gastlie dreed:
For whom I mourne, and for my selfe com-
plaine,
And for my sisters eake, whom they dis-
daine.

With that shee wept and waild so pityous-
lie,
As if her eyes had beene two springing wells:
And all the rest, her sorrow to supplie, Did throw forth shrieks and cries and dreery yells.
So ended shee: and then the next in row Began her mournfull plaint, as doth ensew.

POLYHYMNIA.

A dolefull case desires a dolefull song, ⁵⁴¹ Without vaine art or curious complements, And squallid fortune, into basenes flong, Doth scorne the pride of wonted ornaments.
Then fittest are these ragged rimes for mee,
To tell my sorrowes that exceeding bee.

For the sweet numbers and melodious measures,
With which I wont the winged words to tie,
And make a tunefull diapase of pleasures,
Now being let to runne at libertie ⁵⁵⁰
By those which have no skill to rule them
right,
Have now quite lost their naturall delight.

Heapes of huge words uphoorded hideously, With horrid sound, though having little sence,
They thinke to be chiefe praise of poëtry;
And thereby wanting due intelligence, Have mard the face of goodly poësie,
And made a monster of their fantasie.

Whilom in ages past none might professe, But princes and high priests, that secret skill; ⁵⁶⁰
The sacred lawes therein they wont ex-
presse,
And with deepe oracles their verses fill:
Then was shee held in soveraigne dignitie,
And made the noursling of nobilitie.

But now nor prince nor priest doth her maintayne,
But suffer her prophaned for to bee
Of the base vulgar, that with hands uncleane

Dares to pollute her hidden mysterie;
And treadeth under foote hir holie things,
Which was the care of kesars and of kings.

One onelie lives, her ages ornament, ⁵⁷¹
And myrrour of her Makers majestie; That with rich bountie and deare cherish-
ment
Supports the praise of noble poësie:
Ne onelie favours them which it professe,
But is her selfe a peereles poëtresse.

Most peereles prince, most peereles poëtresse,
The true Pandora of all heavenly graces, Divine Elisa, sacred Emperesse:
Live she for ever, and her royall p'laces ⁵⁸⁰
Be filld with praises of divinest wits,
That her eternize with their heavenlie writs.

Some few beside this sacred skill esteme, Admirers of her glorious excellence, Which being lightned with her beauties beme,
Are thereby filld with happie influence,
And lifted up above the worldes gaze,
To sing with angels her immortall praise.

But all the rest, as borne of salvage brood,
And having beene with acorns alwaies fed, ⁵⁹⁰
Can no whit savour this celestiall food, But with base thoughts are into blindnesse led,
And kept from looking on the lightsome
day:
For whome I waile and weepe all that I
may.

Eftsoones such store of teares shee forth did powre,
As if shee all to water would have gone;
And all her sisters, seeing her sad stowre, Did weep and waile and made exceeding
mone;
And all their learned instruments did breake:
The rest untold no living tongue can speake. ⁶⁰⁰

FINIS.

VIRGILS GNAT

LONG SINCE DEDICATED

TO THE MOST NOBLE AND EXCELLENT LORD, THE EARLE OF LEICESTER, LATE DECEASEDWRONG'D, yet not daring to expresse my paine,To you (great Lord) the causer of my care, In cloudie teares my case I thus complaine Unto your selfe, that onely privie are:But if that any Edipus unware Shall chauce, through power of some divining spright,To reade the secrete of this riddle rare, And know the purporte of my evill plight, Let him rest pleased with his owne insight, Ne furthie seeke to glose upon the text:
For grieft enough it is to grieved wight To feele his fault, and not be further vext.But what so by my selfe may not be shoven, May by this Gnatts complaint be easily knownen.

['Virgil's Gnat' may be thought to follow close upon the latest of the sonnet series. The main period to which it belongs is, in any case, certain, for in the title it is described as 'long since dedicated' to the Earl of Leicester; it deals with some mishap in the personal relations of the poet with that nobleman, and such relations would seem to have been confined to the years 1577-1580. What the mishap may have been has remained, on the other hand, obscure. The curious must divine it as they best may from the sonnet of dedication and from the main allegory, always remembering that the poem is not an invention based upon the circumstances, but a mere paraphrase of the pseudo-Virgilian Culex. Of greater moment is the style, which, moving in a freer course than is natural to the sonnet, wins nearer than that of the 'Visions' and 'Ruins of Rome' to the cadences of the Faery Queen. The use of ottava rima, the stanza of the great Italian romances, points forward, too.]

VIRGILS GNAT

WE now have playde (Augustus) wantonly, Tuning our song unto a tender Muse,
And like a cobweb weaving slenderly, Have onely playde: let thus much then ex-cuseThis Gnats small poeme, that th' whole history
Is but a jest, though envie it abuse:
But who such sports and sweet delights doth blame, Shall lighter seeme than this Gnats idle name.Hereafter, when as season more secure Shall bring forth fruit, this Muse shall speak to theeIn bigger notes, that may thy sense allure,¹⁰ And for thy worth frame some fit poesie:
The golden ofspring of Latona pure,
And ornament of great Joves progenie, Phœbus, shall be the author of my song, Playing on yvorie harp with silver strong.He shall inspire my verse with gentle mood, Of poets prince, whether he woon beside Faire Xanthus sprinced with Chimæras blood,Or in the woods of Astery abide,²⁰ Or whereas Mount Parnasse, the Muses brood,Doth his broad forehead like two hornes divide,And the sweete waves of sounding Castaly With liquid foote doth slide downe easily.Wherefore ye sisters, which the glorie bee
Of the Pierian streames, fayre Naiades, Go too, and dauncing all in companie, Adorne that god: and thou holie Pales,
To whome the honest care of husbandrie Returneth by continuall successe,³⁰
Have care for to pursue his footing light, Through the wide woods and groves with green leaves dight.Professing thee I lifted an aloft Betwixt the forrest wide and starrie sky:
And thou most dread (Octavius) which oft To learned wits givest courage worthily, O come (thou sacred childe) come sliding soft,And favour my beginnings graciously:
For not these leaves do sing that dreadfull stound,When giants bloud did staine Phlegrean ground;⁴⁰Nor how th' halfe horsy people, Centaures
hight,
Fought with the blondie Lapithaës at bord;

Nor how the East with tyrannous despight Burnt th' Attick towres, and people slew with sword;

Nor how Mount Athos through exceeding
might

Was digged downe; nor yron bands aboard
The Pontick sea by their huge navy east, My volume shall renowne, so long since past:

Nor Hellespont trampled with horses feete, When flocking Persians did the Greeks affray; 50

But my soft Muse, as for her power more
meete.

Delights (with Phæbus friendly leave) to
play

An easie running verse with tender feete.
And thou (dread sacred child) to thee alway Let everlasting lightsome glory strive.
Through the worlds endles ages to survive.

And let an happie roome remaine for thee Mongst heavenly ranks, where blessed soules do rest;

And let long lasting life with joyous glee,
As thy due meede that thou deservest
best. 60

Hereafter many yeares remembered be Amongst good men, of whom thou oft are blest;

Live thou for ever in all happinesse:
But let us turne to our first businesse.

The fieri Sun was mounted now on hight Up to the heavenly towers, and shot each where

Out of his golden charet glistering light;
And fayre Aurora with her rosie heare
The hatefull darknes now had put to flight; When as the shepherd, seeing day ap-
peare. 70

His little goats gan drive out of their stalls,
To feede abroad, where pasture best befalls.

To an high mountaines top he with them
went,

Where thickest grasse did cloath the open hills:

They, now amongst the woods and thickets
ment,

Now in the valleies wandring at their wills, Spread themselves farre abroad through each descent;

Some on the soft greene grasse feeding their fills;

Some, clambring through the hollow cliffes on hy,

Nibble the bushie shrubs, which growe
thereby. 80

Others the utmost boughs of trees doe crop, And brouze the woodbine twiggess, that freshly bud;

This with full bit doth catch the utmost top
Of some soft willow, or new grown stud;
This with sharpe teeth the bramble leaves doth lop,

And chaw the tender prickles in her cud;
The whiles another high doth overlooke Her owne like image in a christall brooke.

O the great happines which shepherds have,
Who so loathes not too much the poore estate 90

With minde that ill use doth before deprave, Ne measures all things by the costly rate Of riotise, and semblants outward brave!

No such sad cares, as wont to macerate And rend the greedie mindes of covetous
men.

Do ever creepe into the shepherds den.

Ne cares he if the fleece which him araves Be not twice steeped in Assyrian dye;
Ne glistering of golde, which underlayes
The summer beames, doe blinde his gazing
eye; 100

Ne pictures beautie, nor the glauncing rayes Of precious stones, whence no good commeth
by;

Ne yet his cup embost with imagery Of Bætus or of Alcons vanity.

Ne ought the whelky pearles esteemeth hee,
Which are from Indian seas brought far
away:

But with pure brest from carefull sorrow
free,

On the soft grasse his limbs doth oft display,

In sweete spring time, when flowres varietie With sundrie colours paints the sprinckled
lay; 110

There, lying all at ease from guile or spight,
With pype of fennie reedes doth him delight.

There he, lord of himselfe, with palme be-
dight,

His looser locks doth wrap in wreath of vine:

There his milk dropping goats be his delight,
 And fruitefull Pales, and the forrest greene.
 And darkesome caves in pleasaunt vallies
 pight,
 Whereas continuall shade is to be seene, And where fresh springing wells, as christ-tall neate,
 Do always flow, to quench his thirstie
 heate. 120

O who can lead then a more happie life Than he, that with cleane minde and heart sincere,
 No greedy riches knowes nor bloudie strife, No deadly fight of warlick fleete doth
 feare,
 Ne runs in perill of foes cruell knife,
 That in the sacred temples he may reare A trophée of his glittering spoyles and
 treasure,
 Or may abound in riches above measure ?

Of him his God is worshipt with his sythe,
 And not with skill of craftsman polished: 130
 He joyes in groves, and makes himselfe full blythe
 With sundrie flowers in wilde fieldes gathered;
 Ne frankicens he from Panchæa buyth: Sweete Quiet harbours in his harmeles
 head,
 And perfect Pleasure buildes her joyous
 bowre,
 Free from sad cares, that rich mens hearts
 devowre.

This all his care, this all his whole inde-vour,
 To this his minde and senses he doth bend, How he may flow in quiets matchles trea-sour,
 Content with any food that God doth send;
 And how his limbs, resolv'd through idle leisour, 141
 Unto sweete sleepe he may securely lend,
 In some coole shadov from the scorching
 heat,
 The whiles his flock their chawed cuds do eate.

O flocks, O faunes, and O ye pleasaunt springs
 Of Tempe, where the countrey nymphs are rife,

Through whose not costly care each shep-heard sings
 As merrie notes upon his rusticke fife As that Ascreæan bard, whose fame now rings
 Through the wide world, and leads as joy-full life, 150
 Free from all troubles and from worldly
 toyle,
 In which fond men doe all their dayes tur-moyle.

In such delights whilst thus his carelesse time
 This shepherd drives, upleaning on his batt,
 And on shrill reedes chaunting his rustick
 rime,
 Hyperion, throwing forth his beames full hott,
 Into the highest top of heaven gan clime,
 And the world parting by an equall lott,
 Did shed his whirling flames on either side,
 As the great Ocean doth himselfe divide. 160

Then gan the shepherd gather into one His stragling goates, and drave them to a foord,
 Whose cærule streame, rombling in pible
 stone,
 Crept under mosse as greene as any goord Now had the sun halfe heaven overgone, When he his heard back from that water
 foord Drave from the force of Phæbus boyling
 ray,
 Into thicke shadowes, there themselves to
 lay.

Soone as he them plac'd in thy sacred wood (O Delian goddess) saw, to which of
 yore 170
 Came the bad daughter of old Cadmus
 brood, Cruell Agave, flying vengeance sore
 Of King Nictileus for the guiltie blood Which she with cursed hands had shed before;
 There she halfe frantick having slaine her
 sonne,
 Did shrowd her selfe like punishment to shonne.

Here also playing on the grassy greene, Woodgods, and satyres, and swift dryades,

With many fairies oft were dauncing seene.
 Not so much did Dan Orpheus repress¹⁸⁰ The streames of Hebrus with his songs, I
 weene,
 As that faire troupe of woodie goddesses Staied thee (O Peneus) powring foorth to
 thee,
 From cheereful lookes, great mirth and gladsome glee.

The verie nature of the place, resounding With gentle murmure of the breathing
 ayre,
 A pleasant bowre with all delight abounding
 In the fresh shadowe did for them prepayre, To rest their limbs with wearines redound-
 ing.
 For first the high palme trees, with braunches faire,¹⁹⁰
 Out of the lowly vallies did arise, And high shoote up their heads into the skyes.

And them amongst the wicked lotos grew,
 Wicked, for holding guilefully away Ulysses men, whom rapt with sweetenes
 new,
 Taking to hoste, it quite from him did stay;
 And eke those trees, in whose transformed
 hew
 The Sunnes sad daughters waylde the rash
 decay
 Of Phaeton, whose limbs with lightening rent
 They gathering up, with sweete teares did lament.²⁰⁰

And that same tree, in which Demophon, By his disloyalty lamented sore, Eternall hurte left unto many one:
 Whom als accompanied the oke, of yore Through fatall charmes transformd to such an one:
 The oke, whose acornes were our foode, before
 That Ceres seede of mortall men were
 knowne,
 Which first Triptoleme taught how to be
 sowne.

Here also grew the rougher rinded pine,
 The great Argoan ships brave ornament,²¹⁰ Whom golden fleece did make an heavenly
 signe;
 Which coveting, with his high tops extant,

To make the mountaines touch the starres
 divine,
 Decks all the forrest with embellishment;
 And the blacke holme that loves the watrie vale;
 And the sweete cypresse, signe of deadly bale.

Emongst the rest the clambring yvie grew, Knitting his wanton armes with grasping
 hold,
 Least that the poplar happely should rew Her brothers strokes, whose boughes she doth enfold²²⁰
 With her lythe twigs, till the top sur-
 vew,
 And paint with pallid greene her buds of gold.
 Next did the myrtle tree to her approach,
 Not yet unmindfull of her olde reproach.

But the small birds, in their wide boughs embowring, Chaunted their sundrie tunes with sweete consent;
 And under them a silver spring, forth powring
 His trickling streames, a gentle murmure
 sent;
 Thereto the frogs, bred in the slimie scowring
 Of the moist moores, their jarring voyces bent;²³⁰
 And shrill grasshoppers chirped them
 around:
 All which the ayrie echo did resound.

In this so pleasant place this shepheards flocke Lay everie where, their wearie limbs to
 rest,
 On everie bush, and everie hollow rocke, Where breathe on them the whistling wind mote best;
 The whiles the shepherd self, tending his stocke,
 Sate by the fountaine side, in shade to
 rest,
 Where gentle slumbring sleep oppressed
 him,
 Displaid on ground, and seized everie lim.
 Of trecherie or traines nought tooke he keep,²⁴¹
 But, looslie on the grassie greene dispredd,

His dearest life did trust to careles sleep;
Which, weighing down his drouping drowsie
hedd,

In quiet rest his molten heart did steep, Devoid of care, and feare of all falshedd:
Had not inconstant Fortune, bent to ill,
Bid strange mischance his quietnes to spill.

For at his wonted time in that same place An huge great serpent, all with speckles pide, 250

To drench himselve in moorish slime did
trace,

There from the boyling heate himselve to hide:

He, passing by with rolling wreathed pace,
With brandisht tongue the emptie aire did gride,

And wrapt his scalie boughts with fell de-
spight,

That all things seem'd appalled at his sight.

Now more and more having himselve en-rolde,

His glittering breast he lifteth up on hie,
And with proud vaunt his head aloft doth
holde; 259

His creste above, spotted with purple die,
On everie side did shine like scalie golde,
And his bright eyes, glaumeing full dreadfullie,

Did seeme to flame out flakes of flashing
fyre,

And with sterne lookes to threaten kindled
yre.

Thus wise long time he did himselve dispace
There round about, when as at last he spide, Lying along before him in that place,
That flocks grand captaine and most trustie guide:

Eftsoones more fierce in visage and in pace, Throwing his frie eyes on everie side, 270
He commeth on, and all things in his way Full stearnly rends, that might his passage
stay.

Much he disdaines, that anie one should dare

To come unto his haunt; for which intent
He inly burns, and gins straight to prepare The weapons which Nature to him hath lent;

Fellie he hisseth, and doth fiercely stare,
And hath his jawes with angry spirits rent,

That all his tract with bloudie drops is stained,

And all his foldes are now in length out-strained. 280

Whom, thus at point prepared, to prevent,
A little nousrling of the humid ayre,
A Gnat, unto the sleepeie shepheard went,
And marking where his ey-lids, twinckling
rare,

Shewd the two pearles which sight unto him
lent,

Through their thin coverings appearing
fayre,

His little needle there infixing deep, Warnd him awake, from death himselve to keep.

Wherewith enrag'd, he fiercely gan upstart,
And with his hand him rashly bruizing, slewe, 290

As in avengement of his heedles smart, That streight the spirite out of his senses flew,

And life out of his members did depart:
When suddenly casting aside his vew,
He spide his foe with felonous intent,
And fervent eyes to his destruction bent.

All suddenly dismaid, and hartles quight,
He fled abacke, and, eatching hastie holde
Of a yong alder hard beside him pight, It rent, and streight about him gan be-
holde 300

What god or fortune would assist his might.
But whether god or fortune made him bold Its hard to read: yet hardie will he had To overcome, that made him lesse adrad.

The scalie backe of that most hideous snake Enwrapped round, oft faining to retire,
And oft him to assaile, he fiercely strake Whereas his temples did his creast front tyre;

And, for he was but slowe, did slowth off
shake,

And gazing ghastly on (for feare and yre 310 Had blent so much his sense, that lesse he feard;)

Yet, when he saw him slaine, himselve he cheard.

By this the Night forth from the darksome
bowre

Of Herebus her teemed steedes gan call,

And laesie Vesper in his timely howre From golden Oeta gan proceede withall; Whenas the shepheard after this sharpe
 stowre,
 Seing the doubled shadowes low to fall, Gathering his straying flocke, does homeward fare,
 And unto rest his wearie joynts prepare. 320

Into whose sense so soone as lighter sleepe Was entered, and now loosing everie lim, Sweete slumbring deaw in carelesnesse did
 sleepe,
 The image of that Gnat appeard to him,
 And in sad tearnes gan sorrowfully weepe,
 With greislie countenance and visage grim, Wailing the wrong which he had done of
 late,
 In steed of good, hastning his cruell fate.

Said he, 'What have I, wretch, deserv'd, that thus
 Into this bitter bale I am outcast, 330 Whilest that thy life more deare and precious
 Was than mine owne, so long as it did last ?
 I now, in lieu of paines so gracious, Am tost in th' ayre with everie windie blast:
 Thou, safe delivered from sad decay, Thy careles limbs in loose sleep dost display.

'So livest thou; but my poore wretched ghost
 Is forst to ferrie over Lethes river, 338
 And, spoyld of Charon, too and fro am tost.
 Seest thou, how all places quake and quiver, Lightned with deadly lamps on everie post ?
 Tisiphone each where doth shake and shiver Her flaming fire brond, encountering me, Whose lockes uncombed cruell adders be.

'And Cerberus, whose many mouthes doo bay,
 And barke out flames, as if on fire he fed; Adowne whose necke, in terrible array,
 Ten thousand snakes, cralling about his hed, Doo hang in heapes, that horribly affray,
 And bloodie eyes doo glister frie red; 350
 He oftentimes me dreadfullie doth threaten,
 With painfull torment to be sorely beaten.

'Ay me ! that thankes so much should faile of need !
 For that I thee restor'd to life againe,

Even from the doore of death and deadlie dreed.
 Where then is now the guerdon of my
 paine ?
 Where the reward of my so piteous deed ?
 The praise of pitie vanisht is in vaine,
 And th' antique faith of justice long agoone
 Out of the land is fled away and gone. 360

'I saw anothers fate approaching fast,
 And left mine owne his safetic to tender;
 Into the same mishap I now am cast, And shun'd destruction doth destruction render:
 Not unto him that never hath trespass,
 But punishment is due to the offender:
 Yet let destruction be the punishment,
 So long as thankfull will may it relent.

'I carried am into waste wilderness, 369 Waste wildernes, amongst Cymerian shades, Where endles paines and hideous heavinesse Is round about me heapt in darksome glades.
 For there huge Othos sits in sad distresse, Fast bound with serpents that him oft invades,
 Far of beholding Ephialtes tide, Which once assaid to burne this world so
 wide.

'And there is mournfull Tityus, mindefull yet
 Of thy displeasure, O Latona faire; Displeasure too implacable was it, That made him meat for wild foules of the
 ayre: 380
 Much do I feare among such fiends to sit;
 Much do I feare back to them to repayre,
 To the black shadowes of the Stygian shore, Where wretched ghosts sit wailing ever-
 more.

'There next the utmost brinck doth he abide,
 That did the bankets of the gods bewray, Whose throat, through thirst, to nought nigh being dride, His sense to seeke for ease turnes every
 way:
 And he that in avengement of his pride,
 For scorning to the sacred gods to pray, 390 Against a mountaine rolls a mightie stone, Calling in vaine for rest, and can have none.

'Go ye with them, go, cursed damosells, Whose bridale torches foule Erynnis tynde,

And Hymen, at your spousalls sad, foretells Tydings of death and massacre unkinde:
With them that eruell Colchid mother dwells,

The which conceiv'd in her revengefull
minde,

With bitter woundes her owne deere babes to slay,

And mured troupes upon great heapes to
lay. 400

' There also those two Pandionian maides, Calling on Itis, Itis evermore, Whom, wretched boy, they slew with guiltie blades;

For whome the Thracian king lamenting
sore,

Turn'd to a lapwing, fowlie them upbraydes, And fluttering round about them still does
sore;

There now they all eternally complaine
Of others wrong, and suffer endles paine.

' But the two brethren borne of Cadmus
blood,

Whilst each does for the soveraignty contend, 410

Blinde through ambition, and with vengeance wood,

Each doth against the others bodie bend
His cursed steele, of neither well withstood, And with wide wounds their carcasses doth rend;

That yet they both doe mortall foes re-
maine,

Sith each with brothers bloudie hand was
slaine.

' Ah (waladay!) there is no end of paine, Nor change of labour may intreated bee:

Yet I beyond all these am carried faine, Where other powers farre different I

see, 420

And must passe over to th' Elisian plaine:
There grim Persephone, encountring mee, Doth urge her fellow Furies earnestlie,
With their bright firebronds me to terrifie.

' There chast Alceste lives inviolate, Free from all care, for that her husbands
daies

She did prolong by changing fate for fate:
Lo! there lives also the immortall praise

Of womankinde, most faithfull to her mate, Penelope; and from her farre awayes 430

A rulesse rout of yongmen, which her woo'd, All slaine with darts, lie wallowed in their
blood.

' And sad Eurydice thence now no more Must turne to life, but there detained bee,
For looking back, being forbid before:

Yet was the guilt thereof, Orpheus, in thee.
Bold sure he was, and worthie spirite bore, That durst those lowest shadowes goe to
see,

And could beleeve that anie thing could
please 439

Fell Cerberus, or Stygian powres appease.

' Ne feard the burning waves of Phlegeton, Nor those same mournfull kingdomes, com-passed

With rustie horroure and fowle fashion,
And deep digd vawtes, and Tartar covered With bloodie night, and darke confusion, And judgement seates, whose judge is deadlie dred,

A judge that, after death, doth punish sore
The faults which life hath trespassed before.

' But valiant fortune made Dan Orpheus bolde:

For the swift running rivers still did stand,
And the wilde beasts their furie did with-
hold, 451

To follow Orpheus musicke through the
land:

And th' okes, deep grounded in the earthly molde,

Did move, as if they could him understand;
And the shrill woods, which were of sense
bereav'd,

Through their hard barke his silver sound receav'd.

' And eke the Moone her hastie steedes did
stay,

Drawing in teemes along the starrie skie;
And didst (O monthly virgin) thou delay Thy nightly course, to heare his melodie?

The same was able, with like lovely lay,
The Queene of Hell to move as easily, 462 To yeeld Eurydice unto her fere, Backe to be borne, though it unlawfull
were.

' She (ladie) having well before approved,
The feends to be too cruell and severe.

Observ'd th' appointed way, as her be-hooved,
Ne ever did her ey-sight turne arere, Ne ever spake, ne cause of speaking mooved:

But cruell Orpheus, thou much crueller, Seeking to kisse her, brok'st the gods decree, ⁴⁷¹
And thereby mad'st her ever damn'd to be.

'Ah! but sweete love of pardon worthie
is,
And doth deserve to have small faults remitted;

If Hell at least things lightly done amis Knew how to pardon, when ought is omitted:

Yet are ye both received into blis,
And to the seates of happie soules admitted,

And you beside the honourable band
Of great heroës doo in order stand. ⁴⁸⁰

'There be the two stout sonnes of Aeacus, Fierce Peleus, and the hardie Telamon, Both seeming now full glad and joyeous Through their syres dreadfull jurisdiction, Being the judge of all that horrid hous:
And both of them, by strange occasion, Renown'd in choyce of happie marriage Through Venus grace, and vertues cariage.

'For th' one was ravisht of his owne bondmaide,

The faire Ixione, captiv'd from Troy: ⁴⁹⁰
But th' other was with Thetis love assaid, Great Nereus his daughter and his joy.

On this side them there is a yongman layd, Their match in glorie, mightie, fierce and coy,

That from th' Argolick ships, with furious
yre,
Bett back the furie of the Trojan fyre.

'O who would not recount the strong divorses

Of that great warre, which Trojanes oft behelde,

And oft beheld the warlike Greekish forces,

When Teucrian soyle with bloodie rivers swelde, ⁵⁰⁰

And wide Sigæan shores were spred with corses,

And Simois and Xanthus blood outwelde,

Whilst Hector raged with outrageous
minde,
Flames, weapons, wounds in Greeks fleete to have tynde ?

'For Ida selfe, in ayde of that fierce fight,
Out of her mountaines ministred supplies, And like a kindly nourse, did yeeld (for spight)

Store of firebronds out of her nourseries Unto her foster children, that they might Inflame the navie of their enemies, ⁵¹⁰

And all the Rhætean shore to ashes turne, Where lay the ships which they did seeke to burne.

'Gainst which the noble sonne of Telamon

Opposd' himselfe, and thwarting his huge
shield,

Them battell bad; gainst whom appeard
anon

Hector, the glorie of the Trojan field:
Both fierce and furious in contention Encountred, that their mightie strokes so shrid

As the great clap of thunder, which doth ryve

The ratling heavens, and cloudes asunder dryve. ⁵²⁰

'So th' one with fire and weapons did contend

To cut the ships from turning home againe To Argos; th' other strove for to defend

The force of Vulcane with his might and
maine.

Thus th' one Aeacide did his fame extend:
But th' other joy'd, that, on the Phrygian
playne

Having the blood of vanquisht Hector shedd,

He compast Troy thrice with his bodie
dedd.

'Againe great dole on either partie grewe, That him to death unfaithfull Paris sent;

And also him that false Ulysses slewe, ⁵³¹ Drawne into danger through close ambush-
ment:

Therefore from him Laërtes sonne his vewe

Doth turne aside, and boasts his good event In working of Strymonian Rhæsus fall,
And efte in Dolons slye surprysall.

'Againe the dreadfull Cycones him dismay,
 And blacke Læstrigones, a people stout:
 Then greedie Scilla, under whom there bay Manie great bandogs, which her gird
 about: 540
 Then doo the Aetnean Cyclops him affray,
 And deep Charybdis gulphing in and out:
 Lastly the squalid lakes of Tartarie,
 And griesly feends of hell him terrifie.

'There also goodly Agamemnon bosts,
 The glorie of the stock of Tantalus,
 And famous light of all the Greekish hosts, Under whose conduct most victorious, The Dorick flames consum'd the Iliack posts.
 Ah! but the Greekes themselves more dolorous, 550
 To thee, O Troy, paid penance for thy
 fall,
 In th' Hellespont being nigh drowned all.

'Well may appeare, by prooffe of their mis-chaunce,
 The chaungfull turning of mens slipperie
 state,
 That none, whom fortune freely doth advance,
 Himselfe therefore to heaven should elevate:
 For loftie type of honour, through the glaunce
 Of envious dart, is downe in dust prostrate;
 And all that vaunts in worldly vanitie Shall fall through fortunes mutabilitie. 560

'Th' Argolicke power returning home
 againe,
 Enricht with spoyles of th' Eriethonian
 towre,
 Did happie winde and weather entertaine,
 And with good speed the fomie billowes scowre:
 No signe of storme, no feare of future
 paine,
 Which soone ensued them with heavie
 stowre.
 Nereis to the seas a token gave,
 The whiles their crooked keeles the surges clave.

'Suddenly, whether through the gods decree, 569
 Or haplesse rising of some froward starre,

The heavens on everie side enclowded bee: Black stormes and fogs are blown up from farre,
 That now the pylote can no loadstarre see,
 But skies and seas doo make most dreadfull warre;
 The billowes striving to the heavens to reach,
 And th' heavens striving them for to impeach.

'And, in avengement of their bold attempt, Both sun and starres and all the heavenly powres
 Conspire in one to wreake their rash contempt,
 And downe on them to fall from highest towres: 580
 The skie, in pieces seeming to be rent, Throwes lightning forth, and haile, and harmful showres,
 That death on everie side to them appeares, In thousand formes, to worke more ghastly feares.

'Some in the greedie flouds are sunke and
 drent;
 Some on the rocks of Caphareus are
 throwne;
 Some on th' Euboick cliffs in pieces rent;
 Some scattered on the Hercæan shores un-
 knowne;
 And manie lost, of whom no monument Remaines, nor memorie is to be showne: Whilst all the purchase of the Phrigan
 pray, 591
 Tost on salt billowes, round about doth stray.

'Here manie other like heroës bee, Equall in honour to the former crue, Whom ye in goodly seates may placed see,
 Descended all from Rome by linage due,
 From Rome, that holds the world in sove-reigntie,
 And doth all nations unto her subdue:
 Here Fabii and Decii doo dwell, Horatii that in vertue did excell. 600

'And here the antique fame of stout Camill Doth ever live; and constant Curtius, Who, stiffly bent his vowed life to spill For countreyes health, a gulph most hideous Amidst the towne with his owne corps did
 fill,
 T' appease the powers; and prudent Mutius,

Who in his flesh endur'd the scorching flame,
To daunt his foe by ensample of the same.

'And here wise Curius, companion Of noble vertues, lives in endles rest; 610
And stout Flaminius, whose devotion Taught him the fires scorn'd furie to detest;
And here the praise of either Scipion Abides in highest place above the best,
To whom the ruin'd walls of Carthage
vow'd,
Trembling their forces, sound their praises lowd.

'Live they for ever through their lasting
praise:
But I, poore wretch, am forced to retourne
To the sad lakes, that Phœbus summie rayes Doo never see, where soules doo alwaies
mourne; 620
And by the wayling shores to waste my
dayes,
Where Phlegeton with quenches flames doth burne;
By which just Minos righteous soules doth
sever
From wicked ones, to live in blisse for ever.

'Me therefore thus the cruell fiends of
hell, Girt with long snakes and thousand yron chaynes,
Through doome of that their cruell judge,
compell,
With bitter torture and impatient paines, Cause of my death and just complaint to tell.
For thou art he whom my poore ghost complaines 630
To be the author of her ill unwares,
That careles hear'st my intollerable cares.

'Them therefore as bequeathing to the
winde,
I now depart, returning to thee never,
And leave this lamentable plaint behinde.
But doo thou haunt the soft downe rolling river,
And wilde greene woods, and fruitful pastures minde,
And let the fitting aire my vaine words
sever.
Thus having said, he heavily departed With piteous crie, that anie would have smarted. 640

Now, when the sloathfull fit of lifes sweete
rest
Had left the heavie shepheard, wondrous
cares
His inly grieved minde full sore opprest;
That balefull sorrow he no longer beares For that Gnats death, which deeply was imprest,
But bends what ever power his aged yeares Him lent, yet being such as through their
might
He lately slue his dreadfull foe in fight.

By that same river lurking under greene, Eftsoones he gins to fashion forth a place,
And squaring it in compasse well beseene, There plotteth out a tombe by measured
space: 652
His yron headed spade tho making cleene,
To dig up sods out of the flowrie grasse, His worke he shortly to good purpose
brought,
Like as he had conceiv'd it in his thought.

An heape of earth he hoorded up on hie, Enclosing it with banks on everie side,
And thereupon did raise full busily
A little mount, of greene turffs edifide; 660 And on the top of all, that passers by Might it behold, the toomb he did provide Of smoothest marble stone in order set,
That never might his luckie scape forget.

And round about he taught sweete flowres to growe,
The rose engrained in pure scarlet die,
The lilly fresh, and violet belowe,
The marigolde, and cherefull rosemarie, The Spartan mirtle, whence sweet gum does flowe,
The purple hyacinthe, and fresh cost-marie, 670
And saffron, sought for in Cilician soyle,
And lawrell, th' ornament of Phœbus toyle:

Fresh rhododaphne, and the Sabine flowre, Matching the wealth of th' annie frank-incence,
And pallid vyie, building his owne bowre,
And box, yet mindfull of his olde offence, Red amaranthus, lucklesse paramour;
Oxeye still greene, and bitter patience; Ne wants there pale Narcisse, that, in a
well
Seeing his beautie. in love with it fell. 680

And whatsoever other flowre of worth,
 And whatso other hearb of lovely hew The joyous Spring out of the ground brings forth,
 To cloath her selfe in colours fresh and
 new,
 He planted there, and reard a mount of earth,
 In whose high front was writ as doth ensue:

To thee, small Gnat, in lieu of his life saved, The Shepheard hath thy deaths record engraved.

PROSOPOPOIA
 OR MOTHER HUBBERDS TALE

BY ED. SP.

DEDICATED TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE THE LADIE COMPTON AND MOUNTEGLE

LONDON

 PONSONBIE, DWELLING IN PAULES
 CHURCHYARD AT THE SIGNE OF
 1591

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE, THE LADIE COMPTON AND
 MOUNTEGLE

Most faire and vertuous Ladie: having often sought opportunitie by some good meanes to make knownen to your Ladiship the humble affection and faithfull duetie which I have alwaies professed, and am bound to beare, to that house from whence yee spring, I have at length found occasion to remember the same, by making a simple present to you of these my idle labours; which having long sithens composed in the raw conceipt of my youth, I lately amongst other papers lighted upon, and was by others, which liked the same, mooved to set them fourth. Simple is the device, and the composition meane, yet carrieth some delight, even the rather because of the simplicitie and meanness thus personated. The same I beseech your Ladiship take in good part, as a pledge of that profession which I beare made to you, and keepe with you untill, with some other more worthie labour, I do redeeme it out of your hands, and discharge my utmost dutie. Till then, wishing your Ladiship all increase of honour and happinesse, I humbly take leave.

Your Ladiships ever humbly,
 Ed. Sp.

[‘Mother Hubberd’s Tale’ is of the same period with ‘Virgil’s Gnat.’ In the dedicatory letter of 1591 it is said to have been ‘long sithens composed in the raw conceipt of my youth.’ and ‘long sithens’ is limited by the satire on court life to the years from 1577 to 1580. A probable glance at the disgrace of Leicester in 1579 (l. 628) may limit it still more. Yet beside this very reference is one, equally probable, to events of ten years later, and other such insertions may be found. It would appear, therefore, that when, during his second sojourn at court, Spenser ‘lighted upon’ this early poem and was ‘mooved to set it fourth,’ he to some extent revised and enlarged it.

The most obvious characteristic of ‘Mother Hubberd’s Tale’ is the range of its satire. The career of the Ape and the Fox is a kind of rogues’ progress through the three estates to the crown. They begin among the common people, rise from thence to the clergy and from thence to the court, among the nobility; in the end they cap the climax of their villainies by making themselves king and prime minister. The satire is mainly concentrated, to be sure, upon life at the court and the intrigues of those in power, topics of direct personal concern to Spenser, yet the poem as a whole does survey, however imperfectly and unsymmetrically, some of the main conditions of life in the nation at large. In this it harks back unmistakably to Piers Plowman. Though the satiric scope is of Langland, however, there is much in the style to suggest the vein of Chaucer, and the dramatis personee and stage-setting are those of Reynard the Fox.
 The combination results at times in curious contrasts. In their first sojourn at court, the Fox and the Ape are among lords and ladies, suitors, a world of men, from the midst of which emerges the figure of the ‘brave courtier:’ in their second sojourn there, this world is suddenly transformed; for lords and ladies, suitors, men, we have the animals of Caxton’s book, the Wolf, the Sheep, the Ass, and their like; it is the court of King Lion.
 Yet so spontaneous and creative are the acts of the poet’s imagination that at no point in the long range of this satire are we checked by the sense of incongruity. The strange succession of scenes and figures, all admirably alive, the variety of artistic effects ranging from grotesqueness to romantic beauty, the sudden eruptions of strong personal feeling from levels of cool satire, the fluctuations of the style from crudity to masterliness, produce, in a small way, the sense of a world almost as real as that of the Faery Queen. This is mediæval satire at its best. The Italians, with whom Spenser was at this time rapidly becoming familiar, had already, for at least two generations, been cultivating the classic Roman form, and their lead had been followed by the head of the new English school, Sir Thomas Wyatt: one might expect that Spenser, who from boyhood had been steeped in the classics, should also adopt this revived form. Nothing shows better the independence of his artistic eclecticism, his gift for taking here, there, and everywhere whatever appeals to his imagination, than the mediævalism of this his one satire.]

PROSOPOPOIA: OR MOTHER HUBBERDS TALE

It was the month in which the righteous
Maide,
That, for disdain of sinfull worlds up-
braide,
Fled back to heaven, whence she was first conceived,
Into her silver bowre the Sunne received;
And the hot Syrian Dog on him awayting,
After the chafed Lyons cruell bayting, Corrupted had th' ayre with his noysome
breath,
And powr'd on th' earth plague, pestilence, and death.
Emongst the rest a wicked maladie Raign'd emongst men, that manie did to
die, 10
Depriv'd of sense and ordinarie reason;
That it to leaches seemed strange and geason.
My fortune was, mongst manie others moe,
To be partaker of their common woe;
And my weake bodie, set on fire with
griefe,
Was forb'd of rest and naturall reliefe.
In this ill plight, there came to visite mee Some friends, who, sorie my sad case to
see,
Began to comfort me in chearfull wise,
And meanes of gladsome solace to devise.

But seeing kindly sleep refuse to doe 21
His office, and my feeble eyes forgoe, They sought my troubled sense how to de-ceave
With talke, that might unquiet fancies
reave;
And sitting all in seates about me round, With pleasant tales (fit for that idle stound)
They cast in course to waste the wearie howres:
Some tolde of ladies, and their paramoures;
Some of brave knights, and their renowned squires;
Some of the faeries and their strange at-tires; 30
And some of griaunts hard to be beleaved;
That the delight thereof me much re-leaved.
Amongst the rest a good old woman was, Hight Mother Hubberd, who did farre surpas
The rest in honest mirth, that seem'd her
well:
She, when her turne was come her tale to
tell,
Tolde of a strange adventure, that betided Betwixt the Foxe and th' Ape by him misguided;
The which, for that my sense it greatly pleased,
All were my spirite heavie and diseased, 40 Ile write in termes, as she the same did
say,
So well as I her words remember may.
No Muses aide me needes heretoo to call;
Base is the style, and matter meane withall.
¶ Whilome (said she) before the world was civil,
The Foxe and th' Ape, disliking of their evill
And hard estate, determined to seeke Their fortunes farre abroad, lyeke with his lyeke:
For both were craftie and unhappie witted;
Two fellows might no where be better fitted. 50
The Foxe, that first this cause of grieve did
finde, Gan first thus plaine his case with words unkinde:
' Neighbour Ape, and my goship eke beside, (Both two sure bands in friendship to be tide.)

To whom may I more trustely complaine The evill plight that doth me sore con-
straine,

And hope thereof to finde due remedie?
Heare then my paine and inward agonie.
Thus manie yeares I now have spent and worne,

In meane regard, and basest fortunes
scorne, 60

Dooing my cuntry service as I might,
No lesse I dare saie than the prowdest
wight;

And still I hoped to be up advaunced, For my good parts; but still it hath mis-chaunced.

Now therefore that no lenger hope I see,
But froward fortune still to follow mee,
And losels lifted up on high, where I did
looke,

I meane to turne the next leafe of the booke.

Yet ere that anie way I doo betake,
I meane my gossip privie first to make.' 70
'Ah, my deare gossip!' answer'd then the Ape,

'Deeply doo your sad words my wits
awhape,

Both for because your grieffe doth great
appeare,

And eke because my selfe am touched
neare:

For I likewise have wasted much good time,
Still wayting to preferment up to cline, Whilst others alwayes have before me
stept,

And from my beard the fat away have swept;

That now unto despaire I gin to growe, And meane for better winde about to throwe. 80

Therefore to me, my trustie friend, aread Thy counsell: two is better than one head.'
'Certes,' said he, 'I meane me to disguise In some strange habit, after unceouth wize,

Or like a pilgrime, or a lymiter,
Or like a gipsen, or a juggeler,

And so to wander to the worldes ende,
To seeke my fortune, where I may it mend:
For worse than that I have I cannot meete.
Wide is the world, I wote, and everie streete 90

Is full of fortunes and adventures straunge, Continuallie subject unto echange.

Say, my faire brother, now, if this device Doth like you, or may you to like entiee.'

'Surely,' said th' Ape, 'it likes me wondrous
well;

And would ye not poore fellowship expell,
My selfe would offer you t' accompanie
In this adventures chauncefull jeopardie.
For to wexe olde at home in idlenesse Is disadventurous, and quite fortunelesse: 100 Abroad, where change is, good may gotten
bee.'

The Foxe was glad, and quickly did agree:
So both resolv'd, the morrow next ensuing,
So soone as day appeared to peoples vewing,
On their intended journey to proceede;
And over night, whatso theretoo did neede Each did prepare, in readines to bee.

The morrow next, so soone as one might
see

Light out of heavens windowes forth to
looke,

Both their habiliments unto them tooke, 110 And put themselves (a Gods name) on their
way.

Whenas the Ape, beginning well to wey
This hard adventure, thus began t' advise:
'Now read, Sir Reynold, as ye be right
wise,

What course ye weene is best for us to
take,

That for our selves we may a living make.
Whether shall we professe some trade or
skill?

Or shall we varie our device at will,
Even as new ocession appeares?

Or shall we tie our selves for certaine
yeares 120

To anie service, or to anie place?

For it behoves, ere that into the race

We enter, to resolve first hereupon.'

'Now surely, brother,' said the Foxe anon,
'Ye have this matter motioned in season:

For everie thing that is begun with reason Will come by readie meanes unto his end; But things miscounselled must needs miswend.

Thus therefore I advize upon the case:

That not to anie certaine trade or place, 130

Nor anie man, we should our selves applie;

For why should he that is at libertie

Make himselfe bond? Sith then we are free borne,

Let us all servile base subjection scorne;

And as we bee sonnes of the world so wide,

Let us our fathers heritage divide,

And challenge to our selves our portions dew

Of all the patrimonie, which a few 132

Now hold in hugger mugger in their hand,
And all the rest doo rob of good and land.
For now a few have all, and all have nought, Yet all be brethren ylike dearly bought.

There is no right in this partition, Ne was it so by institution Ordnained first, ne by the law of Nature, But that she gave like blessing to each creture,

As well of worldly livelode as of life,
That there might be no difference nor strife, Nor ought cald mine or thine: thrice happie
then

Was the condition of mortall men. 150
That was the golden age of Saturne old,
But this might better be the world of gold:
For without golde now nothing wilbe got.
Therefore (if please you) this shalbe our plot:

We will not be of anie occupation;
Let such vile vassalls, borne to base vocation,

Drudge in the world, and for their living droyle,

Which have no wit to live withouten toyle.
But we will walke about the world at pleasure,

Like two free men, and make our ease a treasure. 160

Free men some beggers call; but they be
free,

And they which call them so more beggers
bee:

For they doo swinke and sweate to feed the other,

Who live like lords of that which they doo gather,

And yet doo never thanke them for the
same,

But as their due by nature doo it clame.

Such will we fashion both our selves to bee, Lords of the world, and so will wander free Where so us listeth, uncontrol'd of anie.

Hard is our hap, if we (emongst so manie) Light not on some that may our state amend; 171

Sildome but some good commeth ere the end.²

Well seemd the Ape to like this ordinaunce:
Yet, well considering of the circumstaunce, As pausing in great doubt, awhile he staid,
And afterwards with grave advizement said:

'I cannot, my lief brother, like but well
The purpose of the complot which ye tell:

For well I wot (compar'd to all the rest Of each degree) that beggers life is best:
And they that thinke themselves the best of all 181

Oft-times to begging are content to fall.
But this I wot withall, that we shall romne Into great daunger, like to bee undonne, Thus wildly to wander in the worlds eye,
Without pasport or good warrantie, For feare least we like rogues should be reputed,

And for eare marked beasts abroad be bruted.

Therefore I read that we our counsells
call,

How to prevent this mischiefe ere it fall,
And how we may, with most securitie, 191 Beg amongst those that beggers doo defie.'
'Right well, deere gossip, ye advized have,'

Said then the Foxe, 'but I this doubt will save:

For ere we farther passe, I will devise A pasport for us both in fittest wize,
And by the names of souldiers us protect;
That now is thought a civile begging sect.

Be you the souldier, for you likest are For manly semblance, and small skill in warre: 200

I will but wayte on you, and, as occasion Falls out, my selfe fit for the same will fashion.'

The pasport ended, both they forward
went;

The Ape clad souldierlike, fit for th' intent,

In a blew jacket with a crosse of redd
And manie slits, as if that he had shedd Much blood through many wounds therein received,

Which had the use of his right arme be-received.

Upon his head an old Scotch cap he wore,
With a plume feather all to peeces tore: Hiis breeches were made after the new cut, 211

Al Portugese, loose like an emptie gut;
And his hose broken high above the heel-
ing,

And his shoes beaten out with traveling.
But neither sword nor dagger he did
beare;

Seemes that no foes revengement he did
feare:

In stead of them a handsome bat he held,
On which he leaned, as one farre in elde.
Shame light on him, that through so false illusion

Doth turne the name of souldiers to abu-sion, ²²⁰

And that, which is the noblest mysterie, Brings to reproach and common infamie.
Long they thus travailed, yet never met Adventure, which might them a working set:

Yet manie waies they sought, and manie tried;

Yet for their purposes none fit espyed.
At last they chaunst to meete upon the way
A simple Husbandman in garments gray; Yet, though his vesture were but meane and
base,

A good yeoman he was of honest place, ²³⁰
And more for thrift did care than for gay clothing:

Gay without good is good hearts greatest loathing.

The Foxe, him spying, bad the Ape him
dight

To play his part, for loe! he was in sight That (if he er'd not) should them enter-
taine,

And yeeld them timely profite for their
paine.

Eftsoones the Ape himselfe gan up to
reare,

And on his shoulders high his bat to beare,
As if good service he were fit to doo;

But little thrift for him he did it too: ²⁴⁰
And stoutly forward he his steps did straine, That like a handsome swaine it him became.

When as they nigh approached, that good man,

Seeing them wander loosly, first began T' enquire, of custome, what and whence they were.

To whom the Ape: 'I am a souldiere, That late in warres have spent my deere-st blood,

And in long service lost both limbs and
good;

And now, constrain'd that trade to over-
give,

I driven am to seeke some meanes to live: ²⁵⁰

Which might it you in pitie please t' afford,

I would be readie, both in deed and word,

To doo you faithfull service all my dayes.
This yron world' (that same he weeping sayes)

'Brings downe the stowtest hearts to lowest
state:

For miserie doth bravest mindes abate,
And make them seeke for that they wont to scorne,

Of fortune and of hope at once forlorne.' The honest man, that heard him thus com-
plaine,

Was griev'd, as he had felt part of his paine; ²⁶⁰

And, well disposd' him some reliefe to showe,

Askt if in husbandrie he ought did knowe, To plough, to plant, to reap, to rake, to sowe,

To hedge, to ditch, to thrash, to thetch, to mowe;

Or to what labour els he was prepar'd:
For husbands life is labourous and hard.

Whenas the Ape him hard so much to talke

Of labour, that did from his iiking balke,
He would have slipt the collar handsomly, And to him said: 'Good sir, full glad am I ²⁷⁰

To take what paines may anie living wight:
But my late maymed limbs lack wonted
might

To doo their kindly services, as needeth: Scaree this right hand the mouth with diet feedeth;

So that it may no painfull worke endure,
Ne to strong labour can it selfe enure.
But if that anie other place you have,
Which askes small paines, but thriftines to save,

Or care to overlooke, or trust to gather, Ye may me trust as your owne ghostly father.' ²⁸⁰

With that the Husbandman gan him avize, That it for him were fittest exercise Cattell to keep, or grounds to oversee;
And asked him, if he could willing bee
To keep his sheep, or to attend his swyne, Or watch his mares, or take his charge of kyne.

'Gladly,' said he, 'what ever such like
paine

Ye put on me, I will the same sustaine:
But gladliest I of your fleecie sheepe (Might it you please) would take on me the keep. ²⁹⁰

For ere that unto armes I me betooke, Unto my fathers sheepe I usde to looke,
 That yet the skill thereof I have not loste:
 Thereto right well this curdog by my coste' (Meaning the Foxe) 'will serve, my sheepe to gather,
 And drive to follow after their belwether.'
 The Husbandman was meanelly well content, Triall to make of his endeavourment,
 And home him leading, lent to him the charge Of all his flocke, with libertie full large, ³⁰⁰ Giving accompt of th' annuall increce Both of their lambes, and of their woolley fleece.
 Thus is this Ape become a shepheard
 swaine,
 And the false Foxe his dog: (God give them paine)
 For ere the ycare have halfe his course out-run,
 And doo returne from whence he first begun,
 They shall him make an ill accompt of thrift.
 Now whenas Time, flying with winges swift, Expired had the terme, that these two javels Should render up a reckning of their travels ³¹⁰
 Unto their master, which it of them sought, Exceedingly they troubled were in thought, Ne wist what answer unto him to frame, Ne how to scape great punishment, or
 shame,
 For their false treason and vile theeverie.
 For not a lambe of all their flockes supply
 Had they to shew; but ever as they bred, They slue them, and upon their fleshes
 fed:
 For that disguised dog lov'd blood to spill, And drew the wicked shepheard to his will. ³²⁰
 So twixt them both they not a lambkin
 left,
 And when lambes fail'd, the old sheepes lives they reft;
 That how t' acquite themselves unto their lord
 They were in doubt, and flatly set aboard.
 The Foxe then counsel'd th' Ape for to require
 Respite till morrow t' answer his desire:

For times delay new hope of helpe still breeds.
 The goodman granted, doubting nought their deeds,
 And bad, next day that all should readie be.
 But they more subtill meaning had than he: ³³⁰
 For the next morrowes meed they closely
 ment,
 For feare of afterclaps, for to prevent:
 And that same evening, when all shrowded
 were
 In careles sleep, they, without care or
 feare,
 Cruelly fell upon their flock in folde, And of them slew at pleasure what they wolde:
 Of which whenas they feasted had their
 fill,
 For a full complement of all their ill, They stole away, and tooke their hastie flight, ³³⁹
 Carried in cloudes of all-concealing night.
 So was the Husbandman left to his losse, And they unto their fortunes change to tosse.
 After which sort they wandered long
 while,
 Abusing manie through their cloaked guile:
 That at the last they gan to be descryed Of everie one, and all their sleights espyed:
 So as their begging now them failed quyte; For none would give, but all men would them wyte.
 Yet would they take no paines to get their living, But seeke some other way to gaine by giving, ³⁵⁰
 Much like to begging, but much better named;
 For manie beg, which are thereof ashamed.
 And now the Foxe had gotten him a gowne, And th' Ape a cassocke sidelong hanging
 downe;
 For they their occupation meant to change,
 And now in other state abroad to range:
 For since their souldiers pas no better
 spedd,
 They forg'd another, as for clerkes bookeredd.
 Who passing forth, as their adventures
 fell,
 Through manie haps, which needs not here to tell, ³⁶⁰

At length chaunst with a formall Priest to
meete,
Whom they in civill manner first did greete,
And after askt an almes for Gods deare
love.
The man straight way his cholere up did
move,
And with reproachfull tearmes gan them
revile,
For following that trade so base and vile;
And askt what license or what pas they
had.
'Ah!' said the Ape, as sighing wondrous sad,
'Its an hard case, when men of good deserving Must either driven be perforce to sterving, Or asked for their pas by everie squib, 371
That list at will them to revile or snib:
And yet (God wote) small oddes I often
see Twixt them that aske, and them that asked
bee.
Natheles because you shall not us mis-
deeme,
But that we are as honest as we seeme, Yee shall our pasport at your pleasure see,
And then ye will (I hope) well mooved bee.'
Which when the Priest beheld, he vew'd it
nere,
As if therein some text he studying were,
But little els (God wote) could thereof
skill: 381
For read he could not evidenee nor will,
Ne tell a written word, ne write a letter, Ne make one title worse, ne make one better.
Of such deep learning little had he neede, Ne yet of Latine, ne of Greeke, that breede
Doubts mongst divines, and difference of texts,
From whence arise diversitie of sects,
And hatefull heresies, of God abhor'd.
But this good Sir did follow the plaine
word, 390
Ne medled with their controversies vaine:
All his care was, his service well to saine,
And to read homelies upon holidayes; When that was done, he might attend his
playes:
An easie life, and fit High God to please.
He, having overlookt their pas at ease, Gan at the length them to rebuke againe,
That no good trade of life did entertaine,

But lost their time in wandring loose abroad;
Seeing the world, in which they bootles boad, 400
Had wayes enough for all therein to live; Such grace did God unto his creatures
give.
Said then the Foxe: 'Who hath the world not tride
From the right way full eath may wander
wide.
We are but novices, new come abroad,
We have not yet the tract of anie troad,
Nor on us taken anie state of life,
But readie are of anie te make preife.
Therefore might please you, which the world have proved,
Us to advise, which forth but lately moved,
Of some good course, that we might under-
take, 411
Ye shall for ever us your bondmen make.' The Priest gan wexe halfe proud to be so praide,
And thereby willing to affoord them aide:
'It seemes,' said he, 'right well that ye be clerks, Both by your wittie words and by your werks.
Is not that name enough to make a living To him that hath a whit of Natures giving?
How manie honest men see ye arize Daylie thereby, and grow to goodly prize?
To deanes, to archdeacons, to commissaries, 421
To lords, to principalls, to prebendaries;
All jolly prelates, worthie rule to beare,
Who ever them envie: yet spite bites neare.
Why should ye doubt, then, but that ye like-
wise
Might unto some of those in time arise?
In the meane time to live in good estate, Loving that love, and hating those that hate.
Being some honest curate, or some vicker, Content with little in condition sieker.' 430
'Ah! but,' said th' Ape, 'the charge is wondrous great,
To feed mens soules, and hath an heavie
threat.'
'To feede mens soules,' quoth he, 'is not in
man:
For they must feed themselves, doo what we can.
We are but charg'd to lay the meate before:
Eate they that list, we need to doo no more.

But God it is that feedes them with his
grace,
The bread of life powr'd downe from heavenly place.

Therefore said he, that with the budding rod Did rule the Jewes, All skalbe taught of God. ⁴⁴⁰

That same hath Jesus Christ now to him
raught,

By whom the flock is rightly fed and taught:
He is the shepheard, and the priest is hee;
We but his shepheard swaines ordain'd to
bee.

Therefore herewith doo not your selfe dis-
may;

Ne is the paines so great, but beare ye may;
For not so great, as it was wont of yore, It's now a dayes, ne halfe so streight and
sore.

They whilome used duly everie day
Their service and their holie things to say, At morne and even, besides their anthemes sweete, ⁴⁵¹

Their penie masses, and their compynes
meete,

Their dirges, their trentals, and their shrifts, Their memories, their singings, and their gifts.

Now all those needlesse works are laid
away;

Now once a weeke, upon the Sabbath day,
It is enough to doo our small devotion,
And then to follow any merrie motion.

Ne are we tyde to fast, but when we list, Ne to weare garments base of wollen twist, ⁴⁶⁰

But with the finest silkes us to aray,
That before God we may appeare more gay, Resembling Aarous glorie in his place:

For farre unfit it is, that person base Should with vile cloaths approach Gods majestic,

Whom no uncleannes may approachen nie:
Or that all men, which anie master serve,
Good garments for their service should deserve,

But he that serves the Lord of Hoasts Most High,

And that in highest place, t' approach him nigh, ⁴⁷⁰

And all the peoples prayers to present Before his throne, as on ambassage sent Both too and fro, should not deserve to weare

A garment better than of wooll or heare.

Beside, we may have lying by our sides
Our lovely lasses, or bright shining brides:
We be not tyde to wilfull chastitie,
But have the gospell of free libertie.'

By that he ended had his ghostly sermon,
The Foxe was well induc'd to be a parson;
And of the Priest eftsoones gan to enquire,
How to a benefice he might aspire. ⁴⁸²

'Marie, there,' said the Priest, 'is arte indeed:

Much good deep learning one thereout may reed;

For that the ground-worke is, and end of
all,

How to obtaine a beneficiall.

First therefore, when ye have in handsome
wise

Your selfe attyred, as you can devise,
Then to some noble man your selfe applye,
Or other great one in the worldes eye, ⁴⁹⁰

That hath a zealous disposition

To God, and so to his religion.

There must thou fashion eke a godly zeale,
Such as no carpers may contrayre reveale:
For each thing fained ought more warie
bee.

There thou must walke in sober gravitee,
And seeme as saintlike as Saint Radegund: Fast much, pray oft, looke lowly on the
ground,

And unto everie one doo curtesie meeke:
These lookes (nought saying) doo a benefice seeke, ⁵⁰⁰

And be thou sure one not to lacke or long.
But if thee list unto the court to throng,
And there to hunt after the hoped pray,

Then must thou thee dispose another way:
For there thou needs must learne to laugh,
to lie,

To face, to forge, to scoffe, to companie,
To couche, to please, to be a beetle stock Of thy great masters will, to seorne, or mock:

So maist thou chauce mock out a benefice, Unless thou canst one conjure by device,
Or cast a figure for a bishoprick: ⁵¹¹

And if one could, it were but a schoole trick.

These be the wayes, by which without reward

Livings in court be gotten, though full hard.
For nothing there is done without a fee:

The courtier needs must recompenced bee
With a benevolence, or have in gage

The primitias of your parsonage:

Scarse can a bishoprick forpas them by,
 But that it must be gelt in privitie. ⁵²⁰ Doo not thou therefore seeke a living there,
 But of more private persons seeke elsewhere, Whereas thou maist compound a better penie, Ne let thy learning question'd be of anie.
 For some good gentleman, that hath the right Unto his church for to present a wight, Will cope with thee in reasonable wise;
 That if the living yerely doo arise
 To fortie pound, that then his yongest sonne Shall twentie have, and twentie thou hast wonne:
 Thou hast it wonne, for it is of frauke gift,
 And he will care for all the rest to shift;
 Both that the bishop may admit of thee,
 And that therein thou maist maintained bee.
 This is the way for one that is unlern'd Living to get, and not to be discern'd.
 But they that are great clerkes have nearer wayes,
 For learning sake to living them to raise:
 Yet manie eke of them (God wote) are driven,
 T' accept a benefice in peeces riven. ⁵⁴⁰
 How saist thou (friend) have I not well discourst Upon this common place (though plaine, not wourst)?
 Better a short tale than a bad long shriving.
 Needes anie more to learne to get a living?'
 'Now sure, and by my hallidome,' quoth he,
 'Ye a great master are in your degree:
 Great thanks I yeeld you for your discipline,
 And doo not doubt, but duly to encline
 My wits theretoo, as ye shall shortly heare.'
 The Priest him wisht good speed, and well to fare. ⁵⁵⁰ So parted they, as eithers way them led.
 But th' Ape and Foxe ere long so well them sped, Through the Priests holesome counsell lately tought,
 And throug' their own faire handling wisely wrought,
 That they a benefice twixt them obtained;
 And craftie Reynold was a priest ordained,
 And th' Ape his parish clarke procur'd to bee.
 Then made they reveil route and goodly glee. ⁵⁵⁸

But ere long time had passed, they so ill Did order their affaires, that th' evill will
 Of all their parishners they had constrain'd;
 Who to the ordinarie of them complain'd,
 How fowlie they their offices abus'd,
 And them of crimes and heresies accus'd;
 That pursivants he often for them sent:
 But they neglected his commaundement.
 So long persisted obstinate and bolde, Till at the length he published to holde
 A visitation, and them cyted thether: Then was high time their wits about to geather. ⁵⁷⁰
 What did they then, but made a composition
 With their next neighbor priest, for light condition,
 To whom their living they resigned quight
 For a few pence, and ran away by night.
 So passing through the countrey in disguise,
 They fled farre off, where none might them surprize,
 And after that long straid here and there,
 Through everie field and forrest farre and nere;
 Yet never found occasion for their tourne,
 But, almost sterv'd, did much lament and mourne. ⁵⁸⁰
 At last they chaunst to meete upon the way
 The Mule, all deckt in goodly riech aray, Wich bells and bosses, that full lowdly rung,
 And costly trappings, that to ground downe hung.
 Lowly they him saluted in meeke wise;
 But he through pride and fatnes gan despise Their meanesse; scarce vouchsafte them to requite.
 Whereat the Foxe deep groning in his sprite, Said: 'Ah, Sir Mule! now blessed be the day,
 That I see you so goodly and so gay ⁵⁹⁰
 In your attyes, and eke your silken hyde Fil'd with round flesh, that everie bone doth hide.
 Seemes that in fruitfull pastures ye doo live, Or Fortune doth you secreet favour give.'
 'Foolish Foxe!' said the Mule, 'thy wretched need Praiseth the thing that doth thy sorrow breed.
 For well I weene, thou canst not but envie
 My wealth, compar'd to thine owne miserie, That art so leane and meagre waxen late,
 That scarce thy legs uphold thy feeble gait.' 600

‘Ay me!’ said then the Foxe, ‘whom evill hap Unworthy in such wretchednes doth wrap,
And makes the scorne of other beasts to bee.
But read (faire sir, of grace) from whence come yee?
Or what of tidings you abroad doo heare?
Newes may perhaps some good unweeting beare.’ ‘From royall court I lately came,’ said he, ‘Where all the braverie that eye may see,
And all the happinesse that heart desire,
Is to be found; he nothing can admire, ⁶¹⁰
That hath not seene that heavens portrature:
But tidings there is none, I you assure,
Save that which common is, and knowne to all,
That courtiers as the tide doo rise and fall.’
‘But tell us,’ said the Ape, ‘we doo you pray, Who now in court doth beare the greatest sway:
That, if such fortune doo to us befall,
We may seeke favour of the best of all.’
‘Marie,’ said he, ‘the highest now in grace, Be the wilde beasts, that swiftest are in chase; ⁶²⁰
For in their speedie course and nimble flight
The Lyon now doth take the most delight:
But chieffie joyes on foote them to beholde, Enchaste with chaine and circulet of golde.
So wilde a beast so tame ytaught to bee,
And buxome to his bands, is joy to see;
So well his golden circlet him beseemeth:
But his late chayne his Liege unmeete esteemeth;
For so brave beasts she loveth best to see In the wilde forrest raunging fresh and free. ⁶³⁰ Therefore if fortune thee in court to live,
In case thou ever there wilt hope to thrive,
To some of these thou must thy selfe apply:
Els as a thistle-downe in th’ ayre doth flie,
So vainly shalt thou too and fro be tost,
And loose thy labour and thy fruitles cost.
And yet full few which follow them, I see,
For vertues bare regard advaniced bee,
But either for some gainfull benefit,
Or that they may for their owne turnes be fit. ⁶⁴⁰

Nath’les, perhaps ye things may handle soe,
That ye may better thrive than thousands moe.’ ‘But,’ said the Ape, ‘how shall we first come in,
That after we may favour seeke to win?’
‘How els,’ said he, ‘but with a good bold face,
And with big words, and with a stately pace,
That men may thinke of you, in generall,
That to be in you, which is not at all:
For not by that which is, the world now deemeth, (As it was wont) but by that same that seemeth. ⁶⁵⁰ Ne do I doubt, but that ye well can fashion
Your selves theretoo, according to occasion:
So fare ye well; good courtiers may ye bee.’
So, prouddie neighing, from them parted hee.
Then gan this craftie couple to devise,
How for the court themselves they might aguize:
For thither they themselves meant to ad-dresse,
In hope to finde there happier successe.
So well they shifted, that the Ape anon Himselfe had cloathed like a gentleman, ⁶⁶⁰
And the slie Foxe, as like to be his groome;
That to the court in seemly sort they come.
Where the fond Ape, himselfe uprearing hy Upon his tiptoes, stalketh stately by,
As if he were some great magnifico,
And boldlie doth amongst the boldest go;
And his man Reynold, with fine counterfe-saunce, Supports his credite and his countenance.
Then gan the courtiers gaze on everie side,
And stare on him, with big lookes basen wide, ⁶⁷⁰ Wondring what mister wight he was, and whence:
For he was clad in strange accoustrements, Fashion’d with quaint devises never seene
In court before, yet there all fashions beene:
Yet he them in newfanglenesse did pas.
But his behaviour altogether was Alla Turchesca, much the more admyr’d,
And his lookes loftie, as if he aspyr’d To dignitie, and sdeign’d the low degree;
That all which did such strangenesse in him see ⁶⁸⁰

By secrete meanes gan of his state enquire,
 And privily his servant thereto hire:
 Who, throughly arm'd against such cover-
 ture,
 Reported unto all, that he was sure
 A noble gentleman of high regard, Which through the world had with long travel far'd,
 And seene the manners of all beasts on
 ground;
 Now here arriv'd, to see if like he found.
 Thus did the Ape at first him credit gaine, Which afterwards he wisely did maintaine With gallant showe, and daylie more ang-ment ⁶⁹¹
 Through his fine feates and courtly complement;
 For he could play, and daunce, and vaue, and spring,
 And all that els pertaines to reveling, Onely through kindly aptnes of his joynts.
 Besides he could doo manie other poynts, The which in court him served to good
 stead:
 For he amongst ladies could their fortunes
 read
 Out of their hands, and merie leasings
 tell,
 And juggle finely, that became him well:
 But he so light was at legier demaine, ⁷⁰¹ That what he toucht came not to light
 againe;
 Yet would he laugh it out, and proudly
 looke,
 And tell them that they greatly him mis-
 tooke.
 So would he scoffe them out with mockerie,
 For he therein had great felicitie;
 And with sharp quips joy'd others to deface, Thinking that their disgracing did him
 grace:
 So whilst that other like vaine wits he pleased
 And made to laugh, his heart was greatly eased. ⁷¹⁰
 But the right gentle minde would bite his lip,
 To heare the javell so good men to nip:
 For though the vulgar yeeld an open eare, And common courtiers love to gybe and floure
 At everie thing, which they heare spoken
 ill,
 And the best speaches with ill meaning
 spill;

Yet the brave courtier, in whose beauteous
 thought Regard of honour harbours more than ought,
 Doth loath such base condition, to backbite Anies good name for envie or despite. ⁷²⁰
 He stands on tearmes of honourable minde, Ne will be carried with the common winde
 Of courts inconstant mutabilitie, Ne after everie tattling fable flie;
 But heares and sees the follies of the rest,
 And thereof gathers for himselfe the best.
 He will not creepe, nor crouche with fained face,
 But walkes upright with comely stedfast pace,
 And unto all doth yeeld due curtesie;
 But not with kissed hand belowe the knee, ⁷³⁰
 As that same apish crue is wont to doo:
 For he disdaines himselfe t' embase there-too.
 He hates fowle leasings, and vile flatterie,
 Two filthie blots in noble gentrie;
 And lothefull idlenes he doth detest,
 The canker worme of everie gentle brest;
 The which to banish with faire exercise Of knightly feates, he daylie doth devise:
 Now menaging the mouthes of stubborne steedes, Now practising the prooffe of warlike deedes, ⁷⁴⁰
 Now his bright armes assaying, now his
 speare,
 Now the nigh aymed ring away to beare:
 At other times he casts to sew the chace Of swift wilde beasts, or runne on foote a race, T' enlarge his breath (large breath in armes most needfull) Or els by wrestling to wex strong and heedfull,
 Or his stiffe armes to stretch with eughen
 bowe,
 And manly legs, still passing too and fro, Without a gowned beast him fast beside;
 A vaine ensample of the Persian pride, ⁷⁵⁰
 Who after he had wonne th' Assyrian foe, Did ever after scorne on foote to goe.
 Thus when this courtly gentleman with
 toyle Himselfe hath wearied, he doth recoyle Unto his rest, and there with sweete de-
 light
 Of musicks skill revives his toyled spright;

Or els with loves and ladies gentle sports,
 The joy of youth, himselfe he recomforts:
 Or lastly, when the bodie list to pause,
 His minde unto the Muses he withdrawes; Sweete Ladie Muses, ladies of delight, 761 Delights of life, and ornaments of light:
 With whom he close confers, with wise discourse,
 Of Natures workes, of heavens continuall
 course,
 Of forreine lands, of people different,
 Of kingdomes change, of divers government,
 Of dreadfull battailes of renowned knights;
 With which he kindleth his ambitious
 sprights
 To like desire and praise of noble fame,
 The onely upshot whereto he doth ayme.
 For all his minde on honour fixed is, 771
 To which he levels all his purposis,
 And in his priuces service spends his dayes,
 Not so much for to gaine, or for to raise Himselfe to high degree, as for his grace,
 And in his liking to winne worthie place, Through due deserts and comely carriage,
 In whatso please employ his personage, That may be matter meete to gaine him
 praise;
 For he is fit to use in all assayes, 780
 Whether for armes and warlike amenaunce, Or else for wise and civill governaunce.
 For he is practiz'd well in policie,
 And thereto doth his courting most applie:
 To learne the enterdeale of princes strange, To marke th' intent of counsells, and the change
 Of states, and eke of private men some-
 while,
 Supplanted by fine falshood and faire guile;
 Of all the which he gathereth what is fit T' enrich the storehouse of his powerfull
 wit, 790
 Which through wise speaches and grave conference
 He daylie eekes, and brings to excellence.
 Such is the rightfull courtier in his kinde:
 But unto such the Ape lent not his minde;
 Such were for him no fit companions,
 Such would descrie his lewd conditions:
 But the yong lustie gallants he did chose To follow, meete to whom he might disclose
 His witlesse pleasance and ill pleasing vaine.
 A thousand wayes he them could enter-
 taine, 800

With all the thriftles games that may be
 found;
 With mumming and with masking all
 around,
 With dice, with cards, with balliards farre unfit,
 With shuttelecocks, misseeming manlie wit,
 With courtizans, and costly riotize.
 Whereof still somewhat to his share did rize:
 Ne, them to pleasure, would he sometimes
 scorne
 A pandares coate (so basely was he borne);
 Thereto he could fine loving verses frame,
 And play the poet oft. But ah! for shame, Let not sweete poets praise, whose onely
 pride 811
 Is vertue to advaunce, and vice deride, Be with the worke of losels wit defamed, Ne let such verses poetrie be named.
 Yet he the name on him would rashly take, Maugre the sacred Muses, and it make A servant to the vile affection Of such as he depended most upon,
 And with the sugrie sweete thereof allure Chast ladies eares to fantasies impure. 820 To such delights the noble wits he led Which him reliev'd, and their vaine humours
 fed
 With fruitles follies and unsound delights.
 But if perhaps into their noble sprights Desire of honor or brave thought of armes Did ever creepe, then with his wicked
 charmes
 And strong conceits he would it drive
 away,
 Ne suffer it to house there halfe a day.
 And whenso love of letters did inspire Their gentle wits, and kindly wise desire, 830
 That chieffie doth each noble minde adore, Then he would scoffe at learning, and eke
 scorne
 The sectaries thereof, as people base And simple men, which never came in place
 Of worlds affaires, but, in darke corners mewd, Muttred of matters, as their bookes them shewd,
 Ne other knowledge ever did attaine, But with their gownes their gravitie main-
 taine.
 From them he would his impudent lewde speech
 Against Gods holie ministers oft reach, 840

And mocke divines and their profession:
 What else then did he by progression, But mocke High God himselfe, whom they professe?

But what car'd he for God, or godlinesse?
 All his care was himselfe how to aduance,
 And to uphold his courtly countenance
 By all the cunning meanes he could devise;
 Were it by honest wayes, or otherwise,
 He made small choyce: yet sure his honestie Got him small games, but shameles flatterie,

850

And filthie brocage, and unseemly shifts,
 And borowe base, and some good ladies gifts:
 But the best helpe, which chiefly him sustain'd,
 Was his man Reynolds purchase which he gain'd.

For he was school'd by kinde in all the skill Of close conveyance, and each practise ill
 Of coosinage and cleanly knaverie, Which oft maintain'd his masters braverie.
 Besides, he usde another slipprie slight,
 In taking on himselfe, in common sight,

860

False personages fit for euerie sted,
 With which he thousands cleanly coosined:
 Now like a merchant, merchants to deceave,
 With whom his credite he did often leaue In gage, for his gay masters hopelesse dett:
 Now like a lawyer, when he land would lett,
 Or sell fee-simples in his masters name,
 Which he had never, nor ought like the same:
 Then would he be a broker, and draw in Both wares and money, by exchange to win:

870

Then would he seeme a farmer, that would sell

Bargaines of woods, which he did lately fell,
 Or corne, or cattle, or such other ware, Thereby to coosin men not well aware;
 Of all the which there came a secret fee
 To th' Ape, that he his countenance might bee.

Besides all this, he usd' oft to beguile Poore suters, that in court did haunt some while:

For he would leaue their busines secretly,
 And then informe his master hastely,

880

That he by meanes might cast them to prevent,
 And beg the sute the which the other ment.
 Or otherwise false Reynold would abuse
 The simple suter, and wish him to chuse His master, being one of great regard In court, to compas anie sute not hard,

In case his paines were recompenst with reason:

So would he worke the silly man by treason

To buy his masters frivolous good will,
 That had not power to doo him good or ill.

890

So pitifull a thing is suters state.
 Most miserable man, whom wicked fate Hath brought to court, to sue for had ywist, That few have found, and manie one hath mist!

Full little knowest thou that hast not tride,
 What hell it is, in suing long to bide:

To loose good dayes, that might be better spent;

To wast long nights in pensive discontent;
 To speed to day, to be put back to morrow;
 To feed on hope, to pine with feare and sorrow;

900

To have thy Princes grace, yet want her Peeres;

To have thy asking, yet waite manie yeeres;
 To fret thy soule with crosses and with cares;

To eate thy heart through comfortlesse dispaire;

To fawne, to crowche, to waite, to ride, to romie,

To spend, to give, to want, to be undonne.
 Unhappie wight, borne to desastrous end,
 That doth his life in so long tendance spend!

Who ever leaues sweete home, where meane estate

In safe assurance, without strife or hate, 910

Findes all things needfull for contentment meeke,

And will to court, for shadowes vaine to seeke,

Or hope to gaine, himselfe will a daw trie:
 That curse God send unto mineemie!

For none but such as this bold Ape unblest Can ever thrive in that unluckie quest;

Or such as hath a Reynold to his man,
 That by his shifts his master furnish can.

But yet this Foxe could not so closely hide His craftie feates, but that they were descride

920

At length, by such as sate in iustie seate,
 Who for the same him fowlie did entreate;

And having worthily him punished,
 Out of the court for ever banished.

And now the Ape, wanting his huckster man,
 That wont provide his necessaries, gan

To growe into great lacke, ne could up-
 holde
 His countenance in those his garments
 olde;
 Ne new ones could he easily provide,
 Though all men him uncased gan deride,
 Like as a puppit placed in a play, ⁹³¹
 Whose part once past all men bid take away:
 So that he driven was to great distresse, And shortly brought to hopelesse wretch-ednesse.
 Then, closely as he might, he cast to leave
 The court, not asking any passe or leave;
 But ran away in his rent rags by night,
 Ne ever stayd in place, ne spake to wight, Till that the Foxe, his copesmate, he had
 found;
 To whome complayning his unhappy stound, ⁹⁴⁰
 At last againe with him in travell joynd,
 And with him far'd some better chaunce to fynde.
 So in the world long time they wandered,
 And mickle want and hardnesse suffered;
 That them repented much so foolishly
 To come so farre to seeke for misery,
 And leave the sweetnes of contented home, Though eating hipps and drinking watry fome.
 Thus as they them complayned too and fro, Whilst through the forest rechlesse they did goe, ⁹⁵⁰
 Lo! where they spide, how in a gloomy glade
 The Lyon sleeping lay in secret shade, His crowne and scepter lying him beside,
 And having doft for heate his dreadfull
 hide:
 Which when they sawe, the Ape was sore afrayde,
 And would have fled with terror all dis-mayde.
 But him the Foxe with hardy words did
 stay,
 And bad him put all cowardize away:
 For now was time (if ever they would hope)
 To ayme their counsels to the fairest scope, ⁹⁶⁰
 And them for ever highly to advaunce, In case the good, which their owne happie
 chaunce
 Them freely offred, they would wisely take.
 Scarse could the Ape yet speake, so did he awake:

Yet, as he could, he askt how good might
 growe,
 Where nought but dread and death do seeme in show.
 'Now,' sayd he, 'whiles the Lyon sleepeth
 sound,
 May we his crowne and mace take from the ground,
 And eke his skinne, the terror of the wood, Wherewith we may our selves (if we thinke good) ⁹⁷⁰
 Make kings of beasts, and lords of forests
 all,
 Subject unto that powre imperiall.'
 'Ah! but,' sayd the Ape, 'who is so bold a wretch,
 That dare his hardy hand to those outstretch,
 When as he knowes his meede, if he be
 spide,
 To be a thousand deathes, and shame be-
 side?'
 'Fond Ape!' sayd then the Foxe, 'into whose brest Never crept thought of honor nor brave
 gest,
 Who will not venture life a king to be,
 And rather rule and raigne in soveraign see, ⁹⁸⁰
 Than dwell in dust inglorious and bace, Where none shall name the number of his
 place?
 One joyous houre in blisfull happines,
 I chose before a life of wretchednes.
 Be therefore counselled herein by me,
 And shake off this vile harted cowardree.
 If he awake, yet is not death the next,
 For we may coulor it with some pretext
 Of this or that, that may excuse the cryme:
 Else we may flye; thou to a tree mayst clyme, ⁹⁹⁰
 And I creepe under ground; both from his
 reach:
 Therefore be rul'd to doo as I doo teach.'
 The Ape, that earst did nought but chill and quake,
 Now gan some courage unto him to take,
 And was content to attempt that enterprise, Ticked with glorie and rash covetise.
 But first gan question, whither should as-
 say
 Those royall ornaments to steale away.
 'Marie, that shall your selfe,' quoth he theretoo,
 'For ye be fine and nimble it to doo; ¹⁰⁰⁰

Of all the beasts which in the forrests bee
 Is not a fitter for this turne than yee: Therefore, mine owne deare brother, take good hart,
 And ever thinke a kingdome is your part.
 Loath was the Ape, though praised, to ad-venter,
 Yet faintly gan into his worke to enter, Afraid of everie leafe that stir'd him by,
 And everie stick that underneath did ly:
 Upon his tiptoes nicely he up went, ¹⁰⁰⁹
 For making noyse, and still his eare he lent
 To everie sound that under heaven blew; Now went, now stept, now crept, now backward drew,
 That it good sport had been him to have eyde.
 Yet at the last (so well he him applyde)
 Through his fine handling and cleanly play
 He all those royall signes had stolne away,
 And with the Foxes helpe them borne aside Into a secret corner unespide.
 Whether whenas they came, they fell at words, Whether of them should be the lord of lords: ¹⁰²⁰
 For th' Ape was stryfull and ambitious,
 And the Foxe guilefull and most covetous;
 That neither pleased was, to have the rayne Twixt them divided into even twaine,
 But either algates would be lord alone:
 For love and lordship bide no paragone.
 'I am most worthie,' said the Ape, 'sith I For it did put my life in jeopardie:
 Thereto I am in person and in stature Most like a man, the lord of everie creature; ¹⁰³⁰
 So that it seemeth I was made to raigne,
 And borne to be a kingly soveraigne.'
 'Nay,' said the Foxe, 'Sir Ape, you are astray:
 For though to steale the diademe away
 Were the worke of your nimble hand, yet I Did first devise the plot by pollicie;
 So that it wholly springeth from my wit:
 For which also I claime my selfe more fit Than you to rule: for government of state Will without wisdome soone be ruinate.
 And where ye claime your selfe for outward shape ¹⁰⁴¹
 Most like a man, man is not like an ape
 In his chiefe parts, that is, in wit and spirite;
 But I therein most like to him doo merite,
 For my slie wyles and subtyll craftinesse,
 The title of the kingdome to possesse.

Nath'les (my brother) since we passed are Unto this point, we will appease our jarre;
 And I with reason meete will rest content, That ye shall have both crowne and government, ¹⁰⁵⁰
 Upon condition that ye ruled bee
 In all affaires, and counselled by mee;
 And that ye let none other ever drawe Your minde from me, but keepe this as a lawe:
 And hereupon an oath unto me plight?
 The Ape was glad to end the strife so light,
 And thereto swore: for who would not oft swaere,
 And oft unswaere, a diademe to beare?
 Then freely up those royall spoyles he
 tooke;
 Yet at the Lyons skin he inly quooke; ¹⁰⁶⁰
 But it dissembled; and upon his head The crowne, and on his backe the skin, he did,
 And the false Foxe him helped to array.
 Then when he was all dight he tooke his
 way
 Into the forest, that he might be seene
 Of the wilde beasts in his new glory sheene.
 There the two first whome he encountred
 were
 The Sheepe and th' Asse, who, stricken both with feare
 At sight of him, gan fast away to flye;
 But unto them the Foxe alowd did cry, ¹⁰⁷⁰ And in the kings name bad them both to
 stay,
 Upon the payne that thereof follow may.
 Hardly naythles were they restrayned so, Till that the Foxe forth toward them did
 goe,
 And there disswaded them from needlesse
 feare,
 For that the king did favour to them beare;
 And therefore dreadles bad them come to corte:
 For no wild beasts should do them any torte
 There or abroad, ne would his Majestye Use them but well, with gracious clemeneye, ¹⁰⁸⁰
 As whome he knew to him both fast and true.
 So he perswaded them, with homage due Themselves to humble to the Ape prostrate,
 Who, gently to them bowing in his gate,

Receyved them with chearefull entertayne.
Thenceforth proceeding with his princely trayne,

He shortly met the Tygre, and the Bore, Which with the simple Camell raged sore
In bitter words, seeking to take occasion, Upon his fleshly corpse to make invasion: 1090
But soone as they this mock-king did espy, Their troublous strife they stinted by and
by,

Thinking indeed that it the Lyon was.
He then, to prove whether his powre would pas

As currant, sent the Foxe to them streight
way, Commaunding them their cause of strife
bewray;

And, if that wrong on eyther side there
were,
That he should warne the wronger to ap-
peare

The morrow next at court, it to defend; 1099
In the meane time upon the king t' attend.
The subtile Foxe so well his message sayd,
That the proud beasts him readily obeyd:
Whereby the Ape in wondrous stomack woxe,

Strongly encorag'd by the crafty Foxe;
That king indeed himselfe he shortly
thought,

And all the beasts him feared as they ought,
And followed unto his palaise hie;
Where taking conge, each one by and by Departed to his home in dreadful awe, Full of the feared sight, which late they sawe. 1110

The Ape, thus seized of the regall throne, Eftsones by counsell of the Foxe alone Gan to provide for all things in assurance, That so his rule might lenger have endurance.

First, to his gate he pointed a strong gard,
That none might enter but with issue hard:
Then, for the safegard of his personage,
He did appoint a warlike equipage
Of forreine beasts, not in the forest bred,
But part by land and part by water fed; 1120
For tyrannie is with strange ayde supported.
Then unto him all monstrous beasts resorted Bred of two Kindes, as Griffons, Minotaures, Crocodiles, Dragons, Beavers, and Cen-taures:

With those himselfe he strengthened mighte-
lie,
That feare he neede no force ofemie.

Then gan he rule and tyrannize at will,
Like as the Foxe did guide his graceles
skill,

And all wylde beasts made vassals of his pleasures,
And with their spoyles enlarg'd his private treasures. 1130

No care of justice, nor no rule of reason,
No temperance, nor no regard of season,
Did thenceforth ever enter in his minde,
But crueltie, the signe of currish kinde, And sdeignfull pride, and wilfull arro-gaunce;

Such followes those whom fortune doth ad-
vaunce.

But the false Foxe most kindly plaid his
part:

For whatsoever mother wit or arte Could worke, he put in prooffe: no practise sle,

No counterpoint of cunning polieie, 1140 No reach, no breach, that might him profit
bring,

But he the same did to his purpose wring.
Nought suffered he the Ape to give or graunt,

But through his hand must passe the faunt.
All offices, all leases by him lept,
And of them all whatso he likte he kept.
Justice he solde injustice for to buy,
And for to purchase for his progeny.

Ill might it prosper, that ill gotten was,
But, so he got it, little did he pas. 1150
He fed his cubs with fat of all the soyle,
And with the sweete of others sweating
toyle;

He crammed them with crumbs of bene-fices,
And fild their mouthes with meeds of malefices;

He clothed them with all colours save white,
And loded them with lordships and with
might,

So much as they were able well to beare,
That with the weight their backs nigh broken were.

He chaffred chayres in which churchmen were set,
And breach of lawes to privie ferme did let; 1160

No statute so established might bee, Nor ordinaunce so needfull, but that hee Would violat, though not with violence Yet under colour of the confidence

The which the Ape reposed' in him alone, And reckned him the kingdomes corner stone.

And ever, when he ought would bring to
pas,

His long experience the platforme was:
And when he ought not pleasing would put
by,

The cloke was care of thrift, and husbandry, 1170

For to encrease the common treasures store.
But his owne treasure he encreased more,
And lifted up his loftie towres thereby,
That they began to threat the neighbour
sky;

The whiles the princes pallaces fell fast
To ruine, (for what thing can ever last?)
And whilst the other peeres, for povertie, Were first their auncient houses to let
lie,

And their olde castles to the ground to fall, Which their forefathers, famous over
all, 1180

Had founded for the kingdomes ornament,
And for their memories long monument.

But he no count made of nobilitie, Nor the wilde beasts whom armes did glorifie,

The realmes chiefe strength and girlond of the crowne.

All these through fained crimes he thrust
adowne,

Or made them dwell in darknes of dis-
grace:

For none but whom he list might come in
place.

Of men of armes he had but small regard,
But kept them lowe, and streigned verie hard. 1190

For men of learning little he esteemed;
His wisdom he above their learning deemed.

As for the rascall commons, least he cared;
For not so common was his bountie shared:
'Let God,' said he, 'if please, care for the manie,

I for my selfe must care before els anie.'
So did he good to none, to manie ill,
So did he all the kingdome rob and pill, Yet none durst speake, ne none durst of him plaine;

So great he was in grace, and rich through
gaine. 1200

Ne would he anie let to have accesse Unto the prince, but by his owne addresse:

For all that els did come were sure to faile;

Yet would he further none but for availe.
For on a time the Sheepe, to whom of
yore

The Foxe had promised of friendship store, What time the Ape the kingdome first did
gaine,

Came to the court, her case there to com-
plaine;

How that the Wolfe, her mortall enemie, Had sithence slaine her lambe most cruel-
lie; 1210

And therefore crav'd to come unto the king,

To let him knowe the order of the thing.
'Soft, Gooddie Sheepe!' then said the Foxe, 'not soe:

Unto the king so rash ye may not goe;
He is with greater matter busied

Than a lambe, or the lambes owne mothers hed.

Ne certes may I take it well in part,
That ye my cousin Wolfe so fowly thwart, And seeke with slaunder his good name to blot:

For there was cause, els doo it he would not: 1220

Therefore surcease, good dame, and hence depart.'

So went the Sheepe away with heaive hart;
So manie moe, so everie one was used,
That to give largely to the boxe refused.

Now when high Jove, in whose almightie
hand

The care of kings and power of empires
stand,

Sitting one day within his turret hye, From whence he vewes with his blacklidded eye

Whatso the heaven in his wide vawte con-taines,

And all that in the deepest earth re-maines, 1230

And troubled kingdome of wilde beasts be-helde,

Whom not their kindly soveraigne did welde,

But an usurping Ape, with guile suborn'd,
Had all subverst, he sdeignfully it scorn'd In his great heart, and hardly did refraine But that with thunder bolts he had him
slaine,

And driven downe to hell, his dewest meed.
But him avizing, he that dreadfull deed

Forbore, and rather chose with scornfull
shame 1239

Him to avenge, and blot his brutish name Unto the world, that never after anie Should of his race be voyd of infamie:
And his false counsellor, the cause of all,
To damne to death, or dole perpetuall, From whence he never should be quit nor stal'd.

Forthwith he Mercurie unto him cal'd,
And bad him flie with never resting speed Unto the forrest, where wilde beasts doo breed,

And there enquiring privily, to learne What did of late chauce to the Lyon stearne, 1250

That he rul'd not the empire, as he ought;
And whence were all those plaints unto him
brought

Of wrongs and spoyles by salvage beasts committed;

Which done, he bad the Lyon be remitted Into his seate, and those same treachours vile

Be punished for their presumptuous guile.
The somme of Maia, soone as he receiv'd That word, streight with his azure wings he cleav'd

The liquid clowdes and lucid firmament; Ne staid, till that he came with steep descent 1260

Unto the place, where his prescript did showe.

There stouping, like an arrowe from a
bowe,

He soft arrived on the grassie plaine,
And fairly paced forth with easie paine, Till that unto the pallace nigh he came.

Then gan he to himselfe new shape to frame,
And that faire face, and that ambrosiall
hew,

Which wons to decke the gods immortall
crew,

And beautifie the shinie firmament,
He doft, unnt for that rude rabblement. 1270

So standing by the gates in strange disguise,
He gan enquire of some in secret wize,
Both of the king, and of his government,
And of the Foxe, and his false blandish-
ment:

And evermore he heard each one complaine
Of foule abuses both in realme and raine:
Which yet to prove more true, he meant to
see,

And an ey-witnes of each thing to bee.

Tho on his head his dreadfull hat he dight,
Which maketh him invisible in sight, 1280
And mocketh th' eyes of all the lookers on, Making them thinke it but a vision.

Through power of that, he runnes through enemies swerds;

Through power of that, he passeth through the herds

Of ravenous wilde beasts, and doth beguile Their greedie mouthes of the expected
spoyle;

Through power of that, his cunning theeveries

He wons to worke, that none the same es-pies;

And through the power of that, he putteth
on

What shape he list in apparition. 1290

That on his head he wore, and in his hand
He tooke Caduceus, his snake wand,

With which the damned ghosts he governeth,

And furies rules, and Tartare tempereth.
With that he causeth sleep to seize the eyes,

And feare the harts of all his enemyes;
And when him list, an universall night

Throughout the world he makes on everie
wight,

As when his syre with Aleumena lay.
Thus dight, into the court he tooke his

way, 1300

Both through the gard, which never him
descride,

And through the watchmen, who him never
spide:

Thenceforth he past into each secrete part, Whereas he saw, that sorely griev'd his

hart,

Each place abounding with fowle injuries,
And filld with treasure rackt with robberies;

Each place defilde with blood of guiltles beasts,

Which had been slaine, to serve the Apes beheasts;

Gluttonie, malice, pride, and covetize,
And lawlesnes rainging with riotize, 1310

Besides the infinite extortions, Done through the Foxes great oppressions,

That the complaints thereof could not be tolde.

Which when he did with lothfull eyes be-
holde,

He would no more endure, but came his
way,

And cast to seeke the Lion, where he may,

That he might worke the avengement for this shame
 On those two caytives, which had bred him
 blame;
 And seeking all the forrest busily,
 At last he found where sleeping he did ly.
 The wicked weed, which there the Foxe did lay, ¹³²¹
 From underneath his head he tooke away,
 And then him waking, forced up to rize.
 The Lion, looking up, gan him avize,
 As one late in a traunce, what had of long Become of him: for fantasie is strong.
 'Arise,' said Mercurie, 'thou sluggish beast, That here liest senseles, like the corpse deceast,
 The whilst thy kingdome from thy head is rent,
 And thy throne royall with dishonour blent: ¹³³⁰
 Arise, and doo thy selfe redeeme from
 shame,
 And be aveng'd on those that breed thy
 blame.'
 Thereat enraged, soone he gan upstart, Grinding his teeth, and grating his great
 hart,
 And, rouzing up himselfe, for his rough
 hide
 He gan to reach; but no where it espide.
 Therewith he gan full terribly to rore,
 And chaffe at that indignitie right sore.
 But when his crowne and scepter both he wanted,
 Lord! how he fum'd, and sweld, and rag'd, and panted, ¹³⁴⁰
 And threatned death and thousand deadly dolours
 To them that had purloyn'd his princely honours!
 With that in hast, disroabed as he was,
 He toward his owne pallace forth did
 pas;
 And all the way he roared as he went,
 That all the forrest with astonishment Thereof did tremble, and the beasts therein Fled fast away from that so dreadfull din.
 At last he came unto his mansion, Where all the gates he found fast lockt anon, ¹³⁵⁰
 And manie warders round about them stood:
 With that he roar'd aloud, as he were
 wood,
 That all the pallace quaked at the stound,
 As if it quite were riven from the ground.

And all within were dead and hartles left;
 And th' Ape himselfe, as one whose wits were reft, Fled here and there, and everie corner
 sought,
 To hide himselfe from his owne feared
 thought.
 But the false Foxe, when he the Lion heard, Fled closely forth, streightway of death afeard, ¹³⁶⁰
 And to the Lion came, full lowly creeping, With fained face, and watrie eyne halfe weeping,
 T' excuse his former treason and abusion,
 And turning all unto the Apes confusion:
 Nath'les the royall beast forbore beleiving, But bad him stay at ease till further preev-
 ing.
 Then when he saw no entrance to him graunted, Roaring yet lowder, that all harts it daunted,
 Upon those gates with force he fiercely flewe,
 And, rending them in pieces, felly slewe Those warders strange, and all that els he met. ¹³⁷¹
 But th' Ape, still flying, he no where might get:
 From rowme to rowme, from beame to beame he fled,
 All breathles, and for feare now almost
 ded:
 Yet him at last the Lyon spide, and caught,
 And forth with shame unto his judgement
 brought.
 Then all the beasts he causd' assembled
 bee,
 To heare their doome, and sad ensample
 see:
 The Foxe, first author of that treacherie,
 He did uncase, and then away let flie. ¹³⁸⁰ But th' Apes long taile (which then he had) he quight
 Cut off, and both eares pared of their hight; Since which, all apes but halfe their eares have left,
 And of their tailles are utterlie bereft.
 So Mother Hubberd her discourse did
 end:
 Which pardon me, if I amisse have pend,
 For weake was my remembrance it to hold,
 And bad her tongue, that it so bluntly tolde.

FINIS.

RUINES OF ROME

BY BELLAY

[The Songs of Du Bellay, of which the 'Visions of Bellay' are a rendering, forms a kind of appendix to his Antiquitez de Rome. Spenser, having had his attention directed to the former, would naturally read also the latter: the result was this other translation, 'Ruins of Rome.' It is difficult to believe that this work is not also of his university days. In the 'Envoy,' to be sure, he refers to the Sepmaine of Du Bartas, first published in 1578, but the 'Envoy,' or that part of it, may very well be an afterthought. Both the weight of antecedent probability and the evidence of style would place the translation proper with the two earliest series of 'visions,' those of Bellay and of Petrarch. They are all three much of a piece. As translations in the larger sense, though often resourceful and apt, they can hardly be said to foretell the rare felicity of his later renderings from Tasso. As poetic exercises, however, they show at least the rudiments of that copious ease which is the mark of his maturer style.]

I

YE heavenly spirites, whose ashie cinders lie Under deep ruines, with huge walls op-
prest,

But not your praise, the which shall never
die,

Through your faire verses, ne in ashes rest;
If so be shrilling voyce of wight alive May reach from hence to depth of darkest
hell,

Then let those deep abysses open rive,
That ye may understand my shreiking yell.
Thrice having seene, under the heavens
veale,

Your toombs devoted compasse over all,
Thrice unto you with lowd voyce I appeale,
And for your antique furie here doo call,
The whiles that I with sacred horror sing Your glorie, fairest of all earthly thing.

II

Great Babylon her haughtie walls will praise,
And sharped steeples high shot up in ayre; Greece will the olde Ephesian buildings blaze;

And Nylus nurslings their pyramides faire;
The same yet vaunting Greece will tell the storie

Of Joves great image in Olympus placed;

Mausolus worke will be the Carians glorie;
And Crete will boast the Labyrinth, now
raced;

The antique Rhodian will likewise set forth
The great colosse, erect to Memorie;
And what els in the world is of like worth,
Some greater learned wit will magnifie.

But I will sing above all monuments Seven Romane hills, the worlds seven wonderments.

III

Thou stranger, which for Rome in Rome here seekest,

And nought of Rome in Rome perceiv'st at
all,

These same olde walls, olde arches, which thou seeest,

Olde palaces, is that which Rome men call.
Behold what wreake, what ruine, and what wast,

And how that she, which with her mightie
powre

Tam'd all the world, hath tam'd herselfe at
last,

The pray of Time, which all things doth devowre.

Rome now of Rome is th' onely funerall,
And onely Rome of Rome hath victorie;
Ne ought save Tyber hastning to his fall Remaines of all: O worlds inconstancie!

That which is firme doth flit and fall away,
And that is flitting doth abide and stay.

She, whose high top above the starres did
sore,

One foote on Thetis, th' other on the Morning,

One hand on Scythia, th' other on the More, Both heaven and earth in roundnesse com-passing,

Jove, fearing least, if she should greater
growe,

The old giants should once againe uprising, Her whelm'd with hills, these seven hills, which be nowe

Tombes of her greatnes, which did threate the skies:

Upon her head he heapt Mount Saturnal, Upon her bellie th' antique Palatine, Upon her stomacke laid Mount Quirinal,
On her left hand the noysome Esquiline,

And Celian on the right; but both her feete Mount Viminal and Aventine doo meete.

V

Who lists to see what ever nature, arte And heaven could doo, O Rome, thee let him see,
 In case thy greatnes he can gesse in harte
 By that which but the picture is of thee.
 Rome is no more: but if the shade of Rome May of the bodie yeeld a seeming sight, It's like a corse drawne forth out of the tombe
 By magicke skill out of eternall night:
 The corpes of Rome in ashes is entombed, And her great spirite, rejoyned to the spirite
 Of this great masse, is in the same en-womb'd;
 But her brave writings, which her famous merite,
 In spight of Time, out of the dust doth
 reare,
 Doo make her idole through the world
 appeare.

VI

Such as the Berecynthian goddesse bright, In her swift charret with high turrets crownde, Proud that so manie gods she brought to
 light,
 Such was this citie in her good daies fownd:
 This citie, more than that great Phrygian mother
 Renowm'd for fruite of famous progenie, Whose greatnes by the greatnes of none
 other,
 But by her selfe, her equall match could
 see:
 Rome onely might to Rome compared
 bee,
 And onely Rome could make great Rome to tremble:
 So did the gods by heavenly doome decree,
 That other earthlie power should not resemble
 Her that did match the whole earths puissance,
 And did her courage to the heavens advance.

VII

Ye sacred ruines, and ye tragick sights,
 Which onely doo the name of Rome retainē, Olde monuments, which of so famous
 sprights
 The honour yet in ashes doo maintaine,

Triumphant arcks, spyres neighbours to the skie,
 That you to see doth th' heaven it selfe
 appall,
 Alas! by little ye to nothing flie,
 The peoples fable, and the spoyle of all:
 And though your frames do for a time make warre Gainst Time, yet Time in time shall ruin-ate
 Your workes and names, and your last reliquies marre.
 My sad desires, rest therefore moderate:
 For if that Time make ende of things so
 sure,
 It als will end the paine which I endure.

VIII

Through armes and vassals Rome the world subdu'd,
 That one would weene that one sole cities strength
 Both land and sea in roundnes had survew'd,
 To be the measure of her bredth and length:
 This peoples vertue yet so fruitfull was Of vertuous nephewes, that posteritie, Striving in power their grandfathers to passe,
 The lowest earth join'd to the heaven hie;
 To th' end that, having all parts in their power, Nought from the Romaue Empire might be quight;
 And that though Time doth commonwealths
 devowre,
 Yet no time should so low embase their
 height,
 That her head, earth'd in her foundations deep,
 Should not her name and endles honour keep.

IX

Ye cruell starres, and eke ye gods unkinde, Heaven envious, and bitter stepdame Nature,
 Be it by fortune, or by course of kinde,
 That ye doo weld th' affaires of earthlie creature;
 Why have your hands long sithence traveiled
 To frame this world, that doth endure so
 long?

Or why were not these Romane palaces Made of some matter no lesse firme and
strong ?

I say not, as the common voyce doth say,
That all things which beneath the moone have being

Are temporall, and subject to decay:
But I say rather, though not all agreeing With some that weene the contrarie in
thought,
That all this whole shall one day come to nought.

X

As that brave sonne of Aeson, which by
charmes

Atcheiv'd the golden fleece in Colehid land, Out of the earth engendred men of armes
Of dragons teeth, sowne in the sacred sand;
So this brave towne, that in her youthlie
daies

An hydra was of Warriours glorious, Did fill with her renowned nourslings
praise

The fire sunnes both one and other hous:
But they at last, there being then not living An Hercules, so ranke seed to repressse, Amongst themselves with cruell furie striv-
ing,

Mow'd downe themselves with slaughter
mercilesse;

Renewing in themselves that rage un-
kinde,

Which whilom did those earthborn brethren blinde.

XI

Mars, shaming to have given so great head
To his off-spring, that mortall puissance, Puft up with pride of Romane hardie-
head,

Seem'd above heavens powre it selfe to ad-
vaunce,

Cooling againe his former kindled heate,
With which he had those Romane spirits
fild,

Did blowe new fire, and with enflamed
breath

Into the Gothicke colde hot rage instil'd: Then gan that nation, th' earths new giant
brood,

To dart abroad the thunder bolts of warre,
And, beating downe these walls with furious mood

Into her mothers bosome, all did marre;

To th' end that none, all were it Jove his
sire,
Should boast himselfe of the Romane Empire.

XII

Like as whilome the children of the earth Heapt hils on hils, to scale the starrie skie, And fight against the gods of heavenly berth,

Whiles Jove at them his thunderbolts let
flie;

All suddenly with lightning overthrowne,
The furious squadrons downe to ground did
fall,

That th' earth under her childrens weight did grone,

And th' heavens in glorie triumpht over all:
So did that haughtie front, which heaped
was

On these seven Romane hils, it selfe up-
reare

Over the world, and lift her loftie face Against the heaven, that gan her force to
feare.

But now these scorned fields bemone her
fall,

And gods secure feare not her force at all.

XIII

Nor the swift furie of the flames aspiring, Nor the deep wounds of victours raging blade,

Nor ruthlesse spoyle of souldiers blood-desiring,

The which so oft thee (Rome) their conquest made;

Ne stroke on stroke of fortune variable, Ne rust of age hating continuance,

Nor wrath of gods, nor spight of men unstable,

Nor thou opposd' against thine owne puissance;

Nor th' horrible uprore of windes high blowing,

Nor swelling streames of that god suakie-paced,

Which hath so often with his overflowing Thee drenched, have thy pride so much abaced,

But that this nothing, which they have thee left,

Makes the world wonder what they from thee reft.

XIV

As men in summer fearles passe the foord,
Which is in winter lord of all the plaine,
And with his tumbling streames doth beare aboard

The ploughmans hope and shepherds labour vaine:

And as the coward beasts use to despise
The noble lion after his lives end, Whetting their teeth, and with vaine foolhardise

Daring the foe, that cannot him defend:
And as at Troy most dastards of the Greekes

Did brave about the corpses of Hector colde; So those which whilome went with pallid cheekes

The Romane triumphs glorie to behold,
Now on these ashie tombes shew boldnesse vaine,

And, conquer'd, dare the conquerour disdain.

XV

Ye pallid spirits, and ye ashie ghoasts, Which, joying in the brightnes of your
day,

Brought fourth those signes of your presumptuous boasts

Which now their dusty reliques do bewray; Tell me, ye spirits (sith the darksome river

Of Styx, not passable to soules returning, Enclosing you in thrice three wards for ever,

Doo not restraine your images still mourning)

Tell me then (for perhaps some one of you Yet here above him secretly doth hide)

Doo ye not feele your torments to acrewe,

When ye sometimes behold the ruin'd pride Of these old Romane works, built with your hands,

To have become nought els but heaped sands?

XVI

Like as ye see the wrathfull sea from farre,
In a great mountaine heap't with hideous
noyse,

Eftsoones of thousand billowes shouldred narre,

Against a rocke to breake with dreadfull poyse:

Like as ye see fell Boreas with sharpe
blast,

Tossing huge tempests through the troubled
skie,

Eftsoones having his wide wings spent in wast,

To stop his wearie cariere suddenly:
And as ye see huge flames spred diverslic,

Gathered in one up to the heavens to spyre, Eftsoones consum'd to fall downe feebily:

So whilom did this monarchie aspyre As waves, as winde, as fire spred over
all,

Till it by fatall doome adowne did fall.

XVII

So long as Joves great bird did make his
flight,

Bearing the fire with which heaven doth us
fray,

Heaven had not feare of that presumptuous
might,

With which the giaunts did the gods assay.
But all so soone as scortching sunne had brent

His wings, which wont the earth to overspredd,

The earth out of her massie wombe forth
sent

That antique horror, which made heaven adredd.

Then was the Germane raven in disguise
That Romane eagle seene to cleave asunder,

And towards heaven freshly to arise Out of these mountaines, now consum'd to pouder:

In which the foule that serves to beare the lightning

Is now no more seen flying, nor alighting.

XVIII

These heapes of stones, these old wals which ye see,

Were first enclosures but of salvage soyle;
And these brave pallaces, which maystred
bee

Of Time, were shepherds cottages some-
while.

Then tooke the shepherds kingly ornaments,

And the stout hynde arm'd his right hand with steele:

Eftsoones their rule of yearely presidents Grew great, and sixe months greater a great deele;

Which, made perpetuall, rose to so great
 might,
 That thence th' imperiall eagle rooting
 tooke,
 Till th' heaven it selfe, opposing gainst her
 might,
 Her power to Peters successor betooke; Who, shepheardlike, (as Fates the same foreseeing)
 Doth shew that all things turne to their first being.

XIX

All that is perfect, which th' heaven beautifies;
 All that 's imperfect, borne belowe the moone;
 All that doth feede our spirits and our cies;
 And all that doth consume our pleasures
 soone;
 All the mishap, the which our daies out-weares;
 All the good hap of th' oldest times afore, Rome in the time of her great ancesters,
 Like a Pandora, locked long in store.
 But destinie this huge chaos turmoyling,
 In which all good and evill was enclosed, Their heavenly vertues from these woes assoyling, Caried to heaven, from sinfull bondage losed:
 But their great sinnes, the causers of their paine,
 Under these antique ruines yet remaine.

XX

No otherwise than raynie cloud, first fed With earthly vapours gathered in the ayre, Eftsoones in compas arch't, to steepe his
 hed,
 Doth plunge himselfe in Tethys bosome
 faire;
 And mounting up againe, from whence he
 came,
 With his great bellie spreads the dimmed world,
 Till at the last, dissolving his moist frame, In raine, or snowe, or baile he forth is hord;
 This citie, which was first but shepherds
 shade,
 Uprising by degrees, grewe to such height, That queene of land and sea her selfe she
 made.
 At last, not able to beare so great weight,

Her power, disperst, through all the world did vade;
 To shew that all in th' end to nought shall fade.

XXI

The same which Pyrrhus and the puis-saunce
 Of Afrike could not tame, that same brave citie,
 Which, with stout courage arm'd against mischaunce,
 Sustain'd the shocke of common enmitie; Long as her ship, tost with so manie freakes,
 Had all the world in arnes against her
 bent,
 Was never seene that anie fortunes wreakes
 Could breake her course begun with brave intent.
 But when the object of her vertue failed,
 Her power it selfe against it selfe did arme;
 As he that having long in tempest sailed, Faine would arrive, but cannot for the storme,
 If too great winde against the port him
 drive,
 Doth in the port it selfe his vessell rive.

XXII

When that brave honour of the Latine
 name,
 Which near'd her rule with Africa and Byze,
 With Thames inhabitants of noble fame,
 And they which see the dawning day arize,
 Her nourslings did with mutinous uprore Harten against her selfe, her conquer'd
 spoile,
 Which she had wonne from all the world
 afore,
 Of all the world was spoyl'd within a while.
 So, when the compast course of the un-
 verse
 In sixe and thirtie thousand yeares is ronne,
 The bands of th' elements shall backe reverse
 To their first discord, and be quite un-
 donne:
 The seedes, of which all things at first were bred,
 Shall in great Chaos wombe againe be hid.

XXIII

O warie wisdome of the man that would That Carthage towres from spoile should be forborne,
To th' end that his victorious people should With canering laisure not be overworne!
He well foresaw, how that the Romane courage,

Impatient of pleasures faint desires,
Through idlenes would turne to civill rage,
And be her selfe the matter of her fires.

For in a people given all to ease, Ambition is engendred easily;
As in a vicious bodie, grose disease Soone growes through humours superfluitie.

That came to passe, when, swolne with plenties pride, Nor prince, nor peere, nor kin, they would abide.

XXIV

If the blinde Furie, which warres breedeth oft,
Wonts not t' enrage the hearts of equall
beasts,

Whether they fare on foote, or flie aloft,
Or armed be with clawes, or scalie creasts,
What fell Erynnis, with hot burning tongs, Did grype your hearts, with noysome rage imbew'd,

That, each to other working cruell wrongs,
Your blades in your owne bowels you embrew'd?

Was this, ye Romanes, your hard destinie?
Or some old sinne, whose unappeased guilt Pow'd vengeance forth on you eternallie?
Or brothers blood, the which at first was spilt

Upon your walls, that God might not endure

Upon the same to set foundation sure?

XXV

O that I had the Thracian poets harpe,
For to awake out of th' infernall shade Those antique Cæsars, sleeping long in
darke,

The which this auncient citie whilome made!
Or that I had Amphions instrument,
To quicken with his vitall notes accord The stonie joynts of these old walls now
rent,

By which th' Ausonian light might be restor'd!

Or that at least I could with pencill fine Fashion the pourtraicts of these palacis, By paterne of great Virgils spirit divine!
I would assay with that which in me is To builde, with levell of my loftie style, That which no hands can evermore compyle.

XXVI

Who list the Romane greatnes forth to figure,

Him needeth not to seeke for usage right Of line, or lead, or rule, or sqaire, to measure

Her length, her breadth, her deepnes, or her hight;

But him behooves to vew in compasse round
All that the ocean graspes in his long armes;
Be it where the yerely starre doth scortch
the ground,

Or where colde Boreas blowes his bitter
stormes.

Rome was th' whole world, and al the world was Rome,

And if things nam'd their names doo equalize,

When land and sea ye name, then name ye Rome,

And naming Rome, ye land and sea com-
prize:

For th' auncient plot of Rome, displayed
plaine,

The map of all the wide world doth con-
taine.

XXVII

Thou that at Rome astonisht dost behold
The antique pride, which menaced the skie, These haughtie heapes, these palaces of
olde,

These wals, these arcks, these baths, these temples hie,

Judge, by these ample ruines vew, the rest
The which injurious time hath quite out-
worne,

Since, of all workmen helde in reckning best, Yet these olde fragments are for paternes borne:

Then also marke, how Rome, from day to
day,

Repayring her decayed fashion, Renewes herselfe with buildings rich and gay;

That one would judge that the Romaine Dæmon

Doth yet himselfe with fatall hand enforce, Againe on foote to reare her pouldred corse.

XXVIII

He that hath seene a great oke drie and
dead,
Yet clad with reliques of some trophees
olde,
Lifting to heaven her aged hoarie head, Whose foote in ground hath left but feeble
holde,
But halfe disbowel'd lies above the ground, Shewing her wreathed rootes, and naked
armes,
And on her trunke, all rotten and ruisound, Onely supports herselfe for meate of
wormes,
And though she owe her fall to the first
winde,
Yet of the devout people is ador'd,
And manie yong plants spring out of her rinde;
Who such an oke hath seene, let him record
That such this cities honour was of yore, And mongst all cities florished much more.

XXIX

All that which Aegypt whilome did devise,
All that which Greece their temples to em-
brave,
After th' Ionicke, Atticke, Doricke guise, Or Corinth skil'd in curious workes to grave,
All that Lysippus practike arte could
forme,
Apelles wit, or Phidias his skill,
Was wont this auncient citie to adorne,
And the heaven it selfe with her wide wonders fill.
All that which Athens ever brought forth
wise,
All that which Afrike ever brought forth strange,
All that which Asie ever had of prise, Was here to see. O marvelous great change!
Rome, living, was the worlds sole orna-
ment,
And dead, is now the worlds sole moni-
ment.

XXX

Like as the seeded field greene grasse first showes, Then from greene grasse into a stalke doth
spring,
And from a stalke into an eare forth-
growes,
Which eare the frutefull graine doth shortly
bring;
And as in season due the husband mowes
The waving lockes of those faire yeallow
heares,
Which, bound in sheaves, and layd in comely rowes,
Upon the naked fields in stackes he reares:
So grew the Romane Empire by degree, Till that barbarian hands it quite did spill,
And left of it but these olde markes to see,
Of which all passers by doo somewhat pill, As they which gleane, the reliques use to gather,
Which th' husbandman behind him chanst to seater.

XXXI

That same is now nought but a champion
wide,
Where all this worlds pride once was situate.
No blame to thee, whosoever dost abide By Nyle, or Gange, or Tygre, or Euphrate; Ne Afrike thereof guiltie is, nor Spaine, Nor the bolde people by the Thamis brincks,
Nor the brave warlicke brood of Alemaine, Nor the borne souldier which Rhine running drinks.
Thou onely cause, O Civill Furie, art: Which, sowing in th' Aemathian fields thy
sight, Didst arme thy hand against thy proper bart;
To th' end that when thou wast in greatest
light
To greatnes growne, through long pros-peritie, Thou then adowne might'st fall more horriblie.

XXXII

Hope ye, my verses, that posteritie
Of age ensuing shall you ever read?
Hope ye that ever immortalitie So meane harpes worke may chalenge for her meed?

If under heaven anie endurance were,
 These monuments, which not in paper writ,
 But in porphyre and marble doo appeare, Might well have hop'd to have obtained it.
 Nath'les, my lute, whom Phœbus deigned to give,
 Cease not to sound these olde antiquities:
 For if that Time doo let thy glorie live, Well maist thou boast, how ever base thou
 bee,
 That thou art first which of thy nation song
 Th' olde honour of the people gowned
 long.

L'ENVOY

Bellay, first garland of free poësie That France brought forth, though fruit-full of brave wits, Well worthe thou of immortalitie,
 That long hast traveld by thy learned writs, Olde Rome out of her ashes to revive,
 And give a second life to dead decayes:
 Needes must he all eternitie survive,
 That can to other give eternall dayes.
 Thy dayes therefore are endles, and thy
 prayse
 Excelling all that ever went before;
 And, after thee, gins Bartas lie to rayse His heavenly Muse, th' Almightye to adore.
 Live happie spirits, th' honour of your
 name,
 And fill the world with never dying fame.

FINIS.

MUIOPOTMOS,

OR

THE FATE OF THE BUTTER-FLIE

BY ED. SP.

DEDICATED TO THE MOST FAIRE AND VERTUOUS LADIE: THE LADIE CAREY

LONDON

PONSONBIE, DWELLING IN PAULES
CHURCHYARD AT THE SIGNE OF

1590

TO THE RIGHT WORTHY AND VERTUOUS LADIE: THE LADIE CAREY

MOST brave and bountifull Lady: for so excellent favours as I have received at your sweet handes, to offer these fewe leaves as in recompence, should be as to offer flowers to the gods for their divine benefites. Therefore I have determined to give my selfe wholly to you, as quite abandoned from my selfe, and absolutely vowed to your services:
 which in all right is ever held for full recompence of debt or damage to have the person yeilded. My person I wot wel how little worth it is. But the faithfull minde and humble zeale which I beare unto your Ladiship may perhaps be more of price, as may please you to account and use the poore service thereof; which taketh glory to advance your excellent partes and noble ver-tues, and to spend it selfe in honouring you:
 not so much for your great bounty to my self, which yet may not be unminde; nor for name or kindreds sake by you vouchsafed, beeing also regardable; as for that honorable name, which yee have by your brave deserts purchast to your self, and spred in the mouths of al men: with which I have also presumed to grace my verses, and under your name to commend to the world this smal poëme; the which beseech-ing your Ladiship to take in worth, and of all things therein according to your wonted graciousnes to make a milde construction, I humbly pray for your happines.

Your Ladiships ever

humbly;

[‘Muiopotmos’ cannot be dated with certainty.
 In style it would seem to be more mature than the work of the Calendar period; it may have been written in Ireland; one rather associates it with that period of delight in London while the poet was seeing his Faery Queen through the press. If the date upon its separate title-page, 1590, is to be trusted, it must have been written, at latest, not long after his arrival in England.]

By contrast to the motley and impressive mediævalism of ‘Mother Hubberd’s Tale,’ this poem would seem to be conspicuously Renaissance Italian. Its subject is a mere nothing; it tells no story that could not be told in full in a stanza, it presents no situation for the delicate rhetoric of the emotions: it is a mere running frieze of images and scenes, linked in fanciful continuity. It is organized as a mock-heroic poem, but its appeal is essentially to the eye. Myths, invented or real, that seem to form themselves spontaneously into pictures, the landscape of the gardens, fantastic armor, the figured scenes of tapestry richly bordered, these are of a poetry akin to the plastic arts, such as one finds in the Stanze of Poliziano. Yet the temper of 'Muiopotmos' is not that of the Stanze and their like. It is rather of the air than of the earth. One might think it an emanation of the theme itself and fancy that the frail wings of the butterfly had been spread for the style, delicately colored, ethereal. The poet of the Faery Queen never more happily escaped into 'delight with liberty' than here.]

MUIOPOTMOS: OR THE FATE OF THE BUTTERFLIE

I SING of deadly dolorous debate, Stir'd up through wrathfull Nemesis de-
spight,
Betwixt two mightie ones of great estate, Drawne into armes, and proefe of mortall
fight,
Through prowd ambition and hartswelling
hate,
Whilst neither could the others greater
might
And sdeignfull scorne endure; that from small jarre
Their wraths at length broke into open
warre.

The roote whereof and tragicall effect, Vouchsafe, O thou the mournfullst Muse of nyne,

That woultst the tragick stage for to direct,
In funerall complaints and wayfull tyne, Reveale to me, and all the meanes detect 'Through which sad Clarion did at last declyne

To lowest wretchednes: And is there then Such rancour in the harts of mightie men?

Of all the race of silver-winged flies
Which doo possesse the empire of the aire, Betwixt the centred earth and azure skies,
Was none more favourable, nor more faire, Whilst heaven did favour his felicities, Then Clarion, the eldest sonne and haire

Of Muscaroll, and in his fathers sight Of all alive did seeme the fairest wight.

With fruitfull hope his aged breast he fed Of future good, which his yong toward
yeares,

Full of brave courage and bold hardyhed, Above th' ensample of his equall peares, Did largely promise, and to him forered (Whilst oft his heart did melt in tender
teares)

That he in time would sure prove such an
one,
As should be worthie of his fathers throne.

The fresh yong flie, in whom the kindly fire

Of lustfull yongth began to kindle fast, Did much disdaine to subject his desire To loathsome sloth, or houres in ease to wast,

But joy'd to range abroad in fresh attire,
Through the wide compas of the ayrie
coast,

And with unwearied wings each part t' inquire
Of the wide rule of his renowned sire.

For he so swift and nimble was of flight,
That from this lower tract he dar'd to stie Up to the clowdes, and thence, with pineous
light,

To mount aloft unto the christall skie, To vew the workmanship of heavens
light:

Whence downe descending he along would
flie

Upon the streaming rivers, sport to finde;
And oft would dare to tempt the troublous
winde.

So on a summers day, when season milde
With gentle calme the world had quieted, And high in heaven Hyperions fierie childe

Ascending, did his beames abroad disprede, Whiles all the heavens on lower creatures smilde,

Yong Clarion, with vauntfull lustiehead,
After his guize did cast abroad to fare,
And theretoo gan his furnitures prepare.

His breastplate first, that was of substance
pure,
Before his noble heart he firmly bound,

That mought his life from yron death assure,
 And ward his gentle corpes from cruell
 wound: 60
 For it by arte was framed to endure
 The bit of balefull steele and bitter
 stownd,
 No lesse than that which Vulcane made to sheild Achilles life from fate of Troyan field.

And then about his shoulders broad he threw
 An hairie hide of some wilde beast, whom hee
 In salvage Forrest by adventure slew,
 And reft the spoyle his ornament to bee:
 Which, spredding all his backe with dreadfull vew,
 Made all that him so horrible did see 70
 Thinke him Alcides with the Lyons skin,
 When the Næmean conquest he did win.

Upon his head, his glistering burganet, The which was wrought by wonderous device,
 And curiously engraven, he did set:
 The mettall was of rare and passing price;
 Not Bilbo steele, nor brasse from Corinth fet,
 Nor costly oricalche from strange Phœnice;
 But such as could both Phœbus arrowes
 ward,
 And th' hayling darts of heaven beating
 hard. 80

Therein two deadly weapons fixt he bore, Strongly outlaunced towards either side, Like two sharpe speares, his enemies to
 gore:
 Like as a warlike brigandine, applyde To fight, layes forth her threatfull pikes
 afore,
 The engines which in them sad death doo
 hyde:
 So did this flie outstretch his fearefull
 hornes,
 Yet so as him their terrour more adornes.

Lastly his shinie wings, as silver bright, Painted with thousand colours, passing
 farre 90
 All painters skill, he did about him dight:
 Not halfe so manie sundrie colours arre

In Iris bowe, ne heaven doth shine so bright, Distinguished with manie a twincleing
 starre,
 Nor Junoes bird in her ey-spotted traine
 So manie goodly colours doth containe.

Ne (may it be withouten perill spoken)
 The Archer god, the sonne of Cytheree, That joyes on wretched lovers to be wroken, And heaped spoyles of bleeding harts to
 see, 100
 Beares in his wings so manie a changefull token.

Ah! my liege lord, forgive it unto mee,
 If ought against thine honour I have tolde;
 Yet sure those wings were fairer manifolde.

Full manie a ladie faire, in court full oft Beholding them, him secretly envide, And wisht that two such fannes, so silken soft
 And golden faire, her love would her provide;
 Or that, when them the gorgeous flie had doft,
 Some one, that would with grace be grati-
 fide, 110
 From him would steale them privily away,
 And bring to her so precious a pray.

Report is that Dame Venus on a day, In spring when flowres doo clothe the fruitful ground, Walking abroad with all her nymphes to
 play,
 Bad her faire damzels, flocking her arownd,
 To gather flowres, her forehead to array.
 Enongst the rest a gentle nymph was
 found,
 Hight Astery, excelling all the crewe
 In curteous usage and unstained bewe. 120

Who, being nimbler joynted than the rest,
 And more industrious, gathered more store
 Of the fields honour than the others best;
 Which they in seeret harts envying sore, Tolde Venus, when her as the worthiest She praised, that Cupide (as they heard be fore)

Did lend her secret aide in gathering Into her lap the children of the Spring.

Whereof the goddesse gathering jealous
 feare,
 Not yet unmindfull how not long agoe 130

Her sonne to Psyche secrete love did beare,
 And long it close conceal'd, till mickle woe Thereof arose, and manie a ruffull teare, Reason with sudden rage did overgoe,
 And giving hastie credit to th' accuser,
 Was led away of them that did abuse her.

Eftsoones that damzel, by her heavenly
 night,
 She turn'd into a winged butterflie,
 In the wide aire to make her wandring
 flight;
 And all those flowres, with which so plenteouslie

Her lap she filled had, that bred her spight,
 She placed in her wings, for memorie Of her pretended crime, though crime none
 were:
 Since which that flie them in her wings doth
 beare.

Thus the fresh Clarion, being readie dight, Unto his journey did himselfe addresse, And with good speed began to take his
 flight:

Over the fields, in his franke lustinesse,
 And all the champion he soared light,
 And all the countrey wide he did possesse, Feeding upon their pleasures bounteouslie,
 That none gainsaid, nor none did him envie.

The woods, the rivers, and the medowes green,
 With his aire-cutting wings he measured
 wide,
 Ne did he leave the mountaines bare un-scenee,
 Nor the ranke grassie fennes delights un-tride.

But none of these, how ever sweete they
 beene,
 Mote please his fancie, nor him cause t'
 abide:
 His choicfull sense with everie change doth
 flit;
 No common things may please a wavering
 wit.

To the gay gardins his unstaide desire Him wholly caried, to refresh his sprights:
 There lavish Nature, in her best attire, Powres forth sweete odors, and alluring sights;
 And Arte, with her contending, doth aspire T' excell the naturall with made delights:

And all that faire or pleasant may be found In riotous excesse doth there abound.

There he arriving, round about doth flie, From bed to bed, from one to other border,
 And takes survey, with curious busie eye, Of everie flowre and herbe there set in order;
 Now this, now that, he tasteth tenderly,
 Yet none of them he rudely doth disorder, Ne with his feete their silken leaves de-
 face;
 But pastures on the pleasures of each place.

And evermore with most varietie, And change of sweetnesse (for all change is sweete)

He casts his glutton sense to satisfie; Now sucking of the sap of herbe most
 meete,

Or of the dew, which yet on them does lie,
 Now in the same bathing his tender feete:
 And then he pearcheth on some braunch
 thereby,
 To weather him, and his moyst wings to dry.

And then againe he turneth to his play,
 To spoyle the pleasures of that paradise:
 The wholsome saulge, and lavender still gray, Ranke smelling rue, and cummin good for eyes,

The roses raining in the pride of May, Sharpe isope, good for greene wounds remedies,
 Faire marigoldes, and bees-alluring thime, Sweete marjoram, and daysies decking
 prime:

Coolle violets, and orpine growing still,
 Embathed balme, and chearfull galingale, Fresh costmarie, and breathfull camomill, Dull poppie, and drink-quickning setuale, Veyne-healing verven, and hed-purging dill, Sound savorie, and bazill hartie-hale, Fat colworts, and comforting perseline, Colde lettuce, and refreshing rosmarine.

And whatso else of vertue good or ill Grewe in this gardin, fetcht from farre
 away,
 Of everie one he takes, and tastes at will,
 And on their pleasures greedily doth pray

Then, when he hath both plaid, and fed his fill,
 In the warme summe he doth himselfe embay,
 And there him rests in riotous suffisaunce
 Of all his gladfulnes and kingly joyaunce.

What more felicitie can fall to creature Than to enjoy delight with libertie, ²¹⁰ And to be lord of all the workes of Nature,

To raine in th' aire from earth to highest
 skie,

To feed on flowres and weeds of glorious feature,

To take what ever thing doth please the eie?

Who rests not pleased with such happines,
 Well worthie he to taste of wretchednes.

But what on earth can long abide in state,
 Or who can him assure of happie day; Sith morning faire may bring fowle evening
 late,

And least mishap the most blisse alter may? ²²⁰

For thousand perills lie in close awaite About us daylie, to worke our decay;
 That none, except a God, or God him
 guide,
 May them avoyde, or remedie provide.

And whatso heavens in their secret doome Ordained have, how can fraile fleshy wight Forecast, but it must needs to issue come?
 The sea, the aire, the fire, the day, the
 night,

And th' armies of their creatures all and some

Do serve to them, and with importune might ²³⁰

Warre against us, the vassals of their will.
 Who then can save what they dispose to
 spill?

Not thou, O Clarion, though fairest thou
 Of all thy kinde, unhappie happie flie, Whose cruell fate is woven even now Of Joves owne hand, to worke thy miserie:
 Ne may thee helpe the manie hartie vow,
 Which thy olde sire with sacred pietie Hath powred forth for thee, and th' altars spreint:

Nought may thee save from heavens avengement. ²⁴⁰

It fortun'd (as heavens had behight)
 That in this gardin, where yong Clarion Was wont to solace him, a wicked wight, The foe of faire things, th' author of confusion,

The shame of Nature, the bondslave of
 spight,

Had lately built his hatefull mansion,
 And, lurking closely, in awayte now lay,
 How he might anie in his trap betray.

But when he spide the joyous butterflie
 In this faire plot dispaing too and fro, ²⁵⁰

Fearles of foes and hidden jeopardie, Lord! how he gan for to bestirre him tho,
 And to his wicked worke each part applie!
 His heart did earne against his hated foe,
 And bowels so with ranekling poyson swelde, That scarce the skin the strong contagior
 helde.

The cause why he this flie so maliced Was (as in stories it is written found) For that his mother which him bore and bred,

The most fine-fingred workwoman on ground, ²⁶⁰

Arachne, by his meanes was vanquished
 Of Pallas, and in her owne skill confound, When she with her for excellence contended,

That wrought her shame, and sorrow never
 ended.

For the Tritonian goddessse, having hard Her blazed fame, which all the world had fil'd,

Came downe to prove the truth, and due reward

For her prais-worthie workmanship to yeild:

But the presumptuous damzel rashly dar'd The goddessse selfe to chalenge to the field, ²⁷⁰

And to compare with her in curious skill Of workes with loome, with needle, and with quill.

Minerva did the chalenge not refuse,
 But deign'd with her the paragon to make:
 So to their worke they sit, and each doth chuse

What storie she will for her tapet take.
 Arachne figur'd how Jove did abuse Europa like a bull, and on his backe

Her through the sea did beare; so lively
 seene,
 That it true sea and true bull ye would
 weene. 280

She seem'd still backe unto the land to
 looke,
 And her play-fellowes aide to call, and
 feare
 The dashing of the waves, that up she
 tooke
 Her daintie feete, and garments gathered
 neare:
 But (Lord!) how she in everie member
 shooke,
 When as the land she saw no more ap-
 peare,
 But a wilde wildernes of waters deepe!
 Then gan she greatly to lament and weepe.

Before the bull she pictur'd winged Love, With his yong brother Sport, light flutter-
 ing 290
 Upon the waves, as each had been a dove;
 The one his bowe and shafts, the other
 spring
 A burning teade about his head did move, As in their syres new love both triumph-
 ing:
 And manie Nymphes about them flocking
 round,
 And manie Tritons, which their hornes did
 sound.

And round about, her worke she did em-pale
 With a faire border wrought of sundrie
 flowes,
 Enwoven with an yvie winding trayle: 299
 A goodly worke, full fit for kingly bowres, Such as Dame Pallas, such as Envie pale, That al good things with venomous tooth devowres,
 Could not accense. Then gan the goddesse
 bright
 Her selfe likewise unto her worke to dight.

She made the storie of the olde debate, Which she with Neptune did for Athens
 trie:
 Twelve gods doo sit around in royall state,
 And Jove in midst with awfull majestie, To judge the strife betweene them stirred
 late:
 Each of the gods by his like visnomie 310

Eathe to be knowen; but Jove above them
 all,
 By his great lookes and power imperiall.

Before them stands the god of seas in place, Clayming that sea-coast citie as his right,
 And strikes the rockes with his three-forked mace;
 Whenceforth issues a warlike steed in sight,
 The signe by which he chalengeth the place;
 That all the gods, which saw his wondrous
 night,
 Did surely deeme the victorie his due:
 But seldome seene, forejudgement proveth
 true. 320

Then to her selfe she gives her Aegide
 shield,
 And steelled speare, and morion on her
 hedd,
 Such as she oft is seene in warlicke field:
 Then sets she forth, how with her weapon dredd
 She smote the ground, the which streight foorth did yield A fruitfull olyve tree, with berries spredd, That all the gods admir'd; then all the storie
 She compast with a wreathe of olyves hoarie.

Emongst those leaves she made a butterflie,
 With excellent device and wondrous slight, Fluttring among the olives wantonly, 331
 That seem'd to live, so like it was in sight:
 The velvet nap which on his wings doth lie, The silken downe with which his backe is
 dight,
 His broad outstretched hornes, his hayrie thies,
 His glorious colours, and his glistering eies.

Which when Arachne saw, as overlaid And mastered with workmanship so rare, She stood astonied long, ne ought gaine-
 said, 339
 And with fast fixed eyes on her did stare,
 And by her silence, signe of one dismaid,
 The victorie did yeeld her as her share:
 Yet did she inly fret, and felly burne,
 And all her blood to poysonous rancor
 turne:

That shortly from the shape of womanhed,
 Such as she was, when Pallas she attempted,

She grew to hideous shape of dryrihed, Pined with grieffe of follie late repented: Eftsoones her white streight legs were altered

To crooked crawling shankes, of marrowe empted, 350
And her faire face to fowle and loathsome
hewe,
And her fine corpes to a bag of venim grewe.

This cursed creature, mindfull of that olde Enfested grudge, the which his mother felt,

So soone as Clarion he did beholde,
His heart with vengefull malice iuly swelt;
And weaving straight a net with manie a folde

About the eave in which he lurking dwelt, With fine small cords about it stretched
wide,
So finely sponne that scarce they could be
spide. 360

Not anie damzell, which her vaunteth most In skilfull knitting of soft silken twyne; Nor anie weaver, which his worke doth boast In dieper, in damaske, or in lyne;
Nor anie skil'd in workmanship embost;
Nor anie skil'd in loupes of fingring fine, Might in their divers cunning ever dare,
With this so curious networke to compare.

Ne doo I thinke that that same subtil gin, The which the Lemnian god framde craftilie, 370

Mars sleeping with his wife to compasse in,
That all the gods with common moekerie Might laugh at them, and scorne their shamefull sin,

Was like to this. This same he did applie For to entrap the careles Clarion, That rang'd each where without suspition.

Suspition of friend, nor feare of foe,
That hazarded his health, had he at all, But wakt at will, and wandred too and fro,

In the pride of his freedome principall: 380
Litle wist he his fatall future woe,
But was secure; the liker he to fall.
He likest is to fall into mischaunce,
That is regardles of his governaunce.

Yet still Aragnoll (so his foe was hight) Lay lurking covertly bim to surprise,

And all his gins, that him entangle might,
Drest in good order as he could devise.
At length the foolish flie, without foresight,
As he that did all daunger quite despise, 390 Toward those parts came flying careleslie, Where hidden was his hatefull enemye.

Who, seeing him, with secrete joy therefore Did tickle inwardly in everie vaine,
And his false hart, fraught with all treasons
store,

Was fil'd with hope his purpose to obtaine: Himselfe he close upgathered more and
more

Into his den, that his deceptfull traine
By his there being might not be bewraid, Ne anie noyse, ne anie motion made. 400

Like as a wily foxe, that, having spide Where on a sunnie banke the lambes doo
play,

Full closely creeeping by the hinder side, Lyes in ambushment of his hoped pray,
Ne stirreth limbe, till, seeing readie tide,
He rusheth forth, and snatcheth quite away
One of the litle yonglings unawares:
So to his worke Aragnoll him prepares.

Who now shall give unto my heavie eyes
A well of teares, that all may overflow? 410 Or where shall I finde lamentable cryes, And mournfull tunes enough my grieffe to show?

Helpe, O thou Tragick Muse, me to devise Notes sad enough, t' expresse this bitter
throw:

For loe! the dreerie stownd is now arrived,
That of all happines hath us deprived.

The luckles Clarion, whether cruell Fate Or wicked Fortme faultles him misled, Or some ungracious blast out of the gate Of Aeoles raine perforce him drove on
hed,

Was (O sad hap and howre unfortunate!) With violent swift flight forth caried 420
Into the cursed cobweb, which his foe Had framed for his finall overthro.

There the fond flie, entangled, struggled
long,

Himselfe to free thereout; but all in vaine.
For, striving more, the more in laes strong Himselfe he tide, and wrapt his winges
twaine

In lymie snares the subtill loupes among;
That in the ende he breathelesse did re-
maine, 430
And all his yougthly forces idly spent Him to the mercie of th' avenger lent.

Which when the greisly tyrant did espie, Like a grimme lyon rushing with fierce
might

Out of his den, he seized greedelie
On the resistles pray, and with fell spight, Under the left wing stroke his weapon slie
Into his heart, that his deepe groning spright In bloodie streames foorth fled into the aire, His bodie left the spectacle of care. 440

VISIONS OF THE WORLDS VANITIE

[This series of original 'visions' is manifestly of kin to those translated from Petrarch and Du Bellay and, more distantly, to 'Ruins of Rome.' It is unquestionably of later composition, but how much later has been disputed. Some critics, observing that, whereas the sonnets of the three earlier series are in the common Elizabethan form, the sonnets of this are in the special form that Spenser devised for himself, have argued that the interval of time must be considerable. In the first place, however, we have no proof that Spenser may not have devised his own sonnet-form early (we meet it in the dedication to 'Virgil's Gnat,' of Calendar days); in the second place, for the three series that were translations he might naturally choose the looser and therefore easier Elizabethan form, when, for original sonnets, he would adopt his own more complicated scheme. This point set aside, there is nothing in the series to denote a much later period: the style is, indeed, distinctly immature. One may plausibly conclude that 'Visions of the World's Vanity' was suggested by the earlier 'Visions' and executed not long after them.

The noteworthy fact about these various early poems is that they show Spenser, at the outset of his career, driving full on allegory. Partly by accident and partly by choice, he has committed himself to a special form of the art, from which he later progresses to others more comprehensive. This form is the literary counterpart of a mixed type, in which poetry and the graphic arts are combined, the so-called 'emblem.' The essence of both consists in the expression of an idea by means of a complete image or picture. Thus Du Bellay, having composed in his Antiquitez de Rome ('Ruins of Rome') a series of meditations upon the transitoriness of human grandeur, went on, in his supplementary Songe ('Visions of Bellay'), to express those same ideas in a series of poetic pictures. These, when borrowed by Van der Noot for the Théâtre of 1568, were made into emblems proper by the addition of engravings that rendered them to the eye. Such emblem books, of engravings and poetry combined, were enormously popular through most of the sixteenth century. They affected the imagination of that period incalculably. Book followed book, edition edition. Mythology, fable, natural history, history were ransacked for themes and illustrations, which were repeated in a dozen forms. Poetry, which, as the 'Visions of Petrarch' show, had long since practised a variety of this art, was stimulated to it afresh. Spenser, in his turn, wrote 'Visions of the World's Vanity,' among which the sonnets on the Scarabee and the Remora, adapted from the first great emblem-writer Alciati, sufficiently declare his indebtedness. The influence may be thought to extend even to the allegory of the Faery Queen; for the figures in the procession at the House of Pride and in the Masque of Cupid, with others of their kind, are in a way but figures from the emblem books glorified by a larger art. At this point, however, the emblem as a special type merges in the more common forms of allegory.]

I

ONE day, whiles that my daylie cares did
sleepe,
My spirit, shaking off her earthly prison,
Began to enter into meditation deepe Of things exceeding reach of common reason;
Such as this age, in which all good is geason,
And all that humble is and meane debaced, Hath brought forth in her last declining season, Griefe of good mindes, to see goodnesse disgraced.
On which when as my thought was throgly placed,
Unto my eyes strange showes presented
were,
Picturing that which I in minde embraced, That yet those sights empassion me full
nere.
Such as they were (faire Ladie) take in
worth,
That when time serves, may bring things better forth.

II

In summers day, when Phœbus fairly shone,
I saw a bull as white as driven snowe, With gilden hornes embowed like the moone,

In a fresh flowring meadow lying lowe:
Up to his cares the verdant grasse did
growe,

And the gay floures did offer to be eaten;
But he with fatnes so did overflowe, That he all wallowed in the weedes downe beaten,

Ne car'd with them his daintie lips to sweeten:

Till that a brize, a scorned little creature, Through his faire hide his angrie sting did threaten,

And vext so sore, that all his goodly feature And all his plenteous pasture nought him
pleased:

So by the small the great is oft diseased.

III

Beside the fruitfull shore of muddie Nile, Upon a sunnie banke outstretched lay,
In monstrous length, a mightie crocodile, That, cram'd with guiltles blood and greedie
pray

Of wretched people travailing that way, Thought all things lesse than his disdainfull pride.

I saw a little bird, cal'd Tedula,
The least of thousands which on earth abide,
That forst this hideous beast to open wide
The greisly gates of his devouring hell,
And let him feede, as Nature doth provide, Upon his jawes, that with blacke venime swell.

Why then should greatest things the least disdaine,

Sith that so small so mightie can con-
straine ?

IV

The kingly bird, that beares Joves thunder-clap,

One day did scorne the simple scarabee,
Proud of his highest service and good hap, That made all other foules his thralls to
bee:

The silly flie, that no redresse did see,
Spide where the eagle built his towring nest,
And kindling fire within the hollow tree, Burnt up his yong ones, and himselfe dis-trest;

Ne suffred him in anie place to rest, But drove in Joves owne lap his eggs to
lay;

Where gathering also filth him to infest, Forst with the filth his eggs to fling away:

For which when as the foule was wroth, said Jove,

'Lo ! how the least the greatest may reprove.'

V

Toward the sea turning my troubled eye,
I saw the fish (if fish I may it cleepe)
That makes the sea before his face to flye, And with his flaggie finnes doth seeme to sweepe

The fomie waves out of the dreadfull deep,
The huge Leviathan, Dame Natures wonder, Making his sport, that manie makes to weep:
A sword-fish small him from the rest did sunder,

That, in his throat him pricking softly under,

His wide abyse him forced forth to spewe,
That all the sea did roare like heavens
thunder,

And all the waves were stain'd with filthie
hewe.

Hereby I learned have, not to despise What ever thing seemes small in common eyes.

VI

An hideous dragon, dreadfull to behold, Whose backe was arm'd against the dint of
speare

With shields of brasse, that shone like burnisht golde,

And forkhed sting, that death in it did
beare,

Strove with a spider, his unequall peare,
And bad defiance to his enemye.

The subtill vermin, creeping closely neare, Did in his drinke shed poyson privilie;

Which, through his entrailes spreddin, diversly,

Made him to swell, that nigh his bowells
brust,

And him enforst to yeeld the victorie, That did so much in his owne greatnesse trust.

O how great vainnesse is it then to
scorne

The weake, that hath the strong so oft forlorne !

VII

High on a hill a goodly cedar grewe,
Of wondrous length and streight proportion,
That fare abroad her daintie odours threwe;

Mongst all the daughters of prond Libanon,
Her match in beautie was not anie one.
Shortly within her inmost pith there bred
A litle wicked worme, perceiv'd of none,
That on her sap and vitall moysture fed:
Thenceforth her garland so much honoured Began to die, (O great ruth for the same !) And her faire lockes fell from her loftie
head,

That shortly balde and bared she became.
I, which this sight beheld, was much dismayed,
To see so goodly thing so soone decayed.

VIII

Soone after this I saw an elephant, Adorn'd with bells and bosses gorgeously,
That on his backe did beare (as batteillant)
A gilden towre, which shone exceedinglie;
That he himselve through foolish vanitie, Both for his rich attire and goodly forme,
Was puffed up with passing surquedrie,
And shortly gan all other beasts to scorne:
Till that a litle ant, a silly worme,
Into his nostrhills creeeping, so him pained, That, casting downe his towres, he did de-
forme

Both borrowed pride, and native beautie stained.

Let therefore nought, that great is,
therein glorie, Sith so small thing his happines may varie.

IX

Looking far fourth into the ocean wide,
A goodly ship with banners bravely dight,
And flag in her top-gallant, I espide, Through the maine sea making her merry
flight:

Faire blew the winde into her bosome right,
And th' heavens looked lovely all the while,
That she did seeme to daunce, as in delight,
And at her owne felicitie did smile.

All sodainly there clove unto her keele
A litle fish, that men call Remora, Which stopt her course, and held her by the heele,

That winde nor tide could move her thence
away.

Straunge thing me seemeth, that so small a thing Should able be so great an one to wring.

X

A mighty lyon, lord of all the wood, Having his hunger thoroughly satisfide With pray of beasts and spoyle of living
blood,

Safe in his dreadles den him thought to
hide:

His sternesse was his prayse, his strength his pride,

And all his glory in his cruell clawes.
I saw a wasp, that fiercely him defide,
And bad him battaile even to his jawes; Sore he him stong, that it the blood forth drawes,

And his proude heart is fild with fretting
ire:

In vaine he threats his teeth, his tayle, his pawes,

And from his bloodie eyes doth sparkle fire;
That dead himselve he wisheth for de-
spight.

So weakest may any the most of might.

XI

What time the Romaine Empire bore the raie

Of all the world, and florisht most in might,
The nations gan their soveraigntie disdaine, And east to quit them from their bondage
quight:

So, when all shrouded were in silent night,
The Galles were, by corrupting of a mayde, Possess nigh of the Capitol through slight,
Had not a goose the treachery bewrayde.
If then a goose great Rome from ruine stayde,

And Jove himselve, the patron of the place, Preservd from being to his foes betrayde, Why do vaine men mean things so much deface,

And in their might repose their most assurance,

Sith nought on earth can challenge long endurance ?

XII

When these sad sights were overpast and
gone,

My spright was greatly moved in her rest,
With inward ruth and deare affection,
To see so great things by so small distrest:

Thenceforth I gan in my engrieved brest
 To scorne all difference of great and small, Sith that the greatest often are opprest,
 And unawares doe into daunger fall.
 And ye, that read these ruines tragicall, Learne by their losse to love the low degree,
 And if that Fortune chaunce you up to call To honours seat, forget not what you be:
 For he that of himselfe is most secure Shall finde his state most fickle and unsure.

THE VISIONS OF BELLAY

[‘The Visions of Bellay’ and ‘The Visions of Petrarch,’ which belong together, are presumably the earliest poems of the volume. They are but a remodelling of Spenser’s first known literary work, the translation done in 1569 for Van der Noot’s Théâtre: it is more than likely, therefore, that they were executed while that work was still of interest to him, during his early days at Cambridge. The object of the youthful poet in these rifacimenti was apparently not to better his translation, but, for merely artistic effect, to turn the irregular stanzas of the Petrarch group and the blank verse poems of the Bellay group into formal sonnets. He does not seem to have consulted his foreign originals afresh, except that he here renders for the first time four sonnets out of Du Bellay which Van der Noot, in transferring the Frenchman’s series to his book, had dropped. The version of 1569 will be found in the Appendix.]

I

It was the time when rest, soft sliding
 downe
 From heavens hight into mens heavy eyes,
 In the forgetfulness of sleepe doth drowne
 The carefull thoughts of mortall miseries.
 Then did a ghost before mine eyes appeare, On that great rivers banck, that runnes by Rome,
 Which, calling me by name, bad me to reare My lookes to heaven, whence all good gifts do come,
 And crying lowd, ‘Loe now, beholde,’ quoth hee, ‘What under this great temple placed is:
 Lo, all is nought but flying vanitee!’
 So I, that know this worlds inconstancies, Sith onely God surmounts all times decay,

 In God alone my confidence do stay.

II

On high hills top I saw a stately frame,
 An hundred cubits high by just assize, With hundreth pillours fronting faire the
 same,
 All wrought with diamond after Dorick
 wize:
 Nor brick, nor marble was the wall in
 view,
 But shining christall, which from top to
 base
 Out of her womb a thousand rayons threw
 On hundred steps of Afrike golde enchase:
 Golde was the parget, and the seeling bright Did shine all sealy with great plates of golde;
 The floore of jasp and emeraude was dight.
 O worlds vainesse! Whiles thus I did be-
 hold,
 An earthquake shooke the hill from lowest seat,
 And overthrew this frame with ruine great.

III

Then did a sharped spyre of diamond
 bright,
 Ten feete each way in square, appeare to
 mee,
 Justly proportion’d up unto his hight,
 So far as archer might his level see:
 The top thereof a pot did seeme to beare, Made of the mettall which we most do
 honour,
 And in this golden vessell couched weare
 The ashes of a mightie emperour:
 Upon foure corners of the base were pight, To beare the frame, foure great lyons of
 gold;
 A worthy tombe for such a worthy wight.
 Alas! this world doth nought but grievance
 hold.
 I saw a tempest from the heaven descend, Which this brave monument with flash did rend.

IV

I saw raysde up on yvorie pillours tall, Whose bases were of richest mettalls warke,
 The chapters alablaster, the fryses christall,
 The double front of a triumphall arke:

On each side purtraid was a Victorie, Clad like a nimph, that wings of silver
weares,

And in triumphant chayre was set on hie
The auncient glory of the Romaine pearces.
No worke it seem'd of earthly craftsmans
wit,

But rather wrought by his owne industry,
That thunder-dartes for Jove his syre doth fit.

Let me no more see faire thing under sky, Sith that mine eyes have seene so faire a
sight

With sodain fall to dust consumed quight.

v

Then was the faire Dodonian tree far seene Upon seaven hills to spread his gladsome gleame,

And conquerours bedecked with his greene,
Along the bancks of the Ausonian streame:
There many an auncient trophée was ad-
drest,

And many a spoyle, and many a goodly show,
Which that brave races greatnes did attest, That whilome from the Troyan blood did flow.

Ravisht I was so rare a thing to vew;
When lo! a barbarous troupe of clownish
fone

The honour of these noble boughs down
threw:

Under the wedge I heard the tronck to
grone;

And since, I saw the roote in great dis-
daine

A twinne of forked trees send forth agaime.

vi

I saw a wolfe under a rockie cave Noursing two whelpes; I saw her litle ones In wanton dalliance the teate to crave, While she her neck wreath'd from them for the nones.

I saw her raunge abroad to seeke her food,
And roming through the field with greedie
rage

T' embrew her teeth and clawes with lukewarm blood

Of the small heards, her thirst for to as-swage.

I saw a thousand huntsmen, which descended Downe from the mountaines bordring Lombardie,

That with an hundred speares her flank wide rended:

I saw her on the plaine outstretched lie, Throwing out thousand throbs in her owne soyle:

Soone on a tree uphang'd I saw her spoyle.

vii

I saw the bird that can the sun endure
With feeble wings assay to mount on hight;
By more and more she gan her wings t' assure,

Following th'ensample of her mothers sight:
I saw her rise, and with a larger flight To pierce the cloudes, and with wide pinneons

To measure the most haughtie mountaines
hight,

Untill she raught the gods owne mansions:
There was she lost; when suddaine I be-helde,

Where, tumbling through the ayre in fire
fold,

All flaming downe she on the plaine was felde,

And soone her bodie turn'd to ashes colde.

I saw the foule that doth the light disperse

Out of her dust like to a worme arise.

viii

I saw a river swift, whose fomy billowes Did wash the ground work of an old great wall;

I saw it cover'd all with griesly shadowes,
That with black horror did the ayre appall: Thereout a strange beast with seven heads arose,

That townes and castles under her brest did coure,

And seem'd both milder beasts and fiercer foes

Alike with equall ravine to devoure.

Much was I mazde, to see this monsters
kinde

In hundred formes to change his fearefull
hew;

When as at length I saw the wrathfull
winde,

Which blows cold storms, burst out of Scithian mew,

That sperst these cloudes, and in so short as thought,

This dreadfull shape was vanished to nought.

IX

Then all astoined with this mighty ghoast,
 An hideous bodie, big and strong, I sawe, With side long beard, and locks down hauging loast, Sterne face, and front full of Saturnlike awe;
 Who, leaning on the belly of a pot, Poured foorth a water, whose out gushing
 flood Ran bathing all the creakie shore afloat, Whereon the Troyan prince spilt Turnus
 blood;
 And at his feete a bitch wolfe suck did yeeld
 To two young babes: his left the palme tree stout,
 His right hand did the peacefull olive wield,
 And head with lawrell garnisht was about.
 Sudden both palme and olive fell away,
 And faire greene lawrell branch did quite decay.

X

Hard by a rivers side a virgin faire, Folding her armes to heaven with thousand throbs,
 And outraging her cheekes and golden
 haire,
 To falling rivers sound thus tun'd her sobs.
 'Where is,' quoth she, 'this whilom honoured face ?
 Where the great glorie and the aunient
 praise,
 In which all worlds felicitie had place, When gods and men my honour up did
 raise ?
 Suffisd' it not that civill warres me made
 The whole worlds spoile, but that this Hydra new,
 Of hundred Hercules to be assaide, With seven heads, budding monstrous crimes anew,
 So many Neroes and Caligulaes Out of these crooked shores must dayly rayse ?'

XI

Upon an hill a bright flame I did see,
 Waving aloft with triple point to skie,
 Which, like incense of precious cedar tree, With balmie odours fil'd th' ayre farre and uie.

A bird all white, well feathered on each wing,
 Hereout up to the throne of gods did flie,
 And all the way most pleasant notes did
 sing,
 Whilst in the smoake she unto heaven did stie.
 Of this faire fire the scattered rayes forth
 threw
 On everie side a thousand shining beames:
 When sudden dropping of a silver dew (O grievous chance!) gan quench those precious flames;
 That it, which earst so pleasant sent did yeld,
 Of nothing now but noyous sulphure smeld.

XII

I saw a spring out of a rocke forth rayle, As cleare as christall gainst the sunnie
 beames,
 The bottoime yeallow, like the golden grayle That bright Pactolus washeth with his streames:
 It seem'd that Art and Nature had assembled
 All pleasure there, for which mans hart could long;
 And there a noyse alluring sleepe soft trembled,
 Of manie accords, more sweete than mermaids song:
 The seates and benches shone as yvorie,
 And hundred nymphes sate side by side
 about:
 When from nigh hills, with hideous outcrie,
 A troupe of satyres in the place did rout, Which with their villeine feete the streame did ray, Threw down the seats, and drove the nymphs away.

XIII

Much richer then that vessell seem'd to bee,
 Which did to that sad Florentine appeare, Casting mine eyes farre off, I chaunst to
 see
 Upon the Latine coast herselfe to reare.
 But suddenly arose a tempest great,
 Bearing close envie to these riches rare, Which gan assaile this ship with dreadfull
 threat,
 This ship, to which none other might compare.

And finally the storme impetuous Sunke up these riches, second unto none, Within the gulfe of greedie Nereus.
 I saw both ship and mariners each one,
 And all that treasure, drowned in the
 maine:
 But I the ship saw after raisd' againe.

XIV

Long having deeply gron'd these visions
 sad,
 I saw a citie like unto that same,
 Which saw the messenger of tidings glad,
 But that on sand was built the goodly
 frame:
 It seem'd her top the firmament did rayse,
 And no lesse rich than faire, right worthie
 sure (If ought here worthie) of immortall dayes, Or if ought under heaven might firme endure.
 Much wondred I to see so faire a wall:
 When from the Northerne coast a storme
 arose,
 Which, breathing furie from his inward
 gall
 On all which did against his course oppose,
 Into a clowde of dust sperst in the aire
 The weake foundations of this citie faire.

XV

At length, even at the time when Morpheus
 Most trulie doth unto our eyes appeare, Wearie to see the heavens still wavering thus,
 I saw Typhæus sister comming neare; Whose head, full bravely with a morion hidd,
 Did seeme to match the gods in majestic.
 She, by a rivers bancke that swift downe slidd,
 Over all the world did raise a trophée
 hie;
 An hundred vanquisht kings under her
 lay,
 With armes bound at their backs in shame-full wize.
 Whilst I thus mazed was with great affray, I saw the heavens in warre against her
 rize:
 Then downe she stricken fell with clap of thonder,
 That with great noyse I wakte in sudden
 wonder.

THE VISIONS OF PETRARCH FORMERLY TRANSLATED

I

BEING one day at my window all alone, So manie strange things happened me to
 see,
 As much it grieveth me to thinke thereon.
 At my right hand a hynde appear'd to mee,
 So faire as mote the greatest god delite;
 Two eager dogs did her pursue in chace,
 Of which the one was blaek, the other
 white:
 With deadly force so in their cruell race
 They pincht the haunches of that gentle beast,
 That at the last, and in short time, I spide,
 Under a rocke, where she, alas! opprest, Fell to the ground, and there untimely dide.
 Cruell death vanquishing so noble beau-tie
 Oft makes me wayle so hard a destenie.

II

After, at sea a tall ship did appeare, Made all of heben and white yvorie;
 The sailes of golde, of silke the tackle
 were:
 Milde was the winde, calme seem'd the sea to be,
 The skie eachwhere did show full bright and faire:
 With rich treasures this gay ship freighted
 was:
 But sudden storme did so turmoyle the aire,
 And tumbled up the sea, that she (alas!)
 Strake on a rock, that under water lay,
 And perished past all recoverie.
 O how great ruth, and sorrowfull assay, Doth vex my spirite with perplexitie, Thus in a moment to see lost and drown'd So great riches as like cannot be found!

III

Then heavenly branches did I see arise
 Out of the fresh and lustie lawrell tree, Amidst the yong greene wood: of Paradise
 Some noble plant I thought my selfe to see.
 Such store of birds therein yshrowded were,
 Chaunting in shade their sundrie melodie, That with their sweetnes I was ravish't
 nere.
 While on this lawrell fixed was mine eie,

The skie gan everie where to overcast,
 And darkned was the welkin all about:
 When sudden flash of heavens fire out brast, And rent this royall tree quite by the roote;

Which makes me much and ever to com-
 plaine;

For no such shadow shalbe had againe.

IV

Within this wood, out of a rocke did rise
 A spring of water, mildly rumbling downe, Whereto approached not in anie wise
 The homely shepheard, nor the ruder
 clowne;

But manie Muses, and the nymphes with-
 all,

That sweetly in accord did tune their voyce
 To the soft sounding of the waters fall, That my glad hart thereat did much re-joyce.

But while herein I tooke my chiefe delight,
 I saw (alas!) the gaping earth devoure The spring, the place, and all cleane out of
 sight:

Which yet aggreeves my hart even to this houre,

And wounds my soule with ruffull memorie,

To see such pleasures gon so suddenly.

V

I saw a phœnix in the wood alone,
 With purple wings, and crest of golden hewe; Strange bird he was, whereby I thought
 anone,

That of some heavenly wight I had the
 vewe;

Untill he came unto the broken tree,
 And to the spring, that late devoured was.
 What say I more? Each thing at last we
 see

Doth passe away: the phœnix there, alas!
 Spying the tree destroid, the water dride, Himselfe smote with his beake, as in dis-
 daine,

And so forthwith in great despight he
 dide:

That yet my heart burnes in exceeding
 paine,

For ruth and pitie of so haples plight.
 O, let mine eyes no more see such a
 sight!

VI

At last, so faire a ladie did I spie, That thinking yet on her I burne and quake:

On hearbs and flowres she walked pensively, Milde, but yet love she proudly did for-
 sake:

White seem'd her robes, yet woven so they
 were

As snow and golde together had been
 wrought:

Above the wast a darke clowde shrouded
 her,

A stinging serpent by the heele her caught; Wherewith she languisht as the gathered
 floure,

And well assur'd she mounted up to joy.

Alas! on earth so nothing doth endure,

But bitter griefe and sorrowfull annoy:

Which make this life wretched and miserable,

Tossed with stormes of fortune variable.

VII

When I behold this tickle trustles state Of vaine worlds glorie, flitting too and fro,
 And mortall men tossed by troublous fate
 In restles seas of wretchednes and woe,
 I wish I might this wearie life fergoe,
 And shortly turne unto my happie rest,
 Where my free spirite might not anie moe Be vext with sights, that doo her peace molest.

And ye, faire Ladie, in whose bounteous brest

All heavenly grace and vertue shrined is,
 When ye these rythmes doo read, and vew
 the rest,

Loath this base world, and thinke of heavens blis:

And though ye be the fairest of Gods creatures,

Yet thinke, that death shall spoyle your godly features.

OF HER FAME

[Dedication of the edition of 1596.]

[When the first three books of the Faery Queen were published in 1590, Spenser had been at work upon the poem for at least ten years. The earliest records of its existence are worth transcribing. In the letter to Harvey of April 2, 1580, he writes: 'Nowe, my Dreames and Dying Pellicane being fully finished . . . and presentlie to bee imprinted, I wil in hande forthwith with my Faery Queene, whyche I praye you hartily send me withal expedition, and your frendly letters and long expected judgement wythal, whyche let not be shorte, but in all pointes suche as you ordinarilye use and I extraordinarily desire.' That was in the days just following the publication of the Calendar, some three months and a half before he went with Lord Grey to Ireland. There, probably in the year 1582, occurred that gathering in the little cottage near Dublin so memorably recounted by his friend Lodowick Bryskett. Being invited to speak of moral philosophy, its benefits and its nature, Spenser declined: 'For,' said he, 'sure I am that it is not unknowne unto you that I have already undertaken a work tending to the same effect, which is in heroical verse, under the title of a Faerie Queene, to represent all the moral vertues, assigning to every vertue a knight to be the patron and defender of the same: in whose actions and feates of armes and chivalry the operations of that vertue whereof he is the protector are to be expressed, and the vices and unruly appetites that oppose themselves against the same to be beaten downe and overcome. Which work . . . I have already well entred into.' The company were content to await its conclusion.

Eight years passed, completing a decade, with but a quarter of the whole work done, and still this conclusion seemed to the poet within easy reach. The Letter to Raleigh shows him quite confident of achieving his hundred and forty-fourth canto, shows him even planning another hundred and forty-four in sequel. Mortality, that favorite theme of his generation, the theme of Complaints, was assuredly not in his mind when he thought of his Faery Queen

And, indeed, the second three books were executed much more rapidly than the first, at the rate, it seems, of about a book a year; for they can hardly have been taken up in earnest before his return to Ireland in 1591, and they were completed in the spring of 1594, under the pressure. One may think, of his approaching marriage. How he progressed with them is partly recorded in the thirty-third and the eightieth sonnets of the Amoretti. They were not published till 1596, apparently because he could not take them to London earlier.

This eightieth sonnet of the Amoretti, which announces the completion of thus much of his poem, declares that, 'being halfe fordonne' (i. e. exhausted), the poet will rest, 'and gather to himself new breath awhile.' That is the last we hear about the further progress of the Faery Queen until the publication in 1609, ten years after his death, of the cantos on Mutability. These have been regarded by some as an independent poem (not unlike the Cinque Canti of Ariosto) — for the reason, it seems, that they are competent to stand alone. Yet the mere fact that they were numbered VI, VII, and VIII (surely not by the printer) indicates that they are part of a larger whole, and stanza 37 of the first of them gives the clearest possible evidence that they belong to the great romance. Were these cantos, then, all that Spenser found time during four years to compose for the remaining books of his poem, or did he write others, which may have perished in the disaster of 1598? Again, their being numbered as they are is suggestive: Spenser may be thought, at least to have planned this one book in outline, possibly to have executed other parts of it. A generation after his death, Sir James Ware asserted that the Faery Queen had been finished, and that the unpublished books had been lost in 1598 'by the disorder and abuse of his servant, whom he had sent before him into England.' The story is, of course, apocryphal (that Spenser could have composed six books in four years is a manifest impossibility; nor would any so extensive a loss have failed to be recorded earlier); yet it may well be that the sack of Kilcolman deprived the world of not a few such fragments as this.

In that letter of April 2, 1580, from which our first knowledge of the Faery Queen is derived, Spenser, we have seen, called for the judgment of Harvey upon his new venture. Harvey, never loath to express an opinion, sent back one of those misguided verdicts to which men of his stamp are unluckily prone: it would be a mere curiosity of criticism, did it not by chance record the views of the poet himself. 'To be plaine,' is the summing up, 'I am voyde of al judgement, if your Nine Comedies . . . come not neerer Ariostoes comedies . . . than that Elvish Queene doth to his Orlando Furioso, which, notwithstanding, you wil needesseeme to emulate, and hope to overgo, as you flatly professed your self in one of your last letters.' In undertaking what he must have meant to be the grand work of his life, Spenser, then, was deliberately setting himself to rival Ariosto.

This avowed rivalry is involved in the very origins of his plan. For, first and most obviously, he must build up an extended poem of action: the material in which his didactic purpose was to be worked out, was epic. In this field all the many influences that would control his choice drew him irresistibly to one quarter, the romance. The poetry in which the traditions of his native literature were embodied gave him, for epics, romances. The great legendary hero of his race, the ancestor of his Queen, Arthur, was at the very heart of romance. The highest embodiment of his own spiritual ideals was in chivalry, and chivalry implied romance. Romance, too, satisfied to the full his native delight in color and warmth and magic of beauty. The epics of antiquity, on the other hand, dealt with alien matter, in an alien, though noble, spirit. Such imitations of them as had been made by Trissino, Ronsard, and others, were too utterly dreary to encourage a like attempt, and the Gerusalemme Liberata of Tasso, in which the native glamour of romance was to be informed by their more spacious and simpler art, had not yet been given to the world. Nothing could be more natural, then, more inevitable, than that Spenser should set himself to rival the Orlando Furioso. In 1580 it still stood as the one really great poem of epic scope that sixteenth-century Europe had produced, the accepted masterpiece, moreover, of that variety of the epic to which he was irresistibly drawn, the romance poem.

But this was not all. Ariosto was furthermore accounted a grave and moral poet, a master in the art of poetic edification. He had come by this repnte through the clearness of critical necessities. His fertility and delightfulness, which seemed to revive the lost epic spirit of Homer, had captivated at once all lovers of poetry; but poetry could not in those days be its own raison d'être, it must make for moral edification: the inevitable concern of his admirers, therefore, had for generations been to expound the ultimate seriousness of his purpose. His easy-going scepticism, his irreverence, his delight in life and action, moral and immoral, for their own sake, without ethical prepossessions, these qualities they ignored or explained away: his seriousness (sometimes, by force of imaginative sympathy, very genuine, but more often conventional or factitious) they exalted to a level with the high seriousness of Virgil. The chief engine of their work was allegory. Ariosto, who made free use of whatever might enrich his poem, had adorned it here and there with frankly allegorical episodes: successive commentators had forced a like interpretation upon other passages, till, by 1580, the whole poem was expounded as a many-colored, comprehensive allegory of life, and all its admirers were agreed on its fundamental morality.

Our sage and serious Spenser, then, could find even in the moral aspects of the Orlando matter for sincere emulation: in particular, of course, that allegory which had been so thoroughly read into it by commentators. This was, at best, somewhat irregular: it illustrated the moral problems of life, efficiently perhaps, but rather at random: it left room for a more philosophic method. He must have felt that, in this regard, he might safely 'hope to overgo' the Italian. For, with a genuine fervor for allegory, impossible to the more worldly and modern Ariosto, impossible even to those commentators on the Orlando who had pushed allegorical interpretation so far, he had conceived a plan of vastly greater scope and more thorough method. His poem was to expound a complete system of Christian ethics, modelled upon the Aristotelian scheme of the virtues and vices, and this main allegory was to be enriched by another, to deal with notable contemporary events and personages.

It is one thing, however, to compose a great poem of action which commentators may find means to interpret allegorically, and quite another to develop a set of ideas allegorically in a great poem of action. For, given the action, it will go hard but some definite spiritual parallel may be found for it (as Tasso, having composed his romance-epic, safeguarded the most seductive passages by ex post facto allegorizing): given the set of ideas, however, action, free, self-sustaining, moving of its own impulse in a plain path, is by no means easy to invent. And Spenser's material was unusually stubborn. He had twelve 'private morall vertues,' each to be embodied in a knight, whose 'feates of armes and chivalry' were to show the workings of that virtue with regard to 'the vices and unruly appetites that oppose themselves against the same.' To devise twelve appropriate courses of action was manifestly but to begin: these must furthermore be held together; and how? If he carried them all forward simultaneously, by interweaving, after the manner of the Orlando Furioso, he might indeed achieve unity, but he would also confuse the philosophic development of each separate virtue: if he developed the action of each virtue separately and continuously, the second not begun until the first was ended, he would be composing not one poem but twelve. The alternative was certainly hard. In the philosophic scheme, however, after which his own was planned, Aristotle's, Spenser found the rudiments of a solution. Concerning Magnanimity he read that 'it seems to be a kind of ornament of all the other virtues, in that it makes them better and cannot be without them.' From this hint he developed means of unification. The twelve virtues were to be treated separately, but at the same time brought into relation to the master virtue Magnanimity, — or, as he chose, Magnificence. In narrative terms, there was to be a hero, who, by playing an important, though it might be a brief, part in the enterprise of each knight, should be gradually developed as the central agent of the poem. Epical dignity would be furthered if this hero were historic, and romance pointed to the British Arthur. Then there must be a heroine — who could hardly be Guenevere. At this point the allegory gave an opening to loyalty — or, if one pleases, adulation. For according to Aristotle, the object-matter of Magnanimity is honor, or 'Glory,' and who could better stand for this than Spenser's sovereign, Elizabeth? This choice determined the rest. She could not be introduced in propria persona, still less as another historic character. The poet, therefore, invented for her the disguise of Gloriana, Queen of Faery Land. For narrative function he gave her the initiation of the twelve enterprises.

This general outline of action once conceived, the separate parts could be planned as the poem progressed. There was no need that the matter of each book should be determined at the outset; even the conclusion might be left for a time undecided. The one problem to be solved immediately was the beginning. The various enterprises were to start from the court of Gloriana on successive days of her great annual feast. Should this feast be described at the outset in a sort of proem, or should each separate book begin with an account of that particular day of the feast on which the knight of the book was sent forth? One or other of these methods would unquestionably have been the choice of Ariosto, who, as a genuine romance poet, believed in beginning at the beginning. To begin there, however, would not be epic (Ariosto himself had been blamed for just that); the genuine epic poet plunged at once in medias res; and the Faery Queen, though not epic in formal structure, ought none the less to acknowledge classical law. Spenser, therefore, determined to keep his beginnings, the feast, for retrospective presentment. Since he evidently felt also, however, that this feast was one great pageant, to be preserved entire and not distributed among the several books, it must manifestly, in default of first place, come last. So far his plan might seem to be clear. Yet the account given in the prefatory letter is oddly perplexing. According to one passage, the twelfth and last book is to be devoted entire to the beginnings; according to another, it would seem to be intended for the enterprise of the twelfth knight; and surely, one might expect from it some termination to the quest of Magnificence for Glory, of Arthur for his Faery Queen. One inclines to doubt if Spenser really knew just where his plan was taking him.

So organized, the Faery Queen must manifestly be at a disadvantage with other great poems of action. Despite the ingenious device for linking the separate enterprises to the quest of Arthur and the rule of Gloriana, the poem could not have that unity, that centralization of forces, which distinguishes the epics of antiquity. In the six books composed, Arthur does not really become a controlling and guiding power in the action, nor is it likely that all the twelve could have made him that. Gloriana could never have become much more than a kind of presiding divinity, a transcendent looker-on. Nor, in lieu of centralization, could the poem attain the forward energy of the Orlando Furioso. Ariosto's romance moves like a broad river, in a dozen currents, now mingling, now separating, ever on, leisurely, irresistibly. In the Faery Queen, one enterprise must run its course uninterrupted to the end, and then disappear forever; a fresh start must be made, another enterprise, with new characters, set in motion and followed through; and then a third. That these enterprises succeed each other in time, that certain episodes are carried over from book to book, and certain characters, can hardly create the impression of forward energy. As it progresses, indeed, the poem takes on more and more the external aspect of the Orlando, but the ground plan of separate enterprises keeps its action fundamentally different. It moves without clearly perceptible goal.

This peculiarity of organization, however, is hardly the cause that so many have found the Faery Queen tedious. They might complain, rather, that the poem is not grounded in action, that in those simple human energies which alone could sustain an epic or a romance at such length it is sadly wanting. And they would complain with some reason. Spenser's knights pass from chivalric feat to chivalric feat with due enterprise, but the eye of their creator is less often upon the doing than the deed. Scene follows scene in the narrative, less often an encounter of active forces than a picture of spiritual conditions. Spenser, indeed, had not that delight in the realities of living action, that native sense for the situations that lurk in the conflict of living energies, which were the gift of the poet he particularly emulated. The combats of his knights, for example, how often they seem to be repetitions of a set ceremony! To Ariosto each combat is a new and quite peculiar act of life; it is the outbreak of forces that meet in a fresh combination or under fresh conditions; simple or intricate, it has a spirit and growth of its own. That unending recurrence of encounters, therefore, which is the special infirmity of romance, becomes in his poem a manifestation of exuberant vitality. In the Faery Queen, on the other hand, spirited as some few of the combats are, particularly those of the second book, one recognizes only too clearly that Spenser's heart is not in this eager work. Nor is it in that active conflict of will with will, of purpose with circumstance, which is the life of the poetry of action. Even in those scenes which are most truly dynamic, not merely picturesque or expository, scenes like the meeting of the Redcross Knight with Despair, the action, the power, is mainly embodied in one personage; there is little interplay of forces. For situations his sense is at times curiously fallible; as when Britomart at the close of her combat with Arthegall, and during and after the negotiations for truce, is left standing, like an image, with her sword uplifted to strike.

It would seem sufficiently clear that such failings as these, in so far as they are failings, spring from a native inaptitude for the poetry of action. Yet how often we hear them and others ascribed to the allegorical design! If, in any passage, the poet's imagination seems to flag, the blame is always on the allegory. The combat of the Redcross Knight with the Dragon is conventional and lifeless — because the allegory obliges Spenser to draw the fighting out to the third day. Medina and her two sisters are desperately uninteresting, the domestic organization of the House of Alma is described in rather ridiculous detail — again because of the allegory. The allegory, in short, is mainly a check or drag upon the poet's naturally spontaneous and fresh imagination. That many of the leading characters, for instance, are too shadow-like, not living men and women in whom one can take a living interest, is what might have been expected; as embodiments of abstractions they could not be other. Bunyan, to be sure, has shown that allegory can be made vital at length, but the length of the Pilgrim's Progress is as nothing to that of the Faery Queen, and its plan is the perfection of simplicity. To an allegorical scheme, on the other hand, so vast and so complicated as that devised by Spenser, no poet could have given full imaginative life. Hence, in the end, the poem's peculiar tediousness.

In criticism such as this there is just enough truth to be misleading. The combat of the Redcross Knight with the Dragon, Medina and her sisters, the House of Alma — it cannot be denied that these must be charged on the allegory. Yet when we survey the poem from end to end, how many such staring failures do we find, how many failures that can clearly be laid to allegorical pressure? It is true also that, if many of the leading characters are somewhat shadow-like and unreal, the fault may partly be that they personate abstractions. But has Spenser, anywhere in his work at large, shown signs of the power to create substantial men and women? If the Faery Queen had been designed as pure romance, would its leading characters have been more human? Is not their remoteness due quite as much to his absorption in the ideal as to his love of mere allegory? Indeed, this supposed domination of the poem by allegory, the allegory of abstractions, will hardly bear the test of simple reading. In the first two books, of course, those with which everybody is familiar, it is indisputable. The Redcross Knight and Una, Sir Guyon and his Palmer, and the long array of personages among whom these two champions execute their 'feates of armes and chivalry' very manifestly stand for qualities, ideas, and the like, and the 'feates of armes and chivalry' for successive 'operations' of the spirit. With Book III, however, there comes a sudden and most curious change. Britomart, the heroine, is still nominally of the old order, the formal embodiment of chastity, and she is accompanied by a few figures like Malecasta, also of the old order; but other figures appear, and in the greater number, who can be reduced to abstractions by nothing short of violence. Florimel is no more than a beautiful maiden of romance, faithful to her love amid disasters; Hellenore is but a frail wife, Malbecco, up to the time of his transformation, but an old and jealous husband; and their actions are equally unsymbolic. In a word, barring personal and historic allusions, most of the characters in Book III are no more than men and women of certain general types engaged in actions which are typically moral. One may, of course, with Spenser, call such work allegory, but it is manifestly not that kind of allegory which can hamper free movement of the imagination; and when one notices that it prevails throughout the better part of the remaining books, one wonders at the persistence of the old cry.

Yet after this much-abused allegory of abstractions has ceased to dominate the romance, it still remains a mode of the poet's rarest creative power — among the minor figures. Throughout the poem, indeed, these figures are, on the whole, more vivid than those which lead the action, and when they are particularly vivid it is often because of their allegorical intensity. The main characters draw but little life from the allegory; when they impress us, it is rather as types of ideal humanity; but those others, among whom they move, how often their life is the very quintessence of an emotion or an idea! It is not the procession at the House of Pride, or the Masque of Cupid, that one need cite anew. Splendid as these pageants are, they are mainly ornamental, and the value of allegory as ornament has always been recognized. But those strange figures that play a small but real part in the action, one succeeding another in brief stages, how much of the power of the poem issues from them! We may be indifferent to Arthur, to Belphebe, to Duessa, to Cambell and Triamond; but Despair and Atin and Guile and the blacksmith Care and Talus (if he be a minor figure), these are unforgettable. They are not human beings; their very life of feature and action is rooted in the immaterialities they embody. If ever abstractions took flesh and walked, it is these. And beside them are half-human creatures, such as Ignaro, to link them with wholly human and delightful creatures such as Phædria, whose charm is forever at odds with her allegorical duty. Surely, had the Faery Queen been pure romance, it would have been a much less exquisite creation.

For, in fine, the world of the Faery Queen is not altogether the world of romance; it is, if possible, more remote, more strange, more diverse. By its forest fountains meet Venus and Diana, almost within the ken of Christian knights and ladies, and in its castles or upon its open hillsides and heaths, among gentry and retainers and shepherds and very rabble, side by side with giants and monsters, move sheer incarnations of the immaterial. It is a world of jarring elements gathered from antiquity and the Middle Ages and the Renaissance, and harmonized by the serenest of poetic imaginations. In such a world as this, if we can breathe its atmosphere, we shall not crave the vigor and sparkle of movement that are at such full tide in the Orlando Furioso, nor even the graver human energies of the great epics: it has a life to which these are not essential. For, externally a poem of action, meant to rival Ariosto's, the Faery Queen is at heart but the vision of a contemplative mind to which the main realities of life are beauty and the law of the spirit. If it quickens at rare intervals into action full and vigorous, the quickening is but for a moment, and when it subsides we are not regretful. Faint in passion, faint even in pathos, the poem appeals most intimately to that 'inward eye' which can read forms and hues of beauty, and feature and bearing as they reveal the spirit, and to the mind that can read the spirit in speech. And this world that Spenser has created can never be to us a mere Kubla Khan paradise of romance. Amid its throng of ideal creatures, though we may not feel the force of the express moral doctrine they enact, we shall feel the force of the poet's own bent. His temper of grave and sweet spirituality, always human, that tone of the mind which is ever the chief spring of moral influence, this will be unescapable, and, in the end, it will be this as much as the pure magic of his imagination that will seem to impart to the poem its peculiar and imperturbable atmosphere.

Spenser was long ago called 'the Rubens of our poets,' and the phrase is still passed about. The vision which it evokes of large, plump, pink-and-white women and of big-limbed, tawny men, of superb physical vigor and of bright magnificence of color, will hardly appeal to the judicious as Spenserian. If one must have a phrase, let it be Charles Lamb's 'the poet of poets,' since that, despite its apparent vagueness, has a meaning. For what finally impresses us in the Faery Queen is its triumph over a dozen capital defects by the power of a very few, and those the essential, poetic qualities. Its narrative plan is fundamentally vicious, the narrative execution of the various episodes is weakened again and again by the most singular blunders, it is neither consistent allegory nor consistent romance. It gives over one canto to rhymed genealogy, another to rhymed chronicle, another to a merely ingenious transmogrification of the human body almost as crude as that at the conclusion of the Roman de la Rose; one might continue the story of its defects, general and particular, for pages. And yet, as unmistakably as the Divina Commedia, it has the imaginative and spiritual tone of high poetry. Perhaps just because of these defects, moreover, no poem makes us feel more keenly the mere virtue of style. Spenser's almost unerring sense for language and his apparently inexhaustible power of welling out the most limpid and exquisitely modulated verse, these make poetry of material that his imagination cannot vivify. It is these, too, that have made him master to so many poetic spirits of alien temper. He has taught more poets than almost any other poet in our literature.

The most patent, though not the most intimate, mode of his influence has been his great stanza. Much has been written about its qualities of form, which have been illustrated by a long line of masterpieces; a word, therefore, about its origins may be better worth while, especially since critics have not always remembered that, if he invented this stanza, it was, in part, of necessity. When he began the Faery Queen, indeed, the forms among which he might have chosen were few and not all good. Blank verse had not yet been supplied to free movement by generations of dramatic artists; it was a yet new and strange invention. The ten-syllable couplet labored under the name of 'hiding rimes' and was associated chiefly with the more humorous passages of the Canterbury Tales. Spenser might well have disregarded this prejudice, but it was of weight. In stanzas, the accredited form for high poetry was the rhyme royal, the stanza of his own Hymns. This was capable of sweetness and grace, even of vigor: seven lines, however, was rather narrow compass for the more extended harmonies of verse, and the arrangement of the rhymes at the close restricted free movement. Finally, there was the Italian ottava rima, the stanza of Ariosto's romance and of his own 'Virgil's Gnat.' For such a poem as he was about to undertake it might seem to have been the most natural form. Yet, admirably adapted to a rapid and flexible style and to the ready interchange of pathos, humor, and lively action, as also to facile sweetness, it was hardly capable of graver modulations, of such higher harmonies as Spenser was then dreaming. The first six lines were too fluent, the distinct couplet at the close was too epigrammatic. In defect, then, of satisfactory models, he was driven to invention. He knew, in Chaucer and Lyndesay, a fine, sonorous old stanza in eight verses, built of two quatrains linked by rhyme. Such linking by rhyme was familiar to him from Marot as well, and he had also there experimented with the alexandrine, had learned to moderate and vary its pendulum movement, and had found that, in combination with other measures, it was capable of the most unexpected sonorities. For his Faery Queen, therefore, he merely added to the old stanza that he knew a final alexandrine, and by that simplest combination transfigured them both.

'Beauty making beautiful old rime,
In praise of ladies dead and lovely knights.'

Those verses of Shakespeare might seem to have been meant for motto to the Faery Queen. Read somewhat fantastically, they might also fit the stanza to which the Faery Queen owes so much of its abiding charm.]

THE COURSE OF THIS WORKE: WHICH

ANNEXED

TO THE RIGHT NOBLE, AND VALOROUS, SIR WALTER RALEIGH KNIGHT, LORD WARDEIN OF THE STANNERYES, AND HER MAJESTIES LIEFETENAUNT OF THE COUNTY OF CORNEWAYLL

SIR, knowing how doubtfully all allegories may be construed, and this booke of mine, which I have entituled the Faery Queene, being a continued allegory, or darke conceit, I have thought good, aswell for avoyding of gealous opinions and misconstructions, as also for your better light in reading thereof, (being so by you commanded,) to discover unto you the general intention and meaning, which in the whole course thereof I have fashioned, without expressing of any particular purposes or by accidents therein occasioned. The generall end therefore of all the booke is to fashion a gentleman or noble person in vertuous and gentle discipline: which for that I conceived shoulde be most plausible and pleasing, being coloured with an historical fiction, the which the most part of men delight to read, rather for variety of matter then for profite of the ensample, I chose the historye of King Arthure, as most fitte for the excellency of his person, being made famous by many mens former workes, and also furthest from the danger of envy, and suspition of present time. In which I have followed all the antique poets historical: first Homere, who in the persons of Agamemnon and Ulysses hath ensampled a good governour and a vertuous man, the one in his Ilias, the other in his Odysseis; then Virgil, whose like intention was to doe in the person of Æneas; after him Ariosto comprised them both in his Orlando; and lately Tasso dissevered them againe, and formed both parts in two persons. namely that part which they in philosophy call Ethice, or vertues of a private man, coloured in his Rinaldo; the other named Politice in his Godfredo. By example of which excellent poets, I labour to pourtraict in Arthure, before he was king, the image of a brave knight, perfected in the twelve private morall vertues, as Aristotle hath devised, the which is the purpose of these first twelve bookes: which if I finde to be well accepted, I may be perhaps encouraged to frame the other part of polliticke vertues in his person, after that hee came to be king. To some, I know, this methode will seeme displeasaut, which had rather have good discipline delivered plainly in way of precepts, or sermoned at large, as they use, then thus cloudily enwrapped in allegoricall devises. But such, me seeme, should be satisfide with the use of these dayes, seeing all things accounted by their shoves, and nothing esteemed of, that is not delightfull and pleasing to commune sence. For this cause is Xenophon preferred before Plato, for that the one, in the exquisite depth of his judgement, formed a commune welth such as it should be, but the other in the person of Cyrus and the Persians fashioned a government, such as might best be: so much more profitable and gratious is doctrine by ensample, then by rule. So have I laboured to doe in the person of Arthure: whome I conceive, after his long education by Timon, to whom he was by Merlin delivered to be brought up, so soone as he was borne of the Lady Igrayne, to have scene in a dream or vision the Faery Queen, with whose excellent beauty ravished, he awaking resolved to seeke her out, and so being by Merlin armed, and by Timon thoroughly instructed, he went to seeke her forth in Faerye Land. In that Faery Queene I meane glory in my generall intention, but in my particular I conceive the most excellent and glorious person of our soveraine the Queene, and her kingdome in Faery Land. And yet, in some places els, I doe otherwise shadow her. For considering she beareth two persons, the one of a most royall queene or empresse, the other of a most vertuous and beautifull lady, this latter part in some places I doe expresse in Belphebe, fashioning her name according to your owne excellent conceipt of Cynthia, (Phebe and Cynthia being both names of Diana.) So in the person of Princee Arthure I sette forth magnificence in particular, which vertue, for that (according to Aristotle and the rest) it is the perfection of all the rest, and containeth in it them all, therefore in the whole course I mention the deedes of Arthure applyable to that vertue which I write of in that booke. But ¹⁰⁰ of the xii. other vertues I make xii. other knights the patrones, for the more variety of the history : of which these three bookes contain three. The first of the Knight of the Redcrosse, in whome I expresse holynes : The seconde of Sir Guyon, in whome I sette forth temperance : The third of Britomartis, a lady knight, in whome I picture chastity. But because the beginning of the whole worke seemeth ¹¹⁰ abrupte and as depending upon other antecedents, it needs that ye know the occasion of these three knights severall adventures. For the methode of a poet historical is not such as of an historiographer. For an historiographer discourseth of affayres orderly as they were done, accounting as well the times as the actions ; but a poet thrusteth into the midst, even where it most concerneth him, and there recouring to the ¹²⁰ thinges forepaste, and divining of thinges to come, maketh a pleasing analysis of all.

The beginning therefore of my history, if it were to be told by an historiographer, should be the twelfth booke, which is the last; where I devise that the Faery Queene kept her annuall feaste xii. dayes, upon which xii. severall dayes, the occasions of the xii. severall adventures hapned, which being undertaken by xii. severall knights, are in these ¹³⁰ xii. bookes severally handled and discoursed. The first was this. In the beginning of the feast, there presented him selfe a tall clownish younge man, who, falling before the Queen of Faries, desired a boone (as the manner then was) which during that feast she might not refuse : which was that hee might have the atchievement of any adventure, which during that feaste should happen : that being graunted, he rested him ¹⁴⁰ on the floore, unfitte through his rusticity for a better place. Soone after entred a faire ladye in mourning weedes, riding on a white asse, with a dwarfe behind her leading a warlike steed, that bore the armes of a knight, and his speare in the dwarfes hand. Shee, falling before the Queene of Faeries, complained that her father and mother, an ancient king and queene, had bene by an huge dragon many years shut up in a brasen ¹⁵⁰ castle, who thence suffred them not to yssew: and therefore besought the Faery Queene to assygne her some one of her knights to take on him that exployt. Presently that clownish person, upstarting, desired that adventure : whereat the Queene much wondering, and the lady much gainesaying, yet he earnestly importuned his desire. In the end the lady told him, that unlesse that armour which she brought would serve him (that is, the ar- ¹⁶⁰ mour of a Christian man specified by Saint Paul, vi. Ephes.), that he could not succeed in that enterprise : which being forthwith put upon him with dewe furnitures thereunto, he seemed the goodliest man in al that company, and was well liked of the lady. And eftesoones taking on him knighthood, and mounting on that straunge courser, he went forth with her on that adventure : where beguneth the first booke, vz. ¹⁷⁰

A gentle knight was pricking on the playne, &c.

The second day ther came in a palmer bearing an infant with bloody hands, whose parents he complained to have bene slayn by an enchaunteresse called Aerasia : and therefore craved of the Faery Queene, to appoint him some knight to performe that adventure ; which being assigned to Sir Guyon, he presently went forth with that same palmer : which is the beginning of the sec- ¹⁸⁰ cond booke and the whole subject thereof. The third day there came in a groome, who complained before the Faery Queene, that a vile enchaunter, called Busirane, had in hand a most faire lady, called Amoretta, whom he kept in most grievous torment, because she would not yield him the pleasure of her body. Wherenpon Sir Scudamour, the lover of that lady, presently tooke on him that adventure. But being unable ¹⁹⁰ to performe it by reason of the hard enchauntments, after long sorrow, in the end met with Britomartis, who succoured him, and reskewed his love.

But by occasion hereof, many other adventures are intermedled, but rather as accidents then intendments : as the love of Britomart, the overthrow of Marinell, the misery of Florimell, the vertuousnes of Belphoebe, the lasciviousnes of Hellenora, ²⁰⁰ and many the like.

Thus much, Sir, I have briefly overronne, to direct your understanding to the wel-head of the history, that from thence gathering the whole intention of the conceit, ye may, as in a handfull, gripe al the discourse, which otherwise may happily seeme tedious and confused. So humbly craving the continuance of your honourable favour towards me, and th' eternall establishment of your happines, I humbly take leave. ²¹¹

23. January, 1589.

Yours most humbly affectionate, Ed. Spenser.

A VISION UPON THIS CONCEPT OF THE FAERY QUEENE

ME thought I saw the grave where Laura
lay,
Within that temple where the vestall flame Was wont to burne; and passing by that
way,
To see that buried dust of living fame, Whose tumbre faire Love, and fairer Ver-tue kept,
All suddenly I saw the Faery Queene:
At whose approach the soule of Petrarke wept,
And from thenceforth those graces were not scene.
For they this Queene attended; in whose steed
Oblivion laid him downe on Lauras herse: Hereat the hardest stones were scene to bleed,
And grones of buried ghostes the heavens did perse:
Where Homers spright did tremble all for grieve,
And curst th' accesse of that celestially theife.

ANOTHER OF THE SAME

THE prayse of meaner wits this worke like profit brings,
As doth the Cuckoes song delight when Philumena sings.
If thou hast formed right true Vertues face herein, Vertue her selfe can best discerne, to whom they written bin.
If thou hast Beauty praysd, let her sole lookes divine Judge if ought therein be amis, and mend it by her eie.

If Chastitie want ought, or Temperance her dew, Behold her princely mind aright, and write thy Queene anew.
Meane while she shall perceive, how far her vertues sore Above the reach of all that live, or such as wrote of yore:
And thereby will excuse and favour thy good will:
Whose vertue can not be exprest, but by an angels quill.
Of me no lines are lov'd, nor letters are of
price,
Of all which speak our English tongue, but those of thy device. W. R.

TO THE LEARNED SHEPEHEARD

COLLYN, I see by thy new taken taske, Some sacred fury hath enricht thy braynes,
That leades thy Muse in haughty verse to maske,
And loath the layes that longs to lowly swaynes;
That lifts thy notes from shepheardes unto kinges,
So like the lively Larke that mounting singes.
Thy lovely Rosolinde seemes now for-
lorne,
And all thy gentle flockes forgotten
quight;
Thy chaunged hart now holdes thy pypes in
scorne,
Those pretty pypes that did thy mates
delight,
Those trusty mates, that loved thee so
well,
Whom thou gav'st mirth, as they gave thee
the bell.

Yet, as thou earst, with thy sweete rounde-
layes, Didst stirre to glee our laddes in homely
bowers,
So moughtst thou now in these refyned
layes Delight the daintie eares of higher powers:
And so mought they, in their deepe skan-ning skill,
Alow and grace our Collyns flowing quyll.

And faire befall that Faery Queene of thine, In whose faire eyes Love linckt with Ver-tue sittes:

Enfusing, by those bewties fyers devyne, Such high conceites into thy humble wittes,

As raised hath poore pastors oaten reede, From rustiek tunes, to chaunt heroique
deedes.

So mought thy Rederosse Knight with happy hand

Victorious be in that faire Ilands right, Which thou dost vayne in type of Faery
Land,

Elizas blessed field, that Albion hight:
That shieldes her friendes, and warres her mightie foes,

Yet still with people, peace, and plentie
flowes.

But (jolly shepheard) though with pleasing style

Thou feast the humour of the courtly
trayne,

Let not conceipt thy settled sence beguile, Ne daunted be through envy or disdaine.

Subject thy dome to her empyring spright, From whence thy Muse, and all the world, takes light. HOBYNOLL.

FAYRE Themis streame, that from Ludds stately towne

Runst paying tribute to the ocean seas, Let all thy nymphes and syrens of renowne

Be silent, whyle this Bryttane Orpheus
playes:

Nere thy sweet bankes, there lives that sac-cred Crowne,

Whose hand strowes palme and never-dying
bayes:

Let all at once, with thy soft murmuring
sowne,

Present her with this worthy poets prayes:
For he hath taught hye drifts in shepeherdes weedes,

And deepe conceites now singes in Faeries deedes. R. S.

GRAVE Muses, march in triumph and with prayes;

Our Goddesse here hath given you leave to
land,

And biddes this rare dispenser of your graces Bow downe his brow unto her sacred hand.
Desertes findes dew in that most princely doome,

In whose sweete brest are all the Muses
bredde:

So did that great Augustus erst in Roome
With leaves of fame adorne his poets hedde.
Faire be the gnerdon of your Faery Queene, Even of the fairest that the world hath seene. H. B.

WHEN stout Achilles heard of Helens rape And what revenge the states of Greece devid:

Thinking by sleight the fatall warres to scape, In womans weedes him selfe he then dis-guisde:

But this devise Ulysses soone did spy, And brought him forth, the chaunce of warre to try.

When Spencer saw the fame was spredd so large,

Through Faery Land, of their renowned
Queene,

Loth that his Muse should take so great a charge,

As in such haughty matter to be seene, To seeme a shepheard then he made his choice;

But Sydney heard him sing, and knew his voice.

And as Ulysses brought faire Thetis sonne
From his retyred life to menage armes,

So Spencer was by Sidneys speaches wonne To blaze her fame, not fearing future
harmes:

For well he knew, his Muse would soone be tyred

In her high praise, that all the world admired.

Yet as Achilles, in those warlike frayes, Did win the palme from all the Grecian peeres,

So Spencer now, to his immortall prayse, Hath wonne the laurell quite from all his feres.

What though his taske exceed a humaine witt?

He is excus'd, sith Sydney thought it fitt.
W. L.

To looke upon a worke of rare devise
 The which a workman setteth out to view,
 And not to yield it the deserved prise
 That unto such a workmanship is dew, Doth either prove the judgement to be naught,
 Or els doth shew a mind with envy fraught.

To labour to commend a peece of worke
 Which no man goes about to discommend, Would raise a jealous doubt, that there did lurke
 Some secret doubt, whereto the prayse did
 tend:
 For when men know the goodnes of the wyne,
 'Tis needlesse for the hoast to have a sygne.

Thus then, to shew my judgement to be such As can discerne of colours blaek and white,
 As alls to free my minde from envies tuch,
 That never gives to any man his right, I here pronounce this workmanship is such,
 As that no pen can set it forth too much.

And thus I hang a garland at the dore,
 Not for to shew the goodnes of the ware, But such hath bene the custome hereto-
 fore,
 And customes very hardly broken are.
 And when your tast shall tell you this is
 trew, Then looke you give your hoast his utmost dew. IGNOTO.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE SIR CHRIS-TOPHER HATTON, LORD HIGH CHAUN-CELOR OF ENGLAND, &C.

THOSE prudent heads, that with their counsels wise Whylom the pillours of th' earth did sus-
 taine,
 And taught ambitious Rome to tyrannise,
 And in the neck of all the world to rayne, Oft from those grave affaires were wont abstaine,
 With the sweet Lady Muses for to play:
 So Ennius the elder Africane,
 So Maro oft did Cæsars cares allay.

So you, great Lord, that with your counsell
 sway
 The burdeine of this kingdom mightily, With like delightes sometimes may eke delay
 The rugged brow of carefull Policy;
 And to these ydle rymes lend litle space, Which for their titles sake may find more
 grace.

TO THE MOST HONOURABLE AND EXCEL-LENT LORD THE EARLE OF ESSEX.
 GREAT MAISTER OF THE HORSE TO HER HIGHNESSE, AND KNIGHT OF THE NOBLE ORDER OF THE GAR-TER, &C.

MAGNIFICKE Lord, whose vertues excellent Doe merit a most famous poets witt,
 To be thy living praises instrument, Yet doe not sdeigne to let thy name be writt

In this base poeme, for thee far unfit:
 Nought is thy worth disparaged thereby.
 But when my Muse, whose fethers, nothing flitt, Doe yet but flagg, and lowly learne to fly,

With bolder wing shall dare alofte to sty
 To the last praises of this Faery Queene, Then shall it make more famous memory Of thine heroicke parts, such as they
 beene.

Till then vouchsafe thy noble countenance,
 To these first labours needed furtheraunce.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE EARLE OF OXFORD, LORD HIGH CHAM-BERLAYNE OF ENGLAND, &C.

RECEIVE, most noble Lord, in gentle gree
 The unripe fruit of an unready wit, Which by thy countenance doth crave
 to bee

Defended from foule Envies poisonous bit:

Which so to doe may thee right well befit, Sith th' antique glory of thine auncestry Under a shady vele is therein writ,
 And eke thine owne long living memory, Succeeding them in true nobility;
 And also for the love which thou doest
 beare

To th' Heliconian ymps, and they to thee,
They unto thee, and thou to them, most deare.

Deare as thou art unto thy selfe, so love
That loves and honours thee, as doth behove.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE EARLE OF NORTHUMBERLAND

THE sacred Muses have made alwaies clame
To be the nourses of nobility,
And registres of everlasting fame,
To all that armes professe and chev-alry.

Then, by like right, the noble progeny, Which them succeed in fame and worth, are tyde

T'embrace the service of sweete poetry,
By whose endeours they are glorifide;
And eke from all of whom it is envide

To patronize the authour of their praise, Which gives them life, that els would soone have dide,

And crownes their ashes with immortal baies.

To thee, therefore, right noble Lord, I send

This present of my paines, it to defend.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE EARLE
OF ORMOND AND OSSORY

RECEIVE, most noble Lord, a simple taste Of the wilde fruit which salvage soyl hath
bred,

Which, being through long wars left almost waste,

With brutish barbarisme is overspredd:
And in so faire a land as may be redd,

Not one Parnassus nor one Helicone Left for sweete Muses to be harboured, But where thy selfe hast thy brave mansion:

There in deede dwel faire Graces many
one,

And gentle nymphes, delights of learned wits,

And in thy person without paragone All godly bountie and true honour sits.

Such, therefore, as that wasted soyl doth
yield,

Receive, dear Lord, in worth, the fruit of barren field.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE LORD
CH. HOWARD, LORD HIGH ADMIRAL OF ENGLAND, KNIGHT OF THE NOBLE ORDER OF THE GAR-TER, AND ONE OF HER MAJESTIES PRIVIE
COUNSEL, &C.

AND ye, brave Lord, whose goodly person
age

And noble deeds, each other garnishing, Make you ensample to the present age Of th' old heroes, whose famous ofspring
The antique poets wont so much to sing, In this same pageaunt have a worthy
place,

Sith those huge castles of Castilian king, That vainly threatned kingdomes to dis-
place,

Like flying doves ye did before you chace,
And that proud people, woxen insolent Through many victories, didst first de-
face:

Thy praises everlasting monument
Is in this verse engraven semblably,
That it may live to all posterity.

TO THE MOST RENOWNED AND VALIANT LORD, THE LORD GREY OF WILTON, KNIGHT OF THE NOBLE ORDER OF THE GARTER, &C.

MOST noble Lord, the pillor of my life,
And patrone of my Muses pupillage, Through whose large bountie, poured on me rife,

In the first season of my feeble age,
I now doe live, bound yours by vassalage: Sith nothing ever may redeeme, nor
reave

Out of your endlesse debt so sure a gage, Vouchsafe in worth this small guift to
reave,

Which in your noble hands for pledge I leave

Of all the rest that I am tyde t' account:

Rude rymes, the which a rustick Muse did weave

In savadge soyle, far from Parnasso
mount,

And roughly wrought in an unlearned loome:

The which vouchsafe, dear Lord, your favorable doome.

TO THE RIGHT NOBLE AND VALOROUS
KNIGHT, SIR WALTER RALEIGH, LORD WARDEIN OF THE STAN-NERVES, AND LIEFTENAUNT OF CORNEWAILE

To thee that art the sommers Nightingale, Thy sovaine Goddesses most deare de-
light,

Why doe I send this rusticke madrigale, That may thy tunefull eare unseason
quite ?

Thou onely fit this argument to write,
In whose high thoughts Pleasure hath built her bowre,

And dainty Love learnd sweetly to en-dite.

My rimes I know unsavory and sowre, To tast the streames, that like a golden
showre

Flow from thy fruitfull head, of thy loves
praise;

Fitter perhaps to thonder martiall stowre, When so thee list thy lofty Muse to
raise:

Yet till that thou thy poeme wilt make
knowne,

Let thy faire Cinthias praises bee thus rudely showne.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE LORD
BURLEIGH, LORD HIGH THREA-SURER OF ENGLAND

To you, right noble Lord, whose carefull
brest

To menage of most grave affaires is
bent,

And on whose mightie shoulders most doth rest

The burdein of this kingdomes governe-
ment,

As the wide compasse of the firmament
On Atlas mighty shoulders is upstayd,

Unfitly I these ydle rimes present,
The labor of lost time, and wit unstayd:

Yet if their deeper sence be inly wayd,
And the dim vele, with which from commune vew

Their fairer parts are hid, aside be layd, Perhaps not vaine they may appeare to you.

Such as they be, vouchsafe them to receive,
And wipe their faults out of your censure grave.

E. S.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE EARLE OF CUMBERLAND

REDOUBTED Lord, in whose corageous mind
The flowre of chevalry, now bloosming
faire,

Doth promise fruite worthy the noble kind Which of their praises have left you the
haire;

To you this humble present I prepare,
For love of vertue and of martiall praise;

To which though nobly ye inclined are,
As goodlie well ye shew'd in late assaies,

Yet brave ensample of long passed daies,
In which trew honor yee may fashioned
see,

To like desire of honor may ye raise,
And fill your mind with magnanimitee.

Receive it, Lord, therefore, as it was ment,
For honor of your name and high descent.

E. S.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE LORD OF HUNSDON, HIGH CHAMBER-LAINE TO HER MAJESTY

RENOWMED Lord, that for your worthinesse And noble deeds, have your deserved
place

High in the favour of that Emperesse,
The worlds sole glory and her sexes grace;

Here eke of right have you a worthe place, Both for your nearnes to that Faerie
Queene,

And for your owne high merit in like case,
Of which apparaunt prooffe was to be
seene,

When that tumultuous rage and fearfull deene

Of Northerne rebels ye did pacify,
And their disloiall powre defaced clene,

The record of enduring memory.

Live, Lord, for ever in this lasting verse,
That all posteritie thy honor may reverse.

E. S.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE LORD OF BUCKHURST, ONE OF HER MA-JESTIES PRIVIE COUNSELL

IN vain I thinke, right honourable Lord,
By this rude rime to memorize thy name,

Whose learned Muse hath writ her owne record

In golden verse, worthy immortal fame:

Thou much more fit (were leasure to the same)

Thy gracious Sovereains praises to compile,

And her imperiall majestie to frame
In loftie numbers and heroicke stile.

But sith thou maist not so, give leave a while

To baser wit his power therein to spend, Whose grosse defaults thy daintie pen may file,

And unadvised oversights amend.

But evermore vouchsafe it to maintaine Against vile Zoilus backbitings vaine.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE SIR FR.
WALSINGHAM, KNIGHT, PRINCIPALL SECRETARY TO HER MAJESTY AND OF HER HONOURABLE PRIVY COUNSELL

THAT Mantuane poetes incompared spirit, Whose girland now is set in highest
place,

Had not Mæcenas, for his worthy merit, It first advaunst to great Augustus
grace.

Might long, perhaps, have lien in silence
base,

Ne bene so much admir'd of later age.

This lowly Muse, that learns like steps to trace,

Flies for like aide unto your patronage;

That are the great Mæcenas of this age,

As wel to al that civil artes professe,

As those that are inspir'd with martial
rage,

And craves protection of her feeblenesse:

Which if ye yield, perhaps ye may her
rayse

In bigger tunes to sound your living prayse.
E. S.

TO THE RIGHT NOBLE LORD AND MOST VALIAUNT CAPTAINE, SIR JOHN NORRIS, KNIGHT, LORD PRE-SIDENT OF MOUNSTER

WHO ever gave more honourable prize

To the sweet Muse then did the martiall
crew,

That their brave deeds she might immortalize

In her shri! tromp, and sound their praises dew ?

Who then ought more to favour her then
you,

Moste noble Lord, the honor of this age,
And precedent of all that armes ensue ?

Whose warlike prowesse and manly courage,

Tempred with reason and advizement sage, Hath fild sad Belgicke with victorious
spoile,

In Fraunce and Ireland left a famous gage,

And lately shakt the Lusitanian soile.

Sith, then, each where thou hast dispredd thy fame,

Love him that hath eternized your name.

E. S.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE AND MOST VERTUOUS LADY, THE COUNTESSE OF PENBROKE

REMEMBRAUNCE of that most heroicke
spirit,

The heavens pride, the glory of our daies, Which now triumpheth through immor-tall merit

Of his brave vertues, crownd with lasting baies

Of hevenlie blis and everlasting praies;

Who first my Muse did lift out of the flore,
To sing his sweet delights in lowlie laies;

Bids me, most noble Lady, to adore

His goodly image living evermore

In the divine resemblaunce of your face; Which with your vertues ye embellish

more,
And native beauty deck with hevenlie
grace:

For his, and for your owne especial sake, Vouchsafe from him this token in good worth to take.

E. S.

TO THE MOST VERTUOUS AND BEAUTI-FULL LADY, THE LADY CAREW

NE may I, without blot of endlesse blame, You, fairest Lady, leave out of this place, But with remembraunce of your gracious

name, Wherewith that courtly garlond most ye
grace,

And deck the world, adorne these verses
base.

Not that these few lines can in them comprise

Those glorious ornaments of hevenly
grace,
Wherewith ye triumph over feeble eyes,
And in subdued harts do tyranyse;
For thereunto doth need a golden quill And silver leaves, them rightly to devise;
But to make humble present of good
will:
Which, whenas timely meanes it purchase
may,
In ampler wise it selfe will forth display.
E. S.

TO ALL THE GRATIOUS AND BEAUTIFULL
LADIES IN THE COURT

THE Chian peincter, when he was requirde To pourtraict Venus in her perfect hew, To make his worke more absolute, des-sird
Of all the fairest maides to have the vew.
Much more me needs, to draw the semblant trew
Of Beauties Queene, the worlds sole wenderment,
To sharpe my sence with sundry beauties
vew,
And steale from each some part of ornament.
If all the world to seeke I overwent, A fairer crew yet no where could I see Then that brave court doth to mine eie present,
That the worlds pride seemes gathered there to bee.
Of each a part I stole by cunning theft: Forgive it me, faire Dames, sith lesse ye have not left. E. S.

THE FIRST BOOKE
OF THE FAERIE QUEENE
CONTAYNING
THE LEGEND OF THE KNIGHT OF THE RED CROSSE OR OF HOLINESSE

I

Lo! I the man, whose Muse whylome did
maske,
As time her taught, in lowly shephards weeds.

Am now enforst, a farre unfitter taske, For trumpets sterne to chaunge mine oaten reeds,
And sing of knights and ladies gentle deeds;
Whose praises having slept in silence long,
Me, all too meane, the sacred Muse areeds To blazon broade emongst her learned throng:
Fierce warres and faithfull loves shall moralize my song.

II

Helpe then, O holy virgin, chiefe of nyne, Thy weaker novice to performe thy will;
Lay forth out of thine everlasting scryne The antique rolles, which there lye hidden
still,
Of Faerie knights, and fayrest Tanaquill, Whom that most noble Briton Prince so long Sought through the world, and suffered so much ill,
That I must rue his undeserved wrong:
O helpe thou my weake wit, and sharpen my dull tong.

III

And thou, most dreaded impe of highest
Jove,
Faire Venus sonne, that with thy cruell
dart
At that good knight so cunningly didst rove,
That glorious fire it kindled in his hart, Lay now thy deadly heben bowe apart,
And with thy mother mylde come to mine
ayde:
Come both, and with you bring triumphant Mart,
In loves and gentle jollities arraid, After his murderous spoyles and bloudie rage allayd.

IV

And with them eke, O Goddess heavenly
bright,
Mirrour of grace and majestie divine,
Great Ladie of the greatest Isle, whose light Like Phæbus lampe throughout the world doth shine,
Shed thy faire beames into my feeble eyne, And raise my thoughtes, too humble and too vile,
To thinke of that true glorious type of thine,
The argument of mine afflicted stile:
The which to heare vouchsafe, O dearest dread, a while.

CANTO I

The patrone of true Holinesse Foule Errour doth defeat:; Hypocrisie, him to entrappe, Doth to his home entreate.

I

A GENTLE knight was pricking on the
plaine,
Yeladd in mightie armes and silver shiēde, Wherein old dints of deepe woundes did remaiue,
The cruell markes of many' a bloody felde;
Yet armes till that time did he neuer wield:
His angry steede did chide his foming bitt,
As much disdainyng to the curbe to yield:
Full jolly knight he seemd, and faire did
sitt,
As one for knightly giusts and fierce encounters fitt.

II

But on his brest a bloodie crosse he bore,
The deare remembrance of his dying Lord, For whose sweete sake that glorious badge he wore,
And dead as living ever him ador'd:
Upon his shield the like was also scor'd, For soveraine hope, which in his helpe he
had:
Right faithfull true he was in deede and
word,
But of his cheere did seeme too solemne
sad;
Yet nothing did he dread, but ever was ydrad.

III

Upon a great adventure he was bond, That greatest Gloriana to him gave,
That greatest glorious queene of Faery Lond, To winne him worshippe, and her grace to have,
Which of all earthly thinges he most did crave;
And ever as he rode his hart did earne
To prove his puissance in battell brave Upon his foe, and his new force to learne;
Upon his foe, a dragon horrible and starne.

A lovely ladie rode him faire beside,
Upon a lowly asse more white then snow,

Yet she much whiter, but the same did hide Under a vele, that wimpled was full low,
And over all a blacke stole shee did throw:
As one that inly mournd, so was she sad,
And heaue sate upon her palfrey slow:
Seemed in heart some hidden care she had;
And by her in a line a milkewhite lambe she lad.

V

So pure and innocent, as that same lambe,
She was in life and every vertuous lore,
And by descent from royall lynage came Of ancient kinges and queenes, that had of
yore
Their scepters stretcht from east to westerne shore,
And all the world in their subjection held,
Till that infernall feend with foule uprore Forwasted all their land, and them expeld: Whom to avenge, she had this knight from far compeld.

VI

Behind her farre away a dwarfe did lag,
That lasie seemd, in being ever last,
Or wearied with bearing of her bag Of needments at his backe. Thus as they
past,
The day with cloudes was suddeine overcast,
And angry Jove an hideous storme of raine Did poure into his lemans lap so fast,
That everie wight to shrowd it did constrain,
And this faire couple eke to shroud themselves were fain.

Enforst to seeke some covert nigh at hand,
A shadie grove not farr away they spide,
That promist ayde the tempest to withstand:
Whose loftie trees, yelad with sommers
pride,
Did spred so broad, that heavens light did
hide,
Not perceable with power of any starr:
And all within were pathes and alleies wide,
With footing worne, and leading inward farr:
Faire harbour that them seemes, so in they entred ar.

VIII

And fourth they passe, with pleasure forward led,
Joying to heare the birdes sweete harmony,

Which, therein shrouded from the tempest
dred,
Seemd in their song to scorne the cruell sky.
Much can they praise the trees so straight and hy,
The sayling pine, the cedar proud and tall,
The vine-propp elme, the poplar never dry,
The builder oake, sole king of forrests all,
The aspine good for staves, the cypresse funerall,

IX

The laurell, meed of mightie conquerours And poets sage, the firre that weepeth still,
The willow worne of forlorne paramours,
The eugh obedient to the benders will,
The birch for shaftes, the sallow for the mill,
The mirrhe sweete bleeding in the bitter
wound,
The warlike beech, the ash for nothing ill,
The fruitfull olive, and the platane round, The carver holme, the maple seeldom inward sound.

X

Led with delight, they thus beguile the way, Untill the blustering storme is overblowne;
When, weening to returne whence they did
stray,
They cannot finde that path, which first was
showne,
But wander too and fro in waies unknowne, Furthest from end then, when they nearest
weene,
That makes them doubt, their wits be not their owne:
So many pathes, so many turnings seene, That which of them to take, in diverse doubt they been.

XI

At last resolving forward still to fare,
Till that some end they finde, or in or out, That path they take, that beaten seemd most
bare,
And like to lead the labyrinth about;
Which when by tract they hunted had throughout,
At length it brought them to a hollowe cave, Amid the thickest woods. The champion
stout Eftsoones dismounted from his courser
brave,
And to the dwarfe a while his needlesse spere he gave.

XII

'Be well aware,' quoth then that ladie milde,
'Least suddaine mischiefe ye too rash provoke:
The danger hid, the place unknowne and wilde, Breedes dreadfull doubts: oft fire is without smoke,
And perill without show: therefore your stroke,
Sir knight, with-hold, till further tryall
made.'

'Ah, ladie,' sayd he, 'shame were to revoke
The forward footing for an hidden shade: Vertue gives her selfe light, through darke-nesse for to wade.'

XIII

'Yea, but,' quoth she, 'the perill of this
place
I better wot then you; though nowe too late To wish you backe returne with foule dis-
grace,
Yet wisdomes warnes, whilest foot is in the gate,
To stay the steppe, ere forced to retrate.
This is the wandring wood, this Errours den, A monster vile, whom God and man does
hate:
Therefore I read beware.' 'Fly, fly!' quoth
then
The fearefull dwarfe: 'this is no place for living men.'

XIV

But full of fire and greedy hardiment, The youthfull knight could not for ought be staide,
But forth unto the darksom hole he went,
And looked in: his glistring armor made A litle glooming light, much like a shade,
By which he saw the ugly monster plaine, Halfe like a serpent horribly displaine, But th' other halfe did womans shape re-
taine,
Most lothsom, filthie, foule, and full of vile disdaine.

XV

And as she lay upon the durtie ground,
Her huge long taile her den all overspred, Yet was in knots and many boughtes up-
wound,
Pointed with mortall sting. Of her there bred

A thousand yong ones, which she dayly fed, Sucking upon her poisonous dugs, eachone Of sundrie shapes, yet all ill favored:
 Soone as that uncouth light upon them shone, Into her mouth they crept, and suddain all were gone.

XVI

Their dam upstart, out of her den effraide,
 And rushed forth, hurling her hideous taile About her cursed head, whose folds displaid
 Were streht now forth at length without entraile.

She lookt about, and seeing one in mayle, Armed to point, sought backe to turne
 againe;

For light she hated as the deadly bale, Ay wont in desert darknes to remaine, Where plain none might her see, nor she see any plaine.

XVII

Which when the valiant Elfe perceiv'd, he lept

As lyon fierce upon the flying pray,
 And with his trenchand blade her boldly kept

From turning backe, and forced her to stay:
 Therewith enrag'd she loudly gan to bray, And turning fierce, her speckled taile advaunst,

Threatning her angric sting, him to dis-
 may:

Who, nought aghast, his mightie hand en-haunst:

The stroke down from her head unto her shoulder glaunst.

XVIII

Much daunted with that dint, her sence was dazd,

Yet kindling rage her seife she gathered
 round,

And all attonce her beastly bodie raizd
 With doubled forces high above the ground: Tho, wrapping up her wrethed sterne
 arownd,

Lept fierce upon his shield, and her huge traine

All suddenly about his body wound, That hand or foot to stirr he strove in
 vaine:

God helpe the man so wrapt in Errours endlesse traine.

XIX

His lady, sad to see his sore constraint, Cride out, 'Now, now, sir knight, shew what ye bee:

Add faith unto your force, and be not faint: Strangle her, els she sure will strangle
 thee.'

That when he heard, in great perplexitie, His gall did grate for grieve and high dis-
 daine;

And knitting all his force, got one hand free, Wherewith he grypt her gorge with so great
 paine,

That soone to loose her wicked bands did her constraine.

XX

Therewith she spewd out of her filthie maw
 A flood of poyson horrible and blaek, Full of great lumps of flesh and gobbets raw,

Which stunck so vildly, that it forst him slaeke

His grasping hold, and from her turne him
 backe:

Her vomit full of bookes and papers was,
 With loathly frogs and toades, which eyes did laeke,

And creeping sought way in the weedy gras:
 Her filthie parbreake all the place defiled has.

XXI

As when old father Nilus gins to swell
 With timely pride above the Aegyptian vale, His fattie waves doe fertile slime outwell,
 And overflow each plaine and lowly dale:

But when his later spring gins to avale, Huge heapes of mudd he leaves, wherin there breed

Ten thousand Kindes of creatures, partly male

And partly femall, of his fruitful seed; Such ugly monstrous shapes elswer may no man reed.

XXII

The same so sore annoyed has the knight,
 That, welnigh choked with the deadly stinke,
 His forces faile, ne can no lenger fight.

Whose corage when the feend perceivd to shrinke,

She poured forth out of her hellish sinke Her fruitfull cursed spawne of serpents small.

Deformed monsters, fowle, and blacke as inke,
Which swarming all about his legs did crall,
And him encombred sore, but could not hurt at all.

XXIII

As gentle shepheard in sweete eventide,
When ruddy Phebus gins to welke in west, High on an hill, his flocke to rewen wide, Markes which doe byte their hasty supper
best;
A cloud of cumbrous gnattes doe him molest,
All striving to infixe their feeble stinges, That from their noyance he no where can
rest,
But with his clownish hands their tender
wings
He brusheth oft, and oft doth mar their murmurings.

XXIV

Thus ill bestedd, and fearefull more of
shame
Then of the certeine perill he stood in, Halfe furious unto his foe he came,
Resolvd in minde all suddenly to win,
Or soone to lose, before he once would lin;
And stroke at her with more then manly
force,
That from her body, full of filthie sin,
He raft her hatefull heade without remorse:
A streame of cole black blood forth gushed from her corse.

XXV

Her scattred brood, soone as their parent
deare
They saw so rudely falling to the ground, Groning full deadly, all with troublous feare, Gathred themselves about her body round, Weening their wonted entrance to have
found
At her wide mouth: but being there with-
stood,
They flocked all about her bleeding wound,
And sucked up their dying mothers blood, Making her death their life, and eke her hurt their good.

XXVI

That detestable sight him much amazde, To see th' unkindly impes, of heaven accurst,

Devoure their dam; on whom while so he gazd,
Having all satisfide their bloody thirst, Their bellies swolne he saw with fulnesse burst,
And bowels gushing forth: well worthy
end
Of such as drunke her life, the which them
nurst!
Now needeth him no lenger labour spend;
His foes have slaine themselves, with whom he should contend.

XXVII

His lady, seeing all that chaunst, from
farre,
Approcht in hast to greet his victorie, And saide, ' Faire knight, borne under hap-pie starre,
Who see your vanquisht foes before you lye,
Well worthie be you of that armory, Wherein ye have great glory wonne this
day,
And proov'd your strength on a strong enimie,
Your first adventure: many such I pray,
And henceforth ever wish that like succeed it may.'

XXVIII

Then mounted he upon his steede againe,
And with the lady backward sought to wend;
That path he kept which beaten was most
plaine,
Ne ever would to any by way bend,
But still did follow one unto the end,
The which at last out of the wood them
brought.
So forward on his way (with God to frend)
He passed forth, and new adventure sought: Long way he traveled, before he heard of ought.

XXIX

At length they chaunst to meet upon the
way
An aged sire, in long blacke weedes yclad,
His feete all bare, his beard all hoarie gray,
And by his belt his booke he hanging had;
Sober he seemde, and very sagely sad,
And to the ground his eyes were lowly bent, Simple in shew, and voide of malice bad,
And all the way he prayed, as he went,
And often knockt his brest, as one that did repent.

XXX

He faire the knight saluted, louting low, Who faire him quited, as that courteous
was;

And after asked him, if he did know Of straunge adventures, which abroad did
pas.

'Ah! my dear sonne,' quoth he, 'how should,
alas!

Silly old man, that lives in hidden cell, Bidding his beades all day for his trespas, Tydings of warre and worldly trouble tell?
With holy father sits not with such thinges to mell.

XXXI

'But if of daunger, which hereby doth dwell,
And homebredd evil ye desire to heare,
Of a straunge man I can you tidings tell,
That wasteth all this countrie farre and
neare.'

'Of such,' saide he, 'I chiefly doe inquire, And shall you well rewarde to shew the
place,

In which that wicked wight his dayes doth
weare:

For to all knighthood it is foule disgrace,
That such a cursed creature lives so long a space.'

XXXII

'Far hence,' quoth he, 'in wastfull wilder-
nesse,

His dwelling is, by which no living wight May ever passe, but thorough great distresse.'

'Now,' saide the ladie, 'draweth toward
night,

And well I wote, that of your later fight Ye all forweared be: for what so strong,
But, wanting rest, will also want of might?
The Sunne, that measures heaven all day
long,

At night doth baite his steedes the ocean waves emong.

XXXIII

'Then with the Sunne take, sir, your timely
rest,
And with new day new worke at once begin:
Untroubled night, they say, gives counsell
best.'

'Right well, sir knight, ye have advised bin,'

Quoth then that aged man; 'the way to win

Is wisely to advise: now day is spent; Therefore with me ye may take up your in For this same night.' The knight was well content:

So with that godly father to his home they went.

XXXIV

A litle lowly hermitage it was,
Downe in a dale, hard by a forests side,
Far from resort of people, that did pas
In travell to and froe: a litle wyde
There was an holy chappell edifyde, Wherein the hermite dewly wont to say His holy thinges each morne and even-tyde:
Thereby a christall streame did gently play, Which from a sacred fountaine welled forth alway.

XXXV

Arrived there, the litle house they fill, Ne looke for entertainment, where none
was:

Rest is their feast, and all thinges at their
will;

The noblest mind the best contentment has.
With faire discourse the evening so they pas:
For that olde man of pleasing wordes had
store,

And well could file his tongue as smooth as glas:

He told of saintes and popes, and evermore
He strowd an Ave-Mary after and before.

XXXVI

The dropping night thus creepeth on them
fast,

And the sad humor loading their eye liddes,
As messenger of Morpheus, on them cast Sweet slombring deaw, the which to sleep them biddes:

Unto their lodgings then his guesstes he riddes:

Where when all drownd in deadly sleepe he findes,

He to his studie goes, and there amiddes His magick bookes and artes of sundrie kindes,

He seekes out mighty charmes, to trouble sleepy minds.

XXXVII

Then choosing out few words most horrible, (Let none them read) thereof did verses
frame:

With which and other spelles like terrible,
He bad awake blacke Plutoes griesly dame,
And cursd heven, and spake reprochful
shame

Of highest God, the Lord of life and light:
A bold bad man, that dar'd to call by name Great Gorgon, prince of darknes and dead
night,

At which Cocytus quakes, and Styx is put to flight.

XXXVIII

And forth he cald out of deepe darknes
dredd

Legions of sprights, the which, like litle flyes

Fluttring about his ever damned hedd, Awaite whereto their service he applyes,
To aide his friendes, or fray his enimies:
Of those he chose out two, the falsest twoo,
And fittest for to forge true-seeming lyes;
The one of them he gave a message too,
The other by him selfe staide, other worke to doo.

XXXIX

He, making speedy way through spersed
ayre,

And through the world of waters wide and
deepe,

To Morpheus house doth hastily repaire.
Amid the bowels of the earth full steepe, And low, where dawning day doth never peepe,

His dwelling is; there Tethys his wet bed

Doth ever wash, and Cynthia still doth
steepe

In silver dew his ever-drouping hed, Whiles sad Night over him her mantle black doth spread.

XL

Whose double gates he findeth locked fast,
The one faire fram'd of burnisht yvory,
The other all with silver overcast;
And wakeful dogges before them farre doe
lye,

Watching to banish Care their enemy,
Who oft is wont to trouble gentle Sleepe.
By them the sprite doth passe in quietly,
And unto Morpheus comes, whom drowned
deepe

In drowsie fit he findes: of nothing he takes keepe.

XLI

And more, to lulle him in his slumber soft,
A trickling streame from high rock tumbling downe,

And ever drizzling raine upon the loft, Mixt with a murmuring winde, much like the sowne

Of swarming bees, did cast him in a swowne:
No other noyse, nor peoples troublous cryes,
As still are wont t' annoy the walled towne, Might there be heard: but carelesse Quiet
lyes,

Wrapt in eternall silence farre from enimyes.

XLII

The messenger approching to him spake, But his waste wordes retourned to him in
vaine:

So sound he slept, that nought mought him
awake.

Then rudely he him thrust, and pusht with
paine,

Whereat he gan to stretch: but he againe Shooke him so hard, that forced him to speake.

As one then in a dreame, whose dryer braine Is tost with troubled sights and fancies
weake,

He mumbled soft, but would not all his silence breake.

XLIII

The sprite then gan more boldly him to wake,

And threatned unto him the dreaded name
Of Hecate: whereat he gan to quake,
And, lifting up his lompish head, with blame Halfe angrie asked him, for what he came.

'Hether,' quoth he, 'me Archimago sent,
He that the stubborne sprites can wisely
tame;

He bids thee to him send for his intent A fit false dreame, that can delude the sleepers sent.'

XLIV

The god obeyde, and calling forth straight
way

A diverse dreame out of his prison darke, Delivered it to him, and downe did lay His heavie head, devoide of careful carke; Whose sences all were straight benumbd and starke.

He, backe returning by the yvorie dore,

Remounted up as light as chearefull larke,
And on his litle wings the dreame he bore
In hast unto his lord, where he him left afore.

XLV

Who all this while, with charmes and hidden artes,
Had made a lady of that other spright,
And fram'd of liquid ayre her tender partes,
So lively and so like in all mens sight,
That weaker sence it could have ravisht
quight:
The maker selfe, for all his wondrous witt,
Was nigh beguiled with so goodly sight:
Her all in white he clad, and over it Cast a black stole, most like to seeme for Una fit.

XLVI

Now when that ydle dreame was to him
brought,
Unto that Elfin knight he bad him fly,
Where he slept soundly, void of evil thought,
And with false shewes abuse his fantasy,
In sort as he him schooled privily:
And that new creature, borne without her dew,
Full of the makers guyle, with usage sly
He taught to imitate that lady trew, Whose semblance she did carrie under feigned hew.

XLVII

Thus well instructed, to their worke they haste,
And comming where the knight in slomber lay,
The one upon his hardie head him plaste,
And made him dreame of loves and lust-full play,
That nigh his manly hart did melt away,
Bathed in wanton blis and wicked joy.
Then seemed him his lady by him lay,
And to him playud, how that false winged boy
Her chaste hart had subdewd to learne Dame Pleasures toy.

XLVIII

And she her selfe, of beautie soveraigne
queene,
Fayre Venus, seemde unto his bed to bring Her, whom he, waking, evermore did weene To bee the chastest flowre that aye did
spring

On earthly braunch, the daughter of a king,
Now a loose leman to vile service bound:
And eke the Graces seemed ail to sing Hymen iö Hymen, dauncing all around, Whylst freshest Flora her with yvie girlond crownd.

XLIX

In this great passion of unwonted lust,
Or wonted feare of doing ought amis,
He started up, as seeming to mistrust Some secret ill, or hidden foe of his:
Lo ! there before his face his ladie is,
Under blacke stole hyding her bayted hooke,
And as halfe blushing offred him to kis, With gentle blandishment and lovely
looke,
Most like that virgin true, which for her knight him took.

L

All cleane dismayd to see so uncouth sight,
And halfe enraged at her shamelesse guise, He thought have slaine her in his fierce de-
spight;
But hastie heat tempring with sufferance
wise,
He stayde his hand, and gan himselfe advise To prove his sence, and tempt her faigned truth.
Wringing her hands in wemens pitteous
wise,
Tho can she weepe, to stirre up gentle ruth, Both for her noble blood, and for her tender youth.

LI

And sayd, ' Ah sir, my liege lord ~~and my~~
love,
Shall I accuse the hidden cruell fate,
And mightie causes wrought in heaven
above,
Or the blind god, that doth me thus amate,
For hoped love to winne me certaine hate ?
Yet thus perforce he bids me do, or die.
Die is my dew: yet rew my wretched state
You, whom my hard avenging destinie Hath made judge of my life or death in differently.

LII

' Your owne deare sake forst me at first to
leave My fathers kingdom' — There she stopt with teares;

Her swollen hart her speech seemd to be-
reave;
And then againe begonne: 'My weaker
yeares, Captiv'd to fortune and frayle worldly
feares,
Fly to your fayth for succour and sure ayde:
Let me not die in languor and long teares.'
'Why, dame,' quoth he, 'what hath ye thus dismayd ?
What frayes ye, that were wont to comfort me affrayd ?'

LIII

'Love of your selfe,' she saide, 'and deare constraint,
Lets me not sleepe, but waste the wearie
night
In secret anguish and unpittied plaint, Whiles you in carelesse sleepe are drowned
quight.'
Her doubtfull words made that redoubted
knight Suspect her truth: yet since no' untruth he knew,
Her fawning love with foule disdainfull
spight
He would not shend, but said, 'Deare dame,
I rew,
That for my sake unknowne such griefe unto you grew.

LIV

'Assure your selfe, it fell not all to ground;
For all so deare as life is to my hart,
I deeme your love, and hold me to you bound;
Ne let vaine feares procure your needlesse
smart,
Where cause is none, but to your rest de-
part.'
Not all content, yet seemd she to appease Her mournfull plaintes, beguiled of her
art,
And fed with words, that could not chose but please;
So slyding softly forth, she turnd as to her ease.

LV

Long after lay he musing at her mood, Much griev'd to thinke that gentle dame so
light,
For whose defence he was to shed his blood.
At last dull wearines of former fight Having yrockt a sleepe his irkesome spright,

That troublous dreame gan freshly tosse his braine
With bowres, and beds, and ladies deare
delight:
But when he saw his labour all was vaine,
With that misformed spright he backe returnd againe.

CANTO II

The guilefull great enchaunter parts
The Rederosse Knight from Truth : Into whose stead faire Falshood steps,
And workes him woefull ruth.

I

By this the northerne wagoner had set His sevenfold teme behind the stedfast
starre,
That was in ocean waves yet never wet, But firme is fixt, and sendeth light from
farre
To al that in the wide deepe wandring arre:
And chearefull Chaunticlere with his note
shrill
Had warned once, that Phoebus fiery carre In hast was climbing up the easterne hill, Full envious that night so long his roome did fill:

II

When those accursed messengers of hell, That feigning dreame, and that faire-forged
spright,
Came to their wicked maister, and gan tel Their bootelesse paines, and ill succeeding night:
Who, all in rage to see his skilfull might Deluded so, gan threaten hellish paine And sad Proserpines wrath, them to af-fright.
But when he saw his threatning was but
vaine,
He cast about, and searcht his baleful bokes againe.

III

Eftsoones he tooke that miscreated faire, And that false other spright, on whom he spred
A seeming body of the subtile aire,
Like a young squire, in loves and lustyhed His wanton daies that ever loosely led,
Without regard of armes and dreaded fight:
Those twoo he tooke, and in a secrete bed,

Covered with darkenes and misdeeming
 night,
 Them both together laid, to joy in vaine
 delight.

IV

Forthwith he runnes with feigned faithfull hast
 Unto his guest, who, after troublous sights And dreames, gan now to take more sound repast;
 Whom suddenly he wakes with fearful frights,
 As one aghast with feends or damned
 sprights,
 And to him cals: 'Rise, rise, unhappy
 swaine,
 That here wex old in sleepe, whiles wicked
 wights
 Have knit themselves in Venus shameful chaine;
 Come see, where your false lady doth her honor staine.'

V

All in amaze he suddenly up start With sword in hand, and with the old man
 went;
 Who soone him brought into a secret part,
 Where that false couple were full closely
 ment
 In wanton lust and leud embracement:
 Which when he saw, he burnt with gealous
 fire,
 The eie of reason was with rage yblent,
 And would have slaine them in his furious
 ire,
 But hardly was restrained of that aged sire.

VI

Retourning to his bed in torment great,
 And bitter anguish of his guilty sight, He could not rest, but did his stout heart
 eat,
 And wad his inward gall with deepe de-
 spight, Yrkesome of life, and too long lingring
 night.
 At last faire Hesperus in highest skie Had spent his lampe, and brought forth dawning light;
 Then up he rose, and clad him hastily;
 The dwarfe him brought his steed: so both away do fly.

VII

Now when the rosy fingred Morning faire, Weary of aged Tithones saffron bed, Had spred her purple robe through deawy aire,
 And the high hills Titan discovered,
 The royall virgin shooke of drounsyhed,
 And rising forth out of her baser bowre, Lookt for her knight, who far away was fled,
 And for her dwarfe, that wont to wait each
 howre:
 Then gan she wail and weepe, to see that woeful stowre.

VIII

And after him she rode with so much speede,
 As her slowe beast could make; but all in
 vaine:
 For him so far had borne his light-foot steede, Pricked with wrath and fiery fierce dis-
 daine,
 That him to follow was but fruitlesse paine;
 Yet she her weary limbes would never rest, But every hil and dale, each wood and
 plaine,
 Did search, sore grieved in her gentle brest, He so ungently left her, whome she loved
 best.

IX

But subtill Archimago, when his guests
 He saw divided into double parts,
 And Una wandring in woods and forrests, Th' end of his drift, he praisd his divelish
 arts,
 That had such might over true meaning
 harts:
 Yet rests not so, but other meanes doth
 make,
 How he may worke unto her further smart:
 For her he hated as the hissing snake,
 And in her many troubles did most pleasure
 take.

X

He then devisde himselfe how to disguise;
 For by his mighty science he could take As many formes and shapes in seeming
 wise,
 As ever Proteus to himselfe could make:
 Sometime a fowle, sometime a fish in lake,
 Now like a foxe, now like a dragon fell,

That of himselfe he ofte for feare would
quake,
And oft would flie away. O who can tell The hidden powre of herbes, and might of magick spel?

XI

But now seemde best, the person to put on
Of that good knight, his late beguiled guest:
In mighty armes he was yelad anon,
And silver shield; upon his coward brest
A bloody crosse, and on his craven crest
A bouch of heares discoloured diversly:
Full jolly knight he seemde, and wel ad-
drest,
And when he sate upon his courser free, Saint George himselfe ye would have deemed him to be.

XII

But he, the knight whose semblaunt he did
beare,
The true Saint George, was wandred far
away,
Still flying from his thoughts and gealous
feare;
Will was his guide, and grieve led him
astray.
At last him chaunst to meete upon the way
A faithlesse Sarazin, all armed to point, In whose great shield was writ with letters
gay
Sans foy: full large of limbe and every joint He was, and cared not for God or man a point.

XIII

Hee had a faire companion of his way,
A goodly lady clad in scarlot red, Purfled with gold and pearle of rich assay;
And like a Persian mitre on her hed Shee wore, with crowns and owches garnished,
The which her lavish lovers to her gave:
Her wanton palfrey all was overspred With tinsell trappings, woven like a wave, Whose bridle rung with golden bells and bosses brave.

XIV

With faire disport and courting dalliaunce
She intertaine her lover all the way:
But when she saw the knight his speare advance,
Shee soone left of her mirth and wanton play,

And bad her knight addresse him to the
fray:
His foe was nigh at hand. He, pricke with pride
And hope to winne his ladies hearte that
day,
Forth spurred fast: adowne his coursers
side
The red bloud trickling staid the way, as he did ride.

XV

The Knight of the Redcrosse, when him he
spide
Spurring so hote with rage dispiteous, Gan fairely couch his speare, and towards
ride:
Soone meete they both, both fell and furious,
That, daunted with theyr forces hideous,
Their steeds doe stagger, and amazed stand,
And eke themselves, too rudely rigorous, Astonied with the stroke of their owne
hand,
Doe backe rebutte, and ech to other yealdet
land.

XVI

As when two rams, stird with ambitious
pride,
Fight for the rule of the rich fleeced flocke,
Their horned fronts so fierce on either side Doe meete, that, with the terror of the shocke Astonied, both stand sencelesse as a blocke, Forgetfull of the hanging victory:
So stood these twaine, unmoved as a rocke, Both staring fierce, and holding idely
The broken reliques of their former cruelty.

XVII

The Sarazin, sore daunted with the buffe, Snatcheth his sword, and fiercely to him flies;
Who well it wards, and quyeth cuff with cuff:
Each others equall puissaunce envies,
And through their iron sides with cruell spies
Does seeke to perce: repining courage yields No foote to foe. The flashing fier flies, As from a forge, out of their burning shields,
And streams of purple bloud new dies the verdant fields.

XVIII

'Curse on that Crosse,' quoth then the Sarazin,

'That keepes thy body from the bitter fitt !
Dead long ygoe, I wote, thou haddest bin, Had not that charme from thee forwarned itt.

But yet I warne thee now assured sitt, And hide thy head.' Therewith upon his crest

With rigor so outrageous he smitt,
That a large share it hewd out of the rest,
And glauncing downe his shield, from blame him fairely blest.

XIX

Who thereat wondrous wroth, the sleeping spark

Of native vertue gan eftsoones revive,
And at his haughty helmet making mark,
So hugely stroke, that it the steele did rive,
And cleft his head. He, tumbling downe alive,

With bloody mouth his mother earth did kis,

Greeting his grave: his grudging ghost did strive

With the fraile flesh; at last it flitted is, Whether the soules doe fly of men that live amis.

XX

The lady, when she saw her champion fall, Like the old ruines of a broken towre, Staid not to waile his woefull funerall,
But from him fled away with all her powre;
Who after her as hastily gan scowre, Bidding the dwarfe with him to bring away
The Sarazins shield, signe of the conqueroure.

Her soone he overtooke, and bad to stay, For present cause was none of dread her to dismay.

XXI

Shee, turning backe with ruefull countenance,

Cride, 'Mercy, mercy, sir, vouchsafe to showe

On silly dame, subject to hard mischaunce, And to your mighty wil!' Her humblesse low,

In so ritche weedes and seeming glorious
show,

Did much emmove his stout heroïcke heart,

And said, 'Deare dame, your suddain over-
throw

Much rueth me; but now put feare apart,
And tel, both who ye be, and who that tooke your part.'

XXII

Melting in teares, then gan shee thus la-
ment:

'The wretched woman, whom unhappy howre Hath now made thrall to your commande-
ment,

Before that angry heavens list to lowre, And Fortune false betraide me to your
powre,

Was, (O what now availeth that I was ?) Borne the sole daughter of an emperour, He that the wide west under his rule has,
And high hath set his throne where Tiberis doth pas.

XXIII

'He, in the first flowre of my freshest age, Betrothed me unto the onely haire
Of a most mighty king, most rich and sage;
Was never prince so faithfull and so faire,
Was never prince so meeke and debonaire;
But ere my hoped day of spousall shone,
My dearest lord fell from high honors staire,
Into the hands of hys accursed fone, And cruelly was slaine, that shall I ever mone.

XXIV

'His blessed body, spoild of lively breath, Was afterward, I know not how, convaid And fro me hid: of whose most innocent
death

When tidings came to mee, unhappy maid,
O how great sorrow my sad soule assaid!

Then forth I went his woefull corse to find,
And many yeares throughout the world I straid,

A virgin widow, whose deepe wounded mind With love, long time did languish as the stricken hind.

XXV

'At last it chaunced this proud Sarazin To meete me wandring; who perforce me
led

With him away, but yet could never win
The fort, that ladies hold in soveraigne
dread.

There lies he now with foule dishonor dead,

Who, whiles he livde, was called proud Sansfoy:
 The eldest of three brethren, all three bred
 Of one bad sire, whose youngest is Sansjoy, And twixt them both was born the bloody bold Sansloy.

XXVI

'In this sad plight, friendlesse, unfortunate, Now miserable I Fidessa dwell, Craving of you, in pittie of my state,
 To doe none ill, if please ye not doe well.'
 He in great passion al this while did dwell, More busying his quicke eies, her face to
 view,
 Then his dull eares, to heare what shee did
 tell;
 And said, 'Faie lady, hart of flint would rew The undeserved woes and sorrowes which ye shew.

XXVII

'Henceforth in safe assurance may ye rest, Having both found a new friend you to aid,
 And lost an old foe, that did you molest:
 Better new friend then an old foe is said.'
 With change of chear the seeming simple maid
 Let fal her eien, as shamefast, to the earth,
 And yeelding soft, in that she nought gain-
 said,
 So forth they rode, he feining seemely merth,
 And shee coy lookes: so dainty, they say, maketh derth.

XXVIII

Long time they thus together traueiled, Til, weary of their way, they came at last Where grew two goodly trees, that faire did spread Their armes abroad, with gray mosse over-
 cast,
 And their greene leaves, trembling with every blast,
 Made a calme shadowe far in compasse
 round:
 The fearefull shepheard, often there aghast, Under them never sat, ne wont there sound His mery oaten pipe, but shund th' unlucky ground.

XXIX

But this good knight, soone as he them can spie,
 For the coole shade him thither hastily got:

For golden Phoebus, now ymounted hie,
 From fiery wheeles of his faire chariot Hurl'd his beame so scorching cruell hot,
 That living creature mote it not abide;
 And his new lady it endured not.
 There they alight, in hope themselves to hide
 From the fierce heat, and rest their weary limbs a tide.

XXX

Faie seemely pleasaunce each to other makes,
 With goodly purposes, there as they sit:
 And in his fals'd fancy he her takes To be the fairest wight that lived yit;
 Which to expresse, he bends his gentle wit, And thinking of those braunches greene to
 frame
 A girlond for her dainty forehead fit, He pluckt a bough; out of whose rifte there
 came Smal drops of gory blond, that trickled down the same.

XXXI

Therewith a piteous yelling voice was heard, Crying, 'O spare with guilty hands to teare
 My tender sides in this rough rynd embard;
 But fly, ah! fly far hence away, for feare Least to you hap that happened to me
 heare,
 And to this wretched lady, my deare love;
 O too deare love, love bought with death too deare!'
 Astond he stood, and up his heare did hove,
 And with that suddein horror could no member move.

XXXII

At last, whenas the dreadfull passion
 Was overpast, and manhood well awake, Yet musing at the straunge occasion, And doubting much his sence, he thus be-
 spake:
 'What voice of damned ghost from Limbo lake,
 Or guilefull spright wandring in empty aire, Both which fraile men doe oftentimes mis-
 take,
 Sends to my doubtful eares these speaches
 rare,
 And ruefull plaints, me bidding guiltlesse blood to spare?'

XXXIII

Then groning deep: 'Nor damned ghost,' quoth he,
 'Nor guileful sprite to thee these words
 doth speake,
 But once a man, Fradubio, now a tree; Wretched man, wretched tree! whose nature weak
 A cruell witch, her cursed will to wreake, Hath thus transformd, and plast in open
 plaines,
 Where Boreas doth blow full bitter bleake, And scorching sunne does dry my secret
 vaines:
 For though a tree I seme, yet cold and heat me paines.'

XXXIV

'Say on, Fradubio, then, or man or tree,' Quoth then the knight; 'by whose mischievous arts
 Art thou misshaped thus, as now I see?
 He oft finds med'cine who his grieffe imparts;
 But double griefs afflict concealing harts, As raging flames who striveth to suppress.'
 'The author then,' said he, 'of all my smarts,
 Is one Duessa, a false sorceresse, That many errant knights hath brought to wretchednesse.

XXXV

'In prime of youthly yeares, when corage
 hott
 The fire of love and joy of chevalree First kindled in my brest, it was my lott To love this gentle lady, whome ye see Now not a lady, but a seeming tree;
 With whome as once I rode accompanye, Me chaunced of a knight encountred bee,
 That had a like faire lady by his syde;
 Lyke a faire lady, but did fowle Duessa hyde.

XXXVI

'Whose forged beanty he did take in hand
 All other dames to have exceeded farre;
 I in defence of mine did likewise stand, Mine, that did then shine as the morning
 starre:
 So both to batteill fierce arraunged arre;
 In which his harder fortune was to fall Under my speare: such is the dye of warre:
 His lady, left as a prise martiall, Did yield her comely person, to be at my call.

XXXVII

'So doubly lov'd of ladies unlike faire, Th' one seeming such, the other such in-deede,
 One day in doubt I cast for to compare,
 Whether in beauties glorie did exceede;
 A rosy girlond was the victors meede.
 Both seemde to win, and both seemde won
 to bee,
 So hard the discord was to be agreede:
 Frælissa was as faire as faire mote bee,
 And ever false Duessa seemde as faire as shee.

XXXVIII

'The wicked witch, now seeing all this while The doubtfull ballaunce equally to sway,
 What not by right, she cast to win by guile;
 And by her hellish science raisd streight
 way
 A foggy mist, that overcast the day,
 And a dull blast, that, breathing on her face, Dimmed her former beauties shining ray,
 And with foule ugly forme did her dis-
 grace:
 Then was she fayre alone, when none was faire in place.

XXXIX

'Then cride she out, "Fye, fye! deformed
 wight,
 Whose borrowed beautie now appeareth
 plaine
 To have before bewitched all mens sight; O leave her soone, or let her soone be
 slaine."
 Her loathly visage viewing with disdain, Eftsoones I thought her such as she me
 told,
 And would have kild her; but with faigned
 paine
 The false witch did my wrathfull hand with-hold:
 So left her, where she now is turnd to treen mould.

XL

'Thensforth I tooke Duessa for my dame,
 And in the witch unweeting joyd long time, Ne ever wist but that she was the same:
 Till on a day (that day is everie prime, When witches wont do penance for their crime)
 I chaunst to see her in her proper hew, Bathing her selfe in origane and thyme:

A filthy foule old woman I did vew, That ever to have toucht her I did deadly rew.

XLI

'Her neather partes misshapen, monstrous, Were hidd in water, that I could not see,
But they did seeme more foule and hideous,

Then womans shape man would beleeve to
bee.

Thensforth from her most beastly companie

I gan refraine, in minde to slipp away, Soone as appeard safe opportunitie:
For danger great, if not assur'd decay, I saw before mine eyes, if I were knowne to stray.

XLII

'The divelish hag, by chaunges of my cheare, Perceiv'd my thought; and drown'd in sleepe
night,

With wicked herbes and oyntments did besmeare

My body all, through charmes and magicke
might,

That all my senses were bereaved quight:
Then brought she me into this desert waste,
And by my wretched lovers side me pight, Where now enclod in wooden wals full
faste,

Banisht from living wights, our wearie daies we waste.'

XLIII

'But how long time,' said then the Elfin
knight,

'Are you in this misformed hous to dwell?'
'We may not change,' quoth he, 'this evill
plight

Till we be bathed in a living well;
That is the terme prescribed by the spell.'
'O how,' sayd he, 'mote I that well out find,
That may restore you to your wonted well?'
'Time and suffised fates to former kynd Shall us restore; none else from hence may us unbynd.'

XLIV

The false Duessa, now Fidessa hight, Heard how in vaine Fradubio did lament, And knew well all was true. But the good
knight

Full of sad feare and ghastly dreriment,

When all this speech the living tree had spent,

The bleeding bough did thrust into the
ground,

That from the blood he might be innocent,
And with fresh clay did close the wooder
wound:

Then turning to his lady, dead with feare her fownd.

XLV

Her seeming dead he fownd with feigned
feare,

As all unweeting of that well she knew,
And paynd himselfe with busie care to reare Her out of carelesse swowne. Her eylyds blew,

And dimmed sight, with pale and deadly hew,
At last she up gan lift: with trembling
cheare

Her up he tooke, too simple and too trew,
And oft her kist. At length, all passed feare, He set her on her steede, and forward forth did beare.

CANTO III

Forsaken Truth long seekes her love,
And makes the lyon mylde, Marres Blind Devotions mart, and fals
In hand of leachour vyld.

I

NOUGHT is there under heav'ns wide hol-lownesse,

That moves more deare compassion of mind, Then beautie brought t'unworthie wretch-
ednesse

Through envies snares, or fortunes freakes unkind:

I, whether lately through her brightnes
blynd,

Or through alleageance and fast fealty,
Which I do owe unto all womankynd, Feele my hart perst with so great agony, When such I see, that all for pittie I could dy.

II

And now it is empassioned so deepe,
For fairest Unaes sake, of whom I sing, That my frayle eies these lines with teares do steepe,

To thinke how she through guyleful hande-ling,

Though true as touch, though daughter of a king,

Though faire as ever living wight was fayre, Though nor in word nor deede ill meriting,
Is from her knight divorced in despayre, And her dew loves deryv'd to that vile witches shayre.

III

Yet she, most faithfull ladie, all this while Forsaken, wofull, solitarie mayd, Far from all peoples preace, as in exile,
In wilderness and wastfull deserts strayd,
To seeke her knight; who, subtilly betrayd Through that late vision which th' en-chaunter wrought,

Had her abandond. She, of nought affrayd, Through woods and wastnes wide him daily
sought;

Yet wished tydings none of him unto her
brought.

IV

One day, nigh wearie of the yrkesome way,
From her unhastie beast she did alight,
And on the grasse her dainty limbs did lay In secrete shadow, far from all mens sight:
From her fayre head her fillet she undight,
And layd her stole aside. Her angels face
As the great eye of heaven shyned bright,
And made a sunshine in the shady place;
Did never mortall eye behold such heavenly grace.

V

It fortun'd, out of the thickest wood
A ramping lyon rushed suddainly, Hunting full greedy after salvage blood:
Soone as the royall virgin he did spy,
With gaping mouth at her ran greedily,
To have attonce devourd her tender corse;
But to the pray when as he drew more ny,
His bloody rage aswaged with remorse,
And with the sight amazd, forgat his furious forse.

VI

In stead thereof he kist her wearie feet,
And lickt her lilly hands with fawning tong,
As he her wronged innocence did weet.
O how can beautie maister the most strong,
And simple truth subdue avenging wrong!
Whose yielded pryde and proud submission, Still dreading death, when she had marked
long,

Her hart gan melt in great compassion,
And drizzling teares did shed for pure affection.

VII

'The lyon, lord of everie beast in field,' Quoth she, 'his princely puissance doth abate,
And mightie proud to humble weake does
yield,
Forgetfull of the hungry rage, which late Him prickt, in pittie of my sad estate:
But he, my lyon, and my noble lord,
How does he find in cruell hart to hate Her that him lov'd, and ever most adord As the god of my life? why hath he me abhord?'

VIII

Redounding teares did choke th' end of her plaint,
Which softly ecchoed from the neighbour
wood;

And sad to see her sorrowfull constraint,
The kingly beast upon her gazing stood;
With pittie calm'd, downe fell his angry
mood.

At last, in close hart shutting up her payne, Arose the virgin borne of heavenly brood,
And to her snowy palfrey got agayne, To seeke her strayed champion if she might attayne.

IX

The lyon would not leave her desolate,
But with her went along, as a strong gard
Of her chast person, and a faythfull mate
Of her sad troubles and misfortunes hard:
Still, when she slept, he kept both watch
and ward,
And when she wakt, he wayted diligent,
With humble service to her will prepar'd:
From her fayre eyes he tooke commande-
ment,
And ever by her looks conceived her intent.

X

Long she thus travelld through deserts
wyde,
By which she thought her wandring knight shold pas,
Yet never shew of living wight espyde;
Till that at length she found the troden gras In which the tract of peoples footing was,

Under the steepe foot of a mountaine hore:
The same she followes, till at last she has A damzell spyde slow footing her before, That on her shoulders sad a pot of water bore.

XI

To whom approching, she to her gan call,
To weet if dwelling place were nigh at hand;
But the rude wench her answerd nought at all;
She could not heare, nor speake, nor understand;
Till, seeing by her side the lyon stand, With suddaine feare her pitcher downe she
threw,
And fled away: for never in that land Face of fayre lady she before did vew, And that dredd lyons looke her cast in deadly hew.

XII

Full fast she fled, ne ever lookt behynd,
As if her life upon the wager lay,
And home she came, whereas her mother
blynd
Sate in eternall night: nought could she say, But, suddaine catching hold, did her dis-
may
With quaking hands, and other signes of
feare:
Who, full of ghastly fright and cold affray, Gan shut the dore. By this arrived there Dame Una, weary dame, and entrance did requere.

XIII

Which when none yielded, her unruly page
With his rude clawes the wicket open rent,
And let her in; where, of his cruell rage Nigh dead with feare, and faint astonish-
ment,
Shee found them both in darkesome corner
pent;
Where that old woman day and night did
pray
Upon her beads, devoutly penitent:
Nine hundred Pater nosters every day,
And thrise nine hundred Aves, she was wont to say.

XIV

And to augment her painefull penaunce
more,
Thrise every weeke in ashes shee did sitt,

And next her wrinkled skin rough sacke-cloth wore,
And thrise three times did fast from any bitt:
But now for feare her beads she did for-gett.

Whose needlesse dread for to remove away, Faire Una framed words and count'naunce fitt:

Which hardly doen, at length she gan them
pray
That in their cottage small that night she rest her may.

XV

The day is spent, and commeth drowsie
night,

When every creature shrowded is in sleepe:
Sad Una downe her laies in weary plight,
And at her feete the lyon watch doth keepe:
In stead of rest, she does lament, and weepe
For the late losse of her deare loved knight, And sighes, and grones, and evermore does
steepe

Her tender brest in bitter teares all night;
All night she thinks too long, and often lookes for light.

XVI

Now when Aldeboran was mounted hye Above the shinie Cassiopeias chaire,
And all in deadly sleepe did drowned lye,
One knocked at the dore, and in would fare;
He knocked fast, and often curst, and sware,
That ready entraunce was not at his call:
For on his backe a heavy load he bare Of nightly stelths and pillage severall, Which he had got abroad by purchas criminall.

XVII

He was, to weete, a stout and sturdy thiefe, Wont to robbe churches of their ornaments,
And poore mens boxes of their due reliefe,
Which given was to them for good intents;
The holy saints of their rich vestiments
He did disrobe, when all men carelesse slept,
And spoild the priests of their habiliments; Whiles none the holy things in safety kept, Then he by conning sleights in at the window crept.

XVIII

And all that he by right or wrong could find

Unto this house he brought, and did bestow

Upon the daughter of this woman blind, Abessa, daughter of Coreeca slow, With whom he whoredome usd, that few did know,
 And fed her fatt with feast of offerings,
 And plenty, which in all the land did grow;
 Ne spared he to give her gold and rings:
 And now he to her brought part of his stolen things.

XIX

Thus, long the dore with rage and threats he bett,
 Yet of those fearfull women none durst rize, (The lyon frayed them,) him in to lett:
 He would no lenger stay him to advize,
 But open breakes the dore in furious wize,
 And entring is; when that disdainfull beast, Encountring fierce, him suddein doth sur-
 prize,
 And seizing cruell clawes on trembling
 brest,
 Under his lordly foot him proudly hath sup-
 prest.

XX

Him booteth not resist, nor succour call,
 His bleeding hart is in the vengers hand;
 Who streight him rent in thousand peeces
 small,
 And quite dismembred hath: the thirsty
 land Dronke up his life; his corse left on the strand.
 His fearefull freends weare out the wofull
 night,
 Ne dare to weepe, nor seeme to understand The heavie hap which on them is alight; Affraid, least to themselves the like mis-happen might.

XXI

Now when broad day the world discovered
 has,
 Up Una rose, up rose the lyon eke,
 And on their former journey forward pas, In waies unknowne, her wandring knight to seeke,
 With paines far passing that long wandring Greeke,
 That for his love refused deitye;
 Such were the labours of this lady meeke, Still seeking him, that from her still did flye; Then furthest from her hope, when most she weened nye.

XXII

Soone as she parted thencee, the fearfull
 twayne,
 That blind old woman and her daughter dear, Came forth, and finding Kirkrapine there slayne,
 For anguish great they gan to rend their
 heare,
 And beat their brests, and naked flesh to
 teare.
 And when they both had wept and wayld their fill,
 Then forth they ran like two amazed deare, Halfe mad through malice and revenging
 will,
 To follow her, that was the causer of their ill.

XXIII

Whome overtaking, they gan loudly bray,
 With hollow howling and lamenting cry, Shamefully at her rayling all the way,
 And her accusing of dishonesty,
 That was the flowre of faith and chastity;
 And still, amidst her rayling, she did pray That plagues, and mischiefes, and long misery Might fall on her, and follow all the way,
 And that in endlesse error she might ever stray.

XXIV

But when she saw her prayers nought pre-vaile,
 Shee backe retourned with some labour lost;
 And in the way, as shee did weepe and waile,
 A knight her mett in mighty armes embost, Yet knight was not for all his bragging
 bost,
 But subtill Archimag, that Una sought
 By traynes into new troubles to have taste:
 Of that old woman tidings he besought,
 If that of such a lady shee could tellen ought.

XXV

Therewith she gan her passion to renew,
 And cry, and curse, and raile, and rend her
 heare,
 Saying, that harlott she too lately knew,
 That causd her shed so many a bitter teare,
 And so forth told the story of her feare.
 Much seemed he to mone her haplesse
 chaunce,
 And after for that lady did inquire;

Which being taught, he forward gan ad-
vaunce
His fair enchanted steed, and eke his charmed launce.

XXVI

Ere long he came where Una traveild slow, And that wilde champion wayting her be-
syde:
Whome seeing such, for dread hee durst not show Him selfe too nigh at hand, but turned
wyde
Unto an hil; from whence when she him
spyde,
By his like seeming shield her knight by
name Shee weend it was, and towards him gan
ride:
Approching nigh, she wist it was the same,
And with faire fearefull humblesse towards him shee came;

XXVII

And weeping said, 'Ah! my long lacked
lord, Where have ye bene thus long out of my
sight?
Much feared I to have bene quite abhord, Or ought have done, that ye displeasen
might,
That should as death unto my deare heart
light:
For since mine eie your joyous sight did mis,
My chearefull day is turnd to chearelesse
night,
And eke my night of death the shadow
is;
But welcome now, my light, and shining lampe of blis.'

XXVIII

He thereto meeting said, 'My dearest dame, Far be it from your thought, and fro my wil,
To thinke that knighthood I so much should
shame,
As you to leave, that have me loved stil,
And chose in Faery court, of meere good-
wil,
Where noblest knights were to be found on earth:
The earth shall sooner leave her kindly skil

To bring forth fruit, and make eternall derth, Then I leave you, my lief, yborn of hevenly berth.

XXIX

'And sooth to say, why I lefte you so long, Was for to seeke adventure in straunge
place,
Where Archimago said a felon strong
To many knights did daily worke disgrace; But knight he now shall never more de-
face:
Good cause of mine excuse, that mote ye
please
Well to accept, and ever more embrace My faithfull service, that by land and seas Have vowd you to defend. Now then your plaint appease.'

XXX

His lovely words her seemd due recom-
pence
Of all her passed paines: one loving howre
For many yeares of sorrow can dispence: A dram of sweete is worth a pound of sowre:
Shee has forgott how many a woeful stowre
For him she late endurd; she speakes no
more
Of past: true is, that true love hath no
powre
To looken backe; his eies be fixt before.
Before her stands her knight, for whom she toyl'd so sore.

XXXI

Much like as when the beaten marinere,
That long hath wandred in the ocean wide, Ofte soust in swelling Tethys saltish teare,
And long time having tand his tawney hide With blustering breath of heaven, that none can bide,
And scorching flames of fierce Orions
hound,
Soone as the port from far he has espide,
His chearfull whistle merily doth sound, And Nereus crownes with cups; his mates him pledg around.

XXXII

Such joy made Una, when her knight she
found;
And eke th' enchaunter joyous seemde no
lesse

Then the glad marchant, that does vew from ground

His ship far come from watrie wilderness;
He hurles out vowes, and Neptune oft doth blesse.

So forth they past, and all the way they
spent

Discoursing of her dreadful late distresse,
In which he askt her, what the lyon ment:
Who told her all that fell in journey, as she went.

XXXIII

They had not ridden far, when they might
see

One pricking towards them with hastie heat, Full strongly armd, and on a courser free, That through his fiersnesse fomed all with sweat,

And the sharpe yron did for anger eat,
When his hot ryder spurd his ehauffed side;
His looke was sterne, and seemed still to
threat

Cruell revenge, which he in hart did hyde;
And on his shield Sans loy in bloody lines was dyde.

XXXIV

When nigh he drew unto this gentle payre,
And saw the red-crosse, which the knight
did beare,

He burnt in fire, and gan eftsoones prepare Himselfe to batteill with his couched speare.
Loth was that other, and did faint through
feare,

To taste th' untryed dint of deadly steele;
But yet his lady did so well him cheare,
That hope of new good hap he gan to feele;
So bent his speare, and spurd his horse with yron heele.

XXXV

But that proud Paynim forward came so ferce

And full of wrath, that with his sharthead
speare

Through vainly crossed shield he quite did perce;

And had his staggering steed not shronke for feare,

Through shield and body eke he should him
beare:

Yet so great was the puissance of his push,
That from his sadle quite he did him
beare:

He, tomling rudely downe, to ground did rush,

And from his gored wound a well of bloud did gush.

XXXVI

Dismounting lightly from his loftie steed,
He to him lept, in minde to reave his life,
And proudly said: 'Lo there the worthise
meed

Of him that slew Sansfoy with bloody knife!
Henceforth his ghost, freed from repining
strife,

In peace may passen over Lethe lake, When mourning altars, purgd with enimies
life,

The black infernall Furies doen aslake: Life from Sansfoy thou tookst, Sausloy shall from thee take.'

XXXVII

Therewith in haste his helmet gan unlace, Till Una eride, 'O hold that heavie hand, Deare sir, what ever that thou be in place!
Enough is, that thy foe doth vanquisht stand Now at thy mercy: mercy not withstand:
For he is one the truest knight alive, Though conquered now he lye on lowly
land,

And whilest him fortune favourd, fayre did thrive

In bloody field: therefore of life him not deprive.'

XXXVIII

Her piteous wordes might notabate his rage, But, rudely rending up his helmet, would Have slayne him streight: but when he sees his age,

And hoarie head of Archimago old,
His hasty hand he doth amased hold,
And, halfe ashamed, wondred at the sight:
For that old man well knew he, though un-
told,

In charmes and magick to have wondrous
might;

Ne ever wont in field, ne in round lists, to fight.

XXXIX

And said, 'Why, Archimago, lucklesse syre, What doe I see? what hard mishap is this,
That hath thee hether brought to taste mine
yre?

Or thine the fault, or mine the error is,

In stead of foe to wound my friend amis?
 He answered nought, but in a trounce still
 lay,
 And on those guilefull dazed eyes of his The cloude of death did sit. Which doen
 away,
 He left him lying so, ne would no lenger
 stay;

XL

But to the virgin comes; who all this while Amased stands, her selfe so mockt to see
 By him, who has the guerdon of his guile,
 For so misfeigning her true knight to bee:
 Yet is she now in more perplexitie,
 Left in the hand of that same Paynim bold,
 From whom her booteth not at all to flie;
 Who, by her cleanly garment catching hold,
 Her from her palfrey pluckt, her visage to behold.

XLI

But her fiers servant, full of kingly aw
 And high disdaine, whenas his souveraine
 dame
 So rudely handled by her foe he saw,
 With gaping jawes full greedy at him came,
 And, ramping on his shield, did weene the
 same
 Have reft away with his sharp rending
 clawes:
 But he was stout, and lust did now inflame His corage more, that from his griping
 pawes
 He hath his shield redeemd, and forth his swerd he redees.

XLII

O then too weake and feeble was the forse Of salvage beast, his puissance to with-
 stand:
 For he was strong, and of so mightie corse,
 As ever wielded speare in warlike hand,
 And feates of armes did wisely understand.
 Eftsoones he perced through his chaufed chest
 With thrilling point of deadly yron brand, And launcht his lordly hart: with death
 opprest
 He ror'd aloud, whiles life forsooke his stubborne brest.

Who now is left to keepe the forlorne maid From raging spoile of lawlesse victors will?

Her faithfull gard remov'd, her hope dis-
 maid,
 Her selfe a yielded pray to save or spill.
 He now, lord of the field, his pride to fill,
 With foule reproches and disdaineful spight Her vildly entertaines, and, will or nill, Beares her away upon his courser light:
 Her prayers nought prevaile; his rage is more of might.

XLIV

And all the way, with great lamenting paine, And piteous plaintes, she filleth his dull eares,
 That stony hart could riven have in twaine,
 And all the way she wetts with flowing
 teares:
 But he, enrag'd with rancor, nothing heares.
 Her servile beast yet would not leave her so,
 But followes her far of, ne ought he feares,
 To be partaker of her wandring woe.
 More mild, in beastly kind, then that her beastly foe.

CANTO IV

To sinfull Hous of Pryde Duessa Guydes the faithfull knight, Where, brothers death to wreak, Sansjoy Doth chaleng him to fight

I

YOUNG knight what ever, that dost arnes
 professe,
 And through long labours hunttest after
 fame,
 Beware of fraud, beware of ficklenesse, In choice, and change, of thy deare loved
 dame,
 Least thou of her believe too lightly blame,
 And rash misweening doe thy hart remove:
 For unto knight there is no greater shame,
 Then lightnesse and inconstancie in love:
 That doth this Redecrosse Knights ensample plainly prove.

II

Who, after that he had faire Una lorne, Through light misdeeming of her loialtie,
 And false Duessa in her sted had borne, Called Fidess', and so supposd to be, Long with her travelld, till at last they see A goodly building, bravely garnished;
 The house of mightie prince it seemd to be;

And towards it a broad high way that led,
All bare through peoples feet, which thether traveiled.

III

Great troupes of people traveild thether-
ward

Both day and night, of each degree and
place;

But few returned, having seaped hard,
With balefull beggery, or foule disgrace;
Which ever after in most wretched case,
Like loathsome lazars, by the hedges lay.
Thether Duesa badd him bend his pace:
For she is wearie of the toilsom way,
And also nigh consumed is the lingring day.

A stately pallace built of squared bricke, Which cunningly was without mortar laid, Whose wals were high, but nothing strong nor thick,

And golden foile all over them displaid, That purest skye with brightnesse they dis-
maid:

High lifted up were many loftie towres,
And goodly galleries far over laid, Full of faire windowes and delightful
bowres;

And on the top a diall told the timely howres.

V

It was a goodly heape for to behould,
And spake the praises of the workmans witt;
But full great pittie, that so faire a mould Did on so weake foundation ever sitt:
For on a sandie hill, that still did flitt
And fall away, it mounted was full hie,
That every breath of heaven shaked itt;
And all the hinder partes, that few could spie, Were ruinous and old, but painted cunningly.

VI

Arrived there, they passed in forth right;
For still to all the gates stood open wide:
Yet charge of them was to a porter hight, Cald Malvent, who entrance none denide:
Thence to the hall, which was on every side With rich array and costly arras dight:
Infinite sortes of people did abide There waiting long, to win the wished sight Of her, that was the lady of that pallace bright.

VII

By them they passe, all gazing on them
round,

And to the presence mount; whose glorious
vew

Their frayle amazed senses did confound:
In living princes court none ever knew Such endlesse riches, and so sumptuous
shew;

Ne Persia selfe, the nourse of pompous
pride,

Like ever saw. And there a noble crew Of lords and ladies stood on every side, Which, with their presence fayre the place much beautifide.

VIII

High above all a cloth of state was spred,
And a rich throne, as bright as sunny day,
On which there sate, most brave embellished

With royall robes and gorgeouse array,
A mayden queene, that shone as Titans ray, In glistering gold and perelesse pretious
stone;

Yet her bright blazing beautie did assay To dim the brightnesse of her glorious throne,

As envying her selfe, that too exceeding shone:

IX

Exceeding shone, like Phœbus fayrest childe,
That did presume his fathers fyrie wayne,
And flaming mouthes of steedes unwonted
wilde,

Through highest heaven with weaker hand to rayne:

Proud of such glory and advancement vayue, While flashing beanes do daze his feeble eyen,

He leaves the welkin way most beaten
playne,

And, rapt with whirling wheelles, inflames the skyen

With fire not made to burne, but fayrely for to shyne.

So proud she shyned in her princely state, Looking to heaven, for earth she did dis-
dayne,

And sitting high, for lowly she did hate: Lo! underneath her scornfull feete, was layne

A dreadfull dragon with an hideous trayne,
 And in her hand she held a mirrhour
 bright,
 Wherein her face she often vewed fayne,
 And in her selfe-lov'd semblance tooke de-
 light;
 For she was wondrous faire, as any living
 wight.

XI

Of griesly Pluto she the daughter was,
 And sad Proserpina, the queene of hell; Yet did she thinke her pearelesse worth to
 pas
 That parentage, with pride so did she swell, And thundring Jove, that high in heaven doth dwell,
 And wield the world, she claymed for her
 syre,
 Or if that any else did Jove excell:
 For to the highest she did still aspyre, Or, if ought higher were then that, did it desyre.

XII

And proud Lucifera men did her call, That made her selfe a queene, and crown'd
 to be;
 Yet rightfull kingdome she had none at all,
 Ne heritage of native soveraintie,
 But did usurpe with wrong and tyrannie Upon the scepter, which she now did hold:
 Ne ruld her realme with lawes, but pol-licie,
 And strong advizement of six wisards old,
 That with their counsels bad her kingdome did uphold.

XIII

Soone as the Elfin knight in presence came,
 And false Duessa, seeming lady fayre,
 A gentle husher, Vanitie by name, Made rowme, and passage for them did pre-
 paire:
 So goodly brought them to the lowest stayre Of her high throne, where they, on humble knee
 Making obeysaunce, did the cause declare,
 Why they were come, her roiall state to see,
 To prove the wide report of her great majestee.

XIV

With loftie eyes, halfe loth to looke so lowe,
 She thancked them in her disdainfull wise,

Ne other grace vouchsafed them to shoue
 Of princesse worthy; scarse them bad arise.
 Her lordes and ladies all this while devise Themselves to setten forth to straungers
 sight:
 Some frounce their curled heare in courtly
 guise,
 Some prancke their ruffes, and others trimly
 dight
 Their gay attyre: each others greater pride does spight.

XV

Goodly they all that knight doe entertayne, Right glad with him to have increast their
 crew;
 But to Duess' each one himselfe did payne All kindnesse and faire courtesie to shew; For in that court whylome her well they
 knew:
 Yet the stout Faery mongst the middest crowd Thought all their glorie vaine in knightly
 vew,
 And that great princesse too exceeding prowde,
 That to strange knight no better countenance allowd.

XVI

Suddein upriseth from her stately place
 The roiall dame, and for her coche doth call:
 All hurtlen forth, and she, with princely
 pace,
 As faire Aurora, in her purple pall,
 Out of the east the dawning day doth call,
 So forth she comes: her brightnes brode doth blaze:
 The heapes of people, thronging in the hall,
 Doe ride each other, upon her to gaze:
 Her glorious glitterand light doth all mens eies amaze.

XVII

So forth she comes, and to her coche does clyme,
 Adorned all with gold and girlonds gay,
 That seemd as fresh as Flora in her prime,
 And strove to match, in roiall rich array, Great Junoes golden chayre, the which, they
 say,
 The gods stand gazing on, when she does
 ride
 To Joves high hous through heavens braspaved way,

Drawne of fayre pecocks, that excell in
pride,
And full of Argus eyes their tayles dispredden wide.

XVIII

But this was drawne of six unequal beasts,
On which her six sage counsellours did ryde, Taught to obey their bestiall beheasts, With like conditions to their kindes ap-
plyde:
Of which the first, that all the rest did
guyde,
Was sluggish Idlenesse, the nourse of sin;
Upon a slouthfull asse he chose to ryde, Arayd in habit blacke, and amis thin,
Like to an holy monek, the service to begin.

XIX

And in his hand his portesse still he bare,
That much was worne, but therein little redd;
For of devotion he had little care, Still drown'd in sleepe, and most of his daies dedd:
Searse could he once uphold his heavie hedd,
To looken whether it were night or day:
May seeme the wayne was very evill ledd,
When such an one had guiding of the way, That knew not whether right he went, or else astray.

XX

From worldly cares himselfe he did esioyne,
And greatly shunned manly exercise;
From everie worke he chalenged essayne,
For contemplation sake: yet otherwise
His life he led in lawlesse riotise;
By which he grew to grievous malady;
For in his lustlesse limbs, through evill
guise,
A shaking fever raignd continually.
Such one was Idlenesse, first of this company.

XXI

And by his side rode loathsome Gluttony, Deformed creature, on a filthie swyne:
His belly was upblowne with luxury,
And eke with fatnesse swollen were his eyne;
And like a crane his necke was long and fyne,
With which he swallowd up excessive feast,
For want whereof poore people oft did pyne:

And all the way, most like a brutish beast, He spued up his gorge, that all did Lou deatest.

XXII

In greene vine leaves he was rigd fitly clad;
For other clothes he could not weare for
heat;
And on his head an yvie girland had,
From under which fast trickled downe the sweat:
Still as he rode, he somewhat still did
eat,
And in his hand did beare a bouzing can,
Of which he supt so oft, that on his seat
His dronken corse he searse upholden can:
In shape and life more like a monster then a man.

XXIII

Unfit he was for any worldly thing,
And eke unhabile once to stirre or go;
Not meet to be of counsell to a king, Whose mind in meat and drinke was drowned so,
That from his frend he seeldome knew his fo:
Full of diseases was his carcas blew,
And a dry dropsie through his flesh did
flow,
Which by misdiet daily greater grew.
Such one was Gluttony, the second of that crew.

XXIV

And next to him rode lustfull Lechery Upon a bearded gote, whose rugged heare,
And whally eies (the signe of gelosy,) Was like the person selfe, whom he did
beare:
Who rough, and blacke, and filthy, did ap-
peare,
Unseemely man to please faire ladies eye;
Yet he of ladies oft was loved deare, When fairer faces were bid stauden by:
O who does know the bent of womens fantasy?

XXV

In a greene gowne he clothed was full
faire,
Which underneath did hide his filthinesse;
And in his hand a burning hart he bare,
Full of vaine follies and new fanglenesse:

For he was false, and fraught with fickleness,
 And learned had to love with secret lookes,
 And well could daunce, and sing with ruelnesse,
 And fortunes tell, and read in loving bookes, And thousand other waies, to bait his fleshly hookes.

XXVI

Inconstant man, that loved all he saw,
 And lusted after all that he did love;
 Ne would his looser life be tide to law, But joyd weake wemens hearts to tempt, and prove
 If from their loyall loves he might them
 move;
 Which lewdnes fild him with reprochfull pain
 Of that foule evill, which all men reprove, That rots the marrow, and consumes the braine.
 Such one was Lechery, the third of all this traîne.

XXVII

And greedy Avarice by him did ride, Uppon a camell loaden all with goid:
 Two iron coffers hong on either side,
 With precious metall full as they might hold,
 And in his lap an heap of coine he told;
 For of his wicked pelfe his god he made,
 And unto hell him selfe for money sold:
 Accursed usury was all his trade;
 And right and wrong ylike in equall ballance waide.

XXVIII

His life was nigh unto deaths dore yplaste;
 And thred-bare cote, and cobled shoes, hee ware,
 Ne scarce good morsell all his life did taste, But both from backe and belly still did spare,
 To fill his bags, and richesse to compare;
 Yet childe ne kinsman living had he none
 To leave them to; but thorough daily care
 To get, and nightly feare to lose his owne, He led a wretched life, unto him selfe un-
 knowne.

XXIX

Most wretched wight, whom nothing might suffice, Whose greedy lust did lacke in greatest
 store,

Whose need had end, but no end covetise, Whose welth was want, whose plenty made him pore,
 Who had enough, yett wished ever more,
 A vile disease; and eke in foote and hand
 A grievous gout tormented him full sore, That well he could not touch, nor goe, nor
 stand.

Such one was Avarice, the forth of this faire band.

XXX

And next to him malicious Envy rode Uppon a ravenous wolfe, and still did chaw Betweene his cankred teeth a venomous tode,
 That all the poison ran about his chaw;
 But inwardly he chawed his owne maw
 At neibors welth, that made him ever sad;
 For death it was, when any good he saw;
 And wept, that cause of weeping none he
 had;
 But when he heard of harme, he waxed wondrous glad.

XXXI

All in a kirtle of discoloured say He clothed was, ypaynted full of eies;
 And in his bosome secretly there lay An hatefull snake, the which his taile uptyes
 In many folds, and mortall sting impyles.
 Still as he rode, he gnasht his teeth, to see Those heapes of gold with griple Covetyse;
 And grudged at the great felicitie Of proud Lucifera, and his owne companee.

XXXII

He hated all good workes and vertuous deeds,
 And him no lesse, that any like did use;
 And who with gracious bread the hungry feeds,
 His almes for want of faith he doth accuse;
 So every good to bad he doth abuse:
 And eke the verse of famous poets witt
 He does backebite, and spightfull poison spues
 From leprous mouth on all that ever writt.
 Such one vile Envy was, that fift in row did sitt.

XXXIII

And him beside rides fierce revenging
 Wrath,
 Uppon a lion, loth for to be led;

And in his hand a burning brond he hath,
The which he brandisheth about his hed:
His eies did hurle forth spareles fiery red,
And stared sterne on all that him beheld:
As ashes pale of hew, and seeming ded;
And on his dagger still his hand he held, Trembling through hasty rage, when cholere in him sweld.

XXXIV

His ruffin raiment all was staind with blood,
Which he had spilt, and all to rags yrent,
Through unadvised rashnes woxen wood;
For of his hands he had no government, Ne car'd for blood in his avengement:
But when the furious fitt was overpast,
His cruell facts he often would repent;
Yet, wilfull man, he never would forecast, How many mischieves should ensue his heedlesse hast.

XXXV

Full many mischiefes follow cruell Wrath; Abhorred bloodshed, and tumultuous strife, Unmanly murder, and unthrifty seath, Bitter despight, with rancours rusty knife,
And fretting grieffe, the enemy of life:
All these, and many evils moe haunt Ire;
The swelling splene, and frenzy raging rife,
The shaking palsey, and Saint Fraunces fire.
Such one was Wrath, the last of this un-godly tire.

XXXVI

And after all, upon the wagon beame, Rode Sathan, with a smarting whip in hand,
With which he forward lasht the laesy
teme,
So oft as Slowth still in the mire did stand.
Huge routs of people did about them band, Showing for joy; and still before their
way
A foggy mist had covered all the land;
And underneath their feet, all scattered lay Dead skulls and bones of men, whose life had gone astray.

XXXVII

So forth they marchen in this goodly sort,
To take the solace of the open aire,
And in fresh flowring fields themselves to sport.
Emongst the rest rode that false lady faire,
The foule Dnessa, next unto the chaire Of proud Lucifer, as one of the traine.

But that good knight would not so nigh re-
paire,
Him selfe estraunging from their joyaunce
vaine,
Whose fellowship seemd far unfitt for warlike swaine.

XXXVIII

So having solaced themselves a space, With pleasaunce of the breathing fields yfed,
They backe retourned to the princely place;
Whereas an errant knight, in armes yeled, And heathnish shield, wherein with letters
red
Was writt Sans joy, they new arrived find:
Enflam'd with fury and fiers hardyhed, He seemd in hart to harbour thoughts unkind,
And nourish bloody vengeance in his bitter mind.

XXXIX

Who, when the shamed shield of slaine
Sansfoy
He spide with that same Fary champions page, Bewraying him that did of late destroy His eldest brother, burning all with rage, He to him lept, and that same envious gage
Of victors glory from him snacht away:
But th' Elfin knight, which ought that warlike wage,
Disdaind to loose the meed he wonne in fray, And him rencountring fierce, reskewd the noble pray.

XL

Therewith they gan to hurtlen greedily, Redoubted battaile ready to darrayne, And clash their shields, and shake their swords on hy,
That with their sturre they troubled all the
traine;
Till that great queene, upon eternall paine Of high displeasure, that ensewn might,
Commaunded them their fury to refraine,
And if that either to that shield had right, In equall lists they should the morrow next it fight.

XLI

'Ah! dearest dame,' quoth then the Paynim
bold,
'Pardon the error of enraged wight,

Whome great grieffe made forgett the raines to hold

Of reasons rule, to see this recreaunt knight, No knight, but treachour full of false des-
pight

And shameful treason, who through guile hath slayn

The prowest knight that ever field did fight, Even stout Sansfoy, (O who can then re-frayn?)

Whose shield he beares renverst, the more to heap disdayn.

XLII

'And to augment the glorie of his guile,
His dearest love, the faire Fidessa, loe!
Is there possessed of the traytour vile,
Who reapes the harvest sowed by his foe, Sowed in bloodie field, and bought with
woe:

That brothers hand shall dearely well re-
quight,

So be, O Queene, you equall favour showe.'
Him litle answard th' angry Elfin knight; He never meant with words, but swords, to plead his right:

XLIII

But threw his gauntlet as a sacred pledg,
His cause in combat the next day to try:
So been they parted both, with harts on edge
To be aveng'd each on his enemy.
That night they pas in joy and jollity, Feasting and courting both in bowre and hall;

For steward was excessive Gluttony,
That of his plenty poured forth to all;
Which doen, the chamberlain Slowth did to rest them call.

XLIV

Now whenas darkesome Night had all dis-
playd

Her coleblacke curtein over brightest skye, The warlike youthes, on dayntie couches
layd,

Did chace away sweet sleepe from sluggish eye,

To muse on meanes of hoped victory.

But whenas Morpheus had with leaden
mace

Arrested all that courtly company, Uprose Duessa from her resting place,
And to the Paynims lodging comes with silent pace.

XLV

Whom broad awake she findes, in troublous fitt,

Forecasting, how his foe he might annoy,
And him amoves with speaches seeming fitt:
'Ah deare Sansjoy, next dearest to Sansfoy, Cause of my new grieffe, cause of my new
joy,

Joyous, to see his ymage in mine eye,
And greevd, to thinke how foe did him destroy,

That was the flowre of grace and chevalrye;

Lo! his Fidessa, to thy secret faith I flye.'

XLVI

With gentle wordes he can her fayrely greet,

And bad say on the secrete of her hart.
Then, sighing soft, 'I learne that litle sweet Oft tempred is,' quoth she, 'with muchell
smart:

For since my brest was launcht with lovely
dart

Of deare Sansfoy, I never joyed howre,
But in eternall woes my weaker hart
Have wasted, loving him with all my powre, And for his sake have felt full many an heavie stowre.

XLVII

'At last, when perils all I weened past,
And hop'd to reape the crop of all my care,
Into new woes unweeting I was cast
By this false faytor, who unworthie ware His worthe shield, whom he with guilefull snare

Entrapped slew, and brought to shamefull grave.

Me, silly maid, away with him he bare,
And ever since hath kept in darksom cave,
For that I would not yeeld that to Sansfoy I gave.

XLVIII

'But since faire sunne hath sperst that lowring clowd,

And to my loathed life now shewes some
light,

Under your beames I will me safely shrowd From dreaded storme of his disdainfull
spight:

To you th' inheritance belongs by right Of brothers prayse, to you eke longes his
love.

Let not his love, let not his restlesse spright, Be unreveng'd, that calles to you above From wandring Stygian shores, where it doth endlesse move.'

XLIX

Thereto said he, 'Faire dame, be nought dismaid
For sorrowes past; their griefe is with them
gone:
Ne yet of present perill be affraid:
For needlesse feare did never vantage none,
And helplesse hap it booteth not to mone.
Dead is Sansfoy, his vitall paines are past, Though greeved ghost for vengeance deep do grone:
He lives, that shall him pay his dewties
last,
And guiltie Elfin blood shall sacrifice in hast.'

'O! but I feare the fickle freakes,' quoth
shee,
'Of Fortune false, and oddes of armes in field.'
'Why, dame,' quoth he, 'what oddes can ever bee,
Where both doe fight alike, to win or
yield?'
'Yea, but,' quoth she, 'he beares a charmed
shield,
And eke enchanted armes, that none can perce,
Ne none can wound the man, that does them wield.'
'Charmd or enchanted,' auswerd he then
ferce,
'I no whitt reck, ne you the like need to reherce.

LI

'But, faire Fidessa, sithens Fortunes guile, Or enimies powre, hath now captived you, Returne from whence ye came, and rest a
while,
Till morrow next, that I the Elfe subdew, And with Sansfoyes dead dowry you en-
dew.'
'Ay me! that is a double death,' she said,
'With proud foes sight my sorrow to renew:
Where ever yet I be, my secrete aide Shall follow you.' So, passing forth, she him obaid.

CANTO V

The faithfull knight in equal field Subdewes his faithlesse foe, Whom false Duessa saves, and for His cure to hell does goe.

I

THE noble hart, that harbours vertuou
thought,
And is with childe of glorious great intent Can never rest, untill it forth have brought Th' eternal brood of glorie excellent:
Such restlesse passion did all night tor-
ment
The flaming corage of that Faery knight, Devizng how that doughtie tournament With greatest honour he achieveen might:
Still did he wake, and still did watch for dawning light.

II

At last, the golden orientall gate
Of greatest heaven gan to open fayre, And Phoebus, fresh as brydegrome to his mate,
Came dauncing forth, shaking his deawie
hayre,
And hurld his glistring beams through gloomy ayre.
Which when the wakeful Elfe perceivd, streight way
He started up, and did him selfe prepayre
In sunbright armes, and battailous array:
For with that Pagan proud he combatt will that day.

III

And forth he comes into the commune hall, Where earely waite him many a gazing eye,
To weet what end to straunger knights ma;
fall.
There many minstrales maken melody,
To drive away the dull melancholy,
And many bardes, that to the trembling chord
Can tune their timely voices cunningly,
And many chroniclers, that can record Old loves, and warres for ladies doen by many a lord.

IV

Soone after comes the cruell Sarazin, In wovon maile all armed warily,
And sternly lookes at him, who not a pin Does care for looke of living creatures eye.

They bring them wines of Greece and Araby And daintie spices fetcht from furthest Ynd,

To kindle heat of corage privily:
And in the wine a solemne oth they bynd T' observe the sacred lawes of armes, that are assynd.

At last forth comes that far renowned
queene,

With royall pomp and princely majestie:
She is ybrought unto a paled greene,
And placed under stately canapee,
The warlike feates of both those knights
to see.

On th' other side, in all mens open vew, Duessa placed is, and on a tree Sansfoy his shield is hangd with bloody
hew:

Both those, the lawrell girlonds to the victor dew.

VI

A shrilling trompett sownded from on
hye,

And unto battaill bad them selves addressse:
Their shining shieldes about their wrestes they tye,

And burning blades about their heades doe
blesse,

The instruments of wrath and heavinesse:
With greedy force each other doth assayle, And strike so fiercely, that they doe im-
presse

Deepe dinted furrowes in the battred mayle:
The yron walles to ward their blowes are weak and fraile.

VII

The Sarazin was stout, and wondrous strong,
And heaped blowes like yron hammers
great:

For after blood and vengeance he did long.
The knight was fiers, and full of youthly
heat,

And doubled strokes, like dreaded thunders threat:

For all for praise and honour he did fight.
Both stricken stryke, and beaten both doe beat,

That from their shields forth flyeth fire
light,

And helmets, hewen deepe, shew marks of eithers might.

VIII

So th' one for wrong, the other strives for
right:

As when a gryphon, seized of his pray,
A dragon fiers encountreth in his flight,
Through widest ayre making his ydle way,
That would his rightfull ravine rend away:
With hideous horror both together smight, And souce so sore, that they the heavens
affray:

The wise southsayer, seeing so sad sight, Th' amazed vulgar telles of warres and mortall fight.

IX

So th' one for wrong, the other strives for
right,

And each to deadly shame would drive his foe:

The cruell steele so greedily doth bight In tender flesh, that streames of blood down
flow,

With which the armes, that earst so bright did show,

Into a pure vermillion now are dyde.
Great ruth in all the gazers harts did grow, Seeing the gored woundes to gape so wyde,
That victory they dare not wish to either side.

X

At last the Paynim chaunst to cast his eye, His suddein eye, flaming with wrathfull
fyre,

Upon his brothers shield, which long
thereby:

Therewith redoubled was his raging yre,
And said: 'Ah, wretched some of wofull
syre!

Doest thou sit wayling by blacke Stygian
lake,

Whylest here thy shield is hangd for victors hyre?

And, sluggish german, doest thy forces slake To after-send his foe, that him may overtake?

XI

'Goe, caytive Elfe, him quickly overtake,
And soone redeeme from his long wandring
woe:

Goe, guiltie ghost, to him my message make,
That I his shield have quit from dying foe.'
Therewith upon his crest he stroke him so,
That twice he reeled, readie twice to fall:

End of the doubtfull battaile deemed tho
The lookers on, and lowd to him gan call The false Duessa, 'Thine the shield, and I, and all!'

XII

Soone as the Faerie heard his ladie speake,
Out of his swowning dreame he gan awake,
And quickning faith, that earst was woxen
weake,

The creeping deadly cold away did shake: Tho, mov'd with wrath, and shame, and ladies sake,

Of all attonce he cast avengd to be,
And with so' exceeding furie at him strake,
That forced him to stoupe upon his knee:
Had he not stouped so, he should have cloven bee.

XIII

And to him said: 'Goe now, proud miscreant,

Thy selve thy message do to german deare;
Alone he, wandring, thee too long doth want:
Goe say, his foe thy shield with his doth
beare.'

Therewith his heavie hand he high gan
reare,

Him to have slaine; when lo! a darkesome clowd

Upon him fell: he no where doth appeare, But vanisht is. The Elfe him calls alowd, But answer none receives: the darknes him does shrowd.

XIV

In haste Duessa from her place arose, And to him running sayd: 'O prowest
knight,

That ever ladie to her love did chose,
Let now abate the terrour of your might,
And quench the flame of furious despight And bloodie vengeance; lo! th' infernall
powres,

Covering your foe with cloud of deadly
night,
Have borne him hence to Plutoes balefull
bowres.

The conquest yours, I yours, the shield and glory yours!'

XV

Not all so satisfide, with greedy eye
He sought all round about, his thristy blade
To bathe in blood of faithlesse enemy;

Who all that while lay hid in secret shade:
He standes amazed, how he thence should fade.

At last the trumpets triumph sound on hie,
And running heralds humble homage made,
Greeting him goodly with new victorie, And to him brought the shield, the cause of enmitie.

XVI

Wherewith he goeth to that soveraine
queene,

And falling her before on lowly knee,
To her makes present of his service seene:
Which she accepts, with thankes and goodly
gree,

Greatly advauncing his gay chevalree:
So marcheth home, and by her takes the
knight,

Whom all the people followe with great
glee,

Shouting, and clapping all their hands on
hight,

That all the ayre it fils, and flies to heaven
bright.

XVII

Home is he brought, and layd in sumptuous bed:

Where many skilfull leaches him abide,
To salve his hurts, that yet still freshly bled.

In wine and oyle they wash his woundes
wide,

And softly can embalme on everie side.

And all the while, most heavenly melody
About the bed sweet musicke did divide, Him to beguile of grieffe and agony:

And all the while Duessa wept full bitterly.

XVIII

As when a wearie traveller, that straves
By muddy shore of broad seven-mouthed Nile,

Unweeting of the perillous wandring wayes, Doth meete a cruell craftie crocodile, Which, in false grieffe hyding his harmefull
guile,

Doth weepe full sore, and sheddeth tender
teares:

The foolish man, that pitties all this while His mournefull plight, is swallowd up un-wares,

Forgetfull of his owne, that mindes an others cares.

XIX

So wept Duessa untill eventyde, That shyning lampes in Joves high house were light:

Then forth she rose, ne lenger would abide,
But comes unto the place, where th' hethen knight,

In slombring swownd, nigh voyd of vitall
spright,

Lay cover'd with inchaunted cloud all day:
Whom when she found, as she him left in
plight,

To wayle his wofull case she would not stay, But to the easterne coast of heaven makes speedy way:

XX

Where griesly Night, with visage deadly
sad,

That Phœbus chearefull face durst never
vew,

And in a foule blacke pitchy mantle clad,
She findes forth comming from her dark-some mew,

Where she all day did hide her hated hew.
Before the dore her yron charet stood,

Already harnesssed for journey new;
And coleblacke steedes yborne of hellish
brood,

That on their rusty bits did champ, as they were wood.

XXI

Who when she saw Duessa sunny bright, Adorn'd with gold and jewels shining cleare,
She greatly grew amazed at the sight,

And th' unacquainted light began to feare;
For never did such brightnes there appeare;

And would have backe retyred to her cave, Untill the witches speach she gan to heare,

Saying: 'Yet, O thou dreaded dame, I crave

Abyde, till I have told the message which I have.'

XXII

She stayd, and fourth Duessa gan proceede:
'O thou most aunient grandmother of all,

More old then Jove, whom thou at first didst breede,

Or that great house of gods cælestiall, Which wast begot in Dæmogorgons hall,

And sawst the secrets of the world unmade, Why suffrest thou thy nephewes deare to
fall

With Elfin sword, most shamefully betrade?
Lo where the stout Sansjoy doth sleepe in deadly shade!

XXIII

'And him before, I saw with bitter eyes The bold Sansfoy shrinke underneath his
speare;

And now the pray of fowles in field he lyes, Nor wayld of friends, nor layd on groning
beare,

That whylome was to me too dearely deare.
O what of gods then boots it to be borne,
If old Aveugles sonnes so evill heare?

Or who shall not great Nightes children
scorne,

When two of three her nephews are so fowle forlorne?

XXIV

'Up, then! up, dreary dame, of darknes
queene!

Go gather up the reliques of thy race,
Or else goe them avenge, and let be seene That dreaded Night in brightest day hath
place,

And can the children of fayre Light de-
face.'

Her feeling speaches some compassion
mov'd

In hart, and change in that great mothers
face:

Yet pitty in her hart was never prov'd Till then: for evermore she hated, never lov'd:

XXV

And said, 'Deare daughter, rightly may I
rew

The fall of famous children borne of mee,
And good successes, which their foes en-
saw:

But who can turne the streame of destinee,
Or breake the chayne of strong necessitee,
Which fast is tyde to Joves eternall seat?

The sonnes of Day he favoureth, I see,
And by my ruines thinkes to make them
great:

To make one great by others losse is bad excheat.

XXVI

'Yet shall they not escape so freely all;
For some shall pay the price of others guilt:
And he, the man that made Sansfoy to fall,

Shall with his owne blood price that he hath spilt.

But what art thou, that telst of nephews kilt?’

‘I, that do seeme not I, Duessa ame,’ Quoth she, ‘how ever now, in garments gilt

And gorgeous gold arayd, I to thee came; Duessa I, the daughter of Deceipt and Shame.’

XXVII

Then bowing downe her aged backe, she kist

The wicked witch, saying: ‘In that fayre
face

The false resemblaunce of Deceipt, I wist, Did closely lurke; yet so true-seeming graee
It carried, that I scarce in darksome place Could it discerne, though I the mother bee Of Falshood, and roote of Duessaes race.

O welcome, child, whom I have longd to
see,

And now have seene unwares! Lo, now I goe with thee.’

XXVIII

Then to her yron wagon she betakes,
And with her beares the fowle welfavoured witch:

Through mirkesome aire her ready way she makes.

Her twyfold teme, of which two blacke as pitch,

And two were browne, yet each to each unlich,

Did softly swim away, ne ever stamp, Unlesse she chaunst their stubborne mouths to twitch;

Then foming tarre, their bridles they would champ,

And trampling the fine element, would fiercely ramp.

XXIX

So well they sped, that they be come at length

Unto the place, whereas the Paynim lay, Devoid of outward sence and native strength, Coverd with charmed cloud from vew of day And sight of men, since his late luckelesse
fray.

His cruell wounds, with cruddy bloud con-geald,

They binden up so wisely as they may,

And handle softly, till they can be heald:
So lay him in her charett, close in night conceald.

XXX

And all the while she stood upon the ground,
The wakefull dogs did never cease to bay,
As giving warning of th’ unwonted sound,
With which her yron wheelles did them
affray,

And her darke griesly looke them much
dismay:

The messenger of death, the ghastly owle,
With drery shriekes did also her bewray;
And hungry wolves continually did howle
At her abhorred face, so filthy and so fowle.

XXXI

Thence turning backe in silence softe they stole,

And brought the heavy corse with easy pace
To yawning gulfe of deepe Avernus hole.

By that same hole an entraunce, darke and bace,

With smoake and sulphur hiding all the
place,

Descends to hell: there creature never past,
That backe returned without heavenly
grace;

But dreadful Furies, which their chaines have brast,

And damned sprights sent forth to make ill men aghast.

XXXII

By that same way the direfull dames doe
drive

Their mournefull charett, fild with rusty
blood,

And downe to Plutoes house are come bilive:

Which passing through, on every side them
stood

The trembling ghosts with sad amazed
mood,

Chattring their iron teeth, and staring wide With stony eies; and all the hellish brood

Of feends infernall flockt on every side, To gaze on erthly wight, that with the Night durst ride.

XXXIII

They pas the bitter waves of Acheron, Where many soules sit wailing woefully,
And come to fiery flood of Phlegeton.

Whereas the damned ghosts in torments fry,
 And with sharp shrilling shriekes doe boot-lesse cry, Cursing high Jove, the which them thither
 sent.
 The house of endlesse paine is built thereby,
 In which ten thousand sorts of punishment
 The cursed creatures doe eternally torment.

XXXIV

Before the threshold dreadfull Cerberus His three deformed heads did lay along, Curled with thousand adders venomous,
 And lilled forth his bloody flaming tong:
 At them he gan to reare his bristles strong,
 And felly gnarre, untill Dayes enemy Did him appease; then downe his taile he hong,
 And suffered them to passen quietly:
 For she in hell and heaven had power equally.

XXXV

There was Ixion turned on a wheele, For daring tempt the queene of heaven to sin;
 And Sisyphus an huge round stone did reele Against an hill, ne might from labour lin;
 There thrifty Tantalus hong by the chin;
 And Tityus fed a vultur on his maw; Typhœus joynts were stretched on a gin; Theseus condemned to endlesse slouth by law;
 And fifty sisters water in leke vessels draw.

XXXVI

They all, beholding worldly wights in place, Leave off their worke, unmindefull of their
 smart,
 To gaze on them; who forth by them doe
 pace,
 Till they be come unto the furthest part:
 Where was a cave ywrought by wondrous
 art, Deepe, darke, uneasy, dolefull, comfort-
 lesse,
 In which sad Aesculapius far apart Emprisond was in chaines remedilles, For that Hippolytus rent corse he did redresse.

XXXVII

Hippolytus a jolly huntsman was,
 That wont in charett chace the foming bore;

He all his peeres in beauty did surpas,
 But ladies love, as losse of time, forbore:
 His wanton stepdame loved him the more;
 But when she saw her offred sweets refusd,
 Her love she turnd to hate, and him before His father fierce of treason false accusd, And with her gealous termes his open eares abusd.

XXXVIII

Who, all in rage, his sea-god syre besought, Some cursed vengeance on his sonne to
 cast:
 From surging gulf two monsters streight were brought,
 With dread whereof his chacing steedes aghast
 Both charett swifte and huntsman overcast.
 His goodly corps, on ragged cliffs yrent, Was quite dismembred, and his members chast
 Scattered on every mountaine as he went,
 That of Hippolytus was lefte no monument.

XXXIX

His cruell stepdame, seeing what was donne, Her wicked daies with wretched knife did
 end,
 In death avowing th' innocence of her some.
 Which hearing, his rash syre began to rend
 His heare, and hasty tong, that did offend:
 Tho, gathering up the relicks of his smart,
 By Dianes meanes, who was Hippolyts friend, Them brought to Aesculape, that by his art Did heale them all againe, and joynd every part.

XL

Such wondrous science in mans witt to rain When Jove avizd, that could the dead revive,
 And fates expired could renew again,
 Of endlesse life he might him not deprive,
 But unto hell did thrust him downe alive,
 With flashing thunderbolt ywounded sore:
 Where long remaining, he did alwaies strive Him selfe with salves to health for to restore,
 And slake the heavenly fire, that ragd evermore.

XLI

There auncient Night arriving, did alight From her nigh weary wayne, and in her
 armes

To .Eseulapius brought the wounded knight:
 Whome having softly disaraid of arnes, Tho gan to him discover all his harmes, Beseeching him with prayer, and with
 praise,
 If either salves, or oyles, or herbes, or charmes
 A fordonne wight from dore of death mote
 raise,
 He would at her request prolong her nephews daies.

XLII

'Ah! dame,' quoth he, 'thou temptest me
 in vaine
 To dare the thing, which daily yet I rew,
 And the old cause of my continued paine
 With like attempt to like end to renew.
 Is not enough, that, thrust from heaven
 dew,
 Here endlesse penance for one fault I pay,
 But that redoubled crime with vengeance
 new Thou biddest me to eeke? Can Night defray
 The wrath of thundring Jove, that rules both Night and Day?'

XLIII

'Not so,' quoth she; 'but sith that heavens
 king
 From hope of heaven hath thee excluded
 quight,
 Why fearest thou, that caust not hope for
 thing,
 And fearest not that more thee hurten
 might,
 Now in the powre of everlasting Night?
 Goe to then, O thou far renowned sonne Of great Apollo, shew thy famous might In medicine, that els hath to thee wonne Great pains, and greater praise, both never to be donne.'

XLIV

Her words prevaild: and then the learned leach
 His cunning hand gan to his wounds to lay,
 And all things els, the which his art did teach:
 Which having seene, from thence arose
 away
 The mother of dredd darkenesse, and let
 stay Auegles sonne there in the leaches cure,

And backe retourning, tooke her wonted
 way
 To ronne her timely race, whilst Phoebus
 pure
 In westerne waves his weary wagon did recure.

XLV

The false Duessa, leaving noyous Night, Returnd to stately pallace of Dame Pryde; Where when she came, she found the Faery
 knight
 Departed thence, albee his woundes wyde,
 Not thoroughly heald, unready were to ryde.
 Good cause he had to hasten thence away;
 For on a day his wary dwarfe had spyde Where, in a dungeon deepe, huge numbers
 lay
 Of caytive wretched thralls, that wayld night and day:

XLVI

A ruefull sight as could be seene with eie:
 Of whom he learned had in secret wise
 The hidden cause of their captivitie;
 How mortgaging their lives to Covetise, Through wastfull pride and wanton riotise, They were by law of that proud tyran-
 nesse,
 Provokt with Wrath, and Envyes false surmise,
 Condemned to that dongeon mercilesse, Where they should live in wo, and dye in wretchednesse.

XLVII

There was that great prond king of Babylon,
 That would compell ail nations to adore,
 And him as onely God to cali upon, Till, through celestiall doome thrown ou of dore,
 Into an oxe he was transformd of yore:
 There also was King Cræsus, that enhaust His hart too high through his great richesse stoæ;
 And prond Antiochus, the which advaunst His cursed hand gainst God, and on his altares daunst.

XLVIII

And, them long time before, great Nimrod
 was,
 That first the world with sword and fire
 warrayd;

And after him old Ninus far did pas
 In princely pomp, of all the world obayd;
 There also was that mightie monarch layd Low under all, yet above all in pride, That name of native syre did fowle up-
 brayd,

And would as Ammons some be magnifide, Till, scornd of God and man, a shamefull death he dide.

XLIX

All these together in one heape were
 throwne,

Like carkases of beastes in butchers stall.
 And, in another corner, wide were strowne
 The antique ruins of the Romanes fall:
 Great Romulus, the grandsyre of them
 all,

Proud Tarquin, and too lordly Lentulus, Stout Scipio, and stubborne Hanniball, Ambitious Sylla, and sterne Marius, High Caesar, great Pompey, and fiers An-tonius.

L

Amongst these mightie men were wemen
 mixt,

Proud wemen, vaine, forgetfull of their yoke:

The bold Semiramis, whose sides, transfixt With somes own blade, her fowle reproches spoke;

Fayre Sthenobœa, that her selfe did choke With wilfull chord, for wanting of her
 will;

High minded Cleopatra, that with stroke
 Of aspes sting her selfe did stoutly kill:
 And thousands moe the like, that did that dongeon fill.

LI

Besides the endlesse routes of wretched thralles,

Which thether were assembled day by day,
 From all the world, after their wofull falles Through wicked pride and wasted welthes
 decay.

But most, of all which in that dongeon lay, Fell from high princes courtes, or ladies
 bowres,

Where they in ydle pomp, or wanton play, Consumed had their goods, and thriftlesse
 howres,

And lastly thrown themselves into these heavv stowres.

LII

Whose case whenas the carefull dwarfe had tould,

And made ensample of their mournfull
 sight

Unto his maister, he no lenger would There dwell in perill of like painefull plight, But earely rose, and ere that dawning light Discovered had the world to heaven wyde,
 He by a privy posterne tooke his flight,
 That of no envious eyes he mote be spyde:
 For doubtlesse death ensewed, if any him descryde.

LIII

Searse could he footing find in that fowle
 way,

For many corses, like a great lay-stall,
 Of murred men, which therein strowed
 lay,

Without remorse or decent funerall:
 Which al through that great princesse pride did fall

And came to shamefull end. And them besyde,

Forth ryding underneath the castell wall,
 A donghill of dead carcases he spyde, The dreadfull spectacle of that sad House of Pryde.

CANTO VI

From lawlesse lust by wondrous grace

Fayre Una is releast:
 Whom salvage nation does adore,
 And learns her wise beheast.

I

As when a ship, that flyes fayre under sayle,
 An hidden rocke escaped hath unwares,
 That lay in waite her wrack for to bewaile,
 The marriner, yet halfe amazed, stares At perill past, and yet in doubt ne dares To joy at his foolhappie oversight:
 So doubly is distrest twixt joy and cares
 The dreadlesse corage of this Elfin knight, Having escapt so sad ensamples in his sight.

II

Yet sad he was, that his too hastie speed The fayre Duesse had forst him leave behind;

And yet more sad, that Una, his deare dreed, Her truth had staynd with treason so un-
 kind:

Yet cryme in her could never creature find.

But for his love, and for her own selfe sake,
She wandred had from one to other Ynd,
Him for to seeke, ne ever would forsake, Till her unwares the fiers Sansloy did overtake.

III

Who, after Archimagoes fowle defeat, Led her away into a forest wilde,
And turning wrathfull fyre to lustfull heat, With beastly sin thought her to have de-
filde,

And made the vassall of his pleasures vilde.
Yet first he cast by treatie, and by traynes,
Her to persuade that stubbornie fort to yilde:
For greater conquest of hard love he gaynes, That workes it to his will, then he that it constraines.

With fawning wordes he courted her a
while,
And, looking lovely and oft sighing sore, Her constant hart did tempt with diverse
guile:

But wordes, and lookes, and sighes she did abhorre,

As rock of diamond stedfast evermore.
Yet for to feed his fyrie lustfull eye, He snatcht the vele that hong her face be-
fore:

Then gan her beantie shyne as brightest
skye,

And burnt his beastly hart t' efforce her chastitye.

V

So when he saw his flatt'ring artes to fayle,
And subtle engines bett from batteree,
With greedy force he gan the fort assayle, Whereof he weend possessed soone to bee,
And win rich spoile of ransackt chastitee.

Ah! heavens, that doe this hideous act be-
hold,

And heavenly virgin thus outraged see, How can ye vengeance just so long with-
hold,

And hurle not flashing flames upon that Paynim bold?

VI

The pitteous mayden, carefull comfort-
lesse,
Does throw out thrilling shriekes, and shrieking cryes,

The last vaine helpe of wemens great dis-
tresse,
And with loud plaintes importuneth the
skyes;

That molten starres doe drop like weeping
eyes,

And Phœbus, flying so most shamefull sight,
His blushing face in foggy cloud implyes, And hydes for shame. What witt of mortall
wight

Can now devise to quitt a thrall from such a plight?

Eternall Providence, exceeding thought, Where none appeares can make her selfe a
way:

A wondrous way it for this lady wrought, From lyons clawes to pluck the gryped
pray.

Her shrill outcryes and shrieks so loud did bray,

That all the woodes and forestes did re-
sownd;

A troupe of Faunes and Satyres far a way
Within the wood were dauncing in a rownd, Whiles old Sylvanus slept in shady arber sownd.

VIII

Who, when they heard that pitteous strained
voice,

In haste forsooke their rurall meriment,
And ran towards the far rebownded noyce
To weet what wight so loudly did lament.

Unto the place they come incontinent:
Whom when the raging Sarazin espyde,
A rude, mishapen, monstrous rablement, Whose like he never saw, he durst not byde, But got his ready steed, and fast away gan ryde.

IX

The wyld woodgods, arrived in the place,
There find the virgin doofull desolate, With ruffled rayments, and fayre blubbred
face,

As her outrageous foe had left her late,
And trembling yet through feare of former
hate.

All stand amazed at so uncouth sight,
And gin to pittie her unhappie state;
All stand astonied at her beantie bright,
In their rude eyes unworthy of so wofull
plight.

She, more amazd, in double dread doth dwell;

And every tender part for feare does shake:
As when a greedy wolfe, through hunger fell,

A seely lamb far from the flock does take,
Of whom he meanes his bloody feast to make,

A lyon spyes fast running towards him,
The innocent pray in hast he does forsake,
Which, quitt from death, yet quakes in every lim

With chaunge of feare, to see the lyon looke so grim.

XI

Such fearefull fitt assaid her trembling hart, Ne word to speake, ne joynt to move, she had:

The salvage nation feele her secret smart,
And read her sorrow in her count'nance sad:
Their frowning forheades, with rough hornes yelad,

And rustick horror, all a syde doe lay,
And, gently grenning, shew a semblance glad

To comfort her, and, feare to put away,
Their backward bent knees teach her humbly to obay.

XII

The doubtfull damzell dare not yet committ

Her single person to their barbarous truth,
But still twixt feare and hope amazd does sitt,

Late learnd what harme to hasty trust ensu'th:

They, in compassion of her tender youth,
And wonder of her beautie soverayne,
Are wonne with pittie and unwonted ruth,
And all prostrate upon the lowly playne, Doe kisse her feete, and fawne on her with count'nance fayne.

XIII

Their harts she ghessest by their humble guise,

And yielde her to extremitie of time;
So from the ground she fearelesse doth arise,
And walketh forth without suspect of crime:
They all as glad as birdes of joyous pryme, Thence lead her forth, about her dauncing round,

Shouting, and singing all a shepherds ryme;
And, with greene braunches strowing all the ground,
Do worship her as queene with olive gir-lond croud.

XIV

And all the way their merry pipes they sound,

That all the woods with doubled echo ring,
And with their horned feet doe weare the ground,

Leaping like wanton kids in pleasant spring.
So towards old Sylvanus they her bring;
Who with the noyse awaked, commeth out To weet the cause, his weake steps governing

And aged limbs on cypresse stadle stout;
And with an yvie twyne his waste is girt about.

XV

Far off he wonders what them makes so glad,

Or Bacchus merry fruit they did invent,
Or Cybeles franticke rites have made them mad.

They, drawing nigh, unto their god present
That flowre of fayth and beautie excellent:
The god himselfe, vewing that mirrhour rare,

Stood long amazd, and burnt in his intent:
His owne fayre Dryope now he thinkes not faire,

And Pholoe fowle, when her to this he doth compaire.

XVI

The woodborne people fall before her flat,
And worship her as goddesse of the wood;
And old Sylvanus selfe bethinkes not, what To thinke of wight so fayre, but gazing stood,

In doubt to deeme her borne of earthly brood:

Sometimes Dame Venus selfe he seemes to see,

But Venus never had so sober mood; Sometimes Diana he her takes to be,
But misseth bow, and shaftes, and buskins to her knee.

XVII

By vew of her he ginneth to revive
His ancient love, and dearest Cyparisse;

And calles to mind his pourtraiture alive,
 How fayre he was, and yet not fayre to this;
 And how he slew with glauncing dart amisse
 A gentle hynd, the which the lovely boy Did love as life, above all worldly blisse;
 For grieffe whereof the lad n'ould after joy, But pynd away in anguish and selfewild annoy.

XVIII

The woody nymphes, faire Hamadryades, Her to behold do thether runne apace,
 And all the troupe of light-foot Naiades Flocke all about to see her lovely face:
 But when they vewed have her heavenly
 grace,
 They envy her in their malicious mind,
 And fly away for feare of fowle disgrace:
 But all the Satyres scorne their woody kind,
 And henceforth nothing faire, but her, on earth they find.

XIX

Glad of such lucke, the luckelesse lucky
 mayd
 Did her content to please their feeble eyes, And long time with that salvage people
 stayd,
 To gather breath in many miseryes.
 During which time her gentle wit she plyes, To teach them truth, which worshipt her in
 vaine,
 And made her th' image of idolatryes;
 But when their bootlesse zeale she did restrayne
 From her own worship, they her asse would worship fayn.

XX

It fortun'd, a noble warlike knight
 By just occasion to that forrest came,
 To seeke his kindred, and the lignage right, From whence he tooke his weldeserved
 name:
 He had in armes abroad wonne muchell
 fame,
 And fild far landes with glorie of his might;
 Plaine, faithfull, true, and enemy of shame,
 And ever lov'd to fight for ladies right, But in vaine glorious frayes he litle did delight.

XXI

A Satyres sonne yborne in forrest wyld,
 By straunge adventure as it did betyde,

And there begotten of a lady myld, Fayre Thyamis the daughter of Labryde, That was in sacred bandes of wedlocke
 tyde
 To Therion, a loose unruly swayne, Who had more joy to raunge the forrest
 wyde,
 And chase the salvage beast with busie
 payne,
 Then serve his ladies love, and waste in pleasures vayne.

XXII

The forlorne mayd did with loves longing burne,
 And could not lacke her lovers company, But to the wood she goes, to serve her
 turne,
 And seeke her spouse, that from her still does fly,
 And followes other game and venary.
 A Satyre chaunst her wandring for to finde.
 And kindling coles of lust in brutish eye,
 The loyall linkes of wedlocke did unbinde, And made her person thrall unto his beastly kind.

XXIII

So long in secret cabin there he held Her captive to his sensuall desyre, Till that with timely fruit her belly sweld,
 And bore a boy unto that salvage syre:
 Then home he suffred her for to retyre, For ransome leaving him the late-borne
 childe;
 Whom, till to ryper yeares he gan aspyre,
 He noused up in life and manners wilde, Amongst wild beastes and woods, from lawes of men exile.

XXIV

For all he taught the tender ymp was but To banish cowardize and bastard feare: His trembling hand he would him force to put
 Upon the lyon and the rugged beare, And from the she beares teats her whelps to
 teare;
 And eke wyld roring buls he would him
 make
 To tame, and ryde their backes not made to beare;
 And the robuckes in flight to overtake:
 That everie beast for feare of him did fly and quake.

XXV

Thereby so fearelesse and so fell he grew,
That his owne syre and maister of his guise Did often tremble at his horrid vew,
And oft, for dread of hurt, would him advise
The angry bestes not rashly to despise, Nor too much to provoke: for he would learne

The lyon stoup to him in lowly wise, (A lesson hard) and make the libbard sterne Leave roaring, when in rage he for revenge did earne.

XXVI

And for to make his powre approved more, Wyld bestes in yron yokes he would com-
pell;

The spotted panther, and the tusked bore,
The pardale swift, and the tigre cruell,
The antelope, and wolfe both fiers and fell;
And them constraine in equall teme to draw.

Such joy he had their stubborne harts to quell,

And sturdie courage tame with dreadfull aw,
That his bebest they feared, as a tyrans law.

XXVII

His loving mother came upon a day Unto the woodes, to see her little sonne; And chaunst unwares to meet him in the
way,

After his sportes and cruell pastime dome,
When after him a lyonesse did runne,
That roaring all with rage, did lowd requere Her children deare, whom he away had
wonne:

The lyon whelpes she saw how he did beare,
And lull in rugged arnes, withouten childish feare.

XXVIII

The fearefull dame all quaked at the sight,
And turning backe gan fast to fly away, Untill, with love revokt from vaine affright,
She hardly yet perswaded was to stay,
And then to him these womanish words gan
say:

'Ah! Satyrane, my dearling and my joy, For love of me leave off this dreadfull
play;

To dally thus with death is no fit toy:
Go find some other play-fellowes, mine own sweet boy.'

XXIX

In these and like delightes of bloody game
He trayned was, till ryper yeares he raught;
And there abode, whylst any beast of name Walkt in that forrest, whom he had not taught To feare his force: and then his courage haught

Desyrd of forreine foemen to be knowne, And far abroad for straunge adventures
sought:

In which his might was never overthrowne, But through al Faery Lond his famous worth was blown.

XXX

Yet evermore it was his maner faire, After long labours and adventures spent,
Unto those native woods for to repaire,
To see his syre and ofspring auncient.
And now he thether came for like intent;
Where he unwares the fairest Una found, Straunge lady, in so straunge habiliment, Teaching the Satyres, which her sat around, Trew sacred lore, which from her sweet lips did redound.

XXXI

He wondred at her wisdom hevenly rare, Whose like in womens witt he never knew;
And when her curteous deeds he did compare,

Gan her admire, and her sad sorrowes rew, Blaming of Fortune, which such troubles
threw,

And joyd to make prooffe of her cruelty
On gentle dame, so hurtlesse and so trew:
Thenceforth he kept her goodly company,
And leard her discipline of faith and verity.

XXXII

But she, all vowd unto the Redcrosse Knight, His wandring perill closely did lament, Ne in this new acquaintaunce could delight, But her deare heart with anguish did tor-
ment,

And all her witt in secret counsels spent,
How to escape. At last in privy wise To Satyrane she shewed her intent;
Who, glad to gain such favour, gan devise, How with that pensive maid he best might thence arise.

XXXIII

So on a day, when Satyres all were gone
To doe their service to Sylvanus old,

The gentle virgin, left behinde alone,
 He led away with corage stout and bold.
 Too late it was to Satyres to be told,
 Or ever hope recover her againe:
 In vaine he seeks that, having, cannot hold.
 So fast he carried her with carefull paine, That they the wods are past, and come now to the plaine

XXXIV

The better part now of the lingring day
 They traveild had, whenas they far espide
 A weary wight forwardring by the way,
 And towards him they gan in hast to ride,
 To weete of newes that did abroad betide,
 Or tidings of her Knight of the Rederosse.
 But he, them spying, gan to turne aside For feare, as seemd, or for some feigned losse:
 More greedy they of newes fast towards him do crosse.

XXXV

A silly man, in simple weeds forworne,
 And soild with dust of the long dried way;
 His sandales were with toilsome travell
 torne,
 And face all tand with scorching sunny ray,
 As he had traveild many a sommers day Through boyling sands of Arabie and Ynde;
 And in his hand a Jacobs staffe, to stay His weary limbs upon; and eke behind His scrip did hang, in which his needments he did bind.

XXXVI

The knight, approching nigh, of him inquerd Tidings of warre, and of adventures new;
 But warres, nor new adventures, none he herd.
 Then Una gan to aske, if ought he knew Or heard abroad of that her champion trew, That in his armour bare a croslet red.
 'Ay me! deare dame,' quoth he, 'well may
 I rew
 To tell the sad sight which mine eies have
 red:
 These eies did see that knight both living and eke ded.'

XXXVII

That cruell word her tender hart so thirld, That suddain cold did ronne through every
 vaine,
 And stony horrour all her seneces fild

With dying fitt, that downe she fell for
 paine.

The knight her lightly reared up againe,
 And comforted with curteous kind reliefe: Then, wonne from death, she bad him tellen
 plaine

The further processe of her hidden griefe;
 The lesser pangs can beare, who hath endur'd the chief.

XXXVIII

Then gan the pilgrim thus: 'I chaunst this
 day,

This fatall day, that shall I ever rew,
 To see two knights in travell on my way (A sory sight) arraung'd in batteill new, Both breathing vengeaunce, both of wrath-full hew:

My feareful flesh did tremble at their strife,
 To see their blades so greedily imbrew, That, dronke with blood, yet thirsted after
 life:

What more? the Rederosse Knight was slain with Paynim knife.'

XXXIX

'Ah, dearest Lord!' quoth she, 'how might that bee,

And he the stoutest knight, that ever
 wonne?'

'Ah, dearest dame,' quoth hee, 'how might I see

The thing, that might not be, and yet was
 donne?'

'Where is,' said Satyrane, 'that Paynims
 sonne,

That him of life, and us of joy, hath reft?'
 'Not far away,' quoth he, 'he hence doth
 wonne,

Foreby a fountaine, where I late him lefte Washing his bloody wounds, that through the steele were cleft.'

XL

Therewith the knight thence marched forth in hast,

Whiles Una, with huge heavinesse opprest, Could not for sorrow follow him so fast;
 And soone he came, as he the place had ghest,

Whereas that Pagan proud him selfe did
 rest

In secret shadow by a fountaine side:
 Even he it was, that earst would have sup-
 prest

Faire Una: whom when Satyrane espide, With foule reprochfull words he boldly him defide;

XLI

And said: 'Arise, thou cursed miscreant, That hast with knightlesse guile and trecherous train

Faire knight hood fowly shamed, and doest
vaunt

That good Knight of the Redcrosse to have slain:

Arise, and with like treason now maintain Thy guilty wrong, or els thee guilty yield.'

The Sarazin, this hearing, rose amain, And catching up in hast his three square
shield

And shining helmet, soone him buckled to the field;

XLII

And, drawing nigh him, said: 'Ah, mis-born Elfe!

In evill houre thy foes thee hither sent,
Anothers wrongs to wreak upon thy selfe:

Yet ill thou blamest me, for having bent
My name with guile and traitorous intent:

That Redecrosse Knight, perdie, I never slew;

But had he beene where earst his armes were lent,

Th' enchaunter vaine his error should not
rew:

But thou his error shalt, I hope, now proven trew.'

XLIII

Therewith they gan, both furious and fell,
To thunder blowes, and fiersly to assaile

Each other, bent his enemy to quell;
That with their force they perst both plate and maile,

And made wide furrowes in their fleshes

fraile,
That it would pittie any living eie.

Large floods of blood adowne their sides did raile;

But floods of blood could not them satisfie: Both hongred after death: both chose to win, or die.

XLIV

So long they fight, and fell revenge pursue,
That, fainting each, them selves to breathe
lett,

And, ofte refreshed, battell oft renue:
As when two bores, with rancling malice mett,

Their gory sides fresh bleeding fiercely frett, Til breathlesse both them selves aside retire,

Where, foming wrath, their cruell tuskes they whett,

And trample th' earth, the whiles they may respire;

Then backe to fight againe, new breathed and entire.

XLV

So fiersly, when these knights had breathed once,

They gan to fight retourne, increasing more Their puissant force and cruell rage attonce,

With heaped strokes more hugely then be-

fore,
That with their dreary wounds and bloody

gore
They both deformed, scarsely could bee known.

By this, sad Una fraught with anguish sore,

Led with their noise, which through the aire was thrown,

Arriv'd, wher they in erth their fruitles blood had sown.

XLVI

Whom all so soone as that proud Sarazin Espide, he gan revive the memory

Of his leud lusts, and late attempted sin,
And lefte the doubtfull battell hastily,

To catch her, newly offred to his eie:
But Satyrane, with strokes him turning,

staid,
And sternely bad him other businesse

plie
Then hunt the steps of pure unspotted

maid:
Wherewith he al enrag'd, these bitter speeches said:

XLVII

'O foolish Faeries sonne! what fury mad Hath thee incoust to hast thy dolefull fatte?

Were it not better I that lady had

Then that thou hadst repented it too late?
Most sencelesse man he, that himselfe doth

hate,
To love another. Lo then, for thine ayd,

Here take thy lovers token on thy pate.'

So they two fight; the whiles the royall
mayd Fledd farre away, of that proud Paynim sore afrayd.

XLVIII

But that false pilgrim, which that leasing
told,
Being in deed old Archimage, did stay In secret shadow, all this to behold,
And much rejoiced in their bloody fray:
But when he saw the damsell passe away,
He left his stond, and her pursewd apace,
In hope to bring her to her last decay.
But for to tell her lamentable cace, And eke this battels end, will need another place.

CANTO VII

The Redcrosse Knight is captive made,
By gyaunt proud opprest: Prince Arthure meets with Una greatly with those newes distrest.

I

WHAT man so wise, what earthly witt so
ware,
As to discry the crafty cunning traine, By which Deceit doth maske in visour
faire,
And cast her colours died deepe in graine, To seeme like Truth, whose shape she well can faine,
And fitting gestures to her purpose frame,
The guiltlesse man with guile to entertaine ?
Great maistresse of her art was that false
dame,
The false Duessa, cloked with Fidessaes
name.

II

Who when, returning from the drery Night, She fownd not in that perilous Hous of Pryde,
Where she had left, the noble Redcross
Knight,
Her hoped pray, she would no lenger byde, But forth she went to seeke him far and
wide.
Ere long she fownd, whereas he wearie sate
To rest him selfe, foreby a fountaine syde, Disarmed all of yron-coted plate,
And by his side his steed the grassy forage ate.

III

Hee feedes upon the cooling shade, and baves
His sweatie forehead in the breathing wynd, Which through the trembling leaves full gently playes, Wherein the chearefull birds of sundry
kynd Doe chaunt sweet musick, to delight his
mynd.
The witch approching gan him fayrely
greet,
And with reproch of carelesnes unkynd Upbrayd, for leaving her in place unmeet, With fowle words tempring faire, soure gall with hony sweet.

IV

Unkindnesse past, they gan of solace treat,
And bathe in pleasaunce of the joyous
shade,
Which shielded them against the boyling
heat,
And, with greene boughes decking a gloomy glade,
About the fountaine like a girlond made;
Whose bubbling wave did ever freshly well, Ne ever would through fervent sommer
fade:
The sacred nymph, which therein wont to
dwell,
Was out of Dianes favor, as it then befell.

V

The cause was this: one day when Phæbe
fayre
With all her band was following the chace, This nymph, quite tyr'd with heat of scorching ayre, Satt downe to rest in middest of the race:
The goddesse wroth gan fowly her disgrace,
And badd the waters, which from her did
flow,
Be such as she her selfe was then in place.
Thenceforth her waters wexed dull and slow,
And all that drunke thereof did faint and feeble grow.

VI

Hereof this gentle knight unweeting was,
And lying downe upon the sandie graile, Dronke of the streame, as cleare as christall glas:
Eftsoones his manly forces gan to fayle,

And mightie strong was turnd to feeble frayle:
 His chaunged powres at first them selves not felt,
 Till crudled cold his corage gan assayle,
 And chearefull blood in fayntnes chill did melt,
 Which, like a fever fit, through all his body swelt.

VII

Yet goodly court he made still to his dame, Poured out in loosnesse on the grassy
 grownd,
 Both carelessse of his health, and of his fame:
 Till at the last he heard a dreadfull sound, Which through the wood loud bellowing did rebownd,
 That all the earth for terror seemd to
 shake,
 And trees did tremble. Th' Elfe, therewith astownd, Upstartd lightly from his looser make,
 And his unready weapons gan in hand to take.

VIII

But ere he could his armour on him dight,
 Or gett his shield, his monstrous enemy With sturdie steps came stalking in his
 sight,
 An hideous geaunt, horrible and hie, That with his tallnesse seemd to threat the
 skye;
 The ground eke groned under him for dreed:
 His living like saw never living eye, Ne durst behold: his stature did exceed The hight of three the tallest somes of mortall seed.

IX

The greatest Earth his uncouth mother
 was,
 And blustring Æolus his boasted syre; Who with his breath, which through the world doth pas,
 Her hollow womb did secretly inspyre,
 And fild her hidden caves with stormie yre,
 That she conceiv'd; and trebling the dew
 time,
 In which the wombes of wemen doe expyre, Brought forth this monstrous masse of earthly slyme, Puft up with emptie wynd, and fild with sinfull cryme.

X

So growen great, through arrogant delight
 Of th' high descent whereof he was yborne,
 And through presumption of his matchlesse
 might,
 All other powres and knighthood he did
 scorne.
 Such now he marcheth to this man forlorne, And left to losse: his stalking steps are stayde
 Upon a snaggy oke, which he had torne
 Out of his mothers bowelles, and it made His mortall mace, wherewith his foemen he dismayde.

XI

That when the knight he spyde, he gan advance
 With huge force and insupportable mayne, And towards him with dreadfull fury prauence;
 Who haplesse, and eke hopelesse, all in
 vaine
 Did to him pace, sad battaile to darrayne, Disarmd, disgraste, and inwardly dismayde,
 And eke so faint in every joynt and vayne, Through that fraile fountain, which him feeble made,
 That scarsely could he weeld his bootlesse single blade.

XII

The geaunt strooke so maynly mereillesse,
 That could have overthrowne a stony towre.
 And were not heavenly grace, that him did
 blesse,
 He had bene pouldred all, as thin as flowre:
 But he was wary of that deadly stowre,
 And lightly lept from underneath the blow:
 Yet so exceeding was the villeins powre That with the winde it did him overthrow,
 And all his sences stooned, that still he lay full low.

XIII

As when that divelish yron engin, wrought
 In deepest hell, and framd by furies skill, With windy nitre and quiek sulphur fraught,
 And rand with bollet rownd, ordaind to kill, Conceiveth fyre, the heavens it doth fill With thundring noyse, and all the ayre doth choke,
 That none can breath, nor see, nor heare at
 will,

Through smouldry cloud of duskish stineking smok, That th' onely breath him daunts, who hath escapt the stroke.

XIV

So daunted when the geaunt saw the knight,
His heavie hand he heaved up on hye,
And him to dust thought to have battred
quight,
Untill Duessa loud to him gan crye,
'O great Orgoglio, greatest under skye, O hold thy mortall hand for ladies sake!
Hold for my sake, and doe him not to dye, But vanquisht thine eternall bondslave
make,
And me, thy worthy meed, unto thy leman
take.'

XV

He hearkned, and did stay from further
harmes,
To gayne so goodly guerdon as she spake:
So willingly she came into his armes, Who her as willingly to grace did take,
And was possessed of his newfound make.
Then up he tooke the slombred sencelesse
corse,
And ere he could out of his swowne awake,
Him to his castle brought with hastie forse, And in a dongeon deep him threw without remorse.

XVI

From that day forth Duessa was his deare,
And highly honourd in his haughtie eye;
He gave her gold and purple pall to weare,
And triple crowne set on her head full hie,
And her endowd with royall majesty: Then, for to make her dreaded more of
men,
And peoples hartes with awfull terror tye,
A monstrous beast ybredd in filthy fen He chose, which he had kept long time in darksom den.

XVII

Such one it was, as that renowned snake Which great Alcides in Stremona slew, Long fostred in the filth of Lerna lake, Whose many heades out budding ever new Did breed him endlesse labor to subdew:
But this same monster much more ugly
was;
For seven great heads out of his body grew,

An yron brest, and back of sealy bras,
And all embrewd in blood, his eyes did shine as glas.

XVIII

His tayle was stretched out in wondrous length,
That to the hous of hevenly gods it raught,
And with extorted powre, and borrow'd
strength,
The everburning lamps from thence it
brought,
And proudly threw to ground, as things of naught;
And underneath his filthy feet did tread
The sacred thinges, and holy heastes fore-taught.
Upon this dreadfull beast with sevenfold
head
He sett the false Duessa, for more aw and dread.

XIX

The wofull dwarfe, which saw his maisters
fall,
Whiles he had keeping of his grasing steed,
And valiant knight become a caytive thrall, When all was past, tooke up his forlorne weed;
His mightie armour, missing most at need;
His silver shield, now idle maisterlesse; His poynant speare, that many made to bleed;
The ruefull monuments of heaviness;
And with them all departes, to tell his great distresse.

XX

He had not travaill long, when on the way
He wofull lady, wofull Una, met, Fast flying from the Paynius greedy pray, Whilest Satyrane him from pursuit did let:
Who when her eyes she on the dwarf had
set,
And saw the signes, that deadly tydinges
spake,
She fell to ground for sorrowfull regret,
And lively breath her sad brest did forsake, Yet might her pitteous hart be seene to pant and quake.

XXI

The messenger of so unhappie newes Would faine have dyde; dead was his hart within;

Yet outwardly some little comfort shewes:
 At last recovering hart, he does begin To rubb her temples, and to chaufe her chin,
 And everie tender part does tosse and
 turne:
 So hardly he the flitted life does win,
 Unto her native prison to retourne: Then gins her grieved ghost thus to lament and mourne:

XXII

'Ye dreary instruments of dolefull sight,
 That doe this deadly spectacle behold,
 Why do ye lenger feed on loathed light,
 Or liking find to gaze on earthly mould, Sith cruell fates the carefull threds unfould,
 The which my life and love together tyde?
 Now let the stony dart of sencelesse cold Perce to my hart, and pas through everie
 side,
 And let eternall night so sad sight fro me
 hyde.

XXIII

'O lightsome day, the lampe of highest
 Jove,
 First made by him, mens wandring wayes to guyde,
 When darknesse he in deepest dongeon
 drove,
 Henceforth thy hated face for ever hyde,
 And shut up heavens windowes shyning
 wyde:
 For earthly sight can nought but sorow
 breed,
 And late repentance, which shall long abyde.
 Mine eyes no more on vanitie shall feed, But, seeled up with death, shall have their deadly meed.'

XXIV

Then downe againe she fell unto the ground;
 But he her quickly reared up againe: Thrise did she sinke adowne in deadly swownd,
 And thrise he her reviv'd with busie paine:
 At last, when life recover'd had the raine,
 And over-wrestled his strong enemy,
 With foltring tong, and trembling everie
 vaine,
 'Tell on,' quoth she, 'the wofull tragedie, The which these reliques sad present unto mine eyee.

XXV

'Tempestuous Fortune hath spent all her
 spight,
 And thrilling Sorrow throwne his utmost
 dart;
 Thy sad tong cannot tell more heavy plight
 Then that I feele, and harbour in mine hart:
 Who hath endur'd the whole, can beare ech
 part.
 If death it be, it is not the first wound,
 That launched hath my brest with bleeding
 smart.
 Begin, and end the bitter balefull stound;
 If lesse then that I feare, more favour I have found.'

XXVI

Then gan the dwarfe the whole discourse declare:
 The subtile traines of Archimago old;
 The wanton loves of false Fidessa fayre, Bought with the blood of vanquisht Paynim
 bold;
 The wretched payre transformd to treen
 mould;
 The House of Pryde, and perilles round
 about;
 The combat, which he with Sansjoy did
 hold;
 The lucklesse conflict with the gyaunt stout, Wherein captiv'd, of life or death he stood in doubt.

XXVII

She heard with patience all unto the end,
 And strove to maister sorrowfull assay, Which greater grew, the more she did contend,
 And almost rent her tender hart in tway;
 And love fresh coles unto her fire did lay:
 For greater love, the greater is the losse.
 Was never lady loved dearer day, Then she did love the Knight of the Red-crosse;
 For whose deare sake so many troubles her did tosse.

XXVIII

At last, when fervent sorrow slaked was,
 She up arose, resolving him to find,
 Alive or dead; and forward forth doth pas,
 All as the dwarfe the way to her assynd;
 And ever more, in constant carefull mind, She fedd her wound with fresh renewed
 bale:

Long tost with stormes, and bet with bitter
wind,
High over hills, and lowe adowne the dale,
She wandred many a wood, and measurd many a vale.

XXIX

At last she chanced by good hap to meet A goodly knight, faire marching by the
way,

Together with his squire, arayed meet:
His glitterand armour shined far away, Like glauncing light of Phœbus brightest
ray;

From top to toe no place appeared bare,
That deadly dint of steele endanger may: Athwart his brest a bauldrick brave he
ware,

That shind, like twinkling stars, with stones most pretious rare.

XXX

And in the midst thereof, one pretious stone Of wondrous worth, and eke of wondrous mights,

Shapt like a ladies head, exceeding shone,
Like Hesperus emongst the lesser lights,
And strove for to amaze the weaker sights:
Thereby his mortall blade full comely hong In yvory sheath, yearv'd with curious sights;

Whose hilts were burnisht gold, and handle
strong
Of mother perle, and buckled with a golden tong.

XXXI

His haughtie helmet, horrid all with gold, Both glorious brightnesse and great terrour bredd;

For all the crest a dragon did enfold
With greedie pawes, and over all did spredd His golden wings: his dreadfull hideous
hedd,

Close couched on the bever, seemd to throw From flaming mouth bright sparckles fiery redd,

That suddeine horrour to faint hartes did
show;

And sealy tayle was stretcht adowne his back full low.

XXXII

Upon the top of all his loftie crest,
A bouch of heares discoloured diversly,

With sprinckled pearle and gold full richly
drest,

Did shake, and seemd to daunce for jollity;
Like to an almond tree ymounted hye
On top of greene Selinis all alone,
With blossoms brave bedecked daintily;
Whose tender locks do tremble every one At everie little breath, that under heaven is blowne.

XXXIII

His warlike shield all closely cover'd was,
Ne might of mortall eye be ever seene;
Not made of steele, nor of enduring bras;
Such earthly mettals soone consumed beene;
But all of diamond perfect pure and cleene
It framed was, one massy entire mould, Hewen out of adamant rocke with engines
keene,

That point of speare it never percen could, Ne dint of direfull sword divide the substance would.

XXXIV

The same to wight he never wout disclose,
But when as monsters huge he would dis-
may,

Or daunt unequal armies of his foes, Or when the flying heavens he would af-
fray:

For so exceeding shone his glistring ray,
That Phœbus golden face it did attaint,
As when a cloud his beames doth over-lay;
And silver Cynthia waxed pale and faynt, As when her face is staynd with magicke arts constraint.

XXXV

No magicke arts hereof had any might, Nor bloody wordes of bold enchaunters
call,

But all that was not such as seemd in
sight

Before that shield did fade, and suddeine
fall:

And when him list the raskall routes ap-pall,

Men into stones therewith he could transmew,

And stones to dust, and dust to nought at
all;

And when him list the prouder lookes sub-
dew,

He would them gazing blind, or turne to other hew.

XXXVI

Ne let it seeme that credence this exceedes;
 For he that made the same was knowue right well
 To have done much more admirable deedes.
 It Merlin was, which whylome did exeell All living wightes in might of magicke spell:
 Both shield, and sword, and armour all he
 wrought
 For this young Prince, when first to armes he fell;
 But when he dyde, the Faery Queene it
 brought
 To Faerie Lond, where yet it may be seene, if sought.

XXXVII

A gentle youth, his dearely loved squire,
 His speare of heben wood behind him bare, Whose harmefull head, thrise heated in the
 fire,
 Had riven many a brest with pikehead square;
 A goodly person, and could menage faire
 His stubborne steed with curbed canon bitt, Who under him did trample as the aire, And chaufft, that any on his baeke should
 sitt;
 The yron rowels into frothy fome he bitt.

XXXVIII

Whenas this knight nigh to the lady drew,
 With lovely court he gan her entertaïne; But when he heard her aunswers loth, he
 knew
 Some secret sorrow did her heart distraîne:
 Which to allay, and calme her storming
 paine,
 Faire feeling words he wisely gan display,
 And for her humor fitting purpose faine,
 To tempt the cause it selfe for to bewray; Wherewith enmovd, these bleeding words she gan to say:

XXXIX

'What worlds delight, or joy of living
 speach,
 Can hart, so plungd in sea of sorrowes
 deep,
 And heaped with so huge misfortunes,
 reach?
 The carefull cold beginneth for to ereep,
 And in my heart his yron arrow steep, Soone as I thinke upon my bitter bale:

Such helplesse harmes yts better hidden
 keep,
 Then rip up griefe, where it may not availe;
 My last left comfort is, my woes to weepe and waile.'

XL

'Ah! lady deare,' quoth then the gentle
 knight,
 'Well may I ween your grief is wondrous
 great;
 For wondrous great griefe groneth in my
 spright,
 Whiles thus I heare you of your sorrowes treat.
 But, woefull lady, let me you intrete
 For to unfold the anguish of your hart:
 Mishaps are maistred by advice discrete,
 And counsell mitigates the greatest smart; Found never help, who never would his hurts impart.'

XLI

'O but,' quoth she, 'great griefe will not be tould,
 And can more easily be thought then said.'
 'Right so,' quoth he; 'but he, that never would,
 Could never: will to might gives greatest aid.'
 'But griefe,' quoth she, 'does greater grow displaid,
 If then it find not helpe, and breeds despaire.'
 'Despaire breeds not,' quoth he, 'where faith is staid.'
 'No faith so fast,' quoth she, 'but flesh does paire.'
 'Flesh may empaire,' quoth he, 'but reason can repaire.'

XLII

His goodly reason and well guided speach
 So deepe did settle in her gracious thought,
 That her perswaded to disclose the breach, Which love and fortune in her heart had
 wrought,
 And said: 'Faire sir, I hope good hap hath
 brought
 You to inquire the secrets of my griefe, Or that your wisdom will direct my
 thought,
 Or that your prowesse can me yield reliefe: Then heare the story sad, which I shall tell you briefe.'

XLIII

'The forlorne maiden, whom your cies have
seene
The laughing stocke of Fortmes mockeries, Am th' onely daughter of a king and
queene;
Whose parents deare, whiles equal destinies Did romme about, and their felicities
The favourable heavens did not envy, Did spred their rule through all the territories,
Which Phison and Euphrates floweth by,
And Gehons golden waves doe wash continually.

XLIV

'Till that their cruell cursed enemy,
An huge great dragon, horrible in sight, Bred in the loathly lakes of Tartary, With murdrous ravine, and devouring might,
Their kingdome spoild, and countrey wasted
quight:
Themselves, for feare into his jawes to fall,
He forst to castle strong to take their flight,
Where, fast embard in mighty brasen wall, He has them now four years besiegd, to make them thrall.

XLV

'Full many knights, adventurous and stout, Have enterprizd that monster to subdew;
From every coast, that heaven walks about,
Have thither come the noble martial crew, That famous harde atchievements still pur-
saw;
Yet never any could that girlond win,
But all still shrouke, and still he greater
grew:
All they for want of faith, or guilt of sin,
The pitteous pray of his fiers cruelty have bin.

XLVI

'At last, yled with far reported praise, Which flying fame throughout the world had spred,
Of doughty knights, whom Fary Land did
raise,
That noble order hight of Maidenhed, Forthwith to court of Gloriane I sped,
Of Gloriane, great queene of glory bright, Whose kingdomes seat Cleopolis is red,
There to obtaine some such redoubted knight, That parents deare from tyrants powre deliver might.

XLVII

'Yt was my chauce (my chauce was faire and good)
There for to find a fresh unproved knight, Whose manly hands imbrewd in guilty
blood
Had never beene, ne ever by his might Had throwne to ground the unregarded
right: Yet of his prowesse prooffe he since hath
made (I witnes am) in many a cruell fight;
The groning ghosts of many one dismaide Have felt the bitter dint of his avenging blade.

XLVIII

'And ye, the forlorne reliques of his powre, His biting sword, and his devouring speare, Which have endured many a dreadfull
stowre,
Can speake his prowesse, that did earst you
beare,
And well could rule: now he hath left you
heare,
To be the record of his ruefull losse,
And of my dolefull disaventurous deare:
O heavie record of the good Rederosse, Where have yee left your lord, that could so well you tosse?

XLIX

'Well hoped I, and faire beginnings had,
That he my captive languor should re-
deeme;
Till, all unweeting, an enchanter bad His sence abusd, and made him to mis-
deeme
My loyalty, not such as it did seeme,
That rather death desire then such despight.
Be judge, ye heavens, that all things right
esteeme,
How I him lov'd, and love with all my
might!
So thought I eke of him, and think I thought aright.

'Thenceforth me desolate he quite for-
sooke,
To wander where wilde fortune would me
lead,
And other bywaies he himselfe betooke, Where never foote of living wight did
tread,

That brought not backe the balefull body
dead;

In which him chaunced false Duessa meete, Mine onely foe, mine onely deadly dread, Who with her witchcraft, and misseeming
sweete, Inveigled him to follow her desires un-meete.

LI

'At last, by subtile sleights she him betraid

Unto his foe, a gyaunt huge and tall;
Who him disarmed, dissolute, dismaid, Unwares surprised, and with mighty mall
The monster mercilesse him made to fall, Whose fall did never foe before behold;
And now in darkesome dungeon, wretched
thrall,

Remedilesse, for aie he doth him hold;
This is my cause of griefe, more great then may be told.'

LII

Ere she had ended all, she gan to faint;
But he her comforted, and faire bespake:
'Certes, madame, ye have great cause of
plaint,
That stoutest heart, I weene, could cause
to quake.

But be of cheare, and comfort to you take:
For till I have acquitt your captive knight, Assure your selfe, I will you not forsake.' His chearefull words reviv'd her chearelesse
spright:

So forth they went, the dwarfe them guiding ever right.

CANTO VIII

Faire virgin, to redeeme her deare, Brings Arthure to the fight:
Who slayes the gyaunt, wounds the beast,
And strips Duessa quight.

I

Ay me! how many perils doe enfold
The righteous man, to make him daily
fall,
Were not that Heavenly Grace doth him uphold,

And stedfast Truth acquite him out of all!
Her love is firme, her care continuall,
So oft as he, through his own foolish pride Or weaknes, is to sinfull bands made thrall:

Els should this Rederosse Knight in bands have dyde,
For whose deliverance she this Prince doth thether guyd.

II

They sadly traveld thus, untill they came Nigh to a castle builded strong and hye: Then cryde the dwarfe, 'Lo! yonder is the
same,

In which my lord, my liege, doth lucklesse ly, Thrall to that gyaunts hatefull tyranny:
Therefore, deare sir, your mightie powres assay.'

The noble knight alighted by and by From loftie steed, and badd the ladie stay,
To see what end of fight should him befall that day.

III

So with the squire, th' admirer of his might,
He marched forth towards that castle
wall;

Whose gates he fownd fast shutt, ne living
wight

To warde the same, nor answere commers
call.

Then tooke that squire an horne of bugle
small,

Which hong adowne his side in twisted gold And tasselles gay. Wyde wonders over all Of that same hornes great vertues weren
told,

Which had approved bene in uses manifold.

IV

Was never wight that heard that shrilling
sownd,

But trembling feare did feel in every vaine:
Three miles it might be easy heard arownd,
And echoes three aunswerd it selfe againe:
No false enchantment, nor deceitfull
traine

Might once abide the terror of that blast,
But presently was void and wholly vaine:
No gate so strong, no locke so firme and
fast,

But with that percing noise flew open quite,
or brast.

V

The same before the geaunts gate he blew,
That all the castle quaked from the grownd,
And every dore of freewill open flew:
The gyaunt selfe dismaid with that sownd,

Where he with his Duessa dalliaunce
fownd,
In hast came rushing forth from inner
bowre,
With staring countenance sterne, as one as-townd,
And staggering steps, to weet what suddain
stowre
Had wrought that horror strange, and dar'd his dreaded powre.

VI

And after him the proud Duessa came,
High mounted on her many headed beast;
And every head with fyrie tongue did flame,
And every head was crowned on his creast,
And bloody mouthed with late cruell feast.
That when the knight beheld, his mightie shild
Upon his manly arme he soone adrest,
And at him fiercly flew, with corage fild, And eger greedinesse through every member thrild.

VII

Therewith the gyant buckled him to fight, Inflamd with scornfull wrath and high dis-
daine,
And lifting up his dreadfull club on hight, All armd with ragged snubbes and knottie graine, Him thought at first encounter to have
slaine.
But wise and wary was that noble pere,
And lightly leaping from so monstrous
maine,
Did fayre avoide the violence him nere;
It booted nought to thinke such thunderbolts to beare.

VIII

Ne shame he thought to shonne so hideous migth.
The ydle stroke, enforcing furious way,
Missing the marke of his misaymed sight, Did fall to ground, and with his heavy
sway
So deeply dinted in the driven clay, That three yardes deepe a furrow up did
throw:
The sad earth, wounded with so sore assay, Did grone full grievous underneath the blow,
And trembling with strange feare, did like an earthquake show.

IX

As when almightie Jove, in wrathfull mood,
To wreake the guilt of mortall sins is bent, Hurles forth his thundring dart with deadly food, Enrold in flames, and smouldring dreri-
ment,
Through riven cloudes and molten firma-
ment;
The fiers threeforked engin, making way, Both loftie towres and highest trees hath
rent,
And all that might his angry passage stay,
And shooting in the earth, castes up a mount of clay.

X

His boystrous club, so buried in the grownd,
He could not rearen up againe so light,
But that the knight him at advantage fownd, And whiles he strove his combred clubbe to
quight
Out of the earth, with blade all burning
bright
He smott of his left arme, which like a block Did fall to ground, depriv'd of native
migth:
Large streames of blood out of the truncked stock Forth gushed, like fresh water streame from riven rocke.

XI

Dismayed with so desperate deadly wound,
And eke impatient of unwonted payne, He lowdly brayd with beastly yelling
sownd,
That all the fieldes rebellowed againe:
As great a noyse, as when in Cymbran
plaine
An heard of bulles, whom kindly rage doth sting,
Doe for the milky mothers want complaine, And fill the fieldes with troublous bellow-
ing:
The neighbor woods arownd with hollow murmur ring.

XII

That when his deare Duessa heard, and saw
The evill stownd that daungerd her estate, Unto his aide she hastily did draw Her dreadfull beast, who, swolne with blood of late.

Came ramping forth with proud presumptuous gate,
And threatned all his heades like flaming brandes.

But him the squire made quickly to retrate, Encountering fiers with single sword in hand,
And twixt him and his lord did like a bulwarke stand.

XIII

The proud Duessa, full of wrathfull spight And fiers disdain, to be affronted so, Enforst her purple beast with all her might,
That stop out of the way to overthrow, Scorning the let of so unequal foe:
But nathemore would that corageous swayne

To her yeeld passage, gainst his lord to goe,
But with outrageous strokes did him restraine,
And with his body bard the way atwixt them twaine.

XIV

Then tooke the angrie witch her golden cup, Which still she bore, replete with magick artes;

Death and despayre did many thereof sup,
And secret poyson through their inner partes,

Th' eternall bale of heaue wounded harts;
Which, after charmes and some enchauntments said,

She lightly sprinkled on his weaker partes;
Therewith his sturdie corage soone was quayd,

And all his sences were with suddein dread dismayd.

XV

So downe he fell before the cruell beast,
Who on his neck his bloody clawes did seize,

That life nigh crusht out of his panting brest:

No powre he had to stirre, nor will to rize.
That when the carefull knight gan well advise,

He lightly left the foe with whom he fought,

And to the beast gan turne his enterprise;
For wondrous anguish in his hart it wrought,
To see his loved squyre into such thraldom brought.

XVI

And high advauncing his blood-thirstie blade,

Stroke one of those deformed heades so sore,

That of his puissaunce proud ensample made;

His monstrous scalpe downe to his teeth it tore,

And that misformed shape misshaped more:
A sea of blood gusht from the gaping wound,

That her gay garments staynd with filthy gore,

And overflowed all the field arownd;
That over shoes in blood he waded on the grownd.

XVII

Thereat he rored for exceeding paine,
That, to have heard, great horror would have bred,

And scourging th' emptie ayre with his long trayue,

Through great impatience of his grieved hed,

His gorgeouse ryder from her loftie sted
Would have cast downe, and trodd in durty myre,

Had not the gyaunt soone her succoured;
Who, all enrag'd with smart and frantick yre,

Came hurtling in full fiers, and forst the knight retyre.

XVIII

The force, which wont in two to be disperst,

In one alone left hand he now unites,
Which is through rage more strong then both were erst;

With which his hideous club aloft he dites,
And at his foe with furious rigor smites,
That strongest oake might seeme to overthrow:

The stroke upon his shield so heaue lites,
That to the ground it doubleth him full low:

What mortall wight could ever beare so monstrous blow?

XIX

And in his fall his shield, that covered was,
Did loose his vele by chaunce, and open flew:

The light whereof, that hevens light did
 pas,
 Such blazing brightnesse through the ayer
 threw,
 That eye mote not the same endure to vew.
 Which when the gyaunt spyde with staring
 eye,
 He downe let fall his arme, and soft withdrew
 His weapon huge, that heaved was on hye, For to have slain the man, that on the ground did lye.

XX

And eke the fruitfull-headed beast, amazd
 At flashing beames of that sunshiny shield, Became stark blind, and all his sences dazd,
 That downe he tumbled on the durtie field,
 And seemd himselfe as conquered to yield.
 Whom when his maistresse proud perceiv'd to fall, Whiles yet his feeble feet for faintnesse reeld, Unto the gyaunt lowdly she gan call,
 'O helpe, Orgoglio, helpe! or els we perish
 all.'

XXI

At her so pitteous cry was much amov'd Her champion stout, and for to ayde his frend,
 Againe his wonted angry weapon prov'd:
 But all in vaine: for he has redd his end In that bright shield, and all his forces spend Them selves in vaine: for since that glauncing sight,
 He hath no poure to hurt, nor to defend;
 As where th' Almightyes lightning brond does light, It dimmes the dazed eyen, and daunts the sences quight.

XXII

Whom when the Prince, to batteill new address
 And threatning high his dreadfull stroke, did see,
 His sparkling blade about his head he blest, And smote off quite his right leg by the knee,
 That downe he tumbled; as an aged tree,
 High growing on the top of rocky clift, Whose hartstrings with keene steele nigh hewen be;

The mightie trunck halfe rent, with ragged rift
 Doth roll adowne the rocks, and fall with fearefull drift.

XXIII

Or as a castle, reared high and round, By subtile engins and malicious slight Is undermined from the lowest ground, And her foundation forst, and feebled
 quight,
 At last downe falles, and with her heaped
 hight
 Her hastie ruine does more heavie make,
 And yields it selfe unto the victours might;
 Such was this gyaunts fall, that seemd to
 shake
 The stedfast globe of earth, as it for feare did quake.

XXIV

The knight then, lightly leaping to the pray, With mortall steele him smot againe so
 sore,
 That headlesse his unweldy bodie lay,
 All wallowd in his owne fowle bloody gore, Which flowd from his wounds in wondrous
 store.
 But soone as breath out of his brest did pas,
 That huge great body, which the gyaunt
 bore,
 Was vanisht quite, and of that monstrous mas
 Was nothing left, but like an emptie blader
 was.

XXV

Whose grievous fall when false Duessa
 spyde,
 Her golden cup she cast unto the ground,
 And crowned mitre rudely threw asyde;
 Such pereing grieve her stubborne hart did
 wound,
 That she could not endure that dolefull
 stound,
 But leaving all behind her, fled away:
 The light-foot squire her quickly turnd
 around,
 And by hard meanes enforcing her to stay,
 So brought unto his lord, as his deserved
 pray.

XXVI

The roiall virgin, which beheld from farre,
 In pensive plight and sad perplexitie,

The whole atchievement of this doubtfull
warre,
Came running fast to greet his victorie,
With sober gladnesse and myld modestie, And with sweet joyous cleare him thus be-
spake:
·Fayre branch of noblesse, flowre of chevalrie,
That with your worth the world amazed
make,
How shall I quite the paynes, ye suffer for my sake?

XXVII

‘And you, fresh budd of vertue springing
fast,
Whom these sad eyes saw nigh unto deaths
dore,
What hath poore virgin for such perill past Wherewith you to reward? Accept therefore
My simple selfe, and service evermore:
And He that high does sit, and all things
see
With equall eye, their merites to restore, Behold what ye this day have done for mee,
And what I cannot quite, requite with usuree.

XXVIII

‘But sith the heavens, and your faire handeling,
Have made you master of the field this day,
Your fortune maister eke with governing,
And well begonne end all so well, I pray.
Ne let that wicked woman scape away;
For she it is, that did my lord bethrall,
My dearest lord, and deepe in dongeon lay,
Where he his better dayes hath wasted all.
O heare, how piteous he to you for ayd does call.’

XXIX

Forthwith he gave in charge unto his squyre,
That scarlot whore to keepeen carefully; Whyles he himselfe with greedie great
desyre
Into the castle entred forcibly;
Where living creature none he did espye.
Then gan he lowdly through the house to
call:
But no man car'd to answer to his crye.
There raignd a solemne silence over all, Nor voice was heard, nor wight was seene in bowre or hall.

XXX

At last, with creeping crooked pace forth
came An old old man, with beard as white as snow,
That on a staffe his feeble steps did frame, And guyde his wearie gate both too and
fro;
For his eye sight him fayled long ygo:
And on his arme a bounch of keyes he bore,
The which unused rust did overgrow:
Those were the keyes of every inner dore, But he could not them use, but kept them still in store.

XXXI

But very uncooth sight was to behold,
How he did fashion his untoward pace,
For as he forward moovd his footing old,
So backward still was turnd his wrinced
face,
Unlike to men, who ever as they trace, Both feet and face one way are wont to
lead.
This was the auncient keeper of that place,
And foster father of the gyaunt dead;
His name Ignaro did his nature right aread.

XXXII

His reverend heares and holy gravitee The knight much honord, as beseemed
well,
And gently askt, where all the people bee, Which in that stately building wont to
dwell:
Who answerd him full soft, *He could not
tell.*
Againe he askt, where that same knight was layd, Whom great Orgoglio with his puissaunce
fell
Had made his caytive thrall: againe he sayde,
He could not tell: ne ever other answer
made.

XXXIII

Then asked he, which way he in might
pas:
He could not tell, againe he answered.
Thereat the courteous knight displeasd
was,
And said: ‘Old syre, it seemes thou hast not red

How ill it fits with that same silver hed,
 In vaine to moeke, or moekt in vaine to bee:
 But if thou be, as thou art pourtraied With natures pen, in ages grave degree, Aread in graver wise what I demaund of
 thee.'

XXXIV

His answere likewise was, He could not tell.
 Whose sencelesse speach and doted ignorance

When as the noble Prince had marked well,
 He ghest his nature by his countenance,
 And calmd his wrath with goodly temperance.

Then to him stepping, from his arme did
 reach

Those keyes, and made himselfe free entrance.

Each dore he opened without any breach;
 There was no barre to stop, nor foe him to empeach.

XXXV

There all within full rich arayd he found,
 With royall arras and resplendent gold,
 And did with store of every thing abound,
 That greatest princes presence might behold.
 But all the floore (too filthy to be told) With blood of guiltlesse babes, and innocents trew,

Which there were slaine, as sheepe out of the fold,

Defiled was, that dreadfull was to vew,
 And sacred ashes over it was strowed new.

XXXVI

And there beside of marble stone was built An altare. carv'd with cunning ymagery, On which trew Christians blood was often
 spilt,

And holy martyres often doen to dye,
 With cruell malice and strong tyranny:
 Whose blessed sprites from underneath the stone

To God for vengeance cryde continually, And with great griefe were often heard to
 grone,

That hardest heart would bleede to heare their piteous mone.

XXXVII

Through every rowme he sought, and everie bowr,
 But no where could he find that wofull thrall:

At last he came unto an yron doore, That fast was lockt, but key found not at
 all

Emongst that bounch to open it withall;
 But in the same a little grate was pight, Through which he sent his voyce, and lowd did call

With all his powre, to weet if living wight Were housed therewithin, whom he enlargen might.

XXXVIII

Therewith an hollow, dreary, murmuring
 voyce

These pitteous plaintes and dolours did re-
 sound:

'O who is that, which bringes me happy
 choyce

Of death, that here lye dying every stound, Yet live perforce in balefull darkenesse bound?

For now three moones have changed thrice their hew,

And have beene thrice hid underneath the
 ground,

Since I the heavens chearefull face did
 vew.

O welcome, thou, that doest of death bring tydings trew!'

XXXIX

Which when that champion heard, with percing point

Of pity deare his hart was thrilled sore, And trembling horrour ran through every joynt,

For ruth of gentle knight so fowle forlore:
 Which shaking off, he rent that yron
 dore,

With furious force and indignation fell;
 Where entred in, his foot could find no
 flore,

But all a deepe descent, as darke as hell,
 That breathed ever forth a filthie banefull smell.

XL

But nether darkenesse fowle, nor filthy
 bands,

Nor noyous smell his purpose could with-
 hold,

(Entire affection hateth nicer hands)

But that with constant zele, and corage
 bold,

After long paines and labors manifold,

He found the meanes that prisoner up to
reare;
Whose feeble thighes, unable to uphold His pined corse, him scarce to light could
beare,
A ruefull spectacle of death and ghastly dreere.

XLI

His sad dull eies, deepe sunck in hollow pits,
Could not endure th' unwonted sunne to
view;
His bare thin cheekes for want of better bits,
And empty sides deceived of their dew,
Could make a stony hart his hap to rew;
His rawbone armes, whose mighty brawned bows Were wont to rive steele plates, and helmets hew,
Were elene consum'd, and all his vitall
powres
Decayd, and al his flesh shronk up like withered flowres.

XLII

Whome when his lady saw, to him she ran With hasty joy: to see him made her glad,
And sad to view his visage pale and wan, Who earst in flowres of freshest youth was
clad.
Tho, when her well of teares she wasted
had,
She said: 'Ah, dearest lord! what evill
starre
On you hath frownd, and poured his influence bad,
That of your selfe ye thus berobbed arre,
And this misseeming hew your manly looks doth marre ?

XLIII

'But welcome now, my lord, in wele or
woe,
Whose presence I have lackt too long a
day;
And fye on Fortune, mine avowed foe, Whose wrathful wreakes them selves doe now alay,
And for these wronges shall treble penaunce pay
Of treble good: good growes of evils priefe.' The chearelesse man, whom sorow did
dismay,

Had no delight to treaten of his grieffe;
His long endured famine needed more re-liefe.

XLIV

'Faire lady,' then said that victorious
knight,
'The things, that grievous were to doe, or
beare,
Them to renew, I wote, breeds no delight; Best musicke breeds dislike in loathing
eare:
But th' only good, that growes of passed
feare,
Is to be wise, and ware of like agein.
This daies ensample hath this lesson deare Deepe written in my heart with yrou pen,
That blisse may not abide in state of mortall men.

XLV

'Henceforth, sir knight, take to you wonted
strength,
And maister these mishaps with patient
might:
Loe wher your foe lies stretcht in monstrous
length,
And loe that wicked woman in your sight,
The roote of all your care and wretched
plight,
Now in your powre, to let her live, or die.'
'To doe her die,' quoth Una, 'were de-
spight,
And shame t' avenge so weake an enemy; But spoile her of her scarlot robe, and let her fly.'

XLVI

So, as she bad, that witch they disaraid,
And robd of roiall robes, and purple pall,
And ornaments that richly were displaid;
Ne spared they to strip her naked all.
Then, when they had despoyled her tire and
call,
Such as she was, their eies might her be-
hold,
That her misshaped parts did them appall,
A loathly, wrinkled hag, ill favoured, old, Whose secret filth good manners biddeth not be told.

XLVII

Her crafty head was altogether bald,
And, as in hate of honorable eld,

Was overgrowne with scurfe and filthy seald;
Her teeth out of her rotten gummes were
feld,

And her sowre breath abhominably smeld;
Her dried duggs, lyke bladders lacking wind, Hong downe, and filthy matter from them weld;

Her wrizled skin, as rough as maple rind, So scabby was, that would have loathd all womankind.

XLVIII

Her neather parts, the shame of all her
kind,
My chaster Muse for shame doth blush to write:

But at her rompe she growing had behind A foxes taile, with dong all fowly dight; And eke her feete most monstrous were in
sight;

For one of them was like an eagles claw,
With griping talaunts arind to greedy fight,
The other like a beares uneven paw:
More ugly shape yet never living creature
saw.

XLIX

Which when the knights beheld, amazd
they were,

And wondred at so fowle deformed wight.
'Such then,' said Una, 'as she seemeth here, Such is the face of Falshood, such the sight Of fowle Duessa, when her borrowed light Is laid away, and counterfesaunce knowne.' Thus when they had the witch disrobed
quight,

And all her filthy feature open showne, They let her goe at will, and wander waies unknowne.

L

Shee, flying fast from heavens hated face,
And from the world that her discovered
wide,

Fled to the wastfull wildernesse apace,
From living eies her open shame to hide,
And lurkt in rocks and caves, long unespide.

But that faire crew of knights, and Una
faire,
Did in that castle afterwards abide,
To rest them selves, and weary powres re-
paire;

Where store they fownd of al that dainty was and rare.

CANTO IX

His loves and lignage Arthure tells:
The knights knitt friendly bands:
Sir Trevisan flies from Despeyre, Whom Rederos Knight withatands.

I

O GOODLY golden chayne! wherewith yfere
The vertues linked are in lovely wize, And noble mindes of yore allyed were,
In brave poursuitt of chevalrous emprize,
That none did others safety despize, Nor aid envy to him, in need that stands,
But friendly each did others praise devise How to advance with favourable bands, As this good Prince redeemd the Red-crosse Knight from bands.

II

Who when their powres, erapayrd through labor long,
With dew repast they had recured well,
And that weake captive wight now wexed
strong,
Them list no lenger there at leasure dwell,
But forward fare, as their adventures fell:
But ere they parted, Una faire besonght That straunger knight his name and nation
tell;
Least so great good, as he for her had
wrought,
Should die unknown, and buried be in thankles thought.

III

'Faire virgin,' said the Prince, 'yee me require
A thing without the compas of my witt:
For both the lignage and the certein sire, From which I sprong, from mee are hidden yitt.

For all so soone as life did me admitt
Into this world, and shewed heavens light,
From mothers pap I taken was unfitt,
And streight deliver'd to a Fary knight, To be upbrought in gentle thewes and mar-tiall wight.

IV

'Unto old Timon he me brought bylive, Old Timon, who in youthly yeares hath
bene
In warlike feates th' expertest man alive,
And is the wisest now on earth I weene:
His dwelling is low in a valley greene,

Under the foot of Rauran mossy here,
From whence the river Dee, as silver cleene,
His tumbling billowes rolls with gentle rore:
There all my daies he traird mee up in vertuous lore.

‘Thether the great magicien Merlin came,
As was his use, oftentimes to visitt mee;
For he had charge my discipline to frame,
And tutors nouriture to oversee.
Him oft and oft I askt in privity, Of what loines and what lignage I did
spring.

Whose aunswere bad me still assured bee,
That I was sonne and heire unto a king, As time in her just term the truth to light should bring.’

VI

‘Well worthy impe,’ said then the lady gent, ‘And pupill fitt for such a tutors hand!
But what adventure, or what high intent, Hath brought you hether into Fary Land, Aread, Prince Arthure, crowne of martiall
band?’

‘Full hard it is,’ quoth he, ‘to read aright
The course of heavenly cause, or understand

The secret meaning of th’ Eternall Might, That rules mens waies, and rules the thoughts of living wight.

‘For whether He through fatal deepe foresight

Me hither sent, for cause to me unghest, Or that fresh bleeding wound, which day and night

Whilome doth rancle in my riven brest,
With forced fury following his behest, Me hether brought by wayes yet never
found,

You to have helpt I hold my selfe yet
blest.’

‘Ah! courteous knight,’ quoth she, ‘what secret wound

Could ever find to grieve the gentlest hart on ground?’

VIII

‘Deare dame,’ quoth he, ‘you sleeping sparkes awake,

Which, troubled once, into huge flames will grow,

Ne ever will their fervent fury slake,
Till living moysture into smoke do flow,
And wasted life doe lye in ashes low.
Yet sithens silence lesseneth not my fire, But, told, it flames, and, hidden, it does glow,

I will revele what ye so much desire:
Ah Love! lay down thy bow, the whiles I may respire.

IX

‘It was in freshest flowre of youthly
yeares,

When corage first does creepe in manly
chest;

Then first the cole of kindly heat appears,
To kindle love in every living brest:

But me had warnd old Timons wise behest, Those creeping flames by reason to subdew, Before their rage grew to so great unrest,
As miserable lovers use to rew,

Which still wex old in woe, whiles wo sti’ wexeth new.

X

‘That ydle name of love, and lovers life,
As losse of time, and vertues enemy,
I ever scornd, and joyd to stirre up strife
In midst of their mournfull tragedy, Ay wont to laugh, when them I heard to cry,
And blow the fire, which them to ashes
brent:

Their god himselfe, grievd at my libertie, Shott many a dart at me with fiers intent,
But I them warded all with wary government.

XI

‘But all in vaine: no fort can be so strong, Ne fleshly brest can armed be so sounnd,
But will at last be wonne with battrie long,
Or unawares at disadvantage fownd:

Nothing is sure that growes on earthly
grownd:

And who most trustes in arme of fleshly
might,

And boastes, in beauties chaine not to be
bownd,

Doth soonest fall in disaventrous fight,
And yeldes his caytive neck to victours most despight.

XII

‘Ensample make of him your haplesse joy,
And of my selfe now mated, as ye see;

Whose prouder vaunt that proud avenging
boy
Did soone pluck downe, and curbd my lib-ertee.

For on a day, prickt forth with jollitee
Of looser life, and heat of hardiment, Raunging the forest wide on courser free.
The fields, the floods, the heavens, with one consent,
Did seeme to laugh on me, and favour mine intent.

XIII

‘Forwearied with my sportes, I did alight From loftie steed, and downe to sleepe me
layd;
The verdant gras my couch did goodly
dight,
And pillow was my helmett fayre displayd: Whiles every sence the humour sweet embayd,
And slombring soft my hart did steale
away,
Me seemed, by my side a royall mayd Her daintie limbes full softly down did
lay:
So fayre a creature yet saw never sunny
day.

XIV

‘Most goodly glee and lovely blandishment She to me made, and badd me love her
deare;
For dearely sure her love was to me bent,
As, when just time expired, should appeare.
But whether dreames delude, or true it
were,
Was never hart so ravisht with delight.
Ne living man like wordes did ever heare,
As she to me delivered all that night;
And at her parting said, she Queene of Faries hight.

XV

‘When I awoke, and found her place de-voyd,
And nought but pressed gras where she had lyen,
I sorrowed all so much as earst I joyd,
And washed all her place with watry eyen.
From that day forth I lov’d that face divyne;
From that day forth I cast in carefull
mynd,
To seeke her out with labor and long tyne,

And never vow to rest, till her I fynd: Nyne monethes I seek in vain, yet ni’ll that vow unbynd.’

XVI

Thus as he spake, his visage wexed pale,
And change of hew great passion did be-
wray;
Yett still he strove to cloke his inward bale,
And hide the smoke that did his fire display;
Till gentle Una thus to him gan say:
‘O happy Queene of Faries, that hast
fownd,
Mongst many, one that with his prowesse
may Defend thine honour, and thy foes cou-
fownd!
True loves are often sown, but seldom grow on grownd.’

XVII

‘Thine, O then,’ said the gentle Rederosse
Knight,
‘Next to that ladies love, shalbe the place,
O fayrest virgin, full of heavenly light, Whose wondrous faith, exceeding earthly
race,
Was firmest fixt in myne extremest case.
And you, my lord, the patrone of my life,
Of that great Queene may well gaine worthie grace:
For onely worthie you through prowes
priefe, Yf living man mote worthie be, to be her liefe.’

XVIII

So diversly discoursing of their loves.
The golden sunne his glistring head gan
shew,
And sad remembraunce now the Prince amoves
With fresh desire his voyage to pursew:
Als Una earnd her travaill to renew.
Then those two knights, fast frendship for to bynd,
And love establish each to other trew, Gave goodly gifts, the signes of gratefull
mynd,
And eke, as pledges firme, right hands together joynd.

XIX

Prince Arthur gave a boxe of diamond sure, Embowd with gold and gorgeous ornament,

Wherein were closd few drops of liquor
 pure,
 Of wondrous worth, and vertue excellent,
 That any wound could heale incontinent:
 Which to requite, the Rederosse Knight him gave
 A booke, wherein his Saveours Testament Was writt with golden letters rich and
 brave;
 A worke of wondrous grace, and hable soules to save.

XX

Thus beene they parted, Arthur on his way To seeke his love, and th' other for to fight With Unaes foe, that all her realme did
 pray.
 But she, now weighing the decayed plight And shrunkn synewes of her chosen
 knight,
 Would not a while her forward course pur-
 sew, Ne bring him forth in face of dreadfull
 fight,
 Till he recovered had his former hew:
 For him to be yet weake and wearie well she knew.

XXI

So as they traveild, lo! they gan espy An armed knight towards them gallop
 fast,
 That seemed from some feared foe to fly,
 Or other griesly thing, that him aghast.
 Still as he fledd, his eye was backward
 cast,
 As if his feare still followed him behynd; Als flew his steed, as he his bandes had brast,
 And with his winged heeles did tread the
 wynd,
 As he had beene a fole of Pegasus his kynd.

XXII

Nigh as he drew, they might perceive his
 head
 To bee unarmed, and curld uncombed heares Upstaring stiffe, dismaid with uncouth
 dread;
 Nor drop of blood in all his face appeares, Nor life in limbe: and to increase his
 feares,
 In fowle reproch of knighthoodes fayre degree,
 About his neck an hempen rope he weares,

That with his glistring armes does ill agree;
 But he of rope, or armes, has now no memoree.

XXIII

The Rederosse Knight toward him crossed
 fast,
 To weet what mister wight was so dis-
 mayd: There him he findes all sencelesse and aghast,
 That of him selfe he seemd to be afraid;
 Whom hardly he from flying forward
 stayd,
 Till he these wordes to him deliver might:
 'Sir knight, aread who hath ye thus araid, And eke from whom make ye this hasty
 flight?
 For never knight I saw in such misseeming plight.'

XXIV

He answerd nought at all, but adding new Feare to his first amazment, staring wyde With stony eyes and hartlesse hollow hew, Astonisht stood, as one that had aspyde Infernall furies, with their chaines untyde.
 Him yett againe, and yett againe bespake The gentle knight; who nought to him re-
 plyde,
 But, trembling every joynt, did inly quake,
 And foltring tongue at last these words seemd forth to shake:

XXV

'For Gods deare love, sir knight, doe me not stay;
 For loe! he comes, he comes fast after mee!'
 Eft looking back, would faine have runne
 away;
 But he him forst to stay, and tellen free
 The secrete cause of his perplexitie:
 Yet nathe more by his bold hartie speach Could his blood frozen hart emboldened
 bee,
 But through his boldnes rather feare did
 reach;
 Yett, forst, at last he made through silence suddein breach.

XXVI

'And am I now in safetie sure,' quoth he,
 'From him that would have forced me to
 dye ?

And is the point of death now turnd fro mee,
That I may tell this haplesse history?'
'Feare nought,' quoth he, 'no daunger now is nye.'
'Then shall I you recount a ruefull cace,' Said he, 'the which with this unlucky eye
I late beheld; and had not greater grace Me reft from it, had bene partaker of the place.

XXVII

'I lately chaunst (would I had never chaunst!)
With a fayre knight to keepen compance, Sir Terwin hight, that well himselfe advaunst
In all affayres, and was both bold and free,
But not so happy as mote happy bee:
He lov'd, as was his lot, a lady gent,
That him againe lov'd in the least degree:
For she was proud, and of too high intent, And joyd to see her lover languish and lament.

XXVIII

'From whom retourning sad and comfort-
lesse,
As on the way together we did fare, We met that villen, (God from him me blesse!)
That cursed wight, from whom I scapt
whyleare,
A man of hell, that calls himselfe Despayre:
Who first us greets, and after fayre areedes Of tydinges straunge, and of adventures
rare:
So creeping close, as snake in hidden weedes, Inquireth of our states, and of our knightly
deedes.

XXIX

'Which when he knew, and felt our feeble
harts Embost with bale, and bitter byting grieffe, Which love had launched with his deadly darts,
With wounding words, and termes of foule reprieffe,
He pluckt from us all hope of dew relieffe,
That earst us held in love of lingring life:
Then hopelesse hartlesse, gan the cunning thiefe
Perswade us dye, to stint all further strife:
To me he lent this rope, to him a rusty knife.

XXX

'With which sad instrument of hasty death,
That wofull lover, loathing lenger light,
A wyde way made to let forth living breath.
But I, more fearefull or more lucky wight, Dismayd with that deformed dismall sight, Fledd fast away, halfe dead with dying
feare;
Ne yet assur'd of life by you, sir knight, Whose like infirmity like chaunce may
beare:
But God you never let his charmed speaches
heare.'

XXXI

'How may a man,' said he, 'with idle speach Be wonne to spoyle the castle of his health?'
'I wote,' quoth he, 'whom tryall late did
teach,
That like would not for all this worldes wealth:
His subtile tong, like dropping honny, mealt'h
Into the heart, and searcheth every vaine,
That ere one be aware, by secret stealth His powre is reft, and weaknes doth re-
maine.
O never, sir, desire to try his guilefull traine.'

XXXII

'Certes,' sayd he, 'hence shall I never rest, Till I that treachours art have heard and tryde;
And you, sir knight, whose name mote I request,
Of grace do me unto his cabin guyde.'
'I that hight Trevisan,' quoth he, 'will
ryde
Against my liking backe, to doe you grace:
But nor for gold nor glee will I abyde
By you, when ye arrive in that same place; For lever had I die, then see his deadly face.'

XXXIII

Ere long they come, where that same wicked
wight
His dwelling has, low in an hollow cave, Far underneath a craggy clift ypight, Darke, dolefull, dreary, like a greedy grave,
That still for carrion carcases doth crave:
On top whereof ay dwelt the ghastly owle, Shrieking his balefull note, which ever drave

Far from that haunt all other chearefull fowle;
And all about it wandring ghostes did wayle and howle.

XXXIV

And all about old stockes and stubs of trees, Whereon nor fruite nor leafe was ever
seene,
Did hang upon the ragged rocky knees;
On which had many wretches hanged
beene,
Whose carcasses were scattred on the
greene,
And throwne about the cliffs. Arrived there, That bare-head knight, for dread and dolefull teene,
Would faine have fled, ne durst approchen
neare,
But th' other forst him staye, and comforted in feare.

XXXV

That darke some cave they enter, where they
find
That cursed man, low sitting on the ground, Musing full sadly in his sullen mind:
His griesie lockes, long growen and un-
bound,
Disordred hong about his shoulders round,
And hid his face; through which his hollow eyne Lookt deadly dull, and stared as astound;
His raw-bone cheekes, through penurie and pine,
Were shronke into his jawes, as he did never dyne.

XXXVI

His garment nought but many ragged elouts,
With thornes together pind and patched
was,
The which his naked sides he wrapt abouts;
And him beside there lay upon the gras
A dreary corse, whose life away did pas,
All wallowd in his own yet luke-warme blood,
That from his wound yet welled fresh, alas!
In which a rusty knife fast fixed stood,
And made an open passage for the gushing flood.

XXXVII

Which piteous spectacle, approving trew
The wofull tale that Trevisan had told,

When as the gentle Redcrosse Knight did
vew,
With fire zeale he burnt in courage bold,
Him to avenge, before his blood were cold;
And to the vellein sayd: 'Thou damned
wight,
The authour of this fact we here behold, What justice can but judge against thee
right,
With thine owne blood to price his blood, here shed in sight?'

XXXVIII

'What franticke fit,' quoth he, 'hath thus distraught
Thee, foolish man, so rash a doome to give?
What justice ever other judgement taught, But he should dye, who merites not to
live?
None els to death this raan despayring
drive,
But his owne guiltie mind deserving death.
Is then unjust to each his dew to give?
Or let him dye, that loatheth living breath?
Or let him die at ease, that liveth here uneath?'

XXXIX

'Who travailes by the wearie wandring
way,
To come unto his wished home in haste,
And meetes a flood, that doth his passage
stay,
Is not great grace to helpe him over past, Or free his feet, that in the myre sticke
fast?
Most envious man, that grieves at neighbours good,
And fond, that joyest in the woe thou hast!
Why wilt not let him passe, that long hath
stood Upon the bancke, yet wilt thy selfe not pas the flood?'

XL

'He there does now enjoy eternall rest And happy ease, which thou doest want and crave,
And further from it daily wanderest:
What if some little payne the passage have,
That makes frayle flesh to feare the bitter wave?
Is not short payne well borne, that brings long ease,
And layes the soule to sleepe in quiet grave?'

Sleepe after toyle, port after stormie seas, Ease after warre, death after life does greatly please.'

XLI

The knight much wondred at his suddaine
wit,

And said: 'The terme of life is limited,

Ne may a man prolong, nor shorten it:

The souldier may not move from watchfull
sted,

Nor leave his stand, untill his captaine bed.'

'Who life did limit by almightie doome,' Quoth he, 'knowes best the termes established;

And he that points the centonell his roome,

Doth license him depart at sound of morning droom.

XLII

'Is not His deed, what ever thing is donne In heaven and earth? Did not He all create,

To die againe? All ends, that was begonne.

Their times in His eternall booke of fate

Are written sure, and have their certain date.

Who then can strive with strong necessitie,

That holds the world in his still chaunging
state,

Or shunne the death ordaynd by destinie?

When houre of death is come, let none aske whence, nor why.

XLIII

'The lenger life, I wote, the greater sin,

The greater sin, the greater punishment:

All those great battels, which thou boasts to win,

Through strife, and blood-shed, and avenge-
ment,

Now praysd, hereafter deare thou shalt repent:

For life must live, and blood must blood repay.

Is not enough thy evill life forespent?

For he that once hath missed the right way,

The further he doth goe, the further he doth stray.

XLIV

'Then doe no further goe, no further stray,

But here ly downe, and to thy rest betake,

Th' ill to prevent, that life ensewen may.

For what hath life, that may it loved make,
And gives not rather cause it to forsake?

Feare, sicknesse, age, losse, labour, sorrow,
strife,

Payne, hunger, cold, that makes the hart to
quake;

And ever fickle Fortune rageth rife;

All which, and thousands mo, do make a loathsome life.

XLV

'Thou, wretched man, of death hast greatest need,

If in true ballaunce thou wilt weigh thy state:

For never knight, that dared warlike deed,

More luckless dissaventures did amate:

Witnes the dungeon deepe, wherein of late

Thy life shutt up for death so oft did call;

And though good lucke prolonged hath thy date,

Yet death then would the like mishaps forestall,

Into the which heerafter thou maist happen
fall.

XLVI

'Why then dost thou, O man of sin, desire

To draw thy dayes forth to their last degree?

Is not the measure of thy sinfull hire

High heaped up with huge iniquitec,

Against the day of wrath, to burden thee?

Is not enough, that to this lady mild

Thou falsed hast thy faith with perjuree,

And sold thy selfe to serve Duessa vild,

With whom in al abuse thou hast thy selfe defild?

XLVII

'Is not He just, that all this doth behold

From highest heven, and beares an equal
eie?

Shall He thy sins up in His knowledge fold,

And guilty be of thine impietie?

Is not His lawe, Let every sinner die:

Die shall all flesh? What then must needs be donne,

Is it not better to doe willinglie,

Then linger till the glas be all out ronne?

Death is the end of woes: die soone, O Faries some.'

XLVIII

The knight was much enmoved with his speech,

That as a swords poynt through his hart
did perse,

And in his conscience made a secrete breach,
Well knowing trew all that he did re-
herse;

And to his fresh remembraunce did reverse
The ugly vew of his deformed crimes,
That all his manly powres it did disperse,
As he were charmed with inchaunted rimes, That oftentimes he quakt, and fainted oftentimes.

XLIX

In which amazement when the miscreant Perceived him to waver, weake and fraile, Whiles trembling horror did his conscience
daunt,

And hellish anguish did his soule assaile, To drive him to despaire, and quite to quaile,

Hee shewd him, painted in a table plaine,
The damned ghosts, that doe in torments waile,

And thousand feends, that doe them endlesse paine

With fire and brimstone, which for ever shall remaine.

The sight whereof so throughly him dis-
maid,

That nought but death before his eies he
saw,

And ever burning wrath before him laid,
By righteous sentence of th' Almighties
law:

Then gan the villen him to overcraw,
And brought unto him swords, ropes, poison,
fire,

And all that might him to perdition draw;
And bad him choose, what death he would
desire:

For death was dew to him, that had pro-vokt Gods ire.

LI

But whenas none of them he saw him take,
He to him raught a dagger sharpe and
keene,

And gave it him in hand: his hand did
quake,

And tremble like a leafe of aspin greene,
And troubled blood through his pale face was seene

To come and goe, with tidings from the heart,

As it a ronning messenger had beene.
At last, resolv'd to worke his finall smart, He lifted up his hand, that backe againe did start.

LII

Which whenas Una saw, through every vaine

The crudled cold ran to her well of life,
As in a swowne: but soone reliv'd againe, Out of his hand she snatcht the cursed
knife,

And threw it to the ground, enraged rife,
And to him said: 'Fie, fie, faint hearted
knight!

What meanest thou by this reprochfull
strife?

Is this the battaile, which thou vaunst to
fight

With that fire-mouthed dragon, horrible and bright?

LIII

'Come, come away, fraile, feeble, fleshly
wight,

Ne let vaine words bewitch thy manly
hart,

Ne divelish thoughts dismay thy constant
spright.

In heavenly mercies hast thou not a part?
Why shouldst thou then despeire, that chosen art?

Where justice growes, there grows eke greter grace,

The which doth quench the brond of hellish
smart,

And that accurst hand-writing doth deface.
Arise, sir knight, arise, and leave this cursed place.'

LIV

So up he rose, and thence amounte streight.
Which when the carle beheld, and saw his guest

Would safe depart, for all his subtile sleight,

He chose an halter from among the rest,
And with it bong him selfe, unbid unblest.

But death he could not worke himselfe
thereby;

For thousand times he so him selfe had
drest,

Yet nathelesse it could not doe him die, Till he should die his last, that is, eternally.

CANTO X

Her faithfull knight faire Una brings To House of Holinesse, Where he is taught repentaunce, and The way to heavenly blesse.

I

WHAT man is he, that boasts of fleshly
might,
And vaine assuraunce of mortality, Which, all so soone as it doth come to
fight

Against spirituall foes, yields by and by,
Or from the field most cowardly doth
fly ?

Ne let the man ascribe it to his skill,
That thorough grace hath gained victory.
If any strength we have, it is to ill, But all the good is Gods, both power and eke will.

II

By that which lately hapned, Una saw That this her knight was feeble, and too
faint ;
And all his sinewes woxen weake and
raw,

Through long enprisonment, and hard constraint,

Which he endured in his late restraint,
That yet he was unfitt for bloody fight:
Therefore to cherish him with diets daint, She cast to bring him, where he chearen
might,

Till he recovered had his late decayed
plight.

III

There was an auncient house not far away, Renownd throughout the world for sacred lore

And pure unspotted life: so well, they say,
It governd was, and guided evermore, Through wisdom of a matrone grave and hore;

Whose onely joy was to relieve the needes Of wretched soules, and helpe the helpe-lesse pore:

All night she spent in bidding of her bedes,
And all the day in doing good and godly deedes.

IV

Dame Cælia men did her call, as thought From heaven to come, or thether to arise;

The mother of three daughters, well up-
brought

In goodly thewes, and godly exercise:
The eldest two, most sober, chaste, and wise, Fidelia and Speranza, virgins were, Though spoused, yet wanting wedlocks solemnize;

But faire Charissa to a lovely fere Was linked, and by him had many pledges dere.

V

Arrived there, the dore they find fast lockt;

For it was warely watched night and day, For feare of many foes: but when they knoekt,

The porter opened unto them streight way.
He was an aged syre, all hory gray, With lookes full lowly cast, and gate full
slow,

Wont on a staffe his feeble steps to stay, Hight Humiltá. They passe in, stouping
low;

For streight and narrow was the way which he did shew.

VI

Each goodly thing is hardest to begin;
But entred in, a spatious court they see, Both plaine and pleasaunt to be walked in, Where them does meete a francklin faire and free,

And entertaines with comely courteous
glee:

His name was Zele, that him right well became;

For in his speaches and behaveour hee Did labour lively to expresse the same,
And gladly did them guide, till to the hall they came.

VII

There fayrely them receives a gentle squyre,
Of myld demeanure and rare courtesee,
Right cleanly clad in comely sad attyre;
In word and deede that shewd great mod-estee,

And knew his good to all of each degree; Hight Reverence. He them with speaches meet

Does faire entreat; no courting nicetee,
But simple trew, and eke unfained sweet,
As might become a squyre so great persons to greet.

VIII

And afterwarde them to his dame he leades,
 That aged dame, the lady of the place:
 Who all this while was busy at her beades:
 Which doen, she up arose with seemely
 grace,
 And toward them full matronely did pace.
 Where when that fairest Una she beheld, Whom well she knew to spring from heavenly race,
 Her heart with joy unwonted inly sweld, As feeling wondrous comfort in her weaker eld:

IX

And her embracing, said: 'O happy earth, Whereon thy innocent feet doe ever tread, Most vertuous virgin, borne of heavenly berth,
 That to redeeme thy woefull parents head
 From tyrans rage, and ever-dying dread, Hast wandred through the world now long a day,
 Yett ceasest not thy weary soles to lead!
 What grace hath thee now hether brought this way?
 Or doen thy feeble feet unweeting hether stray?

'Straunge thing it is an errant knight to see Here in this place, or any other wight, That hether turnes his steps: so few there
 bee,
 That chose the narrow path, or seeke the
 right:
 All keepe the broad high way, and take de-
 light
 With many rather for to goe astray,
 And be partakers of their evill plight,
 Then with a few to walke the rightest way.
 O foolish men! why hast ye to your owne
 decay?'

XI

'Thy selfe to see, and tyred limbes to rest, O matrone sage,' quoth she, 'I hether
 came,
 And this good knight his way with me ad-
 drest,
 Ledd with thy prayses and broad-blazed
 fame,
 That up to heaven is blowne.' The auncient
 dame

Him goodly greeted in her modest guyse, And enterteynd them both, as best became,
 With all the court'sies that she could de-vyse, Ne wanted ought, to shew her bounteous or wise.

XII

Thus as they gan of sondrie thinges devise,
 Loe! two most goodly virgins came in place, Ylinked arme in arme in lovely wise;
 With countenance demure, and modest
 grace,
 They numbred even steps and equall pace:
 Of which the eldest, that Fidelia hight, Like sunny beames threw from her christall
 face,
 That could have dazd the rash beholders
 sight,
 And round about her head did shine like hevens light.

XIII

She was araied all in lilly white,
 And in her right hand bore a cup of gold,
 With wine and water fild up to the hight,
 In which a serpent did himselfe enfold,
 That horroure made to all that did behold;
 But she no whitt did chaunge her constant
 mood:

And in her other hand she fast did hold A booke that was both signd and seald with
 blood,
 Wherin darke things were writt, hard to be understood.

XIV

Her younger sister, that Speranza hight, Was clad in blew, that her beseemed well:
 Not all so chearefull seemed she of sight,
 As was her sister; whether dread did dwell,
 Or anguish, in her hart, is hard to tell:
 Upon her arme a silver anchor lay, Whereon she leaned ever, as befell:
 And ever up to heaven, as she did pray, Her stedfast eyes were bent, ne swarved other way.

XV

They, seeing Una, towards her gan wend,
 Who them encounters with like courtesee; Many kind speeches they betweene them
 spend,
 And greatly joy each other well to see:
 Then to the knight with shamefast modestie

They turne themselves, at Unaes meeke request,
 And him salute with well beseeming glee;
 Who faire them quites, as him beseemed best,
 And goodly gan discourse of many a noble gest.

XVI

Then Una thus: 'But she your sister deare, The deare Charissa, where is she become?
 Or wants she health, or busie is elswhere?'
 'Ah no,' said they, 'but forth she may not come:

For she of late is lightned of her wombe,
 And hath encreast the world with one some more,

That her to see should be but troublesome.'
 'Indeed,' quoth she, 'that should her trouble sore;

But thank't be God, and her encrease so evermore.'

XVII

Then saide the aged Cœlia: 'Deare dame,
 And you, good sir, I wote that of youre toyle

And labors long, through which ye hether came,

Ye both forweard be: therefore a whyle
 I read you rest, and to your bowres re-coyle.'

Then called she a groome, that forth him ledd

Into a goodly lodge, and gan despoile Of puissant armes, and laid in easie bedd:
 His name was meeke Obedience rightfully aredd.

XVIII

Now when their wearie limbes with kindly rest,

And bodies were fresht with dew repast, Fayre Una gan Fidelia fayre request,

To have her knight into her schoolehous plaste,

That of her heavenly learning he might taste,

And heare the wisdom of her wordes di-vine.

She graunted, and that knight so much agraste,

That she him taught eelestiall discipline,
 And opened his dull eyes, that light mote in them shine.

XIX

And that her sacred Booke, with blood ywritt,

That none could reade, exept she did them
 teach,

She unto him disclosed every whitt,
 And heavenly documents thereout did preach,

 That weaker witt of man could never reach,

Of God, of grace, of justice, of free will,
 That wonder was to heare her goodly

speech:
 For she was hable with her wordes to kill,

And rayse againe to life the hart that she did thrill.

XX

And when she list poure out her larger
 spright,

She would commaund the hasty sunne to
 stay,

Or backward turne his course from hevens
 hight:

Sometimes great hostes of men she could
 dismay;

Dry-shod to passe, she parts the fouds in tway;

And eke huge mountaines from their native
 seat

She would commaund, themselves to beare
 away,

And throw in raging sea with roaring threat: Almighty God her gave such powre and puissaunce great.

XXI

The faithfull knight now grew in litle
 space,

By hearing her, and by her sisters lore,
 To such perfection of all hevny grace,

That wretched world he gan for to abhore,
 And mortall life gan loath, as thing forlore,

Greevd with remembrance of his wiked
 wayes,

And prickt with anguish of his sinnes so
 sore,

That he desirde to end his wretched dayes:
 So much the dart of sinfull guilt the soule dismayes.

XXII

But wise Speranza gave him comfort sweet,
 And taught him how to take assured hold

Upon her silver anchor, as was meet;
 Els had his sinnes so great and manifold

Made him forget all that Fidelia told.
 In this distressed doubtfull agony,
 When him his dearest Una did behold, Disdeining life, desiring leave to dye,
 She found her selfe assayld with great perplexity:

XXIII

And came to Cœlia to declare her smart;
 Who, well acquainted with that commune
 plight,
 Which sinfull horror workes in wounded
 hart,
 Her wisely comforted all that she might,
 With goodly counsell and advisement right;
 And streightway sent with carefull diligence,
 To fetch a leach, the which had great insight
 In that disease of grieved conscience, And well could cure the same: his name was Patience.

XXIV

Who, comming to that sowle-diseased
 knight,
 Could hardly him intreat to tell his grief:
 Which knowne, and all that noyd his heavie
 spright
 Well searcht, eftsoones he gan apply relief Of salves and med'cines, which had passing
 prief,
 And there to added wordes of wondrous
 might:
 By which to ease he him recured brief,
 And much aswag'd the passion of his plight, That he his paine endure'd, as seeming now more light.

XXV

But yet the cause and root of all his ill, Inward corruption and infected sin,
 Not purg'd nor heald, behind remained still,
 And festring sore did ranckle yett within, Close creeping twixt the marow and the skin.
 Which to extirpe, he laid him privily Downe in a darksome lowly place far in,
 Whereas he meant his corrosives to apply,
 And with streight diet tame his stubborne malady.

XXVI

In ashes and sackcloth he did array His daintie corse, proud humors to abate,

And dieted with fasting every day,
 The swelling of his woundes to mitigate,
 And made him pray both earely and eke
 late:

And ever as superfluous flesh did rott,
 Amendment readie still at hand did wayt,
 To pluck it out with pincers fyrie whott, That soone in him was lefte no one corrupted jott.

XXVII

And bitter Penance, with an yron whip, Was wont him once to disple every day:
 And sharpe Remorse his hart did prick and nip,
 That drops of blood thence like a well did
 play:
 And sad Repentance used to embay
 His body in salt water smarting sore,
 The filthy blottes of sin to wash away.
 So in short space they did to health restore The man that would not live, but erst lay at deathes dore.

XXVIII

In which his torment often was so great,
 That like a lyon he would cry and rore,
 And rend his flesh, and his owne synewes
 eat.
 His owne deare Una, hearing evermore His ruefull shriekes and gronings, often tore Her guiltlesse garments and her golden
 heare,
 For pittie of his payne and anguish sore;
 Yett all with patience wisely she did beare;
 For well she wist, his cryme could els be never cleare.

XXIX

Whom, thus recover'd by wise Patience And trew Repentaunce, they to Una
 brought;
 Who, joyous of his cured conscience,
 Him dearely kist, and fayrely eke besought Himselfe to chearish, and consuming
 thought
 To put away out of his carefull brest.
 By this Charissa, late in child-bed brought,
 Was woxen strong, and left her fruitfull nest;
 To her fayre Una brought this unacquainted guest.

XXX

She was a woman in her freshest age,
Of wondrous beauty, and of bounty rare,
With goodly grace and comely personage,
That was on earth not easie to compare;
Full of great love, but Cupids wanton snare As hell she hated, chaste in worke and will;
Her necke and breasts were ever open bare,
That ay thereof her babes might sucke their
fill:

The rest was all in yellow robes arrayed still.

XXXI

A multitude of babes about her hong, Playing their sportes, that joyd her to be-
hold;

Whom still she fed, whiles they were weak and young,

But thrust them forth still, as they waxed old:

And on her head she wore a tyre of gold, Adorn'd with gemmes and owches wondrous fayre,

Whose passing price unneath was to be told;
And by her syde there sate a gentle payre Of turtle doves, she sitting in an yvory chayre.

XXXII

The knight and Una, entring, fayre her greet,

And bid her joy of that her happy brood;
Who them requites with court'sies seeming
meet,

And entertaynes with friendly chearefull
mood.

Then Una her besought, to be so good As in her vertuous rules to schoole her
knight,

Now after all his torment well withstood, In that sad house of Penance, where his
spright

Had past the paines of hell and long enduring night.

XXXIII

She was right joyious of her just request,
And taking by the hand that Faeries some,
Gan him instruct in everie good behest, Of love, and righteousness, and well to dome,

And wrath and hatred warely to shonne, That drew on men Gods hatred and his
wrath,

And many soules in dolours had fordonne:

In which when him she well instructed hath,

From thence to heaven she teacheth him the ready path.

XXXIV

Wherein his weaker wandring steps to
guyde,

An auncient matrone she to her does call, Whose sober lookes her wisdome well
descryde:

Her name was Mercy, well knowne over all To be both gracious and eke liberall:

To whom the carefull charge of him she gave,

To leade aright, that he should never fall In all his waies through this wide worldes
wave,

That Mercy in the end his righteous soule might save.

XXXV

The godly matrone by the hand him beares Forth from her presence, by a narrow way, Scattered with bushy thornes and ragged breares,

Which still before him she remov'd away,
That nothing might his ready passage stay:
And ever when his feet encombr'd were,

Or gan to shrinke, or from the right to
stray,

She held him fast, and firmly did upbeare, As carefull nurse her child from falling oft does reare.

XXXVI

Eftsoones unto an holy hospitall, That was foreby the way, she did him
bring,

In which seven bead-men, that had vowed
all

Their life to service of high heavens King, Did spend their daies in doing godly thing:
Their gates to all were open evermore,
That by the wearie way were travailing,
And one sate wayting ever them before,
To call in commers by, that needy were and pore.

XXXVII

The first of them, that eldest was and best,
Of all the house had charge and governe-
ment,

As guardian and steward of the rest:

His office was to give entertainment

And lodging unto all that came and went:
Not unto such, as could him feast againe,
And double quite for that he on them straine,
But such as want of harbour did constraîne: Those for Gods sake his dewty was to entertaine.

XXXVIII

The second was as almner of the place:
His office was, the hungry for to feed,
And thristy give to drinke, a worke of grace:
He feard not once him selfe to be in need, Ne car'd to hoord for those whom he did
breede:

The grace of God he layd up still in store,
Which as a stocke he left unto his seede;
He had enough; what need him care for
more?

And had he lesse, yet some he would give to the pore.

XXXIX

The third had of their wardrobe custody, In which were not rich tyres, nor garments
gay,

The plumes of pride, and winges of vanity,
But clothes meet to keepe keene cold away,
And naked nature seemely to aray;
With which bare wretched wights he dayly
clad,

The images of God in earthly clay;
And if that no spare clothes to give he had,
His owne cote he would cut, and it distribute glad.

XL

The fourth appointed by his office was,
Poore prisoners to relieve with gracious ayd,
And captives to redeeme with price of bras, From Turkes and Sarazins, which them had
stayd;

And though they faulty were, yet well he wayd,

That God to us forgiveth every howe Much more then that, why they in bands were layd,

And He, that harrowd hell with heavie
stowre,

The faulty soules from thence brought to his heavenly bowre.

XLI

The fift had charge sick persons to attend, And comfort those, in point of death which
lay;

For them most needeth comfort in the end, When sin, and hell, and death doe most
dismay

The feeble soule departing hence away.

All is but lost, that living we bestow,
If not well ended at our dying day.

O man, have mind of that last bitter throw;
For as the tree does fall, so lyes it ever low.

XLII

The sixt had charge of them now being
dead,

In seemely sort their corses to engrave, And deek with dainty flowres their brydall
bed,

That to their heavenly spouse both sweet and brave

They might appeare, when he their soules shall save.

The wondrous workmanship of Gods owne
mould,

Whose face He made, all beastes to feare, and gave

All in his hand, even dead we honour should.
Ah! dearest God me graunt, I dead be not defould.

XLIII

The seventh, now after death and buriall done,

Had charge the tender orphans of the dead And widowes ayd, least they should be undone:

In face of judgement he their right would plead,

Ne ought the powre of mighty men did
dread

In their defence, nor would for gold or fee Be wonne their rightfull causes downe to
tread:

And when they stood in most necessitee, He did supply their want, and gave them ever free.

XLIV

There when the Elfin knight arrived was,
The first and chiefest of the seven, whose
care

Was guests to welcome, towards him did
pas:

Where seeing Mercie, that his steps upbare
And alwaies led, to her with reverence rare
He humbly louted in meeke lowlinesse,
And seemely welcome for her did prepare:

For of their order she was patronesse, Albe Charissa were their chiefest foundeesse.

XLV

There she awhile him stayes, him selfe to
rest,
That to the rest more hable he might bee:
During which time, in every good behest And godly worke of almes and charitee Shee him instructed with great industree: Shortly therein so perfect he became,
That, from the first unto the last degree,
His mortall life he learned bad to frame In holy righteousnesse, without rebuke or blame.

XLVI

Thence forward by that painfull way they
pas,
Forth to an hill, that was both steepe and
hy;
On top whereof a sacred chappell was,
And eke a litle hermitage thereby,
Wherein an aged holy man did lie,
That day and night said his devotion, Ne other worldly busines did apply:
His name was Heavenly Contemplation;
Of God and goodnes was his meditation.

XLVII

Great grace that old man to him given had;
For God he often saw from heavens light, All were his earthly eien both blunt and bad,
And through great age had lost their kindly
sight,
Yet wondrous quick and persaunt was his
spright,
As eagles eie, that can behold the sunne.
That hill they scale with all their powre and might,
That his fraile thighes, nigh weary and for-
donne,
Gan faile; but by her helpe the top at last he wonne.

XLVIII

There they doe finde that godly aged sire, With snowy lockes adowne his shoulders
shed,
As hoary frost with spangles doth attire
The mossy branches of an oke halfe ded.
Each bone might through his body well be
red,

And every sinew seene, through his long
fast:

For nought he car'd his carcas long unfed;
His mind was full of spirituall repast, And pyn'd his flesh, to keepe his body low and chast.

XLIX

Who, when these two approaching he aspide,
At their first presence grew agrieved sore, That first him lay his hevenly thoughts aside;
And had he not that dame respected more,
Whom highly he did reverence and adore, He would not once have moved for the
knight.
They him saluted, standing far afore;
Who, well them greeting, humbly did re-
quight,
And asked, to what end they clomb that tedious hight.

L

'What end,' quoth she, 'should cause us take such paine,
But that same end, which every living
wight
Should make his marke, high heaven to attaine?
Is not from hence the way, that leadeth
right
To that most glorious house, that glistreth
bright
With burning starres and everliving fire, Whereof the keies are to thy hand behight By wise Fidelia? Shee doth thee require, To shew it to this knight, according his desire.'

LI

'Thrise happy man,' said then the father
grave,
'Whose staggering steps thy steady hand doth lead,
And shewes the way, his sinfull soule to save!
Who better can the way to heaven aread Then thou thy selfe, that was both borne and bred
In hevenly throne, where thousand angels shine?
Thou doest the praiers of the righteous sead Present before the Majesty Divine, And His avenging wrath to clemency incline.

LII

'Yet, since thou bidst, thy pleasure shalbe
donne.

Then come, thou man of earth, and see the
way,

That never yet was seene of Faries sonne,
That never leads the traueiler astray,
But, after labors long and sad delay, Brings them to joyous rest and endlesse
blis.

But first thou must a season fast and pray, Till from her bands the spright assoiled is,
And have her strength recur'd from fraile infirmities.'

LIII

That done, he leads him to the highest mount;

Such one, as that same mighty man of God,
That blood-red billowes like a walled front
On either side disparted with his rod, Till that his army dry-foot through them yod,

Dwelt forty daies upon; where writt in stone

With bloody letters by the hand of God, The bitter doome of death and balefull
none

He did receive, whiles flashing fire about him shone.

LIV

Or like that sacred hill, whose head full
hie,

Adorn'd with fruitfull olives all arownd,
Is, as it were for endlesse memory Of that deare Lord, who oft thereon was
fownd,

For ever with a flowring girlond crownd:
Or like that pleasaunt mount, that is for ay Through famous poets verse each where renownd,

On which the thrise three learned ladies
play

Their hevenly notes, and make full many a lovely lay.

LV

From thence, far off he unto him did shew
A litle path, that was both steepe and long,
Which to a goodly citty led his vew; Whose wals and towres were builded high and strong

Of perle and precious stone, that earthly tong

Cannot describe, nor wit of man can tell;
Too high a ditty for my simple song:
The City of the Greate King hight it well, Wherein eternall peace and happinesse doth dwell.

LVI

As he thereon stood gazing, he might see
The blessed angels to and fro descend From highest heven, in gladsome companee,
And with great joy into that citty wend,
As commonly as frend does with his frend.
Whereat he wondred much, and gan en-quere,

What stately building durst so high extend Her lofty towres unto the starry sphere, And what unknown nation there empeopled
were.

LVII

'Faire knight,' quoth he, 'Hierusalem that
is,

The New Hierusalem, that God has built For those to dwell in, that are chosen his,
His chosen people purg'd from sinful guilt, With pretious blood, which cruelly was spilt

On cursed tree, of that unspotted Lam,
That for the sinnes of al the world was kilt:
Now are they saints all in that citty sam,
More dear unto their God, then younglings to their dam.'

LVIII

'Till now,' said then the knight, 'I weened
well,

That great Cleopolis, where I have beene, In which that fairest Fary Queene doth
dwell,

The fairest citty was, that might be seene;
And that bright towre all built of christall elene,

Panthea, seemd the brightest thing that
was:

But now by prooffe all otherwise I weene;
For this great citty that does far surpas,
And this bright angels towre quite dims that towre of glas.'

LIX

'Most trew,' then said the holy aged man;
'Yet is Cleopolis, for earthly frame,
The fairest peece that eie beholden can:
And well beseemes all knights of noble
name,

That covett in th' immortall booke of fame
To be eternized, that same to haunt, And doen their service to that soveraigne
dame,

That glory does to them for guerdon graunt:
For she is hevenly borne, and heaven may justly vaunt.

LX

'And thou, faire ymp, sprong out from English race,

How ever now accompted Elfins sonne,
Well worthy doest thy service for her grace,
To aide a virgin desolate foredonne.

But when thou famous victory hast wonne, And high amongst all knights hast long thy
shield,

Thenceforth the suitt of earthly conquest
shonne,

And wash thy hands from guilt of bloody
field:

For blood can nought but sin, and wars but sorrows yield.

LXI

'Then seek this path, that I to thee presage, Which after all to heaven shall thee send;

Then peaceably thy painefull pilgrimage
To yonder same Hiernsalem doe bend,

Where is for thee ordaind a blessed end:
For thou, amongst those saints whom thou doest see,

Shalt be a saint, and thine owne nations
frend

And patrone: thou Saint George shalt called bee,

Saint George of mery England, the signe of victoree.'

LXII

'Unworthy wretch,' quoth he, 'of so great
grace,

How dare I thinke such glory to attaine?'
'These, that have it attaynd, were in like cace,'

Quoth he, 'as wretched, and liv'd in like
paine.'

'But deeds of armes must I at last be faine And ladies love to leave, so dearely bought?'

'What need of armes, where peace doth ay remaine,'

Said he, 'and battailes none are to be fought?'

As for loose loves, they' are vaine, and vanish into nought.'

LXIII

'O let me not,' quoth he, 'then turne againe Backe to the world, whose joyes so fruitlesse
are,

But let me heare for aie in peace remaine, Or streight way on that last long voiage
fare,

That nothing may my present hope empare.'
'That may not be,' said he, 'ne maist thou
yitt

Forgoe that royal maides bequeathed care,
Who did her cause into thy hand committ,

Till from her cursed foe thou have her freely quitt.'

LXIV

'Then shall I soone,' quoth he, 'so God me
grace,

Abett that virgins cause disconsolate,
And shortly back returne unto this place,

To walke this way in pilgrims poore estate.
But now aread, old father, why of late

Didst thou behight me borne of English
blood,

Whom all a Faeries sonne doen nominate?'
'That word shall I,' said he, 'avouchen
good,

Sith to thee is unknowne the cradle of thy brood.

LXV

'For well I wote, thou springst from ancient race

Of Saxon kinges, that have with mightie
hand

And many bloody battailes fought in place High reard their royall throue in Britane
land,

And vanquisht them, unable to withstand:
From thence a Faery thee unweeting reft,

There as thou slepst in tender swadling
band,

And her base Elfin brood there for thee
left:

Such men do chaungelings call, so chaungd by Faeries theft.

LXVI

'Thence she thee brought into this Faery
lond,

And in an heaped furrow did thee hyde;
Where thee a ploughman all unweeting fond,

As he his toylesome teme that way did gyde,

And brought thee up in ploughmans state
to byde,
Whereof Georgos he thee gave to name; Till prickt with courage, and thy forces
pryde,
To Fary court thou cam'st to seeke for
fame,
And prove thy puissaunt armes, as seemes thee best became.'

LXVII

'O holy sire,' quoth he, 'how shall I quight
The many favours I with thee have fownd, That hast my name and nation redd aright,
And taught the way that does to heaven
bownd?'

This saide, adowne he looked to the grownd,
To have returnd, but dazed were his eyne, Through passing brightnes, which did quite confound

His feeble sence, and too exceeding shyne:
So darke are earthly things compar'd to things divine.

LXVIII

At last, whenas himselfe he gan to fynd,
To Una back he cast him to retyre;
Who him awaited still with pensive mynd.
Great thankes and goodly need to that good syre

He thens departing gave, for his paynes hyre.

So came to Una, who him joyd to see.
And after litle rest, gan him desyre,
Of her adventure myndfull for to bee.
So leave they take of Cœlia and her daughters three.

CANTO XI

The knight with that old Dragon fights
Two dayes incessantly:
The third, him overthrowes, and gayus
Most glorious victory.

I

HIGH time now gan it wex for Una fayre
To thinke of those her captive parents deare,
And their forwasted kingdom to repayre:
Whereto whenas they now approached neare, With hartie wordes her knight she gan to
cheare,
And in her modest maner thus bespake:
'Deare knight, as deare as ever knight was
deare,

That all these sorrowes suffer for my sake, High heven behold the tedious toyle, ye for me take.

II

'Now are we come unto my native soyle, And to the place, where all our perilles
dwell;
Here hauntes that feend, and does his dayly
spoyle;
Therefore henceforth bee at your keeping
well,
And ever ready for your foeman fell.
The sparke of noble corage now awake,
And strive your excellent selfe to excell;
That shall ye evermore renommed make Above all knights on earth, that batteill undertake.'

III

And pointing forth, 'Lo! yonder is,' said
she,
'The brasen towre, in which my parents
deare

For dread of that huge feend emprisond be;
Whom I from far see on the walles appeare, Whose sight my feeble soule doth greatly
cheare:

And on the top of all I do espye The watchman wayting tydings glad to
heare;

That, O my parents, might I happily Unto you bring, to ease you of your misery!'

IV

With that they heard a roaring hideous
sownd,

That all the ayre with terror filled wyde,
And seemd unweath to shake the stedfast
ground.

Eftsoones that dreadfull dragon they espyde,
Where stretcht he lay upon the sunny side Of a great hill, himselfe like a great hill.
But all so soone as he from far deseryde Those glistring armes, that heven with light did fill,

He rousd himselfe full blyth, and hastued them untill.

Then badd the knight his lady yede aloof,
And to an hill her selfe withdraw asyde, From whence she might behold that bat-tailles proof,
And eke be safe from daunger far descryde:

She him obeyd, and turnd a litle wyde.
 Now, O thou sacred Muse, most learned
 dame,
 Fayre ympe of Phœbus, and his aged bryde,
 The nourse of time and everlasting fame, That warlike handes ennoblest with im-mortall name;

VI

O gently come into my feeble brest, Come gently, but not with that mightie rage, Wherewith the martiall trompes thou doest infest,
 And hartes of great heroës doest enrage, That nought their kindled corage may aswage:
 Soone as thy dreadfull trompe begins to
 sownd,
 The god of warre with his fiers equipage Thou doest awake, sleepe never he so sownd, And scared nations doest with horror sterne astownd.

VII

Fayre goddess, lay that furious fitt asyde, Till I of warres and bloody Mars doe sing, And Bryton fieldes with Sarazin blood be-
 dyde, Twixt that great Faery Queene and Paynim
 King,
 That with their horror heven and earth did
 ring,
 A worke of labour long, and endlesse
 prayse:
 But now a while lett downe that haughtie string,
 And to my tunes thy second tenor rayse, That I this man of God his godly armes may blaze.

VIII

By this the dreadfull beast drew nigh to
 hand,
 Halfe flying and halfe footing in his haste,
 That with his largenesse measured much
 land,
 And made wide shadow under his huge waste;
 As mountaine doth the valley overcaste.
 Approching nigh, he reared high afore His body monstrous, horrible, and vaste, Which, to increase his wondrous greatnes
 more,
 Was swoln with wrath, and poyson, and with bloody gore.

IX

And over, all with brasen scales was armd, Like plated cote of steele, so couched neare, That nought mote perce, ne might his corse bee harmd
 With dint of swerd, nor push of pointed
 speare:
 Which as an eagle, seeing pray appeare, His aery plumes doth rouze, full rudely
 dight,
 So shaked he, that horror was to heare:
 For as the clashing of an armor bright, Such noyse his rouzed scales did send unto the knight.

X

His flaggy winges, when forth he did display,
 Were like two sayles, in which the hollow
 wynd
 Is gathered full, and worketh speedy way:
 And eke the peennes, that did his pineons
 bynd,
 Were like mayne-yardes, with flying canvas lynd,
 With which whereas him list the ayre to
 beat,
 And there by force unwonted passage fynd,
 The clowdes before him fledd for terror
 great.
 And all the hevens stood still, amazed with his threat.

XI

His huge long tayle, wownd up in hundreo foldes,
 Does overspred his long bras-sealy back, Whose wreathed boughtes when ever he unfolds,
 And thicke entangled knots adown does slack,
 Bespotted as with shieldes of red and blacke,
 It sweepeth all the laud behind him farre,
 And of three furlongs does but litle lacke;
 And at the point two stinges in fixed arre, Both deadly sharp, that sharpest steele exceeden farr.

XII

But stinges and sharpest steele did far exceed
 The sharpnesse of his cruel rending clawes:
 Dead was it sure, as sure as death in deed, What ever thing does touch his ravenous
 pawes.

Or what within his reach he ever draws.
 But his most hideous head my tongue to
 tell Does tremble; for his deepe devouring jawes Wyde gaped, like the griesly mouth of
 hell,
 Through which into his darke abyссе all ravin fell.

XIII

And, that more wondrous was, in either jaw Three ranckes of yron teeth enraunged
 were,
 In which yett trickling blood and gobbets raw
 Of late devoured bodies did appeare, That sight thereof bredd cold congealed
 feare:
 Which to increase, and all atonce to kill,
 A cloud of smothering smoke and sulphure seare
 Out of his stinking gorge forth steemed
 still,
 That all the ayre about with smoke and stench did fill.

XIV

His blazing eyes, like two bright shining shieldes, Did burne with wrath, and sparkled living
 fyre;
 As two broad beacons, sett in open fieldes, Send forth their flames far of to every shyre,
 And warning give, that enimies conspyre
 With fire and sword the region to invade;
 So flam'd his eyne with rage and rancorous
 yre:
 But far within, as in a hollow glade, Those glaring lampes were sett, that made a dreadfull shade.

XV

So dreadfully he towards him did pas, Forelifting up a loft his speckled brest,
 And often bounding on the brused gras, As for great joyaunce of his newcome
 guest.
 Eftsoones he gan advaunce his haughty
 crest,
 As chauffed bore his bristles doth upreare,
 And shoke his scales to battaile ready
 drest,

That made the Rederosse Knight nigh quake for feare,
 As bidding bold defyaunce to his foeman
 neare.

XVI

The knight gan fayrely couch his steady
 speare,
 And fierseley ran at him with rigorous
 might:
 The pointed steele, arriving rudely theare, His harder hyde would nether perce nor bight,
 But, glauncing by, foorth passed forward
 right:
 Yet, sore amoved with so puissaunt push,
 The wrathfull beast about him turned light,
 And him so rudely, passing by, did brush With his long tayle, that horse and man to ground did rush.

XVII

Both horse and man up lightly rose againe,
 And fresh encounter towards him address:
 But th' ydle stroke yet backe recoyld in
 vaine,
 And found no place his deadly point to rest.
 Exceeding rage enflam'd the furious beast,
 To be avenged of so great despight;
 For never felt his imperceable brest So wondrous force from hand of living
 wight;
 Yet had he prov'd the powre of many a puissant knight.

XVIII

Then, with his waving wings displayed
 wyde,
 Himselfe up high he lifted from the ground,
 And with strong flight did forcibly divyde
 The yielding ayre, which nigh too feeble
 found
 Her fitting parts, and element unsound, To beare so great a weight: he, cutting
 way
 With his broad sayles, about him soared
 round;
 At last, low stouping with unweldy sway, Snatcht up both horse and man, to beare them quite away.

XIX

Long he them bore above the subject
 plaine,
 So far as ewghen bow a shaft may send,

Till struggling strong did him at last con-
straine

To let them downe before his flightes end:
As hagarde hauke, presuming to contend With hardy fowle, above his habile might,
His wearie pounces all in vaine doth spend
To trusse the pray too heavy for his fight; Which, comming down to ground, does free it selfe by fight.

XX

He so disseized of his gryping grosse, The knight his thrillant speare againe assayd

In his bras-plated body to embosse, And three mens strength unto the stroake he layd;

Wherewith the stiffe beame quaked, as affrayd,
And glauncing from his scaly necke, did glyde

Close under his left wing, then broad dis-
playd.

The percing steele there wrought a wound full wyde,

That with the uncouth smart the monster lowdly cryde.

XXI

He cryde, as raging seas are wont to rore, When wintry storme his wrathful wreck does threat;

The rolling billowes beat the ragged shore,
As they the earth would shoulder from her seat,

And greedy gulfe does gape, as he would
eat

His neighbour element in his revenge:
Then gin the blustering brethren boldly threat,
To move the world from off his stedfast henge,

And boystrous battaile make, each other to avenge.

XXII

The steely head stuck fast still in his flesh, Till with his cruell clawes he snatcht the
wood,

And quite a sunder broke. Forth flowed fresh

A gushing river of blacke gory blood, That drowned all the land, whereon he
stood:

The streame thereof would drive a water-mill.

Treble augmented was his furious mood
With bitter sence of his deepe rooted ill, That flames of fire he threw forth from his large nosethril.

XXIII

His hideous tayle then hurled he about,
And therewith all enwrapt the nimble thyes

Of his froth-fomy steed, whose courage
stout

Striving to loose the knott, that fast him tyes,

Himselfe in streighter bandes too rash implies,

That to the ground he is perforce constraynd

To throw his ryder: who can quickly ryse From of the earth, with durty blood distaynd,

For that reprochfull fall right fowly he disdaynd.

XXIV

And fercely tooke his trenchand blade in
hand,

With which he stroke so furious and so
fell,

That nothing seemd the puissaunce could withstand:

Upon his crest the hardned yron fell;
But his more hardned crest was armd so
well,

That deeper dint therein it would not make;
Yet so extremely did the buffe him quell, That from thenceforth he shund the like to
take,

But, when he saw them come, he did them still forsake.

XXV

The knight was wroth to see his stroke beguyld,

And smot againe with more outrageous
might;

But backe againe the spangling steele recoyld,

And left not any marke where it did light,
As if in adamant rocke it had bene pight.

The beast, impatient of his smarting wound,
And of so fierce and forcible despight,

Thought with his winges to stye above the
ground;

But his late wounded wing unserviceable
found.

XXVI

Then, full of griefe and anguish vehement,
 He lowdly brayd, that like was never heard,
 And from his wide devouring oven sent A flake of fire, that, flashing in his beard, Him all amazd, and almost made afeard:
 The scorching flame sore swinged all his
 face,

And through his armour all his body seard,
 That he could not endure so cruell caee, But thought his armes to leave, and helmet to unlace.

XXVII

Not that great champion of the antique
 world,

Whom famous poetes verse so much doth
 vaunt,

And hath for twelve huge labours high ex-
 told,

So many furies and sharpe fits did haunt,
 When him the poysoned garment did en-chaunt,

With Centaures blood and bloody verses
 charmd,

As did this knight twelve thousand dolours
 daunt,

Whom fyrrie steele now burnt, that erst him armd,

That erst him goodly armd, now most of all him harmd.

XXVIII

Faynt, wearie, sore, emboyled, grieved,
 brent

With heat, toyle, wounds, armes, smart, and inward fire,

That never man such mischiefes did tor-
 ment;

Death better were, death did he oft desire, But death will never come, when needes require.

Whom so dismayd when that his foe be-
 held,

He cast to suffer him no more respire,
 But gan his sturdy sterne about to weld, And him so strongly stroke, that to the ground him feld.

XXIX

It fortun'd (as fayre it then befell,) Behynd his backe, unweeting, where he
 stood,

Of aunecient time there was a springing well,
 From which fast trickled forth a silver flood,

Full of great vertues, and for med'eine
 good.

Whylome, before that cursed dragon got That happy land, and all with innocent
 blood

Defyld those sacred waves, it rightly hot The Well of Life, ne yet his vertues had forgot.

XXX

For unto life the dead it could restore,
 And guilt of sinfull crimes cleane wash
 away;

Those that with sicknesse were infected
 sore

It could recure, and aged long decay Renew, as one were borne that very day.

Both Silo this, and Jordan, did excell,
 And th' English Bath, and eke the German Spau,

Ne can Cephise, nor Hebrus match this
 well:

Into the same the knight back overthrowen fell.

XXXI

Now gan the golden Phæbus for to steepe
 His fierie face in billowes of the west,
 And his faint steedes watred in ocean deepe, Whiles from their journall labours they did
 rest,

When that infernall monster, having kest
 His wearie foe into that living well, Can high advaunee his broad discoloured
 brest

Above his wonted pitch, with countenance
 fell,

And clapt his yron wings, as victor he did dwell.

XXXII

Which when his pensive lady saw from
 farre,

Great woe and sorrow did her soule assay,
 As weening that the sad end of the warre,
 And gan to highest God entirely pray, That feared chance from her to turne
 away:

With folded hands, and knees full lowly
 bent,

All night shee watcht, ne once adowne would lay

Her daintv limbs in her sad dreriment, But praying still did wake, and waking did lament.

XXXIII

The morrow next gan earely to appeare,
That Titan rose to runne his daily rae;
But earely, ere the morrow next gan reare
Out of the sea faire Titans deawy face, Up rose the gentle virgin from her place,
And looked all about, if she might spy
Her loved knight to move his manly pace:
For she had great doubt of his safety, Since late she saw him fall before his enemy.

XXXIV

At last she saw, where he upstarte brave
Out of the well, wherein he drenched lay:
As eagle fresh out of the ocean wave, Where he hath lefte his plumes all hory
gray,
And deckt himselfe with fethers youthly
gay,
Like eyas hauke up mounts unto the skies,
His newly budded pineons to assay,
And merveiles at him selfe, stil as he flies:
So new this new-borne knight to battell new did rise.

XXXV

Whom when the damned feend so fresh did spy,
No wonder if he wondred at the sight,
And doubted, whether his late enemy
It were, or other new supplied knight.
He, now to prove his late renewed might,
High brandishing his bright deaw-burning
blade,
Upon his crested scalp so sore did smite,
That to the scull a yawning wound it made:
The deadly dint his dulled sences all dis-maid.

XXXVI

I wote not whether the revenging steele
Were hardned with that holy water dew, Wherein he fell, or sharper edge did feele,
Or his baptized hands now greater grew,
Or other secret vertue did ensew;
Els never could the force of fleshly arme, Ne molten mettall, in his blood embrew:
For till that stownd could never wight him
harne,
By subtilty, nor slight, nor might, nor mighty charme.

XXXVII

The cruell wound enraged him so sore,
That loud he yelled for exceeding paine.

As hundred ramping lions seemd to rore, Whom ravenous hunger did thereto con-
straine:

Then gan he tosse aloft his stretched traine,
And therewith scourge the buxome aire so
sore,
That to his force to yielden it was faine; Ne ought his sturdy strokes might stand
afore,
That high trees overtrew, and rocks in peeces tore.

XXXVIII

The same advauncing high above his head, With sharpe intended sting so rude him smott,
That to the earth him drove, as stricken
dead,
Ne living wight would have him life behott:
The mortall sting his angry needle shott Quite through his shield, and in his shoulder seasd, Where fast it stucke, ne would thereout be gott:
The grieffe thereof him wondrous sore diseasd, Ne might his rauling paine with patience be appeasd.

XXXIX

But yet more mindfull of his honour deare Then of the grievous smart, which him did wring,
From loathed soile he can him lightly reare,
And strove to loose the far in fixed sting:
Which when in vaine he tryde with strug-geling, Inflam'd with wrath, his raging blade he hefte,
And strooke so strongly, that the knotty string
Of his huge taile he quite a sonder cleft; Five joints thereof he hewd, and but the stump him lefte.

XL

Hart cannot thinke, what outrage and what cries,
With fowle enfouldred smoake and flashing
fire,
The hell-bred beast threw forth unto the skies,
That all was covered with darknesse dire:
Then fraught with rancour, and engorged
yre,

He cast at once him to avenge for all,
 And gathering up himselfe out of the mire
 With his uneven wings, did fiercely fall Upon his sunne-bright shield, and grypt it fast withall.

XLI

Much was the man encombred with his
 hold,
 In feare to lose his weapon in his paw,
 Ne wist yett how his talaunts to unfold;
 For harder was from Cerberus greedy jaw To plucke a bone, then from his cruell claw To reave by strength the griped gage away: Thrise he assayd it from his foote to draw,
 And thrise in vaine to draw it did assay; It booted nought to thinke to robbe him of his pray.

XLII

Tho, when he saw no power might prevaile,
 His trusty sword he cald to his last aid, Wherewith he fiersly did his foe assaile,
 And double blowes about him stoutly laid,
 That glauncing fire out of the yron plaid,
 As sparekles from the andvile use to fly, When heavy hammers on the wedg are swaid;
 Therewith at last he forst him to unty One of his grasping feete, him to defend thereby.

XLIII

The other foote, fast fixed on his shield, Whenas no strength nor stroks mote him constraine
 To loose, ne yet the warlike pledg to yield, He smott thereat with all his might and
 maine,
 That nought so wondrous puissaunce might sustaine:
 Upon the joint the lucky steele did light,
 And made such way, that hewd it quite in
 twaine:
 The paw yett missed not his minisht might,
 But hong still on the shield, as it at first was pight.

XLIV

For grieffe thereof, and divelish despight, From his infernall fournace forth he threw Huge flames, that dimmed all the hevens
 light,
 Enroll in duskish smoke and brimstone
 blew;

As burning Aetna from his boyling stew Doth belch out flames, and rockes in peeces broke,
 And ragged ribs of mountaines molten new, Enwrapt in coleblacke cloudes and filthy smoke,
 That al the land with stench, and heven with horror choke.

XLV

The heate whcreof, and harmefull pestilence,
 So sore him noyd, that forst him to retire
 A litle backward for his best defence,
 To save his body from the scorching fire,
 Which he from hellish entrailes did expire.
 It chaunst (Eternall God that chaunce did guide)
 As he recoiled backward, in the mire
 His nigh foreweried feeble feet did slide, And downe he fell, with dread of shame sore terrifide.

XLVI

There grew a goodly tree him faire beside,
 Loaden with fruit and apples rosy redd,
 As they in pure vermilion had beene dide, Whereof great vertues over all were redd:
 For happy life to all which thereon fedd,
 And life eke everlasting did befall:
 Great God it planted in that blessed stedd With his Almighty hand, and did it call The Tree of Life, the crime of our first fathers fall.

XLVII

In all the world like was not to be fownd, Save in that soile, where all good things did
 grow,
 And freely sprong out of the fruitfull
 grownd,
 As incorrupted Nature did them sow, Till that dredd dragon all did overthrow.
 Another like faire tree eke grew thereby, Whereof who so did eat, eftsoones did know Both good and ill: O mournfull memory!
 That tree through one mans fault hath doen us all to dy.

XLVIII

From that first tree forth flowd, as from a
 well,
 A trickling streame of balme, most soveraine

And dainty deare, which on the ground still
fell,
And overflowed all the fertile plaine,
As it had deawed bene with timely raine:
Life and long health that gracious ointment
gave,
And deadly wounds could heale, and reare again
The sencelesse corse appointed for the grave.
Into that same he fell: which did from death him save.

XLIX

For nigh thereto the ever damned beast Durst not approach, for he was deadly
made,
And al that life preserved did detest:
Yet he it oft adventur'd to invade.
By this the drouping day-light gan to fade,
And yield his rowme to sad succeeding
night,
Who with her sable mantle gan to shade
The face of earth, and wayes of living
wight,
And high her burning torch set up in heaven bright.

L

When gentle Una saw the second fall Of her deare knight, who, weary of long
fight,
And faint through losse of blood, moov'd not at all,
But lay as in a dreame of deepe delight, Besmeard with pretious balme, whose vertuous might Did heale his woundes, and scorching heat alay, Againe she stricken was with sore affright,
And for his safetie gan devoutly pray, And watch the noyous night, and wait for joyous day.

LI

The joyous day gan early to appeare,
And fayre Aurora from the deawy bed
Of aged Tithone gan her selfe to reare, With rosy cheekes, for shame as blushing
red;
Her golden locks for hast were loosely
shed
About her eares, when Una her did marke Clymbe to her charet, all with flowers
spred,

From heven high to chace the chearelesse
darke;
With mery note her lowd salutes the mounting larke.

LII

Then freshly up arose the doughty knight,
All healed of his hurts and woundes wide,
And did himselfe to battaile ready dight; Whose early foe awaiting him beside To have devourd, so soone as day he spyde,
When now he saw himselfe so freshly reare,
As if late fight had nought him damnifyde,
He woxe dismaid, and gan his fate to feare; Nathlesse with wonted rage he him ad-vaunced neare.

LIII

And in his first encounter, gaping wyde, He thought attonce him to have swallowd
quight,
And rusht upon him with outragious pryde; Who him rencountring fierce, as hauke in
flight,
Perforce rebutted backe. The weapon
bright,
Taking advantage of his open jaw, Ran through his mouth with so importune
might,
That deepe emperst his darksom hollow maw,
And, backe retyrd, his life blood forth with all did draw.

LIV

So downe he fell, and forth his life did
breath,
That vanisht into smoke and cloudes swift;
So downe he fell, that th' earth him underneath
Did grone, as feeble so great load to lift;
So downe he fell, as an huge rocky clift, Whose false foundacion waves have washt
away,
With dreadfull poyse is from the mayneland rift,
And, rolling downe, great Neptune doth
dismay;
So downe he fell, and like an heaped moun-taine lay.

LV

The knight him selfe even trembled at his
fall,
So huge and horrible a masse it seemd;

And his deare lady, that beheld it all, Durst not approach for dread which she misdeemd;
 But yet at last, whenas the direfull feend
 She saw not stirre, of-shaking vaine affright,
 She nigher drew, and saw that joyous end:
 Then God she prayds, and thankt her faith-full knight,
 That had atchievde so great a conquest by his might.

CANTO XII

Fayre Una to the Redcrosse Knight Betrouthed is with joy:
 Though false Duessa, it to barre, Her false sleights doe employ.

I

BEHOLD! I see the haven nigh at hand, To which I meane my wearie course to bend;
 Vere the maine shete, and beare up with the
 land,
 The which afore is fayrly to be kend,
 And seemeth safe from storms that may offend:
 There this fayre virgin, wearie of her way,
 Must landed bee, now at her journeyes end;
 There eke my feeble barke a while may
 stay, Till mery wynd and weather call her thence
 away.

II

Scarsely had Phœbus in the glooming east Yett harnessed his fyrie-footed teeme, Ne reard above the earth his flaming creast,
 When the last deadly smoke aloft did steeme,
 That signe of last outbreathed life did
 seeme
 Unto the watchman on the castle wall;
 Who thereby dead that balefull beast did
 deeme,
 And to his lord and lady lowd gan call,
 To tell, how he had seene the dragons fatall
 fall.

III

Uprose with hasty joy, and feeble speed,
 That aged syre, the lord of all that land,
 And looked forth, to weet if trew indeed
 Those tydings were, as he did understand:

Which whenas trew by tryall he out foud,
 He badd to open wyde his brasen gate, Which long time had beene shut, and out of hond Proclaymed joy and peace through all his
 state;
 For dead now was their foe, which them forrayed late.

IV

Then gan triumphant trompets sownd on
 hye,
 That sent to heven the eechoed report Of their new joy, and happie victory Gainst him, that had them long opprest with tort,
 And fast imprisoned in sieged fort.
 Then all the people, as in solemne feast,
 To him assembled with one full consort, Rejoycing at the fall of that great beast, From whose eternall bondage now they were releast.

V

Forth came that auncient lord and aged
 queene, Arayd in antique robes downe to the
 grownd,
 And sad habiliments right well beseene:
 A noble crew about them waited rownd
 Of sage and sober peres, all gravely gownd;
 Whom far before did march a goodly band Of tall young men, all hable armes to
 sownd;
 But now they laurell branches bore in
 hand, Glad signe of victory and peace in all their land.

VI

Unto that doughtie conquerour they came,
 And him before themselves prostrating low, Their lord and patrone loud did him proclame,
 And at his feet their lawrell boughes did
 throw.
 Soone after them, all dauncing on a row,
 The comely virgins came, with girlands
 dight,
 As fresh as flowres in meadow greene doe
 grow,
 When morning deaw upon their leaves doth light:
 And in their handes sweet timbrels all upheld on hight.

And them before, the fry of children yong Their wanton sportes and childish mirth did play,
 And to the maydens sounding tymbrels
 song,
 In well attuned notes, a joyous lay,
 And made delightfull musick all the way, Untill they came where that faire virgin
 stood.
 As fayre Diana, in fresh sommers day, Beholdes her nymphes enraung'd in shady
 wood,
 Some wrestle, some do run, some bathe in christall flood;

VIII

So she beheld those maydens meriment With chearefull vew; who, when to her
 they came,
 Themselves to ground with gracious hum-blesse bent,
 And her ador'd by honorable name, Lifting to heven her everlasting fame:
 Then on her head they sett a girlond
 greene,
 And crowned her twixt earnest and twixt
 game;
 Who, in her self-resemblance well beseene, Did seeme, such as she was, a goodly maiden queene.

IX

And after all the raskall many ran,
 Heaped together in rude rablement,
 To see the face of that victorious man; Whom all admired, as from heaven sent,
 And gazd upon with gaping wonderment.
 But when they came where that dead dragon lay, Stretcht on the ground in monstrous large extent,
 The sight with ydle feare did them dis-
 may,
 Ne durst approach him nigh, to touch, or once assay.

Some feard and fledd; some feard, and well it faynd;
 One, that would wiser seeme then all the
 rest, Warnd him not touch, for yet perhaps re-maynd
 Some lingring life within his hollow brest,

Or in his wombe might lurke some hidden nest
 Of many dragonettes, his fruitfull seede;
 Another saide, that in his eyes did rest Yet spareking fyre, and badd thereof take heed;
 Another said, he saw him move his eyes indeed.

XI

One mother, whenas her foolehardy chyld Did come to neare, and with his talants
 play, Halfe dead through feare, her litle babe revyld,
 And to her gossibs gan in counsell say:
 'How can I tell, but that his talants may Yet scratch my some, or rend his tender
 hand?'
 So diversly them selves in vaine they
 fray;
 Whiles some more bold, to measure him nigh stand,
 To prove how many acres he did spred of land.

XII

Thus flocked all the folke him rownd
 about,
 The whiles that hoarie king, with all his
 traine,
 Being arrived where that champion stout
 After his foes defeasaunce did remaine, Him goodly greetes, and fayre does enter-
 tayne
 With princely gifts of yvory and gold,
 And thousand thanks him yeeldes for all his paine:
 Then when his daughter deare he does be-
 hold,
 Her dearely doth imbrace, and kisseth manifold.

XIII

And after to his pallace he them brings, With shaumes, and trompets, and with clarions sweet;
 And all the way the joyous people singes,
 And with their garments strowes the paved street;
 Whence mounting up, they fynd purveyaunce meet
 Of all that royall princes court became,
 And all the floore was underneath their feet

Bespredd with costly scarlott of great
name,
On which they lowly sitt, and fitting purpose frame.

XIV

What needes me tell their feast and goodly
guize,
In which was nothing riotous nor vaine ?
What needes of dainty dishes to devise,
Of comely services, or courtly trayne ?
My narrow leaves cannot in them contayne
The large discourse of roiall princes state.
Yet was their manner then but bare and
playne:
For th' antique world excesse and pryde did hate;
Such proud luxurious pompe is swollen up but late.

XV

Then, when with meates and drinckes of every kinde
Their fervent appetites they quenched had,
That aunient lord gan fit occasion finde,
Of straunge adventures, and of perils sad,
Which in his travell him befallen had,
For to demaund of his renowned guest:
Who then with utt'rance grave, and coun-t'nance sad,
From poynt to poynt, as is before exprest, Discourt his voyage long, according his request.

XVI

Great pleasure, mixt with pittifull regard,
That godly king and queene did passionate,
Whyles they his pittifull adventures heard,
That oft they did lament his lucklesse
state,
And often blame the too importune fate,
That heapd on him so many wrathfull
wreakes;
For never gentle knight, as he of late,
So tossed was in Fortunes cruell freakes;
And all the while salt teares bedeawd the hearers cheaks.

XVII

Then sayd the royali pere in sober wise:
'Deare sonne, great beene the evils which ye bore
From first to last in your late enterprise,
That I note whether praise or pittie more:

For never living man, I weene, so sore In sea of deadly daungers was distrest;
But since now safe ye seised have the shore,
And well arrived are, (High God be blest !) Let us devise of ease and everlasting rest.'

XVIII

' Ah ! dearest lord,' said then that doughty
knight,
' Of ease or rest I may not yet devise;
For by the faith which I to armes have
plight,
I bownden am streight after this emprize,
As that your daughter can ye well advize, Backe to retourne to that great Faery
Queene,
And her to serve six yeares in warlike wize, Gainst that proud Paynim King that works her teene:
Therefore I ought crave pardon, till I there have beene.'

XIX

' Unhappy falls that hard necessity,' Quoth he, ' the troubler of my happy peace,
And vowed foe of my felicity;
Ne I against the same can justly preace:
But since that band ye cannot now release, Nor doen undoe, (for vowes may not be vayne)
Soone as the terme of those six yeares shall cease,
Ye then shall hether backe retourne agayne,
The marriage to accomplish vovd betwixt you twayn.

XX

' Which, for my part, I covet to performe, In sort as through the world I did pro-
clame,
That who so kild that monster most de-
forme,
And him in hardy battayle overcame, Should have mine onely daughter to his dane,
And of my kingdome heyre apparaunt bee: Therefore since now to thee perteynes the
same,
By dew desert of noble chevalree, Both daughter and eke kingdome, lo ! I yield to thee.'

XXI

Then forth he called that his daughter fayre,
The fairest Un', his onely daughter deare,

His onely daughter and his only hayre;
 Who forth proceeding with sad sober
 cheare,
 As bright as doth the morning starre ap-
 peare
 Out of the east, with flaming lockes be-
 dight,
 To tell that dawning day is drawing neare,
 And to the world does bring long wished
 light;
 So faire and fresh that lady shewd her selfe in sight:

XXII

So faire and fresh, as freshest flowre in
 May;
 For she had layd her mournfull stole
 aside,
 And widow-like sad wimple throwne away, Wherewith her heavenly beautie she did
 hide,
 Whiles on her wearie journey she did ride;
 And on her now a garment she did weare
 All lilly white, withoutten spot or pride, That seemd like silke and silver woven
 neare,
 But neither silke nor silver therein did
 appeare.

XXIII

The blazing brightnesse of her beauties
 beame,
 And glorious light of her sunshynny face, To tell, were as to strive against the streame:
 My ragged rimes are all too rude and bace,
 Her heavenly lineaments for to enchace.
 Ne wonder; for her own deare loved knight,
 All were she daily with himselfe in place,
 Did wonder much at her celestiall sight:
 Oft had he seene her faire, but never so faire dight.

XXIV

So fairely dight, when she in presence came,
 She to her syre made humble reverence, And bowed low, that her right well be-
 came,
 And added grace unto her excellence:
 Who with great wisdom and grave eloquence
 Thus gan to say — But eare he thus had
 sayd,
 With flying speede, and seeming great pretence,

Came running in, much like a man dismayd, A messenger with letters, which his message
 sayd.

XXV

All in the open hall amazed stood At suddennesse of that unwary sight,
 And wondred at his breathlesse hasty mood.
 But he for nought would stay his passage
 right,
 Till fast before the king he did alight;
 Where falling flat, great humblesse he did
 make,
 And kist the ground whereon his foot was
 pight;
 Then to his handes that writt he did betake,
 Which he disclosing, read thus, as the paper
 spake:

XXVI

'To thee, most mighty king of Eden fayre, Her greeting sends in these sad lines ad-
 drest
 The wofull daughter and forsaken heyre
 Of that great Emperour of all the West;
 And bids thee be advized for the best,
 Ere thou thy daughter liuck in holy band
 Of wedlocke to that new unknowen guest:
 For he already plighted his right hand Unto another love, and to another land.

XXVII

'To me, sad mayd, or rather widow sad, He was affyaunced long time before,
 And sacred pledges he both gave, and had, False erraunt knight, infamous, and forswore!
 Witnesse the burning altars, which he swore,
 And guilty heavens of his bold perjury,
 Which though he hath polluted oft of yore, Yet I to them for judgement just doe fly,
 And them conjure t' avenge this shamefull injury.

XXVIII

'Therefore since mine he is, or free or bond,
 Or false or trew, or living or else dead, Withhold, O soverayne prince, your hasty
 hond
 From knitting league with him, I you aread; Ne weene my right with strength adowne to tread,
 Through weakenesse of my widowed or woe:
 For Truth is strong, her rightfull cause to plead,

And shall finde friends, if need requireth soe.

So bids thee well to fare, thy neither friend nor foe, FIDESSA.'

XXIX

When he these bitter byting wordes had
red,

The tydings straunge did him abashed
make,

That still he sate long time astonished,
As in great muse, ne word to creature
spake.

At last his solemne silence thus he brake, With doubtfull eyes fast fixed on his gwest:

'Redoubted knight, that for myne only
sake

Thy life and honor late adventrest, Let nought be hid from me, that ought to be exprest.

XXX

'What meane these bloody vowes and idle threats,

Throwne out from womanish impatient
mynd?

What hevens? what altars? what enraged heates,

Here heaped up with termes of love un-
kynd,

My conscience cleare with guilty bands would bynd?

Highe God be witness, that I guiltlesse ame!

But if your selfe, sir knight, ye faulty fynd,
Or wrapped be in loves of former dame, With eryme doe not it cover, but disclose the same.'

XXXI

To whom the Rederosse Knight this answer
sent:

'My lord, my king, be nought hereat dis-
mayd,

Till well ye wote by grave intendment, What woman, and wherefore, doth me up-
brayd

With breach of love and loialty betrayd.

It was in my mishaps, as hitherward
I lately traveild, that unwares I strayd Out of my way, through perils straunge and hard;

That day should faile me ere I had them all declar'd.

XXXII

'There did I find, or rather I was fownd
Of this false woman, that Fidessa hight; Fidessa hight the falsest dame on grownd,
Most false Duessa, royall richly dight,
That easy was t' inveigle weaker sight:
Who by her wicked arts and wely skill, Too false and strong for earthly skill or
might,

Unwares me wrought unto her wicked will,
And to my foe betrayd, when least I feared ill.'

XXXIII

Then stepped forth the goodly royall mayd,
And on the ground her selfe prostrating low,
With sober countenance thus to him sayd:
'O pardon me, my sovaine lord, to sheow
The secret treasons, which of late I know To have bene wrought by that false sorceresse.

Shee, onely she, it is, that earst did throw
This gentle knight into so great distresse, That death him did awaite in daily wretch-ednesse.

XXXIV

'And now it seemes, that she suborned hath This crafty messenger with letters vaine,
To worke new woe and improvided scath,
By breaking of the band betwixt us twaine;
Wherein she used hath the practicke paine Of this false footman, clokt with simple-
nesse,

Whome if ye please for to discover plaine, Ye shall him Archimago find, I ghesse, The falsest man alive; who tries, shall find no lesse.'

XXXV

The king was greatly moved at her speech,
And, all with suddain indignation fraight, Bad on that messenger rude hands to reach.

Eftsoones the gard, which on his state did wait,

Attacht that faytor false, and bound him strait:

Who, seeming sorely chaffed at his band,
As chained beare, whom cruell dogs doe bait,

With ydle force did faine them to with-
stand,

And often semblaunce made to scape out of their hand.

XXXVI

But they him layd full low in dungeon
 deepe,
 And bound him hand and foote with yron chains,
 And with continual watch did warely keepe:
 Who then would thinke, that by his subtile trains
 He could escape fowle death or deadly pains?
 Thus when that princes wrath was pacifide,
 He gan renew the late forbidden baines, And to the knight his daughter deare he
 tyde,
 With sacred rites and vowes for ever to abyde.

XXXVII

His owne two hands the holy knotts did knitt,
 That none but death for ever can divide;
 His owne two hands, for such a turne most
 fitt,
 The housling fire did kindle and provide,
 And holy water thereon sprinckled wide;
 At which the bushy teade a groome did
 light,
 And sacred lamp in secret chamber hide, Where it should not be quenched day nor
 night,
 For feare of evill fates, but burnen ever
 bright.

XXXVIII

Then gan they sprinckle all the posts with wine,
 And made great feast to solemnize that
 day:
 They all perfumde with frankincense divine,
 And precious odours fetcht from far away,
 That all the house did sweat with great aray:
 And all the while sweete musicke did apply
 Her curious skill, the warbling notes to
 play,
 To drive away the dull melancholy;
 The whiles one sung a song of love and jollity.

XXXIX

During the which there was an heavenly noise Heard sownd through all the pallace pleasantly,

Like as it had bene many an angels voice Singing before th' Eternal Majesty,
 In their trinall triplicities on hye; Yett wist no creature, whence that heavenly
 sweet Proceeded, yet each one felt seerety, Himselfe thereby refte of his senses
 meet,
 And ravished with rare impression in his sprite.

XL

Great joy was made that day of young and
 old,
 And solemne feast proclaymd throughout the land,
 That their exceeding merth may not be
 told:
 Suffice it heare by signes to understand The usuall joyes at knitting of loves band.
 Thirse happy man the knight himselfe did
 hold,
 Possessed of his ladies hart and hand.
 And ever, when his eie did her behold, His heart did seeme to melt in pleasures manifold.

XLI

Her joyous presence and sweet company
 In full content he there did long enjoy, Ne wicked envy, ne vile gealosity,
 His deare delights were hable to amoy:
 Yet, swimming in that sea of blisfull joy, He nought forgott, how he whilome had sworne,
 In case he could that monstrous beast destroy,
 Unto his Faery Queene backe to retourne: The which he shortly did, and Una left to mourne.

XLII

Now strike your sailes, yee jolly mariners,
 For we be come unto a quiet rode,
 Where we must land some of our passengers,
 And light this weary vessell of her lode.
 Here she a while may make her safe abode, Till she repaired have her tackles spent,
 And wants supplide; and then againe
 abroad
 On the long voiage whereto she is bent:
 Well may she speede, and fairely finish her intent.

THE SECOND BOOKE
OF THE FAERIE QUEENE
CONTAYNING

THE LEGEND OF SIR GUYON OR OF TEMPERAUNCE

I

RIGHT well I wote, most mighty Sovere-aine,

That all this famous antique history
Of some th' aboundance of an ydle braine Will judged be, and painted forgery, Rather then matter of just memory; Sith none that breatheth living aire does
know,

Where is that happy land of Faery, Which I so much doe vaunt, yet no where
show,

But vouch antiquities, which no body can know.

II

But let that man with better sence advize,
That of the world least part to us is red;
And daily how through hardy enterprize Many great regions are discovered, Which to late age were never mentioned.
Who ever heard of th' Indian Peru?
Or who in venturous vessell measured
The Amazons huge river, now found trew?
Or fruitfullest Virginia who did ever vew?

III

Yet all these were when no man did them
know,

Yet have from wisest ages hidden beene;
And later times things more unknowne shall show.

Why then should witlesse man so much misweene,

That nothing is, but that which he hath
seene?

What if within the moones fayre shining spheare,

What if in every other starre unseene,
Of other wordes he happily should heare?
He wonder would much more; yet such to some appeare.

IV

Of Faery Lond yet if he more inquire,
By certain signes, here sett in sondrie place,

He may it fynd; ne let him then admyre, But yield his sence to bee too blunt and
base,
That no'te without an hound fine footing
trace.

And thou, O fayrest Princesse under sky, In this fayre mirrhour maist behold thy
face,

And thine owne realmes in lond of Faery,
And in this antique ymage thy great aun-cestry.

V

The which O pardon me thus to enfold
In covert vele, and wrap in shadowes light,
That feeble eyes your glory may behold, Which ells could not endure those beames
bright,

But would bee dazled with exceeding light.
O pardon! and vouchsafe with patient eare
The brave adventures of this Faery knight,
The good Sir Guyon, gratically to heare;
In whom great rule of Temp'raunce goodly doth appeare.

CANTO I

Guyon, by Archimage abusd,
The Redcrosse Knight awaytes; Fyndes Mordant and Amavia slaine With Pleasures poisoned baytes.

I

THAT conning architect of canered guyle, Whom princes late displeasure left in bands,
For falsed letters and suborned wyle, Soone as the Redcrosse Knight he understands

To beene departed out of Eden landes,
To serve againe his souveraine Elfin Queene, His artes he moves, and out of caytives handes

Himselfe he frees by secret meanes un-
seene;

His shackles emptie lefte, him selfe escaped cleene.

II

And forth he fares full of malicious mynd,
To worken mischief and avenging woe,
Where ever he that godly knight may fynd,
His onely hart sore and his onely foe;
Sith Una now he algates must forgoe, Whom his victorious handes did earst restore

To native crowne and kingdom late ygoe:
Where she enjoys sure peace for ever-
more,
As wetherbeaten ship arryv'd on happie shore.

III

Him therefore now the object of his spight
And deadly food he makes: him to offend
By forged treason, or by open fight,
He seekes, of all his drifte the aymed end:
There to his subtile engins he does bend,
His practick witt, and his fayre fyled tonge, With thousand other sleightes: for well he kend

His credit now in doubtfull ballaunce hong;
For hardly could bee hurt, who was already stong.

IV

Still as he went, he craftie stales did lay, With cunning traynes him to entrap un-
wares,

And privy spials plast in all his way, To weete what course he takes, and how he fares;

To ketch him at a vantage in his snares.
But now so wise and wary was the knight
By tryall of his former harmes and cares, That he descryde, and shonned still his
sight:

The fish that once was caught, new bait wil hardly byte.

V

Nath'lesse th' enchaunter would not spare his payne,

In hope to win occasion to his will;
Which when he long awaited had in wayne,
He chaungd his mynd from one to other ill:
For to all good he enemy was still.

Upon the way him fortun'd to meet, Fayre marching underneath a shady hill,
A goodly knight, all armd in harnessse
meete,

That from his head no place appeared to his feete.

VI

His carriage was full comely and upright,
His countenance demure and temperate,
But yett so sterne and terrible in sight,
That cheard his friends, and did his foes
amate:

He was an Elfin borne, of noble state

And mickle worship in his native land;
Well could he tourney and in lists debate,
And knighthood tooke of good Sir Huons
hand,

When with King Oberon he came to Fary Land.

VII

Him als accompanyd upon the way
A comely palmer, clad in black attyre,
Of rypest yeares, and heares all hoarie gray,
That with a staffe his feeble steps did stire, Least his long way his aged limbes should tire:

And if by lookes one may the mind aread,
He seemd to be a sage and sober syre,
And ever with slow pace the knight did lead, Who taught his trampling steed with equall steps to tread.

VIII

Such whenas Archimago them did view,
He weened well to worke some uncouth wyle.
Eftsoones, untwisting his deceiptfull clew,
He gan to weave a web of wicked guyle;
And with faire countenance and flattring style

To them approaching, thus the knight be-
spake:

'Fayre sonne of Mars, that seeke with warlike spoyle,
And great atchiev'ments, great your selfe to
make,

Vouchsafe to stay your steed for humble misers sake.'

IX

He stayd his steed for humble misers sake,
And badd tell on the tenor of his playnt;
Who feigning then in every limb to quake, Through inward feare, and seeming pale and faynt,

With piteous mone his pereing speach gan paynt:

'Deare lady, how shall I declare thy cace, Whom late I left in languorous constraynt?
Would God, thy selfe now present were in
place,

To tell this ruefull tale! Thy sight could win thee grace.

X

'Or rather would, O! would it so had
chaunst,

That you, most noble sir, had present beene

When that lewd rybauld, with vyle lust advaunst,
Laid first his filthie hands on virgin cleene, To spoyle her dainty corps, so faire and sheene
As on the earth, great mother of us all,
With living eye more fayre was never seene,
Of elasty and honour virginall: Witnes, ye heavens, whom she in vaine to help did call.

XI

‘How may it be,’ sayd then the knight halfe
wroth,
‘That knight should knighthood ever so have shent?’ ‘None but that saw,’ quoth he, ‘would weene for troth,
How shamefully that mayd he did tor-
ment.
Her looser golden lockes he rudely rent,
And drew her on the ground, and his sharpe sword
Against her snowy brest he fiercely bent,
And threatend death with many a bloodie
word; Tounge hates to tell the rest, that eye to see abhord.’

XII

Therewith amoved from his sober mood, ‘And lives he yet,’ said he, ‘that wrought this act,
And doen the heavens afford him vitall
food?’
‘He lives,’ quoth he, ‘and boasteth of the fact,
Ne yet hath any knight his courage crackt.’ ‘Where may that treachour then,’ sayd he,
‘be found,
Or by what meanes may I his footing tract?’
‘That shall I shew,’ said he, ‘as sure as hound
The stricken deare doth chaleng by the bleeding wound.’

XIII

He stayd not lenger talke, but with fierce
yre
And zealous haste away is quickly gone, To seeke that knight, where him that crafty squire
Supposed to be. They do arrive anone, Where sate a gentle lady all alone,

With garments rent, and heare discheveled, Wringing her handes, and making piteous
mone:
Her swollen eyes were much disfigured,
And her faire face with teares was fowly blubbered.

XIV

The knight, approching nigh, thus to her
said: ‘Fayre lady, through fowle sorrow ill be-
dight,
Great pittie is to see you thus dismayd, And marre the blossom of your beauty
bright: Fortly appease your grieffe and heavy
plight,
And tell the cause of your conceived payne:
For if he live that hath you doen despight,
He shall you doe dew recompence agayne, Or els his wrong with greater puissance maintaine.’

XV

Which when she heard, as in despightfull
wise,
She wilfully her sorrow did augment,
And offred hope of comfort did despise:
Her golden lockes most cruelly she rent,
And scratcht her face with ghastly dreri-
ment;
Ne would she speake, ne see, ne yet be
seene,
But hid her visage, and her head downe
bent,
Either for grievous shame, or for great teene,
As if her hart with sorow had transfixed
beene:

XVI

Till her that squire bespake: ‘Madame, my liefe,
For Gods deare love be not so wilfull
bent,
But doe vouchsafe now to receive reliefe, The which good fortune doth to you present.
For what bootes it to weepe and to way-
ment,
When ill is chaunst, but doth the ill increase,
And the weake minde with double woe tor-
ment?’

When she her squyre heard speake, she gan appease
Her voluntarie paine, and feele some secret ease.

XVII

Eftsoone she said: 'Ah! gentle trustie squyre,
What comfort can I, wofull wretch, con-
ceave,
Or why should ever I henceforth desyre To see faire heavens face, and life not
leave,
Sith that false traytour did my honour
reave?'
'False traytour certes,' saide the Faerie
knight,
'I read the man, that ever would deceave
A gentle lady, or her wrong through might:
Death were too little paine for such a fowle despight.

XVIII

'But now, fayre lady, comfort to you make,
And read who hath ye wrought this sham-full plight,
That short revenge the man may overtake,
Where so he be, and soone upon him light.'
'Certes,' saide she, 'I wote not how he
hight,
But under him a gray steede did he wield, Whose sides with dapled circles weren
dight;
Upright he rode, and in his silver shield He bore a bloodie crosse, that quartred all the field.'

XIX

'Now by my head,' saide Guyon, 'much I muse,
How that same knight should do so fowle
amis,
Or ever gentle damzell so abuse:
For may I boldly say, he surely is A right good knight, and trew of word ywis:
I present was, and can it witness well, When armes he swore, and streight did enterpris
Th' adventure of the Errant Damozell; In which he hath great glory wonne, as I heare tell.

XX

'Nathlesse he shortly shall againe be tryde,
And fairely quit him of th' imputed blame,

Els be ye sure he dearely shall abyde,
Or make you good amendment for the same:
All wrongs have mendes, but no amendes of
shame.

Now therefore, lady, rise out of your paine,
And see the salving of your blotted name.'
Full loth she seemd thereto, but yet did
faine;
For she was inly glad her purpose so to gaine.

XXI

Her purpose was not such as she did faine, Ne yet her person such as it was seene;
But under simple shew and semblant plaine Lurkt false Duessa secretly unseene, As a chaste virgin, that had wronged beene:
So had false Archimago her disguysd, To cloke her guile with sorrow and sad
teene;
And eke himselfe had craftily devisd To be her squire, and do her service well aguysd.

XXII

Her late, forlorne and naked, he had found,
Where she did wander in waste wilderness, Lurking in rockes and caves far under
ground,
And with greene mosse cov'ring her naked-
nesse,
To hide her shame and loathly filthinesse, Sith her Prince Arthur of proud ornaments And borrowd beauty spoyld. Her nathelless Th' enchaunter finding fit for his intents Did thus revest, and deckt with dew habili-ments.

XXIII

For all he did was to deceive good knights, And draw them from pursuit of praise and
fame,
To slug in slouth and sensuall delights,
And end their daies with irrenowmed shame.
And now exceeding grieve him overcame,
To see the Redcrosse thus advaunced hye;
Therefore this craftie engine he did frame, Against his praise to stirre up enmitye Of such, as vertues like mote unto him allye.

XXIV

So now he Guyon gyudes an uncouth way Through woods and mountaines, till they came at last

Into a pleasant dale, that lowly lay Betwixt two hills, whose high heads, overplast,
The valley did with coole shade overcast:
Through midst thereof a little river rold, By which there sate a knight with helme
unlaste, Himselfe refreshing with the liquid cold,
After his travell long, and labours manifold.

XXV

‘Lo! yonder he,’ cryde Archimage alowd, ‘That wrought the shamefull fact, which I did shew,
And now he doth himselfe in secret shrowd,
To fly the vengeance for his outrage dew;
But vaine: for ye shall dearely do him rew, So God ye speed and send you good successe;
Which we far off will here abide to vew.’
So they him left, inflam’d with wrathful-
nesse,
That streight against that knight his speare he did addresse.

XXVI

Who, seeing him from far so fierce to pricke,
His warlike armes about him gan embrace,
And in the rest his ready speare did sticke;
Tho, when as still he saw him towards pace,
He gan rencounter him in equall race:
They bene ymett, both ready to affrap,
When suddainly that warriour gan abace His threatned speare, as if some new mishap
Had him betide, or hidden danger did en-trap:

XXVII

And cryde, ‘Mercie, sir knight! and mercie,
lord,
For mine offence and heedelesse hardi-
ment,
That had almost committed crime abhord,
And with reprochfull shame mine honour
shent, Whiles cursed steele against that badge I
bent,
The sacred badge of my Redeemers death,
Which on your shield is set for ornament.’
But his fierce foe his steed could stay un-
eath,
Who, prickt with courage kene, did cruell battell breath.

XXVIII

But when he heard him speake, streight way he knew
His errour, and himselfe inclyning sayd: ‘Ah! deare Sir Guyon, well becommeth
you,
But me behoveth rather to upbrayd, Whose hastie hand so far from reason
strayd,
That almost it did haynous violence On that fayre ymage of that heavenly
mayd,
That decks and armes your shield with faire defence:
Your court’sie takes on you anothers dew offence.’

XXIX

So beene they both at one, and doen up-
reare
Their bevers bright, each other for to greet;
Goodly comportaunce each to other beare, And entertaime themselves with court’sies
meet.
Then saide the Redcrosse Knight: ‘Now
mote I weet, Sir Guyon, why with so fierce saliaunce,
And fell intent, ye did at earst me meet;
For sith I know your goodly governaunce, Great cause, I weene, you guided, or some uncouth chauce.’

XXX

‘Certes,’ said he, ‘well mote I shame to tell The fond encheason that me hether led.
A false infamous faitour late befell Me for to meet, that seemed ill bested, And playnd of grievous outrage, which he
red
A knight had wrought against a ladie gent;
Which to avenge, he to this place me led,
Where you he made the marke of his intent,
And now is fled: foule shame him follow wher he went!’

XXXI

So can he turne his earnest unto game, Through goodly handling and wise tem-peraunce.
By this his aged guide in presence came,
Who, soone as on that knight his eye dicglaunce,
Eftsoones of him had perfect cognizaunce,

Sith him in Faery court he late avizd;
 And sayd: 'Fayre sonne, God give you happy chaunce,
 And that deare Crosse upon your shield
 devizd,
 Wherewith above all knights ye goodly seeme agruizd.

XXXII

'Joy may you have, and everlasting fame,
 Of late most hard atchiev'ment by you
 donne,
 For which enrolled is your glorious name
 In heavenly regesters above the sunne, Where you a saint with saints your seat have wonne:
 But wretched we, where ye have left your marke,
 Must now anew begin like race to ronne.
 God guide thee, Guyon, well to end thy
 warke,
 And to the wished haven bring thy weary barke.'

XXXIII

'Palmer,' him answered the Redcrosse
 Knight,
 'His be the praise, that this atchiev'ment
 wrought,
 Who made my hand the organ of His
 might:
 More then goodwill to me attribute nought;
 For all I did, I did but as I ought.
 But you, faire sir, whose pageant next ensewes,
 Well mote yee thee, as well can wish your
 thought,
 That home ye may report thrise happy
 newes;
 For well ye worthy bene for worth and gentle thewes.'

XXXIV

So courteous conge both did give and
 take,
 With right hands plighted, pledges of good
 will.
 Then Guyon forward gan his voyage make With his blacke palmer, that him guided
 still.
 Still he him guided over dale and hill,
 And with his steedy staffe did point his
 way:
 His race with reason, and with words his
 will,

From fowle intemperaunce he ofte did stay,
 And suffred not in wrath his hasty steps to stray.

XXXV

In this faire wize they traveld long yfere, Through many hard assayes, which did be-
 tide,
 Of which he honour still away did beare,
 And spred his glory through all countryes
 wide.
 At last, as chaunst them by a forest side To passe, for succour from the scorching
 ray,
 They heard a ruefull voice, that dearnly
 cride,
 With percing shriekes, and many a dole-full lay;
 Which to attend, awhile their forward steps they stay.

XXXVI

'But if that carelesse hevens,' quoth she,
 'despise
 The doome of just revenge, and take de-
 light
 To see sad pageaunts of mens miseries, As bound by them to live in lives de-
 spight,
 Yet can they not warne Death from wretched wight.
 Come then, come soone, come, sweetest Death, to me,
 And take away this long lent loathed light:
 Sharpe be thy wounds, but sweete the medicines be,
 That long captived soules from weary thraldome free.

XXXVII

'But thou, sweete babe, whom frowning froward fate Hath made sad wisse of thy fathers
 fall, Sith heven thee deignes to hold in living
 state,
 Long maist thou live, and better thrive
 withall,
 Then to thy lucklesse parents did befall:
 Live thou, and to thy mother dead attest,
 That cleare she didd from blemish crimi-nall:
 Thy litle hands embrewd in bleeding brest, Loe! I for pledges leave. So give me leave to rest.'

XXXVIII

With that a deadly shriek she forth did
throw,
That through the wood reechoed againe,
And after gave a grone so deepe and low, That seemd her tender heart was rent in
twaine,
Or thrill with point of thorough piercing
paine:
As gentle hynd, whose sides with cruell steele
Through launched, forth her bleeding life does raine, Whiles the sad pang approching shee does feele, Braies out her latest breath, and up her eyes doth seele.

XXXIX

Which when that warrior heard, dismounting strait
From his tall steed, he rusht into the thick, And soone arrived where that sad pourtraict
Of death and dolour lay, halfe dead, halfe quick;
In whose white alabaster brest did stick A cruell knife, that made a griesly wound, From which forth gusht a stream of gore-blood thiek,
That all her goodly garments staind arownd, And into a deepe sanguine dide the grassy
grownd.

XL

Pitifull spectacle of deadly smart, Beside a bubling fountaine low she lay,
Which shee increased with her bleeding
hart,
And the cleane waves with purple gore did
ray;
Als in her lap a lovely babe did play
His cruell sport, in stead of sorrow dew;
For in her streaming blood he did embay
His litle hands, and tender joints embrew; Pitifull spectacle, as ever eie did vew.

XLI

Besides them both, upon the soiled gras
The dead corse of an armed knight was spred, Whose armour all with blood besprincled
was;
His ruddy lips did smyle, and rosy red Did paint his chearefull cheekes, yett being
clad;

Seemd to have beene a goodly personage,
Now in his freshest flowre of lustyhed, Fitt to inflame faire lady with loves rage, But that fiers fate did crop the blossome of his age.

XLII

Whom when the good Sir Guyon did behold,
His hart gan wexe as starke as marble stone,
And his fresh blood did frieze with fearefull cold,
That all his sences seemd berefte attone.
At last his mighty ghost gan deepe to grone,
As lion, grudging in his great disdaine, Mournes inwardly, and makes to him selfe
mone,
Til ruth and fraile affection did constraine His stout courage to stoupe, and shew his inward paine.

XLIII

Out of her gored wound the cruell steel He lightly snatcht, and did the floodgate stop
With his faire garment: then gan softly feel Her feeble pulse, to prove if any drop Of living blood yet in her veynes did hop;
Which when he felt to move, he hoped faire
To call backe life to her forsaken shop:
So well he did her deadly wounds repaire, That at the last shee gan to breath out living aire.

XLIV

Which he perceiving, greatly gan rejoice,
And goodly counsell, that for wounded hart Is meetest med'cine, tempred with sweete
voice:
'Ay me! deare lady, which the ymage art
Of ruefull pittie, and impatient smart, What direfull chaunee, armd with avenging
fate,
Or cursed hand, hath plaid this cruell part,
Thus fowle to hasten your untimely date?
Speake, O dear lady, speake: help never comes too late.'

XLV

Therewith her dim eie-lids she up gan
reare,
On which the drery death did sitt, as sad As hump of lead, and made darke clouds
appeare:
But when as him, all in bright armour
clad,

Before her standing she espied had,
 As one out of a deadly dreame affright,
 She weakly started, yet she nothing drad: Streight downe againe her selfe in great
 despight
 She groveling threw to ground, as hating life and light.

XLVI

The gentle knight her soone with carefull
 paine
 Uplifted light, and softly did uphold: Thrise he her reard, and thrise she sunek
 againe,
 Till he his armes about her sides gan fold,
 And to her said: 'Yet if the stony cold
 Have not all seized on your frozen hart, Let one word fall that may your grieft un-
 fold,
 And tell the secrete of your mortall smart:
 He oft finds present helpe, who does his grieft impart.'

XLVII

Then, casting up a deadly looke, full low Shee sight from bottome of her wounded
 brest,
 And after, many bitter throbs did throw:
 With lips full pale and foltring tong opprest, These words she breathed forth from riven
 chest:
 'Leave, ah! leave of, what ever wight thou
 bee,
 To lett a weary wretch from her dew rest,
 And trouble dyng soules tranquillitee.
 Take not away now got, which none would give to me.'

XLVIII

'Ah! far be it,' said he, 'deare dame, fro
 mee,
 To hinder soule from her desired rest,
 Or hold sad life in long captivitee:
 For all I seeke is but to have redrest
 The bitter pangs that doth your heart infest.
 Tell then, O lady, tell what fatall priefe Hath with so huge misfortune you opprest:
 That I may cast to compas your reliefe, Or die with you in sorrow, and partake your grieft.'

XLIX

With feeble hands then stretched forth on
 hye,
 As heven accusing guilty of her death,

And with dry drops congealed in her eye,
 In these sad wordes she spent her utmost
 breath:
 'Heare then, O man, the sorrowes that un-
 eath
 My tong can tell, so far all sence they pas: Loe! this dead corpse, that lies here underneath,
 The gentles knight, that ever on greene
 gras
 Gay steed with spurs did pricke, the good Sir Mortdant was.

'Was (ay the while, that he is not so now!) My lord, my love, my deare lord, my deare
 love,
 So long as hevens just with equall brow Vouchsafed to behold us from above.
 One day, when him high corage did em-
 move,
 As wont ye knightes to seeke adventures
 wilde,
 He pricked forth, his puissant force to
 prove.
 Me then he left enwombed of this childe, This luckles childe, whom thus ye see with blood defild.

LI

'Him fortun'd (hard fortune ye may ghesse)
 To come where vile Acrasia does wonne, Acrasia, a false enchaunteresse, That many errant knightes hath fowle for-
 donne:
 Within a wandring island, that doth ronne And stray in perilous gulfe, her dwelling
 is:
 Fayre sir, if ever there ye travell, shonne
 The cursed land where many wend amis, And know it by the name; it hight the Bowre of Blis.

LII

'Her blis is all in pleasure and delight, Wherewith she makes her lovers dronken mad,
 And then with words and weedes of wondrous might,
 On them she workes her will to uses bad:
 My liefest lord she thus beguiled had;
 For he was flesh (all flesh doth frayltie breed):
 Whom when I heard to beene so ill bestad,

Weake wretch, I wrapt myselfe in palmers
weed,
And cast to seek him forth through danger and great dread.

LIII

'Now had fayre Cynthia by even tournes Full measured three quarters of her yeare, And thise three tymes had fild her crooked
hornes,

Whenas my wombe hei burdein would for-
beare,

And bad me call Lucina to me neare.

Lucina came: a manchild lorth I brought:
The woods, the nymphes, my bowres, my midwives, weare:

Hard helpe at need! So deare thee, babe, I bought;

Yet nought to deare I deemd, while so my deare I sought.

LIV

'Him so I sought, and so at last I fownd, Where him that witch had thralld to her will,
In chaines of lust and lewde desyres ybownd,
And so transformed from his former skill,
That me he knew not, nether his owne ill; Till through wise handling and faire governance,

I him recured to a better will,
Purged from drugs of fowle intemperance:
Then meanes I gan devise for his deliverance.

LV

'Which when the vile enchaunteresse perceiv'd,

How that my lord from her I would reprove, With cup thus charmd, him parting she deceivd:

*Sad verse, give death to him that death does
give,*

And losse of love to her that loves to live, So soone as Bacchus with the Nymphes does lincke.

So parted we, and on our journey drive, Till, comming to this well, he stoupt to drinke:

The charme fulfilld, dead suddainly he downe did sincke.

LVI

'Which when I, wretch' — Not one word more she sayd,
But breaking of the end for want of breath,

And slyding soft, as downe to sleepe her
layd,

And ended all her woe in quiet death.
That seeing good Sir Guyon, could unearth From teares abstayne, for grieve his hart did grate,

And from so heavie sight his head did wreath,

Accusing fortune, and too cruell fate, Which plonged had faire lady in so wretched
state.

LVII

Then, turning to his palmer, said: 'Old
syre,

Behold the ymage of mortalitie,
And feeble nature cloth'd with fleshy tyre.
When raging passion with fierce tyranny Robs reason of her dew regalitie,

And makes it servaunt to her basest part,
The strong it weakens with infirmitie, And with bold furie armes the weakest
hart:

The strong through pleasure soonest falles, the weake through smart.'

LVIII

'But Temperance,' said he, 'with golden
squire

Betwixt them both can measure out a meane,

Nether to melt in pleasures whott desyre, Nor frye in hartlesse grieve and dolefull tene.

Thrise happy man, who fares them both atweene!

But sith this wretched woman overcome Of anguish, rather then of crime, bath
bene,

Reserve her cause to her eternall doone,
And, in the meane, vouchsafe her honorable toombe.'

LIX

'Palmer,' quoth he, 'death is an equall
doome

To good and bad, the commen in of rest;
But after death the tryall is to come,
When best shall bee to them that lived
best:

But both alike, when death hath both sup-
prest,

Religious reverence doth buriall teene, Which who so wants, wants so much of his
rest:

For all so great shame after death I weene, As selfe to dyen bad, unburied bad to beene.'

LX

So both agree their bodies to engrave:
The great earthes wombe they open to the
sky,
And with sad cypresse seemely it embrace;
Then, covering with a clod their closed
eye,
They lay therein those corses tenderly,
And bid them sleepe in everlasting peace.
But ere they did their utmost obsequy, Sir Guyon, more affection to increace, Bynempt a sacred vow, which none should ay releace.

LXI

The dead knights sword out of his sheath
he drew,
With which he cutt a lock of all their
heare,
Which meddling with their blood and earth, he threw
Into the grave, and gan devoutly sweare:
'Such and such evil God on Guyon reare, And worse and worse, young orphan, be thy payne,
If I or thou dew vengeance doe forbear, Till guiltie blood her guerdon doe obtayne.' So shedding many teares, they closd the earth agayne.

CANTO II

Babes bloody handes may not be clensd :
The face of Golden Meane :
Her sisters, two Extremities.
Strive her to banish cleaue.

I

THUS when Sir Guyon, with his faithful
guyde,
Had with dew rites and dolorous lament
The end of their sad tragedie uptyde,
The litle babe up in his armes he hent;
Who, with sweet pleasaunce and bold blandishment, Gan smyle on them, that rather ought to
weepe,
As carelesse of his woe, or innocent Of that was doen; that ruth emperced
deepe
In that knights hart, and wordes with bitter teares did steepe:

II

' Ah ! lucklesse babe, borne under cruell
starre,
And in dead parents balefull ashes bred, Full little weenest thou, what sorrowes are Left thee for porcion of thy livelyhed:
Poore orphan ! in the wide world scattered,
As budding braunch rent from the native
tree,
And throwen forth, till it be withered !
Such is the state of men ! Thus enter we Into this life with woe, and end with miseree !'

III

Then soft him selfe inclynyn on his knee Downe to that well, did in the water weene (So love does loath disdainefull nicitee) His guiltie handes from bloody gore to cleene.
He washt them oft and oft, yet nought they
beene
For all his washing cleaner. Still he strove, Yet still the litle handes were bloody seene:
The which him into great amazement drove,
And into diverse doubt his wavering wonder clove.

IV

He wist not whether blott of fowle offence Might not be purgd with water nor with bath;
Or that High God, in lieu of innocence, Imprinted had that token of his wrath, To shew how sore bloodguiltinesse he bat'th;
Or that the charme and veneme, which they dronck,
Their blood with secret filth infected hath,
Being diffused through the sencelesse 'ronck, That, through the great contagion, direfui deadly stonck.

V

Whom thus at gaze the palmer gan to bord With goodly reason, and thus fayre be-
spake:
' Ye bene right hard amated, gracious lord,
And of your ignorance great merveill
make,
Whiles cause not well conceived ye mistake.
But know, that secret vertues are infusd
In every fountaine, and in everie lake,

Which who hath skill them rightly to have chusd
To prooue of passing wonders bath full often usd.

VI

'Of those some were so from their sourse indewd
By great Dame Nature, from whose fruit-full pap
Their welheads spring, and are with moisture deawd;
Which feedes each living plant with liquid sap,
And filles with flowres fayre Floraes painted lap:
But other some by guifte of later grace,
Or by good prayers, or by other hap,
Had vertue pourd into their waters bace, And therefore were renewd, and sought from place to place.

Such is this well, wrought by occasion
straunge,
Which to her nymph befell. Upon a day,
As she the woodes with bow and shaftes did raunge,
The hartlesse hynd and robueke to dismay, Dan Faunus chaunst to meet her by the
way,
And kindling fire at her faire burning
eye,
Inflamed was to follow beauties pray,
And chaced her, that fast from him did
fly;
As hynd from her, so she fled from her enimy.

VIII

'At last, when fayling breath began to faint,
And saw no meanes to scape, of shame
affrayd,
She set her downe to weepe for sore constraint,
And to Diana calling lowd for ayde,
Her deare besought, to let her die a mayd.
The goddesse heard, and suddeine, where she sate, Welling out streames of teares, and quite
dismayd
With stony feare of that rude rustick mate, Transformd her to a stone from stedfast virgins state.

IX

'Lo! now she is that stone, from whose two heads,
As from two weeping eyes, fresh streames do flow,
Yet colde through feare and old conceived dreads;
And yet the stone her semblance seemes to
show, Shapt like a maide, that such ye may her
know;
And yet her vertues in her water byde;
For it is chaste and pure, as purest snow, Ne lets her waves with any filth be dyde, But ever like her selfe unstayned hath benee tryde.

X

'From thence it comes, that this babes bloody hand
May not be elensd with water of this
well:
Ne certes, sir, strive you it to withstand,
But let them still be bloody, as befell,
That they his mothers innocence may tell,
As she bequeathd in her last testament;
That as a sacred symbole it may dwell
In her somes flesh, to mind revengement, And be for all chaste dames an endlesse moniment.'

XI

He harkned to his reason, and the childe Uptaking, to the palmer gave to beare;
But his sad fathers armes with blood de-
filde,
An heavie load, himselfe did lightly reare;
And turning to that place, in which whyl-
eare
He left his loftie steed with golden sell And goodly gorgeous barbes, him found not
there:
By other accident, that earst befell,
He is convaide; but how or where, here fits not tell.

XII

Which when Sir Guyon saw, all were he
wroth,
Yet algates mote he soft himselfe appease,
And fairely fare on foot, how ever loth:
His double burden did him sore disease.
So long they travelled with litle ease, Till that at last they to a castle came,
Built on a rocke adjoyning to the seas:

It was an auncient worke of antique fame,
And wondrous strong by nature, and by skilfull frame.

XIII

Therein three sisters dwelt of sundry sort,
The children of one syre by mothers three;
Who dying whylome did divide this fort
To them by equall shares in equall fee:
But stryfull mind and diverse qualitee Drew them in partes, and each made others
foe:

Still did they strive, and daily disagree;
The eldest did against the youngest goe, And both against the middest meant to worken woe.

XIV

Where when the knight arriv'd, he was receiv'd, as knight of so much worth became,

Of second sister, who did far excell
The other two; Medina was her name, A sober sad, and comely courtesie dame;
Who, rich arayd, and yet in modest guise, In goodly garments, that her well be-
came,

Fayre marching forth in honorable wize, Him at the threshold mett, and well did enterprize.

XV

She led him up into a goodly bowre,
And comely courted with meet modestie, Ne in her speach, ne in her haviour,
Was lightnesse seene, or looser vanitie,
But gracious womanhood, and gravitie, Above the reason of her youthly yeares:
Her golden lockes she roundly did uptye
In breaded tramels, that no looser heares Did out of order stray about her daintie cares.

XVI

Whilist she her selfe thus busily did frame, Seemely to entertaine her new-come guest, Newes hereof to her other sisters came,
Who all this while were at their wanton
rest,

Accourting each her friend with lavish fest:

They were two knights of perelesse puis-saunce,
And famous far abroad for warlike gest,

Which to these ladies love did counte-
naunce,
And to his mistresse each himsele strove to advaunce.

XVII

He that made love unto the eldest dame
Was light Sir Huddibras, an hardy man; Yet not so good of deedes as great of
name,

Which he by many rash adventures wan,
Since errant armes to sew he first began:
More huge in strength then wise in workes he was,

And reason with foole-hardize over ran;
Sterne melancholy did his courage pas;
And was, for terrour more, all armd in shyning bras.

XVIII

But he that lov'd the youngest was Sans-loy,

He that faire Una late fowle outraged,
The most unruly and the boldest boy,
That ever warlike weapons menaged,
And to all lawlesse lust encouraged Through strong opinion of his matchlesse
might;

Ne ought he ear'd, whom he endamaged By tortious wrong, or whom bereav'd of
right.

He now this ladies champion chose for love to fight.

XIX

These two gay knights, vowd to so diverse loves,

Each other does envy with deadly hate,
And daily warre against his foeman moves,
In hope to win more favour with his mate,
And th' others pleasing service to abate,
To magnifie his owne. But when they heard, How in that place straunge knight arrived
late,

Both knights and ladies forth right angry
far'd,

And fiercely unto battell sterne themselves prepar'd.

XX

But ere they could proceede unto the place Where he abode, themselves at discord
fell,

And cruell combat joynd in middle space:
With horrible assault, and fury fell,

They heapt huge strokes, the scorned life to quell,
That all on uprore from her settled seat
The house was raysd, and all that in did
dwell;
Seemd that lowde thunder with amazement
great Did rend the ratling skyes with flames of fouldring heat.

XXI

The noyse thereof cald forth that straunger
knight,
To weet what dreadfull thing was there in
hand;
Where when as two brave knightes in bloody
fight
With deadly rancour he enraunged fond, His sunbroad shield about his wrest he bond,
And shyning blade unsheathd, with which he ran Unto that stead, their strife to understand;
And at his first arrivall, them began With goodly meanes to pacifie, well as he can.

XXII

But they him spying, both with greedy
forse Attonce upon him ran, and him beset With strokes of mortall steele without remorse,
And on his shield like yron sledges bet:
As when a beare and tygre, being met In cruell fight on Lybicke ocean wide, Espye a traueiler with feet surbet, Whom they in equall pray hope to divide, They stint their strife, and him assayle on everie side.

XXIII

But he, not like a weary traueilere, Their sharp assault right boldly did rebut,
And suffred not their blowes to byte him
nere,
But with redoubled buffes them backe did put:
Whose grieved mindes, which choler did enght, Against themselves turning their wrathfull
spight,
Gan with new rage their shieldes to hew and
cut:

But still when Guyon came to part their
fight,
With heaue load on him they freshly gan to smight.

XXIV

As a tall ship tossed in troublous seas, Whom raging windes, threatning to make the pray
Of the rough rockes, doe diversly disease, Meetes two contrarie billowes by the way,
That her on either side doe sore assay,
And boast to swallow her in greedy grave; Shee, scorning both their spights, does make wide way,
And with her brest breaking the fomy
wave,
Does ride on both their backs, and faire her self doth save:

XXV

So boldly he him beares, and rusheth forth Betweene them both, by conduct of his blade.
Wondrous great prowesse and heroick
worth
He shewed that day, and rare ensample
made,
When two so mighty warriours he dis-
made: Attonce he wards and strikes, he takes and paies,
Now forst to yield, now forcing to invade,
Before, behind, and round about him laies:
So double was his paines, so double be his praise.

XXVI

Straunge sort of fight, three valiaunt knights to see Three combates joine in one, and to darraine
A triple warre with triple enmittee, All for their ladies froward love to game, Which gotten was but hate. So Love does
raine
In stoutest minds, and maketh monstrous
warre;
He maketh warre, he maketh peace againe,
And yett his peace is but continuall jarre:
O miserable men, that to him subject arre!

XXVII

Whilst thus they mingled were in furious
armes,
The faire Medina, with her tresses torne

And naked brest, in pittie of their harmes, Emongst them rau, and, falling them be-
 forme,
 Besought them by the womb, which them had born,
 And by the loves, which were to them most
 deare,
 And by the knighthood, which they sure had sworn,
 Their deadly cruell discord to forbear, And to her just conditions of faire peace to heare.

XXVIII

But her two other sisters, standing by,
 Her lowd gainsaid, and both their champions bad
 Pursue the end of their strong enmity,
 As ever of their loves they would be glad.
 Yet she with pittie words and counsell sad Still strove their stubborne rages to revoke, That, at the last, suppressing fury mad, They gan abstaine from dint of direfull
 stroke,
 And hearken to the sober speaches which she spoke.

XXIX

'Ah! puissaunt lords, what cursed evill
 spright,
 Or fell Erinnyes, in your noble harts Her hellish brond hath kindled with de-
 spight,
 And stird you up to worke your wilfull
 smarts?
 Is this the joy of armes? be these the parts Of glorious knighthood, after blood to thrust,
 And not regard dew right and just desarts?
 Vaine is the vaunt, and victory unjust, That more to mighty hands then rightful cause doth trust.

XXX

'And were there rightfull cause of difference,
 Yet were not better, fayre it to accord,
 Then with bloodguiltinesse to heape offence,
 And mortal vengeaunce joyne to crime abbord?
 O fly from wrath! fly, O my liefest lord!
 Sad be the sights, and bitter fruites of
 warre,
 And thousand furies wait on wrathfull
 sword;

Ne ought the praise of prowesse more doth marre
 Then fowle revenging rage, and base contentious jarre.

XXXI

'But lovely concord, and most sacred peace, Doth nourish vertue, and fast friendship
 breeds;
 Weake she makes strong, and strong thing does increace, Till it the pitch of highest praise exceeds;
 Brave be her warres, and honorable deeds,
 By which she triumphes over yre and pride,
 And winnes an olive girlond for her meeds:
 Be therefore, O my deare lords, pacifide, And this misseeming discord meekely lay aside.'

XXXII

Her gracious words their rancour did appall, And suncke so deepe into their boyling brests,
 That downe they lett their cruell weapons
 fall,
 And lowly did abase their lofty crests
 To her faire presence and discrete behests.
 Then she began a treaty to procure,
 And stablish termes betwixt both their requests,
 That as a law for ever should endure;
 Which to observe, in word of knights they did assure.

XXXIII

Which to confirme, and fast to bind their league,
 After their weary sweat and bloody toile, She them besought, during their quiet tregue,
 Into her lodging to repaire a while,
 To rest themselves, and grace to reconcile.
 They soone consent: so forth with her they
 fare,
 Where they are well receivd, and made to
 spoile
 Themselves of soiled armes, and to prepare Their minds to pleasure, and their mouths to dainty fare.

XXXIV

And those two froward sisters, their faire
 loves,
 Came with them eke, all were they wondrous loth,

And fained cheare, as for the time behoves;
 But could not colour yet so well the troth,
 But that their natures bad appeared in both:
 For both did at their second sister grutch,
 And inly grieve, as doth an hidden moth
 The inner garment frett, not th' utter touch; One thought her cheare too litle, th' other thought too mutch.

XXXV

Elissa (so the eldest hight) did deeme Such entertainment base, ne ought would
 eat,
 Ne ought would speake, but evermore did
 seeme
 As discontent for want of merth or meat;
 No solace could her paramour intreat Her once to show, ne court, nor dalliaunce; But with bent lowring browes, as she would
 threat,
 She scould, and frownd with froward countenance, Unworthy of faire ladies comely govern-aunce.

XXXVI

But young Perissa was of other mynd, Full of disport, still laughing, loosely light,
 And quite contrary to her sisters kynd;
 No measure in her mood, no rule of right,
 But poured out in pleasure and delight;
 In wine and meats she flowd above the bank,
 And in excesse exceeded her owne might;
 In sumptuous tye she joyd her selfe to pranck,
 But of her love too lavish (litle have she thanck.)

XXXVII

Fast by her side did sitt the bold Sansloy, Fitt mate for such a mincing mineon,
 Who in her loosenesse tooke exceeding joy;
 Might not be found a francker franion,
 Of her leawd parts to make companion:
 But Huddibras, more like a malecontent, Did see and grieve at his bold fashion;
 Hardly could he endure his hardiment, Yett still he satt, and inly did him selfe torment.

XXXVIII

Betwixt them both the faire Medina sate With sober grace and goodly carriage:
 With equall measure she did moderate
 The strong extremities of their outrage.

That forward paire she ever would as-
 swage,
 When they would strive dew reason to exceed;
 But that same froward twaine would ac-corage,
 And of her plenty adde unto their need:
 So kept she them in order, and her selfe in heed.

XXXIX

Thus fairely shee attempered her feast,
 And pleased them all with meete satiety:
 At last, when lust of meat and drinke was ceast,
 She Guyon deare besought of curtesie, To tell from whence he came through jeopardy,
 And whether now on new adventure bownd:
 Who with bold grace, and comely gravity, Drawing to him the eies of all arownd, From lofty siege began these words aloud to sownd.

XL

'This thy demanda, O lady, doth revive Fresh memory in me of that great Queene, Great and most glorious virgin Queene
 alive,
 That with her sovaine powre, and scepter shene,
 All Faery Lond does peaceably sustene.
 In widest ocean she her throne does reare,
 That over all the earth it may be seene;
 As morning sunne her beames dispredden
 cleare,
 And in her face faire peace and mercy doth appear.

XLI

'In her the richesse of all heavenly grace In chiefe degree are heaped up on hye:
 And all, that els this worlds enclosure bace Hath great or glorious in mortall eye, Adornes the person of her Majestye;
 That men beholding so great excellence,
 And rare perfection in mortalitye, Doe her adore with sacred reverence, As th' idole of her Makers great magnificence.

XLII

'To her I homage and my service owe, In number of the noblest knightes on
 ground,

Mongst whom on me she deigned to bestowe Order of Maydenhead, the most renownd, That may this day in all the world be
found.

An yearely solemne feast she woxtes to
hold,

The day that first doth lead the yeare
around;

To which all knights of worth and courage
bold

Resort, to heare of straunge adventures to be told.

XLIII

‘There this old palmer shewd himselfe
that day,

And to that mighty Princesse did complaine Of grievous mischiefes, which a wicked
Fay

Had wrought, and many whelmd in deadly
paine,

Whereof he crav’d redresse. My sove-
raine,

Whose glory is in gracious deeds, and joyes Throughout the world her mercy to main-
taine,

Eftsoones devisd redresse for such an-noyes:

Me, all unfitt for so great purpose, she employes.

XLIV

‘Now nath faire Phebe with her silver
face

Thrise seene the shadowes of the neather
world,

Sith last I left that honorable place,
In which her roiall presence is enrolld;

Ne ever shall I rest in house nor hold,
Till I that false Acrasia have wonne;

Of whose fowle deedes, too hideous to bee
told,

I witnesse am, and this their wretched
sonne,

Whose wofull parents she hath wickedly fordonne.’

XLV

‘Tell on, fayre sir,’ said she, ‘that dolefull tale,

From which sad ruth does seeme you to restraine,

That we may pittie such unhappie bale,
And learne from Pleasures poyson to ab-
staine:

Ill by ensample good doth often gayne.’
Then forward he his purpose gan pursew,
And told the story of the mortall payne,
Which Mordant and Amavia did rew;
As with lamenting eyes him selfe did lately
vew.

XLVI

Night was far spent, and now in ocean deep Orion, flying fast from hissing Snake, His flaming head did hasten for to steep,
When of his pitteous tale he end did make;
Whilst with delight of that he wisely spake Those gwestes beguyled did beguyle their eyes

Of kindly sleepe, that did them overtake.
At last, when they had markt the changed
skyes,

They wist their houre was spent; then each to rest him hyes.

CANTO III

Vaine Braggadocchio, getting Guyons horse, is made the scorn Of knighthood trew, and is of fayre Belphebe fowle forlorne.

I

SOONE as the morrow fayre with purple
beames

Disperst the shadowes of the misty night,
And Titan, playing on the eastern streames, Gan cleare the dewy ayre with springing

light,
Sir Guyon, mindfull of his vow yplight,

Uprose from drowsie couch, and him ad-
drest

Unto the journey which he had beight:
His puissant armes about his noble brest, And many-folded shield he bound about his wrest.

II

Then taking congè of that virgin pure,
The bloody-handed babe unto her truth

Did earnestly committ, and her conjure,
In vertuous lore to traine his tender youth,

And all that gentle noriture ensueth:
And that, so soone as ryper yeares he

raught,
He might, for memory of that dayes ruth,

Be called Ruddymane, and thereby taught T’avenge his parents death on them that had it wrought.

III

So forth he far'd, as now befell, on foot, Sith his good steed is lately from him
gone;

Patience perforce: helplesse what may it boot

To frett for anger, or for griefe to mone?
His palmer now shall foot no more alone.
So fortune wrought, as under greene woodes syde

He lately hard that dying lady grone,
He left his steed without, and speare besyde, And rushed in on foot to ayd her, ere she dyde.

IV

The whyles a losell wandring by the way,
One that to bountie never cast his mynd, Ne thought of honour ever did assay His baser brest, but in his kestrell kynd
A pleasing vaine of glory he did fynd, To which his flowing tounge and troublous
spright

Gave him great ayd, and made him more inelynd:

He, that brave steed there finding ready
dight,

Purloynd both steed and speare, and ran away full light.

Now gan his hart all swell in jollity,
And of him selfe great hope and help con-
ceiv'd,

That puffed up with smoke of vanity,
And with selfe-loved personage deceiv'd,
He gan to hope of men to be receiv'd For such as he him thought, or faine would
bee:

But for in court gay portance he perceiv'd
And gallant shew to be in greatest gree, Eftsoones to court he cast t' aduance his first degree.

VI

And by the way he chaunced to espy
One sitting ydle on a sunny banck,
To whom vaunting in great bravery, As peacocke, that his painted plumes doth
pranck,

He smote his courser in the trembling flanck,

And to him threatned his hart-thrilling
speare:

The seely man, seeing him ryde so ranck

And ayme at him, fell flatt to ground for
feare,
And crying 'Mercy!' loud, his pitious handes gan reare.

VII

Thereat the scarcrow wexed wondrous prowd,

Through fortune of his first adventure
fayre,

And with big thundring voice reuyld him lowd:

'Vile caytive, vassall of dread and despayre, Unworthe of the commune breathed ayre,
Why livest thou, dead dog, a lenger day,
And doest not unto death thy selfe prepayre?

Dy, or thy selfe my captive yield for ay;
Great favour I thee graunt, for aunswere thus to stay.'

VIII

'Hold, O deare lord, hold your dead-doing
hand!'

Then loud he cryde, 'I am your humble
thrall.'

'Ah, wretch!' quoth he, 'thy destinies with-
stand

My wrathfull will, and doe for mercy
call.

I give thee life: therefore prostrated fall,
And kisse my stirrup; that thy homage
bee.'

The miser threw him selfe, as an offall, Streight at his foot in base humilitee, And cleeped him his liege, to hold of him in fee.

IX

So happy peace they made and faire accord.

Eftsoones this liegeman gan to wexe more
bold,

And when he felt the folly of his lord,
In his owne kind he gan him selfe unfold:
For he was wylie witted, and growne old In cunning sleights and practick knavery.
From that day forth he cast for to uphold
His ydle humour with fine flattery, And blow the bellows to his swelling vanity.

Trompart, fitt man for Braggadochio,
To serve at court in view of vaunting eye;

Vaineglorious man, when fluttring wind does blow
 In his light winges, is lifted up to skye;
 The scorn of knighthood and trew cheval-
 rye,
 To thinke, without desert of gentle deed
 And noble worth, to be advaunced hye:
 Such prayse is shame; but honour, vertues
 meed,
 Doth beare the fayrest flowre in honourable seed.

XI

So forth they pas, a well consorted payre, Till that at length with Archimage they
 meet:
 Who, seeing one that shone in armour fayre,
 On goodly courser thondring with his feet, Eftsoones supposed him a person meet
 Of his revenge to make the instrument:
 For since the Rederosse Knight he erst did
 weet,
 To bene with Guyon knitt in one con-
 sent,
 The ill, which earst to him, he now to Guyon ment.

XII

And comming close to Trompart gan inquere
 Of him, what mightie warriour that mote
 bee,
 That rode in golden sell with single spere, But wanted sword to wreake his enmi-tee.
 'He is a great adventurer,' said he,
 'That hath his sword through hard assay forgone,
 And now hath vovd, till he avenged bee
 Of that despight, never to wearen none;
 That speare is him enough to doen a thousand grone.'

XIII

Th' enchaunter greatly joyed in the vaunt,
 And weened well ere long his will to win, And both his foen with equall foyle to daunt.
 Tho to him louting lowly did begin To plaine of wronges, which had committed bin
 By Guyon, and by that false Rederosse
 Knight,
 Which two, through treason and deceitfull gin,

Had slayne Sir Mordant and his lady bright: That mote him honour win, to wreak so foule despight.

XIV

Therewith all suddainly he seemd enragd, And threatend death with dreadfull countenaunce,
 As if their lives had in his hand beene gagd;
 And with stiffe force shaking his mortall
 launce,
 To let him weet his doughtie valiaunce, Thus said: 'Old man, great sure shalbe thy
 meed,
 If, where those knights for feare of dew vengeance
 Doe lurke, thou certainly to mee areed, That I may wreake on them their hainous hateful deed.'

XV

'Certes, my lord,' said he, 'that shall I
 soone,
 And give you eke good helpe to their decay.
 But mote I wisely you advise to doon, Give no ods to your foes, but doe purvay
 Your selfe of sword before that bloody day:
 For they be two the prowest knights on
 grownd,
 And oft approv'd in many hard assay;
 And eke of surest steele, that may be
 fownd,
 Doe arme your self against that day, them to confownd.'

XVI

'Dotard,' saide he, 'let be thy deepe advise;
 Seemes that through many yeares thy wits thee faile,
 And that weake eld hath left thee nothing
 wise,
 Els never should thy judgement be so frayle, To measure manhood by the sword or mayle.
 Is not enough fowre quarters of a man, Withouten sword or shield, an hoste to quayle?
 Thou litle wotest what this right-hand can:
 Speake they, which have beheld the battaitles which it wan.'

XVII

The man was much abashed at his boast;
 Yet well he wist, that who so would contend

With either of those knightes on even coast,
Should neede of all his armes, him to defend;
Yet feared least his boldnesse should offend:
When Braggadocchio saide: 'Once I did
swear,
When with one sword seven knightes I brought to end, Thence forth in battaile never sword to
beare,
But it were that which noblest knight on earth doth weare.'

XVIII

'Perdy, sir knight,' saide then th' enchaunter blive,
'That shall I shortly purchase to your hond:
For now the best and noblest knight alive Prince Arthur is, that womnes in Faerie Lond;
He hath a sword, that flames like burning bround.
The same, by my device, I undertake Shall by to morrow by thy side be fond.'
At which bold word that boaster gan to
quake,
And wondred in his minde what mote that monster make.

XIX

He stayd not for more bidding, but away
Was suddein vanished out of his sight:
The northerne winde his wings did broad display
At his commaund, and reared him up light From of the earth to take his aerie flight.
They lookt about, but no where could espye Tract of his foot: then dead through great affright
They both nigh were, and each bad other flye:
Both fled attonce, ne ever backe returned
eye:

XX

Till that they come unto a forrest greene, In which they shrowd themselves from causeles feare;
Yet feare them followes still, where so they
beene.
Each trembling leafe and whistling wind they heare,
As ghastly bug, their haire on end does
reare.

Yet both doe strive their fearefulnessse to
faine.
At last they heard a horne, that shrilled
cleare
Throughout the wood, that echoed againe, And made the forrest ring, as it would rive in twaine.

XXI

Eft through the thicke they heard one rudely rush;
With noyse whereof he from his loftie
steed Downe fell to ground, and crept into a bush,
To hide his coward head from dying dreed.
But Trompart stoutly stayd to taken heed Of what might hap. Eftsoone there stepped foorth
A goodly ladie clad in hunters weed, That seemd to be a woman of great
worth,
And, by her stately portance, borne of heavenly birth.

XXII

Her face so faire as flesh it seemed not,
But hevenly pourtraict of bright angels
hew, Cleare as the skye, withouten blame or
blot,
Through goodly mixture of complexions
dew;
And in her cheekes the vermeill red did
shew
Like roses in a bed of lillies shed, The which ambrosiall odours from them
threw,
And gazers sence with double pleasure fed, Hable to heale the sicke, and to revive the
ded.

XXIII

In her faire eyes two living lamps did
flame,
Kindled above at th' Hevenly Makers light,
And darted fyrie beames out of the same,
So passing persant, and so wondrous bright, That quite bereav'd the rash beholders
sight:
In them the blinded god his lustfull fyre To kindle oft assayd, but had no might;
For with dredd majestie and awfull yre She broke his wanton darts, and quenched base desyre.

XXIV

Her yvorie forehead, full of bountie brave,
Like a broad table did it selfe dispred,
For Love his loftie triumphes to engrave, And write the battailes of his great god-
hed:

All good and honour might therein be red:
For there their dwelling was. And when she spake,

Sweete wordes, like dropping honny, she did shed,

And twixt the perles and rubins softly
brake

A silver sound, that heavenly musicke seemd to make.

XXV

Upon her eyelids many Graces sate, Under the shadow of her even browes, Working belgardes and amorous retrate,
And everie one her with a grace endowes, And everie one with meekenesse to her bowes.

So glorious mirrhour of celestial grace,
And soveraine monument of mortall vowes, How shall frayle pen describe her heavenly
face,

For feare, through want of skill, her beauty to disgrace?

XXVI

So faire, and thousand thousand times more
faire,

She seemd, when she presented was to
sight;

And was yelad, for heat of scorching aire,
All in a silken camus lylly whight, Purffed upon with many a folded plight, Which all above besprinckled was throughout

With golden aygulets, that glistred bright, Like twinkling starres, and all the skirt
about

Was hemd with golden fringe.

XXVII

Below her ham her weed did somewhat
trayne,

And her streight legs most bravely were embayld

In gilden buskins of costly cordwayne, All bard with golden bendes, which were entayld

With curious antickes, and full fayre aumayld:

Before, they fastned were under her knee
In a rich jewell, and therein entrayld The ends of all their knots, that none might
see

How they within their fouldings close en-wrapped bee.

XXVIII

Like two faire marble pillours they were
seene,

Which doe the temple of the gods support, Whom all the people decke with girlands
greene,

And honour in their festivall resort;
Those same with stately grace and princely port

She taught to tread, when she her selfe would grace,

But with the woody nymphes when she did
sport,

Or when the flying libbard she did chace,
She could them nimble move, and after fly apace.

XXIX

And in her hand a sharpe bore-speare she
held,

And at her backe a bow and quiver gay, Stuff with steele-headed dartes, wherewith she queld

The salvage beastes in her victorious play, Kuit with a golden bauldricke, which fore-
lay

Athwart her snowy brest, and did divide Her daintie paps; which, like young fruit in May,

Now little gan to swell, and being tide, Through her thin weed their places only signifide.

XXX

Her yellow lockes, crisped like golden wyre,
About her shoulders weren loosely shed, And when the winde amongst them did in-spyre,

They waved like a penon wyde dispred,
And low behinde her backe were scattered:
And whether art it were, or heedelesse
hap,

As through the flouring forrest rash she
fled,

In her rude heares sweet flowres themselves did lap,

And flourishing fresh leaves and blossomes did enwrap.

XXXI

Such as Diana by the sandy shore Of swift Eurotas, or on Cynthus greene, Where all the nymphes have her unwares
 forlore, Wandreth alone with bow and arrowes
 keene,
 To seeke her game: or as that famous
 queene
 Of Amazons, whom Pyrrhus did destroy,
 The day that first of Priame she was seene, Did shew her selfe in great triumphant
 joy,
 To succour the weake state of sad afflicted Troy.

XXXII

Such when as hartlesse Trompart her did
 vew,
 He was dismayed in his coward minde, And doubted, whether he himselfe should
 shew,
 Or fly away, or bide alone behinde:
 Both feare and hope he in her face did
 finde,
 When she at last, him spying, thus bespake:
 'Hayle, groome! didst not thou see a bleeding hynde,
 Whose right haunch earst my stedfast arrow strake?
 If thou didst, tell me, that I may her overtake.'

XXXIII

Wherewith reviv'd, this answere forth he
 threw:
 'O goddesse, (for such I thee take to bee;
 For nether doth thy face terrestriall shew, Nor voyce sound mortall) I avow to thee, Such wounded beast as that I did not see, Sith earst into this Forrest wild I came.
 But mote thy goodlyhed forgive it mee, To weete which of the gods I shall thee
 name,
 That unto thee dew worship I may rightly frame.'

XXXIV

To whom she thus — But ere her words
 ensewd,
 Unto the bush her eye did suddein glance,
 In which vaine Braggadochio was mewd, And saw it stirre: she lefte her percing lance,
 And towards gan a deadly shafte advaunce,

In mind to marke the beast. At which sad
 stowre,
 Trompart forth stept, to stay the mortall
 chaunce,
 Out crying: 'O, what ever heavenly powre, Or earthly wight thou be, withhold this deadly howre!

XXXV

'O stay thy hand! for yonder is no game
 For thy fiers arrowes, them to exercise, But loe! my lord, my liege, whose warlike
 name
 Is far renownd through many bold em-
 prize;
 And now in shade he shrowded yonder lies.'
 She staid: with that he crauld out of his nest, Forth creeping on his caitive hands and thies,
 And standing stoutly up, his lofty crest Did fiercely shake, and rowze, as comming late from rest.

XXXVI

As fearfull fowle, that long in secret cave For dread of soring hauke her selfe hath hid,
 Not caring how, her silly life to save,
 She her gay painted plumes disorderid, Seeing at last her selfe from daunger rid, Peepes forth, and soone renews her native
 pride;
 She gins her feathers fowle disfigured Prowdly to prune, and sett on every side; So shakes off shame, ne thinks how erst she did her hide.

XXXVII

So when her goodly visage he beheld, He gan himselfe to vaunt; but when he vewd Those deadly tooles which in her hand she
 held,
 Soone into other fitts he was transmewd, Till she to him her gracious speach renewd:
 'All haile, sir knight, and well may thee befall,
 As all the like, which honor have pur-sewd
 Through deeds of armes and prowesse mar-tiall!
 All vertue merits praise, but such the most of all.'

XXXVIII

To whom he thus: 'O fairest under skie, Trew be thy words, and worthy of thy praise,
That warlike feats doest highest glorifie.
Therein have I spent all my youthly daies,
And many battailes fought and many fraies Throughout the world, wher so they might
be found,
Endevoring my dreaded name to raise Above the moone, that Fame may it resound In her eternall tromp, with laurell girlond cround.

XXXIX

'But what art thou, O lady, which doest raunge
In this wilde forest, where no pleasure is,
And doest not it for joyous court exchange, Amongst thine equall peres, where happy
blis
And all delight does raigne, much more then this?
There thou maist love, and dearly loved be,
And swim in pleasure, which thou here doest mis;
There maist thou best be seene, and best maist see:
The wood is fit for beasts, the court is fitt for thee.'

XL

'Who so in pompe of prouwd estate,' quoth
she,
'Does swim, and bathes him selfe in courtly
blis,
Does waste his dayes in darke obscuretee,
And in oblivion ever buried is:
Where ease abownds, yt's eath to doe amis:
But who his limbs with labours, and his
mynd
Behaves with eares, cannot so easy mis.
Abroad in armes, at home in studious kynd, Who seekes with painfull toile, shal Honor soonest fynd.

XLI

'In woods, in waves, in warres she wents to
dwell,
And wilbe found with perill and with paine;
Ne can the man, that moulds in ydle cell, Unto her happy mansion attaine: Before her gate High God did sweate or-
daine,
And wakefull watches ever to abide:
But easy is the way, and passage plaine

To Pleasures pallace; it may soone be spide, And day and night her dores to all stand open wide.

XLII

'In princes court—' The rest she would have sayd,
But that the foolish man, fild with delight Of her sweete words, that all his sence dis-
mayd,
And with her wondrous beauty ravisht
quight,
Gan burne in filthy lust, and, leaping light, Thought in his bastard armes her to embrace.
With that she, swarving backe, her javelin
bright
Against him bent, and fiercely did menace:
So turned her about, and fled away apace.

XLIII

Which when the pesaut saw, amazd he
stood,
And grieved at her flight; yet durst he nott Pursew her steps through wild unknowen
wood;
Besides he feard her wrath, and threatned shott,
Whiles in the bush he lay, not yet forgott:
Ne ear'd he greatly for her presence vayne, But turning said to Trompart: 'What fowle blott
Is this to knight, that lady should agayne Depart to woods untoucht, and leave so proud disdayne!'

XLIV

'Perdy,' said Trompart, 'lett her pas at
will,
Least by her presence daunger mote befall.
For who can tell (and sure I feare it ill)
But that shee is some powre celestiall?
For whiles she spake, her great words did apall
My feeble corage, and my heart oppresse,
'That yet I quake and tremble over all.'
'And I,' said Braggadoechio, 'thought no
lesse,
When first I heard her horn sound with such ghastlinesse.

XLV

'For from my mothers wombe this grace I have Me given by eternall destiny,

That earthly thing may not my corage
brave
Dismay with feare, or cause on foote to
flye,
But either hellish feends, or powres on hye:
Which was the cause, when earst that horne
I heard,
Weening it had beene thunder in the skye,
I hid my selfe from it, as one affeard;
But when I other knew, my selfe I boldly reard.

XLVI

'But now, for feare of worse that may be-
tide,
Let us soone hence depart.' They soone agree;
So to his steed he gott, and gan to ride,
As one unfit therefore, that all might see
He had not trayned bene in chevalree.
Which well that valiaunt courser did discerne;
For he despid to tread in dew degree, But chaufd and fom'd, with corage fiers and
sterne,
And to be easd of that base burden still did erne.

CANTO IV

Guyon does Furor bind in chaines, And stops Occasion: Delivers Phedon, and therefore By Strife is rayld upon.

I

IN brave poursuitt of honorable deed,
There is I know not what great difference Betweene the vulgar and the noble seed, Which unto things of valorous pretence Seemes to be borne by native influence;
As feates of armes, and love to entertaine;
But chiefly skill to ride seemes a science Proper to gentle blood: some others faine To menage steeds, as did this vaunter; but in vaine.

II

But he, the rightfull owner of that steede, Who well could menage and subdew his
pride,
The whiles on foot was forced for to yeed,
With that blacke palmer, his most trusty
guide,
Who suffred not his wandring feete to slide;

But when strong passion, or weake fleshli-
nesse,
Would from the right way seeke to draw him wide,
He would, through temperaunce and stedfastnesse, Teach him the weak to strengthen, and the strong suppressse.

III

It fortun'd, forth faring on his way,
He saw from far, or seemed for to see,
Some troublous uprore or contentious fray, Whereto he drew in hast, it to agree.
A mad man, or that feigned mad to bee, Drew by the heare along upon the grownd
A handsom stripling with great crueltee, Whom sore he bett, and gor'd with many a
wound,
That cheekes with teares, and sydes with blood did all abownd.

IV

And him behynd, a wicked hag did stalke,
In ragged robes and filthy disaray:
Her other leg was lame, that she no'te
walke,
But on a staffe her feeble steps did stay:
Her lockes, that loathly were and hoarie
gray,
Grew all afore, and loosly hong unrold,
But all behinde was bald, and worne away,
That none thereof could ever taken hold,
And eke her face ill favourd, full of wrinkles old.

V

And ever as she went, her toung did walke
In fowle reproch and termes of vile despight, Provoking him, by her outrageous talke, To heape more vengeance on that wretched
wight;
Sontimes she raught him stones, wherwith to smite, Sometimes her staffe, though it her one leg
were,
Withouten which she could not goe upright;
Ne any evill meanes she did forbear, That might him move to wrath, and indignation reare.

VI

The noble Guyon, mov'd with great re-
morse,
Approching, first the hag did thrust away,

And after, adding more impetuous forse,
 His mighty hands did on the madman lay,
 And pluckt him backe; who, all on fire straight way,
 Against him turning all his fell intent,
 With beastly brutish rage gan him assay,
 And smott, and bitt, and kickt, and scratcht,
 and rent,
 And did he wist not what in his avengement.

And sure he was a man of mickle might,
 Had he had governaunce, it well to guyde: But when the frantick fitt inflamd his
 spright,
 His force was vaine, and strooke more often
 wyde
 Then at the aymed marke which he had
 eyde:
 And oft himselve he chaunst to hurt un-
 wares,
 Whylest reason, blent through passion, nought deseryde,
 But as a blindfold bull at randon fares, And where he hits, nought knowes, and whom he hurts, nought cares.

VIII

His rude assault and rugged handling Strange seemed to the knight, that aye with foe
 In fayre defence and goodly menaging Of armes was wont to fight; yet nathemoe Was he abashed now, not fighting so, But, more enfiereed through his currish
 play,
 Him sternly grypt, and, hailing to and
 fro,
 To overthrow him strongly did assay, But overthrew him selfe unwares, and lower lay.

IX

And being downe, the vellein sore did beate And bruze with clownish fistes his manly
 face;
 And eke the hag, with many a bitter threat,
 Still cald upon to kill him in the place.
 With whose reproch and odious menace
 The knight emboyling in his haughtie hart, Knitt all his forces, and gan soone un-
 brace
 His grasping hold: so lightly did upstart, And drew his deadly weapon, to maintaine his part.

X

Which when the palmer saw, he loudly
 cryde,
 'Not so, O Guyon, never thinke that so That monster can be maistred or destroyd:
 He is not, ah! he is not such a foe,
 As steele can wound, or strength can overthroe.
 That same is Furor, cursed cruel wight, That unto knighthood workes much shame and woe;
 And that same hag, his aged mother, light Occasion, the roote of all wrath and de-spight.

XI

'With her, who so will raging Furor tame, Must first begin, and well her amenge:
 First her restraine from her reprochfull
 blame
 And evill meanes, with which she doth en-
 rage
 Her frantick sonne, and kindles his corage; Then, when she is withdrawne, or strong withstood,
 It's eath his ydle fury to aswage,
 And calme the tempest of his passion wood:
 The bankes are overflowne, when stopped is the flood.'

Therewith Sir Guyon left his first emprise,
 And turning to that woman, fast her hent
 By the hoare lockes that hong before her
 eyes,
 And to the ground her threw: yet n'ould she stent
 Her bitter rayling and foule revilement, But still provokt her some to wreake her
 wrong;
 But nathelesse he did her still torment,
 And catching hold of her ungratious tonge.
 Thereon an yron lock did fasten firme and strong.

XIII

Then whenas use of speach was from her
 reft,
 With her two crooked handes she signes did make,
 And beckned him, the last help she had
 left:
 But he that last left helpe away did take,
 And both her handes fast bound unto a stake.

That she note stirre. Then gan her sonne to flye Full fast away, and did her quite forsake;
But Guyon after him in hast did hye,
And soone him overtooke in sad perplexitye.

XIV

In his strong armes he stiffly him embraste, Who, him gainstriving, nought at all prevaild:

For all his power was utterly defaste, And furious fitts at earst quite weren quaild:

Oft he re'nforst, and oft his forces fayld, Yet yield he would not, nor his rancor
slack.

Then him to ground he cast, and rudely hayld,
And both his hands fast bound behind his
backe,
And both his feet in fetters to an yron rack.

XV

With hundred yron chaines he did him bind, And hundred knots, that did him sore con-
straine:

Yet his great yron teeth he still did grind,
And grimly gnash, threatning revenge in
vaine:

His burning eyen, whom bloody strakes did
staine,
Stared full wide, and threw forth sparkes of fyre,

And more for rancor despite then for great
paine,
Shakt his long locks, colourd like copperwyre,
And bitt his tawny beard to shew his raging
yre.

XVI

Thus whenas Guyon Furor had captivd, Turning about he saw that wretched sqyre, Whom that mad man of life nigh late de-privd,

Lying on ground, all soild with blood and
myre:

Whom whenas he perceived to respyre, He gan to comfort, and his woundes to
dresse.

Being at last recured, he gan inquirye,
What hard mishap him brought to such dis-
tresse,

And made that carytives thrall, the thrall of wretchednesse.

XVII

With hart then throbbing, and with watry
eyes,
'Fayre sir,' quoth he, 'what man can shun the hap,

That hidden lyes unwares him to surpryse?
Misfortune waites advantage to entrap
The man most wary in her whelming lap.
So me, weake wretch, of many weakest one,
Unweeting, and unaware of such mishap,
She brought to mischief through occasion, Where this same wicked villein did me light upon.

XVIII

'It was a faithlesse squire, that was the source
Of all my sorrow, and of these sad teares, With whom from tender dug of commune nourse

Attonce I was upbrought, and eft, when yeres
More rype us reason lent to chose our
peares,

Our selves in league of vowed love wee
knitt:
In which we long time, without gealous
feares

Or faultie thoughts, contynewd, as was fitt;
And, for my part I vow, dissembled not a whitt.

XIX

'It was my fortune, commune to that age,
To love a lady fayre of great degree,
The which was borne of noble parentage,
And set in highest seat of dignitee, Yet seemd no lesse to love then loved to
bee:

Long I her serv'd, and found her faithfull
still,

Ne ever thing could cause us disagree:
Love, that two harts makes one, makes eke one will:

Each strove to please, and others pleasure to fulfill.

XX

'My friend, hight Philemon, I did partake
Of all my love and all my privitie;
Who greatly joyous seemed for my sake,
And gratious to that lady, as to mee;
Ne ever wight, that mote so welcome bee
As he to her, withouten blott or blame, Ne ever thing, that she could thinke or see,

But unto him she would impart the same:
O wretched man, that would abuse so gentle
dame!

XXI

'At last such grace I found, and meanes I
wrought,
That I that lady to my spouse had wonne; Accord of friendes, consent of parents
sought,
Affyaunce made, my happinesse begonne, There wanted nought but few rites to be
donne,
Which mariage make: that day too farre did seeme:
Most joyous man on whom the shining sunne
Did shew his face, my selfe I did esteeme, And that my falsor friend did no lesse joyous deeme.

XXII

'But ear that wished day his beame dis-closd,
He, either envying my toward good,
Or of himselfe to treason ill disposd,
One day unto me came in friendly mood,
And told for secret, how he understood,
That lady, whom I had to me assynd,
Had both distaind her honorable blood,
And eke the faith which she to me did bynd;
And therefore wisht me stay, till I more truth should fynd.

XXIII

'The gnawing anguish and sharp gelyosy, Which his sad speach infixed in my brest, Ranckled so sore, and festred inwardly,
That my eugreeved mind could find no rest, Till that the truth thereof I did out wrest;
And him besought, by that same sacred
band
Betwix us both, to counsell me the best.
He then with solemne oath and plighted hand Assurd, ere long the truth to let me understand.

XXIV

'Ere long with like againe he boarded mee, Saying, he now had boulded all the floure,
And that it was a groome of base degree,
Which of my love was partener paramoure:
Who used in a darkesome inner bowre
Her oft to meete: which better to approve,
He promised to bring me at that howre,

When I should see that would me nearer
move,
And drive me to withdraw my blind abused
love.

XXV

'This gracelesse man, for furtherance of his guile,
Did court the handmayd of my lady deare,
Who, glad t' embosome his affection vile,
Did all she might, more pleasing to appeare.
One day, to worke her to his will more
neare,
He woo'd her thus: "Pryene," (so she hight)
"What great despight doth Fortune to thee
beare,
Thus lowly to abase thy beautie bright,
That it should not deface all others lesser
light?"

XXVI

"But if she had her least helpe to thee lent, T' adorne thy forme according thy desart, Their blazing pride thou wouldest soone have blent,
And staynd their prayses with thy least good part;
Ne should faire Claribell with all her art, Though she thy lady be, approach thee neare:
For prooffe thereof, this evening, as thou art, Aray thy selfe in her most gorgeous geare,
That I may more delight in thy embrace-ment deare."

XXVII

'The mayden, proud through praise and mad through love, Him hearkned to, and soone her selfe
arayd,
The whiles to me the treachour did remove
His craftie engin, and, as he had sayd, Me leading, in a secret corner layd,
The sad spectatour of my tragedie; Where left, he went, and his owne false part
playd,
Disguised like that groome of base degree, Whom he had feigned th' abuser of my love
to bee.

XXVIII

'Eftsoones he came unto th' appointed
place,
And with him brought Pryene, rich arayd,

In Claribellaes clothes. Her proper face
I not discerned in that darkesome shade, But weend it was my love with whom he
playd.

Ah God! what horroure and tormenting
griefe

My hart, my handes, mine eyes, and all assayd!

Me liefer were ten thousand deathes priefe, Then wounde of gealous worme, and shame of such reprice.

XXIX

I home retourning, fraught with fowle de-
spight,

And chawing vengeance all the way I
went,

Soone as my loathed love appeared in sight,
With wrathfull hand I slew her innocent;
That after soone I dearely did lament:
For when the cause of that outrageous
deede

Demaunded, I made plaine and evident, Her faultie handmayd, which that bale did
breede,

Confest how Philemon her wrought to change her weede.

XXX

'Which when I heard, with horrible affright
And hellish fury all enragd, I sought Upon my selfe that vengeable despight To punish: yet it better first I thought, To wreake my wrath on him that first it
wrought.

To Philemon, false faytour Philemon,
I cast to pay that I so dearely bought:
Of deadly drugs I gave him drinke anon,
And washt away his guilt with guilty potion.

XXXI

'Thus heaping crime on crime, and griefe on griefe,

To losse of love adjoyning losse of frend, I meant to purge both with a third mis-
chiefe,

And in my woes beginner it to end:
That was Pryene; she aid first offend, She last should smart: with which cruell
intent,

When I at her my murderous blade did
bend,

She fled away with ghastly dreriment, And I, poursewing my fell purpose, after went.

XXXII

'Feare gave her winges, and rage enforst my flight:

Through woods and plaines so long I did her chace,

Till this mad man, whom your victorious
might

Hath now fast bound, me met in middle
space:

As I her, so he me poursewd apace,
And shortly overtooke: I, breathing yre, Sore chauffed at my stay in such a cace,
And with my heat kindled his cruell fyre;
Which kindled once, his mother did more rage inspyre.

XXXIII

'Betwixt them both, they have me doen to
dye,

Through wounds, and strokes, and stub-borne handeling,

That death were better then such agony
As griefe and fury unto me did bring;
Of which in me yet stickes the mortal
sting,

That during life will never be appeas'd.
When he thus ended had his sorrowing, Said Guyon: 'Squyre, sore have ye bene diseas'd;

But all your hurts may soone through temperance be eas'd.'

XXXIV

Then gan the palmer thus: 'Most wretched
man,

That to affections does the bridle lend!
In their beginning they are weake and wan, But soone through suff'rance growe to fearefull end.

Whiles they are weake, betimes with them contend:

For when they once to perfect strength do
grow,

Strong warres they make, and cruell battry
bend

Gainst fort of reason, it to overthrow:
Wrath, gelosy, griefe, love this squyre have laide thus low.

XXXV

'Wrath, gealositie, griefe, love do thus expell:

Wrath is a fire, and gealositie a weede, Griefe is a flood, and love a monster fell;
The fire of sparkes, the weede of litle seede,

The flood of drops, the monster filth did
breede:
But sparks, seed, drops, and filth do thus delay;
The sparks soone quench, the springing seed outweed,
The drops dry up, and filth wipe cleane
away:
So shall wrath, gealosity, griefe, love die and decay.'

XXXVI

'Unlucky squire,' saide Guyon, 'sith thou hast
False into mischief through intemper-
ance, Henceforth take heede of that thou now hast past,
And guyde thy waies with warie governance,
Least worse betide thee by some later
chaunce.
But read how art thou nam'd, and of what kin.'
'Phedon I hight,' quoth he, 'and do ad-
vaunce
Mine auncestry from famous Coradin, Who first to rayse our house to honour did begin.'

XXXVII

Thus as he spake, lo! far away they spyde
A varlet roning towards hastily, Whose flying feet so fast their way applyde,
That round about a clond of dust did fly,
Which, mingled all with sweate, did dim his eye.
He soone approached, panting, breathlesse,
whot,
And all so soyl'd, that none could him desery.
His countenance was bold, and bashed
not
For Guyons lookes, but seornefull eyglance at him shot.

XXXVIII

Behind his backe he bore a brasen shield,
On which was drawn faire, in colours fit,
A flaming fire in midst of bloody field, And round about the wreath this word was writ, Burnt I doe burne. Right wel' beseemed it To be the shield of some redoubted knight:
And in his hand two dartes exceeding slit

And deadly sharp he held, whose heads were dight
In poyson and in blood of malice and de-
spight.

XXXIX

When he in presence came, to Guyon first He boldly spake: 'Sir knight, if knight thou bee,
Abandon this forestalled place at erst,
For feare of further harme, I counsell thee;
Or bide the chaunce at thine owne jeopardee.'
The knight at his great boldnesse wondered,
And though he scornd his ydle vantee, Yet mildly him to purpose answered;
For not to grow of nought he it conjectured.

XL

'Varlet, this place most dew to me I
deeme,
Yielded by him that held it forcibly.
But whence shold come that harme, which thou dost seeme
To threat to him that rindes his chaunce
t' abyde?'
'Perdy,' sayd he, 'here comes, and is hard
by,
A knight of wondrous powre and great
assay,
That never yet encountred enemy,
But did him deadly daunt, or fowle dismay; Ne thou for better hope, if thou his presence stay.'

XLI

'How hight he then,' sayd Guyon, 'and from whence?'
'Pyrochles is his name, renowned farre
For his bold feates and hardy confidence, Full oft approvd in many a cruell warre;
The brother of Cymochles, both which arre
The sonnes of old Acrates and Despight, Acrates, sonne of Phlegeton and Jarre; But Phlegeton is sonne of Herebus and
Night:
But Herebus sonne of Aeternitie is hight.

XLII

'So from immortall race he does proceede, That mortall hands may not withstand his
might,
Drad for his derring doe and bloody deed:
For all in blood and spoile is his delight.
His am I Atin, his in wrong and right,

That matter make for him to worke upon,
 And stirre him up to strife and cruell fight.
 Fly therefore, fly this fearfull stead anon, Least thy foolhardize worke thy sad confusion.'

XLIII

'His be that care, whom most it doth concerne,' Sayd he: 'but whether with such hasty
 flight
 Art thou now bownd? for well mote I discerne Great cause, that carries thee so swifte and
 light.'
 'My lord,' quoth he, 'me sent, and streight beight
 To seeke Occasion, where so she bee:
 For he is all disposd to bloody fight,
 And breathes out wrath and hainous cruel-
 tee:
 Hard is his hap, that first fals in his jeopardee.'

XLIV

'Mad man,' said then the palmer, 'that does seeke
 Occasion to wrath, and cause of strife!
 Shee comes unsought, and shonned followes eke.
 Happy who can abstaine, when Rancor rife Kindles revenge, and threats his rusty
 knife:
 Woe never wants, where every cause is caught,
 And rash Occasion makes unquiet life.'
 'Then loe! wher bound she sits, whom thou hast sought,'
 Said Guyon: 'let that message to thy lord be brought.'

XLV

That when the varlett heard and saw,
 streight way
 He wexed wondrous wroth, and said: 'Vile
 knight,
 That knights and knighthood doest with shame upbray,
 And shewst th' ensample of thy childishe
 might,
 With silly weake old woman thus to fight!
 Great glory and gay spoile sure hast thou
 gott,
 And stoutly prov'd thy puissance here in sight.

That shall Pyrochles well requite, I wott,
 And with thy blood abolish so reprochfull blott.'

XLVI

With that, one of his thrillant darts he
 threw,
 Headed with yre and vengeable despight:
 The quivering steele his aymed end wel
 knew,
 And to his brest it selfe intended right.
 But he was wary, and, ere it empight In the meant marke, advaunst his shield
 atweene,
 On which it seizing, no way enter might,
 But backe rebowding left the forehead
 keene:
 Eftsoones he fled away, and might no where be seene.

CANTO V

Pyrochles does with Guyon fight,
 And Furors chayne unbinds;
 Of whom sore hurt, for his revenge Attin Cymochles finds.

I

WHO ever doth to temperaunce apply
 His stedfast life, and all his actions frame, Trust me, shal find no greater enemy,
 Then stubborne perturbation, to the same;
 To which right wel the wise doe give that
 name;
 For it the goodly peace of staied mindes Does overthrow, and troublous warre proclame:
 His owne woes author, who so bound it findes,
 As did Pyrochles, and it wilfully unbinds.

II

After that varlets flight, it was not long, Ere on the plaine fast pricking Guyon
 spide
 One in bright armes embatteiled full strong,
 That as the sunny beames doe glaunce and glide
 Upon the trembling wave, so shined bright,
 And round about him threw forth sparkling
 fire,
 That seemd him to enflame on every side:
 His steed was bloody red, and fomed yre, When with the maistring spur he did him roughly stire.

III

Approching nigh, he never staid to greete, Ne chaffar words, prowd corage to provoke, But prickt so fiers, that underneath his feete
 The smouldring dust did rownd about him
 smoke,
 Both horse and man nigh able for to choke;
 And fayrly couching his steeleheaded speare, Him first saluted with a sturdy stroke:
 It booted nought Sir Guyon, comming
 neare,
 To thinke such hideous puissaunce on foot
 to beare;

IV

But lightly shunned it, and passing by,
 With his bright blade did smite at him so
 fell,
 That the sharpe steele, arriving forcibly On his broad shield, bitt not, but glauncing
 fell
 On his horse necke before the quilted sell,
 And from the head the body sundred quight.
 So him, dismounted low, he did compell On foot with him to matchen equall fight;
 The trunked beast, fast bleeding, did him fowly dight.

V

Sore bruized with the fall, he slow uprose,
 And all enraged, thus him loudly shent:
 'Disleall knight, whose coward corage chose To wreake it selfe on beast all innocent, And shund the marke at which it should be
 ment!
 Therby thine armes seem strong, but manhood frayl:
 So hast thou oft with guile thine honor
 blent;
 But litle may such guile thee now avayl, If wanted force and fortune doe not much me fayl.'

VI

With that he drew his flaming sword, and strooke
 At him so fiercely, that the upper marge
 Of his sevenfolded shield away it tooke,
 And glauncing on his helmet, made a large And open gash therein: were not his targe, That broke the violence of his intent, The weary sowle from thence it would discharge:

Nathelesse so sore a buff to him it lent, That made him reele, and to his brest his bever bent.

VII

Exceeding wroth was Guyon at that blow, And much ashamd that stroke of living
 arme
 Should him dismay, and make him stoup so
 low,
 Though otherwise it did him litle harme:
 Tho, hurling high his yron braced arme,
 He smote so manly on his shoulder plate,
 That all his left side it did quite disarme;
 Yet there the steele staid not, but inly bate Deepe in his flesh, and opened wide a red floodgate.

VIII

Deadly dismayd with horror of that dint Pyrochles was, and grieved eke entyre;
 Yet nathe more did it his fury stint,
 But added flame unto his former fire,
 That welnigh molt his hart in raging yre;
 Ne thenceforth his approved skill, to ward,
 Or strike, or hurtle rownd in warlike gyre, Rememberd he, ne car'd for his saufgard, But rudely rag'd, and like a cruel tygre far'd.

IX

He hewd, and lasht, and foynd, and thondred blowes,
 And every way did seeke into his life; Ne plate, ne male could ward so mighty
 throwes,
 But yeilded passage to his cruell knife.
 But Guyon, in the heat of all his strife,
 Was wary wise, and closely did awayt Avauntage, whilst his foe did rage most rife:
 Sometimes a thwart, sometimes he strook him strayt,
 And falsed oft his blowes, t' illude him with such bayt.

X

Like as a lyon, whose imperiall powre
 A prowde rebellious unicorne defyes, T' avoide the rash assault and wrathfull
 stowre
 Of his fiers foe, him to a tree applies, And when him ronning in full course he spyes,
 He slips aside; the whiles that furious beast

His precious horne, sought of his enimyes, Strikes in the stocke, ne thence can be re-
least,
But to the mighty victor yields a bounteous feast.

XI

With such faire sleight him Guyon often fayld,
Till at the last all breathlesse, weary, faint Him spying, with fresh onsett he assayld, And kindling new his corage seeming queint,

Strooke him so hugely, that through great constraint

He made him stoup perforce unto his knee,
And doe unwilling worship to the saint,
That on his shield depainted he did see:
Such homage till that instant never learned hee.

XII

Whom Guyon seeing stoup, pursewed fast
The present offer of faire victory,
And soone his dreadfull blade about he cast, Wherewith he smote his haughty crest so
hye,

That streight on grownd made him full low to lye;

Then on his brest his victor foote he thrust:
With that he cryde: 'Merey! doe me not
dye,

Ne deeme thy force by Fortunes doome unjust,

That hath (maugre her spight!) thus low me laid in dust.'

XIII

Eftsoones his cruel hand Sir Guyon stayd, Tempring the passion with advizement
slow,

And maistring might on enimy dismayd;
For th' equall die of warre he well did know:
Then to him said: 'Live, and alleagaunce owe

To him that gives thee life and liberty,
And henceforth by this daies ensample trow,
That hasty wroth, and heedlesse hazardry, Doe breede repentaunce late, and lasting infamy.'

XIV

So up he let him rise; who, with grim looke And count'naunce sterne upstanding, gan to grind

His grated teeth for great disdeigne, and
shooke

His sandy lockes, long hanging downe behind,

Knotted in blood and dust, for grieve of
mind,

That he in ods of armes was conquered;
Yet in himselfe some comfort he did find,
That him so noble knight had maystered, Whose bounty more then might, yet both, he wondered.

XV

Which Guyon marking said: 'Be nought agriev'd,

Sir knight, that thus ye now subdewed
arre:

Was never man, who most conquestes atchiev'd,

But sometimes had the worse, and lost by
warre,

Yet shortly gaynd that losse exceeded farre:
Losse is no shame, nor to bee lesse then
foe,

But to bee lesser then himselfe doth marre Both loosers lott, and victours prayse alsoe: Vaine others overthrowes who selfe doth overthrow.

XVI

'Fly, O Pyrochles, fly the dreadfull warre,
That in thy selfe thy lesser partes doe move, Outrageous anger, and woe working jarre, Direfull impatience, and hartmurdring love; Those, those thy foes, those warriours far remove,

Which thee to endlesse bale captived lead.
But sith in might thou didst my merey
prove,

Of courtesie to mee the cause aread,
That thee against me drew with so impetu-ous dread.'

XVII

'Dreadlesse,' said he, 'that shall I soone
declare:

It was complaind that thou hadst done great tort

Unto an aged woman, poore and bare,
And thralld her in chaines with strong effort,

Voide of all succour and needfull comfort:
That ill besemes thee, such as I thee see,
To worke such shame. Therefore I thee exhort

To change thy will, and set Occasion free, And to her captive some yield his first libertee.'

XVIII

Thereat Sir Guyon smylde: 'And is that
all,'

Said he, 'that thee so sore displeas'd hath?
Great mercy sure, for to enlarge a thrall, Whose freedom shall thee turne to greatest seath!

Nath'lesse now quench thy whott emboyling wrath:

Loe! there they bee; to thee I yield them
free.'

Thereat he wondrous glad, out of the path

Did lightly leape, where he them bound did
see,

And gan to breake the bands of their cap-tivitee.

XIX

Soone as Occasion felt her selfe untyde, Before her sonne could well assoyled bee,
She to her use returnd, and streight defyde Both Guyon and Pyrochles: th' one (said
shee)

Byeause he wonne; the other because hee Was wonne: so matter did she make of
nought,

To stirre up strife, and do them disagree:
But soone as Furor was enlargd, she sought To kinde his quencht fyre, and thousand causes wrought.

XX

It was not long ere she inflam'd him so,
That he would algates with Pyrochles fight,
And his redeemer chalengd for his foe,
Because he had not well mainteind his right, But yielded had to that same straunger
knight:

Now gan Pyrochles wex as wood as hee,
And him affronted with impatient might:
So both together fiers engrasped bee, Whyles Guyon, standing by, their uncouth strife does see.

XXI

Him all that while Occasion did provoke Against Pyrochles, and new matter fram'd Upon the old, him stirring to bee wroke Of his late wronges, in which she oft him blam'd

For suffering such abuse as knightthoode sham'd,

And him dishab'd quyte. But he was wise, Ne would with vaine occasions be inflam'd;
Yet others she more urgent did devise;
Yet nothing could him to impatience entise.

XXII

Their fell contention still increased more,
And more thereby increased Furors might,
That he his foe has hurt, and wounded
sore,

And him in blood and durt deformed
quight.

His mother eke, more to augment his
spight,

Now brought to him a flaming fyre brond,
Which she in Stygian lake, ay burning
bright,

Had kindled: that she gave into his hond, That, armd with fire, more hardly he mote him withstood.

XXIII

Tho gan that villein wex so fiers and strong,
That nothing might sustaine his furious
forse:

He cast him downe to ground, and all along Drew him through durt and myre without remorse,

And fowly battered his comely corse,
That Guyon much disdeignd so loathly sight.

At last he was compeld to cry perforce, 'Help, O Sir Guyon! helpe, most noble
knight,

To ridd a wretched man from handes of hellish wight!'

XXIV

The knight was greatly moved at his playnt,
And gan him dight to succour his distresse, Till that the palmer, by his grave restraynt, Him stayd from yielding pitifull redresse.
And said: 'Deare sonne, thy causelesse ruth represe,

Ne let thy stout hart melt in pittie vayue:
He that his sorow sought through wilful-
nesse,

And his foe fettred would release agayne, Deserves to taste his follies fruit, repented
payne.'

XXV

Guyon obeyd: so him away he drew From needlesse trouble of renewing fight

Already fought, his voyage to poursew.
But rash Pyrochles varlett, Atin hight,
When late he saw his lord in heauey plight, Under Sir Guyons puissaunt stroke to
fall,

Him deeming dead, as then he seemd in
sight,

Fledd fast away, to tell his funerall Unto his brother, whom Cymochles men did
call.

XXVI

He was a man of rare redoubted might, Famous throughout the world for warlike
prayse,

And glorious spoiles, purchast in perilous
fight:

Full many doughtie knightes he in his dayes Had doen to death, subdewde in equall frayes,

Whose carkases, for terrour of his name,
Of fowles and beastes he made the piteous
prayes,

And hong their conquerd armes for more defame

On gallow trees, in honour of his dearest
dame.

XXVII

His dearest dame is that enchaunteresse,
The vyle Acrasia, that with vaine delightes,
And ydle pleasures in her Bowre of Blisse, Does charme her lovers, and the feeble sprightes

Can call out of the bodies of fraile wightes; Whom then she does trasforme to monstrous heues,

And horribly misshapes with ugly sightes, Captiv'd eternally in yron mewes, And darksome dens, where Titan his face never shewes.

XXVIII

There Atin fownd Cymochles sojourning,
To serve his lemans love: for he by kynd
Was given all to lust and loose living, When ever his fiers handes he free mote
fynd:

And now he has poured out his ydle mynd
In daintie delices and lavish joyes, Having his warlike weapons cast behynd,
And floues in pleasures and vaine pleasing toyes,

Mingled amongst loose ladies and lascivious boyes.

XXIX

And over him, Art, stryving to compayre With Nature, did an arber greene dispred, Framed of wanton yvie, flouing fayre, Through which the fragrant eglantine did
spred

His prickling armes, entrayld with roses
red,

Which daintie odours round about them
threw;

And all within with flowres was garnished, That, when myld Zephyrus emongst them
blew,

Did breath out bounteous smels, and painted colors shew.

XXX

And fast beside, there trickled softly downe A gentle streame, whose murmuring wave
did play

Emongst the puny stones, and made a
sowne,

To lull him soft a sleepe, that by it lay:
The wearie traveler, wandring that way,
Therein did often quench his thirsty heat,
And then by it his wearie limbes display, Whiles creeping slomber made him to forget

His former payne, and wypt away his toilsome sweat.

XXXI

And on the other syde a pleasaunt grove
Was shott up high, full of the stately tree That dedicated is t' Olympick Jove,
And to his sonne Alcides, whenas hee Gaynd in Nemea goodly victoree:

Therein the mery birdes of every sorte Chaunted alowd their chearefull harmonee, And made emongst them selves a sweete consort,

That quickned the dull spright with music-all comfort.

XXXII

There he him found all carelesly displaid,
In secrete shadow from the sunny ray,
On a sweet bed of lillies softly laid,
Amidst a flock of damzelles fresh and gay,
That rownd about him dissolute did play Their wanton follies and light meriment;
Every of which did loosely disaray Her upper partes of meet habiliments, And shewed them naked, deekt with many ornaments.

XXXIII

And every of them strove, with most del-lights
him to aggrate, and greatest pleasures
shew;
Some fraud faire lookes, giansing like evening lights,
Others sweet wordes, dropping like honny
dew;
Some bathed kisses, and did soft embrew
The sugred licour through his melting lips:
One boastes her beautie, and does yield to
vew
Her dainty limbes above her tender hips; Another her out boastes, and all for tryall strips.

XXXIV

He, like an adder lurking in the weedes, His wandring thought in deepe desire does
steepe,
And his frayle eye with spoyle of beauty feedes:
Sometimes he falsely faines himselfe to
sleepe,
Whiles through their lids his wanton eies do
peepe,
To steale a snatch of amorous conceipt, Whereby close fire into his heart does
creepe:
So' he them deceives, deceivd in his decept, Made dronke with drugs of deare voluptuous receipt.

XXXV

Attin, arriving there, when him he spyde
Thus in still waves of deepe delight to wade, Fiercely approaching, to him lowdly cryde,
'Cymochles ! oh ! no, but Cymochles shade,
In which that manly person late did fade !
What is become of great Acrates sonne ?
Or where hath he hong up his mortall
blade,
That hath so many haughty conquests
wonne ?
Is all his force forlorne, and all his glory
donne ?'

XXXVI

Then pricking him with his sharp-pointed
dart,
He saide: 'Up, up ! thou womanish weake
knight,
That here in ladies lap entombed art, Unmindfull of thy praise and prowest might,

And weetlesse eke of lately wrought de-
spight,
Whiles sad Pyrochles lies on sencelesse
ground,
And groneth out his utmost grudging
spright,
Through many a stroke, and many a streaming wound,
Calling thy help in vaine, that here in joyes art dround.'

XXXVII

Suddeinly out of his delightfull dreame
The man awoke, and would have questiond
more;
But he would not endure that wofull theame
For to dilate at large, but urged sore,
With percing wordes and pittifull implore, Him hasty to arise. As one affright
With hellish feends, or Furies mad uprore,
He then uprose, inflamd with fell despight,
And called for his armes; for he would al-gates fight.

XXXVIII

They bene ybrought; he quickly does him
dight,
And, lightly mounted, passeth on his way; Ne ladies loves, ne sweete entreaties might Appease his heat, or hastie passage stay;
For he has vowd to beene avengd that day (That day it selfe him seemed all too
long)
On him that did Pyrochles deare dismay:
So proudly pricketh on his courser strong,
And Attin ay him pricks with spurs of shame and wrong.

CANTO VI

Guyon is of Immodest Merth Led into loose desyre; Fights with Cymochles, whiles his brother burnes in furious fyre.

I

A HARDER lesson to learne continence
In joyous pleasure then in grievous paine:
For sweetnesse doth allure the weaker sence
So strongly, that uneathes it can refrain From that which feeble nature covets faine;
But grieffe and wrath, that be her enemies,
And foes of life, she better can restraine;

Yet Vertue vauntes in both her victories,
And Guyon in them all shewes goodly maysteries.

II

Whom bold Cymochles traveling to finde, With cruell purpose bent to wreake on him
The wrath which Atin kindled in his mind, Came to a river, by whose utmost brim Wayting to passe, he saw whereas did swim Along the shore, as swift as glaunce of eye,
A litle gondelay, bedecked trim
With boughes and arbours woven cunningly, That like a litle forrest seemed outwardly.

III

And therein sate a lady fresh and fayre, Making sweete solace to herselfe alone;
Sometimes she song, as lowd as larke in ayre, Sometimes she laught, that nigh her breth was gone, Yet was there not with her else any one,
That might to her move cause of meriment:
Matter of merth enough, though there were none,
She could devise, and thousand waies invent,
To feede her foolish humour and vaine jolliment.

IV

Which when far of Cymochles heard and saw,
He lowdly cald to such as were aboard,
The litle barke unto the shore to draw,
And him to ferry over that deepe ford.
The merry mariner unto his word Soone hearkned, and her painted bote streightway Turnd to the shore, where that same warlike lord
She in receiv'd; but Atin by no way
She would admit, albe the knight her much did pray.

V

Eftsoones her shallow ship away did slide,
More swift then swallow sheres the liquid skye, Withouten oare or pilot it to guide,
Or winged canvas with the wind to fly: Onely she turnd a pin, and by and by It cut away upon the yielding wave;

Ne cared she her course for to apply:
For it was taught the way which she would have,
And both from rocks and flats it selfe could wisely save.

VI

And all the way, the wanton damsell found New merth, her passenger to entertaine:
For she in pleasaut purpose did abound,
And greatly joyed merry tales to faine, Of which a store-house did with her re-
name:
Yet seemed, nothing well they her became;
For all her wordes she drowid with laughter vaine,
And wanted grace in utt'ring of the same,
That turned all her pleasaunce to a scoffing game.

VII

And other whiles vaine toyes she would devise,
As her fantasticke wit did most delight:
Sometimes her head she fondly would aguize With gaudy girlonds, or fresh flowrets dight About her necke, or rings of rushes plight; Sometimes, to do him laugh, she would assay
To laugh at shaking of the leaves light,
Or to behold the water worke and play
About her litle frigot, therein making way.

VIII

Her light behaviour and loose dalliaunce Gave wondrous great contentment to the knight,
That of his way he had no sovenaunce, Nor care of vow'd revenge and cruell fight, But to weake wench did yield his martiall might:
So easie was, to quench his flamed minde
With one sweete drop of sensuall delight;
So easie is, t' appease the stormy winde
Of malice in the calme of pleasaut woman-kind.

IX

Diverse discourses in their way they spent,
Mongst which Cymochles of her questioned, Both what she was, and what that usage ment,

Which in her cott she daily practized.
 'Vaine man!' saide she, 'that wouldest be reckoned

A straunger in thy home, and ignoraunt Of Phædria (for so my name is red)
 Of Phædria, thine owne fellow servaunt; For thou to serve Acrasia thy selfe doest vaunt.

X

'In this wide inland sea, that hight by
 name

The Idle Lake, my wandring ship I row, That knowes her port, and thether sayles by ayme;

Ne care, ne feare I, how the wind do blow,
 Or whether swift I wend, or whether slow: Both slow and swift a like do serve my tourne:

Ne swelling Neptune, ne lowd thundring
 Jove

Can change my cheare, or make me ever
 mourne:

My little boat can safely passe this perilous bourne.'

XI

Whiles thus she talked, and whiles thus she toyd,

They were far past the passage which he
 spake,

And come unto an island, waste and voyd,
 That floted in the midst of that great lake.

There her small gondelay her port did
 make,

And that gay payre issewing on the shore Disburnd her. Their way they forward
 take

Into the land, that lay them faire before, Whose pleasance she him shewd, and plentifull great store.

XII

It was a chosen plott of fertile land, Emongst wide waves sett, like a litle nest,
 As if it had by Natures cunning hand Bene choycely picked out from all the rest,
 And laid forth for ensample of the best:

No dainty flowre or herbe, that growes on
 grownd,

No arborett with painted blossomes drest,
 And smelling sweete, but there it might be
 fownd

To bud out faire, and her sweete smels throwe al arownd.

XIII

No tree, whose braunches did not bravely
 spring;

No braunch, whereon a fine bird did not
 sitt;

No bird, but did her shrill notes sweetely
 sing;

No song, but did containe a lovely ditt:
 Trees, braunches, birds, and songs were framed fitt

For to allure fraile mind to carelesse ease.
 Carelesse the man soone woxe, and his weake
 witt

Was overcome of thing that did him please;
 So pleased, did his wrathfull purpose faire appease.

XIV

Thus when shee had his eyes and senses
 fed

With false delights, and fild with pleasures vayn,

Into a shady dale she soft him led,
 And laid him downe upon a grassy playn;
 And her sweete selfe without dread or dis-dayn

She sett beside, laying his head disarmd
 In her loose lap, it softly to sustayn, Where soone he slumbred, fearing not be harmd,

The whiles with a love lay she thus him sweetly charmd:

XV

'Behold, O man, that toilesome paines doest
 take,

The flocs, the fields, and all that pleasaunt
 growes,

How they them selves doe thine ensample
 make,

Whiles nothing envious Nature them forth
 throwes

Out of her fruitfull lap; how no man
 knowes,

They spring, they bud, they blossome fresh and faire,

And decke the world with their rich pompous showes;

Yet no man for them taketh paines or care.
 Yet no man to them can his carefull paines compare.

XVI

'The lilly, lady of the flowring field,
 The flowre deluce, her lovely paramoure,

Bid thee to them thy fruitlesse labors yield,
And soone leave off this toylsome weary
stoure:

Loe, loe, how brave she decks her bounteous boure,

With silkin curtens and gold coverletts, Therein to shrowd her sumptuous belamoure!

Yet nether spinnes nor cards, ne cares nor fretts,

But to her mother Nature all her care she letts.

XVII

‘Why then doest thou, O man, that of them
all

Art lord, and eke of Nature soveraine, Wilfully make thy selfe a wretched thrall, And waste thy joyous howres in needelesse
paine,

Seeking for daunger and adventures vaine?
What bootes it al to have, and nothing use?
Who shall him rew, that swimming in the
maine

Will die for thrist, and water doth refuse?
Refuse such fruitlesse toile, and present pleasures chuse.’

XVIII

By this she had him lulled fast a sleepe,
That of no worldly thing he care did take;
Then she with liquors strong his eies did
steepe,

That nothing should him hastily awake:
So she him lefte, and did her selfe betake Unto her boat again, with which she clefted The slouthfull wave of that great griesy
lake;

Soone shee that island far behind her lefte,
And now is come to that same place, where first she wefte.

XIX

By this time was the worthy Guyon brought Unto the other side of that wide strond, Where she was rowing, and for passage
sought:

Him needed not long call; shee soone to
hond

Her ferry brought, where him she byding
fond

With his sad guide: him selfe she tooke a boord,

But the blacke palmer suffred still to stond,

Ne would for price or prayers once affoord, To ferry that old man over the perlous foord.

XX

Guyon was loath to leave his guide behind, Yet, being entred, might not backe retyre;
For the flitt barke, obeying to her mind, Forth launched quickly, as she did desire, Ne gave him leave to bid that aged sire Adieu, but nimbly ran her wonted course Through the dull billowes thicke as troubled
mire,

Whom nether wind out of their seat could
forse,

Nor timely tides did drive out of their sluggish sourse.

XXI

And by the way, as was her wonted guise,
Her mery fitt shee freshly gan to reare,
And did of joy and jollity devise,
Her selfe to cherish, and her guest to cheare.
The knight was courteous, and did not for-
beare

Her honest merth and pleasaunce to partake; But when he saw her toy, and gibe, and geare,

And passe the bonds of modest merimake, Her dalliance he despid, and follies did forsake.

XXII

Yet she still followed her former style,
And said, and did, all that mote him delight, Till they arrived in that pleasaunt ile, Where sleeping late she lefte her other
knight.

But whenas Guyon of that land had sight,
He wist him selfe amisse, and angry said:
‘Ah! dame, perdy ye have not doen me
right,

Thus to mislead mee, whiles I you obaid: Me litle needed from my right way to have straid.’

XXIII

‘Faire sir,’ quoth she, ‘be not displeas’d at
all:

Who fares on sea may not commaund his
way,

Ne wind and weather at his pleasure call:
The sea is wide, and easy for to stray;
The wind unstable, and doth never stay.

But here a while ye may in safety rest,

Till season serve new passage to assay:
 Better safe port, then be in seas distrest.
 Therewith she laught, and did her earnest end in jest.

XXIV

But he, halfe discontent, mote nathelesse Himselfe appease, and issewd forth on shore:

The joyes whereof, and happy fruitfulness,
 Such as he saw, she gan him lay before,
 And all, though pleasaut, yet she made much more:

The fields did laugh, the flowres did freshly
 spring,
 The trees did bud, and early blossomes bore,
 And all the quire of birds did sweetly sing, And told that gardins pleasures in their caroling.

XXV

And she, more sweete then any bird on bough,
 Would oftentimes emongst them beare a
 part,
 And strive to passe (as she could well enough)

Their native musicke by her skilful art:
 So did she all, that might his constant
 hart

Withdraw from thought of warlike enter-
 prize,

And drowne in dissolute delights apart, Where noise of armes, or vew of martiall
 guize,

Might not revive desire of knightly exercize.

XXVI

But he was wise, and wary of her will,
 And ever held his hand upon his hart:
 Yet would not seeme so rude, and thewed
 ill,

As to despise so curteous seeming part,
 That gentle lady did to him impart:
 But fairly tempring fond desire subdewd,
 And ever her desired to depart.

She list not heare, but her disports pour-
 sewd,

And ever bad him stay, till time the tide renewd.

XXVII

And now by this, Cymoehles howre was
 spent,

That he awoke out of his vyle dreme,

And shaking off his drowsy dreriment, Gan him avize, howe ill did him beseme, In slouthfull sleepe his molten hart to steme,

And quench the brond of his conceived
 yre.

Tho up he started, stird with shame extreme,

Ne staid for his damsell to inquire,
 But marched to the strond, there passage to require.

XXVIII

And in the way he with Sir Guyon mett, Accompanyd with Phædria the faire:
 Eftsoones he gan to rage, and inly frett, Crying: 'Let be that lady debonaire, Thou recreaut knight, and soone thy selfe prepaire

To batteile, if thou meane her love to gayn:

Loe! loe already, how the fowles in aire Doe flocke, awaiting shortly to obtayn Thy carcas for their pray, the guerdou of thy payn.'

XXIX

And therewithall he fiersly at him flew,
 And with inportune outrage him assayld;
 Who, soone preparad to field, his sword forth
 drew,

And him with equal vawew countervayld:
 Their mightie strokes their haberjeons dismayld,

And naked made each others manly spalles;
 The mortall steele despiteously entayld Deepe in their flesh, quite through the yron walles,

That a large purple stream adown their giambeux fallles.

XXX

Cymoecles, that had never mett before So puissant foe, with envious despight His prowd presumed force increased more, Disdeigning to bee held so long in fight:

Sir Guyon, grudging not so much his
 might,

As those unrightly raylinges which he spoke,

With wrathfull fire his corage kindled
 bright,

Thereof devising shortly to be wroke, And, doubling all his powres, redoubled every stroke.

XXXI

Both of them high attonce their hands en-haunst,
And both attonce their huge blowes down did sway:

Cymoehles sword on Guyons shield yglauust,
And thereof nigh one quarter sheard away;
But Guyons angry blade so fiers did play On th' others helmet, which as Titan shone, That quite it clove his plumed crest in tway,
And bared all his head unto the bone; Wherewith astonisht, still he stood, as sence-lesse stone.

XXXII

Still as he stood, fayre Phædria, that be-
held
That deadly daunger, soone atweene them ran;

And at their feet her selfe most humbly
feld,

Crying with pitteous voyce, and count'nance
wan,

' Ah, well away ! most noble lords, how can Your cruell eyes endure so pitteous sight, To shed your lives on ground ? Wo worth the man,

That first did teach the cursed steele to bight

In his owne flesh, and make way to the living spright !

XXXIII

' If ever love of lady did empierce
Your yron brestes, or pittie could find place, Withhold your bloody handes from battaill fierce,

And sith for me ye fight, to me this grace Both yield, to stay your deadly stryfe a
space.'

They staid a while; and forth she gan proceed:

' Most wretched woman, and of wicked race,
That am the authour of this hainous deed,
And cause of death betweene two doughtie knights do breed !

XXXIV

' But if for me ye fight, or me will serve,
Not this rude kynd of battaill, nor these
armes

Are meet, the which doe men in bale to sterve,

And doolefull sorrow heape with deadly
harmes:

Such cruell game my scarmoges disarmes:
Another warre, and other weapons, I Doe love, where Love does give his sweet alarmes,

Without bloodshed, and where the enimy Does yield unto his foe a pleasaunt victory.

XXXV

' Debatefull strife, and cruell enmity,
The famous name of knighthood fowly
shend;

But lovely peace, and gentle amity,
And in amours the passing howres to spend,
The mightie martiall handes doe most commend;

Of love they ever greater glory bore, Then of their armes: Mars is Cupidoes
frend,

And is for Venus loves renowned more, Then all his wars and spoiles, the which he did of yore.'

XXXVI

Therewith she sweetly smyld. They though full bent

To prove extremities of bloody fight, Yet at her speach their rages gan relent,
And calme the sea of their tempestuous
spight:

Such powre have pleasing wordes; such is the might

Of courteous clemency in gentle hart.
Now after all was ceast, the Faery knight Besought that damzell suffer him depart, And yield him ready passage to that other part.

XXXVII

She no lesse glad, then he desirous, was
Of his departure thence; for of her joy And vaine delight she saw he light did
pas,

A foe of folly and immodest toy,
Still solemne sad, or still disdainfull coy, Delighting all in armes and cruell warre,
That her sweet peace and pleasures did
annoy,

Troubled with terrour and unquiet jarre, That she well pleased was thence to amove him farre.

XXXVIII

Tho him she brought aboard, and her swift bote

Forthwith directed to that further strand;

The which on the dull waves did lightly flote,
And soone arrived on the shallow sand,
Where gladsome Guyon salied forth to land,
And to that damsell thankes gave for reward.

Upon that shore he spyed Atin stand,
There by his maister left when late he far'd In Phædrias flitt barek over that perlous shard.

XXXIX

Well could he him remember, sith of late
He with Pyrochles sharp debatement made:
Streight gan he him revyle, and bitter rate,

As shephecardes curre, that in darke even-inges shade

Hath tracted forth some salvage beastes
trade:

'Vile misereant!' said he, 'whether dost thou flye

The shame and death, which will thee soone invade?

What coward hand shall doe thee next to
dye,

That art thus fowly fledd from famous enimy?'

XL

With that he stifly shooke his steelhead
dart:

But sober Guyon hearing him so rayle, Though somewhat moved in his mightie
hart,

Yet with strong reason maistred passion
fraile,

And passed fayrely forth. He, turning
taile,

Backe to the strond retyrd, and there still
stayd,

Awaiting passage, which him late did faile;
The whiles Cymochles with that wanton
mayd

The hasty heat of his avowd revenge de-
layd.

XLI

Whylest there the varlet stood, he saw from farre

An armed knight, that towards him fast
ran;

He ran on foot, as if in lucklesse warre His forlorne steed from him the victour
wan;

He seemed breathlesse, hartlesse, faint,
and wan,

And all his armour sprinckled was with
blood,

And soyl'd with durtie gore, that no man can

Discerne the hew thereof. He never stood, But bent his hastie course towards the ydle flood.

XLII

The varlett saw, when to the flood he came,
How without stop or stay he fierly lept,
And deepe him selfe beducked in the same,
That in the lake his loftie crest was stept, Ne of his safetie soemed care he kept,
But with his raging armes he rudely flasht
The waves about, and all his armour swept,
That all the blood and filth away was washt, Yet still he bet the water, and the billowes dasht.

XLIII

Atin drew nigh, to weet what it mote
bee;

For much he wondred at that uncouth
sight:

Whom should he, but his own deare lord, there see,

His owne deare lord Pyrochles in sad
plight,

Ready to drowne him selfe for fell de-
spight.

'Harrow now out, and well away!' he
cryde,

'What dismall day hath lent this cursed
light,

To see my lord so deadly damnifyde?
Pyrochles, O Pyrochles, what is thee be-tyde?'

XLIV

'I burne, I burne, I burne!' then lowd he
cryde,

'O how I burne with implacable fyre!
Yet nought can quench mine inly flaming
syde,

Nor sea of licour cold, nor lake of myre, Nothing but death can doe me to respyre.'

'Ah! be it,' said he, 'from Pyrochles farre, After pursewing Death once to requyre,

Or think that ought those puissant hands may marre:

Death is for wretches borne under unhappy starre.'

XLV

‘Perdye, then is it fitt for me,’ said he,
 ‘That am, I weene, most wretched man
 alive,
 Burning in flames, yet no flames can I see,
 And dying dayly, dayly yet revive.
 O Atin, helpe to me last death to give.’
 The varlet at his plaint was grieved so
 sore,
 That his deepe wounded hart in two did rive,
 And his owne health remembring now no
 more,
 Did follow that ensample which he blam’d afore.

XLVI

Into the lake he leapt, his lord to ayd, (So love the dread of daunger doth despise) And of him catching hold, him strongly
 stayd
 From drowning. But more happy he then
 wise,
 Of that seas nature did him not avise.
 The waves thereof so slow and sluggish
 were,
 Engrost with mud, which did them fowle agrise,
 That every weighty thing they did upheare, Ne ought mote ever sinck downe to the bottom there.

XLVII

Whiles thus they struggled in that ydle
 wave,
 And strove in vaine, the one him selfe to drowne,
 The other both from drowning for to save,
 Lo! to that shore one in an auncient gowne, Whose hoary locks great gravitie did
 crowne,
 Holding in hand a goodly arming sword, By fortune came, ledd with the troublous
 sowne:
 Where drenched deepe he fownd in that dull ford
 The carefull servaunt, stryving with his raging lord.

XLVIII

Him Atin spying, knew right well of yore, And lowdly cald: ‘Help, helpe! O Archimage,
 To save my lord, in wretched plight for-
 lore;

Helpe with thy hand, or with thy counsell sage:
 Weake handes, but counsell is most strong in age.’
 Him when the old man saw, he woundred
 sore,
 To see Pyrochles there so rudely rage:
 Yet sithens helpe, he saw, he needed more Then pittie, he in hast approached to the shore;

XLIX

And cald, ‘Pyrochles! what is this I see?
 What hellish fury hath at earst thee hent?
 Furious ever I thee knew to bee, Yet never in this straunge astonishment.’ ‘These flames, these flames,’ he cryde, ‘do me torment!’ ‘What flames,’ quoth he, ‘when I thee present see
 In daunger rather to be drent then brent?’ ‘Harrow! the flames which me consume,’ said hee, ‘Ne can be quencht, within my secret bowelles bee.

L

‘That cursed man, that cruel feend of hell, Furor, oh! Furor hath me thus bedight:
 His deadly woundes within my liver swell,
 And his whott fyre burnes in mine entralles
 bright,
 Kindled through his infernall broond of
 spight, Sith late with him I batteill vaine would boste;
 That now I weene Joves dreaded thunder
 light
 Does scorch not halfe so sore, nor damned ghoste
 In flaming Phlegeton does not so felly roste.’

LI

Which when as Archimago heard, his grieffe He knew right well, and him attonce dis-
 armd:
 Then searcht his secret woundes, and made a priefe
 Of every place, that was with bruizing
 harmd,
 Or with the hidden fire too inly warmd.
 Which doen, he balmes and herbes thereto applyde,
 And evermore with mightie spels them
 charmd,

That in short space he has them qualifide, And him restor'd to helth, that would have algates dyde.

CANTO VII

Guyon findes Mamon in a delve, Summing his threasure hore:
Is by him teimpted, and led downe,
To see his secrete store.

I

As pilot well expert in perilous wave, That to a stedfast starre his course hath
bent,
When foggy mistes or cloudy tempests have The faithfull light of that faire lampe yblent,
And cover'd heaven with hideous dreriment,
Upon his card and compas firmes his eye,
The maysters of his long experiment,
And to them does the stedly helme apply, Bidding his winged vessell fairely forward
fly:

II

So Guyon, having lost his trustie gujde, Late left beyond that Ydle Lake, proceedes Yet on his way, of none accompanyde;
And evermore himselve with comfort feedes Of his owne vertues and praise-worthie
deedes.
So long he yode, yet no adventure found,
Which Fame of her shrill trompet worthy reedes:
For still he traveld through wide wastfull
ground,
That nought but desert wilderness shewed all around.

III

At last he came unto a gloomy glade, Cover'd with boughes and shrubs from heavens light,
Whereas he sitting found in secret shade
An uncouth, salvage, and uncivile wight,
Of griesly hew and fowle ill favour'd sight;
His face with smoke was tand, and eies were bleard,
His head and beard with sout were ill be-
dight,
His cole-blacke hands did seeme to have ben seard
In smythes fire-spitting forge, and nayles like clawes appeard.

IV

His yron cote, all overgrowne with rust,
Was underneath enveloped with gold, Whose glistring glosse, darkned with filthy dust,
Well yet appeared to have beene of old
A worke of rich entayle and curious mould, Woven with anticke and wyld ymagery:
And in his lap a masse of coyne he told,
And turned upside downe, to feede his
eye
And covetous desire with his huge threasury.

And round about him lay on every side Great heapes of gold, that never could be
spent:
Of which some were rude owre, not puri-
fide
Of Muleibers devouring element;
Some others were new driven, and distent Into great ingowes, and to wedges square;
Some in round plates withouten monument:
But most were stampd, and in their metal
bare
The antique shapes of kings and kesars straung and rare.

VI

Soone as he Guyon saw, in great affright
And haste he rose, for to remove aside Those pretious hills from straungers envious
sight,
And downe them poured through an hole full wide
Into the hollow earth, them there to hide.
But Guyon, lightly to him leaping, stayd
His hand, that trembled as one terrifyde; And though him selfe were at the sight dis-
mayd,
Yet him perforce restraynd, and to him doubtfull sayd:

VII

'What art thou, man, (if man at all thou art)
That here in desert hast thine habitaunce, And these rich heapes of welth doest hide apart
From the worldes eye, and from her right usaunce?'
Thereat, with staring eyes fixed askaunce, In great disdaine, he answerd: 'Hardy
Elfe,
That darest vew my direfull countenance,

I read thee rash and heedlesse of thy selfe, To trouble my still seate, and heapes of pretious pelfe.

VIII

'God of the world and worldlings I me call, Great Mammon, greatest god below the
skye,

That of my plenty poure out unto all,
And unto none my graces do envye:
Riches, renowne, and principality, Honour, estate, and all this worldes good,
For which men swinck and sweat incessantly,

Fro me do flow into an ample flood,
And in the hollow earth have their eternall brood.

IX

'Wherefore, if me thou deigne to serve and
sew,

At thy commaund, lo! all these mountaines
bee;

Or if to thy great mind, or greedy vew, All these may not suffise, there shall to
thee

Ten times so much be nombred francke and
free.'

'Mammon,' said he, 'thy godheads vaunt is vaine,

And idle offers of thy golden fee;
To them that covet such eye-glutting gaine Proffer thy giftes, and fitter servaunts entertaine.

X

'Me ill besits, that in derdoing armes
And honours suit my vowed daies do spend, Unto thy bounteous baytes and pleasing
charmes,

With which weake men thou witchest, to attend:

Regard of worldly mucke doth fowly blend
And low abase the high heroicke spright, That joyes for crownes and kingdomes to contend;

Faire shields, gay steedes, bright armes be my delight:

Those be the riches fit for an advent'rous
knight.'

XI

'Vaine glorious Elfe,' saide he, 'doest not thou weat,

That money can thy wantes at will supply ?

Sheilds, steeds, and armes, and all things for thee meet

It can purvay in twinkling of an eye;
And crownes and kingdomes to thee multiply.

Doe not I kings create, and throw the
crowne

Sometimes to him that low in dust doth ly ?

And him that raignd into his rowme thrust
downe,

And whom I lust do heape with glory and renowne ?'

XII

'All otherwise, saide he, 'I riches read, And deeme them roote of all disquiet-
nesse;

First got with guile, and then preserv'd with dread,

And after spent with pride and lavishnesse, Leaving behind them griefe and heavinesse.
Infinite mischiefes of them doe arise, Strife and debate, bloodshed and bitter-
nesse,

Outrageous wrong and hellish covetize, That noble heart, as great dishonour, doth despize.

XIII

'Ne thine be kingdomes, ne the scepters thine;

But realmes and rulers thou doest both con-
found,

And loyall truth to treason doest incline: Witness the guiltlesse blood pourd oft on
ground,

The crowned often slaine, the slayer cround,
The sacred diademe in peeces rent,

And purple robe gored with many a wound; Castles surprizd, great citties sackt and
brent:

So mak'st thou kings, and gaynest wrong-full government.

XIV

'Long were to tell the troublous stormes, that tosse

The private state, and make the life un-
sweet:

Who swelling sayles in Caspian sea doth crosse,

And in frayle wood on Adrian gulf doth fleet,

Doth not, I weene, so many evils meet.'

Then Mammon, waxing wroth, 'And why then,' said,
'Are mortall men so fond and undiscreeet,
So evill thing to seeke unto their ayd,
And having not, complaine, and having it, upbrayd?'

XV

'Indeede,' quoth he, 'through fowle intemperance, Frayle men are oft captiv'd to covetise:
But would they thinke, with how small allowaunce Untroubled nature doth her selfe suffice, Such superfluities they would despise, Which with sad cares empeach our native joyes:
At the well head the purest streames arise:
But mucky filth his branching armes an-
noyes,
And with uncomely weedes the gentle wave accloyes.'

XVI

'The antique world, in his first flowring youth,
Fownd no defect in his Creators grace, But with glad thanks, and unreprieved
truth,
The guifts of soveraine bounty did embrace:
Like angels life was then mens happy cace:
But later ages pride, like corn-fed steed, Abusd her plenty and fat swolne encrease To all licentious lust, and gan exceed The measure of her meane, and naturall first need.'

XVII

'Then gan a cursed hand the quiet wombe Of his great grandmother with steele to
wound,
And the hid treasures in her sacred tombe
With sacriledge to dig. Therein he fownd Fountaines of gold and silver to abownd,
Of which the matter of his huge desire And pompous pride eftsoones he did compownd;
Then avarice gan through his veines inspire His greedy flames, and kindled life-devouring fire.'

XVIII

'Sonne,' said he then, 'lett be thy bitter
scorne,
And leave the rudenesse of that antique age

To them that liv'd therin in state forlorne.
Thou, that doest live in later times, must wage Thy workes for wealth, and life for gold engage.
If then thee list my offred grace to use, Take what thou please of all this surplus-
age;
If thee list not, leave have thou to refuse:
But thing refused doe not afterward accuse.'

XIX

'Me list not,' said the Elfin knight, 're-
ceave
Thing offred, till I know it well be gott; Ne wote I, but thou didst these goods
bereave
From rightfull owner by unrighteous lott, Or that blood guiltinesse or guile them
blott.'
'Perdy,' quoth he, 'yet never eie did vew, Ne tong did tell, ne hand these handled
not;
But safe I have them kept in secret mew From heavens sight, and powre of al which them poursew.'

XX

'What secret place,' quoth he, 'can safely
hold
So huge a masse, and hide from heavens eie?
Or where hast thou thy wonne, that so much gold Thou canst preserve from wrong and robbery?'
'Come thou,' quoth he, 'and see.' So by and by,
Through that thicke covert he him led,
and fownd
A darkesome way, which no man could descry,
That deep descended through the hollow
grownd,
And was with dread and horror compassed arownd.'

XXI

At length they came into a larger space,
That stretcht it selfe into an ample playne, Through which a beaten broad high way did 'race,
That streight did lead to Plutoes griesly rayne:
By that wayes side there sate infernall
Payne,

And fast beside him sat tumultuous Strife:
The one in hand an yron whip did strayne,
The other brandished a bloody knife,
And both did gnash their teeth, and both did threten life.

XXII

On thother side, in one consort, there sate Cruell Revenge, and rancorous Despight, Disloyall Treason, and hart-burning Hate;
But gnawing Gealosity, out of their sight Sitting alone, his bitter lips did bight;
And trembling Feare still to and fro did fly,
And found no place, wher safe he shroud him might;
Lamenting Sorrow did in darknes lye;
And Shame his ugly face did hide from living eye.

XXIII

And over them sad Horror with grim hew Did alwaies sore, beating his yron wings;
And after him owles and night-ravens flew,
The hatefull messengers of heavy things,
Of death and dolor telling sad tidings;
Whiles sad Celeno, sitting on a clifte,
A song of bale and bitter sorrow sings,
That hart of flint a sonder could have rifte:
Which having ended, after him she flyeth swifte.

XXIV

All these before the gates of Pluto lay; By whom they passing, spake unto them
nought.
But th' Elfin knight with wonder all the
way
Did feed his eyes, and fild his inner thought.
At last him to a litle dore he brought,
That to the gate of hell, which gaped wide,
Was next adjoyning, ne them parted ought:
Betwixt them both was but a litle stride,
That did the house of Richesse from hell-mouth divide.

XXV

Before the dore sat selfe-consuming Care, Day and night keeping wary watch and
ward,
For feare least Force or Fraud should un-ware Breake in, and spoile the treasure there in gard:
Ne would he suffer Sleepe once thether-
ward

Approch, albe his drowsy den were next;
For next to Death is Sleepe to be compar'd:
Therefore his house is unto his annex; Here Sleep, ther Richesse, and helgate them both betwext.

XXVI

So soone as Mammon there arrivd, the dore
To him did open and afforded way;
Him followed eke Sir Guyon evermore, Ne darknesse him, ne daunger might dis-
may.
Soone as he entred was, the dore streight
way
Did shutt, and from behind it forth there lept
An ugly feend, more fowle then dismall day,
The which with monstrous stalke behind him stept,
And ever as he went, dew watch upon him kept.

XXVII

Well hoped hee, ere long that hardy guest,
If ever covetous hand, or lustfull eye,
Or lips he layd on thing that likte him best,
Or ever sleepe his eiestrings did untye, Should be his pray. And therefore still on
hye
He over him did hold his cruell clawes, Threatning with greedy gripe to doe him
dye,
And rend in peeces with his ravenous pawes, If ever he transgrest the fatall Stygian lawes.

XXVIII

That houses forme within was rude and
strong,
Lyke an huge cave, hewne out of rocky clifte,
From whose rough vant the ragged breaches
hong,
Emboast with massy gold of glorious guifte,
And with rich metall loaded every rifte,
That heavy ruine they did seeme to threatt;
And over them Arachne high did lifte Her cunning web, and spread her subtile nett, Enwrapped in fowle smoke and clouds more black then jett.

XXIX

Both rooffe, and floore, and walls were all of gold,
But overgrowne with dust and old decay,

And hid in darkenes, that none could be-
hold
The hew thereof: for vew of cherefull
day
Did never in that house it selfe display,
But a faint shadow of uncertein light;
Such as a lamp, whose life does fade away;
Or as the moone, cloathed with cloudy
night,
Does shew to him that walkes in feare and sad affright.

XXX

In all that rowme was nothing to be scene, But huge great yron chests and coffers
strong,
All bard with double bends, that none could
weene
Them to efforce by violence or wrong:
On every side they placed were along.
But all the grownd with seuls was scattered,
And dead mens bones, which round about were flong;
Whose lives, it seemed, whilome there were
shed,
And their vile carcases now left unburied.

XXXI

They forward passe, ne Guyon yet spoke
word,
Till that they came unto an yron dore,
Which to them opened of his owne accord,
And shewd of richesse such exceeding store,
As eie of man did never see before,
Ne ever could within one place be fownd, Though all the wealth, which is, or was of
yore,
Could gathered be through all the world
arownd,
And that above were added to that under
grownd.

XXXII

The charge thereof unto a covetous spright Commanded was, who thereby did attend,
And warily awaited day and night,
From other covetous feends it to defend,
Who it to rob and ransacke did intend.
Then Mammon, turning to that warriour,
said:
'Loe here the worldes blis! loe here the
end,
To which all men doe ayme, rich to be made!
Such grace now to be happy is before thee laid.'

XXXIII

'Certes,' said he, 'I n'ill thine offred grace, Ne to be made so happy doe intend:
Another blis before mine eyes I place, Another happines, another end.
To them that list, these base regards I lend:
But I in armes, and in atchievements brave, Do rather choose my fitting houres to
spend,
And to be lord of those that riches have, Then them to have my selfe, and be their servile slave.'

XXXIV

Thereat the feend his gnashing teeth did grate,
And griev'd, so long to lacke his greedie
pray;
For well he weened that so glorious bayte Would tempt his guest to take thereof
assay:
Had he so doen, he had him snatcht away,
More light then culver in the faulcons fist.
Eternall God thee save from such decay!
But whenas Mammon saw his purpose mist, Him to entrap unwares another way he wist.

XXXV

Thence forward he him ledd, and shortly
brought
Unto another rowme, whose dore forthright
To him did open, as it had beene taught:
Therein an hundred raunges weren pight,
And hundred furnaces all burning bright:
By every founnace many feendes did byde, Deformed creatures, horrible in sight;
And every feend his busie paines applyde, To melt the golden metall, ready to be tryde.

XXXVI

One with great bellowes gathered filling
ayre,
And with forst wind the fewell did inflame;
Another did the dying bronds repayre With yron tongs, and sprinckled ofte the
same With liquid waves, fiers Vulcans rage to tame,
Who, maystring them, renewd his former
heat;
Some scumd the drosse, that from the met-all came,

Some stird the molten owre with ladles great;
And every one did swineke, and every one did sweat.

XXXVII

But when an earthly wight they present saw, Glistring in armes and battailous aray,
From their wrot work they did themselves withdraw

To wonder at the sight: for, till that day,
They never creature saw, that cam that way.
Their staring eyes, sparckling with fervent
fyre,

And ugly shapes did nigh the man dismay,
That, were it not for shame, he would re-
tyre;

Till that him thus bespake their souveraine lord and syre:

XXXVIII

'Behold, thou Faeries sonne, with mortall
eye,

That living eye before did never see:
The thing that thou didst crave so earnestly To weet, whence all the wealth late shewd by mee

Proceeded, lo! now is reveald to thee.
Here is the fountaine of the worldes good:
Now therefore, if thou wilt enriched bee, Advise thee well, and change thy wilfull
mood;

Least thou perhaps hereafter wish, and be withstood.'

XXXIX

'Suffise it then, thou Money God,' quoth
hee,

'That all thine ydle offers I refuse.
All that I need I have; what needeth mee
To covet more then I have cause to use?
With such vaine shewes thy worldlinges vyle abuse:

But give me leave to follow mine emprise.' Mammon was much displeasd, yet no'te he chuse

But beare the rigour of his bold mesprise, And thence him forward ledd, him further to entise.

XL

He brought him through a darksom narrow strayt,

To a broad gate, all built of beaten gold:
The gate was open, but therein did wayt
A sturdie villein, stryding stiffe and bold,

As if that Highest God defy he would:
In his right hand an yron club he held,
But he himselfe was all of golden mould, Yet had both life and sence, and well could weld
That cursed weapon, when his cruell foes he queld.

XLI

Disdayne he called was, and did disdayne
To be so cald, and who so did him call: Sterne was his looke, and full of stomacke
vayne,

His portance terrible, and stature tall,
Far passing th' hight of men terrestriall,
Like an huge gyant of the Titans race;
That made him scorne all creatures great and small,

And with his pride all others powre deface:
More fitt amongst black fiendes then men to have his place.

XLII

Soone as those glitterand armes he did espye,
That with their brightnesse made that darknes light,

His harmefull club he gan to hurtle hye,
And threaten batteill to the Faery knight;
Who likewise gan himselfe to batteill dight, Till Mammon did his hasty hand withhold,
And counsell him abstaine from perilous
fight:

For nothing might abash the villein bold, Ne mortall steele emperce his miscreated mould.

XLIII

So having him with reason pacifyde, And the fiers carle commaunding to for-
beare,

He brought him in. The rowme was large and wyde,

As it some gyeld or solemne temple weare:
Many great golden pillours did upbeare
The massy rooffe, and riches huge sustayne,
And every pillour decked was full deare With crownes, and diademes, and titles
vaine,

Which mortall princes wore, whiles they on earth did rayne.

XLIV

A route of people there assembled were,
Of every sort and nation under skye,

Which with great uprore preaced to draw
 nere
 To th' upper part, where was advanced
 hye

A stately siege of souveraine majesty;
 And thereon satt a woman gorgeous gay,
 And richly cladd in robes of royaltie,
 That never earthly prince in such aray His glory did enhance and pompous pryde display.

XLV

Her face right wondrous faire did seeme to
 bee,
 That her broad beauties beam great bright-nes threw Through the dim shade, that all men might it see:

Yet was not that same her owne native
 hew,
 But wrought by art and counterfetted shew, Thereby more lovers unto her to call; Nath'lesse most hevenly faire in deed and
 vew

She by creation was, till she did fall; Thenceforth she sought for helps to cloke her crime withall.

XLVI

There as in glistring glory she did sitt, She held a great gold chaine ylincked
 well,

Whose upper end to highest heven was
 knitt,
 And lower part did reach to lowest bell;
 And all that preace did rownd about her
 swell,

To catchen hold of that long chaine, thereby To climbe aloft, and others to excell:
 That was Ambition, rash desire to sty,
 And every linck thereof a step of dignity.

XLVII

Some thought to raise themselves to high degree

By riches and unrighteous reward;
 Some by close shouldring, some by flatteree; Others through friendes, others for base regard;

And all by wrong waies for themselves pre-pard.

Those that were up themselves, kept others low,

Those that were low themselves, held others hard,

Ne suffred them to ryse or greater grow, But every one did strive his fellow downe to throw.

XLVIII

Which whenas Guyon saw, he gan inquire, What meant that preace about that ladies
 throne,

And what she was that did so high aspyre.
 Him Mammon answered: 'That goodly one, Whom all that folke with such contention Doe flock about, my deare, my daughter is:
 Honour and dignitie from her alone Derived are, and all this worldes blis, For which ye men doe strive: few gett, but many mis.

XLIX

'And fayre Philotime she rightly hight,
 The fairest wight that wonneth under skye, But that this darksom neather world her
 light

Doth dim with horror and deformity, Worthie of heven and hye felicitie, From whence the gods have her for envy
 thrust:

But sith thou hast found favour in mine eye, Thy spouse I will her make, if that thou lust,

That she may thee advance for works and merits just.'

L

'Gramercy, Mammon,' said the gentle
 knight,

'For so great grace and offred high estate,
 But I, that am fraile flesh and earthly wight, Unworthy match for such immortall mate
 My selfe well wote, and mine unequal fate:
 And were I not, yet is my trowth yplight,
 And love avowd to other lady late,
 That to remove the same I have no might:
 To change love causelesse is reproch to warlike knight.'

LI

Mammon emmoved was with inward wrath; Yet, forcing it to fayne, him forth thence
 led,

Through griesly shadowes by a beaten path,
 Into a garden goodly garnished With hearbs and fruits, whose kinds mote not be redd:

Not such as earth out of her fruitfull woomb

Throws forth to men, sweet and well savored,
 But direfull deadly black, both leafe and bloom, Fitt to adorne the dead and deck the dreary toombe.

LII

There mournfull cypresse grew in greatest
 store,

And trees of bitter gall, and heben sad,
 Dead sleeping poppy, and black hellebore, Cold colocoquintida, and tetra mad, Mortall samnitis, and cicuta bad,
 With which th' unjust Atheniens made to dy Wise Socrates, who thereof quaffing glad, Poured out his life and last philosophy
 To the fayre Critias, his dearest belamy.

LIII

The Gardin of Proserpina this hight;
 And in the midst thereof a silver seat,
 With a thick arber goodly overdight,
 In which she often usd from open heat Her selfe to shroud, and pleasures to entreat.

Next thereunto did grow a goodly tree,
 With branches broad dispredd and body
 great,

Clothed with leaves, that none the wood mote see,
 And loaden all with fruit as thick as it might bee.

LIV

Their fruit were golden apples glistening
 bright,
 That goodly was their glory to behold;
 On earth like never grew, ne living wight Like ever saw, but they from hence were
 sold;

For those, which Hercules with conquest
 bold

Got from great Atlas daughters, hence began,

And, planted there, did bring forth fruit of
 gold;

And those with which th' Eubæan young man wan

Swift Atalanta, when through craft he her out ran.

LV

Here also sprong that goodly golden fruit,
 With which Acontius got his lover trew,

Whom he had long time sought with fruit-lesse suit:

Here eke that famous golden apple grew,
 The which amongst the gods false Ate
 threw;

For which th' Idæan ladies disagreed, Till partiall Paris dempt it Venus dew,
 And had of her fayre Helen for his meed, That many noble Greekes and Trojans made to bleed.

LVI

The warlike Elfe much wondred at this
 tree,

So fayre and great, that shadowed all the
 ground,

And his broad branches, laden with rich fee,

Did stretch themselves without the utmost
 bound

Of this great gardin, compast with a mound:
 Which over-hanging, they themselves did
 steepe

In a blacke flood, which flow'd about it
 round;

That is the river of Cocytus deepe, In which full many soules do endlesse wayle and weepe.

LVII

Which to behold, he clomb up to the bancke,

And, looking downe, saw many damned wightes,

In those sad waves, which direfull deadly stancke,

Plonged continually of cruell sprightes,
 That with their piteous cryes, and yelling shrightes,

 They made the further shore resounden
 wide.

Emongst the rest of those same ruefull
 sightes,

One cursed creature he by chance espide, That drenched lay full deepe, under the garden side.

LVIII

Deepe was he drenched to the upmost chin, Yet gaped still, as coveting to drinke

Of the cold liquour which he waded in,
 And stretching forth his hand, did often thinke

To reach the fruit which grew upon the brincke:

But both the fruit from hand, and flood from mouth, Did fly abacke, and made him vainely
 swinke:
 The whiles he sterv'd with hunger and with drouth,
 He daily dyde, yet never throughly dyen couth.

LIX

The knight, him seeing labour so in vaine, Askt who he was, and what he ment there-
 by:
 Who, groning deepe, thus answerd him
 againe:
 'Most curs'd of all creatures under skye, Lo! Tantalus, I here tormented lye:
 Of whom high Jove wont whylome feasted
 bee,
 Lo! here I now for want of food doe dye:
 But if that thou be such as I thee see,
 Of grace I pray thee, give to eat and drinke to mee.'

LX

'Nay, nay, thou greedy Tantalus,' quoth
 he,
 'Abide the fortune of thy present fate,
 And unto all that live in high degree Ensample be of mind intemperate, To teach them how to use their present
 state.'
 Then gan the curs'd wretch alowd to cry, Accusing highest Jove and gods ingrate,
 And eke blaspheming heaven bitterly, As authour of unjustice, there to let him
 dye.

LXI

He lookt a litle further, and espyde Another wretch, whose carcas deepe was drent
 Within the river, which the same did hyde:
 But both his handes, most filthy feculent, Above the water were on high extent,
 And faynd to wash themselves incessantly;
 Yet nothing cleaner were for such intent,
 But rather fowler seemed to the eye;
 So lost his labour vaine and ydle industry.

LXII

The knight, him calling, asked who he was;
 Who, lifting up his head, him answerd thus:
 'I Pilate am, the falsest judge, alas!
 And most unjust; that, by unrighteous

And wicked doome, to Jewes despiteous Delivered up the Lord of Life to dye,
 And did acquite a murdrer felonous:
 The whiles my handes I washt in purity, The whiles my soule was soyld with fowle iniquity.'

LXIII

Infinite moe, tormented in like paine,
 He there beheld, too long here to be told:
 Ne Mammon would there let him long re-
 mayne,
 For terrour of the tortures manifold,
 In which the damned soules he did behoid, But roughly him bespake: 'Thou fearefull foole,
 Why takest not of that same fruite of gold,
 Ne sittest downe on that same silver stooke,
 To rest thy weary person in the shadow coole?'

LXIV

All which he did, to do him deadly fall In frayle intemperaunce through sinfull bayt;
 To which if he inclyned had at all,
 That dreadfull feend, which did behinde him wayt,
 Would him have rent in thousand peeces
 strayt:
 But he was wary wise in all his way,
 And well perceived his deceitfull sleight, Ne suffred lust his safety to betray;
 So goodly did beguile the guylor of his pray.

LXV

And now he has so long remained theare, That vitall powres gan waxe both weake
 and wan,
 For want of food and sleepe, which two up-
 beare,
 Like mightie pillours, this frayle life of
 man,
 That none without the same endure can.
 For now three dayes of men were full out-
 wrought,
 Since he this hardy enterprize began:
 Forth great Mammon fayrely he besought, Into the world to guye him backe, as he him brought.

LXVI

The god, though loth, yet was constraynd t' obay,
 For, lenger time then that, no living wight

Below the earth might suffred be to stay:
 So backe againe him brought to living light.
 But all so soone as his enfeebled spright Gan sucke this vitall ayre into his brest, As overcome with too exceeding might,
 The life did flit away out of her nest,
 And all his sences were with deadly fit op-
 prest.

CANTO VIII

Sir Guyon, layd in swowne, is by Acrates sonnes despoild;
 Whom Arthure soone hath reskewed And Paynim brethren foild.

I

AND is there care in heaven? And is there
 love

In heavenly spirits to these creatures bace,
 That may compassion of their evilles move?
 There is: else much more wretched were the cace

Of men then beasts. But O th' exceeding
 grace

Of Highest God, that loves his creatures so,
 And all his workes with mercy doth embrace,

That blessed angels he sends to and fro,
 To serve to wicked man, to serve his wicked foe!

II

How oft do they their silver bowers leave
 To come to succour us, that succour want!
 How oft do they with golden pineons cleave
 The flitting skyes, like flying pursuivant, Against fowle feendes to ayd us militant!
 They for us fight, they watch and dewly
 ward,

And their bright squadrons round about us plant;

And all for love, and nothing for reward: O why should hevenly God to men have such regard?

III

During the while that Guyon did abide In Mamons house, the palmer, whom whyl-
 care

That wanton mayd of passage had denide, By further search had passage found elsewhere,

And, being on his way, approached neare Where Guyon lay in traunce, when sud-deinly

He heard a voyce, that called lowd and
 cleare,
 'Come hether! come hether! O come hastily!'
 That all the fields resounded with the rue-full cry.

IV

The palmer lent his eare unto the noyce,
 To weet who called so importunely:
 Againe he heard a more efforced voyce, That bad him come in haste. He by and by

His feeble feet directed to the cry; Which to that shady delve him brought at
 last,

Where Mammon earst did sunne his threasury:

There the good Guyon he found slumbring
 fast

In senceles dreame; which sight at first him sore aghast.

Beside his head there satt a faire young
 man,

Of wondrous beauty and of freshest yeares, Whose tender bud to blossome new began,

And flourish faire above his equall peares:
 His snowy front, curled with golden heares,
 Like Phoebus face adorn'd with sunny rayes, Divinely shone, and two sharpe winged sheares,

Decked with diverse plumes, like painted jayes,

Were fixed at his backe, to cut his ayery wayes.

VI

Like as Cupido on Idæan hill,
 When having laid his cruell bow away,
 And mortall arrowes, wherewith he doth
 fill

The world with murderous spoiles and bloody
 pray,

With his faire mother he him dights to
 play,

And with his goodly sisters, Graces three;
 The goddesse, pleased with his wanton
 play,

Suffers her selfe through sleepe beguild to
 bee,

The whiles the other ladies mind theyr mery glee.

VII

Whom when the palmer saw, abasht he
was Through fear and wonder, that he nought could say, Till him the childe bespoke: 'Long lackt,
alas!
Hath bene thy faithfull aide in hard as-
say,
Whiles deadly fitt thy pupill doth dismay.
Behold this heavy sight, thou reverend
sire:
But dread of death and dolor doe away;
For life ere long shall to her home retire,
And he, that breathlesse seems, shal corage bold respire.

VIII

'The charge, which God doth unto me arrett,
Of his deare safety, I to thee commend;
Yet will I not forgoe, ne yet forgett,
The care thereof my selfe unto the end,
But evermore him succour, and defend Against his foe and mine: watch thou, I
pray;
For evill is at hand him to offend.'
So having said, eftsounes he gan display His painted nimble wings, and vanisht quite away.

IX

The palmer seeing his lefte empty place,
And his slow eies beguiled of their sight, Woxe sore affraid, and standing still a
space,
Gaz'd after him, as fowle escapt by flight:
At last him turning to his charge behight, With trembling hand his troubled pulse gan try,
Where finding life not yet dislodged quight,
He much rejoyst, and courd it tenderly, As chicken newly hatcht, from dreaded destiny.

X

At last he spide where towards him did
pace
Two Paynim knights, al armd as bright as
skie,
And them beside an aged sire did trace,
And far before a light-foote page did flie,
That breathed strife and troublous enmitie.
Those were the two sonnes of Acrates old,
Who, meeting earst with Archimago slie,

Foreby that idle strond, of him were told,
That he which earst them combatted was Guyon bold.

XI

Which to avenge on him they dearly vovd, Where ever that on ground they mote him
find:
False Archimage provokte their corage
prowd,
And stryful Atin in their stubborne mind Coles of contention and whot vengeance
find.
Now bene they come whereas the Palmer
sate,
Keeping that slombred corse to him assind:
Well knew they both his person, sith of late With him in bloody arnes they rashly did debate.

XII

Whom when Pyrochles saw, inflam'd with
rage
That sire he fowl bespake: 'Thou dotard
vile,
That with thy brutenesse shendst thy comely age,
Abandon soone, I read, the caytive spoile Of that same outcast carcas, that ere while Made it selfe famous through false trechery, And crown'd his coward crest with knightly stile:
Loe where he now inglorious doth lye,
To proove he lived il, that did thus fowly
dye.'

XIII

To whom the palmer fearlesse answered:
'Certes, sir knight, ye bene too much to
blame,
Thus for to blott the honor of the dead,
And with fowle cowardize his carcas shame, Whose living handes immortalizd his
name.
Vile is the vengeance on the ashes cold,
And envy base, to barke at sleeping fame:
Was never wight that treason of him told:
Your self his prowesse prov'd, and found him fiers and bold.'

XIV

Then sayd Cymochles: 'Palmer, thou doest dote, Ne canst of prowesse ne of knighthood
deeme,

Save as thou seest or hearst: but well I wote,
That of his puissaunce tryall made extreeme:
Yet gold al is not, that doth golden seeme, Ne all good knights, that shake well speare and shield:
The worth of all men by their end es-teeme,
And then dew praise or dew reproch them
yield:
Bad therefore I him deeme that thus lies dead on field.'

XV

'Good or bad,' gan his brother fiers reply,
'What doe I recke, sith that he dide entire ?
Or what doth his bad death now satisfy The greedy hunger of revenging yre, Sith wrathfull hand wrought not her owne
desire ?
Yet since no way is lefte to wreake my
spight,
I will him reave of armes, the victors hire,
And of that shield, more worthy of good
knight;
For why should a dead dog be deckt in armour bright ?'

XVI

'Fayr sir,' said then the palmer suppliant,
'For knightoods love, doe not so fowle a
deed, Ne blame your honor with so shamefull
vaunt
Of vile revenge. To spoile the dead of weed
Is sacrilege, and doth all sinnes exceed;
But leave these relicks of his living might To decke his herce, and trap his tomb-blacke
steed.'
'What herce or steed,' said he, 'should he have dight, But be entombd in the raven or the kight ?'

XVII

With that, rude hand upon his shield he laid,
And th' other brother gan his helme un-lace,
Both fiercely bent to have him disaraid; Till that they spyde where towards them did pace

An armed knight, of bold and bounteous
grace,
Whose squire bore after him an heben
launce
And coverd shield. Well kend him so far
space
Th' enchaunter by his armes and amen-
aunce,
When under him he saw his Lybian steed to prauce;

XVIII

And to those brethren sayd: 'Rise, rise bylive,
And unto batteil doe your selves adresse;
For yonder comes the prowest knight alive, Prince Arthur, flowre of grace and nobil-
esse,
That hath to Paynim knights wrought gret distresse,
And thousand Sar'zins fowly donne to
dye.'
That word so deepe did in their harts im-
presse,
That both eftsoones upstartd furiously,
And gan themselves prepare to batteill greedily.

XIX

But fiers Pyrochles, lacking his owne sword, The want thereof now greatly gan to
plaine,
And Archimage besought, him that afford,
Which he had brought for Braggadochio vaime.
'So would I,' said th' enchaunter, 'glad and faine Beteeme to you this sword, you to defend,
Or ought that els your honor might main-
taine,
But that this weapons powre I well have kend
To be contrary to the worke which ye intend.

XX

'For that same knights owne sword this is,
of yore
Which Merlin made by his almightie art For that his noursling, when he knighthood swore,
Therewith to doen his foes eternall smart.
The metal first he mixt with medæwart, That no enchauntment from his dint might save;

Then it in flames of Aetna wrought apart,
And seven times dipped in the bitter wave Of hellish Styx, which hidden vertue to it gave.

XXI

'The vertue is, that nether steele nor stone The stroke thereof from entraunce may defend;

Ne ever may be used by his fone, Ne forst his rightful owner to offend;
Ne ever will it breake, ne ever bend:
Wherefore Morddure it rightfully is hight.
In vaine therefore, Pyrochles, should I lend
The same to thee, against his lord to fight, For sure yt would deceive thy labor and thy might.'

XXII

'Foolish old man,' said then the Pagan
wroth,
'That weenest words or charms may force
withstond:
Soone shalt thou see, and then beleeve for troth,

That I can carve with this inchaunted brond His lords owne flesh.' Therewith out of his bond

That vertuous steele he rudely snatcht
away,
And Guyons sheld about his wrest he bond;
So ready dight, fierce battaile to assay, And match his brother prond in battailous aray.

XXIII

By this, that straunger knight in presence
came,
And goodly salued them; who nought
again

Him answered, as courtesie became,
But with sterne lookes, and stomachous
disdaine,

Gave signes of grudge and discontentment
vaine:

Then, turning to the palmer, he gan spy
Where at his feet, with sorrowfull demayne
And deadly hew, an armed corse did lye, In whose dead face he redd great magnanimity.

XXIV

Sayd he then to the palmer: 'Reverend syre, What great misfortune hath betidd this
knight ?

Or did his life her fatall date expyre,
Or did he fall by treason, or by fight ?
How ever, sure I rew his pitteous plight.'
'Not one, nor other,' sayd the palmer grave,
'Hath him befalme; but cloudes of deadly
night

A while his heavy eyldis cover'd have,
And all his sences drowned in deep sence-lesse wave.

XXV

'Which those his cruell foes, that stand hereby,
Making advauntage, to revenge their spight, Would him disarm and treaten shame-
fully;

Unworthise usage of redoubted knight.
But you, faire sir, whose honourable sight Doth promise hope of helpe and timely
grace,

Mote I beseech to succour his sad plight,
And by your powre protect his feeble cace.
First prayse of knighthood is, fowle outrage to deface.'

XXVI

'Palmer,' said he, 'no knight so rude, I
weene,

As to doen outrage to a sleeping ghost:
Ne was there ever noble corage seene,
That in advauntage would his puissaunce
bost:

Honour is least, where oddes appeareth most.

May bee, that better reason will aswage The rash revengers heat. Words well dis-post

Have secrete powre t' appease inflamed
rage:

If not, leave unto me thy knights last patronage.'

XXVII

Tho, turning to those brethren, thus bespoke:

'Ye warlike payre, whose valorous great
might,

It seemes, just wronges to vengeance doe provoke,

To wreake your wrath on this dead seeming
knight,

Mote ought allay the storme of your de-
spight,

And settle patience in so furious heat ?
Not to debate the challenge of your right,

But for this carkas pardon I entreat, Whom fortune hath already laid in lowest seat.'

XXVIII

To whom Cymochles said: 'For what art thou,
That mak'st thy selfe his dayes-man, to prolong The vengeance prest? Or who shall let me now,
On this vile body from to wreak my wrong,
And make his carkas as the outcast dong?
Why should not that dead carrion satisfie
The guilt which, if he lived had thus long,
His life for dew revenge should deare
abye?
The trespas still doth live, albee the person
dye.'

XXIX

'Indeed,' then said the Prince, 'the evill
donne
Dyes not, when breath the body first doth
leave,
But from the grandsyre to the nephewes
sonne,
And all his seede, the curse doth often cleave,
Till vengeance utterly the guilt bereave:
So straightly God doth judge. But gentle
knight,
That doth against the dead his hand up-heave,
His honour staines with rancour and de-
spight,
And great disparagment makes to his former might.'

XXX

Pyrochles gan reply the second tyme,
And to him said: 'Now, felon, sure I read,
How that thou art partaker of his cryme: Therefore by Termagaunt thou shalt be
dead.'
With that, his hand, more sad then lomp of
lead,
Uplifting high, he weened with Morddure, His owne good sword Morddure, to cleave his head.
The faithfull steele such treason no'uld endure,
But swarving from the marke, his lordes life did assure.

XXXI

Yet was the force so furious and so fell,
That horse and man it made to reele
asyde:
Nath'lesse the Prince would not forsake his sell,
For well of yore he learned had to ryde,
But full of anger fiersly to him cryde:
'False traitour miscreant! thou broken
hast
The law of armes, to strike foe undefide.
But thou thy treasons fruit, I hope, shalt taste Right sowre, and feele the law, the which thou hast defast.'

XXXII

With that, his balefull speare he fiercely
bent
Against the Pagans brest, and therewith
thought
His cursed life out of her lodg have rent:
But ere the point arrived where it ought,
That seven fold shield, which he from Guyon brought,
He cast between to ward the bitter stownd:
Through all those foldes the steelehead passage wrought,
And through his shoulder perst; wherwith to ground
He groveling fell, all gored in his gushing
wound.

XXXIII

Which when his brother saw, fraught with great grieve
And wrath, he to him leaped furiously, And fowly saide. 'By Mahoune, cursed
thiefe,
That direfull stroke thou dearely shalt aby.'
Then, hurling up his harmefull blade on
hy,
Smote him so hugely on his haughtie crest,
That from his saddle forced him to fly: Els mote it needes downe to his manly
brest
Have cleft his head in twaine, and life thence dispossesst.

XXXIV

Now was the Prince in daungerous dis-
tresse,
Wanting his sword, when he on foot should
fight:

His single speare could doe him small redresse Against two foes of so exceeding might,
 The least of which was match for any knight.
 And now the other, whom he earst did daunt,
 Had reard him selfe againe to cruel fight,
 Three times more furious and more puissant, Unmindfull of his wound, of his fate ignorant.

XXXV

So both attonce him charge on either syde,
 With hideous strokes and importable powre,
 That forced him his ground to traverse wyde,
 And wisely watch to ward that deadly stowre:
 For in his shield, as thicke as stormie showre,
 Their strokes did raine; yet did he never quaile, Ne backward shrinke, but as a stedfast towre, Whom foe with double battry doth assaile, Them on her bulwarke beares, and bids them nought availe, —

XXXVI

So stoutly he withstood their strong assay;
 Till that at last, when he advantage spyde,
 His poynant speare he thrust with puissant sway
 At proud Cymochles, whiles his shield was wyde, That through his thigh the mortall steele did gryde:
 He, swarving with the force, within his flesh Did breake the lance, and let the head abyde:
 Out of the wound the red blood flowed fresh,
 That underneath his feet soone made a purple plesh.

XXXVII

Horribly then he gan to rage and rayle, Cursing his gods, and him selfe damning deepe:
 Als when his brother saw the red blood rayle Adowne so fast, and all his armour steepe,
 For very felnesse lowd he gan to weepe,

And said: 'Caytive, cursse on thy cruell hond,
 That twice hath spedd! yet shall it not thee keepe
 From the third brunt of this my fattall brood:
 Lo where the dreadfull Death behynd thy backe doth stond!'

XXXVIII

With that he strooke, and thother strooke withall, That nothing seemd mote beare so monstrous might:
 The one upon his covered shield did fall,
 And glauncing downe would not his owner byte:
 But th' other did upon his troncheon smyte,
 Which hewing quite a sunder, further way
 It made, and on his hacqueton did lyte,
 The which dividing with importune sway,
 It seizd in his right side, and there the dint did stay.

XXXIX

Wyde was the wound, and a large luke-warne flood,
 Red as the rose, thence gushed grievously,
 That when the Paynym spyde the streaming blood, Gave him great hart, and hope of victory.
 On thother side, in huge perplexity
 The Prince now stood, having his weapon broke;
 Nought could he hurt, but still at warde did ly:
 Yet with his troncheon he so rudely stroke Cymochles twice, that twice him forst his foot revoke.

XL

Whom when the palmer saw in such distresse, Sir Guyons sword he lightly to him raught,
 And said: 'Fayre some, great God thy right hand blesse,
 To use that sword so well as he it ought.'
 Glad was the knight, and with fresh courage fraught,
 When as againe he armed felt his hond:
 Then like a lyon, which hath long time saught His robbed whelpes, and at the last them fond Emongst the shepeheard swaynes, then wexeth wood and yond;

XLI

So fierce he laid about him, and dealt blowes On either side, that neither maye could
hold,

Ne shield defend the thunder of his throwes:
Now to Pyrochles many strokes he told;
Eft to Cymochles twice so many fold:

Then backe againe turning his busie hond, Them both atonce compeld with courage
bold,

To yield wide way to his hart-thrilling brond;

And though they both stood stiffe, yet could not both withstood.

XLII

As salvage bull, whom two fierce mastives
bayt,

When rancour doth with rage him once engore,

Forgets with wary warde them to awayt, But with his dreadfull hornes them drives
afore,

Or flings aloft, or treads downe in the
flore,

Breathing out wrath, and bellowing dis-
daine,

That all the forest quakes to heare him rore:
So rag'd Prince Arthur twixt his foemen
twaine,

That neither could his mightie puissance sustaine.

XLIII

But ever at Pyrochles when he smitt,
Who Guyons shield cast ever him before, Whereon the Faery Queenes pourtract was
writt,

His hand relented, and the stroke forbore,
And his deare hart the picture gan adore;
Which oft the Paynim sav'd from deadly
stowre.

But him henceforth the same can save no
more;

For now arrived is his fatall howre, That no'te avoyded be by earthly skill or powre.

XLIV

For when Cymochles saw the fowle reproch,

Which them appeached, prickt with guiltie
shame

And inward grieffe, he fiercely gan approach, Resolv'd to put away that loathly blame,

Or dye with honour and desert of fame;
And on the haubergh stroke the Prince so
sore,

That quite disparted all the linked frame,
And pierced to the skin, but bit no more, Yet made him wise to reele, that never moov'd afore.

XLV

Whereat renfierst with wrath and sharp regret,

He stroke so hugely with his borrowd blade,
That it empierst the Pagans burganet, And cleaving the hard steele, did deepe invade

Into his head, and cruell passage made Quite through his brayne. He, tombling downe on ground,

Breathd out his ghost, which, to th' infernall shade

Fast flying, there eternall torment found For all the sinnes wherewith his lewd life did abound.

XLVI

Which when his german saw, the stony
feare

Ran to his hart, and all his sence dismayd, Ne thenceforth life ne corage did appeare;
But as a man, whom hellish feendes have frayd,

Long trembling still he stoode: at last thus
sayd:

'Traytour, what hast thou doen? How ever may

Thy cursed hand so cruelly have swayd Against that knight? Harrow and well
away!

After so wicked deede why liv'st thou lenger day?'

XLVII

With that all desperate, as loathing light,
And with revenge desyring soone to dye, Assembling all his force and utmost might,
With his owne swerd he fierce at him did
flye,

And strooke, and foyned, and lasht outrageously,

Withouten reason or regard. Well knew The Prince, with pacience and sufferance sly

So hasty heat soone cooled to subdew: Tho, when this breathlesse woxe, that batteil gan renew.

XLVIII

As when a windy tempest bloweth hyc,
That nothing may withstand his stormy
stowre,
The clowdes, as thinges affrayd, before him
flye;
But all so soone as his outrageous powre
Is layd, they fiercely then begin to showre,
And, as in scorne of his spent stormy spight,
Now all attonce their malice forth do poure:
So did Prince Arthur beare himselfe in
fight,
And suffred rash Pyrochles waste his ydle might.

XLIX

At last when as the Sarazin perceiv'd, How that straunge sword refusd to serve his neede,
But, when he stroke most strong, the dint
deceiv'd,
He flong it from him, and, devoyd of dreed, Upon him lightly leaping without heed, Twixt his two mighty armes engrasped fast, Thinking to overthrowe and downe him tred:
But him in strength and skill the Prince surpast,
And through his nimble sleight did under him down east.

L

Nought booted it the Paynim then to strive;
For as a bittur in the eagles clawe,
That may not hope by flight to scape alive, Still waytes for death with dread and trembling aw,
So he, now subject to the victours law,
Did not once move, nor upward cast his eye, For vile disdaine and rancour, which did gnaw
His hart in twaine with sad melancholy, As one that loathed life, and yet despysd to dye.

LI

But full of princely bounty and great mind,
The conquerour nought cared him to slay,
But casting wronges and all revenge behind,
More glory thought to give life then decay,
And sayd: 'Paynim, this is thy dismall day;
Yet if thou wilt renounce thy miscreaunce,
And my trew liegeman yield thy selfe for ay, Life will I graunt thee for thy valiaunce, And all thy wronges will wipe out of my sovenaunce.'

LII

'Foole!' sayd the Pagan, 'I thy gift defye;
But use thy fortune, as it doth befall,
And say, that I not overcome doe dye,
But in despight of life for death doe call.'
Wroth was the Prince, and sory yet withall, That he so wilfully refused grace;
Yet, sith his fate so cruelly did fall,
His shining helmet he gan soone unlace, And left his headlesse body bleeding all the place.

LIII

By this, Sir Guyon from his traunce awakt, Life having maystered her sencelesse foe;
And looking up, when as his shield he lakt,
And sword saw not, he wexed wondrous
woe:
But when the palmer, whom he long ygoe Had lost, he by him spyde, right glad he
grew,
And saide: 'Deare sir, whom wandering to and fro
I long have lackt, I joy thy face to vew: Firme is thy faith, whom daunger never fro me drew.

LIV

'But read, what wicked hand lath robbed
mee
Of my good sword and shield?' The palmer, glad
With so fresh hew uprysing him to see, Him answered: 'Fayre soune, be no whit
sad
For want of weapons; they shall soone be
had.'
So gan he to discourse the whole debate, Which that straunge knight for him sustained had,
And those two Sarazins confounded late, Whose carcasses on ground were horribly prostrate.

LV

Which when he heard, and saw the tokens
trew,
His hart with great affection was embayd,
And to the Prince bowing with reverence
dew,
As to the patrone of his life, thus sayd:
'My lord, my liege, by whose most gracious
ayd
I live this day, and see my foes subdewd, What may suffice to be for meede repayd

Of so great graces as ye have me shewd, But to be ever bound —

LVI

To whom the infant thus: 'Fayre sir, what need

Good turnes be counted, as a servile bond,
To bind their dooers to receive their need ?
Are not all knights by oath bound to withstand

Oppressours powre by armes and puissant
hond ?

Suffise, that I have done my dew in place.'
So goodly purpose they together fond Of kindnesse and of courteous aggrace;
The whiles false Archimage and Atin fled apace.

CANTO IX

The House of Temperance, in which Doth sober Alma dwell, Besieged of many foes, whom straunger knightes to flight compell.

I

OF all Gods workes, which doe this world
adorne,

There is no one more faire and excellent, Then is mans body both for powre and
forme,

Whiles it is kept in sober government;
But noue then it more fowle and indecent, Distempred through misrule and passions
bace:

It growes a monster, and incontinent Doth loose his dignity and native grace.
Behold, who list, both one and other in this place.

II

After the Paynim brethren conquer'd were,
The Briton Prince recov'ring his stolne
sword,

And Guyon his lost shield, they both yfere Forth passed on their way in fayre accord, Till him the Prince with gentle court did
bord:

'Sir knight, mote I of you this court'sy
read,

To weet why on your shield, so goodly scord,

Beare ye the picture of that ladies head ?
Full lively is the semblaunt, though the substance dead.'

III

'Fayre sir,' sayd he, 'if in that picture
dead

Such life ye read, and vertue in vaine shew, What mote ye weene, if the trew lively-
head

Of that most glorious visage ye did vew ?
But yf the beauty of her mind ye knew,
That is, her bounty and imperiall powre, Thousand times fairer then her mortal hew, O how great wonder would your thoughts
devoure,

And infinite desire into your spirite poure !

IV

'Shee is the mighty Queene of Faery, Whose faire retraitt I in my shield doe
beare;

Shee is the flowre of grace and chastity, Throughout the world renowned far and
neare,

My liefe, my liege, my souveraine, my deare,
Whose glory shineth as the morning starre,
And with her light the earth enlumines
cleare:

Far reach her mercies, and her praises
farre,

As well in state of peace, as puissaunce in warre.'

V

'Thrise happy man,' said then the Briton
knight,

'Whom gracious lott and thy great val-iaunce

Have made thee soldier of that princesse
bright,

Which with her bounty and glad counten-
aunce

Doth blesse her servants, and them high advauce.

How may straunge knight hope ever to aspire,

By faithfull service and meete amenaunce, Unto such blisse ? Sufficient were that hire For losse of thousand lives, to die at her desire.'

VI

Said Guyon, 'Noble lord, what meed so
great,

Or grace of earthly prince so souveraine, But by your wondrous worth and warlike feat

Ye well may hope, and easely attaine ?

But were your will, her sold to entertaine, And numbred be amongst Knights of Maydenhed,
 Great guerdon, well I wote, should you re-
 maine,
 And in her favor high bee reckoned,
 As Arthegall and Sophy now beene honored.'

VII

'Certes,' then said the Prince, 'I God avow, That sith I armes and knighthood first did
 plight,
 My whole desire hath beene, and yet is now,
 To serve that Queene with al my powre and
 might.
 Now hath the sunne with his lamp-burning
 light Walkt round about the world, and I no
 lesse, Sith of that goddesse I have sought the
 sight,
 Yet no where can her find: such happinesse Heven doth to me envy, and Fortune favourlesse.'

VIII

'Fortune, the foe of famous chevisaunce, Seldome,' said Guyon, 'yields to vertue aide, But in her way throwes mischief and mis-
 chaunce,
 Whereby her course is stopt and passage
 staid.
 But you, faire sir, be not herewith dismaid, But constant keepe the way in which ye
 stand;
 Which were it not that I am els delaid
 With hard adventure, which I have in hand, I labour would to guide you through al Fary Land.'

IX

'Gramercy, sir,' said he; 'but mote I weete What straunge adventure doe ye now pur-
 sew ?
 Perhaps my succour or advizement meete Mote stead you much your purpose to sub-
 dew.'
 Then gan Sir Guyon all the story shew
 Of false Acrasia, and her wicked wiles, Which to avenge, the palmer him forth
 drew From Faery court. So talked they, the whiles
 They wasted had much way, and measurd many miles.

And now faire Phoebus gan decline in haste
 His weary wagon to the westerne vale, Whenas they spide a goodly castle, plaste Foreby a river in a pleasaunt dale;
 Which choosing for that evenings hospitale, They thether marcht: but when they came
 in sight,
 And from their sweaty coursers did avale, They found the gates fast barred long ere
 night,
 And every loup fast lockt, as fearing foes
 despight.

XI

Which when they saw, they weened fowle reproch
 Was to them doen, their entraunce to forstall,
 Till that the squire gan nigher to approch,
 And wind his horne under the castle wall, That with the noise it shooke, as it would
 fall.
 Eftsoones forth looked from the highest spire
 The watch, and lowd unto the knights did
 call,
 To weete what they so rudely did require:
 Who gently answered, they entraunce did desire.

XII

'Fly, fly, good knights,' said he, 'fly fast
 away,
 If that your lives ye love, as meete ye should;
 Fly fast, and save your selves from neare
 decay;
 Here may ye not have entraunce, though we would:
 We would and would againe, if that we could;
 But thousand enemies about us rave,
 And with long siege us in this castle hould:
 Seven yeares this wise they us besieged have,
 And many good knights slaine, that have us sought to save.'

XIII

Thus as he spoke, loe! with outragions cry
 A thousand villeins rownd about them swarnd
 Out of the rockes and caves adjoyning nye:
 Vile caitive wretches, ragged, rude, deformd,

All threatning death, all in straunge manner
 armd;
 Some with unweldy clubs, some with long speares,
 Some rusty knifes, some staves in fier warnd.
 Sterne was their looke, like wild amazed steares, Staring with hollow eies, and stiffe upstanding heares.

XIV

Fiersly at first those knights they did as-sayle,
 And drove them to recoile: but, when
 againe
 They gave fresh charge, their forces gan to fayle,
 Unhable their encounter to sustaine;
 For with such puissaunce and impetuous
 maine
 Those champions broke on them, that forst them fly, Like scattered sheepe, whenas the shepherds
 swaine
 A lyon and a tigre doth espye, With greedy pace forth rushing from the forest nye.

XV

A while they fled, but soone retourned
 againe
 With greater fury then before was fownd;
 And evermore their cruell capitaine Sought with his raskall routs t' enclose them rownd,
 And overronne to tread them to the grownd.
 But soone the knights with their bright-burning blades Broke their rude troupes, and orders did confownd, Hewing and slashing at their idle shades;
 For though they bodies seem, yet substaunce from them fades.

XVI

As when a swarme of gnats at eventide
 Out of the fennes of Allan doe arise, Their murmuring small trompetts sownden
 wide, Whiles in the aire their clustering army
 flies,
 That as a cloud doth seeme to dim the skies;
 Ne man nor beast may rest, or take repast,

For their sharpe wounds and noyous injuries,
 Till the fierce northerne wind with blus-tring blast Doth blow them quite away, and in the ocean cast.

XVII

Thus when they had that troublous rout disperst, Unto the castle gate they come againe, And entraunce crav'd, which was denied erst.
 Now when report of that their perlous
 paine,
 And combrous conflict which they did sus-
 taine,
 Came to the ladies eare, which there did
 dwell,
 Shee forth issewed with a goodly traine
 Of squires and ladies equipaged well,
 And entertained them right fairely, as befell.

XVIII

Alma she called was, a virgin bright,
 That had not yet felt Cupides wanton rage; Yet was shee wooed of many a gentle
 knight,
 And many a lord of noble parentage,
 That sought with her to lincke in marriage,
 For shee was faire, as faire mote ever bee,
 And in the flowre now of her freshest age;
 Yet full of grace and goodly modestee, That even heven rejoyced her sweete face
 to see.

XIX

In robe of lilly white she was arayd, That from her shoulder to her heele downe
 raught;
 The traine whereof loose far behind her
 strayd, Braunched with gold and perle, most richly
 wrought,
 And borne of two faire damsels, which were taught
 That service well. Her yellow golden heare Was trimly woven, and in tresses wrought, Ne other tire she on her head did weare, But crowned with a garland of sweete ro-siere.

XX

Goodly shee entertaind those noble knights,
 And brought them up into her castle hall;

Where gentle court and gracious delight Shee to them made, with mildnesse virgin-
 all,

Shewing her selfe both wise and liberall.
 There when they rested had a season dew,
 They her besought, of favour speciall,
 Of that faire castle to afford them vew: Shee graunted, and them leading forth, the same did shew.

XXI

First she them led up to the castle wall,
 That was so high as foe might not it clime,
 And all so faire and fensible withall;
 Not built of bricke, ne yet of stone and lime,
 But of thing like to that Egyptian slime, Whereof King Nine whilome built Babell
 towre:

But O great pittie that no lenger time
 So goodly workmanship should not endure!
 Soone it must turne to earth: no earthly thing is sure.

XXII

The frame thereof seemd partly circulare,
 And part triangulare: O worke divine!
 Those two the first and last proportions are;
 The one imperfect, mortall, feminine,
 Th' other immortall, perfect, masculine:
 And twixt them both a quadrate was the
 base,

Proportioned equally by seven and nine;
 Nine was the circle sett in heavens place:
 All which compacted made a goodly diapase.

XXIII

Therein two gates were placed seemly well:
 The one before, by which all in did pas,
 Did th' other far in workmanship excell;
 For not of wood, nor of enduring bras,
 But of more worthy substance fram'd it
 was:

Doubly disparted, it did locke and close,
 That, when it locked, none might thorough
 pas,

And when it opened, no man might it close;
 Still open to their friendes, and closed to their foes.

XXIV

Of hewen stone the porch was fayrely
 wrought,
 Stone more of valew, and more smooth and fine,

Then jett or marble far from Ireland
 brought;

Over the which was cast a wandring vine, Enchaced with a wanton yvie twine.
 And over it a fayre porteuillis hong,
 Which to the gate directly did incline, With comely compasse and compacture
 strong,

Nether unseemly short, nor yet exceeding long.

XXV

Within the barbican a porter sate, Day and night duely keeping watch and
 ward;

Nor wight nor word mote passe out of the
 gate,

But in good order, and with dew regard:
 Utterers of secrets he from thence debard, Bablers of folly, and blazers of eryme:
 His larumbell might lowd and wyde be hard,
 When cause requyrd, but never out of time; Early and late it rong, at evening and at prime.

XXVI

And rownd about the porch on every syde Twice sixteene warders satt, all armed bright In glistering steele, and strongly fortifyde: Tall yeomen seemed they, and of great
 might,

And were enraunged ready still for fight.
 By them as Alma passed with her gastes,
 They did obeysaunce, as beseemed right,
 And then againe retourned to their restes:
 The porter eke to her did lout with humble gastes.

XXVII

Thence she them brought into a stately
 hall,

Wherein were many tables fayre dispred,
 And ready dight with drapets festivall, Against the viaundes should be ministred At th' upper end there sate, yclad in red Downe to the ground, a comely personage, That in his hand a white rod menaged:
 He steward was, hight Diet; rype of age,
 And in demeasure sober, and in counsell sage.

XXVIII

And through the hall there walked to and
 fro

A jolly yeoman, marshall of the same,

Whose name was Appetite: he did bestow Both guesstes and meate, when ever in they came,
 And knew them how to order without blame,
 As him the steward badd. They both attone Did dewty to their lady, as became;
 Who, passing by, forth ledd her guesstes anone Into the kitchin rowme, ne spard for nicenesse none.

XXIX

It was a vault ybuilt for great dispenche,
 With many raunges reard along the wall,
 And one great chimney, whose long tonnells thence
 The smoke forth threw: and in the midst
 of all
 There placed was a caudron wide and tall, Upon a mightie fornace, burning whott, More whott then Aetn', or flaming Mongi-ball:
 For day and night it brent, ne ceased not,
 So long as any thing it in the caudron gott.

XXX

But to delay the heat, leas by mischaunce It might breake out, and set the whole on
 fyre,
 There added was by goodly ordinaunce An huge great payre of bellowes, which did styre Continually, and cooling breath inspyre.
 About the caudron many cookes accoyld, With hookes and ladles, as need did re-quyre:
 The whyles the viaundes in the vessell boylde,
 They did about their businesse sweat, and sorely toyld.

XXXI

The maister cooke was cald Concoction,
 A carefull man, and full of comely guyse.
 The kitchin clerke, that hight Digestion, Did order all th' achates in seemely wise,
 And set them forth, as well he could devise.
 The rest had severall offices assynd:
 Some to remove the scum, as it did rise;
 Others to beare the same away did mynd;
 And others it to use according to his kynd.

XXXII

But all the liquour, which was fowle and
 waste,
 Not good nor serviceable elles for ought,
 They in another great rownd vessel plaste, Till by a conduit pipe it thence were
 brought:
 And all the rest, that noyous was and
 nought,
 By secret wayes, that none might it espy, Was close convoid, and to the backgate
 brought,
 That cleped was Port Esquiline, whereby It was avoided quite, and throwne out prively.

XXXIII

Which goodly order and great workmans
 skill Whenas those knightes beheld, with rare
 delight
 And gazing wonder they their mindes did
 fill;
 For never had they scene so straunge a
 sight.
 Thence backe againe faire Alma led them
 right,
 And soone into a goodly parlour brought,
 That was with royall arras richly dight, In which was nothing pourtrahed nor
 wrought,
 Not wrought nor pourtrahed, but easie to be thought.

XXXIV

And in the midst thereof upon the floure,
 A lovely bevy of faire ladies sate, Courted of many a jolly paramoure,
 The which them did in modest wise amate,
 And eachone sought his lady to aggrate:
 And eke emongst them litle Cupid playd His wanton sportes, being retourned late From his fierce warres, and having from him layd
 His cruel bow, wherewith he thousands hath dismayd.

XXXV

Diverse delights they fownd them selves to please;
 Some song in sweet consort, some laught for
 joy,
 Some plaid with strawes, some ydly satt at
 ease;
 But other some could not abide to toy,

All pleasaunce was to them grieffe and annoy:

This fround, that faund, the third for shame did blush,

Another seemed envious, or coy,

Another in her teeth did gnaw a rush:

But at these straungers presence every one did hush.

XXXVI

Soone as the gracious Alma came in place,
They all attonce out of their seates arose,
And to her homage made, with humble grace:

Whom when the knights beheld, they gan dispose

Themselves to court, and each a damzell chose.

The Prince by chaunce did on a lady light,
That was right faire and fresh as morning rose,

But somewhat sad and solemne eke in sight,
As if some pensive thought constrained her gentle spright.

XXXVII

In a long purple pall, whose skirt with gold Was fretted all about, she was arayd;

And in her hand a poplar braunch did hold:
To whom the Prince in courteous maner sayd:

'Gentle madame, why beene ye thus dismayd,

And your faire beautie doe with sadnes spill?

Lives any, that you hath thus ill apayd?
Or doen you love, or doen you laek your will?

What ever bee the cause, it sure beseemes you ill.'

XXXVIII

'Fayre sir,' said she, halfe in disdaine full wise,

'How is it, that this word in me ye blame,
And in your selfe doe not the same advise?

Him ill beseemes, anothers fault to name,
That may unwares bee blotted with the same:

Pensive I yeeld I am, and sad in mind,
Through great desire of glory and of fame;
Ne ought I weene are ye therein behynd,
That have twelve moneths sought one, yet no where can her find.'

XXXIX

The Prince was inly moved at her speach, Well weeting trew what she had rashly told,

Yet with faire semblaunt sought to hyde the breach,

Which chaunge of colour did perforce unfold,

Now seeming flaming whott, now stony cold.

Tho, turning soft aside, he did inquiryre
What wight she was, that poplar braunch did hold:

It answered was, her name was Prays-desire,

That by well doing sought to honour to aspyre.

XL

The whyles, the Faery knight did enter-tayne

Another damsell of that gentle crew,
That was right fayre, and modest of de-mayne,

But that too oft she chaung'd her native hew:

Straunge was her tyre, and all her garment blew,

Close rownd about her tuckt with many a plight:

Upon her fist the bird, which shoneth vew
And keeps in covert close from living wight,

Did sitt, as yet ashamd, how rude Pan did her dight.

XLI

So long as Guyon with her commoned, Unto the grownd she cast her modest eye,
And ever and anone with rosy red

The bashfull blood her snowy cheekes did dye,

That her became, as polisht ivory Which cunning craftesman hand hath overlaid

With fayre vermilion or pure castory.
Great wonder had the knight, to see the mayd

So straungely passioned, and to her gently said:

XLII

'Fayre damzell, seemeth by your troubled cheare,

That either me too bold ye weene, this wise

You to molest, or other ill to feare
That in the secret of your hart close lyes, From whence it doth, as cloud from sea, aryse.

If it be I, of pardon I you pray;
But if ought else that I mote not devyse,
I will, if please you it discure, assay To ease you of that ill, so wisely as I may.'

XLIII

She auswerd nought, but more abasht for
shame,
Held downe her head, the whiles her lovely
face

The flashing blood with blushing did inflame, And the strong passion mard her modest
grace,

That Guyon mervayld at her uncouth cace;
Till Alma him bespake: 'Why wonder yee, Faire sir, at that which ye so much embrace ?

She is the fountaine of your modestee;
You shamefast are, but Shamefastnes it selfe is shee.'

XLIV

Thereat the Elfe did blush in privitee, And turnd his face away; but she the
same

Dissembled faire, and faynd to oversee.
Thus they awhile with court and goodly game Themselves did solace each one with his
dame,

Till that great lady thence away them
sought,

To vew her castles other wondrous frame.
Up to a stately turret she them brought, Ascending by ten steps of alabaster
wrought.

XLV

That turrets frame most admirable was,
Like highest heaven compassed around,
And lifted high above this earthly masse, Which it survewd, as hils doen lower
ground:

But not on ground mote like to this be
found;

Not that, which antique Cadmus whylome built

In Thebes, which Alexander did confound; Nor that proud towre of Troy, though richly guilt,

From which young Hectors blood by cruell Greekes was spilt.

XLVI

The rooffe hereof was arched over head,
And deekt with flowers and herbars daintily:

Two goodly beacons, set in watches stead, Therein gave light, and flamd continually;
For they of living fire most subtilly Were made, and set in silver sockets bright, Cover'd with lids deviz'd of substance sly, That readily they shut and open might.
O who can tell the prayses of that makers
might ?

XLVII

Ne can I tell, ne can I stay to tell This parts great workmanship and wondrous powre,

That all this other worldes worke doth ex-
cell,

And likest is unto that heavenly towre, That God hath built for his owne blessed
bowre.

Therein were divers rowmes, and divers stages,

But three the chiefest, and of greatest
powre,

In which there dwelt three honorable sages, The wisest men, I weene, that lived in their ages.

XLVIII

Not he, whom Greece, the nurse of all good arts,

By Phæbus doome, the wisest thought alive, Might be compar'd to these by many parts: Nor that sage Pylian syre, which did survive

Three ages, such as mortall men contrive, By whose advise old Priams cittie fell,
With these in praise of pollicies mote strive.
These three in these three rowmes did son-dry dwell,

And counselled faire Alma, how to governe well.

XLIX

The first of them could things to come fore-
see;

The next could of thinges present best advize;

The third things past could keepe in mem-oree:

So that no time nor reason could arise,
But that the same could one of these com-
prize.

Fortly the first did in the forepart sit,
That nought mote hinder his quicke prejudize:

He had a sharpe foresight, and working wit,
That never idle was, ne once would rest a whit.

His chamber was disapointed all with in With sondry colours, in the which were writ Infinite shapes of thinges dispersed thin;
Some such as in the world were never yit, Ne can devized be of mortall wit; Some daily seene, and knownen by their names,

Such as in idle fantasies doe flit: Infernall hags, centaurs, feendes, hippo-dames,
Apes, lyons, aegles, owles, fooles, lovers, children, dames.

LI

And all the chamber filled was with flies, Which buzzed all about, and made such
sound,

That they encombred all mens eares and
eyes,
Like many swarmes of bees assembled
round,

After their hives with honny do abound:
All those were idle thoughtes and fantasies, Devices, dreames, opinions unsound, Shewes, visions, sooth-sayes, and prophesies;
And all that fained is, as leasings, tales, and lies.

LII

Emongst them all sate he which wowned
there,

That hight Phantastes by his nature trew,
A man of yeares yet fresh, as mote appere,
Of swarth complexion, and of erabbed hew,
That him full of melancholy did shew; Bent hollow beetle browes, sharpe staring
eyes,

That mad or foolish seemd: one by his vew Mote deeme him borne with ill-disposed
skyes,

When oblique Saturne sate in the house of agonyes.

LIII

Whom Alma having shewed to her gwestes, Thence brought them to the second rowme, whose wals

Were painted faire with memorable gestes
Of famous wisards, and with picturals Of magistrates, of courts, of tribunals,
Of commen wealthes, of states, of pollicy,
Of lawes, of judgements, and of decretals;
All artes, all science, all philosophy,
And all that in the world was ay thought wittily.

LIV

Of those that rowme was full, and them
among

There sate a man of ripe and perfect age,
Who did them meditate all his life long,
That through continuall practise and usage, He now was growne right wise and wondrous sage.

Great plesure had those straunger knightes,
to see

His goodly reason and grave personage,
That his disciples both desyrd to bee;
But Alma thence them led to th' hindmost rowme of three.

LV

That chamber seemed ruinous and old,
And therefore was removed far behind, Yet were the wals, that did the same up-
hold,

Right firme and strong, though somewhat they declind;

And therein sat an old old man, halfe blind,
And all decrepit in his feeble corse, Yet lively vigour rested in his mind,
And recompent him with a better seorse: Weake body well is chang'd for minds redoubled forse.

LVI

This man of infinite remembraunce was,
And things foregone through many ages
held,

Which he recorded still, as they did pas, Ne suffred them to perish through long eld,
As all things els, the which this world doth
weld,

But laid them up in his immortall scrine,
Where they for ever incorrupted dweld:
The warres he well remembered of King Nine,

Of old Assaracus, and Inachus divine.

LVII

The yeares of Nestor nothing were to his,
Ne yet Mathusalem, though longest liv'd;

For he remembered both their infancis:
Ne wonder then, if that he were depriv'd Of native strength now that he them surviv'd.

His chamber all was hangd about with rolls,
And old records from auncient times de-rivd,
Some made in books, some in long parchment scrolls,
That were all worm-eaten and full of canker holes.

LVIII

Amidst them all he in a chaire was sett, Tossing and turning them withouten end;
But for he was unable them to fett,
A little boy did on him still attend,
To reach, when ever he for ought did send;
And oft when thinges were lost, or laid
amis,

That boy them sought and unto him did
lend:

Therefore he Anamnestes cleped is,
And that old man Eumnestes, by their prop-ertis.

LIX

The knightes, there entring, did him reverence dew,

And wondred at his endlesse exercise.

Then as they gan his library to vew,
And antique registers for to avise, There chanced to the Princes hand to rize

An auncient booke, hight *Briton Moni-
ments*,

That of this lands first conquest did devise,
And old division into regiments,

Till it reduced was to one mans governe-ments.

LX

Sir Guyon chaunst eke on another booke,

That hight Antiquitee of Faery Lond:

In which whenas he greedily did looke, Th' ofspring of Elves and Faryes there he
fond,

As it delivered was from hond to hond.

Whereat they, burning both with fervent
fire

Their countreys auncestry to understand, Crav'd leave of Alma and that aged sire,
To read those bookes; who gladly graunted their desire.

CANTO X

A chronicle of Briton kings, From Brute to Uthers rayne;
And rolls of Elfin emperours, Till time of Gloriane.

I

WHO now shall give unto me words and
sound,

Equall unto this haughty enterprise?

Or who shall lend me wings, with which
from ground

My lowly verse may loftily arise,

And lift it selfe unto the highest skyes?

More ample spirit, then hetherto was wount, Here needes me, whiles the famous auncestryes

Of my most dreaded Sovereaine I recount, By which all earthly princes she doth far surmount.

II

Ne under sunne, that shines so wide and
faire,

Whence all that lives does borrow life and
light,

Lives ought that to her linage may com-
paire,

Which, though from earth it be derived
right,

Yet doth it selfe stretch forth to hevens
height,

And all the world with wonder overspred;

A labor huge, exceeding far my might:

How shall fraile pen, with feare disparaged, Conceive such sovaine glory, and great bountyhed?

III

Argument worthy of Mæonian quill,
Or rather worthy of great Phoebus rote, Whereon the ruines of great Ossa hill, And triumphes of Phlegrean Jove, he wrote,

That all the gods admird his lofty note.

But, if some relish of that heavenly lay

His learned daughters would to me report,

To decke my song withall, I would assay

Thy name, O sovaine Queene, to blazon far away.

IV

Thy name, O sovaine Queene, thy realme, and race,

From this renowned Prince derived arre,

Who mightily upheld that royall mace, Which now thou bear'st, to thee descended
farre
From mighty kings and conquerours in
warre,
Thy fathers and great grandfathers of old, Whose noble deeds above the northern
starre
Immortall Fame for ever hath enrold; As in that old mans booke they were in order told.

V

The land, which warlike Britons now posse-sesse,
And therein have their mighty empire raysd,
In antique times was salvage wilderness, Unpeopled, unmannurd, unprovd, unpraysd;
Ne was it island then, ne was it paysd Amid the ocean waves, ne was it sought Of merchaunts farre, for profits therein praysd;
But was all desolate, and of some thought By sea to have bene from the Celticke mayn-land brought.

VI

Ne did it then deserve a name to have,
Till that the venturous mariner that way, Learning his ship from those white rocks
to save,
Which all along the southerne sea-coast
lay, Threatning unheedy wreeke and rash decay,
For safeties sake that same his sea-marke
made,
And namd it ALBION. But later day, Finding in it fit ports for fishers trade, Gan more the same frequent, and further to invade.

But far in land a salvage nation dwelt
Of hideous giaunts, and halfe beastly men,
That never tasted grace, nor goodnes felt,
But like wild beastes lurking in loathsome
den,
And flying fast as roebucke through the fen,
All naked without shame or care of cold,
By hunting and by spoiling livened;
Of stature huge, and eke of corage bold,
That sonnes of men amazd their sternesse to behold.

VIII

But whence they sprong, or how they were begott, Uneath is to assure; uneath to wene That monstrous error, which doth some assott,
That Dioclesians fifty daughters shene
Into this land by chaunce have driven bene, Where companing with feends and filthy
sprights
Through vaine illusion of their lust unclene, They brought forth geaunts, and such dreadful wights
As far exceeded men in their immeasurd mights.

IX

They held this land, and with their filthi-
nesse
Polluted this same gentle soyle long time:
That their owne mother loathd their beastlinesse,
And gan abhorre her broods unkindly crime, All were they borne of her owne native slime:
Until that Brutus, anciently deriv'd From roiall stocke of old Assaraes line, Driven by fatall error, here arriv'd, And them of their unjust possession de-priv'd.

X

But ere he had established his throne,
And spred his empire to the utmost shore,
He fought great batteils with his salvage
fone;
In which he them defeated evermore,
And many giaunts left on groning flore,
That well can witnes yet unto this day The westerner Hogh, besprincked with the
gore
Of mighty Goëmot, whome in stout fray Corineus conquered, and cruelly did slay.

XI

And eke that ample pitt, yet far renownd For the large leape which Debon did com-
pell Coulin to make, being eight lugs of grownd,
Into the which retourning backe he fell:
But those three monstrous stones doe most
excell
Which that huge sonne of hideous Albion, Whose father Hercules in Fraunce did
quell,

Great Godmer, threw, in fierce contention, At bold Canutus; but of him was slaine anon.

XII

In meed of these great conquests by them
gott, Corineus had that province utmost west
To him assigned for his worthy lott,
Which of his name and memorable gest
He called Cornwaile, yet so called best:
And Debons shayre was that is Devonshyre:
But Canute had his portion from the rest,
The which he cald Canutium, for his hyre; Now Cantium, which Kent we comenly inquyre.

XIII

Thus Brute this realme unto his rule subdewd,
And raigned long in great felicity, Lov'd of his freends, and of his foes eschewd.
He left three sonnes, his famous progeny, Borne of fayre Inogene of Italy;
Mongst whom he parted his imperiall state,
And Loerine left chiefe lord of Britany.
At last ripe age bad him surrender late His life, and long good fortune, unto finall fate.

XIV

Loerine was left the soveraine lord of all;
But Albanact had all the northerne part,
Which of him selfe Albania he did call;
And Camber did possesse the westerne quart,
Which Severne now from Logris doth de-
part:
And each his portion peaceably enjoyd, Ne was there outward breach, nor grudge in hart,
That once their quiet government annoyd, But each his paynes to others profit still employd.

XV

Untill a nation straung, with visage swart
And corage fierce, that all men did affray, Which through the world then swarmd in every part,
And overflow'd all countries far away, Like Noyes great flood, with their importune sway,
This land invaded with like violence,

And did themselves through all the north
display:
Untill that Loerine, for his realmes defence,
Did head against them make, and strong munificence.

XVI

He them encountred, a confused rout, Foreby the river, that whylome was hight
The ancient Abus, where with courage stont
He them defeated in victorious fight,
And chaste so fiercely after fearefull flight, That forst their chiefetain, for his safeties
sake,
(Their chiefetain Humber named was aright,) Unto the mighty streame him to betake, Where he an end of batteill, and of life did make.

XVII

The king retourned proud of victory,
And insolent wox through unwonted ease,
That shortly he forgot the jeopardy,
Which in his land he lately did appease,
And fell to vaine voluptuous disease:
He lov'd faire Ladie Estrild, leudly lov'd, Whose wanton pleasures him too much did
please,
That quite his hart from Guendolene re-
mov'd,
From Guendolene his wife, though alwaies faithful prov'd.

XVIII

The noble daughter of Corineus
Would not endure to bee so vile disdaind, But, gathering force and corage valorous, Encountred him in batteill well ordaind, In which him vanquisht she to fly constraind:
But she so fast pursewd, that him she
tooke,
And threw in bands, where he till death-remaind:
Als his faire leman, flying through a brooke, She overhent, nought moved with her piteous looke.

XIX

But both her selfe, and eke her daughter
deare,
Begotten by her kingly paramoure,
The faire Sabrina, almost dead with feare,
She there attached, far from all succoure;

The one she slew in that impatient stoure,
But the sad virgin, innocent of all,
Adowne the rolling river she did poure, Which of her name now Severne men do
call:

Such was the end that to disloyall love did fall.

XX

Then, for her sonne, which she to Loerin
bore,

Madan, was young, unmeet the rule to
sway,

In her owne hand the crowne she kept in
store,

Till ryper yeares he raught, and stronger
stay:

During which time her powre she did display

Through all this realme, the glory of her sex,

And first taught men a woman to obey:

But when her some to mans estate did wex,

She it surrendered, ne her selfe would lenger vex.

XXI

The Madan raignd, unworthie of his race:
For with all shame that sacred throne he filld:

Next Memprise, as unworthy of that place,
In which being consorted with Manild,

For first of single kingdom him he kild.

But Ebranck salved both their infamies With noble deedes, and warreyd on Brunchild

In Henault, where yet of his victories

Brave moniments remaine, which yet that land envies.

XXII

An happy man in his first dayes he was,

And happy father of faire progeny:

For all so many weekes as the yeare has,

So many children he did multiply;

Of which were twentie somes, which did apply

Their mindes to prayse and chevalrous
desyre:

Those germans did subdew all Germany, Of whom it hight; but in the end their
syre

With foule repulse from Fraunce was forced to retyre.

XXIII

Which blott his sonne succeeding in his seat,
The second Brute, the second both in name And eke in semblance of his puissaunce
great,

Right well recur'd, and did away that blame
With recompence of everlasting fame.

He with his victour sword first opened The bowels of wide Fraunce, a forlorne
dame,

And taught her first how to be conquered; Since which, with sondrie spoiles she hath bene ransacked.

XXIV

Let Scaldis tell, and let tell Hania,

And let the marsh of Esthambruges tell, What colour were their waters that same
day,

And all the moore twixt Elversham and Dell,

With blood of Henalois, which therein fell.

How oft that day did sad Brunchildis see The greene shield dyde in dolorous vermell!

That not scuith guirdh it mote seeme to bee,
But rather y scuith gogh, signe of sad cruelte.

XXV

His sonne, King Leill, by fathers labour
long,

Enjoyd an heritage of lasting peace,

And built Cairleill, and built Cairleon strong.
Next Huddibras his realme did not en-crease.

But taught the land from wearie wars to cease.

Whose footsteps Bladud following, in artes Exceland at Athens all the learned preace,

From whence he brought them to these salvage parts,

And with sweet science mollifide their stubborne harts.

XXVI

Eusample of his wondrous faculty,

Behold the boylng bathes at Cairbadon,

Which seeth with secret fire eternally,

And in their entrailles, full of quick brimston,

Nourish the flames which they are warmd
upon,

That to their people wealth they forth do
well,

And health to every forreyne nation:

Yet he at last, contending to excell The reach of men, through flight into fond mischief fell.

XXVII

Next him King Leyr in happie peace long
raynd,

But had no issue male him to succeed, But three faire daughters, which were well uptraiud

In all that seemed fitt for kingly seed:
Mongst whom his realme he equally decreed To have divided. Tho, when feeble age Nigh to his utmost date he saw proceed, He cald his daughters, and with speeches sage

Inquyr'd, which of them most did love her parentage.

XXVIII

The eldest Honorill gan to protest, That she much more then her owne life him
lov'd;

And Regan greater love to him profest Then all the world, when ever it were proof'd;

But Cordeill said she lov'd him as behoov'd: Whose simple answere, wanting colours
fayre

To paint it forth, him to displeasaunce moov'd,

That in his crown he counted her no hayre, But twixt the other twain his kingdom whole did shayre.

XXIX

So wedded th' one to Maglan, king of Scottes,

And thother to the king of Cambria, And twixt them shayrd his realme by equall lottes:

But without dowre the wise Cordelia Was sent to Aggannip of Celtica.

Their aged syre, thus eased of his crowne,
A private life ledd in Albania,
With Honorill, long had in great renowne, That nought him griev'd to beene from rule deposed downe.

XXX

But true it is that, when the oyle is spent,
The light goes out, and weeke is throwne
away;

So when he had resign'd his regiment,
His daughter gan despise his drouping day,

And wearie wax of his continuall stay.
Tho to his daughter Regan he repayrd,
Who him at first well used every way;
But when of his departure she despayrd, Her bountie she abated, and his cheare empayrd.

XXXI

The wretched man gan then avise to late,
That love is not, where most it is profest;
Too truely tryde in his extremest state.
At last, resolv'd likewise to prove the rest,
He to Cordelia him selfe address,
Who with entyre affection him receav'd,
As for her syre and king her seemed best;
And after all an army strong she leav'd, To war on those which him had of his realme bereav'd.

XXXII

So to his crowne she him restord againe, In which he dyde, made ripe for death by
eld,

And after wild, it should to her remaine:
Who peaceably the same long time did weld,
And all mens harts in dew obedience held:
Till that her sisters children, woxen strong,
Through proud ambition against her rebeld,
And overcommen kept in prison long, Till, weary of that wretched life, her selfe she hong.

XXXIII

Then gan the bloody brethren both to raine:
But fierce Cundah gan shortly to envy His brother Morgan, prickt with proud
disdaine,

To have a pere in part of sovereignty;
And kindling coles of cruell enmity, Raisd warre, and him in batteill overthrew: Whence as he to those woody hilles did
fly,

Which hight of him Glamorgan, there him
slew:

Then did he raigne alone, when he none equall knew.

XXXIV

His sonne Rivall' his dead rowme did supply, In whose sad time blood did from heaven
rayne:

Next great Gurgustus, then faire Cæcily, In constant peace their kingdomes did contayne:

After whom Lago and Kinmarke did rayne,

And Gorbogud, till far in yeares he grew:
Then his ambitious sonnes unto them
twayne
Arraught the rule, and from their father
drew:
Stout Ferrex and sterne Porrex him in prison
threw.

XXXV

But O! the greedy thirst of royall crowne, That knowes no kinred, nor regardes no
right,
Stird Porrex up to put his brother downe;
Who, unto him assembling forreigne might, Made warre on him, and fell him selfe in
fight:
Whose death t' avenge, his mother
mercilesse,
Most mercilesse of women, Wyden hight,
Her other sonne fast sleeping did oppresse, And with most cruell hand him murdered pittlesse.

XXXVI

Here ended Brutus sacred progeny, Which had seven hundred yeares this scepter
borne,
With high renowne and great felicity:
The noble branch from th' antique stocke was torne Through discord, and the roiall throne
forlorne:
Thenceforth this realme was into factions
rent,
Whilst each of Brutus boasted to be borne,
That in the end was left no monument Of Brutus, nor of Britons glorie auncient.

XXXVII

Then up arose a man of matchlesse might,
And wondrous wit to menage high affayres,
Who, stird with pittie of the stressed plight
Of this sad realme, cut into sondry shayres By such as claynd themselves Brutes right-full hayres,
Gathered the princes of the people loose,
To taken counsell of their common cares;
Who, with his wisdom won, him streight did choose Their king, and swore him fealty, to win or loose.

XXXVIII

Then made he head against his enimies,
And Ymner slew, of Logris misereate;

Then Ruddoc and proud Stater, both allyes, This of Albany newly nominate,
And that of Cambry king confirmed late,
He overthrew through his owne valiaunce;
Whose countries he redus'd to quiet state,
And shortly brought to civile governaunce, Now one, which earst were many made through variaunce.

XXXIX

Then made he sacred lawes, which some men say
Were unto him reveald in vision,
By which he freed the travellers high way,
The churches part, and ploughmans portion,
Restraining stealth and strong extortion;
The gracious Numa of Great Britany:
For, till his dayes, the chiefe dominion
By strength was wielded without polhey; Therefore he first wore crowne of gold for dignity.

XL

Donwallo dyde (for what may live for ay?)
And left two sonnes, of pearelesse prowesse both,
That saked Rome too dearely did assay,
The recompence of their perjured oth, And ransackt Greece wel tryde, when they were wroth;
Besides subjected France and Germany, Which yet their praises speake, all be they loth,
And inly tremble at the memory Of Brennus and Belinus, kinges of Britany.

XLI

Next them did Gurgunt, great Belinus sonne, In rule succede, and eke in fathers praise:
He Easterland subdewd, and Denmarke
wonne,
And of them both did foy and tribute raise.
The which was dew in his dead fathers daies.
He also gave to fugitives of Spayne, Whom he at sea found wandring from their waies,
A seate in Ireland safely to remayne, Which they should hold of him, as subject to Britayne.

XLII

After him raigned Guitheline his hayre,
The justest man and trewest in his daies.
Who had to wife Dame Mertia the fayre,
A woman worthy of immortall praise.

Which for this realme found many goodly
 layes,
 And wholesome statutes to her husband
 brought:
 Her many deemd to have beene of the Fayes,
 As was Aegerie, that Numa tought: Those yet of her be Mertian lawes both nam'd and thought.

XLIII

Her sonne Sisillus after her did rayne,
 And then Kimarus, and then Danius; Next whom Morindus did the crowne sus-
 tayne,
 Who, had he not with wrath outrageous And cruell rancour dim'd his valorous And mightie deedes, should matched have the best:
 As well in that same field victorious Against the forreine Morands he exprest: Yet lives his memorie, though carcas sleepe in rest.

XLIV

Five sonnes he left begotten of one wife,
 All which successively by turnes did rayne;
 First Gorboman, a man of vertuous life; Next Archigald, who, for his proud dis-
 dayne,
 Deposed was from princedome soverayne,
 And pitteous Elidure put in his sted;
 Who shortly it to him restord agayne, Till by his death he it recovered;
 But Peridure and Vigent him disthronized.

XLV

In wretched prison long he did remaine, Till they outraigned had their utmost date,
 And then therein reseized was againe,
 And ruled long with honorable state,
 Till he surrendred realme and life to fate.
 Then all the sonnes of these five brethren
 raynd
 By dew successe, and all their nephewes
 late;
 Even thrise eleven descents the crowne retaynd,
 Till aged Hely by dew heritage it gaynd.

XLVI

He had two sonnes, whose eldest, called Lud, Left of his life most famous memory,
 And endlesse moniments of his great good:
 The ruin'd wals he did reædifye

Of Troynovant, gainst force of enemy, And built that gate which of his name is
 hight,
 By which he lyes entombd solemnly.
 He left two sonnes, too young to rule aright, Androgeus and Tenantius, pictures of his might.

XLVII

Whilst they were young, Cassibalane their eme
 Was by the people chosen in their sted,
 Who on him tooke the roiall diademe,
 And goodly well long time it governed;
 Till the prowde Romanes him disquieted,
 And warlike Cæsar, tempted with the name
 Of this sweet island, never conquered,
 And envying the Britons blazed fame, (O hideous hunger of dominion!) hether came.

XLVIII

Yet twise they were repulsd backe againe, And twise renforst backe to their ships to
 fly,
 The whiles with blood they all the shore did
 staine,
 And the gray ocean into purple dy:
 Ne had they footing found at last perdie,
 Had not Androgeus, false to native soyle,
 And envious of uncles soveraintie, Betrayd his cuntry unto forreine spoyle: Nought els but treason from the first this land did foyle.

XLIX

So by him Cæsar got the victory, Through great bloodshed and many a sad
 assay,
 In which himselfe was charged heavily Of hardy Nennius, whom he yet did slay, But lost his sword, yet to be seene this
 day.
 Thenceforth this land was tributarie made T' ambitious Rome, and did their rule obey, Till Arthur all that reckoning defrayd; Yet oft the Briton kings against them strongly swayd.

L

Next him Tenantius raignd; then Kimbe-
 line,
 What time th' Eternal Lord in fleshy slime Enwombed was, from wretched Adams line
 To purge away the guilt of sinfull crime:

O joyous memorie of happy time,
That heavenly grace so plenteously displayd!
O too high ditty for my simple rime!
Soone after this the Romanes him warrayd, For that their tribute he refusd to let be payd.

LI

Good Claudius, that next was emperour, An army brought, and with him batteill
fought,

In which the king was by a treachetour Disguised slaine, ere any thereof thought:
Yet ceased not the bloody fight for ought;
For Arvirage his brothers place supplyde, Both in his armes and crowne, and by that draught

Did drive the Romanes to the weaker syde, That they to peace agreed. So all was pacifyde.

LII

Was never king more highly magnifide, Nor dredd of Romanes, then was Arvirage;
For which the emperour to him allide His daughter Genuiss' in marriage:
Yet shortly he renounst the vassallage Of Rome againe, who hether hastily sent Vespasian, that with great spoile and rage Forwasted all, till Genuissa gent Persuaded him to ceasse, and her lord to relent.

LIII

He dide; and him succeeded Marius,
Who joyd his dayes in great tranquillity:
Then Coyll, and after him good Lucius,
That first received Christianity,
The sacred pledge of Christes Evangely:
Yet true it is, that long before that day Hither came Joseph of Arimathy, Who brought with him the Holy Grayle, (they say)
And preacht the truth; but since it greatly did decay.

LIV

This good king shortly without issew dide, Whereof great trouble in the kingdome
grew,
That did her selfe in sondry parts divide,
And with her powre her owne selfe over-
threw,
Whilst Romanes daily did the weake
subdew:

Which seeing stout Bunduca, up arose,
And taking armes, the Britons to her drew;
With whom she mareled streight against her foes,
And them unwares besides the Severne did enclose.

LV

There she with them a cruell batteill tryde,
Not with so good successe as shee deserv'd,
By reason that the captaines on her syde, Corrupted by Paulinus, from her swerv'd:
Yet such as were through former flight preserv'd

Gathering againe, her host she did renew,
And with fresh corage on the victor serv'd:
But being all defeated, save a few, Rather then fly, or be captiv'd, her selfe she siew.

LVI

O famous monument of womens prayse, Matchable either to Semiramis, Whom antique history so high doth rayse,
Or to Hypsiphil', or to Thomiris!
Her host two hundred thousand numbered
is;

Who, whiles good fortune favoured her
might,
Triumphed oft against her enemies;
And yet, though overcome in haplesse fight, Shee triumphed on death, in enemies de-
spight.

LVII

Her reliques Fulgent having gathered, Fought with Severus, and him overthrew;
Yet in the chace was slaine of them that fled:
So made them victors whome he did subdew.
Then gan Carausius tirannize anew, And gainst the Romanes bent their proper
powre;
But him Allectus treacherously slew,
And tooke on him the robe of emperoure: Nath'lesse the same enjoyed but short happy howre.

LVIII

For Asclepiodate him overcame,
And left inglorious on the vanquisht playne, Without or robe or rag to hide his shame.
Then afterwards he in his stead did raigne;
But shortly was by Coyll in batteill slaine:
Who after long debate, since Lucies tyme,
Was of the Britons first crownd souveraine.

Then gan this realme renew her passed
prime:
He of his name Coylchester built of stone and lime.

LIX

Which when the Romanes heard, they hether sent Constantius, a man of mickle might,
With whome King Coyll made an agree-
ment,
And to him gave for wife his daughter
bright,
Fayre Helena, the fairest living wight;
Who in all godly thewes, and goodly praise, Did far excell, but was most famous hight
For skil in musicke of all in her daies, Aswell in curious instruments as cunning laies.

LX

Of whom he did great Constantine begett, Who afterward was emperour of Rome;
To which whiles absent he his mind did sett, Octavius here lept into his roome,
And it usurped by unrighteous doome:
But he his title justifide by might,
Slaying Traherne, and having overcome
The Romane legion in dreadfull fight:
So settled he his kingdome, and confirmd his right.

LXI

But wanting yssew male, his daughter deare
He gave in wedlocke to Maximian, And him with her made of his kingdome heyre,
Who soone by meanes thereof the empire
wan,
Till murdred by the freends of Gratian.
Then gan the Hunnes and Piets invade this land,
During the raigne of Maximian; Who dying left none heire them to with-
stand,
But that they overran all parts with easy
hand.

LXII

The weary Britons, whose war-hable youth Was by Maximian lately ledd away, With wretched miseryes and woefull ruth Were to those pagans made an open pray,
And daily spectacle of sad decay:

Whome Romane warres, which now fowr hundred yeares
And more had wasted, could no whit dis-
may;
Til by consent of Commons and of Peares, They crownd the second Constantine with joyous teares.

LXIII

Who having oft in batteill vanquished Those spoylefull Piets, and swarming East-erlings,
Long time in peace his realme established, Yet oft annoyd with sondry bordragings Of neighbour Scots, and forrein scatter-lings,
With which the world did in those dayes
abound:
Which to outbarre, with painefull pyonings
From sea to sea he heapt a mighty mound, Which from Alcluid to Panwelt did that border bownd.

LXIV

Three sonnes he dying left, all under age;
By meanes whereof, their uncle Vortigere Usurpt the crowne during their pupillage;
Which th' infants tutors gathering to feare,
Them closely into Armorick did beare: For dread of whom, and for those Piets an-
noyes,
He sent to Germany, straunge aid to reare; From whence eftsoones arrived here three hoyes
Of Saxons, whom he for his safety employes.

LXV

Two brethren were their capitayns, which
hight
Hengist and Horsus, well approv'd in warre, And both of them men of renowned might;
Who, making vantage of their civile jarre, And of those forreyners which came from
farre,
Grew great, and got large portions of land,
That in the realme ere long they stronger
arre
Then they which sought at first their helping hand,
And Vortiger have forst the kingdome to aband.

LXVI

But by the helpe of Vortimere his sonne,
He is againe unto his rule restord;

And Hengist, seeming sad for that was
 donne,
 Received is to grace and new accord, Through his faire daughters face and flat-tring word.
 Soone after which, three hundred lords he slew
 Of British blood, all sitting at his bord;
 Whose dolefull monuments who list to rew, Th' eternall marks of treason may at Stonheng vew.

LXVII

By this the sonnes of Constantine, which
 fled,
 Ambrose and Uther, did ripe yeares at-
 tayne,
 And here arriving, strongly challenged The crowne, which Vortiger did long de-
 tayne;
 Who, flying from his guilt, by them was slayne,
 And Hengist eke soone brought to shame-full death.
 Thenceforth Aurelius peaceably did rayne, Till that through poyson stopped was his breath;
 So now entombd lies at Stoneheng by the heath.

LXVIII

After him Uther, which Pendragon hight, Succeeding — There abruptly it did
 end,
 Without full point, or other cesure right,
 As if the rest some wicked hand did rend, Or th' author selfe could not at least attend
 To finish it: that so untimely breach The Prince him selfe halfe seemed to offend;
 Yet secret pleasure did offence empeach, And wonder of antiquity long stopt his speach.

LXIX

At last, quite ravisht with delight, to heare
 The royall ofspring of his native land, Cryde out: 'Deare countrey ! O how dearely
 deare Ought thy remembraunce and perpetual
 band
 Be to thy foster childe, that from thy hand Did commun breath and nouriture receive !
 How brutish is it not to understand

How much to her we owe, that all us
 gave,
 That gave unto us all, what ever good we have !'

LXX

But Guyon all this while his booke did read, Ne yet has ended: for it was a great And ample volume, that doth far exceed My leasure, so long leaves here to repeat:
 It told, how first Prometheus did create A man, of many parts from beasts deryv'd,
 And then stole fire from heven, to animate His worke, for which he was by Jove depryv'd
 Of life him self, and hart-strings of an aegle ryv'd.

LXXI

That man so made he called Elfe, to weet Quick, the first author of all Elfin kynd: Who, wandring through the world with wearie feet,
 Did in the gardins of Adonis fynd A goodly creature, whom he deemd in
 mynd
 To be no earthly wight, but either spright Or angell, th' authour of all woman kynd; Therefore a Fay he her according hight, Of whom all Faryes spring, and fetch their lignage right.

LXXII

Of these a mighty people shortly grew,
 And puissant kinges, which all the world
 warrayd,
 And to them selves all nations did subdew.
 The first and eldest, which that scepter
 swayd,
 Was Elfin; him all India obeyd,
 And all that now America men call:
 Next him was noble Elfinan, who laid Cleopolis foundation first of all:
 But Elfine enclosd it with a golden wall

LXXIII

His sonne was Elfinell, who overcame
 The wicked Gobbelines in bloody field:
 But Elfant was of most renowned fame,
 Who all of christall did Panthea build:
 Then Elfar, who two brethren gyaunte
 kild,
 The one of which had two heades, th' othe three:
 Then Elfinor. who was in magick skild;

He built by art upon the glassy see A bridge of bras, whose sound hevens thunder seem'd to bee.

LXXIV

He left three sommes, the which in order
raynd,
And all their offspring, in their dew descents,
Even seven hundred princes, which main-
taynd
With mightie deedes their sondry governments;
That were too long their infinite contents
Here to record, ne much materiall; Yet should they be most famous moni-
ments,
And brave ensample, both of martiall
And civil rule, to kinges and states imperiall.

LXXV

After all these Elficieos did rayne,
The wise Elficieos in great majestie,
Who mightily that scepter did sustayne,
And with rich spoyles and famous victorie Did high advaunce the crowne of Faery:
He left two sommes, of which faire Elferon,
The eldest brother, did untimely dy;
Whose emptie place the mightie Oberon Doubly supplide, in spousall and dominion.

LXXVI

Great was his power and glorie over all Which, him before, that sacred seate did
fill,
That yet remains his wide memoriall:
He dying left the fairest Tanaquill, Him to succede therein, by his last will:
Fairer and nobler liveth none this howre, Ne like in grace, ne like in learned skill; Therefore they Glorian call that glorious
flowre:
Long mayst thou, Glorian, live, in glory and great powre!

LXXVII

Beguyld thus with delight of novelties,
And naturall desire of cuntryes state,
So long they redd in those antiquities, That how the time was fled they quite for-
gate;
Till gentle Alma, seeing it so late, Perforce their studies broke, and them be-
sought
To thinke how supper did them long awaite:

So halfe unwilling from their bookes them
brought,
And fayrely feasted, as so noble knightes she ought.

CANTO XI

The enimies of Temperaunce Besiege her dwelling place:
Prince Arthure them repelles, and fowle Malerger doth deface.

I

WHAT warre so cruel, or what siege so
sore,
As that which strong affections doe apply Against the forte of reason evermore,
To bring the sowle into captivity?
Their force is fiercer through infirmity
Of the fraile flesh, relenting to their rage,
And exercise most bitter tyranny Upon the partes, brought into their bond-
age:
No wretchednesse is like to sinfull vellen-age.

II

But in a body which doth freely yeeld His partes to reasons rule obedient,
And letteth her, that ought, the scepter weeld,
All happy peace and goodly government Is settled there in sure establishment.
There Alma, like a virgin queene most
bright,
Doth flourish in all beautie excellent,
And to her guesstes doth bounteous banker
dight,
Attempted goodly well for health and for delight.

III

Early, before the morne with cremosin ray
The windowes of bright heaven opened
had,
Through which into the world the dawning
day
Might looke, that maketh every creature
glad,
Uprose Sir Guyon, in bright armour clad,
And to his purposd journey him prepar'd:
With him the palmer eke in habit sad Him selfe address to that adventure hard:
So to the rivers syde they both together
far'd.

IV

Where them awaited ready at the ford
 The ferriman, as Alma had behight, With his well rigged bote. They goe aboard, And he eftsoones gan launch his barke forth-
 right.
 Ere long they rowed were quite out of sight,
 And fast the land behynd them fled away.
 But let them pas, whiles winde and wether
 right
 Doe serve their turnes: here I a while must
 stay,
 To see a cruell fight doen by the Prince this day.

V

For all so soone as Guyon thence was gon Upon his voyage with his trustie guyde,
 That wicked band of villeins fresh begon That castle to assaile on every side,
 And lay strong siege about it far and wyde.
 So huge and infinite their numbers were,
 That all the land they under them did hyde;
 So fowle and ugly, that exceeding feare Their visages imprest, when they approached
 neare.

VI

Them in twelve troupes their captein did dispart,
 And round about in fittest steades did place, Where each might best offend his proper
 part,
 And his contrary object most deface,
 As every one seem'd meetest in that cace.
 Seven of the same against the castle gate In strong entrenchments he did closely
 place,
 Which with inessaunt force and endlesse
 hate
 They battred day and night, and entraunce did awate.

VII

The other five, five sondry wayes he sett, Against the five great bulwarkes of that
 pyle,
 And unto each a bulwarke did arrett, T' assaile with open force or hidden guyle,
 In hope thereof to win victorious spoile.
 They all that charge did fervently apply
 With greedie malice and importune toyle,
 And planted there their huge artillery,
 With which they dayly made most dreadfull battery.

VIII

The first troupe was a monstrous rablement Of fowle misshapen wightes, of which some
 were Headed like owles, with beekes uncomely
 bent,
 Others like dogs, others like gryphons
 dreare,
 And some had wings, and some had clawes to teare,
 And every one of them had lyncees eyes,
 And every one did bow and arrowes beare;
 All those were lawlesse lustes, corrupt envyes,
 And covetous aspects, all cruel enimyies.

IX

Those same against the bulwarke of the
 Sight
 Did lay strong siege and battailous assault, Ne once did yield it respitt day nor night,
 But soone as Titan gan his head exault,
 And soone againe as he his light withhault,
 Their wicked engins they against it bent:
 That is, each thing by which the eyes may fault:
 But two, then all more huge and violent, Beantie and money, they that bulwarke sorely rent.

X

The second bulwarke was the Hearing
 Sence,
 Gainst which the second troupe dessignment
 makes,
 Deformed creatures, in straunge difference, Some having heads like harts, some like to snakes,
 Some like wilde bores late roud out of the brakes;
 Slaunderous reproches, and fowle infamies, Leasinges, backbytinges, and vaine glorious crakes,
 Bad counsels, prayses, and false flatteries;
 All those against that fort did bend their batteries.

XI

Likewise that same third fort, that is the Smell,
 Of that third troupe was cruelly assayd;
 Whose hideous shapes were like to feendes of hell,
 Some like to houndes, some like to apes,
 dismayd,

Some like to puttockes, all in plumes arayed;

All shap't according their conditions:
For by those ugly formes weren pourtrayd Foolish delights and fond abusions, Which doe that sence besiege with light illusions.

XII

And that fourth band, which cruell battry
bent

Against the fourth bulwarke, that is the Taste,

Was, as the rest, a grysie rablement, Some mouth'd like greedy oystriages, some faste

Like loathly toades, some fashioned in the waste

Like swine; for so deformd is luxury, Surfeat, misdiet, and unthriftie waste, Vaine feastes, and ydle superfluity:
All those this sences fort assayle incessantly.

XIII

But the fift troupe, most horrible of hew
And ferce of force, is dreadfull to report:
For some like snailes, some did like spyd-ers shew,

And some like ugly urchins thick and short:
Cruelly they assayled that fift fort,
Armed with dartes of sensuall delight, With stinges of carnall lust, and strong effort

Of feeling pleasures, with which day and
night

Against that same fift bulwarke they continued fight.

XIV

Thus these twelve troupes with dreadfull puissaunce

Against that castle restlesse siege did lay,
And evermore their hideous ordinaunce Upon the bulwarkes cruelly did play,
That now it gan to threaten neare decay;
And evermore their wicked capitayn Provoked them the breaches to assay, Sometimes with threats, sometimes with hope of gayn,

Which by the ransack of that peece they should attayne.

XV

On th' other syde, th' assieged castles ward
Their stedfast stonds did mightily maintaine,

And many bold repulse and many hard Atechievement wrought, with perill and with
payne,

That goodly frame from ruine to sustaine:
And those two brethren gyauntes did defend

The walles so stoutly with their sturdie
mayne,

That never entraunce any durst pretend,
But they to direfull death their groning ghosts did send.

XVI

The noble virgin, ladie of the place, Was much dismayed with that dreadful
sight;

For never was she in so evill case:
Till that the Prince, seeing her wofull plight, Gan her recomfort from so sad affright,
Offering his service and his dearest life
For her defence, against that carle to fight, Which was their chiefe and th' authour of that strife:

She him remerciad as the patrone of her life.

XVII

Eftsoones himselfe in glitterand armes he
dight,

And his well proved weapons to him hent:
So taking courteous conge, he belight Those gates to be unbar'd, and forth he went.
Fayre mote he thee, the prowest and most gent

That ever brandished bright steele on hie:
Whom soone as that unruly rablement
With his gay squyre issewing did espye, They reard a most outrageous dreadfull yelling cry;

XVIII

And therewithall attonce at him let fly Their fluttring arrows, thicke as flakes of snow,

And round about him flocke impetuously,
Like a great water flood, that, tomling low From the high mountaines, threatates to overflow

With suddain fury all the fertile playne,
And the sad husbandmans long hope doth
throw

A downe the streame, and all his vowes make vayne,

Nor bounds nor banks his headlong ruine may sustayne.

XIX

Upon his shield their heaped hayle he bore,
 And with his sword disperst the raskall flockes,
 Which fled a sonder, and him fell before,
 As withered leaves drop from their dried stockes,
 When the wroth western wind does reave their lockes;
 And under neath him his courageous steed, The fierce Spumador, trode them downe like docks;
 The fierce Spumador borne of heavenly seed,
 Such as Laomedon of Phæbus race did breed.

XX

Which suddaine horroure and confused cry When as their capteine heard, in haste he yode,
 The cause to weet, and fault to remedy:
 Upon a tygre swift and fierce he rode,
 That as the winde ran underneath his lode, Whiles his long legs nigh raught unto the
 ground:
 Full large he was of limbe, and shoulders brode,
 But of such subtile substance and unsound, That like a ghost he seem'd, whose grave-clothes were unbound.

XXI

And in his hand a bended bow was seene,
 And many arrowes under his right side,
 All deadly daungerous, all cruell keene, Headed with flint, and fethers bloody dide,
 Such as the Indians in their quivers hide: Those could he well direct and streight as
 line,
 And bid them strike the marke which he had eyde;
 Ne was there salve, ne was there medicine, That mote recure their wounds, so inly they did tinc.

XXII

As pale and wan as ashes was his looke,
 His body leane and meagre as a rake,
 And skin all withered like a dried rooke, Thereto as cold and drery as a snake,
 That seemd to tremble evermore, and quake:
 All in a canvas thin he was bedight,
 And girded with a belt of twisted brake:
 Upon his head he wore an helmet light, Made of a dead mans skull, that seemd a ghastly sight.

XXIII

Maleger was his name; and after him There follow'd fast at hand two wicked hags,
 With hoary lockes all loose and visage grim;
 Their feet unshod, their bodies wrapt in rags,
 And both as swift on foot as chased stags;
 And yet the one her other legge had lame,
 Which with a staffe, all full of litle snags,
 She did support, and Impotence her name:
 But th' other was Impatience, arm'd with raging flame.

XXIV

Soone as the carle from far the Prince espyde Glistring in armes and warlike ornament,
 His beast he felly prickt on either syde,
 And his mischievous bow full readie bent,
 With which at him a cruell shaft he sent:
 But he was warie, and it warded well Upon his shield, that it no further went,
 But to the ground the idle quarrell fell:
 Then he another and another did expell.

XXV

Which to prevent, the Prince his mortall
 speare
 Soone to him raught, and fierce at him did
 ride,
 To be avenged of that shot whyleare:
 But he was not so hardy to abide That bitter stownd, but turning quicke aside His light-foot beast, fled fast away for feare:
 Whom to poursue, the infant after hide,
 So fast as his good courser could him beare;
 But labour lost it was to weene approach him neare.

XXVI

For as the winged wind his tigre fled, That vew of eye could scarce him over-
 take,
 Ne scarce his feet on ground were seene to tred:
 Through hills and dales he speedy way did
 make,
 Ne hedge ne ditch his readie passage brake,
 And in his flight the villein turn'd his face, (As wonts the Tartar by the Caspian lake, When as the Russian him in fight does chace)
 Unto his tygres taile, and shot at him apace.

XXVII

Apace he shot, and yet he fled apace, Still as the greedy knight nigh to him drew,
 And oftentimes he would relent his pace, That him his foe more fiercely should poursew:

Who when his uncouth manner he did vew,
 He gan avize to follow him no more,
 But keepe his standing, and his shaftes
 eschew,

Untill he quite had spent his perlous store,
 And then assayle him fresh, ere he could shift for more.

XXVIII

But that lame hag, still as abroad he strew
 His wicked arrowes, gathered them againe, And to him brought, fresh batteill to renew:

Which he espying, cast her to restraine
 From yielding succour to that cursed swaine, And her attaching, thought her hands to tye;

But soone as him dismounted on the plaine
 That other hag did far away espie Binding her sister, she to him ran hastily;

XXIX

And catching hold of him, as downe he lent, Him backward overthrew, and downe him
 stayd

With their rude handes and gryesly graple-
 ment,

Till that the villein, comming to their ayd,
 Upon him fell, and lode upon him layd:
 Full litle wanted, but he had him slaine,
 And of the battell balefull end had made,
 Had not his gentle squire beheld his paine,
 And commen to his reskew, ere his bitter bane.

XXX

So greatest and most glorious thing on
 ground

May often need the helpe of weaker hand;
 So feeble is mans state, and life unsound,
 That in assurance it may never stand,
 Till it dissolved be from earthly band.

Proofe be thou, Prince, the prowest man alyve,
 And noblest borne of all in Britayne land; Yet thee fierce Fortune did so nearely
 drive,

That had not Grace thee blest, thou should-est not survive.

XXXI

The squyre arriving, fiercely in his armes Snatcht first the one, and then the other jade,

His chiefest letts and authors of his harnes,
 And them perforce withheld with threatned
 blade,

Least that his lord they should behinde in-
 vade;

The whiles the Prince, priekt with reproch-ful shame,

As one awakte out of long slombring shade, Revivying thought of glory and of fame, United all his powres to purge him selfe from blame.

XXXII

Like as a fire, the which in hollow cave Hath long bene underkept and down sup-
 prest,

With murmurous disdayne doth inly rave,
 And grudge, in so streight prison to be
 prest,

At last breakes forth with furious unrest,
 And strives to mount unto his native seat;
 All that did earst it hinder and molest, Yt now devoures with flames and scorching
 heat,

And carries into smoake with rage and horror great.

XXXIII

So mightly the Briton Princee him roud Out of his holde, and broke his caytive
 bands;

And as a beare, whom angry cures have touzd,

Having off-shakt them, and escapt their hands,

Becomes more fell, and all that him withstands

Treads down and overthrowes. Now had the carle

Alighted from his tigre, and his hands Discharged of his bow and deadly quar'le, To seize upon his foe flatt lying on th marle.

XXXIV

Which now him turnd to disavantage deare,
 For neither can he fly, nor other harme,

But trust unto his strength and manhood meare,

Sith now he is far from his monstrous
 swarme,

And of his weapons did him selfe disarm.
The knight, yet wrothfull for his late disgrace, Fiercely advaunst his valorous right arme,
And him so sore smott with his yron mace, That groveling to the ground he fell, and fild his place.

XXXV

Wel weened hee that field was then his owne,
And all his labor brought to happy end,
When suddain up the villeine overthrowne Out of his swowne arose, fresh to contend,
And gan him selfe to second battaill bend, As hurt he had not beene. Thereby there
lay
An huge great stone, which stood upon one
end,
And had not bene removed many a day;
Some land-marke seemd to bee, or signe of sundry way.

XXXVI

The same he snatcht, and with exceeding
sway
Threw at his foe, who was right well aware
To shonne the engin of his meant decay; It booted not to thinke that throw to
beare,
But grownd he gave, and lightly left areare:
Efte fierce retourning, as a fauleon fayre, That once hath failed of her souse full
neare,
Remounts againe into the open ayre,
And unto better fortune doth her selfe prepayre.

XXXVII

So brave retourning, with his brandisht
blade,
He to the carle him selfe agayn adrest, And strooke at him so sternely, that he
made
An open passage through his riven brest, That halfe the steele behind his backe did
rest;
Which drawing backe, he looked ever more When the hart blood should gush out of his chest,
Or his dead corse should fall upon the
flore;
But his dead corse upon the flore fell nathe-
more.

XXXVIII

Ne drop of blood appeared shed to bee,
All were the wovnd so wide and wonderous, That through his carcas one might playnly
see.
Halfe in amaze with horror hideous,
And halfe in rage to be deluded thus, Again through both the sides he strooke him quight,
That made his spright to grone full piteous: Yet nathemore forth fled his groning spright, But freshly as at first, prepard himselfe to fight.

XXXIX

Thereat he smitten was with great affright,
And trembling terror did his hart apall, Ne wist he what to thinke of that same
sight,
Ne what to say, ne what to doe at all;
He doubted least it were some magicall Illusion, that did beguile his sense,
Or wandring ghost, that wanted funerall,
Or aery spirite under false pretence, Or hellish feend raysd up through divelish science.

XL

His wonder far exceeded reasons reach,
That he began to doubt his dazeled sight,
And oft of error did him selfe appeach: Flesh without blood, a person without
spright,
Wounds without hurt, a body without might,
That could doe harme, yet could not harmed
bee,
That could not die, yet seemd a mortall
wight,
That was most strong in most infirmitee; Like did he never heare, like did he never see.

XLI

A while he stood in this astonishment, Yet would he not for all his great dismay Give over to effect his first intent,
And th' utmost meanes of victory assay,
Or th' utmost yssew of his owne decay.
His owne good sword Mordure, that never fayld
At need till now, he lightly threw away,
And his bright shield, that nought him now avayld,
And with his naked hands him forcibly assayld.

XLII

Twixt his two mighty armes him up he snatcht,
And crusht his carcas so against his brest,
That the disdainfull sowle he thence dispateht,
And th' ydle breath all utterly exprest: Tho, when he felt him dead, adowne he kest
The lumpish corse unto the sencelesse
grownd;
Adowne he kest it with so puissant wrest,
That backe againe it did alofte rebownd, And gave against his mother Earth a grone-full sownd.

XLIII

As when Joves harnesse-bearing bird from
hye Stoupes at a flying heron with proud dis-
dayne,
The stone-dead quarrey falls so forciblye,
That yt rebownds against the lowly playne,
A second fall redoubling backe agayne.
Then thought the Prince all peril sure was
past,
And that he victor onely did remayne; No sooner thought, then that the carle as
fast
Gan heap huge strokes on him, as ere he down was cast.

XLIV

Nigh his wits end then woxe th' amazed
knight,
And thought his labor lost and travell
vayne,
Against this lifelesse shadow so to fight:
Yet life he saw, and felt his mighty mayne,
That, whiles he marveild still, did still him
payne:
Forthy he gan some other wayes advize, How to take life from that dead-living
swayne,
Whom still he marked freshly to arize From th' earth, and from her womb new spirits to reprize.

XLV

He then remembered well, that had bene
sayd,
How th' Earth his mother was, and first
him bore;
Shee eke, so often as his life decayd,
Did life with usury to him restore,

And reysd him up much stronger then before,
So soone as he unto her wombe did fall;
Therefore to grownd he would him cast no
more,
Ne him committ to grave terrestriall, But beare him farre from hope of succour usuall.

XLVI

Tho up he caught him twixt his puissant
hands,
And having scruzd out of his carrion corse
The lothfull life, now loosd from sinfull
hands,
Upon his shoulders carried him perforce Above three furlongs, taking his full course, Untill he came unto a standing lake:
Him thereinto he threw without remorse, Ne stird, till hope of life did him forsake:
So end of that carles dayes, and his owne paynes did make.

XLVII

Which when those wicked hags from far did spye, Like two mad dogs they ran about the lands;
And th' one of them with dreadfull yelling
crye, Throwing away her broken chaines and
bands,
And having quencht her burning fier brands, Hedlong her selfe did cast into that lake;
But Impotence with her owne wilfull hands
One of Malegers cursed darts did take, So ryv'd her trembling hart, and wicked end did make.

XLVIII

Thus now alone he conquerour remains:
Tho, cunning to his squyre, that kept his
steed,
Thought to have mounted, but his feeble vaines
Him faild thereto, and served not his need, Through losse of blood, which from his wounds did bleed,
That he began to faint, and life decay But his good squyre, him helping up with speed,
With stedfast hand upon his horse did
stay,
And led him to the castle by the beaten
way.

XLIX

Where many groomes and squyres ready
were

To take him from his steed full tenderly,
And eke the fayrest Alma mett him there With balme and wine and costly spicery, To comfort him in his infirmity:
Eftsoones shee caused him up to be conuayd,
And of his armes despoyled easily,
In sumptuous bed shee made him to be layd,
And all the while his wounds were dressing, by him stayd.

CANTO XII

Guyon by palmers gouernance Passing through perilles great, Doth overthrow the Bowre of Blis,
And Acrasy defeat.

I

Now ginnes this goodly frame of Temper-
aunce

Fayrely to rise, and her adorned hed To pricke of highest prayse forth to ad-uaunce,

Formerly grounded and fast setteled
On firme foundation of true bountyhed:
And that brave knight, that for this vertue fightes,

Now comes to point of that same perilous
sted,

Where Pleasure dwelles in sensuall delights,

Mongst thousand dangers, and ten thousand magick mightes.

II

Two dayes now in that sea he sayled has,
Ne ever land beheld, ne living wight, Ne ought save perill, still as he did pas:
Tho, when appeared the third morrow
bright,

Upon the waves to spred her trembling light,
An hideous roring far away they heard,
That all their senses filled with affright,
And streight they saw the raging surges
read

Up to the skyes, that them of drowning made affeard.

III

Said then the boteman, 'Palmer, stere
aright,
And keepe an even course; for yonder way

We needes must pas (God doe us well acquight!)

That is the Gulfe of Greedinesse, they say,
That deepe engorgeth all this worldes pray;
Which having swallowd up excessively,
He soone in vomit up againe doth lay,
And belcheth forth his superfluity, That all the seas for feare doe seeme away to fly.

IV

'On thother syde an hideous rock is pight Of mightie magnes stone, whose craggie clift

Depending from on high, dreadfull to sight,
Over the waves his rugged armes doth lift,
And threatneth downe to throw his ragged rift

On whoso cometh nigh; yet nigh it drawes
All passengers, that none from it can shift:
For whiles they fly that gulfes devouring
jawes,

They on this rock are rent, and sunck in helples wawes.'

V

Forward they passe, and strongly he them
rowes,

Untill they nigh unto that gulfe arryve, Where streame more violent and greedy
growes:

Then he with all his puisaunce doth stryve
To strike his oares, and mightily doth dryve
The hollow vessell through the threatfull
wave,

Which, gaping wide, to swallow them alyve
In th' huge abyссе of his engulfin' grave, Doth rore at them in vaine, and with great terroure rave.

VI

They, passing by, that grisely mouth did
see,

Sucking the seas into his entralles deepe,
That seemd more horrible then hell to bee,
Or that darke dreadfull hole of Tartare
steepe,

Through which the damned ghosts doen often creep

Backe to the world, bad livers to torment:
But nought that falles into this direfull
deepe,

Ne that approacheth nigh the wyde descent, May backe retourne, but is condemned to be drent.

VII

On thother side they saw that perilous roeke, Threatning it selfe on them to ruinate, On whose sharp eliftes the ribs of vessels
 broke,
 And shivered ships, which had beene wrecked late,
 Yet stuek, with carcasses exanimate Of such, as having all their substance spent In wanton joyes and lustes intemperate, Did afterwarde make shipwraek violent, Both of their life, and fame for ever fowly blent.

VIII

Fortly this hight the Rock of vile Reproch, A daungerous and detestable place,
 To which nor fish nor fowle did once ap-
 proch,
 But yelling meawes, with seagulles hoars and bace,
 And cormoyraunts, with birds of ravenous
 race,
 Which still sat wayting on that wastfull elift
 For spoile of wretches, whose unhappy caee, After lost credit and consumed thrift,
 At last them driven hath to this despairefull drift.

IX

The palmer, seeing them in safetie past, Thus saide: 'Behold th' ensamples in our sightes
 Of lustfull luxurie and thriftlesse wast:
 What now is left of miserable wightes, Which spent their looser daies in leud delightes,
 But shame and sad reproch, here to be
 red
 By these rent reliques, speaking their ill plightes?
 Let all that live, hereby be counselled To shunne Rock of Reproch, and it as death to dread.'

X

So forth they rowed, and that ferryman With his stiffe oares did brush the sea so
 strong,
 That the hoare waters from his frigot ran,
 And the light bubbles daunced all along, Whiles the salt brine out of the billowes
 sprong.

At last far off they many islandes spy,
 On every side floting the floodes emong:
 Then said the knight: 'Lo! I the land
 descry;
 Therefore, old syre, thy course doe there-unto apply.'

XI

'That may not bee,' said then the ferry-
 man,
 'Least wee unweeting hap to be fordonne:
 For those same islands, seeming now and than,
 Are not firme land, nor any certein wonne, But stragling plots, which to and fro doe
 ronne
 In the wide waters: therefore are they
 hight
 The Wandring Islands. Therefore doe them
 shonne;
 For they have ofte drawne many a wand-ring wight
 Into most deadly daunger and distressed plight.

XII

'Yet well they seeme to him, that farre doth vew,
 Both faire and fruitfull, and the grownd disprede
 With grassy greene of delectable hew,
 And the tall trees with leaves appareled, Are deckt with blossoms dyde in white and
 red,
 That mote the passengers thereto allure;
 But whosoever once hath fastened His foot thereon, may never it recure, But wandreth ever more uncertein and unsure.

XIII

'As th' isle of Delos whylome, men report, Amid th' Aegean sea long time did stray, Ne made for shipping any certeine port, Till that Latona traveiling that way, Flying from Junoes wrath aud hard assay,
 Of her fayre twins was there delivered, Which afterwarde did rule the night and
 day;
 Thenceforth it firmly was established,
 And for Apolloes honor highly herried.'

XIV

They to him hearken, as besee meth meete,
 And passe on forward: so their way does ly,

That one of those same islands, which doe fleet
In the wide sea, they needes must passen
by,
Which seemd so sweet and pleasaunt to the
eye,
That it would tempt a man to touchen there:
Upon the banck they sitting did espy
A daintie damsell, dressing of her heare, By whom a little skippet floting did appeare.

XV

She, them espying, loud to them can call,
Bidding them nigher draw unto the shore;
For she had cause to busie them withall;
And therewith lowdly laught: but nathe-
more
Would they once turne, but kept on as afore:
Which when she saw, she left her lockes undight,
And running to her boat withouten ore,
From the departing land it launched light,
And after them did drive with all her power
and might.

XVI

Whom overtaking, she in merry sort Them gan to bord, and purpose diversly, Now faining dalliaunce and wanton sport, Now throwing forth lewd wordes immod-estly;
Till that the palmer gan full bitterly
Her to rebuke, for being loose and light:
Which not abiding, but more scornfully Scoffing at him that did her justly wite, She turnd her bote about, and from them rowed quite.

XVII

That was the wanton Phœdria, which late Did ferry him over the Idle Lake: Whom nought regarding, they kept on their
gate,
And all her vaine allurements did forsake;
When them the wary boteman thus bespake:
'Here now behoveth us well to avyse,
And of our safety good heede to take;
For here before a perlous passage lyes, Where many mermayds haunt, making false melodies.

XVIII

'But by the way there is a great quicksand,
And a whirlepoole of hidden jeopardy:

Therefore, sir palmer, keepe an even hand;
For twixt them both the narrow way doth
lye.
Scarse had he saide, when hard at hand they spy
That quicksand nigh with water covered;
But by the checked wave they did descrie
It plaine, and by the sea discoloured:
It called was the Quickesand of Unthrifty-hed.

XIX

They, passing by, a goodly ship did see,
Laden from far with precious merchandize,
And bravely furnished as ship might bee, Which through great disaventure, or mes-
prize,
Her selfe had ronne into that hazardize; Whose mariners and merchants, with much
toyle,
Labour'd in vaine to have recur'd their prize,
And the rich wares to save from pitteous
spoyle;
But neither toyle nor travaill might her backe recoyle.

XX

On th' other side they see that perilous poole,
That called was the Whirlepoole of Decay,
In which full many had with haplesse doole Beene suncke, of whom no memorie did
stay:
Whose circled waters rapt with whirling
sway,
Like to a restlesse wheele, still ronning
round,
Did covet, as they passed by that way,
To draw their bote within the utmost bound Of his wide labyrinth, and then to have them dround.

XXI

But th' heedfull boteman strongly fo. h did stretch
His brawnie armes, and all his bodie straine, That th' utmost sandy breach they shortly fetch,
Whiles the dredd daunger does behind re-
maine.
Suddeine they see from midst of all the
maine
The surging waters like a mountaine rise, And the great sea, puft up with proud dis-
daine,

To swell above the measure of his guise,
As threatning to devoure all that his powre despise.

XXII

The waves come rolling, and the billowes
rore

Outragiously, as they enraged were,
Or wrathfull Neptune did them drive before

His whirling charet, for exceeding feare;
For not one puffe of winde there did ap-
peare;

That all the three thereat woxe much afraid,

Unweeting what such horroure straunge did
reare.

Eftsoones they saw an hideous hoast arrayd Of huge sea monsters, such as living sence dismayd.

XXIII

Most ugly shapes and horrible aspects, Such as Dame Nature selfe mote feare to
see,

Or shame that ever should so fowle defects
From her most cunning hand escaped bee;
All dreadfull pourtraicts of deformitee:
Spring-headed hydres, and sea-shouldring whales,

Great whirlpooles, which all fishes make to flee,

Bright scolopendraes, arm'd with silver scales,

Mighty monoceros with immeasured tayles,

XXIV

The dreadfull fish, that hath deserv'd the
name

Of Death, and like him lookes in dreadfull
hew,

The griesly wasserman, that makes his game
The flying ships with swiftnes to pursew,
The horrible sea-satyre, that doth shew
His fearefull face in time of greatest storme, Huge ziffius, whom mariners eschew No lesse then rockes, (as travellers informe,)

And greedy rosmarines with visages deforme.

XXV

All these, and thousand thousands many
more,

And more deformed monsters thousand fold,

With dreadfull noise and hollow rombling
rore,

Came rushing, in the fomy waves enrold, Which seem'd to fly for feare them to be-
hold:

Ne wonder, if these did the knight appall;
For all, that here on earth we dreadfull
hold,

Be but as bugs to fearen babes withall, Compared to the creatures in the seas entrall.

XXVI

'Feare nought,' then saide the palmer well
aviz'd;

'For these same monsters are not these in deed,

But are into these fearefull shapes disguiz'd

By that same wicked witch, to worke us
dreed,

And draw from on this journey to proceed.'

Tho, lifting up his vertuous staffe on hye, He smote the sea, which calmed was with
speed,

And all that dreadfull armie fast gan flye Into great Tethys bosome, where they hidden lye.

XXVII

Quit from that danger, forth their course they kept,

And as they went they heard a ruefull cry
Of one that wayld and pittifully wept, That through the sea the resounding plaints did fly:

At last they in an island did espy
A seemely maiden, sitting by the shore,
That with great sorrow and sad agony Seemed some great misfortune to deplore, And lowd to them for succour called ever-
more.

XXVIII

Which Guyon hearing, streight his palmer
bad

To stere the bote towards that dolefull
mayd,

That he might know and ease her sorrow
sad:

Who, him avizing better, to him sayd:
'Faire sir, be not displeasd if disobayd:
For ill it were to hearken to her cry;
For she is inly nothing ill apayd,

But onely womanish fine forgery, Your stubborne hart t' affect with fraile infirmity.

XXXIX

'To which when she your courage hath inelind Through foolish pittie, then her guilefull
bayt
She will embosome deeper in your mind,
And for your ruine at the last awayt.' The knight was ruled, and the boteman
strayt
Held on his course with stayed stedfast-
nesse,
Ne ever shroncke, ne ever sought to bayt
His tyred armes for toylesome wearinesse, But with his oares did sweepe the watry wildernesse.

XXX

And now they nigh approached to the sted, Where as those mermayds dwelt: it was a
still
And calmy bay, on th' one side sheltered With the brode shadow of an hoarie hill, On th' other side an high roeke toured still,
That twixt them both a pleasaunt port they
made,
And did like an halfe theatre fulfill:
There those five sisters had continuall
trade,
And usd to bath themselves in that deceptfull shade.

XXXI

They were faire ladies, till they fondly striv'd
With th' Heliconian maides for maystery;
Of whom they over-comen, were depriv'd
Of their proud beautie, and th' one moyity Transformd to fish, for their bold surquedry;
But th' upper halfe their hew retayned still,
And their sweet skill in wonted melody;
Which ever after they abusd to ill, T' allure weake travellers, whom gotten they did kill.

XXXII

So now to Guyon, as he passed by,
Their pleasaunt tunes they sweetly thus ap-
plyde:
'O thou fayre sonne of gentle Faery,
That art in mightie armes most magnifyde Above all knights that ever batteill tryde,

O turne thy rudder hetherward a while:
Here may thy storme-bett vessell safely
ryde;

This is the port of rest from troublous toyle,
The worldes sweet in from paine and wearisome turmoyle.'

XXXIII

With that the rolling sea, resounding soft,
In his big base them fitly answered,
And on the roeke the waves breaking aloft,
A solemne meane unto them measured,
The whiles sweet Zephyrus lowd whisted His treble, a straunge kinde of harmony;
Which Guyons senses softly tiekeled,
That he the boteman bad row easily,
And let him heare some part of their rare melody.

XXXIV

But him the palmer from that vanity
With temperate advice discourseled,
That they it past, and shortly gan descry
The land, to which their course they leveled;
When suddainly a grosse fog over spred With his dull vapour all that desert has,
And heavens chearefull face enveloped, That all things one, and one as nothing was,
And this great universe seemd one confused
mas.

XXXV

Thereat they greatly were dismayd, ne wist
How to direct their way in darkenes wide,
But feard to wander in that wastefull mist,
For tomling into mischiefe unespide:
Worse is the daunger hidden then descride.
Suddeinly an innumerable flight Of harmefull fowles, about them fluttering,
cride,
And with their wicked wings them ofte did snight,
And sore annoyed, groping in that griesly nigh.

XXXVI

Even all the nation of unfortunate And fatall birds about them flocked were,
Such as by nature men abhorre and hate;
The ill-faste owle, deaths dreadfull messengere,
The hoars night-raven, trump of dolefull drere,
The lether-winged batt, dayes enemy,
The ruefull strich, still waiting on the bere,

The whistler shrill, that who so heares doth
dy,
The hellish harpyes, prophets of sad destiny.

XXXVII

All those, and all that els does horror breed, About them flew, and fild their sayles with
feare:

Yet staid they not, but forward did proceed,

Whiles th' one did row, and th' other stifly steare;

Till that at last the weather gan to cleare,
And the faire land it selfe did playnly sheow.
Said then the palmer: 'Lo where does ap-
peare

The sacred soile where all our perills grow; Therefore, sir knight, your ready arms about you throw.'

XXXVIII

He hearkned, and his armes about him
tooke,

The whiles the nimble bote so well her sped, That with her crooked keele the land she
strooke.

Then forth the noble Guyon sallied,
And his sage palmer, that him governed;
But th' other by his bote behind did stay.
They marched fayrly forth, of nought ydred, Both firmly armd for every hard assay, With constancy and care, gainst daunger and dismay.

XXXIX

Ere long they heard an hideous bellowing
Of many beasts, that roard outrageously,
As if that hungers poynt or Venus sting Had them enraged with fell surquedry;
Yet nought they feard, but past on hardily, Untill they came in vew of those wilde
beasts:

Who all attonce, gaping full greedily,
And rearing fiercely their upstarting crests, Ran towards, to devoure those unexpected guests.

XL

But soone as they approcht with deadly
threat,

The palmer over them his staffe upheld, His mighty staffe, that could all charmes defeat:

Eftesooones their stubborne corages were queld,

And high advanced crests downe meekely
feld;

Instead of fraying, they them selves did
feare,

And trembled, as them passing they be-
held:

Such wondrous powre did in that staffe ap-
peare,

All monsters to subdew to him that did it
beare.

XLI

Of that same wood it fram'd was cunningly,
Of which Caduceus whilome was made,

Caduceus, the rod of Mercury, With which he wonts the Stygian realmes
invade,

Through ghastly horror and eternall shade;
Th' infernall feends with it he can asswage, And Orcus tame, whome nothing can persuade,

And rule the Furies, when they most doe
rage:

Such vertue in his staffe had eke this palmer sage.

XLII

Thence passing forth, they shortly doe arryve

Whereas the Bowre of Blisse was situate;
A place pickt out by choyce of best alyve,
That Natures worke by art can imitate:

In which what ever in this worldly state Is sweete, and pleasing unto living sense,
Or that may dayntest fantasy aggrate,
Was poured forth with plentifull dispence, And made there to abound with lavish affluence.

XLIII

Goodly it was enclosed rownd about,
As well their entred guestes to keep within,
As those unruly beasts to hold without;
Yet was the fence thereof but weake and thin;

Nought feard they force, that fortillage to win,

But wisdomes powre, and temperaunces
might,

By which the mightiest things efforced
bin:

And eke the gate was wrought of substance light,

Rather for pleasure then for battery or fight.

XLIV

Yt framed was of precious yvory,
That seemd a worke of admirable witt;
And therein all the famous history Of Jason and Medæa was ywritt;
Her mighty charmes, her furious loving fitt,
His goodly conquest of the golden fleece,
His falsed fayth, and love too lightly flitt,
The wondrous Argo, which in venturous peece
First through the Euxine seas bore all the flour of Greece.

XLV

Ye might have seene the frothy billowes fry
Under the ship, as thorough them she went,
That seemd the waves were into yvory,
Or yvory into the waves were sent;
And otherwhere the snowy substaunce sprent
With vermell, like the boyes blood therein
shed,
A piteous spectacle did represent:
And otherwhiles with gold besprinkeled, Yt seemd thenchaunted flame, which did Creusa wed.

XLVI

All this and more might in that goodly gate Be red; that ever open stood to all Which thether came: but in the porch there sate
A comely personage of stature tall, And semblaunce pleasing, more then natur-
all,
That travellers to him seemd to entize;
His looser garment to the ground did fall,
And flew about his heeles in wanton wize,
Not fitt for speedy pace or manly exerceize.

XLVII

They in that place him Genius did call:
Not that celestially powre, to whom the care Of life, and generation of all That lives, pertieines in charge particulare, Who wondrous things concerning our welfare,
And straunge phantomes, doth lett us ofte forsee,
And ofte of secret ill bids us beware:
That is our selfe, whom though we doe not see,
Yet each doth in him selfe it well perceive to bee.

XLVIII

Therefore a god him sage antiquity Did wisely make, and good Agdistes call.
But this same was to that quite contrary,
The foe of life, that good envyes to all,
That secretly doth us procure to fall, Through guilefull semblants, which he makes us see.
He of this garden had the governall,
And Pleasures porter was devizd to bee, Holding a staffe in hand for more formalitee.

XLIX

With diverse flowres he daintily was deckt,
And strowed round about, and by his side
A mighty mazer bowle of wine was sett,
As if it had to him bene sacrificide; Wherewith all new-come guests he graty-
fide:
So did he eke Sir Guyon passing by:
But hee his ydle curtesie defide,
And overthrew his bowle disdainfully, And broke his staffe, with which he charmed semblants sly.

L

Thus being entred, they behold a round A large and spacious plaine, on every
side Strowed with pleasauns, whose fayre grassy
ground
Mantled with greene, and goodly beautifide
With all the ornaments of Floraes pride, Wherewith her mother Art, as halfe in
scorne
Of niggard Nature, like a pompous bride Did deeke her, and too lavishly adorne, When forth from virgin bowre she comes in th' early morne.

LI

Thereto the heavens alwayes jovially, Lookte on them lovely, still in stedfast
state, Ne suffred storme nor frost on them to
fall,
Their tender buds or leaves to violate,
Nor scorching heat, nor cold intemperate, T' afflict the creatures which therein did
dwell,
But the milde ayre with season moderate Gently attempted, and disposd so well, That still it breathed forth sweet spirit and holesom smell.

LII

More sweet and holesome then the pleasaunt hill

Of Rhodope, on which the nimble that bore
A gyaunt babe her selfe for grieffe did kill;
Or the Thessalian Tempe, where of yore Fayre Daphne Phæbus hart with love did
gore;

Or Ida, where the gods lov'd to repayre, When ever they their heavenly bowres for-
lore;

Or sweet Parnasse, the haunt of Muses
fayre;

Or Eden selfe, if ought with Eden mote compayre.

LIII

Much wondred Guyon at the fayre aspect Of that sweet place, yet suffred no delight To sincke into his sence, nor mind affect, But passed forth, and lookt still forward
right,

Brydling his will, and maystering his might:
Till that he came unto another gate,
No gate, but like one, being goodly dight With bowes and braunches, which did broad dilate

Their clasping armes, in wanton wreathings intricate:

LIV

So fashioned a porch with rare device, Archt over head with an embracing vine, Whose bounches, hanging downe, seemd to entice

All passers by to taste their lushious wine, And did them selves into their hands incline,

As freely offering to be gathered:
Some deepe empurpled as the hyacine,
Some as the rubine laughing sweetely red, Some like faire emeraudes, not yet well ripened.

LV

And them amongst, some were of burnisht
gold,

So made by art, to beautify the rest,
Which did themselves amongst the leaves enfold,

As lurking from the vew of covetous guest,
That the weake boughes, with so rich load
opprest,

Did bow adowne, as overburdened.
Under that porch a comely dame did rest,

Clad in fayre weedes, but fowle disordered,
And garments loose, that seemd unmeet for womanhed.

LVI

In her left hand a cup of gold she held,
And with her right the riper fruit did reach, Whose sappy liquor, that with fulnesse sweld,

Into her cup she seruzd, with daintie breach
Of her fine fingers, without fowle empeach, That so faire winepresse made the wine more sweet:

Thereof she usd to give to drinke to each,
Whom passing by she happened to meet:
It was her guise, all straungers goodly so to greet.

LVII

So she to Guyon offred it to tast,
Who, taking it out of her tender hond,
The cup to ground did violently cast,
That all in peeces it was broken fond,
And with the liquor stained all the lond:
Whereat Excesse exceedingly was wroth, Let no'te the same amend, ne yet with-stond,

But suffered him to passe, all were she loth;
Who, nought regarding her displeasure, forward goth.

LVIII

There the most daintie paradise on ground
It selfe doth offer to his sober eye,
In which all pleasures plenteously abownd,
And none does others happinesse envye:
The painted flowres, the trees upshooting
hye,

The dales for shade, the hilles for breathing space,

The trembling groves, the christall running
by;

And that which all faire workes doth most aggrace,

The art, which all that wrought, appeared in no place.

LIX

One would have thought, (so cunningly the rude

And scorned partes were mingled with the fine,)

That Nature had for wantonnesse ensude Art, and that Art at Nature did repine;
So striving each th' other to undermine,

Each did the others worke more beautify;
 So differing both in willes agreed in fine:
 So all agreed through sweete diversity,
 This gardin to adorne with all variety.

LX

And in the midst of all a fountaine stood, Of richest substance that on earth might
 bee,
 So pure and shiny that the silver flood Through every channell running one might
 see:
 Most goodly it with curious ymageree Was overwrought, and shapes of naked
 boyes,
 Of which some seemd with lively jollitee
 To fly about playing their wanton toyes, Whylest others did them selves embay in liquid joyes.

LXI

And over all, of purest gold was spred
 A trayle of yvie in his native hew:
 For the rich metall was so coloured,
 That wight, who did not well avis'd it vew,
 Would surely deeme it to bee yvie trew:
 Low his lascivious armes adown did creepe,
 That themselves dipping in the silver dew,
 Their fleecy flowres they tenderly did steepe, Which drops of christall seemd for wantones to weep.

LXII

Infinitt streames continually did well
 Out of this fountaine, sweet and faire to see,
 The which into an ample laver fell,
 And shortly grew to so great quantitie,
 That like a litle lake it seemd to bee;
 Whose depth exceeded not three cubits
 hight,
 That through the waves one might the bottom see,
 All pav'd beneath with jasper shining bright, That seemd the fountaine in that sea did sayle upright.

LXIII

And all the margent round about was sett With shady laurell trees, thence to defend The sunny beames, which on the billowes bett,
 And those which therein bathed mote offend.
 As Guyon hapned by the same to wend,
 Two naked damzelles he therein espyde,
 Which, therein bathing, seemed to contend

And wrestle wantonly, ne car'd to hyde Their dainty partes from vew of any which them eyd.

LXIV

Sometimes the one would lift the other
 quight
 Above the waters, and then downe againe Her plong, as over maastered by might,
 Where both awhile would covered remaine,
 And each the other from to rise restraine;
 The whiles their snowy limbes, as through a vele,
 So through the christall waves appeared
 plaine:
 Then suddainly both would themselves unhele,
 And th' amarous sweet spoiles to greedy eyes revele.

LXV

As that faire starre, the messenger of morne,
 His dewy face out of the sea doth reare,
 Or as the Cyprian goddessse, newly borne Of th' oceans fruitfull froth, did first ap-
 peare,
 Such seemed they, and so their yellow heare Christalline humor dropped downe apace.
 Whom such when Guyon saw, he drew him
 neare,
 And somewhat gan relent his earnest pace;
 His stubborne brest gan secret pleasaunce to embrace.

LXVI

The wanton maidens, him espying, stood Gazing a while at his unwonted guise; Then th' one her selfe low ducked in the flood,
 Abasht that her a straunger did avise:
 But thother rather higher did arise,
 And her two lilly paps aloft displayd,
 And all, that might his melting hart entyse
 To her delights, she unto him bewrayd:
 The rest, hidd underneath, him more desirous made.

LXVII

With that the other likewise up arose, And her faire lockes, which formerly were
 bownd
 Up in one knott, she low adowne did lose:
 Which, flowing long and thick, her cloth'd
 arownd,

And th' yvorie in golden mantle gownd:
 So that faire spectacle from him was reft, Yet that which reft it no lesse faire was
 fownd:
 So hidd in lockes and waves from lookers theft,
 Nought but her lovely face she for his looking left.

LXVIII

Withall she laughed, and she blusht with-
 all,
 That blushing to her laughter gave more
 grace,
 And laughter to her blushing, as did fall.
 Now when they spyde the knight to slacke his pace,
 Them to behold, and in his sparkling face
 The secrete signes of kindled lust appeare, Their wanton meriments they did encrease,
 And to him beckned to approach more neare,
 And shewd him many sights, that corage cold could reare.

LXIX

On which when gazing him the palmer saw,
 He much rebukt those wandring eyes of
 his,
 And, counseld well, him forward thence did
 draw.
 Now are they come nigh to the Bowre of Blis,
 Of her fond favorites so nam'd amis:
 When thus the palmer: 'Now, sir, well avise;
 For here the end of all our travaill is:
 Here wonnes Acrasia, whom we must surprise,
 Els she will slip away, and all our drift despise.'

LXX

Eftsoones they heard a most melodious
 sound,
 Of all that mote delight a daintie eare,
 Such as attonce might not on living ground, Save in this paradise, be heard elsewhere:
 Right hard it was for wight which did it
 heare,
 To read what manner musicke that mote
 bee:
 For all that pleasing is to living eare
 Was there consorted in one harmonie; Birdes, voices, instruments, windes, waters, all agree.

LXXI

The joyous birdes, shrouded in chearefull
 shade,
 Their notes unto the voice attempted sweet:
 Th' angelicall soft trembling voyces made To th' instruments divine response meet:
 The silver sounding instruments did meet With the base murmure of the waters fall:
 The waters fall with difference discrete,
 Now soft, now loud, unto the wind did call:
 The gentle warbling wind low answered to all.

LXXII

There, whence that musick seemed heard
 to bee,
 Was the faire witch, her selfe now solacing
 With a new lover, whom, through sorcere And witchcraft, she from farre did thether
 bring:
 There she had him now laid a slumbering,
 In secret shade after long wanton joyes:
 Whilst round about them pleasantly did
 sing
 Many faire ladies and lascivious boyes, That ever mixt their song with light licentious toys.

LXXIII

And all that while, right over him she hong,
 With her false eyes fast fixed in his sight,
 As seeking medicine whence she was stong,
 Or greedily depasturing delight:
 And oft inclining downe, with kisses light,
 For feare of waking him, his lips bedewd, And through his humid eyes did sucke his
 spright,
 Quite molten into lust and pleasure lewd; Wherewith she sighed soft, as if his case she rewd.

LXXIV

The whiles some one did chaunt this lovely
 lay:— Ah! see, who so fayre thing doest faine to
 see,
 In springing flowre the image of thy day;
 Ah! see the virgin rose, how sweetly shiee Doth first peepe foorth with bashfull mo-destee,
 That fairer seemes, the lesse ye see her
 may;
 Lo! see soone after, how more bold and
 free

Her bared bosome she doth broad display; Lo ! see soone after, how she fades and falls away.

LXXV

So passeth, in the passing of a day,
Of mortall life the leafe, the bud, the flowre, Ne more doth flourish after first decay, That earst was sought to deck both bed and bowre
Of many a lady, and many a paramowre: Gather therefore the rose, whilst yet is
prime,
For soone comes age, that will her pride deflowre:
Gather the rose of love, whilst yet is time, Whilst loving thou mayst loved be with equall crime.

LXXVI

He ceast, and then gan all the quire of birdes
Their diverse notes t' attune unto his lay,
As in approvaunce of his pleasing wordes.
The constant payre heard all that he did
say,
Yet swarved not, but kept their forward
way,
Through many covert groves and thickets
close,
In which they creeping did at last display
That wanton lady, with her lover lose, Whose sleepeie head she in her lap did soft dispose.

LXXVII

Upon a bed of roses she was layd, As faint through heat, or dight to pleasant sue,
And was arayd, or rather disarayd,
All in a vele of silke and silver thin,
That hid no whit her alablaster skin, But rather shewd more white, if more might bee:
More subtile web Arachne cannot spin, Nor the fine nets, which oft we woven
see
Of scorched deaw, do not in th' ayre more lightly flee.

LXXVIII

Her snowy brest was bare to ready spoyle Of hungry eies, which n'ote therewith be
fild;

And yet through languour of her late sweet
toyle,
Few drops, more cleare then nectar, forth distild,
That like pure orient perles adowne it trild;
And her faire eyes, sweet smyling in del-
light, Moystened their fierie beames, with which she thrild Fraile harts, yet quenched not, like starry
light,
Which, sparekling on the silent waves, does seeme more bright.

LXXIX

The young man, sleeping by her, seemd to be
Some goodly swayne of honorable place,
That certes it great pittie was to see Him his nobility so fowle deface:
A sweet regard and amiable grace, Mixed with manly sternesse, did appeare,
Yet sleeping, in his well proportiond face,
And on his tender lips the downy heare Did now but freshly spring, and silken blossoms beare.

LXXX

His warlike armes, the ydle instruments
Of sleeping praise, were hong upon a tree,
And his brave shield, full of old moni-
ments,
Was fowly ra'st, that none the signes might
see;
Ne for them, ne for honour, cared hee, Ne ought that did to his advaancement
tend,
But in lewd loves, and wastfull luxuree, His dayes, his goods, his bodie he did
spend:
O horrible enchantment, that him so did blend !

LXXXI

The noble Elfe and carefull palmer drew So nigh them, minding nought but lustfull
game,
That sudein forth they on them rusht, and
threw
A subtile net, which only for that same
The skilfull palmer formally did frame:
So held them under fast, the whiles the
rest
Fled all away for feare of fowler shame.

The faire enchauntresse, so unwares oppressed, Tryde all her arts and all her sleights, thence out to wrest.

LXXXII

And eke her lover strove: but all in vaine;
 For that same net so cunningly was wound,
 That neither guile nor force might it distraine.
 They tooke them both, and both them strongly bound In captive bandes, which there they readie found:
 But her in chaines of adamant he tyde;
 For nothing else might keepe her safe and sound;
 But Verdant (so he hight) he soone untyde,
 And counsell sage in steed thereof to him applyde.

LXXXIII

But all those pleasaunt bowres and pallace brave Guyon broke downe, with rigour pittillesse; Ne ought their goodly workmanship might save Them from the tempest of his wrathfulnesse,
 But that their blisse he turn'd to balefulnesse:
 Their groves he feld, their gardins did deface,
 Their arbers spoyle, their cabinets suppressse,
 Their banket houses burne, their buildings race,
 And, of the fayrest late, now made the fowlest place.

LXXXIV

Then led they her away, and eke that knight
 They with them led, both sorrowfull and sad:
 The way they came, the same retourn'd they right, Till they arrived where they lately had Charm'd those wild-beasts, that rag'd with furie mad:
 Which, now awaking, fierce at them gan fly,

As in their mistresse reskew, whom they lad;
 But them the palmer soone did pacify.
 Then Guyon askt, what meant those beastes which there did ly.

LXXXV

Sayd he: 'These seeming beasts are men indeed, Whom this enchauntresse hath transformed thus,
 Whylome her lovers, which her lustes did feed,
 Now turned into figures hideous, According to their mindes like monstrous.'
 'Sad end,' quoth he, 'of life intemperate, And mournefull meed of joyes delicious!
 But, palmer, if it mote thee so aggrate, Let them returned be unto their former state.'

LXXXVI

Streight way he with his vertuous staffe them strooke,
 And streight of beastes they comely men became;
 Yet being men they did unmanly looke,
 And stared ghastly, some for inward shame,
 And some for wrath, to see their captive dame:
 But one above the rest in speciall,
 That had an hog beene late, hight Grylle by name, Repyned greatly, and did him miscall,
 That had from hoggish forme him brought to naturall.

LXXXVII

Saide Guyon: 'See the mind of beastly man, That hath so soone forgot the excellence Of his creation, when he life began,
 That now he chooseth, with vile difference,
 To be a beast, and lacke intelligence.'
 To whom the palmer thus: 'The donghill kinde Delights in filth and fowle incontinence:
 Let Gryll be Gryll, and have his hoggish minde;
 But let us hence depart, whilst wether serves and winde.'

THE THIRDE BOOKE
OF THE FAERIE QUEENE
CONTAYNING
THE LEGEND OF BRITOMARTIS OR OF CHASTITY

I

It falls me here to write of Chastity,
That fayrest vertue, far above the rest;
For which what needes me fetch from Faery Forreine ensamples, it to have exprest?
Sith it is shrined in my Soveraines brest,
And fornd so lively in each perfect part,
That to all ladies, which have it profest, Neede but behold the pourtraict of her hart,
If pourtrayd it might bee by any living art.

II

But living art may not least part expresse, Nor life-resembling pencill it can paynt,
All were it Zeuxis or Praxiteles:
His dædale hand would faile, and greatly faynt,
And her perfections with his error taynt:
Ne poets witt, that passeth painter farre
In picturing the parts of beauty daynt, So hard a workemanship adventure darre, For fear through want of words her excellence to marre.

III

How then shall I, apprentice of the skill That whilome in divinest wits did rayne, Presume so high to stretch mine humble
quill?
Yet now my luckelesse lott doth me constrayne
Hereto perforce. But, O dredd Soverayne, Thus far forth pardon, sith that choicest witt
Cannot your glorious pourtraict figure
playne,
That I in colourd showes may shadow itt, And antique praises unto present persons fitt.

IV

But if in living colours, and right hew, Your selfe you covet to see pictured,
Who can it doe more lively, or more
trew,

Then that sweete verse, with nectar sprinck-
led,
In which a gracious servaunt pictured His Cynthia, his heavens fayrest light?
That with his melting sweetnes ravished,
And with the wonder of her beames bright,
My senses lulled are in slomber of delight,

V

But let that same delicious poet lend A little leave unto a rusticke Muse To sing his mistresse prayse, and let him mend,
If ought amis her liking may abuse:
Ne let his fayrest Cynthia refuse, In mirrours more then one her selfe to
see,
But either Gloriana let her chuse,
Or in Belphæbe fashioned to bee:
In th' one her rule, in th' other her rare chastitee.

CANTO I

Guyon encountreth Britomart: Fayre Florimell is chased:
Duessaes traines and Malecastaes champions are defaced.

I

THE famous Briton Prince and Faery
knight,
After long wayes and perilous paines endur'd,
Having their weary limbes to perfect plight Restord, and sory wounds right well recur'd,
Of the faire Alma greatly were procur'd
To make there lenger sojourn and abode;
But when thereto they might not be allur'd From seeking praise and deeds of armes abrode,
They courteous conge tooke, and forth together yode.

II

But the captiv'd Acrasia he sent,
Because of travell long, a nigher way,
With a strong gard, all reskew to prevent,
And her to Faery court safe to convey,
That her for witnes of his hard assay Unto his Faery Queene he might present:
But he him selfe betooke another way,
To make more triall of his hardiment,
And seeke adventures, as he with Prince Arthure went.

III

Long so they traveled through wastefull wayes, Where daungers dwelt, and perils most did wonne,
 To hunt for glory and renowned prayse:
 Full many countreyes they did overronne,
 From the uprising to the setting sunne,
 And many hard adventures did atchieve;
 Of all the which they honour ever wonne, Seeking the weake oppressed to relieve,
 And to recover right for such as wrong did grieve.

IV

At last, as through an open plaine they yode,
 They spide a knight, that towards pricked fayre;
 And him beside an aged squire there rode,
 That seemd to couch under his shield three-square,
 As if that age badd him that burden spare,
 And yield it those that stouter could it wield:
 He them espying, gan him selfe prepare,
 And on his arme addressse his goodly shield,
 That bore a lion passant in a golden field.

Which seeing good Sir Guyon, deare besought
 The Prince, of grace, to let him ronne that turne.
 He graunted: then the Faery quickly raught His poynant speare, and sharply gan it spurne His fomy steed, whose fiery feete did burne
 The verdant gras, as he thereon did tread;
 Ne did the other backe his foote returne,
 But fiercely forward came withouten dread,
 And bent his dreadful speare against the others head.

VI

They beene ymett, and both theyr points arriv'd;
 But Guyon drove so furious and fell,
 That seemd both shield and plate it would have riv'd: Nathelesse it bore his foe not from his sell,
 But made him stagger, as he were not well:
 But Guyon selfe, ere well he was aware,

Nigh a speares length behind his crouper fell;
 Yet in his fall so well him selfe he bare,
 That mischievous mischaunce his life and limbs did spare.

Great shame and sorrow of that fall he tooke;
 For never yet, sith warlike armes he bore,
 And shivering speare in bloody field first shooke,
 He fownd him selfe dishonored so sore.
 Ah! gentlest knight that ever armor bore, Let not thee grieve dismounted to have beene,
 And brought to grownd, that never wast before;
 For not thy fault, but secret powre unseene:
 That speare enchanted was, which layd thee on the greene.

VIII

But weenedst thou what wight thee overthrow,
 Much greater grieve and shamefuller regret For thy hard fortune then thou wouldst renew,
 That of a single damzell thou wert mett
 On equal plaine, and there so hard besett: Even the famous Britomart it was,
 Whom straunge adventure did from Britayne fett, To seeke her lover, (love far sought, alas!)
 Whose image shee had seene in Venus looking glas.

IX

Full of disdainfull wrath, he fierce arose,
 For to revenge that fowle reprochfull shaune,
 And snatching his bright sword, began to close With her on foot, and stoutly forward came;
 Dye rather would he then endure that same.
 Which when his palmer saw, he gan to feare
 His toward perill and untoward blame,
 Which by that new reconcounter he should reare:
 For death sate on the point of that enchanted speare.

X

And hasting towards him gan fayre perswade,
 Not to provoke misfortune, nor to weene His speares default to mend with cruell
 blade:
 For by his mightie science he had seene
 The secrete vertue of that weapon keene, That mortall puissaunce mote not with-
 stand:
 Nothing on earth mote alwaies happy beene.
 Great hazard were it, and adventure fond,
 To loose long gotten honour with one evill hond.

XI

By such good meanes he him discourselled From prosecuting his revenging rage;
 And eke the Prince like treaty handeled,
 His wrathfull will with reason to aswage,
 And laid the blame, not to his carriage,
 But to his starting steed, that swarv'd asyde,
 And to the ill purveyaunce of his page,
 That had his furnitures not firmly tyde:
 So is his angry corage fairly pacifyde.

XII

Thus reconcilment was betweene them
 knitt,
 Through goodly temperaunce and affection chaste;
 And either vovd with all their power and witt,
 To let not others honour be defaste
 Of friend or foe, who ever it embaste, Ne armes to beare against the others syde:
 In which accord the Prince was also plaste,
 And with that golden chaine of concord
 tyde.
 So goodly all agreed, they forth yfere did ryde.

XIII

O goodly usage of those antique tymes,
 In which the sword was servaunt unto right!
 When not for malice and contentious crymes,
 But all for prayse, and proove of manly
 might,
 The martiall brood accustomed to fight:
 Then honour was the meed of victory,
 And yet the vanquished had no despight:
 Let later age that noble use envy, Vyle rancor to avoid, and cruel sur-quedry.

XIV

Long they thus traueiled in friendly wise, Through countreyes waste and eke well edifyde,
 Seeking adventures hard, to exercise Their puissaunce, whylome full dernly
 tryde:
 At length they came into a forest wyde, Whose hideous horror and sad trembling
 sownd
 Full griesly seemd: therein they long did
 ryde, Yet tract of living creature none they
 fownd,
 Save beares, lyons, and buls, which romed them arownd.

XV

All suddenly out of the thickest brush, Upon a milkwhite palfrey all alone,
 A goodly lady did foreby them rush, Whose face did seeme as cleare as christall
 stone,
 And eke through feare as white as whales bone:
 Her garments all were wrought of beaten
 gold,
 And all her steed with tinsell trappings
 shone,
 Which fledd so fast that nothing mote him
 hold,
 And scarce them leasure gave, her passing to behold.

XVI

Still as she fledd her eye she backward
 threw,
 As fearing evill that poursewd her fast;
 And her faire yellow locks behind her flew,
 Loosely disperst with puff of every blast:
 All as a blazing starre doth farre outcast His hearie beames, and flaming lockes disspredd,
 At sight whereof the people stand aghast:
 But the sage wisard telles, as he has redd,
 That it importunes death and dolefull dre-ryhedd.

XVII

So as they gazed after her a while,
 Lo! where a griesly foster forth did rush, Breathing out beastly lust her to defyle:
 His tyrelng jade he fiersly forth did push, Through thicke and thin, both over banck and bush.

In hope her to attaine by hooke or crooke,
That from his gory sydes the blood did gush:
Large were his limbes, and terrible his
looke,
And in his clownish hand a sharp bore speare he shooke.

XVIII

Which outrage when those gentle knights
did see,
Full of great envy and fell gealosity, They stayd not to avise who first should
bee,
But all spurd after fast as they mote fly,
To reskew her from shamefull villany.
The Prince and Guyon equally bylive Her selfe pursewd, in hope to win thereby Most goodly meede, the fairest dame alive:
But after the foule foster Timias did strive.

XIX

The whiles faire Britomart, whose constant
mind
Would not so lightly follow beauties chace, Ne reckt of ladies love, did stay behynd,
And them awayted there a certaine space, To weet if they would turne backe to that
place:
But when she saw them gone, she forward
went,
As lay her journey, through that perlous
pace,
With stedfast corage and stout hardiment; Ne evil thing she feard, ne evill thing she
ment.

XX

At last, as nigh out of the wood she came,
A stately castle far away she spyde,
To which her steps directly she did frame.
That castle was most goodly edifyde, And plaste for pleasure nigh that forrest
syde:
But faire before the gate a spatious playne, Mantled with greene, it selfe did spredden
wyde,
On which she saw six knights, that did darrayne Fiers battaill against one, with cruel might and mayne.

XXI

Mainely they all attonce upon him laid,
And sore beset on every side arownd,

That nigh he breathlesse grew, yet nought
dismaid,
Ne ever to them yielded foot of grownd, All had he lost much blood through many a wownd,
But stoutly dealt his blowes, and every way,
To which he turned in his wrathfull stownd,
Made them recoile, and fly from dredd decay, That none of all the six before him durst assay.

XXII

Like dastard cures, that, having at a bay
The salvage beast embost in wearie chace, Dare not adventure on the stubborne pray, Ne byte before, but rome from place to
place,
To get a snatch, when turned is his face.
In such distresse and doubtfull jeopardy
When Britomart him saw, she ran apace Unto his reskew, and with earnest cry Badd those same sixe forbear that single enimy.

XXIII

But to her cry they list not lenden eare, Ne ought the more their mightie strokes
surceasse,
But gathering him rownd about more neare,
Their direfull rancour rather did encrease; Till that she, rushing through the thickest
preasse,
Perforce disparted their compacted gyre,
And soone compeld to hearken unto peace:
Tho gan she myldly of them to inquire The cause of their dissention and outrageous
yre.

XXIV

Whereto that single knight did answer
frame:
'These six would me enforce by oddes of
might,
To change my liefe, and love another
dame,
That death me liefer were then such de-
spight,
So unto wrong to yield my wrested right:
For I love one, the truest one on grownd, Ne list me change; she th' Errant Dam-zell hight;
For whose deare sake full many a bitter
stownd
I have endurd, and tasted many a bloody wownd.'

XXV

‘ Certes,’ said she, ‘ then beene ye sixe to blame, To weene your wrong by force to justify:
For knight to leave his lady were great shame,
That faithfull is, and better were to dy.
All losse is lesse, and lesse the infamy, Then losse of love to him that loves but one:
Ne may love be compeld by maistry;
For soone as maistry comes, sweet Love anone Taket hys nimble winges, and soone away is gone.’

XXVI

Then spake one of those six: ‘ There dwell-eth here, Within this castle wall, a lady fayre,
Whose soveraine beautie hath no living pere;
Thereto so bounteous and so debonayre,
That never any mote with her compayre.
She hath ordaind this law, which we approve,
That every knight, which doth this way repayre,
In case he have no lady nor no love, Shall doe unto her service, never to remove.’

XXVII

‘ But if he have a lady or a love,
Then must he her forgoe with fowle defame,
Or els with us by dint of sword approve,
That she is fairer then our fairest dame;
As did this knight, before ye hether came.’
‘ Perdy,’ said Britomart, ‘ the choise is hard:
But what reward had he that overcame?’
‘ He should advanced bee to high regard,’
Said they, ‘ and have our ladies love for his reward.’

XXVIII

‘ Therefore aread, sir, if thou have a love.’ ‘ Love have I sure,’ quoth she, ‘ but lady none; Yet will I not fro mine owne love remove,
Ne to your lady will I service done,
But wreake your wronges wrought to this knight alone,
And prove his cause.’ With that, her mortall speare She mightly aventred towards one,

And downe him smot ere well aware he weare;
Then to the next she rode, and downe the next did beare.

XXIX

Ne did she stay, till three on ground she layd,
That none of them him selfe could reare againe;
The fourth was by that other knight dismayd,
All were he wearie of his former paine,
That now there do but two of six remaine;
Which two did yield before she did them smight.
‘ Ah!’ said she then, ‘ now may ye all see plaine, That truth is strong, and trew love most of might,
That for his trusty servaunts doth so strongly fight.’

XXX

‘ Too well we see,’ saide they, ‘ and prove too well Our faulty weakenes, and your matchlesse might:
Forthy, faire sir, yours be the damozell,
Which by her owne law to your lot doth light,
And we your liege men faith unto you plight.’
So underneath her feet their swords they mard,
And after, her besought, well as they might,
To enter in and reape the dew reward:
She graunted, and then in they all together far’d.

XXXI

Long were it to describe the goodly frame
And stately port of Castle Joyeous, (For so that eastle hight by comun name)
Where they were entertaynd with courteous And comely glee of many gracious Faire ladies, and of many a gentle knight, Who through a chamber lough and spacious,
Eftsoones them brought unto their ladies sight,
That of them cleeped was the Lady of Delight.

XXXII

But for to tell the sumptuous aray
Of that great chamber should be labour
lost:

For living wit, I weene, cannot display
The roiall riches and exceeding cost Of every pillour and of every post;
Which all of purest bullion framed were,
And with great perles and pretious stones embost,
That the bright glister of their beames
cleare
Did sparckle forth great light, and glorious did appeare.

XXXIII

These stranger knights, through passing, forth were led

Into an inner rowme, whose royaltie
And rich purveyance might weath be red; Mote princes place besee me so deckt to
bee.

Which stately manner when as they did see,
The image of superfluous riotize, Exceeding much the state of meane degree, They greatly wondred whence so sumptuous guize

Might be maintaynd, and each gan diversely devize.

XXXIV

The wals were round about appareiled
With costly clothes of Arras and of Toure,
In which with cunning hand was pourtrahed
The love of Venus and her paranoure,
The fayre Adonis, turned to a flowre,
A worke of rare device and wondrous wit.
First did it shew the bitter balefull stowre, Which her assayd with many a fervent
fit,

When first her tender hart was with his beautie smit:

XXXV

Then with what sleights and sweet allurements she

Entyst the boy, as well that art she knew,
And wooed him her paramoure to bee; Now making girlonds of each flowre that
grew,

To crowne his golden lockes with honour
dew;

Now leading him into a secret shade From his beauperes, and from bright heavens vew,

Where him to sleepe she gently would per-
swade,
Or bathe him in a fountaine by some covert glade.

XXXVI

And whilst he slept, she over him would
spred

Her mantle, colour'd like the starry skyes,
And her soft arme lay underneath his hed,
And with ambrosiall kisses bathe his eyes;
And whilst he bath'd, with her two crafty
spyes

She secretly would search each daintie lim,
And throw into the well sweet rosemaryes,
And fragrant violets, and paunces trim,
And ever with sweet nectar she did sprinkle him.

XXXVII

So did she steale his heedelesse hart away,
And joyd his love in secret unespyde.

But for she saw him bent to cruell play,
To hunt the salvage beast in Forrest wyde, Dreadfull of daunger, that mote him betyde,
She oft and oft adviz'd him to refraine From chase of greater beastes, whose brutish pryde

Mote breede him scath unwares: but all in
vaine;

For who can shun the chance that dest'ny doth ordaine ?

XXXVIII

Lo! where beyond he lyeth languishing, Deadly engored of a great wilde bore,
And by his side the goddesse groveling Makes for him endlesse mone, and ever-
more

With her soft garment wipes away the gore, Which staynes his snowy skin with hatefull
hew:

But when she saw no helpe might him restore,

Him to a dainty flowre she did transmew, Which in that cloth was wrought, as if it lively grew.

XXXIX

So was that chamber clad in goodly wize:
And rownd about it many beds were dight,
As whylome was the antique worldes guize,
Some for untimely ease, some for delight, As pleased them to use, that use it might:
And all was full of damzels and of squyres,

Dauncing and reveling both day and night,
And swimming deepe in sensuall desyres;
And Cupid still emongest them kindled lust-full fyres.

XL

And all the while sweet musicke did divide
Her looser notes with Lydian harmony;
And all the while sweet birdes thereto applide
Their daintie layes and dulcet melody, Ay caroling of love and jollity, That wonder was to heare their trim consort.
Which when those knights beheld, with scornefull eye,
They sdeigned such lascivious disport, And loath'd the loose demeanure of that wanton sort.

XLI

Thence they were brought to that great ladies vew, Whom they found sitting on a sumptuous
bed,
That glistred all with gold and glorious
shew,
As the proud Persian queenes accustomed:
She seemd a woman of great bountihed
And of rare beautie, saying that askaunce Her wanton eyes, ill signes of womanhed, Did roll too lightly, and too often glauunce, Without regard of grace or comely amen-aunce.

XLII

Long worke it were, and needlesse, to devise Their goodly entertainement and great glee:
She caused them be led in courteous wize Into a bowre, disarmed for to be,
And cheared well with wine and spiceree:
The Rederosse Knight was soone disarmed
there,
But the brave mayd would not disarmed
bee,
But onely vented up her umbriere.
And so did let her goodly visage to appere.

XLIII

As when fayre Cynthia, in darkesome night,
Is in a noyous cloud enveloped, Where she may finde the substance thin and light Breakes forth her silver beames, and her bright hed

Discovers to the world discomfited;
Of the poore traveler, that went astray,
With thousand blessings she is heried;
Such was the beautie and the shining ray,
With which fayre Britomart gave ligth unto the day.

XLIV

And eke those six, which lately with her
fought,
Now were disarmd, and did them selves
present
Unto her vew, and company unsought;
For they all seemed courteous and gent,
And all sixe brethren, borne of one parent,
Which had them traynd in all civillitee,
And goodly taught to tilt and turnament;
Now were they liegmen to this ladie free,
And her knights service ought, to hold of her in fee.

XLV

The first of them by name Gardante hight,
A jolly person, and of comely vew;
The second was Parlante, a bold knight,
And next to him Jocante did ensew; Basciante did him selfe most courteous
shew;
But fierce Bacchante seemd too fell and
keene;
And yett in armes Noctante greater grew:
All were faire knights, and goodly well be-
seene,
But to faire Britomart they all but shad-owes beene.

XLVI

For shee was full of amiable grace,
And manly terror mixed therewithall,
That as the one stird up affections bace,
So th' other did mens rash desires apall,
And hold them backe, that would in error
fall;
As hee that hath espide a vermeill rose,
To which sharpe thornes and breres the way forstall, Dare not for dread his hardy hand expose,
But wishing it far off, his ydle wish doth lose.

XLVII

Whom when the lady saw so faire a wight,
All ignorant of her contrary sex,

(For shee her weend a fresh and lusty knight) Shee greatly gan enamoured to wex,
 And with vaine thoughts her falsed fancy vex:
 Her fickle hart conceived hasty fyre,
 Like sparkes of fire which fall in sclender flex,
 That shortly brent into extreme desyre,
 And ransackt all her veines with passion entyre.

XLVIII

Eftsoones shee grew to great impatience,
 And into termes of open outrage brust,
 That plaine discovered her incontinence, Ne rekt shee who her meaning did mistrust;
 For she was given all to fleshly lust,
 And poured forth in sensuall delight,
 That all regard of shame she had discust,
 And meet respect of honor putt to flight:
 So shamelesse beauty soone becomes a loathly sight.

XLIX

Faire ladies, that to love captived arre,
 And chaste desires doe nourish in your mind, Let not her fault your sweete affections marre, Ne blott the bounty of all womankind,
 'Mongst thousands good one wanton dame to find:
 Emongst the roses grow some wicked weeds:
 For this was not to love, but lust, inclind;
 For love does alwaies bring forth bounteous deeds,
 And in each gentle hart desire of honor breeds.

L

Nought so of love this looser dame did skill,
 But as a cole to kindle fleshly flame, Giving the bridle to her wanton will,
 And treading under foote her honest name:
 Such love is hate, and such desire is shame.
 Still did she rove at her with crafty glauce
 Of her false eies, that at her hart did ayme,
 And told her meaning in her countenance;
 But Britomart dissembled it with ignorance.

LI

Supper was shortly dight, and downe they satt;
 Where they were served with all sumptuous fare, Whiles fruitfull Ceres and Lyæus fatt Poured out their plenty, without spight or spare:
 Nought wanted there that dainty was and rare;
 And aye the cups their baneks did overflow,
 And aye, betweene the cups, she did prepare Way to her love, and seeret darts did throw;
 But Britomart would not such guilfull message know.

LII

So when they slaked had the fervent heat
 Of appetite with meates of every sort,
 The lady did faire Britomart entreat,
 Her to disarme, and with delightfull sport
 To loose her warlike limbs and strong effort:
 But when shee mote not thereunto be wonne, (For shee her sexe under that straunge purport Did use to hide, and plaine apparaunce shonne,) In playner wise to tell her grievancee she begonne.

LIII

And all atonce discovered her desire
 With sighes, and sobs, and plaints, and piteous grieve,
 The outward sparkes of her inburning fire;
 Which spent in vaine, at last she told her brieve,
 That, but if she did lend her short reliefe,
 And doe her comfort, she mote algates dye.
 But the chaste damzell, that had never priefe
 Of such malengine and fine forgerye, Did easly belevee her strong extremitye.

LIV

Full easy was for her to have beliefe,
 Who by self-feeling of her feeble sexe,
 And by long triall of the inward grieve, Wherewith imperious love her hart did vexe, Could judge what paines doe loving harts perplexe.
 Who meanes no guile, be guiled soonest shall,
 And to faire semblaunce doth light faith annexe:

The bird, that knowes not the false fowlers
call,
Into his hidden nett full easely doth fall.

LV

Forthy she would not in discourteise wise Scorne the faire offer of good will profest;
For great rebuke it is, love to despise,
Or rudely sdeigne a gentle harts request;
But with faire countenance, as beseemed
best,
Her entertaynd; nath'lesse shee inly deemd Her love too light, to wooe a wandring
guest:
Which she misconstruing, thereby esteemd That from like inward fire that outward smoke had steemd.

LVI

Therewith a while she her flit fancy fedd, Till she mote winne fit time for her desire, But yet her wound still inward freshly bledd,
And through her bones the false instilled fire Did spred it selfe, and venime close inspire.
Tho were the tables taken all away,
And every knight, and every gentle squire Gan choose his dame with bascomani gay, With whom he ment to make his sport and courtly play.

LVII

Some fell to daunce, some fel to hazardry, Some to make love, some to make mery-
ment,
As diverse witts to diverse things apply;
And all the while faire Maleeasta bent Her crafty engins to her close intent.
By this th' eternall lampes, wherewith high
Jove
Doth light the lower world, were halfe yspent,
And the moist daughters of huge Atlas
strove
Into the ocean deepe to drive their weary drove.

LVIII

High time it seemed then for everie wight
Them to betake unto their kindly rest:
Eftesoones long waxen torches weren light.
Unto their bowres to gouden every guest:
Tho, when the Britonesse saw all the rest Avoided quite, she gan her selfe despoile,
And safe committ to her soft fethered nest,

Wher through long watch, and late daies weary toile,
She soundly slept, and carefull thoughts did quite assoile.

LIX

Now whenas all the world in silence deepe Yshrowded was, and every mortall wight Was drowned in the depth of deadly sleepe, Faire Maleeasta, whose engrieved spright Could find no rest in such perplexed plight, Lightly arose out of her wearie bed,
And, under the blacke vele of guilty night,
Her with a searlott mantle covered,
That was with gold and ermines faire enveloped.

LX

Then panting softe, and trembling every
joynt,
Her fearfull feete towards the bowre she mov'd,
Where she for secret purpose did appoynt
To lodge the warlike maide, unwisely loov'd;
And to her bed approaching, first she prov'd Whether she slept or wakte; with her softe
hand
She softly felt if any member moov'd,
And leut her wary eare to understand If any puffe of breath or signe of sence shee fond.

LXI

Which whenas none she fond, with easy shifte,
For feare least her unwares she should abrayd,
Th' embroderd quilt she lightly up did lifte,
And by her side her selfe she softly layd,
Of every finest fingers touch affrayd;
Ne any noise she made, ne word she spake,
But inly sigh'd. At last the royall mayd Out of her quiet slomber did awake, And chaungd her weary side, the better ease to take.

LXII

Where feeling one close couched by her
side,
She lightly lept out of her filed bedd,
And to her weapon ran, in minde to gride
The loathed leachour. But the dame, halfe
dedd Through suddein feare and ghastly dreri-
hedd,

Did shriek alowd, that through the hous it rong,
 And the whole family, therewith adredd, Rashly out of their rouzed couches sprong,
 And to the troubled chamber all in armes did throug.

LXIII

And those sixe knights, that ladies champions,
 And eke the Redcrosse Knight ran to the
 stownd,
 Halfe armd and halfe unarmd, with them attons:
 Where when confusedly they came, they
 fownd
 Their lady lying on the sencelesse grownd; On thother side, they saw the warlike
 mayd
 Al in her snow-white smoeke, with locks unbownd, Threatning the point of her avenging blaed;
 That with so troublous terror they were all dismayd.

LXIV

About their ladye first they flockt arownd;
 Whom having laid in comfortable couch, Shortly they reard out of her frozen
 swownd;
 And afterwarde they gan with fowle reproch
 To stirre up strife, and troublous contecke broch:
 But, by ensample of the last dayes losse,
 None of them rashly durst to her approach, Ne in so glorious spoile themselves embosse:
 Her succourd eke the champion of the bloody crosse.

LXV

But one of those sixe knights, Gardante
 hight,
 Drew out a deadly bow and arrow keene,
 Which forth he sent with felonous despight,
 And fell intent, against the virgin sheene:
 The mortall steele stayd not till it was
 seene
 To gore her side; yet was the wound not
 deepe,
 But lightly rased her soft silken skin,
 That drops of purple blood thereout did
 weepe,
 Which did her lilly smoeck with staines of vermeil steep.

LXVI

Wherewith enrag'd, she fiercely at them
 flew,
 And with her flaming sword about her layd, That none of them foule mischiefe could
 eschew,
 But with her dreadfull strokes were all dis-
 mayd:
 Here, there, and every where about her swayd
 Her wrathfull steele, that none mote it
 abyde;
 And eke the Redcrosse Knight gave her good
 ayd,
 Ay joyning foot to foot, and syde to syde, That in short space their foes they have quite terrifyde.

LXVII

Tho whenas all were put to shamefull flight,
 The noble Britomartis her arayd,
 And her bright armes about her body dight:
 For nothing would she lenger there be
 stayd,
 Where so loose life, and so ungentle trade, Was usd of knights and ladies seeming
 gent:
 So, carely, ere the grosse earthes gryesy
 shade
 Was all disperst out of the firmament, They tooke their steeds, and forth upon their journey went.

CANTO II

The Redcrosse Knight to Britomart Describeth Artegall:
 The wondrous myrrhour, by which she
 In love with him did fall.

I

HERE have I cause in men just blame to
 find,
 That in their proper praise too partiall bee,
 And not indifferent to woman kind,
 To whom no share in armes and chevalree
 They doe impart, ne maken memoree
 Of their brave gestes and prowesse martiall: Scarse doe they spare to one. or two, or three,
 Rowme in their writtes; yet the same writing small Does all their deedes deface, and dims their glories all.

II

But by record of antique times I finde, That wemen wont in warres to beare most
sway,
And to all great exploites them selves inclind:
Of which they still the girlond bore away,
Till envious men, fearing their rules decay, Gan coyne streight lawes to curb their liberty:
Yet sith they warlike armes have laide
away,
They have exceld in artes and pollicy, That now we foolish men that prayse gin eke t' envy.

III

Of warlike puissaunce in ages spent, Be thou, faire Britomart, whose prayse I wryte;
But of all wisdom bee thou precedent, O souveraine Queene, whose prayse I would endyte, Endite I would as dewtie doth excyte;
But ah! my rymes to rude and rugged arre,
When in so high an object they doe lyte,
And, striving fit to make, I feare doe
marre:
Thy selfe thy praises tell, and make them knownen farre.

IV

She, travailing with Guyon, by the way Of sondry thinges faire purpose gan to find,
T' abridg their journey long and lingring
day:
Mongst which it fell into that Fairies mind To aske this Briton maid, what uncouth
wind Brought her into those partes, and what inquest Made her dissemble her disguised kind:
Faire lady she him seemd, like lady drest, But fairest knight alive, when armed was her brest.

V

Thereat she sighing softly, had no powre To speake a while, ne ready answer make,
But with hart-thrilling throbs and bitter
stowre,
As if she had a fever fitt, did quake,
And every daintie limbe with horroure
shake,
And ever and anone the rosy red

Flasht through her face, as it had beene a flake
Of lightning through bright heven ful-mined:
At last, the passion past, she thus him answered:

VI

'Faire sir, I let you weete, that from the
howre
I taken was from nourses tender pap,
I have beene trained up in warlike stowre,
To tossen speare and shield, and to affrap
The warlike ryder to his most mishap:
Sithence I loathed have my life to lead,
As ladies wont, in pleasures wanton lap,
To finger the fine needle and nyce thread;
Me lever were with point of foemans speare be dead.

VII

'All my delight on deedes of armes is sett,
To hunt out perilles and adventures hard,
By sea, by land, where so they may be mett, Onely for honour and for high regard,
Without respect of richesse or reward.
For such intent into these partes I came,
Withouten compasse or withouten card,
Far fro my native soyle, that is by name The Greater Brytayne, here to seeke for praise and fame.

VIII

'Fame blazed hath, that here in Faery Lond Doe many famous knightes and ladies woune,
And many straunge adventures to bee fond,
Of which great worth and worship may be
wonne;
Which I to prove, this voyage have be-
gonne.
But mote I weet of you, right courteous
knight,
Tydings of one, that hath unto me donne Late foule dishonour and reprochfull spight, The which I seeke to wreake, and Arthegall he hight.'

IX

The word gone out she backe againe would
call,
As her repenting so to have missayd,
But that he it uptaking ere the fall,
Her shortly answered: 'Faire martiall
mayd,

Certes ye misavised beene, t' upbrayd
A gentle knight with so unknighly blame:
For weet ye well, of all that ever playd
At tilt or tourney, or like warlike game, The noble Arthegall hath ever borne the name.

X

'Forty great wonder were it, if such
shame
Should ever enter in his bounteous thought,
Or ever doe that mote deserven blame:
The noble corage never weeneth ought,
That may unworthy of it selfe be thought.
Therefore, faire damzell, be ye well aware, Least that too farre ye have your sorrow
sought:
You and your cuntry both I wish welfare, And honour both; for each of other worthy are.'

XI

The royall maid woxe inly wondrous glad,
To heare her love so highly magnifyde, And joyd that ever she affixed had Her hart on knight so goodly glorifyde, How ever finely she it faind to hyde:
The loving mother, that nine monethes did
beare,
In the deare closett of her painefull syde,
Her tender babe, it seeing safe appeare, Doth not so much rejoyce as she rejoyced theare.

XII

But to occasion him to further talke,
To feed her humor with his pleasing style, Her list in stryfull termes with him to balke,
And thus replyde: 'How ever, sir, ye fyle Your courteous tongne, his prayes to com-
pyle,
It ill besemes a knight of gentle sort,
Such as ye have him boasted, to beguyle
A simple maide, and worke so hainous tort,
In shame of knighthood, as I largely can report.

XIII

'Let bee therefore my vengeaunce to dis-
swade,
And read, where I that faytour false may
find.'
'Ah! but if reason faire might you per-
swade

To slake your wrath, and mollify your
mind,'
Said he, 'perhaps ye should it better find:
For hardie thing it is, to weene by might That man to hard conditions to bind, Or ever hope to match in equall fight, Whose prowesse paragone saw never living
wight.

XIV

'Ne soothlich is it easie for to read Where now on earth, or how, he may be
fownd;
For he ne wommeth in one certeine stead,
But restlesse walketh all the world arownd, Ay doing thinges that to his fame redownd, Defending ladies cause and orphans right, Where so he heares that any doth confownd Them comfortlesse, through tyranny or
might:
So is his sovaine honour raise to heavens
hight.'

XV

His feeling wordes her feeble sence much
pleased,
And softly sunck into her molten hart:
Hart that is inly hurt is greatly eased With hope of thing that may allegge his
smart;
For pleasing wordes are like to magick
art,
That doth the charmed snake in slomber
lay:
Such secrete ease felt gentle Britomart, Yet list the same efforce with faind gaine-
say:
So dishord ofte in musick makes the sweeter lay:

XVI

And sayd: 'Sir knight, these ydle termes forbeare,
And sith it is uneach to finde his haunt,
Tell me some markes by which he may ap-
peare,
If chauce I him encounter paravaunt;
For perdy one shall other slay, or daunt:
What shape, what shield, what armes, what steed, what stedd,
And what so else his person most may
vaunt.'
All which the Rederosse Knight to point aredd,
And him in everie part before her fashioned

XVII

Yet him in everie part before she knew, How ever list her now her knowledge fayne, Sith him whylome in Brytayne she did vew,
 To her revealed in a mirrhour playne, Whereof did grow her first engrafted payne, Whose root and stalke so bitter yet did
 taste,
 That, but the fruit more sweetnes did con-
 tayne,
 Her wretched dayes in dolour she mote
 waste,
 And yield the pray of love to lothsome death at last.

XVIII

By straunge occasion she did him behold, And much more straungely gan to love his
 sight,
 As it in bookes hath written beene of old.
 In Deheubarth, that now South-Wales is
 hight,
 What time King Ryence raign'd and dealed
 right,
 The great magicien Merlin had deviz'd, By his deepe science and hell-dreaded
 might,
 A looking glasse, right wondrously aguiz'd, Whose vertues through the wyde worlde soone were solemniz'd.

XIX

It vertue had to shew in perfect sight
 What ever thing was in the world contaynd, Betwixt the lowest earth and hevens hight,
 So that it to the looker appertaynd; What ever foe had wrought, or frend had faynd,
 Therein discovered was, ne ought mote pas, Ne ought in secret from the same remaynd; Forthy it round and hollow shaped was,
 Like to the world it selfe, and seemd a world of glas.

XX

Who wonders not, that reades so wonder-ous worke?
 But who does wonder, that has red the
 towre,
 Wherein th' Aegyptian Phao long did lurke From all mens vew, that none might her discoure, Yet she might all men vew out of her
 bowre?

Great Ptolomæe it for his lemans sake Ybuidled all of glasse, by magicke powre, And also it impregnable did make;
 Yet when his love was false, he with a peaze it brake.

XXI

Such was the glassy globe, that Merlin
 made,
 And gave unto King Ryence for his gard, That never foes his kingdome might in-
 vade,
 But he it knew at home before he hard Tydings thereof, and so them still debar'd.
 It was a famous present for a prince,
 And worthy worke of infinite reward, That treasons could bewray, and foes convince:
 Happy this realme, had it remayned ever since!

XXII

One day it fortun'd fayre Britomart Into her fathers closet to repayre;
 For nothing he from her reserv'd apart,
 Being his onely daughter and his hayre:
 Where when she had espyde that mirrhour
 fayre,
 Her selfe awhile therein she vewd in vaine;
 Tho her avizing of the vertues rare
 Which thereof spoken were, she gan againe Her to bethinke of that mote to her selfe pertaine.

XXIII

But as it falleth, in the gentlest harts Imperious Love hath highest set his throne,
 And tyrannizeth in the bitter smarts Of them that to him buxome are and prone:
 So thought this mayd (as maydens use to done)
 Whom fortune for her husband would allot;
 Not that she lusted after any one,
 For she was pure from blame of sinfull blot, Yet wist her life at last must lincke in that same knot.

XXIV

Eftsoones there was presented to her eye
 A comely knight, all arm'd in complete wize, Through whose bright ventayle, lifted up on hve,
 His manly face, that did his foes agrize,
 And frends to termes of gentle truce entize.

Lookt fourth, as Phœbus face out of the east Betwixt two shady mountaynes doth arize:
Portly his person was, and much increast Through his heroicke grace and honorable gest.

XXV

His crest was covered with a couchant hownd,

And all his armour seemd of antique mould,
But wondrous massy and assured sownd,
And round about yfretted all with gold,
In which there written was, with cyphres
old,

Achilles armes, which Arthegall did win.
And on his shield enveloped sevenfold
He bore a crowned litle ermilin, That deckt the azure field with her fayre pouldred skin.

XXVI

The damzell well did vew his personage,
And liked well, ne further fastned not,
But went her way; ne her unguilty age Did weene, unwares, that her unlucky lot Lay hidden in the bottome of the pot:
Of hurt unwist most danger doth redound:
But the false archer, which that arrow shot
So slyly that she did not feele the wound, Did smyle full smoothly at her weetlesse wofull stound.

XXVII

Thenceforth the fether in her lofty crest, Ruffed of love, gan lowly to availe,
And her proud portance and her princely
gest,

With which she earst tryumphed, now did
quaile:

Sad, solemne, sowre, and full of fancies
fraile

She woxe; yet wist she nether how, nor why;

She wist not, silly mayd, what she did aile,
Yet wist she was not well at ease perdy, Yet thought it was not love, but some melancholy.

XXVIII

So soone as Night had with her pallid hew Defaste the beautie of the shyning skye,
And reft from men the worldes desired vew, She with her nourse adowne to sleepe did
lye;

But sleepe full far away from her did fly:

In stead thereof sad sighes and sorrowes
deepe

Kept watch and ward about her warily, That nought she did but wayle, and often
steepe

Her dainty couch with teares, which closely she did weepe.

XXIX

And if that any drop of slombring rest Did chaunce to still into her weary spright, When feeble nature felt her selfe opprest, Streight way with dreames, and with fantas-tick sight

Of dreadfull things, the same was put to
flight,

That oft out of her bed she did astart,
As one with vew of ghastly feends affright:
Tho gan she to renew her former smart, And thinke of that fayre visage, written in her hart.

XXX

One night, when she was tost with such un-
rest,

Her aged nourse, whose name was Glauce
hight,

Feeling her leape out of her loathed nest, Betwixt her feeble armes her quickly keight,
And downe againe in her warme bed her
dight:

‘ Ah! my deare daughter, ah! my dearest
dread,

What uncouth fit,’ sayd she, ‘ what evill
plight,

Hath thee opprest, and with sad dreary-
head

Changed thy lively cheare, and living made thee dead?

XXXI

‘ For not of nought these suddein ghastly
feares

All night afflict thy naturall repose;
And all the day, when as thine equall peares Their fit disports with faire delight doe chose,

Thou in dull corners doest thy selfe inclose, Ne tastest princes pleasures, ne doest
spred

Abroad thy fresh youths fayrest flowre, but lose

Both leafe and fruite, both too untimely
shed,

As one in wilfull bale for ever iuried.

XXXII

'The time that mortall men their weary
cares

Do lay away, and all wilde beastes do rest,
And every river eke his course forbeares, Then doth this wicked evill thee infest, And rive with thousand throbs thy thrilled
brest;

Like an huge Aetn' of deepe engulfed gryefe,

Sorrow is heaped in thy hollow chest, Whence forth it breakes in sighes and anguish ryfe,

As smoke and sulphure mingled with confused stryfe.

XXXIII

'Ay me! how much I feare least love it
bee!

But if that love it be, as sure I read By known signes and passions which I
see,

Be it worthy of thy race and royall sead,
Then I avow by this most sacred head

Of my deare foster childe, to ease thy
gryefe,

And win thy will: therefore away doe
dread;

For death nor daunger from thy dew re-
liefe

Shall me debarre: tell me, therefore, my liefeest liefe.'

XXXIV

So having sayd, her twixt her armes twaine Shee streightly straynd, and colled tenderly,
And every trembling joynt and every vaine Shee softly felt, and rubbed busily,
To doe the frozen cold away to fly;

And her faire deawy eies with kisses deare Shee ofte did bathe, and ofte againe did
dry;

And ever her importund, not to feare
To let the secret of her hart to her appeare.

XXXV

The damzell pauzd, and then thus fearfully:

'Ah! nurse, what needeth thee to eke my
paine?

Is not enough that I alone doe dye, But it must doubled bee with death of twaine?

For nought for me but death there doth remaine.'

'O daughter deare,' said she, 'despire no
whit;

For never sore, but might a salve obtaine:
That blinded god, which hath ye blindly
smit,

Another arrow hath your lovers hart to hit.'

XXXVI

'But mine is not,' quoth she, 'like other
wownd;

For which no reason can finde remedy.'

'Was never such, but mote the like be
fownd,'

Said she, 'and though no reason may apply Salve to your sore, yet love can higher stye

Then reasons reach, and oft hath wonders
donne.'

'But neither god of love nor god of skye Can doe,' said she, 'that which cannot be
donne.'

'Things ofte impossible,' quoth she, 'seeme ere begonne.'

XXXVII

'These idle wordes,' said she, 'doe nought
aswage

My stubborne smart, but more annoiaunce
breed:

For no usuall fire, no usuall rage
Yt is, O nourse, which on my life doth feed, And sucks the blood which from my hart doth bleed.

But since thy faithfull zeale lets me not hyde
My crime, (if crime it be) I will it reed.

Nor prince, nor pere it is, whose love hath gryde

My feeble brest of late, and launched this wound wyde.

XXXVIII

'Nor man it is, nor other living wight;
For then some hope I might unto me draw;
But th'only shade and semblant of a knight,

Whose shape or person yet I never saw,
Hath me subjected to Loves cruell law:

The same one day, as me misfortune led,
I in my fathers wondrous mirrhour saw,

And, pleased with that seeming goodly-hed, Unwares the hidden hooke with baite I swallowed.

XXXIX

'Sithens it hath infixed faster hold Within my bleeding bowells, and so sore

Now ranekleth in this same fraile fleshly
mould,
That all mine entrailes flow with poisonous
gore,
And th'ulcer groweth daily more and more;
Ne can my ronning sore finde remedee,
Other then my hard fortune to deplore, And languish as the leafe faln from the
tree, Till death make one end of my daies and miseree.'

XL

'Daughter,' said she, 'what need ye be dis-
mayd,
Or why make ye such monster of your
minde ?
Of much more uncouth thing I was affrayd;
Of filthy lust, contrary unto kinde:
But this affection nothing straunge I finde;
For who with reason can you aye reprove, To love the semblaunt pleasing most your
minde,
And yield your heart whence ye cannot remove ?
No guilt in you, but in the tyranny of Love.

XLI

'Not so th' Arabian Myrrhe did sett her
mynd,
Nor so did Biblis spend her pining hart,
But lov'd their native flesh against al kynd,
And to their purpose used wicked art:
Yet playd Pasiphaë a more monstrous part,
That lov'd a bul, and learnd a beast to
bee:
Such shamefull lusts who loaths not, which depart
From course of nature and of modestee ?
Swete Love such lewdnes bands from his faire companee.

XLII

'But thine, my deare, (welfare thy heart, my deare)
Though straunge beginning had, yet fixed is On one that worthy may perhaps appeare;
And certes seemes bestowed not amis:
Joy thereof have thou and eternall blis.'
With that upleaning on her elbow weake,
Her alabaster brest she soft did kis, Which all that while shee felt to pant and
quake,
As it an earth-quake were: at last she thus bespoke:

XLIII

'Beldame, your words doe worke me litle
ease;
For though my love be not so lewdly bent As those ye blame, yet may it nought ap-
pease
My raging smart, ne ought my flame relent, But rather doth my helpelesse griefe aug-
ment.
For they, how ever shamefull and unkinde, Yet did possess their horrible intent:
Short end of sorowes they therby did finde;
So was their fortune good, though wicked were their minde.

XLIV

'But wicked fortune mine, though minde be
good,
Can have no end, nor hope of my desire, But feed on shadowes, whiles I die for food,
And like a shadow wexe, whiles with entire Affection I doe languish and expire.
I, fonder then Cephisus foolish chyld,
Who, having vewed in a fountaine shere His face, was with the love thereof begyld;
I, fonder, love a shade, the body far exyld.'

XLV

'Nought like,' quoth shee, 'for that same wretched boy
Was of him selfe the ydle paramoure, Both love and lover, without hope of
joy;
For which he faded to a watry flowre.
But better fortune thine, and better howre, Which lov'st the shadow of a warlike
knight;
No shadow, but a body hath in powre:
That body, wheresoever that it light, May learned be by cyphers, or by magicke
might.

XLVI

'But if thou may with reason yet represe
The growing evill, ere it strength have
gott,
And thee abandond wholly doe possesse, Against it strongly strive, and yield thee nott,
Til thou in open fielde adowne be smott.
But if the passion mayster thy fraile might,
So that needs love or death must bee thy lott,

Then I avow to thee, by wrong or right To compas thy desire, and find that loved knight.'

XLVII

Her chearefull words much cheard the feeble spright
Of the sieke virgin, that her downe she
layd
In her warme bed to sleepe, if that she
might;
And the old-woman carefully displayd
The clothes about her round with busy ayd,
So that at last a litle creeping sleepe Surprisd her sence. Shee, therewith well apayd,
The dronken lamp down in the oyl did
steepe,
And sett her by to watch, and sett her by
to weepe.

XLVIII

Earely the morrow next, before that day
His joyous face did to the world revele, They both uprose and tooke their ready way Unto the church, their praiers to appele, With great devotion, and with litle zeles:
For the faire damzell from the holy herse Her love-sieke hart to other thoughts did steale;
And that old dame said many an idle verse, Out of her daughters hart fond fancies to reverse.

XLIX

Retourned home, the royall infant fell Into her former fitt; forwhy no powre Nor guidaunce of her selfe in her did dwell.
But th' aged nurse, her calling to her
bowre,
Had gathered rew, and savine, and the
flowre
Of camphora, and calamint, and dill,
All which she in a earthen pot did poure,
And to the brim with colt wood did it fill,
And many drops of milk and blood through it did spill.

L

Then, taking thrise three heares from of her
head,
Them trebly breaded in a threefold lace, And round about the pots mouth bound the thread,
And after having whispered a space

Certein sad words, with hollow voice and baece, Shee to the virgin sayd, thrise sayd she itt:
'Come, daughter, come, come; spit upon my
face,
Spitt thrise upon me, thrise upon me spitt;
Th' uneven number for this busines is most fitt.'

LI

That sayd, her rownd about she from her turnd,
She turned her contrary to the sunne, Thrise she her turnd contrary, and returnd
All contrary, for she the right did shunne, And ever what she did was streight un-
donne.
So thought she to undoe her daughters love:
But love, that is in gentle brest begonne, No ydle charmes so lightly may remove;
That well can witness, who by tryall it does prove.

LII

Ne ought it mote the noble mayd awayle, Ne slake the fury of her cruell flame,
But that shee still did waste, and still did wayle,
That through long languour and hart-burning brame
She shortly like a pyned ghost became,
Which long hath waited by the Stygian strond.
That when old Glauce saw, for feare least
blame
Of her miscarriage should in her be fond, She wist not how t' amend, nor how it to withstond.

CANTO III

Merlin bewrayes to Britomart
The state of Arthegall:
And shews the famous progeny, Which from them springen shall.

I

Most sacred fyre, that burnest mightily
In living brests, ykindled first above, Emongst th' eternall spheres and lamping
sky,
And thence poured into men, which men call Love;
Not that same which doth base affection
move

In brutish mindes, and filthy lust inflame, But that sweete fit that doth true beautie
love,
And choseth Vertue for his dearest dame, Whence spring all noble deedes and never dying fame:

II

Well did antiquity a god thee deeme, That over mortall mindes hast so great
might,
To order them as best to thee doth seeme,
And all their actions to direct aright:
The fatall purpose of divine foresight Thou doest effect in destined descents, Through deepe impression of thy secret
might,
And stirredst up th' heroes high intents,
Which the late world admyres for wondrous moniments.

III

But thy dredd dartes in none doe triumph
more,
Ne braver prooffe, in any, of thy powre Shew'dst thou, then in this royall maid of
yore,
Making her seeke an unknowne paramoure, From the worlds end, through many a bitter stowre:
From whose two loynes thou afterwarde did rayse
Most famous fruites of matrimoniall bowre, Which through the earth have spredd their living prayse,
That Fame in tromp of gold eternally dis-playes.

IV

Begin then, O my dearest sacred dame, Daughter of Phæbus and of Memorye, That doest ennoble with immortal name
The warlike worthies, from antiquitye, In thy great volume of eternitye:
Begin, O Clio, and recount from hence My glorious Soveraines goodly auncestrye, Till that by dew degrees and long protense, Thou have it lastly brought unto her Excellence.

V

Full many wayes within her troubled mind
Old Glauce cast, to cure this ladies grieve: Full many waies she sought, but none could
find,

Nor herbes, nor charmes, nor counsel, that is chiefe

And choisest med'cine for sick harts reliefe: Forthy great care she tooke, and greater
feare,
Least that it should her turne to fowle repriefe

And sore reproch, when so her father deare Should of his dearest daughters hard misfortune heare.

VI

At last she her avisde, that he which made That mirrhour, wherein the sicke damosell So straungely vewed her straunge lovers
shade,

To weet, the learned Merlin, well could tell, Under what coast of heaven the man did
dwell,

And by what means his love might best be
wrought:

For though beyond the Africk Ismael Or th' Indian Peru he were, she thought Him forth through infinite endeavour to have sought.

VII

Forthwith them selves disguising both in straunge

And base atyre, that none might them be-
wray,

To Maridunum, that is now by chaunge Of name Cayr-Merdin calld, they tooke their
way:

There the wise Merlin whylome wont (they say)

To make his wonne, low underneath the
ground,

In a deepe delve, farre from the vew of
day,

That of no living wight he mote be found,
When so he counsell'd with his sprights encompast round.

VIII

And if thou ever happen that same way
To travell, go to see that dreadfull place:
It is an hideous hollow cave (they say)

Under a rock, that lyes a litle space
From the swift Barry, tombling downe apace Amongst the woody hilles of Dynevowre:

But dare thou not, I charge, in any case,
To enter into that same balefull bowre, For feare the cruell feendes should thee unwares devowre.

IX

But standing high aloft, low lay thine eare,
 And there such ghastly noyse of yron chaines
 And brasen caudrons thou shalt rombling
 heare,
 Which thousand sprights with long enduring
 paines DoeASSE, that it will stonn thy feeble braines;
 And oftentimes great grones, and grievous stownds,
 When too huge toyle and labour them constraines,
 And oftentimes loud strokes, and ringing sowndes,
 From under that deepe rock most horribly rebowndes.

X

The cause, some say, is this: A litle whyle Before that Merlin dyde, he did intend A brasen wall in compas to comyle About Cairmardin, and did it commend Unto these sprights, to bring to perfect end.
 During which worke the Lady of the Lake, Whom long he lov'd, for him in hast did
 send;
 Who, thereby forst his workemen to for-
 sake,
 Them bownd, till his retourne, their labour not to slake.

XI

In the meane time, through that false ladies
 traine,
 He was surprisd, and buried under beare, Ne ever to his worke returnd againe: Nath'lesse those feendes may not their work forbear,
 So greatly his commandement they feare, But there doe toyle and traveile day and
 night,
 Untill that brasen wall they up doe reare:
 For Merlin had in magicke more insight Then ever him before or after living wight.

XII

For he by wordes could call out of the sky Both sunne and moone, and make them him obey:
 The land to sea, and sea to maineland dry,
 And darksom night he eke could turne to
 day:
 Huge hostes of men he could alone dismay,

And hostes of men of meanest thinges could
 frame,
 When so him list his enimies to fray:
 That to this day, for terror of his fame, The feends do quake, when any him to them does name.

XIII

And sooth, men say that he was not the
 sonne
 Of mortall syre or other living wight,
 But wondrously begotten, and begonne
 By false illusion of a guilefull spright On a faire lady nomme, that whilome hight Matilda, daughter to Pubidius, Who was the lord of Mathraval by right,
 And coosen unto King Ambrosius: Whence he indued was with skill so merveilous.

XIV

They, here ariving, staid a while without,
 Ne durst adventure rashly in to wend,
 But of their first intent gan make new dout,
 For dread of daunger, which it might por-
 tend:
 Untill the hardy mayd (with love to frend)
 First entering, the dreadfull mage there
 fownd Deepe busied bout worke of wondrous end, And writing straunge characters in the
 grownd,
 With which the stubborne feendes he to his service bownd.

XV

He nought was moved at their entrance
 bold,
 For of their comming well he wist afore; Yet list them bid their businesse to un-
 fold,
 As if ought in this world in secrete store Were from him hidden, or unknowne of
 yore.
 Then Glauce thus: 'Let not it thee offend, That we thus rashly through thy darksom
 dore
 Unwares have prest: for either fatall end, Or other mightie cause, us two did hether send.'

XVI

He bad tell on; and then she thus began:
 'Now have three moones with borrowd brothers light

Thrise shined faire, and thrise seemd dim
and wan,
Sith a sore evill, which this virgin bright Tormenteth, and doth plunge in dolefull
plight,
First rooting tooke; but what thing it mote
bee,
Or whence it sprong, I can not read aright:
But this I read, that, but if remedee Thou her afford, full shortly I her dead shall see.'

XVII

Therewith th'enchauter softly gan to smyle
At her smooth speeches, weeting inly well That she to him dissembled womanish
guyle,
And to her said: 'Beldame, by that ye tell,
More neede of leach-crafte hath your damozell,
Then of my skill: who helpe may have els-
where,
In vaine seekes wonders out of magick
spell.'
Th' old woman vox half blanck those wordes to heare;
And yet was loth to let her purpose plaine
appeare;

XVIII

And to him said: 'Yf any leaches skill,
Or other learned meanes, could have redrest This my deare daughters deepe engrafted
ill,
Certes I should be loth thee to molest:
But this sad evill, which doth her infest, Doth course of naturall cause farre exceed,
And housed is within her hollow brest, That either seemes some cursed witches
deed,
Or evill spright, that in her doth such torment breed.'

XIX

The wisard could no lenger beare her bord,
But bursting forth in laughter, to her said:
'Glauce, what needes this colourable word,
To cloke the cause that hath it selfe bewrayd?
Ne ye, fayre Britomartis, thus arayd,
More hidden are then sume in cloudy vele;
Whom thy good fortune, having fate obayd, Hath hether brought, for succour to appele:
The which the Powres to thee are pleased to revele.'

XX

The doubtfull mayd, seeing her selfe de-seryde,
Was all abasht, and her pure yvory
Into a cleare carnation suddaine dyde;
As fayre Aurora, rysing hastily, Doth by her blushing tell that she did lye
All night in old Tithonus frozen bed, Whereof she seemes ashamed inwardly.
But her olde nurse was nought dishartened, But vantage made of that which Merlin had ared;

XXI

And said: 'Sith then thou knowest all our
griefe,
(For what doest not thou knowe?) of grace, I pray,
Pitty our playnt, and yield us meet reliefe.'
With that the prophet still awhile did stay,
And then his spirite thus gan feorth display:
'Most noble virgin, that by fatall lore Hast learn'd to love, let no whit thee dis-
may
The hard' beginne that meetes thee in the
dore,
And with sharpe fits thy tender hart op-presseth sore.

XXII

'For so must all things excellent begin,
And eke enrooted deepe must be that tree, Whose big embodied braunches shall not lin,
Till they to hevens hight forth stretched bee.
For from thy wombe a famous progenee Shall spring, out of the auncient Trojan
blood,
Which shall revive the sleeping memoree Of those same antique peres, the hevens
brood,
Which Greeke and Asian rivers stayned with their blood.

XXIII

'Renowned kings and sacred emperours, Thy fruitfull ofspring, shall from thee de-
seed;
Brave captaines and most mighty warriours, That shall their conquests through all lands extend,
And their decayed kingdomes shall amend:
The feeble Britons, broken with long warre, They shall upreare, and mightily defend Against their forren foe, that commes from

 farre,
 Till universall peace compound all civill jarre.

XXIV

‘It was not, Britomart, thy wandring eye, Glauncing unwares in charmed looking glas,
 But the streight course of hevenly destiny, Led with Eternall Providence, that has Guyded thy glaunce, to bring His will to
 pas:

Ne is thy fate, ne is thy fortune ill,
 To love the prowest knight that ever was:
 Therefore submit thy wayes unto His will,
 And doe, by all dew meanes, thy destiny fulfill.’

XXV

‘But read,’ saide Glauce, ‘thou magitian, What meanes shall she out seeke, or what waies take?
 How shall she know, how shall she finde
 the man?’

Or what needes her to toyle, sith Fates can
 make

Way for themselves, their purpose to per-
 take?’

Then Merlin thus: ‘Indeede the Fates are firme,

And may not shrinck, though all the world do shake:

Yet ought mens good endeavours them con-
 firme,

And guyde the heavenly causes to their constant terme.

XXVI

‘The man, whom heavens have ordaynd to
 bee

The spouse of Britomart, is Arthegall:
 He wonneth in the land of Fayeree, Yet is no Fary borne, ne sib at all To Elfes, but sprong of seed terrestriall, And whylome by false Faries stolne away, Whyles yet in infant cradle he did crall;
 Ne other to himselfe is knowne this day,
 But that he by an Elfe was gotten of a Fay.

XXVII

‘But sooth he is the sonne of Gorlois, And brether unto Cador, Cornish king, And for his warlike feates renowned is,
 From where the day out of the sea doth
 spring

Until the closure of the evening.
 From thence him, firmly bound with faith-full band,
 To this his native soyle thou backe shalt
 bring,
 Strongly to ayde his cuntry to withstand The powre of forreine Paynims, which invade thy land.

XXVIII

‘Great ayd thereto his mighty puissance And dreaded name shall give in that sad
 day:

Where also proofe of thy prow valiaunce Thou then shalt make, t’ increase thy lovers
 pray.

Long time ye both in armes shall beare great sway,

Till thy wombes burden thee from them do
 call,

And his last fate him from thee take away,
 Too rathe cut off by practise criminall Of secrete foes, that him shall make in mis-chiefe fall.

XXIX

‘With thee yet shall he leave, for memory Of his late puissance, his ymage dead,
 That living him in all activity To thee shall represent. He from the head Of his coosen Constantius, without dread, Shall take the crowne, that was his fathers
 right,

And therewith crowne himselfe in th’ others
 stead:

Then shall he issew forth with dreadfull
 might,

Against his Saxon foes in bloody field to fight.

XXX

‘Like as a lyon, that in drowsie cave Hath long time slept, himselfe so shall he
 shake,

And comming forth, shall spred his banner
 brave

Over the troubled South, that it shall make The warlike Mertians for feare to quake: Thrise shall he fight with them, and twise shall win,

But the third time shall fayre accordaunce
 make:

And if he then with victorie can lin, He shall his dayes with peace bring to his earthly in.

XXXI

‘ His sonne, hight Vortipore, shall him suc-ceede
In kingdome, but not in felicity; Yet shall he long time warre with happy
speed,
And with great honour many batteills try:
But at the last to th’ importunity
Of froward fortune shall be first to yield.
But his sonne Malgo shall full mightily Avenge his fathers losse, with speare and
shield,
And his proud foes discomfit in victorious field.

XXXII

‘ Behold the man ! and tell me, Britomart, If ay more goodly creature thou didst see:
How like a gyaunt in each manly part Beares he himselfe with portly majestee,
That one of th’ old heroes seemes to bee !
He the six islands, comprovinciall In auncient times unto Great Britainee, Shall to the same reduce, and to him call Their sondry kings to doe their homage severall.

XXXIII

‘ All which his sonne Careticus awhile Shall well defend, and Saxons powre sup-
presse, Untill a straunger king, from unknowne
soyle
Arriving, him with multitude oppresse; Great Gormond, having with huge mighti-
nesse
Ireland subdewd, and therein fixt his throne, Like a swift otter, fell through empti-
nesse,
Shall overswim the sea with many one Of his Norweyses, to assist the Britons fone.

XXXIV

‘ He in his furie all shall overronne, And holy church with faithlesse handes de-
face,
That thy sad people, utterly fordonne, Shall to the utmost mountaines fly apace:
Was never so great waste in any place,
Nor so fowle outrage doen by living men:
For all thy citties they shall sacke and race, And the greene grasse that groweth they shall brene,
That even the wilde beast shall dy in starved den.

XXXV

‘ Whiles thus thy Britons doe in languour pine,
Proud Etheldred shall from the North arise, Serving th’ ambitious will of Augustine,
And passing Dee with hardy enterprise, Shall backe repulse the valiaunt Brockwell twise,
And Bangor with massacred martyrs fill;
But the third time shall rew his foolhardise:
For Cadwan, pitying his peoples ill, Shall stoutly him defeat, and thousand Saxons kill.

XXXVI

‘ But after him, Cadwallin mightily On his sonne Edwin all those wrongs shall wreake;
Ne shall availe the wicked sorcery
Of false Pellite, his purposes to breake, But him shall slay, and on a gallows bleak Shall give th’ enchaunter his unhappy hire: Then shall the Britons, late dismayd and
weake,
From their long vassallage gin to respire, And on their Paynim foes avenge their ranckled ire.

XXXVII

‘ Ne shall he yet his wrath so mitigate, Till both the sonnes of Edwin he have
slayne,
Offricke and Osricke, twinnes unfortunate, Both slaine in battaile upon Layburne
playne,
Together with the king of Louthiane, Hight Adin, and the king of Orkeny, Both joynt partakers of their fatall payne:
But Penda, fearefull of like desteny, Shall yield him selfe his liegeman, and swear fealty.

XXXVIII

‘ Him shall he make his fatall instrument, T’ afflict the other Saxons unsubdewd; He marching forth with fury insolent Against the good King Oswald, who, in-dewd
With heavenly powre, and by angels reskewd,
Al holding crosses in their hands on hye, Shall him defeate withouten blood imbrewd:
Of which that field for endlesse memory
Shall Hevenfield be cald to all posterity.

XXXIX

Whereat Cadwallin wroth, shall forth issew,
 And an huge hoste into Northumber lead,
 With which he godly Oswald shall subdew, And crowne with martiredome his sacred
 head.
 Whose brother Oswin, daunted with like
 dread,
 With price of silver shall his kingdome buy,
 And Penda, seeking him adowne to tread, Shall tread adowne, and doe him fowly dye, But shall with guifts his lord Cadwallin pacify.

XL

Then shall Cadwallin die, and then the
 raine
 Of Britons eke with him attonee shall dye;
 Ne shall the good Cadwallader, with paine Or powre, be hable it to remedy,
 When the full time, prefixt by destiny, Shalbe expird of Britons regiment:
 For Heven it selfe shall their succeesse envy, And them with plagues and murrins pestilent Consume, till all their warlike puisaunce be spent.

XLI

Yet after all these sorrowes, and huge hills
 Of dying people, during eight yeares space, Cadwallader, not yielding to his ills, From Armoricke, where long in wretched case
 He liv'd, retourning to his native place, Shalbe by vision staide from his intent:
 For th' Heavens have decreed to displace The Britons for their sinnes dew punishment,
 And to the Saxons over-give their government.

XLII

Then woe, and woe, and everlasting woe, Be to the Briton babe, that shalbe borne To live in thraldome of his fathers foe!
 Late king, now captive, late lord, now for-
 lorne,
 The worlds reproch, the cruell victors
 scorne,
 Banisht from princely bowre to wasteful
 wood!
 O! who shal helpe me to lament and mourne

The royall seed, the antique Trojan blood, Whose empire lenger here then ever any stood?'

XLIII

The damzell was full deepe empassioned, Both for his griefe, and for her peoples sake, Whose future woes so plaine he fashioned,
 And sighing sore, at length him thus be-
 spake:
 'Ah! but will Hevens fury never slake, Nor vengeance huge relent it selfe at last?
 Will not long misery late mercy make,
 But shall their name for ever be defaste,
 And quite from of the earth their memory be raste?'

XLIV

'Nay, but the terme,' sayd he, 'is limited,
 That in this thraldome Britons shall abide,
 And the just revolution measured,
 That they as straungers shalbe notifide:
 For twise fowre hundreth yeares shalbe supplide,
 Ere they to former rule restor'd shalbee,
 And their importune fates all satisfide:
 Yet during this their most obscuritee, Their beames shall ofte breake forth, that men them faire may see.

XLV

For Rhodoricke, whose surname shalbe
 Great,
 Shall of him selfe a brave ensample shew, That Saxon kings his frendship shall in-
 treat;
 And Howell Dha shall goodly well indew The salvage minds with skill of just and
 trew;
 Then Griffyth Conan also shall up reare His dreaded head, and the old sparkes renew
 Of native corage, that his foes shall feare Least back againe the kingdom he from them should beare.

XLVI

Ne shall the Saxons selves all peaceably Enjoy the crowne, which they from Britons
 wonne
 First ill, and after ruled wickedly:
 For ere two hundred yeares be full out-
 ronne,
 There shall a Raven, far from rising sunne,
 With his wide wings upon them fiercely fly,

And bid his faithlesse chickens overonne
The fruitfull plaines, and with fell cruelty, In their avenge, tread downe the victors surquedry.

XLVII

‘Yet shall a third both these and thine sub-
dew:

There shall a Lion from the sea-bord wood Of Neustria come roing, with a crew Of hungry whelpes, his battailous bold
brood,

Whose clawes were newly dipt in cruddy
blood,

That from the Daniske tyrants head shall rend

Th’ usurped crowne, as if that he were
wood,

And the spoile of the countrey conquered Amongst his young ones shall divide with bountyhed.

XLVIII

‘Tho, when the terme is full accomplishid, There shall a sparke of fire, which hath long-while

Bene in his ashes raked up and hid,
Bee freshly kindled in the fruitfull ile
Of Mona, where it lurked in exile; Which shall breake forth into bright burning
flame,

And reach into the house that beares the stile

Of roiall majesty and soveraine name:
So shall the Briton blood their crowne agayn reclame.

XLIX

‘Thenceforth eternall union shall be made Betweene the nations different afore, And sacred Peace shall lovingly persuade The warlike minds to learne her goodly
lore,

And civile armes to exercise no more:
Then shall a royall Virgin raine, which shall Stretch her white rod over the Belgicke
shore,

And the great Castle smite so sore with all,
That it shall make him shake, and shortly learn to fall.

L

‘But yet the end is not.—’ There Merlin
stayd,

As overcome of the spirites powre,

Or other ghastly spectacle dismayd,
That secretly he saw, yet note discoure:
Which suddain fitt and halfe extatick stoure When the two fearefull wemen saw, they
grew

Greatly confused in behaveoure:

At last the fury past, to former hew Hee turnd againe, and chearfull looks as earst d’id shew.

LI

Then, when them selves they well instructed had

Of all that needed them to be inquird,
They both, conceiving hope of comfort glad,
With lighter hearts unto their home retird;

Where they in secret counsell close con-spird,

How to effect so hard an enterprize,
And to possesse the purpose they desird:
Now this, now that twixt them they did
devise,

And diverse plots did frame, to maske in strange disguise.

LII

At last the nourse in her foolhardy wit Conceivd a bold devise, and thus bespake: ‘Daughter, I deeme that counsel aye most
fit,

That of the time doth dew advantage
take:

Ye see that good King Uther now doth
make

Strong warre upon the Paynim brethren,
hight

Octa and Oza, whome hee lately brake Beside Cayr Verolame in victorious fight, That now all Britany doth burne in armes bright.

LIII

‘That therefore nought our passage may empeach,

Let us in feigned armes our selves disguise, And our weak hands (whom need new strength shall teach)

The dreadful speare and shield to exercize:
Ne certes, daughter, that same warlike
wize,

I weene, would you misseeme; for ye beene tall

And large of limbe t’ atchieve an hard em-
prize,

Ne ought ye want, but skil, which practize
small Wil bring, and shortly make you a mayd martiall.

LIV

‘And sooth, it ought your corage much in-
flame,
To heare so often, in that royall hous,
From whence to none inferior ye came,
Bards tell of many wemen valorous,
Which have full many feats adventurous Performd, in paragone of proudest men:
The bold Bunduca, whose victorious Exploits made Rome to quake, stout Guendolen, Renowned Martia, and redoubted Enmi-len;

LV

‘And that which more then all the rest may sway, Late dayes ensample, which these eyes be-
held:
In the last field before Menevia, Which Uther with those forrein pagans
held,
I saw a Saxon virgin, the which feld Great Ulfm thrise upon the bloody playne,
And had not Carados her hand withheld From rash revenge, she had him surely
slayne,
Yet Carados himselfe from her escapt with payne.’

LVI

‘Ah! read,’ quoth Britomart, ‘how is she
hight?’
‘Fayre Angela,’ quoth she, ‘men do her call,
No whit lesse fayre then terrible in fight:
She hath the leading of a martiall And mightie people, dreaded more then all The other Saxons, which doe, for her sake And love, themselves of her name Angles
call.
Therefore, faire infant, her ensample make Unto thy selfe, and equall corage to thee take.’

LVII

Her harty wordes so deepe into the mynd
Of the yong damzell sunke, that great desire
Of warlike arnes in her forthwith they rynd,

And generous stout courage did inspyre,
That she resolv’d, unweeting to her syre, Advent’rous knighthood on her selfe to don,

And counsell with her nourse, her maides attyre

To turne into a massy habergeon, And bad her all things put in readinesse anon.

LVIII

Th’ old woman nought that needed did omit;

But all thinges did conveniently purvay.
It fortun’d (so time their turne did fitt)

A band of Britons, ryding on forray Few dayes before, had gotten a great pray Of Saxon goods, emongst the which was scene

A goodly armour, and full rich aray,
Which long’d to Angela, the Saxon queene, All fretted round with gold, and goodly wel besene.

LIX

The same, with all the other ornaments, King Ryence caused to be hang’d by In his chiefe church, for endlesse moni-
ments

Of his successe and gladfull victory:
Of which her selfe avising readily,
In th’ evening late old Glauce thither led Faire Britomart, and that same armory Downe taking, her therein appareled, Well as she might, and with brave bauldrick garnished.

LX

Beside those arnes there stood a mightie
speare,

Which Bladud made by magick art of yore,
And usd the same in batteill aye to beare: Sith which it had bene here preserv’d in
store,

For his great vertues proved long afore:
For never wight so fast in sell could sit,
But him perforce unto the ground it bore: Both speare she tooke and shield, which hong by it:

Both speare and shield of great powre, for her purpose fit.

LXI

Thus when she had the virgin all arayd, Another harnesse, which did hang thereby.

About her selfe she dight, that the yong
 mayd
 She might in equall armes accompany,
 And as her squire attend her carefully:
 Tho to their ready steedes they clombe full
 light,
 And through back waies, that none might them espy,
 Covered with secret cloud of silent night, Themselves they forth convoid, and passed forward right.

LXII

Ne rested they, till that to Faery Lond
 They came, as Merlin them directed late:
 Where meeting with this Rederosse Knight, she fond
 Of diverse things discourses to dilate,
 But most of Arthegall and his estate.
 At last their wayes so fell, that they mote
 part:
 Then each to other well affectionate, Friendship professed with unfained hart:
 The Rederosse Knight diverst, but forth rode Britomart.

CANTO IV

Bold Marinell of Britomart Is throwne on the Rich Strond: Faire Florimell of Arthure is Long followed, but not fond.

I

WHERE is the antique glory now become,
 That whylome wont in wemen to appeare ?
 Where be the brave atchievements doen by some ?
 Where be the batteilles, where the shield and speare,
 And all the conquests which them high did
 reare,
 That matter made for famous poets verse,
 And boastfull men so oft abasht to heare ?
 Beene they all dead, and laide in dolefull
 herse ?
 Or doen they onely sleepe, and shall againe reverse ?

II

If they be dead, then woe is me therefore :
 But if they sleepe, O let them soone awake !
 For all too long I burne with envy sore, To heare the warlike feates which Homere
 spake

Of bold Pentheselee, which made a lake Of Greekish blood so ofte in Trojan plaine ;
 But when I reade, how stout Debora strake Proud Sisera, and how Camill' hath slaine The huge Orsilochus, I swell with great disdaine.

III

Yet these, and all that els had puissance, Cannot with noble Britomart compare, Aswell for glorie of great valiaunce,
 As for pure chastitie and vertue rare,
 That all her goodly deedes do well declare.
 Well worthlie stock, from which the branches sprong
 That in late yeares so faire a blossome bare As thee, O Queene, the matter of my song, Whose lignage from this lady I derive along.

IV

Who when, through speaches with the Rederosse Knight,
 She learned had th' estate of Arthegall,
 And in each point her selfe informd aright,
 A frendly league of love perpetuall
 She with him bound, and congé tooke withall.
 Then he forth on his journey did proceede,
 To seeke adventures which mote him befall, And win him worship through his warlike
 deed,
 Which alwaies of his paines he made the chiefest meed.

V

But Britomart kept on her former course, Ne ever dofte her armes, but all the way Grew pensive through that amarous discourse,
 By which the Rederosse Knight did earst
 display
 Her lovers shape and chevalrous aray:
 A thousand thoughts she fashiond in her
 mind,
 And in her feigning fancie did pourtray Him such as fittest she for love could find, Wise, warlike, personable, courteous, and kind.

VI

With such selfe-pleasing thoughts her wound she fedd,
 And thought so to beguile her grievous
 smart;
 But so her smart was much more grievous
 bredd.

And the deepe wound more deep engord
 her hart,
 That nought but death her dolour mote
 depart.
 So forth she rode without repose or rest, Searching all lands and each remotest part, Following the guydaunce of her blinded
 guest,
 Till that to the seacoast at length she her address.

VII

There she alighted from her light-foot
 beast,
 And sitting downe upon the rocky shore,
 Badd her old squyre unlace her lofty creast:
 Tho, having vewd a while the surges hore,
 That gainst the craggy cliffs did loudly
 rore,
 And in their raging surquedry disdaynd
 That the fast earth affronted them so sore,
 And their devouring covetize restrynd, Thereat she sighed deepe, and after thus complaynd.

VIII

'Huge sea of sorrow and tempestuous griefe, Wherein my feeble barke is tossed long,
 Far from the hoped haven of reliefe, Why doe thy cruel billowes beat so strong,
 And thy moyst mountaynes each on others
 throng,
 Threatning to swallow up my fearefull lyfe?
 O! doe thy cruell wrath and spightfull
 wrong
 At length allay, and stint thy stormy stryfe, Which in these troubled bowels raignes and rageth ryfe.

IX

'For els my feeble vessell, crazd and crackt Through thy strong buffets and outrageous
 blowes,
 Cannot endure, but needes it must be wrackt On the rough rocks, or on the sandy shallowes,
 The whiles that Love it steres, and Fortune
 rowes:
 Love, my lewd pilott, hath a restlesse minde,
 And Fortune, boteswaine, no assurance
 knowes,
 But saile withouten starres gainst tyde and
 winde:
 How can they other doe, sith both are bold and blinde?

'Thou god of windes, that raigest in the seas,
 That raigest also in the continent,
 At last blow up some gentle gale of ease,
 The which may bring my ship, ere it be rent, Unto the gladsome port of her intent:
 Then, when I shall my selfe in safety see,
 A table, for eternall monument Of thy great grace, and my great jeoparddee, Great Neptune, I avow to hallow unto thee.'

XI

Then sighing softly sore, and inly deepe,
 She shut up all her plaint in privy griefe;
 For her great courage would not let her
 weepe;
 Till that old Glauce gan with sharpe reprie
 Her to restraine, and give her good reliefe, Through hope of those which Merlin had her told Should of her name and nation be chiefe, And fetch their being from the sacred
 mould
 Of her immortall womb, to be in heaven enrold.

XII

Thus as she her recomforted, she spyde
 Where far away one, all in armour bright,
 With hasty gallop towards her did ryde:
 Her dolour soone she ceast, and on her
 dight
 Her helmet, to her courser mounting light:
 Her former sorrow into suddein wrath,
 Both coosen passions of distroubled spright, Converting, forth she beates the dusty path:
 Love and despight attonce her courage kindled hath.

XIII

As when a foggy mist hath overcast
 The face of heven, and the cleare ayre en-groste,
 The world in darkenes dwels, till that at last
 The watry southwinde, from the seabord coste Ublowing, doth disperse the vapour lo'ste,
 And ponres it selfe forth in a stormy showre;
 So the fayre Britomart, having diselo'ste Her cloudy care into a wrathfull stowre, The mist of griefe dissolv'd did into vengeance powre.

XIV

Eftsoones her goodly shield addressing
 fayre,
 That mortall speare she in her hand did
 take.
 And unto battaill did her selfe prepayre.
 The knight, approching, sternely her be-
 spake:
 'Sir knight, that doest thy voyage rashly
 make
 By this forbidden way in my despight, Ne doest by others death ensample take.
 I read thee soone retyre, whiles thou hast
 night,
 Least afterwards it be too late to take thy flight.'

XV

Ythrild with deepe disdain of his proud
 threat,
 She shortly thus: 'Fly they, that need to fly: Wordes fearen babes: I meane not thee entreat
 To passe; but maugre thee will passe or
 dy.'
 Ne lenger stayd for th' other to reply, But with sharpe speare the rest made dearly
 knowne.
 Strongly the straunge knight ran, and sturdily Strooke her full on the brest, that made her downe Decline her head, and touch her crouper with her crown.

XVI

But she againe him in the shield did smite
 With so fierce furie and great puissaunce, That through his threesquare scuchin per-cing quite,
 And through his mayled hauberque, by mis-
 chaunce
 The wicked steele through his left side did
 glaunce:
 Him so transfixed she before her bore Beyond his croupe, the length of all her launce,
 Till, sadly soucing on the sandy shore, He tumbled on an heape, and wallowd in his gore.

XVII

Like as the sacred oxe, that carelesse stands With gilden hornes and flowry girlonds
 crownd,

Proud of his dying honor and deare bandes, Whiles th' altars fume with frankincense
 arownd,
 All suddainly with mortall stroke astownd, Doth groveling fall, and with his streaming
 gore
 Distaines the pillours and the holy grownd.
 And the faire flowres that decked him
 afore:
 So fell proud Marinell upon the pretious shore.

XVIII

The martiall mayd stayd not him to la-
 ment,
 But forward rode, and kept her ready
 way
 Along the strond: which as she over-went,
 She saw bestrowed all with rich aray Of pearles and pretious stones of great as-
 say,
 And all the gravell mixt with golden owre: Whereat she wondred much, but would not stay
 For gold, or pearles, or pretious stones an
 howre,
 But them despised all, for all was in her
 powre.

XIX

Whiles thus he lay in deadly stonishment, Tydings hereof came to his mothers eare:
 His mother was the blacke-browd Cymo-ent,
 The daughter of great Nereus, which did
 beare
 This warlike sonne unto an earthly peare,
 The famous Dumarin; who on a day Finding the nymph a sleepe in secret wheare,
 As he by chaunce did wander that same
 way,
 Was taken with her love, and by her closely
 lay.

XX

There he this knight of her begot, whose
 borne
 She, of his father, Marinell did name,
 And in a rocky cave, as wight forlorne, Long time she fostred up, till he became A mighty man at armes, and mickle fame Did get through great adventures by him
 donne:
 For never man he suffred by that same

Rich Strond to travell, whereas he did
wonne,
But that he must do battail with the seanymphes sonne.

XXI

An hundred knights of honorable name
He had subdew'd, and them his vassals
made,

That through all Farie Lond his noble fame
Now blazed was, and feare did all invade, That none durst passen through that perilous glade.

And to advance his name and glory more,
Her sea-god syre she dearely did perswade, T' endow her sonne with threa-sure and rich
store.

Bove all the sonnes that were of earthly wombes ybore.

XXII

The god did graunt his daughters deare demand,

To doen his nephew in all riches flow: Eftsoones his heaped waves he did com-
maund

Out of their hollow bosome forth to throw
All the huge threa-sure, which the sea below
Had in his greedy gulfe devoured deepe.

And him enriched through the overthrow And wreckes of many wretches, which did
weepe

And often wayle their wealth, which he from them did keepe.

XXIII

Shortly upon that shore there heaped was Exceeding riches and all pretious things,
The spoyle of all the world, that it did pas
The wealth of th' East, and pompe of Persian kings:

Gold, amber, yvorie, perles, owches, rings,
And all that els was pretious and deare,
The sea unto him voluntary bringes,
That shortly he a great lord did appeare, As was in all the lond of Faery, or else where.

XXIV

Thereto he was a doughty dreaded knight, Tryde often to the seath of many deare,
That none in equall armes him matchen
might:

The which his mother seeing, gan to feare Least his too haughtie hardines might reare

Some hard mishap, in hazard of his life:
Forthy she oft him counseld to forbear
The bloody batteill, and to stirre up strife, But after all his warre to rest his wearie knife.

XXV

And, for his more assuraunce, she inquir'd
One day of Proteus by his mighty spell (For Proteus was with prophecy inspir'd Her deare sonnes destiny to her to tell.
And the sad end of her sweet Marinell,
Who, through foresight of his eternall skill, Bad her from womankind to keepe him well;
For of a woman he should have much ill;
A virgin straunge and stout him should dismay or kill.

XXVI

Forthy she gave him warning every day,
The love of women not to entertaine;
A lesson too too hard for living clay,
From love in course of nature to refrain:
Yet he his mothers lore did well retaine,
And ever from fayre ladies love did fly;
Yet many ladies fayre did oft complaine,
That they for love of him would algates dye:
Dy who so list for him, he was loves enemy.

XXVII

But ah! who can deceive his destiny,
Or weene by warning to avoyd his fate?
That, when he sleepes in most security And safest seemes, him soonest doth amate,
And findeth dew effect or soone or late,
So feeble is the powre of fleshly arme!
His mother bad him wemens love to hate,
For she of womans force did feare no harme; So weening to have arm'd him, she did quite disarme.

XXVIII

This was that woman, this that deadly
wound.

That Proteus prophecide should him dismay,
The which his mother vainely did expound, To be hart-wounding love, which should
assay

To bring her sonne unto his last decay,
So tiele be the termes of mortall state And full of subtile sophismes, which doe
play

With double sences, and with false debate, T' approve the unknowen purpose of eter-nall fate.

XXIX

Too trew the famous Marinell it fownd, Who, through late triall, on that wealthy
strond

Inglorious now lies in sencelesse swownd, Through heavy stroke of Britomartis hond.
Which when his mother deare did under-
stand,

And heavy tidings heard, whereas she playd Amongst her watry sisters by a pond, Gathering sweete daffadillyes, to have made Gay girlonds, from the sun their forheads fayr to shade,

XXX

Eftesoones both flowres and girlonds far
away

Shee flong, and her faire dewy locks yrent;
To sorrow huge she turnd her former play,
And gamesome merth to grievous drerim-
ment:

Shee threw her selfe downe on the continent,

Ne word did speake, but lay as in a swowne, Whiles al her sisters did for her lament,
With yelling outeries, and with shrieking
sowne;

And every one did teare her girlond from her crowne.

XXXI

Soone as shee up out of her deadly fitt Arose, shee bad her charett to be brought,
And all her sisters, that with her did sitt, Bad eke attonce their charettis to be sought: Tho, full of bitter grieve and pensife
thought,

She to her wagon clombe; clombe all the
rest,

And forth together went, with sorow
fraught.

The waves, obedient to theyr beheast, Them yielded ready passage, and their rage surceast.

XXXII

Great Neptune stode amazed at their
sight,

Whiles on his broad rownd backe they softly slid,

And eke him selfe mournd at their mourn-
full plight,

Yet wist not what their wailing ment, yet
did,

For great compassion of their sorow, bid

His mighty waters to them buxome bee:
Eftesoones the roaring billowes still abid,
And all the griesiy monsters of the see Stood gaping at their gate, and wondred them to see.

XXXIII

A teme of dolphins, raunged in aray, Drew the smooth charett of sad Cymoent;
They were all taught by Triton to obay To the long raynes at her commaunde-
ment:

As swifte as swallowes on the waves they
went,

That their brode flaggy finnes no fome did
reare,

Ne bubling rowndell they behinde them
sent;

The rest of other fishes drawn weare, Which with their finny oars the swelling sea did sheare.

XXXIV

Soone as they bene arriv'd upon the brim Of the Rich Strond, their charettis they
forlore,

And let their tamed fishes softly swim
Along the margent of the fomy shore, Least they their finnes should bruze, and surbate sore

Their tender feete upon the stony grownd:
And comming to the place, where all in
gore

And cruddy blood enwallowed they fownd
The lucklesse Marinell, lying in deadly swownd;

XXXV

His mother swowned thrise, and the third time

Could scarce recovered bee out of her
paine;

Had she not beene devoide of mortall
slime,

Shee should not then have bene relyv'd
again;

But soone as life recovered had the raine, Shee made so piteous mone and deare way-
ment,

That the hard rocks could scarce from tears refraigne,

And all her sister nymphes with one consent

Supplide her sobbing breaches with sad complement.

XXXVI

'Deare image of my selfe,' she sayd, 'that
is,
The wretched sonne of wretched mother
borne,
Is this thine high advauncement? O! is this
Th' immortall name, with which thee yet unborne Thy gransire Nereus promist to adorne?
Now lyst thou of life and honor refte,
Now lyst thou a lumpe of earth forlorne, Ne of thy late life memory is lefte, Ne can thy irrevocable desteny bee wefte?

XXXVII

'Fond Proteus, father of false prophecis!
And they more fond, that credit to thee
give!
Not this the worke of womans hand ywis, That so deepe wound through these deare members drive.
I feared love: but they that love doe live,
But they that dye doe nether love nor hate.
Nath'lesse to thee thy folly I forgive,
And to my selfe and to accursed fate
The guilt I doe ascribe: deare wisdom bought too late.

XXXVIII

'O what avails it of immortall seed
To beene ybredd and never borne to dye?
Farre better I it deeme to die with speed, Then waste in woe and wayfull miserye.
Who dyes the utmost dolor doth abyee,
But who that lives is lefte to waile his losse:
So life is losse, and death felicity:
Sad life worse then glad death: and greater crosse
To see friends grave, then dead the grave self to engrosse.

XXXIX

'But if the heavens did his dayes envie, And my short blis maligne, yet mote they
well
Thus much afford me, ere that he did die,
That the dim eies of my deare Marinell
I mote have closed, and him bed farewell, Sith other offices for mother meet
They would not graunt —— Yett, maulgre them, farewell, my sweetest
sweet!
Farewell, my sweetest sonne, sith we no more shall meet!'

XL

Thus when they all had sorowed their fill,
They softly gan to search his griesly
wound:
And that they might him handle more at
will,
They him disarmd, and spredding on the
ground
Their watchet mantles frindgd with silver
rownd,
They softly wipt away the gelly blood From th' orifice; which having well up-
bownd,
They poured in souveraine balme and nectar
good,
Good both for erthly med'cine and for hevenly food.

XLI

Tho, when the lilly handed Liagore (This Liagore whilome had learned skill In leaches craft, by great Appolloes lore, Sith her whilome upon high Pindus hill
He loved, and at last her wombe did fill With hevenly seed, whereof wise Pæon
sprong)
Did feele his pulse, shee knew there staid
still
Some litle life his feeble sprites emong; Which to his mother told, despeyre she from her flong.

XLII

Tho up him taking in their tender hands,
They easely unto her charett beare:
Her teme at her commaundement quiet
stands, Whiles they the corse into her wagon
reare,
And strowe with flowres the lamentable
beare:
Then all the rest into their coches clim,
And through the brackish waves their passage shear;
Upon great Neptunes necke they softly swim,
And to her watry chamber swiftly carry him.

XLIII

Deepe in the bottome of the sea, her bowre
Is built of hollow billowes heaped hye, Like to thicke clouds that threat a stormy
showre,
And vaulted all within, like to the skve,

In which the gods doe dwell eternally:
 There they him laide in easy couch well
 dight,
 And sent in haste for Tryphon, to apply Salves to his wounds, and medicines of
 might:
 For Tryphon of sea gods the soveraine leach is hight.

XLIV

The whiles the nymphes sitt all about him
 rownd,
 Lamenting his mishap and heavy plight;
 And ofte his mother, vewing his wide
 wound,
 Cursed the hand that did so deadly smight Her dearest sonne, her dearest harts de-
 light.
 But none of all those curses overtooke The warlike maide, th' ensample of that
 might;
 But fairely well shee thryvd, and well did
 brooke
 Her noble deeds, ne her right course for ought forsooke.

XLV

Yet did false Archimage her still pursew,
 To bring to passe his mischievous intent,
 Now that he had her singled from the crew Of courteous knights, the Prince and Fary
 gent,
 Whom late in chace of beauty excellent Shee lefte, pursewing that same foster
 strong;
 Of whose fowle outrage they impatient,
 And full of firy zeale, him followed long,
 To resker her from shame, and to revenge her wrong.

XLVI

Through thicke and thin, through mountains and through playns, Those two gret champions did attonce pur-
 sew
 The fearefull damzell, with incessant payns:
 Who from them fled, as light-foot hare from
 vew
 Of hunter swifte and sent of howndes trew.
 At last they came unto a double way, Where, doubtfull which to take, her to res-kew,
 Themselves they did dispart, each to assay Whether more happy were to win so goodly pray.

XLVII

But Timias, the Princees gentle squyre,
 That ladies love unto his lord forlent,
 And with proud envy and indignat yre
 After that wicked foster fiercely went.
 So beene they three three sondry wayes ybent:
 But fayrest fortune to the Prince befell; Whose chaunce it was, that soone he did repent,
 To take that way in which that damozell Was fledd afore, affraid of him as feend
 of hell.

XLVIII

At last of her far of he gained vew:
 Then gan he freshly pricke his fomy steed,
 And ever as he nigher to her drew,
 So evermore he did increase his speed,
 And of each turning still kept wary heed:
 Alowd to her he oftentimes did eall,
 To doe away vaine doubt and needlesse
 dreed:
 Full myld to her he spake, and oft let
 fall
 Many meeke wordes, to stay and comfort her withall.

XLIX

But nothing might relent her hasty flight;
 So deepe the deadly feare of that foule
 swaine
 Was earst impressed in her gentle spright: Like as a fearefull dove, which through the
 raine
 Of the wide ayre her way does cut amaine, Having farre off espyde a tassell gent, Which after her his nimble winges doth
 straine, Doubleth her hast for feare to bee for-hent,
 And with her pineons cleaves the liquid firmament.

L

With no lesse hast, and eke with no lesse
 dreed,
 That fearefull ladie fledd from him that
 ment
 To her no evill thought nor evill deed;
 Yet former feare of being fowly shent Carried her forward with her first intent:
 And though, oft looking backward, well she vewde
 Her selfe freed from that foster insolent,

And that it was a knight which now her sewde, Yet she no lesse the knight feard then that villain rude.

LI

His uncouth shield and straunge armes her
dismayd,
Whose like in Faery Lond were seldom
seene,

That fast she from him fledd, no lesse afrayd Then of wilde bestes if she had chased
bene:

Yet he her followd still with corage keene,
So long that now the golden Hesperus Was mounted high in top of heaven sheene,
And warnd his other brethren joyeous To light their blessed lamps in Joves eter-nall hous.

LII

All suddainly dim wox the dampish ayre,
And griesly shadowes covered heaven bright, That now with thousand starres was decked
fayre;

Which when the Prince beheld, a lothfull
sight,

And that perforce, for want of lenger light, He mote surceasse his suit, and lose the hope

Of his long labour, he gan fowly wyte
His wicked fortune, that had turnd aslope, And cursed Night, that reft from him so goodly scope.

LIII

Tho, when her wayes he could no more de-
sery,

But to and fro at disaventure strayd,
Like as a ship, whose lodestar suddainly Covered with cloudes her pilott hath dis-
mayd,

His wearisome pursuit perforce he stayd,
And from his loftie steed dismounting low, Did let him forage. Downe himselfe he
layd

Upon the grassy ground, to sleepe a throw;
The cold earth was his couch, the hard steele his pillow.

LIV

But gentle Sleepe envyde him any rest;
In stead thereof sad sorow and disdain
Of his hard hap did vexe his noble brest,
And thousand fancies bett his ydle brayne

With their light wings, the sights of semblants vaine;

Oft did he wish that lady faire mote bee His Faery Queene, for whom he did com-
plaine;

Or that his Faery Queene were such as
shee;

And ever hasty Night he blamed bitterlie.

LV

'Night, thou foule mother of annoyances
sad,

Sister of heavie Death, and nurse of Woe, Which wast begot in heaven, but for thy
bad

And brutish shape thrust downe to hell below,

Where by the grim flood of Coeytus slow Thy dwelling is, in Herebus black hous, (Black Erebus, thy husband, is the foe Of all the gods) where thou ungracious Halfe of thy dayes doest lead in horrour hideous:

LVI

'What had th' Eternal Maker need of thee,
The world in his continuall course to keepe,
That doest all thinges deface, ne lettest see The beautie of his worke? Indeed, in
sleepe

The slouthfull body that doth love to steep His lustlesse limbes, and drowne his baser
mind,

Doth praise thee oft, and oft from Stygian
deepe

Calles thee, his goddesse in his errour blind,
And great Dame Natures handmaide cheering every kind.

LVII

'But well I wote, that to an heavy hart Thou art the roote and nurse of bitter
cares,

Breeder of new, renewer of old smarts:
In stead of rest thou lendest rayling teares,
In stead of sleepe thou sendest troublous
feares

And dreadfull visions, in the which alive
The dreary image of sad death appeares:
So from the wearie spirit thou doest drive Desired rest, and men of happinesse deprive.

LVIII

'Under thy mantle black there hidden lye Light-shonning thefte, and traiterous intent,

Abhorred bloodshed, and vile felony, Shamefull deceipt, and daunger imminent, Fowle horror, and eke hellish dreriment:
 All these, I wote, in thy protection bee, And light doe shonne, for feare of being
 shent:

For light ylike is loth'd of them and thee, And all that lewdnesse love doe hate the light to see.

LIX

' For Day discovers all dishonest wayes, And sheweth each thing as it is in deed:
 The prayes of High God he faire dis-
 playes,

And His large bountie rightly doth areed.
 Dayes dearest children be the blessed seed Which Darknesse shall subdue and heaven
 win:

Truth is his daughter; he her first did
 breed,

Most sacred virgin, without spot of sinne.
 Our life is day, but death with darknesse doth begin.

LX

' O when will Day then turne to me againe,
 And bring with him his long expected light?
 O Titan, hast to reare thy joyous waine:
 Speed thee to spread abroad thy beames
 bright,

And chace away this too long lingring
 Night;

Chace her away, from whence she came, to hell:

She, she it is, that hath me done despight:
 There let her with the damned spirits dwell,
 And yield her rowme to Day, that can it governe well.'

LXI

Thus did the Prince that wearie night out-
 weare

In restlesse anguish and unquiet paine;
 And earely, ere the Morrow did upreare His deawy head out of the ocean maine,
 He up arose, as halfe in great disdaine, And clombe unto his steed. So forth he
 went,

With heavy looke and lumpish pace, that
 plaine

In him bewraid great grudge and mal-talent:

His steed eke seemd t' apply his steps to his intent.

CANTO V

Prince Arthur heares of Florimell:
 Three fosters Timias wound; Belphebe findes him almost dead,
 And reareth out of sownd.

I

WONDER it is to see in diverse mindes
 How diversly Love doth his pageaunts play,
 And shewes his powre in variable kindes:
 The baser wit, whose ydle thoughts alway Are wont to cleave unto the lowly clay,
 It stirreth up to sensuall desire,
 And in lewd slouth to wast his carelesse
 day:

But in brave sprite it kindles goodly fire,
 That to all high desert and honour doth aspire.

II

Ne suffereth it uncomely idlenesse
 In his free thought to build her sluggish nest;

Ne suffereth it thought of ungentlenesse Ever to creepe into his noble brest;
 But to the highest and the worthiest Lifteth it up, that els would lowly fall:
 It lettes not fall, it lettes it not to rest:
 It lettes not scarce this Prince to breath at
 all,

But to his first poursuit him forward still doth call.

III

Who long time wandred through the forest
 wyde,

To finde some issue thence, till that at last He met a dwarfe, that seemed terrifyde With some late perill, which he hardly past, Or other accident which him aghast;
 Of whom he asked, whence he lately came,
 And whether now he traveled so fast:
 For sore he swat, and ronning through that
 same

Thicke forest, was bescracht, and both his feet nigh lame.

IV

Panting for breath, and almost out of hart, The dwarfe him answerd: ' Sir, ill mote I
 stay

To tell the same. I lately did depart From Faery court, where I have many a
 day

Served a gentle lady of great sway

And high accompt through out all Elfin
Land,
Who lately left the same, and tooke this
way:
Her now I seeke, and if ye understand Which way she fared hath, good sir, tell out of hand.'

V

'What mister wight,' saide he, 'and how arayd?'
'Royally clad,' quoth he, 'in cloth of gold,
As meetest may beseeume a noble mayd;
Her faire lockes in rich cirelet be enrold,
A fayrer wight did never sunne behold;
And on a palfrey rydes more white then
snow,
Yet she her selfe is whiter manifold:
The surest signe, whereby ye may her
know,
Is, that she is the fairest wight alive, I trow.'

VI

'Now certes, swaine,' saide he, 'such one,
I weene,
Fast flying through this forest from her fo,
A foule ill favoured foster, I have seene;
Her selfe, well as I might, I reskewd tho,
But could not stay, so fast she did foregoe, Carried away with wings of speedy feare.'
'Ah, dearest God!' quoth he, 'that is great
woe,
And wondrous ruth to all that shall it
heare.
But can ye read, sir, how I may her finde, or where?'

VII

'Perdy, me lever were to weeten that,' Saide he, 'then ransome of the richest
knight,
Or all the good that ever yet I gat:
But froward Fortune, and too forward
Night,
Such happinesse did, maulgre, to me spight,
And fro me reft both life and light attone.
But, dwarfe, aread what is that lady bright, That through this forrest wandreth thus
alone;
For of her errour straunge I have great ruth and mone.'

VIII

'That ladie is,' quoth he, 'where so she bee,
The bountiest virgin and most debonaire

That ever living eye, I weene, did see; Lives none this day that may with her compare
In stedfast chastitie and vertue rare,
The goodly ornaments of beautie bright;
And is yeleped Florimell the Fayre, Faire Florimell, belov'd of many a knight, Yet she loves none but one, that Marinell is hight.

IX

'A sea-nymphes sonne, that Marinell is
hight,
Of my deare dame is loved dearely well;
In other none, but him, she sets delight,
All her delight is set on Marinell;
But he sets nought at all by Florimell:
For ladies love his mother long ygoe Did him, they say, forwarne through sacred spell.
But fame now flies, that of a forreine foe
He is ysleine, which is the ground of all our woe.

X

'Five daies there be since he (they say) was slaine,
And fowre, since Florimell the court for-
went,
And vowed never to returne againe,
Till him alive or dead she did invent.
Therefore, faire sir, for love of knight hood
gent
And honour of trew ladies, if ye may By your good counsell, or bold hardi-
ment,
Or succour her, or me direct the way, Do one or other good, I you most humbly pray.

XI

'So may ye gaine to you full great re-nowme
Of all good ladies through the world so
wide,
And haply in her hart finde highest rowme,
Of whom ye seeke to be most magnifide:
At least eternall meede shall you abide.'
To whom the Prince: 'Dwarfe, comfort to thee take;
For till thou tidings learne, what her be-
tide,
I here avow thee never to forsake.
Ill weares he armes, that nill them use for ladies sake.'

XII

So with the dwarfe he backe retourn'd
 againe,
 To seeke his lady, where he mote her
 finde;
 But by the way he greatly gan complaine The want of his good squire, late left be-hinde,
 For whom he wondrous pensive grew in
 minde,
 For doubt of daunger, which mote him be-
 tide;
 For him he loved above all mankinde, Having him trew and faithfull ever tride, And bold, as ever squire that waited by knights side.

XIII

Who all this while full hardly was assayd
 Of deadly daunger, which to him betidd;
 For whiles his lord pursewd that noble
 mayd,
 After that foster fowle he fiercely ridd,
 To bene avenged of the shame he did To that faire damzell. Him he chased
 long Through the thicke woods, wherein he would have hid His shamefull head from his avengement
 strong,
 And oft him threatned death for his outragegous wrong.

XIV

Nathlesse the villen sped himselfe so well, Whether through swiftnesse of his speedie
 beast,
 Or knowledge of those woods, where he did
 dwell,
 That shortly he from daunger was releast,
 And out of sight escaped at the least;
 Yet not escaped from the dew reward
 Of his bad deedes, which daily he increast, Ne ceased not, till him oppressed hard The heavie plague that for such leachours is prepard.

XV

For soone as he was vanisht out of sight,
 His coward courage gan emboldned bee,
 And cast t'avenge him of that fowle de-
 spight,
 Which he had borne of his bold enimee.
 Tho to his brethren came; for they were three

Ungratious children of one gracelesse syre;
 And unto them complayned how that he Had used beene of that foolehardie squire: So them with bitter words he stird to bloodie yre.

XVI

Forthwith themselves with their sad instruments
 Of spoyle and murder they gan arme by-
 live,
 And with him fourth into the forrest went,
 To wreake the wrath, which he did earst revive
 In their sterne breasts, on him which late did drive
 Their brother to reproch and shamefull
 flight:
 For they had vow'd, that never he alive Out of that forest should escape their
 might;
 Vile rancour their rude harts had filld with such despight.

XVII

Within that wood there was a covert glade, Foreby a narrow foord, to them well knowne, Through which it was unceath for wight to wade,
 And now by fortune it was overflowne:
 By that same way they knew that squire
 unknowne
 Mote algates passe; forthy themselves they
 set There in await, with thicke woods over growne,
 And all the while their malice they did whet
 With cruell threats, his passage through the ford to let.

XVIII

It fortun'd, as they devized had,
 The gentle squire came ryding that same
 way,
 Unweeting of their wile and treason bad,
 And through the ford to passen did as-
 say;
 But that fierce foster, which late fled away, Stoutly fourth stepping on the further
 shore,
 Him boldly bad his passage there to stay, Till he had made amends, and full restore For all the damage which he had him doen afore.

XIX

With that, at him a quiv'ring dart he threw,
 With so fell force and villenous despite,
 That through his haberjeon the forkehead
 flew,
 And through the linked mayles empierced
 quite,
 But had no powre in his soft flesh to bite:
 That stroke the hardy squire did sore dis-
 please,
 But more that him he could not come to smite;
 For by no meanes the high banke he could
 cease,
 But labour'd long in that deepe ford with vaine disease.

XX

And still the foster with his long bore-
 speare
 Him kept from landing at his wished will.
 Anone one sent out of the thicket neare
 A cruell shaft, headed with deadly ill,
 And feathered with an unlucky quill:
 The wicked steele stayd not, till it did light
 In his left thigh, and deepely did it thrill: Exceeding grieffe that wound in him em-
 pight,
 But more that with his foes he could not come to fight.

XXI

At last, through wrath and vengeance making way,
 He on the bancke arryvd with mickle payne, Where the third brother him did sore as-
 say,
 And drove at him with all his might and
 mayne
 A forest bill, which both his hands did
 strayne;
 But warily he did avoide the blow,
 And with his speare requited him agayne, That both his sides were thrilled with the
 throw,
 And a large streame of blood out of the wound did flow.

XXII

He, tombling downe, with gnashing teeth did bite
 The bitter earth, and bad to lett him in Into the balefull house of endlesse night, Where wicked ghosts doe waile their former sin.

Tho gan the battaile freshly to begin;
 For nathemore for that spectacle bad Did th' other two their cruell vengeance blin,
 But both attonce on both sides him bestad, And load upon him layd, his life for to have had.

XXIII

Tho when that villayn he aviz'd, which late Affrighted had the fairest Florimell, Full of fiers fury and indignat hate,
 To him he turned, and with rigor fell Smote him so rudely on the pannikell, That to the chin he clefte his head in
 twaine:
 Downe on the ground his carkas groveling
 fell;
 His sinfull sowle, with desperate disdaine, Out of her fleshly ferme fled to the place of paine.

XXIV

That seeing now the only last of three,
 Who with that wicked shafte him wounded
 had,
 Trembling with horror, as that did foresee
 The fearefull end of his avengement sad, Through which he follow should his brethren bad,
 His bootelesse bow in feeble hand upcaught,
 And therewith shott an arrow at the lad;
 Which, fayntly fluttring, scarce his helmet
 rought,
 And glauncing fel to ground, but him annoyed naught.

XXV

With that he would have fled into the wood;
 But Timias him lightly overhent, Right as he entring was into the flood,
 And strooke at him with force so violent,
 That headlesse him into the foord he sent;
 The carcas with the streame was carried
 downe,
 But th' head fell backward on the continent.
 So mischief fel upon the meaners crowne;
 They three be dead with shame, the squire lives with renouwe.

XXVI

He lives, but takes small joy of his renouwe;
 For of that cruell wound he bled so sore,

That from his steed he fell in deadly swowne;
 Yet still the blood forth gusht in so great
 store,
 That he lay wallowd all in his owne gore.
 Now God thee keepe, thou gentlest squire
 alive,
 Els shall thy loving lord thee see no more,
 But both of comfort him thou shalt deprive,
 And eke thy selfe of honor, which thou didst atchive.

XXVII

Providence hevenly passeth living thought,
 And doth for wretched mens reliefe make
 way;
 For loe! great grace or fortune thether
 brought Comfort to him that comfortlesse now
 lay.
 In those same woods, ye well remember
 may
 How that a noble hunteresse did wonne, Shee that base Braggadochio did affray,
 And made him fast out of the forest ronne; Belphœbe was her name, as faire as Phæ-bus sunne.

XXVIII

She on a day, as shee pursewd the chace
 Of some wilde beast, which with her arrowes
 keene
 She wounded had, the same along did
 trace
 By tract of blood, which she had freshly
 seene
 To have besprinkled all the grassy greene;
 By the great persue, which she there per-ceav'd,
 Well hoped shee the beast engor'd had
 beene,
 And made more haste, the life to have bereav'd:
 But ah! her expectation greatly was de-ceav'd.

XXIX

Shortly she came whereas that woefull
 squire,
 With blood deformed, lay in deadly
 swownd:
 In whose faire eyes, like lamps of quenched
 fire,
 The christall humor stood congealed rownd;

His locks, like faded leaves fallen to
 grownd,
 Knotted with blood in bouches rudely ran;
 And his sweete lips, on which before that
 stownd
 The bud of youth to blossome faire began, Spoild of their rosy red, were woxen pale and wan.

XXX

Saw never living eie more heavy sight, That could have made a rocke of stone to
 rew,
 Or rive in twaine: which when that lady
 bright,
 Besides all hope, with melting eies did
 vew,
 All suddainly abasht shee changed hew,
 And with sterne horror backward gan to start:
 But when shee better him beheld, shee grew Full of soft passion and unwonted smart:
 The point of pittie perced through her tender hart.

XXXI

Meekely shee bowed downe, to weete if life
 Yett in his frozen members did remaine;
 And feeling by his pulses beating rife That the weake sowle her seat did yett re-
 taine,
 She cast to comfort him with busy paine:
 His double folded necke she reard upright, And rubd his temples and each trembling
 vaine;
 His mayled haberjeon shee did undight,
 And from his head his heavy burganet did
 light.

XXXII

Into the woods thenceforth in haste shee
 went,
 To seeke for hearbes that mote him remedy;
 For shee of herbes had great intendiment, Taught of the nymphe, which from her infancy
 Her noureed had in trew nobility:
 There, whether yt divine tobacco were,
 Or panachæa, or polygony, Shee fownd, and brought it to her patient
 deare,
 Who al this while lay bleding out his hart-blood neare.

XXXIII

The soveraine weede betwixt two marbles
 plaine
 Shee poundd small, and did in peeces
 bruze,

And then atweene her lilly handes twaine Into his wound the juice thereof did seruze,
 And round about, as she could well it uze,
 The flesh therewith shee suppled and did
 steepe,
 T' abate all spasme and soke the swelling
 bruze,
 And after having searcht the intuse deepe, She with her scarf did bind the wound from cold to keepe.

XXXIV

By this he had sweet life recur'd agayne,
 And, groning inly deepe, at last his eies,
 His watry eies, drizzling like deawy rayne,
 He up gan lifte toward the azure skies, From whence descend all hopelesse remedies :
 Therewith he sigh'd, and turning him aside,
 The goodly maide ful of divinities
 And gifts of heavenly grace he by him spide, Her bow and gilden quiver lying him beside.

XXXV

'Mercy! deare Lord,' said he, 'what grace is this,
 That thou hast shewed to me, sinfull wight, To send thine angell from her bowre of
 blis,
 To comfort me in my distressed plight ?
 Angell, or goddesse doe I call thee right ?
 What service may I doe unto thee meete, That hast from darkenes me returnd to
 light,
 And with thy hevenly salves and med'cines
 sweete
 Hast drest my sinfull wounds ? I kisse thy blessed feete.

XXXVI

Thereat she blushing said: 'Ah! gentle
 squire,
 Nor goddesse I, nor angell, but the mayd
 And daughter of a woody nympe, desire No service but thy safety and ayd;
 Which if thou gaine, I shalbe well apayd.
 Wee mortall wights, whose lives and fortunes
 be
 To commun accidents stil open layd,

Are bownd with commun bond of frailtee, To succor wretched wights, whom we captived see.'

XXXVII

By this her damzells, which the forme
 chace
 Had undertaken after her, arryv'd, As did Belphebe, in the bloody place,
 And thereby deemd the beast had bene de-
 priv'd
 Of life, whom late their ladies arrow ryv'd:
 Forthy the bloody tract they followd fast,
 And every one to ronne the swiftest stryv'd;
 But two of them the rest far overpast, And where their lady was arrived at the last.

XXXVIII

Where when they saw that goodly boy, with
 blood
 Defowled, and their lady dresse his wownd, They wondred much, and shortly understood
 How him in deadly case theyr lady fownd,
 And reskewed out of the heavy stownd.
 Eftsoones his warlike courser, which was
 strayd Farre in the woodes, whiles that he lay in swownd,
 She made those damzels search, which being stayd,
 They did him set theron, and forth with them convayd.

XXXIX

Into that forest farre they thence him
 led,
 Where was their dwelling, in a pleasant glade
 With mountaines rownd about environed, And mightie woodes, which did the valley
 shade,
 And like a stately theatre it made,
 Spreading it selfe into a spations plaine;
 And in the midst a little river plaide Emongst the puny stones, which seemd to
 plaine
 With gentle murmure that his cours they did restraine.

XL

Beside the same a dainty place there lay, Planted with mirtle trees and laurells
 greene,

In which the birds song many a lovely lay Of Gods high praise, and of their loves sweet teene,

As it an earthly paradize had beene:
In whose enclosed shadow there was pight
A faire pavilion, scarcely to be seene,
The which was al within most richly dight, That greatest princes living it mote well delight.

XLI

Thether they brought that wounded squyre, and layd

In easie couch his feeble limbes to rest.
He rested him a while, and then the mayd His readie wound with better salves new
drest:

Daily she dressed him, and did the best,
His grievous hurt to guarish, that she might,
That shortly she his dolour hath redrest,
And his foule sore reduced to faire plight:
It she reduced, but himselfe destroyed
quight.

XLII

O foolish physick, and unfruitfull paine, That heales up one and makes another
wound!

She his hurt thigh to him recurd againe.
But hurt his hart, the which before was
sound,

Through an unwary dart, which did rebownd From her faire eyes and gracious countenaunce.

What bootes it him from death to be un-
bownd,
To be captived in endlesse duraunce Of sorrow and despeyre without alegge-aunce?

XLIII

Still as his wound did gather, and grow hole,
So still his hart woxe sore, and health de-cayd:

Madnesse to save a part, and lose the whole!
Still whenas he beheld the heavenly mayd, Whiles dayly playsters to his wovnd she
layd,
So still his malady the more increast, The whiles her matchlesse beautie him dis-
mayd.

Ah God! what other could he doe at least,
But love so fayre a lady, that his life re-least?

XLIV

Long while he strove in his corageous brest,
With reason dew the passion to subdew,
And love for to dislodge out of his nest:
Still when her excellencies he did vew,
Her soveraine bountie and celestiaall hew, The same to love he strongly was con-
straynd:

But when his meane estate he did review,
He from such hardy boldnesse was re-
straynd,
And of his lucklesse lott and cruell love thus playnd.

XLV

'Unthankfull wretch,' said he, 'is this the
meed,
With which her soverain mercy thou doest
quight?

Thy life she saved by her gracious deed, But thou doest weene with villeanous de-
spight

To blott her honour and her heavenly light.
Dye rather, dye, then so disloyally Deeme of her high desert, or seeme so
light:

Fayre death it is, to shonne more shame,
to dy:

Dye rather, dy, then ever love disloyally.

XLVI

'But if to love disloyalty it bee, Shall I then hate her, that from deathes
dore

Me brought? ah! farre be such reproch fro
mee!

What can I lesse doe, then her love there-
fore,

Sith I her dew reward cannot restore?
Dye rather, dye, and dying doe her serve,
Dying her serve, and living her adore; Thy life she gave, thy life she doth deserve:

Dye rather, dye, then ever from her service swerve.

XLVII

'But, foolish boy, what bootes thy service
bace

To her, to whom the hevens doe serve and
sew?

Thou a meane squyre, of meeke and lowly
place,

She heavenly borne, and of celestiaall hew.
How then? of all Love taketh equall vew:

And doth not Highest God vouchsafe to
take
The love and service of the basest crew?
If she will not, dye meekly for her sake: Dye rather, dye, then ever so faire love forsake.

XLVIII

Thus warreid he long time against his will,
Till that through weaknesse he was forst at last

To yield himselfe unto the mightie ill:
Which, as a victour proud, gan ransack fast His inward partes, and all his entrayles
wast,

That neither blood in face nor life in hart It left, but both did quite drye up and
blast;

As percing levin, which the inner part Of every thing consumes and calcineth by art.

XLIX

Which seeing fayre Belpheobe, gan to feare Least that his wound were inly well not heald,

Or that the wicked steele empoysned were:
Litle shee weend that love he close conceald:

Yet still he wasted, as the snow congeald, When the bright sunne his beams theron doth beat;

Yet never he his hart to her reveald,
But rather chose to dye for sorow great,
Then with dishonorable termes her to entreat.

She, gracious lady, yet no paines did spare,
To doe him ease, or doe him remedy:

Many restoratives of vertues rare
And costly cordialles she did apply,
To mitigate his stubborne malady:

But that sweet cordiall, which can restore A love-siek hart, she did to him envy; To him, and to all th' unworthy world for-
lore,

She did envy that soveraine salve, in secret
store.

LI

That daintie rose, the daughter of her morne,
More deare then life she tendered, whose
flowre

The girlond of her honour did adorne: Ne suffred she the middayes scorching
powre,
Ne the sharp northerne wind thereon to
showre,

But lapped up her silken leaves most chayre,
When so the froward skye began to lowre:
But soone as calmed was the christall ayre,
She did it fayre dispred, and let to flourish
fayre.

LII

Eternall God, in his almightie powre,
To make ensample of his heavenly grace,
In paradize whylome did plant this flowre;
Whence he it fetcht out of her native place,
And did in stocke of earthly flesh enrace,
That mortall men her glory should admyre.
In gentle ladies breste and bounteous race
Of woman kind it fayrest flowre doth spyre,
And beareth fruit of honour and all chast desyre.

LIII

Fayre ympes of beautie, whose bright shining beames

Adorne the world with like to heavenly
light,

And to your willes both royalties and reames

Subdew, through conquest of your wondrous might,

With this fayre flowre your goodly girlonds
dight

Of chastity and vertue virginall, That shall embellish more your beautie
bright,

And crowne your heades with heavenly coronall,

Such as the angels weare before Gods tribunall.

LIV

To youre faire selves a faire ensample
frame

Of this faire virgin, this Belphebe fayre,
To whom, in perfect love and spotlesse fame
Of chastitie, none living may compayre:

Ne poysnous envy justly can empayre
The prayse of her fresh flowing mayden-
head;

Forthy she standeth on the highest stayre
Of th' honorable stage of womanhead, That ladies all may follow her ensample
dead.

LV

In so great prayse of stedfast chastity Nathlesse she was so courteous and kynde,
'Tempred with grace and goodly modesty, That seemed those two vertues strove to
fynd

The higher place in her heroick mynd:
So striving each did other more augment,
And both encrease the prayse of woman
kynde,
And both encrease her beautie excellent;
So all did make in her a perfect complement.

CANTO VI

The birth of fayre Belphoebe and Of Amorett is told:
The Gardins of Adonis fraught With pleasures manifold.

I

WELL may I weene, faire ladies, all this
while

Ye wonder how this noble damozell
So great perfections did in her compile, Sith that in salvage forests she did dwell,
So farre from court and royall citadell,
The great schoolmaistresse of all courtesy: Seemeth that such wilde woodes should far expell
All civile usage and gentility, And gentle sprite deforme with rude rus-ticity.

II

But to this faire Belphœbe in her berth
The heavens so favorable were and free, Looking with myld aspect upon the earth
In th' horoscope of her nativitee,
That all the gifts of grace and chastitee
On her they poured forth of plenteous horne; Jove laught on Venus from his soverayne
see,
And Phœbus with faire beames did her
adorne,
And all the Graces rockt her cradle being borne.

III

Her berth was of the wombe of morning
dew,
And her conception of the joyous prime,
And all her whole creation did her shew Pure and unspotted from all loathly crime,

That is ingenerate in fleshy slime.
So was this virgin borne, so was she bred,
So was she trayned up from time to time
In all chaste vertue and true bounti-hed, Till to her dew perfection she was ripened

IV

Her mother was the faire Chrysogonee,
The daughter of Amphisa, who by race
A Faerie was, yborne of high degree:
She bore Belphœbe, she bore in like cace Fayre Amoretta in the second place:
These two were twinnes, and twixt them two did share
The heritage of all celestially grace;
That all the rest it seemd they robbed bare Of bounty, and of beautie, and all vertues rare.

It were a goodly storie to declare By what straunge accident faire Chrysogone Conceiv'd these infants, and how them she
bare,
In this wilde forrest wandring all alone, After she had nine moneths fulfilled and
gone:
For not as other wemens commune brood
They were enwombed in the sacred throne Of her chaste bodie, nor with commune
food,
As other wemens babes, they sucked vitall
blood.

VI

But wondrously they were begot and bred, Through influence of th' heavens fruitfull
ray,
As it in antique bookes is mentioned.
It was upon a sommers shinie day,
When Titan faire his beames did display,
In a fresh fountaine, far from all mens vew, She bath'd her brest, the boyling heat t' allay;
She bath'd with roses red and violets blew,
And all the sweetest flowres that in the forrest grew:

VII

Till, faint through yrkesome wearines, adowne
Upon the grassy ground her selfe she layd To sleepe, the whiles a gentle slombring
swowne
Upon her fell all naked bare displayd:

The sunbeames bright upon her body
 playd,
 Being through former bathing mollifide, And pierst into her wombe, where they embayd
 With so sweet sence and secret power un-
 spide,
 That in her pregnant flesh they shortly fructifide.

VIII

Miraculous may seeme to him that reades
 So straunge ensample of conception; But reason teacheth that the fruitfull seades

Of all things living, through impression Of the sunbeames in moyst complexion, Doe life conceive and quickned are by
 kynd:

So, after Nilus inundation, Infinite shapes of creatures men doe fynd, Informed in the mud, on which the sunne hath shynd.

IX

Great father he of generation Is rightly cald, th' authour of life and
 light;

And his faire sister for creation Ministreth matter fit, which, tempred right With heate and humour, breeds the living
 wight.

So sprong these twinnnes in womb of Chryso-
 gone;

Yet wist she nought thereof, but, sore af-
 fright,

Wondred to see her belly so upblone, Which still increast, till she her terme had full outgone.

Whereof conceiving shame and foule dis-
 grace,

Albe her guiltlesse conscience her cleard,
 She fled into the wilderness a space,
 Till that unweeldy burden she had reard, And shund dishonor, which as death she
 feard:

Where, wearie of long travaill, downe to
 rest

Her selfe she set, and comfortably cheard;
 There a sad cloud of sleepe her over-keast,

And seized every sence with sorrow sore
 opprest.

XI

It fortun'd, faire Venus having lost Her little sonne, the winged God of Love, Who for some light displeasure, which him
 crost,

Was from her fled, as flit as avery dove,
 And left her blisfull bowre of joy above; (So from her often he had fled away, When she for ought him sharply did re-
 prove,

And wandred in the world in straunge aray, Disguiz'd in thousand shapes, that none might him bewray;)

XII

Him for to seeke, she left her heavenly hous,

The house of goodly formes and faire aspects,

Whence all the world derives the glorious Features of beautie, and all shapes select, With which High God his workmanship hath deckt;

And searched everie way through which his wings

Had borne him, or his tract she mote detect:

She promist kisses sweet, and sweeter
 things,

Unto the man that of him tydings to her brings.

XIII

First she him sought in court, where most he us'd

Whylome to haunt, but there she found him
 not;

But many there she found, which sore accus'd

His falshood, and with fowle infamous blot His cruell deedes and wicked wyles did spot:

Ladies and lordes she every where mote
 heare

Complayning, how with his empoynsed shot

Their wofull harts he wounded had whyl-
 eare,

And so had left them languishing twixt hope and feare.

XIV

She then the cities sought from gate to
 gate,

And everie one did aske, did he him see ?

And everie one her answerd, that too late
 He had him seene, and felt the crueltie
 Of his sharpe dartes and whot artilleree;
 And every one threw forth reproches rife Of his mischievous deedes, and sayd that
 hee

Was the disturber of all civill life,
 The enemy of peace, and outhour of all strife.

XV

Then in the countrey she abroad him
 sought,

And in the rurall cottages inquir'd, Where also many plaintes to her were
 brought,

How he their heedelesse harts with love had fir'd,

And his false venim through their veines inspir'd;

And eke the gentle shepheard swaynes, which sat

Keeping their fleecy flockes, as they were hyr'd,

She sweetly heard complaine both how and what

Her some had to them doen; yet she did smile thereat.

XVI

But when in none of all these she him got,
 She gan avize where els he mote him hyde:
 At last she her bethought, that she had
 not

Yet sought the salvage woods and forests
 wyde,

In which full many lovely nymphes abyde, Mongst whom might be that he did closely
 lye,

Or that the love of some of them him
 tyde:

Forthy she thether east her course t' apply,
 To search the secret haunts of Dianes company.

XVII

Shortly unto the wastefull woods she came, Whereas she found the goddesse with her
 crew,

After late chace of their embrewed game,
 Sitting beside a fountaine in a rew;

Some of them washing with the liquid dew
 From of their dainty limbs the dusty sweat And soyle, which did deforme their lively
 hew;

Others lay shaded from the scorching heat;
 The rest upon her person gave attendance
 great.

XVIII

She, having hong upon a bough on high Her bow and painted quiver, had unlaste Her silver buskins from her nimble thigh,
 And her lanck loynes ungirt, and breasts un-braste,

After her heat the breathing cold to taste;
 Her golden lockes, that late in tresses
 bright

Embreaded were for hindring of her haste, Now loose about her shoulders hong un-
 dight,

And were with sweet ambrosia all besprinkled light.

XIX

Soone as she Venus saw behinde her backe,
 She was asham'd to be so loose surpriz'd, And woxe halfe wroth against her damzels slacke,

That had not her thereof before aviz'd,
 But suffred her so carelesly disguiz'd

Be overtaken. Soone her garments loose Upgath ring, in her bosome she compriz'd, Well as she might, and to the goddesse rose,

Whiles all her nymphes did like a girlond her enclose.

XX

Goodly she gan faire Cytherea greet, And shortly asked her, what cause her
 brought

Into that wilderness for her unmeet, From her sweete bowres, and beds with pleasures fraught:

That suddain chaung she straung advent-ture thought.

To whom halfe weeping she thus answered:
 That she her dearest sonne Cupido sought,
 Who in his frowardnes from her was fled;
 That she repented sore to have him angered.

XXI

Thereat Diana gan to smile, in scorne Of her vaine playnt, and to her scoffing
 sayd:

'Great pittie sure that ye be so forlorne Of your gay sonne, that gives ye so good
 ayd

To your disports: all mote ye bene apayd!'

But she was more enrieved, and replide:
 'Faire sister, ill besemes it to upbrayd
 A dolefull heart with so disdainfull pride;
 The like that mine, may be your paine another tide.

XXII

'As you in woods and wanton wildernesse Your glory sett, to chace the salvage beasts, So my delight is all in joyfulnessse,
 In beds, in bowres, in buckets, and in feasts:

And ill becomes you, with your lofty creasts,
 To scorne the joy that Jove is glad to seeke;
 We both are bownd to follow heavens beheasts,
 And tend our charges with obeisaunce
 meeke:

Spare, gentle sister, with reproch my paine to eeke.

XXIII

'And tell me if that ye my soune have heard To lurke emongst your nimphes in secret
 wize,

Or keepe their cabins: much I am affeard, Least he like one of them him selfe disguise,
 And turne his arrowes to their exercise:

So may he long him selfe full easie hide:
 For he is faire, and fresh in face and guise,
 As any nimphe (let not it be envide.)
 So saying, every nimph full narrowly shee eide.

XXIV

But Phœbe therewith sore was angered, And sharply saide: 'Goe, dame; goe, seeke your boy,

Where you him lately left, in Mars his bed:
 He comes not here; we scorne his foolish
 joy,

Ne lend we leisure to his idle toy:
 But if I catch him in this company,
 By Stygian lake I vow, whose sad annoy
 The gods doe dread, he dearly shall aby: e He clip his wanton wings, that he no more shall flye.'

XXV

Whom whenas Venus saw so sore displeas'd, Shee inly sorry was, and gan relent What shee had said: so her shee soone ap-peas'd
 With sugred words and gentle blandish-
 ment,

Which as a fountaine from her sweete lips
 went,

And welled goodly forth, that in short space
 She was well pleas'd, and forth her damzells
 sent

Through all the woods, to search from place to place,

If any tract of him or tidings they mote traee.

XXVI

To search the God of Love her nimphes she
 sent,

Throughout the wandring forest every where:

And after them her selfe eke with her went To seeke the fugitive both farre and nere.
 So long they sought, till they arriv'd were In that same shady covert whereas lay Faire Crysogone in slombry traunce whilere: Who in her sleepe (a wondrous thing to
 say)

Unwares had borne two babes, as faire as springing day.

XXVII

Unwares she them conceiv'd, unwares she
 bore:

She bore withouten paine that she conceiv'd Withouten pleasure: ne her need implore Lucinaes aide: which when they both perceiv'd,

They were through wonder nigh of sence berev'd,

And gazing each on other, nought bespake:
 At last they both agreed, her seeming griev'd Out of her heavie swowne not to awake, But from her loving side the tender babes
 to take.

XXVIII

Up they them tooke, eachone a babe up-
 tooke,

And with them carried, to be fostered: Dame Phœbe to a nymphe her babe be-
 tooke,

To be upbrought in perfect maydenhed, And, of her selfe, her name Belpheœbe
 red:

But Venus hers thence far away conveyd,
 To be upbrought in goodly womanhed, And in her litle Loves stead, which was
 strayd,

Her Amoretta cald, to comfort her dis-mayd.

XXIX

Shée brought her to her joyous paradize, Wher most she wones, when she on earth does dwell:

So faire a place as Nature can devise:
Whether in Paphos, or Cytheron hill,
Or it in Gnidus bee, I wote not well;
But well I wote by triall, that this same All other pleasaunt places doth excell,
And called is by her lost lovers name, The Gardin of Adonis, far renownd by fame.

XXX

In that same gardin all the goodly flowres, Wherewith Dame Nature doth her beautify,
And decks the girlonds of her paramoures,
Are fetcht: there is the first seminary Of all things that are borne to live and
dye,
According to their kyuds. Long worke it
were,

Here to account the endlesse progeny Of all the weeds that bud and blossome
there;
But so much as doth need must needs be counted here.

XXXI

It sited was in fruitfull soyle of old,
And girt in with two walls on either side,
The one of yron, the other of bright gold,
That none might thorough breake, nor over-stride:

And double gates it had, which opened
wide,
By which both in and out men moten pas;
Th' one faire and fresh, the other old and drid:

Old Genius the porter of them was,
Old Genius, the which a double nature has.

XXXII

He letteth in, he letteth out to wend,
All that to come into the world desire:
A thousand thousand naked babes attend About him day and night, which doe require
That he with fleshy weeds would them attire:

Such as him list, such as eternall Fate Ordained hath, he clothes with sinfull mire,
And sendeth forth to live in mortall state, Till they agayn returne backe by the hinder
gate.

XXXIII

After that they againe returned beene,
They in that gardin planted bee agayne,
And grow afresh, as they had never seene Fleshly corruption nor mortall payne.
Some thousand yeares so doen they there remayne,
And then of him are clad with other hew,
Or sent into the changefull world agayne, Till thether they retourn, where first they
grew:
So like a wheele arownd they ronne from old to new.

XXXIV

Ne needs there gardiner to sett or sow.
To plant or prune: for of their owne accord
All things, as they created were, doe grow,
And yet remember well the mighty word,
Which first was spoken by th' Almighty
Lord,
That bad them to increase and multiply:
Ne doe they need with water of the ford Or of the clouds to moysten their roots
dry;
For in themselves eternall moisture they imply.

XXXV

Infinite shapes of creatures there are bred,
And uncout forms, which none yet ever
knew;
And every sort is in a sondry bed Sett by it selfe, and ranckt in comely rew:
Some fitt for reasonable sowles t' indew, Some made for beasts, some made for birds
to weare,
And all the fruitfull spawne of fishes hew In endlesse rancks along enraunged were,
That seemd the ocean could not containe them there.

XXXVI

Daily they grow, and daily forth are sent Into the world, it to replenish more;
Yet is the stocke not lessened nor spent,
But still remaines in everlasting store,
As it at first created was of yore:
For in the wide wombe of the world there
lyes,
In batefull darknes and in deepe horrour,
An huge eternal chaos, which supplies The substauces of Natures fruitfull pro-creues.

XXXVII

All things from thence doe their first being fetch,
 And borrow matter whereof they are made,
 Which, whenas forme and feature it does ketch,
 Becomes a body, and doth then invade
 The state of life out of the griesly shade.
 That substance is eterne, and bideth so, Ne when the life decays, and forme does
 fade,
 Doth it consume and into nothing goe, But changed is, and often altdred to and froe.

XXXVIII

The substance is not chaungd nor altered,
 But th' only forme and outward fashion;
 For every substance is conditioned To change her hew, and sondry formes to don,
 Meet for her temper and complexion:
 For formes are variable, and decay
 By course of kinde and by occasion;
 And that faire flowre of beautie fades
 away,
 As doth the lilly fresh before the sunny ray.

XXXIX

Great enemy to it, and to all the rest,
 That in the Gardin of Adonis springs, Is wicked Tyne, who, with his seyth ad-
 drest,
 Does mow the flowering herbes and goodly
 things,
 And all their glory to the ground downe flings,
 Where they do wither and are fowly mard:
 He flies about, and with his flaggy winges Beates downe both leaves and buds without regard,
 Ne ever pittty may relent his malice hard.

XL

Yet pittty often did the gods relent, To see so faire thinges mard and spoiled
 night:
 And their great mother Venus did lament
 The losse of her deare brood, her deare de-
 light:
 Her hart was pierst with pittty at the sight, When walking through the gardin them she
 saw,
 Yet no'te she find redresse for such despight:

For all that lives is subject to that law:
 All things decay in time, and to their end doe draw.

XLI

But were it not, that Time their troubler is,
 All that in this delightfull gardin growes Should happy bee, and have immortall blis:
 For here all plenty and all pleasure flowes, And sweete Love gentle fitts amongst them
 throwes,
 Without fell rancor or fond gealosity:
 Frackly each paramor his leman knowes,
 Each bird his mate, ne any does envy
 Their goodly meriment and gay felicity.

XLII

There is continuall spring, and harvest
 there Continuall, both meeting at one tyme:
 For both the boughes doe laughing blossoms
 beare,
 And with fresh colours decke the wanton pryme,
 And eke atounce the heavy trees they clyme,
 Which seeme to labour under their fruites lode:
 The whiles the joyous birdes make their pastyme Emongst the shady leaves, their sweet abode,
 And their trew loves without suspicion tell abroad.

XLIII

Right in the midst of that paradise There stood a stately mount, on whose round top
 A gloomy grove of mirtle trees did rise, Whose shady boughes sharp steele did never lop, Nor wicked beastes their tender buds did crop,
 But like a girlond compassed the hight,
 And from their fruitfull sydes sweet gum did drop,
 That all the ground, with pretious deaw bedight, Threw forth most dainty odours, and most sweet delight.

XLIV

And in the thickest covert of that shade
 There was a pleasaunt arber, not by art,

But of the trees owne inclination made,
Which knitting their rancke braunches part to part,
With wanton yvie twyne entrayld athwart,
And eglantine and caprifole emong, Fashiond above within their inmost part,
That nether Phoebus beams could through them throng, Nor Aeolus sharp blast could worke them any wrong.

XLV

And all about grew every sort of flowre, To which sad lovers were transformde of
yore;
Fresh Hyacinthus, Phœbus paramoure
And dearest love,
Foolish Narcisse, that likes the watry shore, Sad Amaranthus, made a flowre but late,
Sad Amaranthus, in whose purple gore Me seemes I see Amintas wretched fate, To whom sweet poets verse hath given endlesse date.

XLVI

There wont fayre Venus often to enjoy Her deare Adonis joyous company, And reape sweet pleasure of the wanton
boy:
There yet, some say, in secret he does ly, Lapped in flowers and pretious spycery, By her hid from the world, and from the
skill
Of Stygian gods, which doe her love envy;
But she her selfe, when ever that she will, Possesseth him, and of his sweetnesse takes her fill.

XLVII

And sooth, it seemes, they say: for he may
not
For ever dye, and ever buried bee In balefull night, where all things are forgot;
All be he subject to mortalitie,
Yet is eterne in mutabilitie,
And by succession made perpetuall, Transformed oft, and chaunged diverslie:
For him the father of all formes they call; Therefore needs mote he live, that living gives to all.

XLVIII

There now he liveth in eternall blis,
Joying his goddesse, and of her enjoyd:

Ne feareth he henceforth that foe of his,
Which with his cruell tuske him deadly cloyd:
For that wilde bore, the which him once annoyd,
She firmly hath emprisoned for ay,
That her sweet love his malice mote avoyd, In a strong rocky cave, which is, they
say, Hewen underneath that mount, that none him losen may.

XLIX

There now he lives in everlasting joy,
With many of the gods in company, Which thether haunt, and with the winged
boy
Sporting him selfe in safe felicity:
Who, when he hath with spoiles and cruelty Ransackt the world, and in the wofull
harts
Of many wretches set his triumphes hyc,
Thether resortes, and laying his sad dartes Asyde, with faire Adonis playes his wanton partes.

And his trew love, faire Psyche, with him
playes,
Fayre Psyche to him lately reconcyld,
After long troubles and unmeet upbrayes,
With which his mother Venus her revyld,
And eke himselfe her cruelly exyld:
But now in stedfast love and happy state She with him lives, and hath him borne a chylde,
Pleasure, that doth both gods and men
aggrate,
Pleasure, the daughter of Cupid and Psyche
late.

LI

Hether great Venus brought this infant
fayre,
The yonger daughter of Chrysogonee,
And unto Psyche with great trust and care Committed her, yfostered to bee,
And trained up in trew feminitee:
Who no lesse carefully her tendered Then her owne daughter Pleasure, to whom
shee
Made her companion, and her lessoned In all the lore of love and goodly woman-head.

LII

In which when she to perfect ripenes grew,
Of grace and beautie noble paragone,
She brought her forth into the worldes vew,
To be th' ensample of true love alone,
And lodestarre of all chaste affection
To all fayre ladies, that doe live on grownd.
To Faery court she came, where many one Admyrd her goodly haveour, and fownd His feeble hart wide launched with loves cruel wownd.

LIII

But she to none of them her love did cast, Save to the noble knight, Sir Scudamore,
To whom her loving hart she linked fast
In faithfull love, t' abide for evermore,
And for his dearest sake endured sore, Sore trouble of an hainous enemy,
Who her would forced have to have forlore Her former love and stedfast loialty, As ye may elsewhere reade that ruefull history.

LIV

But well I weene ye first desire to learne
What end unto that fearefull damozell, Which fledd so fast from that same foster
stearne,
Whom with his brethren Timias slew, be-
fell:
That was, to weet, the goodly Florinell,
Who, wandring for to seeke her lover deare,
Her lover deare, her dearest Marinell, Into misfortune fell, as ye did heare,
And from Prince Arthure fled with wings of idle feare.

CANTO VII

The witches sonne loves Florinell:
She flies, he faines to dy.
Satyrane saves the Squire of Dames From gyaunts tyranny.

I

LIKE as an hynd forth singled from the
heard,
That hath escaped from a ravenous beast,
Yet flies away of her owne feete afeard, And every leafe, that shaketh with the least Murmure of winde, her terror hath encreast;
So fledd fayre Florinell from her vaine
feare,

Long after she from perill was releast:
Each shade she saw, and each noyse she did
heare,
Did seeme to be the same which she escapt whileare.

II

All that same evening she in flying spent,
And all that night her course continewd:
Ne did she let dull sleepe once to relent, Nor wearinesse to slack her hast, but fled Ever alike, as if her former dred Were hard behind, her ready to arrest:
And her white palfrey, having conquered The maistring raines out of her weary
wrest,
Perforce her carried where ever he thought best.

III

So long as breath and hable puissance Did native corage unto him supply, His pace he freshly forward did advaunce,
And eærried her beyond all jeopardy;
But nought that wanteth rest can long
aby:
He, having through incessant travell spent His force, at last perforce adowne did ly, Ne foot could further move. The lady gent Thereat was suddein strook with great astonishment;

IV

And forst t' alight, on foot mote algates
fare,
A traveler unwonted to such way:
Need teacheth her this lesson hard and
rare,
That Fortune all in equall launce doth
sway,
And mortall miseries doth make her play.
So long she traveild, till at length she
came
To an hilles side, which did to her bewray
A litle valley, subject to the same, All coverd with thiek woodes, that quite it overcame.

V

Through the tops of the high trees she did desery
A litle smoke, whose vapour thin and light, Reeking aloft, uprolled to the sky:
Which chearefull sigue did send unto her
sight

That in the same did wonne some living
wight.

Eftsoones her steps she thereunto applyd,
And came at last, in weary wretched plight, Unto the place, to which her hope did
guyde,

To finde some refuge there, and rest her wearie syde.

VI

There in a gloomy hollow glen she found A little cottage, built of stickes and reedes
In homely wize, and wald with sods around,
In which a witch did dwell, in loathly weedes,

And wilfull want, all carelesse of her needes;

So choosing solitarie to abide,
Far from all neighbours, that her diuinish
deedes

And hellish arts from people she might
hide,

And hurt far off unknowne whom ever she envide.

VII

The damzell there arriving entred in;
Where sitting on the flore the hag she
found,

Busie (as seem'd) about some wicked gin:
Who, soone as she beheld that suddain
stound,

Lightly upstarted from the dustie ground,
And with fell looke and hollow deadly gaze

Stared on her awhile, as one astound, Ne had one word to speake, for great amaze,

But shewd by outward signes that dread her sence did daze.

VIII

At last, turning her feare to foolish wrath, She askt, what devill had her thether
brought,

And who she was, and what unwonted path
Had guided her, unwelcomed, unsought.

To which the damzell, full of doubtfull
thought,

Her mildly answer'd: 'Beldame, be not
wroth

With silly virgin, by adventure brought Unto your dwelling, ignorant and loth, That crave but rowme to rest, while tempest overblo'th.'

IX

With that, adowne out of her christall eyne

Few trickling teares she softly forth let
fall,

That like to orient perles did purely shyne Upon her snowy cheeke; and therewithall
She sighted soft, that none so bestiall

Nor salvage hart, but ruth of her sad
plight

Would make to melt, or pitteously appall;
And that vile hag, all were her whole de-
light

In mischiefe, was much moved at so pitteous sight;

X

And gan recomfort her in her rude wyse,
With womanish compassion of her plaint, Wiping the teares from her suffused eyes,
And bidding her sit downe, to rest her
faint

And wearie limbs awhile. She nothing quaint

Nor s'deignfull of so homely fashion, Sith brought she was now to so hard constraint,

Sate downe upon the dusty ground anon,
As glad of that small rest, as bird of tempest gon.

XI

Tho gan she gather up her garments rent,
And her loose lockes to dight in order dew, With golden wreath and gorgeous orna-
ment;

Whom such whenas the wicked hag did wev,

She was astonisht at her heavenly hew,
And doubted her to deeme an earthly
wight,

But or some goddesse, or of Dianes crew,
And thought her to adore with humble
spright:

T'adore thing so divine as beauty were but right.

XII

This wicked woman had a wicked sonne,
The comfort of her age and weary dayes,
A laesy loord, for nothing good to donne,
But stretched forth in ydlennesse alwayes.
Ne ever cast his mind to covet prayse,
Or ply him selfe to any honest trade,
But all the day before the sunny rayes

He us'd to slug, or sleepe in slothfull shade: Such laesinesse both lewd and poore attonce him made.

XIII

He, comming home at undertime, there
found

The fayrest creature that he ever saw Sitting beside his mother on the ground;
The sight whereof did greatly him adaw, And his base thought with terrour and with aw

So inly smot, that, as one which hath gaz'd On the bright sunne unwares, doth soone withdraw

His feeble eyne, with too much brightnes
daz'd,

So stared he on her, and stood long while amaz'd.

XIV

Softly at last he gan his mother aske, What mister wight that was, and whence deriv'd,

That in so straunge disguizement there did
maske,

And by what accident she there arriv'd:
But she, as one nigh of her wits depriv'd, With nought but ghastly lookes him answered,

Like to a ghost, that lately is reviv'd From Stygian shores, where late it wandered;

So both at her, and each at other wondered.

XV

But the fayre virgin was so meeke and myld,

That she to them vouchsafed to embrace Her goodly port, and to their senses vyld Her gentle speach applyde, that in short
space

She grew familiare in that desert place.
During which time the chorle, through her so kind

And courtesie use, conceiv'd affection bace,
And cast to love her in his brutish mind;
No love, but brutish lust, that was so beastly tind.

XVI

Closely the wicked flame his bowels brent,
And shortly grew into outrageous fire;
Yet had he not the hart, nor hardiment,
As unto her to utter his desire;

His caytive thought durst not so high aspire:

But with soft sighes and lovely semblaunces He ween'd that his affection entire She should aread; many resemblaunces To her he made, and many kinde remembraunces.

XVII

Oft from the forrest wildings he did bring, Whose sides empurpled were with smyling
red,

And oft young birds, which he had taught to sing

His maistresse praises sweetly caroled; Girmonds of flowres sometimes for her faire
hed

He fine would dight; sometimes the squirrel wild

He brought to her in bands, as conquered
To be her thrall, his fellow servant vild; All which she of him tooke with countenance meeke and mild.

XVIII

But, past awhile, when she fit season saw
To leave that desert mansion, she cast In secret wize her selfe thence to withdraw, For feare of mischiefe, which she did forecast

Might be by the witch or that her somme compast:

Her wearie palfrey closely, as she might,
Now well recovered after long repast,
In his proud furnitures she freshly dight, His late miswandred wayes now to remea-sure right.

XIX

And earely, ere the dawning day appeard, She forth issewed, and on her journey went;
She went in perill, of each noyse affeard,
And of each shade that did it selfe present;
For still she feared to be overhent

Of that vile hag, or her uncivile sonne:
Who when, too late awaking, well they kent

That their fayre gnest was gone, they both begonne

To make exceeding mone, as they had beene undonne.

XX

But that lewd lover did the most lament
For her depart, that ever man did heare;

He knockt his brest with desperate intent,
And scratche his face, and with his teeth did teare

His rugged flesh, and rent his ragged heare:
That his sad mother, seeing his sore plight,
Was greatly woe begon, and gan to feare Least his fraile senses were emperisht
quight,
And love to frenzy turnd, sith love is fran-ticke hight.

XXI

All wayes shee sought, him to restore to
plight,
With herbs, with charms, with counsel, and
with teares,
But tears, nor charms, nor herbs, nor counsell might

Asswage the fury which his entrails teares:
So strong is passion that no reason heares.
Tho, when all other helpes she saw to faile, She turnd her selfe backe to her wicked
teares,

And by her diuelish arts thought to pre-
vaile,
To bring her backe againe, or worke her finall bale.

XXII

Eftesoones out of her hidden cave she cald
An hideous beast, of horrible aspect,
That could the stoutest corage have appald; Monstrous, mishapt, and all his backe was spect

With thousand spots of colours queint elect; Thereto so swifte that it all beasts did pas:
Like never yet did living eie detect;
But likest it to an hyena was,
That feeds on wemens flesh, as others feede on gras.

XXIII

It forth she cald, and gave it streight in
charge,
Through thicke and thin her to poursew
apace,
Ne once to stay to rest, or breath at large, Till her he had attaind, and brought in
place,
Or quite devourd her beauties scornfull
grace.
The monster, swifte as word that from her
went,
Went forth in haste, and did her footing
trace

So sure and swiftly, through his perfect
sent

And passing speede, that shortly he her overhent.

XXIV

Whom when the fearefull damzell nigh
espide,

No need to bid her fast away to flie;
That ugly shape so sore her terrifide, That it she shund no lesse then dread to
die;

And her flitt palfrey did so well apply
His nimble feet to her conceived feare, That whilst his breath did strength to him supply,
From perill free he her away did beare:
But when his force gan faile, his pace gan wex areare.

XXV

Which whenas she perceiv'd, she was dis-
mayd

At that same last extremity ful sore,
And of her safety greatly grew afraid:
And now she gan approach to the sea shore,
As it befell, that she could flie no more,
But yield her selfe to spoile of greediness:

Lightly she leaped, as a wight forlore,
From her dull horse, in desperate distresse, And to her feet betooke her doubtfull sickernesse.

XXVI

Not halfe so fast the wicked Myrrha fled From dread of her revenging fathers hond, Nor halfe so fast, to save her maydenhed, Fled fearfull Daphne on th' Ægean strond,
As Florimell fled from that monster yond, To reach the sea ere she of him were
raught:

For in the sea to drowne her selfe she fond,
Rather then of the tyrant to be caught:
Thereto fear gave her wings, and need her corage taught.

XXVII

It fortun'd (High God did so ordaine)
As shee arrived on the roring shore,
In minde to leape into the mighty maine,
A little bote lay hovng her before,
In which there slept a fisher old and pore,
The whiles his nets were drying on the sand:
Into the same shee lept, and with the ore

Did thrust the shallop from the floting
strand:
So safety fownd at sea, which she fownd not at land.

XXVIII

The monster, ready on the pray to sease,
Was of his forward hope deceived quight, Ne durst assay to wade the perlous seas,
But, greedily long gaping at the sight,
At last in vaine was forst to turne his flight,
And tell the idle tidings to his dame:
Yet, to avenge her divelish despight,
He sett upon her palfrey tired lame,
And slew him cruelly, ere any reskew came.

XXIX

And after having him embowelled,
To fill his hellish gorge, it chaunst a knight
To passe that way, as forth he traveled:
Yt was a goodly swaine, and of great might,
As ever man that bloody field did fight;
But in vain sheows, that wont yong knights bewitch,
And courtly services tooke no delight,
But rather joyd to see then seemen sich:
For both to be and seeme to him was labor lich.

XXX

It was to weete the good Sir Satyrane, That raungd abroad to seeke adventures
wilde,
As was his wont, in forest and in plaine:
He was all armd in rugged steele unfilde,
As in the smoky forge it was compilde,
And in his scutchin bore a satyres hedd:
He comming present, where the monster
vilde
Upon that milke-white palfreyes carcass
fedd, Unto his reskew ran, and greedily him spedd.

XXXI

There well perceivd he, that it was the horse
Whereon faire Florimell was wont to ride, That of that feend was rent without remorse:
Much feared he, least ought did ill betide
To that faire maide, the flowre of wemens
pride;
For her he dearely loved, and in all His famous conquests highly magnifide:

Besides, her golden girdle, which did fall From her in flight, he fownd, that did him sore apall.

XXXII

Full of sad feare and doubtfull agony, Fiercely he flew upon that wicked feend;
And with huge strokes and cruell battery Him forst to leave his pray, for to attend Him selfe from deadly daunger to defend:
Full many wounds in his corrupted flesh
He did engrave, and muchell blood did spend, Yet might not doe him die, but aie more fresh And fierce he still appeared, the more he did him thresh.

XXXIII

He wist not how him to despoile of life, Ne how to win the wished victory, Sith him he saw still stronger grow through
strife,
And him selfe weaker through infirmity:
Greatly he grew enrag'd, and furiously Hurling his sword away, he lightly lept Upon the beast, that with great cruelty Rored and ragd to be underkept; Yet he perforce him held, and strokes upon him hept.

XXXIV

As he that strives to stop a suddein flood,
And in strong bancks his violence containe, Forceth it swell above his wonted mood,
And largely overflow the fruitfull plaine,
That all the country seemes to be a maine,
And the rich furrowes flote, all quite for-
donne:
The wofull husbandman doth lowd com-
plaine,
To see his whole yeares labor lost so soone,
For which to God he made so many an idle boone:

XXXV

So him he held, and did through might
amate:
So long he held him, and him bett so long,
That at the last his fiercenes gan abate,
And meekely stoup unto the victor strong:
Who, to avenge the implacable wrong,
Which he supposed donne to Florimell, Sought by all meanes his dolor to prolong, Sith dint of steele his carcass could not quell, His maker with her charmes had framed him so well.

XXXVI

The golden ribband, which that virgin wore About her sclender waste, he tooke in hand,
And with it bownd the beast, that lowd did
rore

For great despight of that unwonted band, Yet dared not his victor to withstand, But trembled like a lambe fled from the
pray,
And all the way him followd on the strand,
As he had long bene learned to obay; Yet never learned he such service till that
day.

XXXVII

Thus as he led the beast along the way,
He spide far of a mighty giauntesse, Fast flying on a courser dapled gray From a bold knight, that with great hardi-
nesse

Her hard pursewd, and sought for to sup-
presse:

She bore before her lap a dolefull squire, Lying athwart her horse in great distresse, Fast bounden hand and foote with cords of wire,

Whom she did meane to make the thrall of her desire.

XXXVIII

Which whenas Satyrane beheld, in haste
He lefte his captive beast at liberty, And crost the nearest way, by which he
cast

Her to encounter ere she passed by:
But she the way shund nathemore forthy, But forward gallopt fast; which when he
spyde,

His mighty speare he couched warily,
And at her ran: she having him deseryde, Her selfe to fight address, and threw her lode aside.

XXXIX

Like as a goshauke, that in foote doth
beare

A trembling culver, having spide on hight An eagle, that with plumy wings doth sheare

The subtile ayre, stouping with all his
might,

The quarrey throwes to ground with fell
despight,

And to the batteill doth her selfe prepare:
So ran the geauntesse unto the fight;

Her fyrie eyes with furious sparkes did stare,
And with blasphemous bannes High God in peeses tare.

XL

She caught in hand an huge great yron
mace,

Wherewith she many had of life depriv'd;
But ere the stroke could seize his aymed
place,

His speare amidst her sun-brode shield ar-riv'd;

Yet nathemore the steele a sonder riv'd,
All were the beame in bignes like a mast, Ne her out of the stedfast saddle driv'd,
But glauncing on the tempred metall, brast In thousand shivers, and so forth beside her past.

XLI

Her steed did stagger with that puissaunt
strooke,

But she no more was moved with that
might,

Then it had lighted on an aged oke;
Or on the marble pillour, that is pight Upon the top of Mount Olympus hight, For the brave youthly champions to assay, With burning charet wheelles it nigh to smite:

But who that smites it mars his joyous
play,

And is the spectacle of ruinous decay.

XLII

Yet therewith sore enrag'd, with sterne regard

Her dreadfulfull weapon she to him address, Which on his helmet martelled so hard,
That made him low incline his lofty crest,
And bowd his battred visour to his brest: Wherewith he was so stund that he n'ote
ryde,

But reeled to and fro from east to west:
Which when his cruell enemy espyde,
She lightly unto him adjoynd syde to syde;

XLIII

And on his collar laying puissaunt hand, Out of his wavering seat him pluckt per-
forse,

Perforse him pluckt, unable to withstand,
Or helpe himselfe, and laying thwart her
horse,

In loathly wise like to a carrion corse, She bore him fast away. Which when the knight

That her pursewed saw, with great remorse
He nere was touched in his noble spright, And gan encrease his speed, as she encreast her flight.

XLIV

Whom when as nigh approaching she espyde,
She threw away her burden angrily;
For she list not the batteill to abide, But made her selfe more light, away to
fly:

Yet her the hardy knight pursewd so nye
That almost in the backe he oft her strake:
But still, when him at hand she did espy, She turnd, and semblaunce of faire fight
did make;
But when he stayd, to flight againe she did her take.

XLV

By this the good Sir Satyrane gan wake Out of his dreame, that did him long entraunce,

And seeing none in place, he gan to make Exceeding mone, and curst that cruell
chaunce,

Which reft from him so faire a chevisaunce:
At length he spyde whereas that wofull
squyre,

Whom he had reskewed from captivaunce
Of his strong foe, lay tumbled in the myre, Unable to arise, or foot or hand to styre.

XLVI

To whom approaching, well he mote perceive

In that fowle plight a comely personage,
And lovely face, made fit for to deceive Fraile ladies hart with loves consuming
rage,

Now in the blossome of his freshest age:
He reard him up, and loosd his yron bands,
And after gan inquire his parentage,
And how he fell into that gyaunts hands,
And who that was, which chaced her along the lands.

XLVII

Then trembling yet through feare, the squire bespake:

‘That geantesse Argante is behight, A daughter of the Titans which did make Warre against heven, and heaped hills on

height,

To scale the skyes, and put Jove from his
right:

Her syre Typhoeus was, who, mad through merth,

And dronke with blood of men, slaine by his
might,

Through incest her of his owne mother
Earth

Whylome begot, being but halfe twin of that berth.

XLVIII

‘For at that berth another babe she bore, To weet, the mightie Ollyphant, that
wrought

Great wreake to many errant knights of
yore,

And many hath to foule confusion brought.
These twinnes, men say, (a thing far passing thought)

Whiles in their mothers wombe enclod
they were,

Ere they into the lightsom world were
brought,

In fleshly lust were mingled both yfere, And in that monstrous wise did to the world appere.

XLIX

‘So liv’d they ever after in like sin, Gainst natures law and good behavoure:
But greatest shame was to that maiden twin,

Who, not content so fowly to devoure Her native flesh, and staine her brothers
bowre,

Did wallow in all other fleshly myre,
And suffred beastes her body to deflowre,
So whot she burned in that lustfull fyre:

Yet all that might not slake her sensuall desyre.

L

‘But over all the countrie she did raunge, To seeke young men, to quench her flaming
thrust,

And feed her fancy with delightfull chaunge:

Whom so she fittest findes to serve her lust, Through her maine strength, in which she most doth trust,

She with her brings into a secret ile, Where in eternall bondage dye he must.

Or be the vassall of her pleasures vile,
And in all shamefull sort him selfe with her denle.

LI

'Me, seely wretch, she so at vantage
caught,

After she long in waite for me did lye,
And meant unto her prison to have brought,
Her lothsom pleasure there to satisfye; That thousand deathes me lever were to
dye,

Then breake the vow, that to faire Columbell

I plighted have, and yet keepe stedfastly.
As for my name, it mistreth not to tell;
Call me the Squyre of Dames; that me beseemeth well.

LII

'But that bold knight, whom ye pursuing
saw

That geaunteesse, is not such as she seemd,
But a faire virgin, that in martiall law And deedes of armes above all dames is deemd,

And above many knightes is eke esteemd,
For her great worth; she Palladine is hight: She you from death, you me from dread, redeemd.

Ne any may that monster match in fight,
But she, or such as she, that is so chaste a
wight.'

LIII

'Her well beseemes that quest,' quoth Sa-tyrane:

'But read, thou Squyre of Dames, what vow is this,

Which thou upon thyselfe hast lately ta'ne?'

'That shall I you recount,' quoth he, 'ywis, So be ye pleasd to pardon all amis.

That gentle lady whom I love and serve,
After long suit and wearie servicis, Did aske me how I could her love deserve, And how she might be sure that I would never swere.

LIV

'I. glad by any meanes her grace to gaine, Badd her commaund my life to save or spill.
Eftsoones she badd me, with incessaunt
paine

To wander through the world abroad at
will,

And every where, where with my power or
skill

I might doe service unto gentle dames,
That I the same should faithfully fulfill,
And at the twelve monethes end should bring their names

And pledges, as the spoiles of my victorious games.

LV

'So well I to faire ladies service did,
And found such favour in their loving hartes,

That, ere the yeare his course had com-passid.

Thre hundred pledges for my good desartes, And thrise three hundred thanks for my good partes,

I with me brought, and did to her present:
Which when she saw, more bent to eke my smartes

Then to reward my trusty true intent, She gan for me devise a grievous punishment:

LVI

'To weet, that I my travell should resume, And with like labour walke the world
arownd,

Ne ever to her presence should presume, Till I so many other dames had fownd, The which, for all the suit I could pro-pound.

Would me refuse their pledges to afford,
But did abide for ever chaste and sownd.'

'Ah! gentle squyre,' quoth he, 'tell at one
word,

How many fowndst thou such to put in thy record?'

LVII

'In deed, sir knight,' said he, 'one word may tell

All that I ever fownd so wisely stayd;
For onely three they were disposd so well, And yet three yeares I now abroad have
strayd,

To fynd them out.' 'Mote I,' then laughing
sayd

The knight, 'inquire of thee, what were those three,

The which thy proffred curtesie denyd?
Or ill they seemed sure avizd to bee, Or brutishly brought up, that nev'r did fashions see.'

LVIII

'The first which then refused me,' said hee,
 'Certes was but a common courtisane, Yet flat refusd to have adoe with mee, Because I could not give her many a jaue.' (Thereat full hartely laughed Satyrane.)
 'The second was an holy nunne to chose,
 Which would not let me be her chappel-lane,
 Because she knew, she sayd, I would disclose
 Her counsell, if she should her trust in me repose.

LIX

'The third a damzell was of low degree, Whom I in countrey cottage fownd by
 chaunce:
 Full litle weened I, that chastitee Had lodging in so meane a maintenaunce;
 Yet was she fayre, and in her countenaunce Dwelt simple truth in seemely fashion.
 Long thus I woo'd her with dew observ-
 aunce,
 In hope unto my pleasure to have won,
 But was as far at last, as when I first begon.

LX

'Safe her, I never any woman found,
 That chastity did for it selfe embrace,
 But were for other causes firme and sound, Either for want of handsome time and
 place,
 Or else for feare of shame and fowle dis-
 grace.
 Thus am I hopelesse ever to attaine
 My ladies love, in such a desperate case,
 But all my dayes am like to waste in vaine, Seeking to match the chaste with th' unchaste ladies traine.'

LXI

'Perdy,' sayd Satyrane, 'thou Squire of Dames,
 Great labour fondly hast thou hent in hand, To get small thankes, and therewith many blames,
 That may amongst Alcides labours stand.'
 Thence backe returning to the former land, Where late he left the beast he overcame, He found him not; for he had broke his
 band,
 And was returnd againe unto his dame,
 To tell what tydings of fayre Florimell became.

CANTO VIII

The witch creates a snowy lady, like to Florinell:
 Who, wronged by carle, by Proteus sav'd, Is sought by Paridell.

I

So oft as I this history record,
 My hart doth meit with meere compassion,
 To thinke how causelesse of her owne accord This gentle damzell, whom I write upon,
 Should plonged be in such affliction, Without all hope of comfort or reliefe,
 That sure I weene, the hardest hart of stone Would hardly finde to aggravate her griefe; For misery craves rather mercy then repriefe.

II

But that accursed hag, her hostesse late,
 Had so enranekled her malitious hart,
 That she desyrd th' abridgement of her fate,
 Or long enlargement of her painefull smart.
 Now when the beast, which by her wicked
 art
 Late fourth she sent, she backe retourning
 spyde,
 Tyde with her broken girdle, it a part Of her rich spoyles, whom he had earst de-stroyd,
 She weend, and wondrous gladnes to her hart applyde.

III

And with it rounning hast'ly to her sonne, Thought with that sight him much to have reliv'd;
 Who thereby deeming sure the thing as
 donne,
 His former griefe with furie fresh reviv'd, Much more then earst, and would have al-gates riv'd
 The hart out of his brest: for sith her dedd He surely dempt, himselfe he thought de-
 priv'd
 Quite of all hope, wherewith he long had fedd
 His foolish malady, and long time had miledde.

IV

With thought whereof, exceeding mad he
 grew,
 And in his rage his mother would have
 slaine,

Had she not fled into a secret mew, Where she was wont her sprights to enter-
 taine,
 The maisters of her art: there was she faine
 To call them all in order to her ayde,
 And them conjure, upon eternall paine,
 To counsell her so carefully dismayd, How she might heale her sonne, whose senses were decayd.

V

By their advise, and her owne wicked wit, She there deviz'd a wondrous worke to
 frame,
 Whose like on earth was never framed yit,
 That even Nature selfe envide the same,
 And grudg'd to see the counterfet should
 shame
 The thing it selfe. In hand she boldly
 tooke
 To make another like the former dame, Another Florimell, in shape and looke
 So lively and so like that many it mistooke.

VI

The substance, whereof she the body made,
 Was purest snow in massy mould congeald,
 Which she had gathered in a shady glade
 Of the Riphean hills, to her reveald By errant sprights, but from all men con-
 ceald:
 The same she tempred with fine mercury,
 And virgin wax, that never yet was seald,
 And mingled them with perfect vermily, That like a lively sanguine it seemd to the eye.

VII

In stead of eyes, two burning lampes she set
 In silver sockets, shynyng like the skyes,
 And a quicke moving spirit did arret
 To stirre and roll them, like a womans eyes:
 In stead of yellow loekes, she did devyse,
 With golden wyre to weave her eurl'd head;
 Yet golden wyre was not so yellow thryse
 As Florimells fayre heare: and in the stead Of life, she put a spright to rule the careas
 dead:

VIII

A wicked spright, yfraught with fawning
 guyle
 And favre resemblance. above all the rest.

Which with the Prince of Darkenes fell somewhyle
 From heavens blis and everlasting rest: Him needed not instruct, which way were
 best
 Him selfe to fashion likest Florimell, Ne how to speake, ne how to use his gest;
 For he in counterfesaunce did excell,
 And all the wyles of wemens wits knew passing well.

IX

Him shaped thus she deekt in garments
 gay,
 Which Florimell had left behind her late,
 That who so then her saw would surely say,
 It was her selfe whom it did imitate,
 Or fayrer then her selfe, if ought algate Might fayrer be. And then she forth her
 brought
 Unto her sonne, that lay in feeble state; Who seeing her gan streight upstart, and
 thought
 She was the lady selfe, whom he so long had sought.

X

Tho, fast her clipping twixt his armes
 twayne,
 Extremely joyed in so happy sight,
 And soone forgot his former siekely payne; But she, the more to seeme such as she
 hight,
 Coyly rebutted his embracement light;
 Yet still with gentle countenance retain'd Enough to hold a foole in vaine delight:
 Him long she so with shadowes entertain'd, As her creatresse had in charge to her ordaïn'd.

XI

Till on a day, as he disposed was To walke the woodes with that his idole
 faire,
 Her to disport, and idle time to pas
 In th' open freshnes of the gentle aire, A knight that way there chaunced to re-
 paire;
 Yet knight he was not, but a boastfull
 swaine,
 That deedes of armes had ever in despaire, Proud Braggadoecchio, that in vaunting
 vaine
 His glory did repose, and credit did main-
 taine.

XII

He, seeing with that chorle so faire a wight, Decked with many a costly ornament, Much merveiled thereat, as well he might,
And thought that match a fowle disparage-
ment:

His bloody speare eftsometimes he boldly bent Against the silly clowne, who, dead through
feare,

Fell streight to ground in great astonish-
ment:

'Vilain,' said he, 'this lady is my deare; Dy, if thou it gainesay: I will away her beare.'

XIII

The fearefull chorle durst not gainesay, nor doe,

But trembling stood, and yielded him the
pray;

Who, finding litle leasure her to wooe, On Tromparts steed her mounted without
stay,

And without reskew led her quite away.
Proud man himselfe then Braggadochio
deem'd,

And next to none, after that happy day,
Being possessed of that spoyle, which seem'd The fairest wight on ground, and most of men esteem'd.

XIV

But when hee saw him selfe free from pour-sute,

He gan make gentle purpose to his dame, With termes of love and lewdnesse dissolute;

For he could well his glozing speaches
frame

To such vaine uses, that him best became:
But she thereto would lend but light regard,
As seeming sory that she ever came Into his powre, that used her so hard, To reave her honor, which she more then life prefard.

XV

Thus as they two of kindnes treated long, There them by chauce encountred on the
way

An armed knight, upon a courser strong, Whose trampling feete upon the hollow lay Seemed to thunder, and did nigh affray That capons corage: yet he looked grim,
And faynd to cheare his lady in dismay,

Who seemd for feare to quake in every lim,
And her to save from outrage meekely prayed him.

XVI

Fiercely that straunger forward came, and nigh

Approching, with bold words and bitter
threat,

Bad that same boaster, as he mote on high,
To leave to him that lady for exeheat,

Or bide him batteill without further treat.
That challenge did too peremptory seeme,

And fild his senses with abashment great;
Yet, seeing nigh him jeopardy extreme, He it dissembled well, and light seemd to esteeme;

XVII

Saying, 'Thou foolish knight! that weenst with words

To steale away that I with blowes have
wonne,

And broght throug points of many perilou-swords:

But if thee list to see thy courser ron-ne,
Or prove thy selfe, this sad encounter
shonne,

And seeke els without hazard of thy hedd.' At those prowde words that other knight be-
gonne

To wex exceeding wroth, and him aredd To turne his steede about, or sure he should be dedd.

XVIII

'Sith then,' said Braggadochio, 'needes thou wilt

Thy daies abridge, through prooffe of puis-saunce,

Turne we our steeds, that both in equall tilt May meete againe, and each take happy chauce.'

This said, they both a furlongs mountenance Retird their steeds, to ron-ne in even race:

But Braggadochio with his bloody launce Once having turnd, no more returnd his
face,

But lefte his love to losse, and fled him selfe apace.

XIX

The knight, him seeing flie, had no regard Him to poursew, but to the lady rode,

And having her from Trompart lightly reard, Upon his courser sett the lovely lode,
 And with her fled away without abode.
 Well weened he, that fairest Florimell
 It was, with whom in company he yode,
 And so her selfe did alwaies to him tell;
 So made him thinke him selfe in heven, that was in hell.

XX

But Florimell her selfe was far away, Driven to great distresse by fortune
 straunge,
 And taught the carefull mariner to play, Sith late mischaunce had her compeld to change
 The land for sea, at randon there to raunge:
 Yett there that cruell queene avengeresse,
 Not satisfyde so far her to estraunge
 From courtly blis and wonted happinesse, Did heape on her new waves of weary wretchednesse.

XXI

For being fled into the fishers bote,
 For refuge from the monsters cruelty,
 Long so she on the mighty maine did flote,
 And with the tide drove forward carelesly; For th' ayre was milde, and cleared was
 the skie,
 And all his windes Dan Aeolus did keepe
 From stirring up their stormy enmity, As pittying to see her waile and weepe;
 But all the while the fisher did securely sleepe.

XXII

At last when dronecke with drowsinesse he woke,
 And saw his drover drive along the streame, He was dismayd, and thrise his brest he stroke,
 For marveill of that accident extreame;
 But when he saw that blazing beauties
 beame,
 Which with rare light his bote did beautify,
 He marveild more, and thought he yet did dreame
 Not well awakte, or that some extasye Assotted had his sence, or dazed was his eye.

XXIII

But when her well avizing, hee perceiv'd
 To be no vision nor fantasticke sight,

Great comfort of her presence he conceiv'd,
 And felt in his old corage new delight To gin awake, and stir his frosen spright: Tho rudely askte her, how she thether came.
 'Ah!' sayd she, 'father, I note read aright What hard misfortune brought me to this
 same;

Yet am I glad that here I now in safety
 ame.

XXIV

'But thou good man, sith far in sea we bee,
 And the great waters gin apace to swell,
 That now no more we can the mayn-land
 see,
 Have care, I pray, to guide the cock-bote
 well,
 Least worse on sea then us on land befell.' Thereat th' old man did nought but fondly grin.

And saide, his boat the way could wisely
 tell:

But his deceptfull eyes did never lin To looke on her faire face, and marke her snowy skin.

XXV

The sight whereof in his congealed flesh Infixt such secrete sting of greedy lust,
 That the drie withered stocke it gan refresh,
 And kindled heat, that soone in flame forth
 burst:

The driest wood is soonest burnt to dust.
 Rudely to her he lept, and his rough hand, Where ill became him, rashly would have thrust;

But she with angry scorne him did with-
 stond,
 And shamefully reproved for his rudenes fond.

XXVI

But he, that never good nor maners knew,
 Her sharpe rebuke full litle did esteeme; Harsh is to teach an old horse amble trew.
 The inward smoke, that did before but
 steeme,

Broke into open fire and rage extreme;
 And now he strength gan adde unto his will.
 Foreyng to doe that did him fowle mis-
 seeme:

Beastly he threwe her downe, ne car'd to
 spill

Her garments gay with scales of fish, that all did fill.

XXVII

The silly virgin strove him to withstand,
All that she might, and him in vaine revild: Shee struggled strongly both with foote and
hand,

To save her honor from that villaine vilde,
And eride to heaven, from humane helpe exild.

O ye brave knights, that boast this ladies
love,

Where be ye now, when she is nigh defild Of filthy wretch? Well may she you re-
prove

Of falsehood or of slouth, when most it may behave.

XXVIII

But if that thou, Sir Satyran, didst weete, Or thou, Sir Peridure, her sory state, How soone would yee assemble many a fleete,

To fetch from sea that ye at land lost late!
Towres, citties, kingdomes ye would ruin-
ate,

In your avengement and dispiteous rage,
Ne ought your burning fury mote abate;
But if Sir Calidore could it presage, No living creature could his cruelty as-swage.

XXIX

But sith that none of all her knights is nye, See how the heavens, of voluntary grace And soveraine favor towards chastity, Doe succor send to her distressed cace:
So much High God doth innocence embrace.
It fortun'd, whilst thus she stilly strove,
And the wide sea importuned long space With shrilling shriekes, Proteus abroad did rove,
Along the fomy waves driving his finny drove.

XXX

Proteus is shepheard of the seas of yore,
And hath the charge of Neptunes mighty
heard,

An aged sire with head all frowy hore,
And sprinkled frost upon his deawy beard:
Who when those pittifull outeries he heard Through all the seas so ruefully resound, His charett swifte in hast he thether steard,
Which, with a teeme of sealy phoeas bownd, Was drawne upon the waves, that fomed him arownd

XXXI

And comming to that fishers wandring bote,
That went at will, withouten card or sayle, He therein saw that yrkesome sight, which smote

Deepe indignation and compassion frayle
Into his hart attonce: streight did he hayle
The greedy villein from his hoped pray,

Of which he now did very litle fayle,
And with his staffe, that drives his heard
astray,

Him bett so sore, that life and sence did much dismay.

XXXII

The whiles the pitteous lady up did ryse, Ruffled and fowly raid with filthy soyle, And blubbred face with teares of her faire
eyes:

Her heart nigh broken was with weary
toyle,

To save her selfe from that outrageous
spoyle:

But when she looked up, to weet what
wight

Had her from so infamous fact assoyld, For shame, but more for feare of his grim
sight,

Downe in her lap she hid her face, and lowdly shrighit.

XXXIII

Her selfe not saved yet from danger
dredd

She thought, but chaung'd from one to other feare:

Like as a fearefull partridge, that is fledd
From the sharpe hauke, which her attached
neare,

And fals to ground, to seeke for succor
theare,

Whereas the hungry spaniells she does spye,

With greedy jawes her ready for to teare;
In such distresse and sad perplexity

Was Florimell, when Proteus she did see thereby.

XXXIV

But he endeavored with speaches milde
Her to recomfort, and aecourage bold, Bidding her feare no more her foeman
vilde,

Nor doubt himselfe; and who he was her
told.

Yet all that could not from affright her hold,
 Ne to recomfort her at all prevauld;
 For her faint hart was with the frozen cold Benumbd so only, that her wits nigh fayld, And all her sences with abashment quite were quayld.

XXXV

Her up betwixt his rugged hands he reard,
 And with his frory lips full softly kist, Whiles the cold ysickles from his rough beard
 Dropped adowne upon her yvory breast:
 Yet he him selfe so busily adrest,
 That her out of astonishment he wrought,
 And out of that same fishers filthy nest Removing her, into his charet brought,
 And there with many gentle termes her faire besought.

XXXVI

But that old leachour, which with bold assault
 That beautie durst presume to violate,
 He cast to punish for his hainous fault: Then tooke he him, yet trembling sith of
 late,
 And tyde behind his charet, to aggrate
 The virgin, whom he had abuse so sore:
 So drag'd him through the waves in scornfull state,
 And after cast him up upon the shore; But Florimell with him unto his bowre he bore.

XXXVII

His bowre is in the bottom of the maine, Under a mightie rocke, gainst which doe rave
 The roring billowes in their proud disdainie,
 That with the angry working of the wave Therein is eaten out an hollow cave, That seemes rough masons hand with engines keene
 Had long while laboured it to engrave:
 There was his wonne, ne living wight was
 seene,
 Save one old nymph, hight Panope, to keepe it cleane.

XXXVIII

Thether he brought the sory Florimell, And entertained her the best he might,
 And Panope her entertaind eke well,
 As an immortall mote a mortall wight,

To winne her liking unto his delight:
 With flattering wordes he sweetly wooed
 her,
 And offered faire guiftes, t' allure her sight;
 But she both offers and the offerer Despyse, and all the fawning of the flatterer.

XXXIX

Dayly he tempted her with this or that,
 And never suffred her to be at rest:
 But evermore she him refused flat,
 And all his fained kindnes did detest;
 So firmly she had sealed up her breast.
 Sometimes he boasted that a god he hight;
 But she a mortall creature loved best:
 Then he would make him selfe a mortall
 wight;
 But then she said she lov'd none but a Faery knight.

XL

Then like a Faerie knight him selfe he
 drest;
 For every shape on him he could endew:
 Then like a king he was to her exprest,
 And offred kingdoms unto her in vew,
 To be his leman and his lady trew:
 But when all this he nothing saw prevaile,
 With harder meanes he cast her to subdew, And with sharpe threatens her often did as-sayle,
 So thinking for to make her stubborne corage quayle.

XLI

To dreadfull shapes he did him selfe trans-
 forme,
 Now like a gyaunt, now like to a feend,
 Then like a centaure, then like to a storme, Raging within the waves: thereby he weend
 Her will to win unto his wished eend.
 But when with feare, nor favour, nor with
 all
 He els could doe, he saw him selfe es-teemd,
 Downe in a dongeon deepe he let her fall,
 And threatned there to make her his eter-nall thrall.

XLII

Eternall thraldome was to her more liefe, Then losse of chastitie, or chaunge of love:
 Dye had she rather in tormenting grieve,
 Then any should of falsenesse her reprove,

Or loosenes, that she lightly did remove.
 Most vertuous virgin! glory be thy meed, And crowne of heavenly prayse with saintes
 above,
 Where most sweet hymmes of this thy famous deed
 Are still amongst them song, that far my rymes exceed.

XLIII

Fit song of angels caroled to bee!
 But yet what so my feeble Muse can frame, Shalbe t' advance thy goodly chastitee,
 And to enroll thy memorable name
 In th' heart of every honourable dame,
 That they thy vertuous deedes may imitate,
 And be partakers of thy endlesse fame.
 Yt yrkes me leave thee in this wofull state,
 To tell of Satyrane, where I him left of late.

XLIV

Who having ended with that Squire of Dames
 A long discourse of his adventures vayne, The which himselfe, then ladies, more de-fames,
 And finding not th' hyena to be slayne,
 With that same squire returned back agayne
 To his first way. And as they forward went, They spyde a knight fayre pricking on the
 playne,
 As if he were on some adventure bent,
 And in his port appeared manly hardiment.

XLV

Sir Satyrane him towards did addresse, To weet what wight he was, and what his quest:
 And comming nigh, eftsoones he gan to gesse Both by the burning hart which on his
 brest
 He bare, and by the colours in his crest,
 That Paridell it was: tho to him yode,
 And him saluting as beseemed best,
 Gan first inquire of tydinges farre abrode;
 And afterwards, on what adventure now he rode.

XLVI

Who thereto answering said: 'The tyd-inges bad,
 Which now in Faery court all men doe tell,

Which turned hath great mirth to mourning
 sad,
 Is the late ruine of proud Marinell,
 And suddein parture of faire Florimell,
 To find him forth: and after her are gone
 All the brave knightes, that doen in armes
 excell,
 To savegard her, ywandred all alone; Emongst the rest my lott (unworthy') is to be one.'

XLVII

'Ah! gentle knight,' said then Sir Satyrane,
 'Thy labour all is lost, I greatly dread, That hast a thanklesse service on thee ta'ne,
 And offrest sacrifice unto the dead.
 For dead, I surely doubt, thou maist aread Henceforth for ever Florimell to bee, That all the noble knightes of Mayden-
 head,
 Which her ador'd, may sore repent with
 mee,
 And all faire ladies may for ever sory
 bee.'

XLVIII

Which wordes when Paridell had heard, his
 hew Gan greatly chaung, and seemd dismaid to
 bee;
 Then said: 'Fayre sir, how may I weene it
 trew,
 That ye doe tell in such uncerteintee?
 Or speake ye of report, or did ye see Just cause of dread, that makes ye doubt so sore?
 For, perdie, elles how mote it ever bee,
 That ever hand should dare for to engore Her noble blood? The hevens such cruel-tie abhore.'

XLIX

'These eyes did see, that they will ever
 rew
 To have seene,' quoth he, 'when as a monstrous beast
 The palfrey whereon she did travell slew,
 And of his bowels made his bloody feast:
 Which speaking token sheweth at the least Her certeine losse, if not her sure decay:
 Besides, that more suspicion increast,
 I found her golden girdle cast astray, Distaund with durt and blood, as relique of the pray.'

L

'Ay me!' said Paridell, 'the signes be sadd, And but God turne the same to good sooth
say,

That ladies safetie is sore to be dradd:
Yet will I not forsake my forward way, Till triall doe more certeine truth bewray.'
'Faire sir,' quoth he, 'well may it you succeed:

Ne long shall Satyrane behind you stay,
But to the rest, which in this quest proceed, My labour adde, and be partaker of their speed.'

LI

'Ye noble knights,' said then the Squire of Dames,

'Well may yee speede in so praiseworthy
payne:
But sith the sunne now ginnes to slake his
beames

In dewy vapours of the westerne mayne,
And lose the teme out of his weary wayne, Mote not mislike you also to abate Your zealous hast, till morrow next againe Both light of heven and strength of men relate:

Which if ye please, to yonder castle turne your gate.'

LII

That counsell pleased well; so all yfere Forth marched to a castle them before; Where soone arryving, they restrained were Of ready entraunce, which ought evermore To errant knights be commune: wondrous
sore

Thereat displeasd they were, till that young
squire

Gan them informe the cause why that same
dore

Was shut to all which lodging did desyre:
The which to let you weet will further time requyre.

CANTO IX

Malbecco will no straunge knights host,
For peevish gealosity: Paridell giusts with Britomart:
Both shew their auncestry.

I

REDOUTED knights, and honorable dames,
To whom I levell all my labours end,

Right sore I feare, least with unworthie blames

This odious argument my rymes should
shend,

Or ought your goodly patience offend, Whiles of a wanton lady I doe write, Which with her loose incontinence doth blend

The shyng glory of your souveraine light;
And knighthood fowle defaced by a faithlesse knight.

II

But never let th' ensample of the bad Offend the good: for good, by paragone Of evill, may more notably be rad, As white seemes fayrer, macht with blacke
attone;

Ne all are shamed by the fault of one:
For lo! in heven, whereas all goodnes is, Emongst the angels, a whole legione Of wicked sprights did fall from happy
blis;

What wonder then, if one of women all did mis?

III

Then listen, lordings, if ye list to weet
The cause why Satyrane and Paridell Mote not be entertaynd, as seemed meet, Into that castle (as that squire does tell.)
'Therein a cancred crabbed carle does
dwell,

That has no skill of court nor courtesie, Ne cares what men say of him ill or well;
For all his dayes he drownes in privitie, Yet has full large to live, and spend at libertie.

IV

'But all his mind is set on mucky pelfe,
To hoord up heapes of evill gotten masse,
For which he others wrongs and wreekes himselke;

Yet is he lincked to a lovely lasse,
Whose beauty doth her bounty far surpasse,
The which to him both far unequal yeares And also far unlike conditions has;
For she does joy to play emongst her peares, And to be free from hard restraynt and gealous feares.

V

'But he is old, and withered like hay, Unfit faire ladies service to supply,

The privie guilt whereof makes him alway Suspect her truth, and keepe continuall spy Upon her with his other blinked eye;
Ne suffreth he resort of living wight Approch to her, ne keepe her company, But in close bowre her mewes from all mens
sight,

Depriv'd of kindly joy and naturall delight.

VI

‘Malbeeco he, and Hellenore she hight, Unfitly yokt together in one teeme:
That is the eause why never any knight Is suffred here to enter, but he seeme Such as no doubt of him he neede mis-
deeme.’

Thereat Sir Satyrane gan smyle, and say:
‘Extremely mad the man I surely deeme, That weenes with watch and hard restraynt to stay

A womans will, which is disposd to go astray.

VII

‘In vaine he feares that which he cannot
shonne:

For who wotes not, that womans subtiltyes Can guylen Argus, when she list misdonne?
It is not yron bandes, nor hundred eyes,
Nor brasen walls, nor many wakefull spyes,
That can withhold her wilfull wandring
feet;

But fast goodwill with gentle courtesyes,
And timely service to her pleasures meet, May her perhaps containe, that else would algates fleet.’

VIII

‘Then is he not more mad,’ sayd Paridell, ‘That hath himselfe unto such service sold, In dolefull thraddome all his dayes to
dwell?’

For sure a foole I doe him firmly hold, That loves his fetters, though they were of gold.

But why doe wee devise of others ill, Whyles thus we suffer this same dotard old To keepe us out, in seorne, of his owne will,
And rather doe not ransack all, and him selfe kill?’

IX

‘Nay, let us first,’ sayd Satyrane, ‘entreat
The man by gentle meanes, to let us in;
And afterwards affray with cruell threat, Ere that we to efforce it doe begin:

Then if all fayle, we will by force it win,
And eke reward the wretch for his mes-
prise,

As may be worthy of his haynous sin.’
That counsell pleasd: then Paridell did rise, And to the castle gate approcht in quiet
wise.

X

Whereat soft knocking, entrance he desyrd.

The good man selfe, which then the porter
playd,

Him answered, that all were now retyrd Unto their rest, and all the keyes conveyd Unto their maister, who in bed was layd, That none him durst awake out of his dreme;

And therefore them of patience gently
prayd.

Then Paridell began to chaunge his theme,
And threatned him with force and punishment extreme.

XI

But all in vaine; for nought mote him re-
lent:

And now so long before the wicket fast They wayted, that the night was forward
spent,

And the faire welkin, fowly overcast,
Gan blownen up a bitter stormy blast, With showre and hayle so horrible and
dred,

That this faire many were compeld at last
To fly for succour to a little shed, The which beside the gate for swyne was ordered.

XII

It fortun'd, soone after they were gone, Another knight, whom tempest thether
brought,

Came to that castle, and with earnest
mone,

Like as the rest, late entrance deare be-
sought;

But like so as the rest, he prayd for
nought,

For flatly he of entrance was refusd.
Sorely thereat he was displeasd, and
thought

How to avenge himselfe so sore abusd, And evermore the carle of courtesie accused.

XIII

But to avoyde th' intollerable stowre, He was compeld to seeke some refuge
 neare,
 And to that shed, to shrowd him from the
 showre,
 He came, which full of guests he found
 whyleare,
 So as he was not let to enter there:
 Whereat he gan to wex exceeding wroth, And swore that he would lodge with them yfere,
 Or them dislodg, all were they liefe or
 loth;
 And so defyde them each, and so defyde them both.

XIV

Both were full loth to leave that needfull
 tent,
 And both full loth in darkenesse to debate;
 Yet both full liefe him lodging to have lent,
 And both full liefe his boasting to abate;
 But chiefly Paridell his hart did grate,
 To heare him threaten so despightfully,
 As if he did a dogge in kenell rate,
 That durst not barke; and rather had he dy Then, when he was defyde, in coward corner ly.

XV

Tho, hastily remounting to his steed,
 He forth issew'd; like as a boystrous winde, Which in th' earthes hollow caves hath long ben hid,
 And shut up fast within her prisons blind,
 Makes the huge element, against her kinde,
 To move and tremble as it were aghast, Untill that it an issew forth may finde;
 Then forth it breakes, and with his furious
 blast Confounds both land and seas, and skyes doth overcast.

XVI

Their steel-hed speares they strongly coucht, and met Together with impetuous rage and forse,
 That with the terrour of their fierce affret, They rudely drove to ground both man and
 horse,
 That each awhile lay like a sencelesse corse.
 But Paridell, sore brused with the blow, Could not arise, the counterehaunge to scorse,

Till that young squire him reared from below;
 Then drew he his bright sword, and gan about him throw.

XVII

But Satyrane, forth stepping, did them
 stay,
 And with faire treaty pacifide their yre: Then, when they were accorded from the
 fray,
 Against that castles lord they gan conspire, To heape on him dew vengeance for his hire.
 They beene agreed, and to the gates they
 goe,
 To burne the same with unquenchable
 fire,
 And that uncurteous carle, their commune
 foe,
 To doe fowle death to die, or wrap in grievous woe.

XVIII

Malbecco seeing them resolv'd in deed To flame the gates, and hearing them to
 call
 For fire in earnest, ran with fearfull speed,
 And to them calling from the castle wall, Besought them humbly him to beare with
 all,
 As ignorant of servants bad abuse,
 And slacke attendaunce unto straungers
 call.
 The knights were willing all things to excuse,
 Though nought belev'd, and entraunce late did not refuse.

XIX

They beene ybrought into a comely bowre, And serv'd of all things that mote needfull
 bee;
 Yet secretly their hoste did on them lowre,
 And welcomde more for feare then chari-
 tee;
 But they dissembled what they did not see,
 And welcomed themselves. Each gan un-
 dight
 Their garments wett, and weary armour
 free,
 To dry them selves by Vulcanes flaming
 light,
 And eke their lately brused parts to bring in plight.

XX

And eke that straunger knight amongst
the rest
Was for like need enforst to disaray:
Tho, whenas vailed was her lofty crest, Her golden locks, that were in tramells
gay Upbouden, did them selves adowne display,
And raught unto her heeles; like sunny
beames,
That in a cloud their light did long time
stay,
Their vapour vaded, shewe their golden gleames,
And through the persant aire shoote forth their azure streames.

XXI

Shee also dofte her heavy haberjeon, Which the faire feature of her limbs did
hyde,
And her well plighted frock, which she did won To tucke about her short, when she did
ryde, Shee low let fall, that flowd from her lanck syde Downe to her foot with carelesse modes-tee.
Then of them all she plainly was espyde
To be a woman wight, unwist to bee, The fairest woman wight that ever eie did see.

XXII

Like as Minerva, being late returnd
From slaughter of the giaunts conquered; Where proud Enceclade, whose wide nose-thrills burnd
With breathed flames, like to a furnace
redd, Transfixd with her speare, downe tumbled
dedd
From top of Hemus, by him heaped lye;
Hath loosd her helmet from her lofty hedd,
And her Gorgonian shield gins to untye From her lefte arme, to rest in glorious victorye.

XXIII

Which whenas they beheld, they smitten
were
With great amazement of so wondrous
sight,

And each on other, and they all on her,
Stood gazing, as if suddain great affright
Had them surprizd. At last avizing right Her goodly personage and glorious hew, Which they so much mistooke, they tooke
delight
In their first error, and yett still anew With wonder of her beauty fed their hongry
vew.

XXIV

Yet note their hongry vew be satisfide,
But seeing, still the more desir'd to see,
And ever firmly fixed did abide In contemplation of divinitee:
But most they mervaild at her chevalree And noble prowess, which they had approv'd,
That much they faynd to know who she mote bee;
Yet none of all them her thereof amov'd, Yet every one her likte, and every one her lov'd.

XXV

And Paridell, though partly discontent
With his late fall and fowle indignity, Yet was soone wonne his malice to relent,
Through grations regard of her faire eye,
And knightly worth, which he too late did try,
Yet tried did adore. Supper was dight;
Then they Malbecco prayd of courtesy,
That of his lady they might have the sight,
And company at meat, to doe them more
delight.

XXVI

But he, to shifte their curious request, Gan causen why she could not come in
place;
Her crasid helth, her late recourse to rest,
And humid evening, ill for sicke folkes cace;
But none of those excuses could take place, Ne would they eate, till she in presence
came.
Shee came in presence with right ecmely
grace,
And fairely them saluted, as became,
And shewd her selfe in all a gentle courteous dame.

XXVII

They sate to meat, and Satyrane his chaunce Was her before, and Paridell beside;

But he him selfe sate looking still askaunce Gainst Britomart, and ever closely eide Sir Satyrane, that glaunces might not glide:
But his blinde eie, that sided Paridell,
All his demeasure from his sight did hide:
On her faire face so did he feede his fill,
And sent close messages of love to her at will.

XXVIII

And ever and anone, when none was ware, With speaking lookes, that close embassage
bore,

He rov'd at her, and told his secret care:
For all that art he learned had of yore.
Ne was she ignoraunt of that leud lore,
But in his eye his meaning wisely redd,
And with the like him aunswerd evermore:
Shee sent at him one fyrie dart, whose hedd Empoisoned was with privy lust and gealous dredd.

XXIX

He from that deadly throw made no defence,

But to the wound his weake heart opened
wyde:

The wicked engine through false influence Past through his eies, and secretly did glyde

Into his heart, which it did sorely gryde.
But nothing new to him was that same
paine,

Ne paine at all; for he so ofte had tryde The powre thereof, and lov'd so oft in
vaine,

That thing of course he counted, love to entertaine.

XXX

Thenceforth to her he sought to intimate His inward grieffe, by meanes to him well
knowne:

Now Bacchus fruit out of the silver plate
He on the table dasht, as overthrowne, Or of the fruitfull liquor overflowne,
And by the dauncing bubbles did divine,
Or therein write to lett his love be showne;
Which well she redd out of the learned line:
A sacrament prophane in mistery of wine.

XXXI

And when so of his hand the pledge she
raught,

The guilty cup she fained to mistake,

And in her lap did shed her idle draught, Shewing desire her inward flame to slake.
By such close signes they secret way did
make

Unto their wils, and one eies watch escape: Two eies him needeth, for to watch and
wake,

Who lovers will deceive. Thus was the ape, By their faire handling, put into Malbeccoes cape.

XXXII

Now when of meats and drinks they had their fill,

Purpose was moved by that gentle dame Unto those knights adventurous, to tell Of deeds of armes which unto them be-
came,

And every one his kindred and his name.
Then Paridell, in whom a kindly pride Of gratiuous speach and skill his words to
frame

Abounded, being glad of so fitte tide Him to commend to her, thus spake, of a well eide:

XXXIII

'Troy, that art now nought but an idle
name,

And in thine ashes buried low dost lie, Though whilome far much greater then
thy fame,

Before that angry gods and cruell skie Upon thee heapt a direfull destinie, What boots it boast thy glorious descent.
And fetch from heven thy great genealogie, Sith all thy worthie prayses being blent, Their ofspring hath embaste, and later glory
shent?

XXXIV

'Most famous worthy of the world, by whome

That warre was kindled which did Troy in-
flame,

And stately towres of Ilion whilome Brought unto balefull ruine, was by name Sir Paris, far renownd through noble fame; Who, through great prowesse and bold hardnesse,

From Lacedæmon fetcht the fayrest dame, That ever Greece did boast, or knight pos-sesse,

Whom Venus to him gave for meed of wor-thinesse:

XXXV

‘Fayre Helene, flowre of beautie excellent,
 And girlond of the mighty conquerours,
 That madest many ladies deare lament
 The heavie losse of their brave paramours, Which they far off beheld from Trojan toures,
 And saw the fieldes of faire Scamander strowne
 With carcases of noble warrioures, Whose fruitlesse lives were under furrow
 sowne,
 And Xanthus sandy bankes with blood all overflowne.

XXXVI

‘From him my linage I derive aright, Who long before the ten yeares siege of Troy,
 Whiles yet on Ida he a shepeheard hight,
 On faire Oenone got a lovely boy, Whom, for remembrance of her passed joy,
 She of his father Paris did name;
 Who, after Greekes did Priams realme destroy, Gathred the Trojan reliques sav’d from
 flame,
 And with them sayling thence, to th’ isle of Paros came.

XXXVII

‘That was by him cald Paros, which before Hight Nausa; there he many yeares did
 raine,
 And built Nausicle by the Pontick shore,
 The which he dying left next in remaine To Paridas his some,
 From whom I, Paridell, by kin descend;
 But, for faire ladies love and glories gaine, My native soile have left, my dayes to
 spend
 In seeing deeds of armes, my lives and labors end.’

XXXVIII

Whenas the noble Britomart heard tell Of Trojan warres and Priams citie sackt,
 The ruefull story of Sir Paridell,
 She was empassiond at that piteous act,
 With zelous envy of Greekes cruell fact Against that nation, from whose race of old She heard that she was lineally extract:
 For noble Britons sprong from Trojans bold, And Troynovant was built of old Troyes ashes cold.

XXXIX

Then sighing soft awhile, at last she thus:
 ‘O lamentable fall of famous towne,
 Which raignd so many yeares victorious,
 And of all Asie bore the soveraine crowne, In one sad night consumd and throwen
 downe!
 What stony hart, that heares thy haplesse
 fate,
 Is not empierst with deepe compassiowne, And makes ensample of mans wretched
 state,
 That floures so fresh at morne, and fades at evening late?’

XL

‘Behold, sir, how your pitifull complaint Hath fownd another partner of your payne:
 For nothing may impresse so deare constraint,
 As countries cause and commne foes dis-
 dayne.
 But if it should not grieve you, backe
 agayne
 To turne your course, I would to heare de-
 syre
 What to Aeneas fell; sith that men sayne
 He was not in the cities wofull fyre Consum’d, but did him selfe to safety retyre.’

XLI

‘Anchyses some, begott of Venus fayre,’ Said he, ‘out of the flames for safegard fled,
 And with a remnant did to sea repayre, Where he through fatall errorr long was led Full many yeares, and weetlesse wandered From shore to shore, emongst the Lybick sandes, Ere rest he fownd. Much there he suffered,
 And many perilles past in forreine landes,
 To save his people sad from victours vengefull handes.

XLII

‘At last in Latium he did arryve, Where he with cruell warre was entertaind Of th’ inland folke, which sought him backe to drive,
 Till he with old Latinus was constrained To contract wedlocke; (so the Fates ordaind;) Wedlocke contract in blood, and eke in
 blood

Accomplished, that many deare complaind: The rivall slaine, the victour, through the
 blood Escaped hardly, hardly praisd his wedlock
 good.

XLIII

'Yet after all, he victour did survive,
And with Latinus did the kingdom part.
But after, when both nations gan to strive,
Into their names the title to convert,
His some Iulus did from thence depart With all the warlike youth of Trojans
 blood,
And in Long Alba plast his throne apart, Where faire it florished, and long time stoud, Iill Romulus, renewing it, to Rome re-moud.'

XLIV

'There, there,' said Britomart, 'a fresh appear'd
The glory of the later world to spring,
And Troy againe out of her dust was reard,
To sitt in second seat of souveraine king
Of all the world under her governing.
But a third kingdom yet is to arise Out of the Trojans scattered ofspring, That, in all glory and great enterprise, Both first and second Troy shall dare to equalise.

XLV

'It Troynovant is hight, that with the waves
Of wealthy Themis washed is along, Upon whose stubborne neck, wherent he raves
With roring rage, and sore him selfe does
 throng,
That all men feare to tempt his billowes
 strong,
She fastned hath her foot, which standes so
 hy,
That it a wonder of the world is song In forreine landes, and all which passen by, Beholding it from farre, doe thinke it threates the skye.

XLVI

'The Trojan Brute did first that cite
 fownd,
And Hygate made the meare thereof by
 west,

And Overt gate by north: that is the
 bownd Toward the land; two rivers bownd the
 rest.

So huge a scope at first him seemed best,
To be the compasse of his kingdomes seat:
So huge a mind could not in lesser rest, Ne in small meares containe his glory great,
That Albion had conquered first by warlike feat.'

XLVII

'Ah! fairest lady knight,' said Paridell,
'Pardon, I pray, my heedlesse oversight,
Who had forgot that whylome I hard tell From aged Mnemon; for my wits beene
 light.

Indeed he said (if I remember right)
That of the antique Trojan stocke there
 grew Another plant, that raught to wondrous
 hight,
And far abroad his mightie braunches threw Into the utmost angle of the world he knew.

XLVIII

'For that same Brute, whom much he did advance
In all his speach, was Sylvius his sonne, Whom having slain through luckles ar-rowes glaunce,
He fled for feare of that he had misdonne, Or els for shame, so fowle reproch to
 shonne,
And with him ledd to sea an youthly trayne, Where wearie wandring they long time did
 wonne,
And many fortunes prov'd in th' ocean
 mayne,
And great adventures found, that now were long to sayne.

XLIX

'At last by fatall course they driven were Into an island spatious and brode, The furthest north that did to them ap-
 peare:
Which, after rest, they seeking farre abrode, Found it the fittest soyle for their abode, Fruitfull of all thinges fitt for living foode,
But wholy waste and void of peoples trode, Save an huge nation of the geaunts broode, That fed on living flesh, and dronck mens vital blood.

L

'Whom he, through wearie wars and labours long, Subdewd with losse of many Britons bold:
In which the great Goemagot of strong Corneus, and Coulin of Debon old, Were overthrowne and laide on th' earth
full cold,

Which quaked under their so hideous masse:
A famous history to bee enrold
In everlasting monuments of brasse, That all the antique worthies merits far did passe.

LI

'His worke great Troynovant, his worke is eke Faire Lincolne, both renoumed far away, That who from east to west will endlong
seeke,

Canot two fairer cities find this day, Except Cleopolis: so heard I say Old Mnemon. Therefore, sir, I greet you
well,

Your cuntry kin, and you entyrelly pray
Of pardon for the strife which late befell Betwixt us both unknowne.' So ended Paridell.

LII

But all the while that he these speeches
spent,

Upon his lips hong faire Dame Hellenore,
With vigilant regard and dew attent, Fashioning worldes of fancies evermore In her fraile witt, that now her quite for-
lore:

The whiles unwares away her wondring eye And greedy eares her weake hart from her
bore:

Which he perceiving, ever privily, In speaking, many false belgardes at her let fly.

LIII

So long these knightes discoursed diversly
Of straunge affaires, and noble hardiment, Which they had past with mickle jeopardy, That now the humid night was farforth
spent,

And heavenly lampes were halfendeale ybrent:

Which th' old man seeing wel, who too long
thought

Every discourse and every argument,

Which by the houres he measured, be-
sought
Them go to rest. So all unto their bowres were brought.

CANTO X

Paridell rapeth Hellenore:
Malbecco her poursewes:
Fyndt amongst Satyres, whence with him To turne she doth refuse.

I

THE morow next, so soone as Phœbus lamp Bewrayed had the world with early light,
And fresh Aurora had the shady damp
Out of the goodly heven amoved quight, Faire Britomart and that same Faery
knight

Uprose, forth on their journey for to wend:
But Paridell complaynd, that his late fight With Britomart so sore did him offend, That ryde he could not, till his hurts he did amend.

II

So fourth they far'd, but he behind them
stayd,

Maulgre his host, who grudged grivously To house a guest that would be needes obayd,

And of his owne him left not liberty:
Might wanting measure moveth surquedry.
Two things he feared, but the third was death:

That fiers youngmans unruly maystery;
His money, which he lov'd as living breath;
And his faire wife, whom honest long he kept unneath.

III

But patience perforce, he must abie
What fortune and his fate on him will lay;
Fond is the feare that findes no remedie;
Yet warily he watcheth every way,
By which he feareth evill happen may:
So th' evill thinkes by watching to prevent;
Ne doth he suffer her, nor night nor day,
Out of his sight her selfe once to absent.
So doth he punish her and eke himselfe torment.

IV

But Paridell kept better watch then hee,
A fit occasion for his turne to finde.

False Love, why do men say thou canst not
see,
And in their foolish fancy feigne thee blinde, That with thy charmes the sharpest sight doest binde,
And to thy will abuse? Thou walkest free,
And seest every secret of the minde;
Thou seest all, yet none at all sees thee;
All that is by the working of thy deitee.

V

So perfect in that art was Paridell.
That he Malbeccoës halfen eye did wyle;
His halfen eye he wiled wondrous well,
And Hellenors both eyes did eke beguyle, Both eyes and hart attonce, during the wyle
That he there sojourned his woundes to heale;
That Cupid selfe, it seeing, close did smyle,
To weet how he her love away did steale,
And bad that none their joyous treason should reveale.

VI

The learned lover lost no time nor tyde,
That least avantage mote to him afford,
Yet bore so faire a sayle, that none espyde
His secret drift, till he her layd aboard.
When so in open place and commune bord He fortun'd her to meet, with commune
speach
He courted her, yet bayted every word,
That his ungentle hoste n'ote him appeach Of vile ungentlenesse, or hospitages breach.

VII

But when apart (if ever her apart) He found, then his false engins fast he
plyde,
And all the sleights unbosomd in his hart;
He sigh'd, he sobd, he swownd, he perdy
dyde,
And cast himselfe on ground her fast be-
syde:
Tho, when againe he him bethought to live, He wept, and wayld, and false laments belyde, Saying, but if she mercie would him give,
That he mote algates dye, yet did his death forgive.

VIII

And otherwhyles with amorous delights
And pleasing toyes he would her entertaïne,

Now singing sweetly, to surprize her
sprights,
Now making layes of love and lovers paine, Bransles, ballads, virelayes, and verses
vaine;
Oft purposes, oft riddles he devysd, And thousands like, which flowed in his braine,
With which he fed her fancy, and entysd
To take to his new love, and leave her old despyd.

IX

And every where he might, and everie
while,
He did her service dewtfull, and sewd At hand with humble pride and pleasing
guile,
So closely yet, that none but she it vewd,
Who well perceived all, and all indewd.
Thus finely did he his false nets dispred,
With which he many weake harts had sub-
dewd
Of yore, and many had ylike misled: What wonder then, if she were likewise carried?

No fort so fensible, no wals so strong,
But that continuall battery will rive, Or daily siege, through dispurvayaunce
long
And lacke of reskewes, will to parley drive;
And peece, that unto parley eare will give,
Will shortly yield it selfe, and will be made The vassall of the victors will bylive:
That stratageme had oftentimes assayd This crafty paramoure, and now it plaine displayd.

XI

For through his traines he her intrapped
hath,
That she her love and hart hath wholly
sold
To him, without regard of gaine or seath,
Or care of credite, or of husband old, Whom she hath vow'd to dub a fayre cucquold.
Nought wants but time and place, which shortly shee Devizd hath, and to her lover told.
It pleased well: so well they both agree;
So readie rype to ill, ill wemens counsell
bee.

XII

Darke was the evening, fit for lovers stealth,
When chaunst Malbecco busie be elsewhere,
She to his closet went, where all his wealth Lay hid: thereof she countlesse summes did
reare,

The which she meant away with her to
beare;

The rest she fyr'd for sport, or for despight;
As Hellene, when she saw aloft appeare The Trojane flames, and reach to hevens
hight,

Did clap her hands, and joyed at that dole-full sight.

XIII

This second Helene, fayre Dame Hellenore,
The whiles her husband ran with sory haste, Tc quench the flames which she had tyn'd
before,

Laught at his foolish labour spent in waste,
And ran into her lovers armes right fast;
Where streight embraced, she to him did cry And call aloud for helpe, ere helpe were
past,

For lo! that guest did beare her forcibly, And meant to ravish her, that rather had to dy.

XIV

The wretched man, hearing her call for ayd,
And ready seeing him with her to fly,
In his disquiet mind was much dismayd:
But when againe he backward cast his eye,
And saw the wicked fire so furiously Consume his hart, and scorch his idoles
face,

He was therewith distressed diversely,
Ne wist he how to turne, nor to what place:
Was never wretched man in such a wofull ceace.

XV

Ay when to him she cryde, to her he turnd,
And left the fire; love money overcame:
But when he marked how his money burnd,
He left his wife; money did love disclame:
Both was he loth to loose his loved dame,
And loth to leave his liefest pelfe behinde, Yet sith he n'ote save both, he sav'd that
same

Which was the dearest to his dounghill
minde,
The god of his desire, the joy of misers blinde.

XVI

Thus whilest all things in troublous uprore
were,

And all men busie to suppress the flame,
The loving couple neede no reskew feare,
But leasure had and liberty to frame Their purpost flight, free from all mens reclame;

And Night, the patronesse of love-stealth
fayre,

Gave them safeconduct, till to end they
came:

So beene they gone yfere, a wanton payre Of lovers loosely knit, where list them to repayre.

XVII

Soone as the cruell flames yslaked were,
Malbecco, seeing how his losse did lye, Out of the flames, which he had quencht
whylere,

Into huge waves of griefe and gealosye Full deepe emplonged was, and drowned nye

Twixt inward doole and felonous despight:
He rav'd, he wept, he stamp't, he lowd did cry,

And all the passions that in man may light Did him attonce oppresse, and vex his caytive spright.

XVIII

Long thus he chawd the eud of inward
griefe,

And did consume his gall with anguish sore:
Still when he mused on his late mischiefe, Then still the smart thereof increased more,
And seemd more grievous then it was before:

At last, when sorrow he saw bootied nought, Ne griefe might not his love to him re-
store,

He gan devise how her he reskew mought;
Ten thousand wayes he cast in his confused thought.

XIX

At last resolving, like a pilgrim pore, To search her forth, where so she might be
fond,

And bearing with him treasure in close
store,

The rest he leaves in ground: so takes in
hond

To seeke her endlong both by sea and lond.

Long he her sought, he sought her far and
 nere,
 And every where that he mote understand Of knights and ladies any meetings were,
 And of eachone he mett he tidings did inquere.

XX

But all in vaine; his woman was too wise, Ever to come into his clouch againe,
 And hee too simple ever to surprize
 The jolly Paridell, for all his paine.
 One day, as hee forpassed by the plaine
 With weary pace, he far away espide
 A couple, seeming well to be his twaine, Which hove close under a forest side,
 As if they lay in wait, or els them selves did hide.

XXI

Well weened hee that those the same mote
 bee,
 And as he better did their shape avize,
 Him seemed more their maner did agree;
 For th' one was armed all in warlike wize,
 And th' other, al yelad in garments light, Discoloured like to womanish disguise,
 He did resemble to his lady bright,
 And ever his faint hart much earned at the sight.

XXII

And ever faine he towards them would goe,
 But yet durst not for dread approchen nie,
 But stood aloofe, unweeting what to doe,
 Till that prickt forth with loves extremity,
 That is the father of fowle gealosity,
 He closely nearer crept, the truth to weet:
 But, as he nigher drew, he easily Might scerne that it was not his sweetest
 sweet,
 Ne yet her belamour, the partner of his sheet.

XXIII

But it was scornfull Braggadochio, That with his servant Trompart hovered
 there,
 Sith late he fled from his too earnest foe:
 Whom such whenas Malbecco spyed clere, He turned backe, and would have fled arere;
 Till Trompart ronning hastely, him did stay,
 And bad before his souveraine lord appeere:

That was him loth, yet durst he not gaine-
 say,
 And comming him before, low louted on the lay.

XXIV

The boaster at him sternely bent his browe,
 As if he could have kild him with his looke, That to the ground him meekely made to
 bowe,
 And awfull terror deepe into him strooke,
 That every member of his body quooke.
 Said he, 'Thou man of nought, what doest thou here,
 Unfitly furnisht with thy bag and booke, Where I expected one with shield and sperc,
 To prove some deeds of armes upon an equall pere?'

XXV

The wretched man at his imperious speach Was all abasht, and low prostrating, said:
 'Good sir, let not my rudenes be no breach Unto your patience, ne be ill ypaid;
 For I unwares this way by fortune straid,
 A silly pilgrim driven to distresse, That seeke a lady—' There he suddein
 staid,
 And did the rest with grievous sighes sup-
 presse,
 While teares stood in his eies, few drops of bitterness.

XXVI

'What lady, man?' said Trompart. 'Take
 good hart,
 And tell thy griefe, if any hidden lye:
 Was never better time to shew thy smart Then now that noble succor is thee by,
 That is the whole worlds commune remedy.'
 That chearful word his weak heart much did cheare,
 And with vaine hope his spirits faint supply,
 That bold he sayd: 'O most redoubted pere, Vouhsafe with mild regard a wretches case to heare.'

XXVII

Then sighing sore, 'It is not long,' saide
 hee,
 'Sith I enjoyd the gentlest dame alive;
 Of whom a knight, no knight at all perdee,
 But shame of all that doe for honor strive,

By treacherous deceit did me deprive;
Through open outrage he her bore away,
And with fowle force unto his will did
drive,
Which al good knights, that armes do bear this day,
Are bownd for to revenge and punish if they may.

XXVIII

‘And you, most noble lord, that can and dare

Redresse the wrong of miserable wight, Cannot employ your most victorious speare
In better quarell then defence of right,
And for a lady gainst a faithlesse knight:
So shall your glory bee advaunced much,
And all faire ladies magnify your might,
And eke my selfe, albee I simple such,
Your worthy paine shall wel reward with guerdon rich.’

XXIX

With that out of his bouget forth he drew Great store of treasure, therewith him to tempt;

But he on it lookt scornefully askew,
As much disdeigning to be so misdempt,
Or a war-monger to be basely nempt;
And said: ‘Thy offers base I greatly loth, And eke thy words uncourteous and unkempt:

I tread in dust thee and thy money both,
That, were it not for shame —’ So turned from him wroth.

XXX

But Trompart, that his maistres humor
knew,

In lofty looks to hide an humble minde,
Was inly tickled with that golden vew, And in his eare him rownded close be-
hinde:

Yet stoupt he not, but lay still in the
winde,

Waiting advauntage on the pray to sease; Till Trompart, lowly to the grownd in-clinde,

Besought him his great corage to appease,
And pardon simple man, that rash did him displease.

XXXI

Big looking like a doughty doucepere,
At last he thus: ‘Thou clod of vilest clay,

I pardon yield, and with thy rudenes beare;
But weete henceforth, that all that golden
pray,
And all that els the vaine world vaunten
may,
I loath as doung, ne deeme my dew re-
ward:

Fame is my meed, and glory vertues pay:
But minds of mortal men are muchell mard And mov’d amisse with massy mucks un-meet regard.

XXXII

‘And more, I graunt to thy great misery Gratious respect; thy wife shall backe be
sent,

And that vile knight, who ever that he bee, Which hath thy lady reft, and knighthood
shent,

By Sanglamort my sword, whose deadly
dent

The blood hath of so many thousands shedd,
I swear, ere long shall dearly it repent; Ne he twixt heven and earth shall hide his
hedd,

But soone he shalbe fownd, and shortly doen be dedd.’

XXXIII

The foolish man theat woxe wondrous blith,

As if the word so spoken were halfe donne,
And humbly thanked him a thousand sith, That had from death to life him newly wome.

Tho forth the boaster marching, brave be-
gonne

His stolen steed to thunder furiously,
As if he heven and hell would overome,
And all the world confound with cruelty,
That much Malbecco joyed in his jollity.

XXXIV

Thus long they three together traveled, Through many a wood and many an uncouth way,

To seeke his wife, that was far wandered:
But those two sought nought but the present pray,

To weete, the treasure which he did be-
wray,

On which their eies and harts were wholly
sett,

With purpose how they might it best betray;

For sith the howre that first he did them
lett
The same behold, therewith their keene desires were whett.

XXXV

It fortun'd, as they together far'd, They spide, where Paridell came pricking
fast

Upon the plaine, the which him selfe pre-par'd

To giust with that brave straunger knight a cast,

As on adventure by the way he past:
Alone he rode without his paragone;
For having filcht her bells, her up he cast
To the wide world, and let her fly alone; He nould be clogd. So had he served many one.

XXXVI

The gentle lady, loose at randon lefte, The greene-wood long did walke, and wander wide

At wilde adventure, like a forlorne wefte, Till on a day the Satyres her espide Straying alone withouten groome or guide:
Her up they tooke, and with them home her ledd,

With them as housewife ever to abide,
To milk their gotes, and make them cheese and bredd,

And every one as commune good her hand-eled:

XXXVII

Tha shortly she Malbecco has forgott,
And eke Sir Paridell, all were he deare;
Who from her went to seeke another lott,
And now by fortune was arriv'd here, Where those two guilers with Malbecco
were.

Soone as the oldman saw Sir Paridell, He fainted, and was almost dead with
feare,

Ne word he had to speake, his grieffe to
tell,

But to him louted low, and greeted goodly
well;

XXXVIII

And after asked him for Hellenore.
'I take no keepe of her,' sayd Paridell,
'She wonneth in the forrest there before.'
So forth he rode, as his adventure fell;

The whiles the boaster from his loftie sell Faynd to alight, something amisse to mend;
But the fresh swayne would not his leasure
dwell,

But went his way; whom when he passed
kend,

He up remounted light, and after faind to wend.

XXXIX

'Perdy nay,' said Malbecco, 'shall ye not:
But let him passe as lightly as he came:
For litle good of him is to be got,
And mickle perill to bee put to shame.
But let us goe to seeke my dearest dame,
Whom he hath left in yonder forest wyld:
For of her safety in great doubt I ame, Least salvage beastes her person have despoyld:

Then all the world is lost, and we in vaine have toyl'd.'

XL

They all agree, and forward them adress:
'Ah! but,' said crafty Trompart, 'weete ye
well,

That yonder in that wastefull wilderness Huge monsters haunt, and many dangers
dwell;

Dragons, and minotaures, and feendes of
hell,

And many wilde woodmen, which robbe and
rend

All travellers; therefore advise ye well, Before ye enterprise that way to wend:
One may his journey bring too soone to evill end.'

XLI

Malbecco stopt in great astonishment,
And with pale eyes fast fixed on the rest,
Their counsell crav'd, in daunger imminent.
Said Trompart: 'You, that are the most
opprest

With burdein of great treasure, I thinke
best

Here for to stay in safetie behynd;
My lord and I will search the wide forest.'
That counsell pleased not Malbeccoes mynd; For he was much afraid, him selfe alone to fynd.

XLII

'Then is it best,' said he, 'that ye doe leave Your treasure here in some security,

Either fast closed in some hollow greave,
 Or buried in the ground from jeopardy, Till we returne againe in safety:
 As for us two, least doubt of us ye have,
 Hence farre away we will blyndfolded ly, Ne pryvy bee unto your treasures grave.
 It pleased: so he did. Then they march forward brave.

XLIII

Now when amid the thickest woodes they
 were,
 They heard a noyse of many bagpipes
 shrill,
 And shrieking hububs them approching
 nere,
 Which all the forest did with horroure fill:
 That dreadfull sound the bosters hart did thrill
 With such amazment, that in hast he fledd, Ne ever looked back for good or ill,
 And after him eke fearefull Trompart
 spedd;
 The old man could not fly, but fell to ground half dedd.

XLIV

Yet afterwarde close creeping as he might,
 He in a bush did hyde his fearefull hedd.
 The jolly Satyres, full of fresh delight, Came dauncing forth, and with them nim-bly ledd Faire Helenore, with girlonds all bespredd, Whom their May-lady they had newly
 made:
 She, proude of that new honour which they redd,
 And of their lovely fellowship full glade, Daunst lively, and her face did with a law-rell shade.

XLV

The silly man that in the thickett lay Saw all this goodly sport, and grieved sore, Yet durst he not against it doe or say, But did his hart with bitter thoughts en-
 gore,
 To see th' unkindnes of his Hellenore.
 All day they daunced with great lustyhedd, And with their horned feet the greene gras wore,
 The whiles their gotes upon the bronzes
 fedd, Till drouping Phæbus gan to hyde his golden hedd.

XLVI

Tho up they gan their mery pypes to trusse,
 And all their goodly heardes did gather
 rownd,
 But every Satyre first did give a busse
 To Hellenore: so busses did abound.
 Now gan the humid vapour shed the grownd With perly deaw, and th' earthes gloomy
 shade
 Did dim the brightnesse of the welkin
 rownd,
 That every bird and beast awarned made To shrowd themselves, whiles sleepe their sences did invade.

XLVII

Which when Malbecco saw, out of his bush Upon his hands and feete he crept full
 light,
 And like a gote emongst the gotes did rush,
 That through the helpe of his faire hornes on hight,
 And misty dampe of misconceyving night,
 And eke through likenesse of his gotish
 beard,
 He did the better counterfeite aright:
 So home he marcht emongst the horned
 heard,
 That none of all the Satyres him espyde or heard.

XLVIII

At night, when all they went to sleepe, he vewd
 Whereas his lovely wife emongst them lay, Embraced of a Satyre rough and rude, Who all the night did minde his joyous
 play:
 Nine times he heard him come aloft ere
 day,
 That all his hart with gealosity did swell;
 But yet that nights ensample did bewray, That not for nought his wife them loved so
 well,
 When one so oft a night did ring his matins bell.

XLIX

So closely as he could, he to them crept, When wearie of their sport to sleepe they
 fell,
 And to his wife, that now full soundly slept,
 He whispered in her eare, and did her tell,
 That it was he, which by her side did
 dwell,

And therefore prayd her wake, to heare
him plaine.
As one out of a dreame not waked well,
She turnd her, and returned backe againe:
Yet her for to awake he did the more con-
straine

At last with irkesom trouble she abrayd;
And then perceiving, that it was indeed
Her old Malbecco, which did her upbrayd With loosenesse of her love and loathly
deed,
She was astonisht with exceeding dreed,
And would have wakt the Satyre by her
syde;
But he her prayd, for mercy or for meed,
To save his life, ne let him be descryde, But hearken to his lore, and all his counsell hyde.

LI

Tho gan he her perswade to leave that lewd And loathsom life, of God and man ab-
hord,
And home returne, where all should be renewd
With perfect peace and bandes of fresh accord,
And she receivd againe to bed and bord,
As if no trespas ever had beene donne:
But she it all refused at one word,
And by no meanes would to his will be
wonne,
But chose emongst the jolly Satyres still to wonne.

LII

He wooed her till day spring he espyde;
But all in vaine: and then turnd to the
heard,
Who butted him with hornes on every syde, And trode downe in the durt, where his hore beard
Was fowly dight, and he of death afeard.
Early, before the heavens fairest light
Out of the ruddy east was fully reard, The heardees out of their foldes were loosed
quight,
And he emongst the rest crept forth in sory
plight.

LIII

So soone as he the prison dore did pas,
He ran as fast as both his feet could beare,

And never looked who behind him was,
Ne scarsely who before: like as a beare, That creeping close, amongst the hives to
reare
An hony combe, the wakefull dogs espy,
And him assayling, sore his carkas teare,
That hardly he with life away does fly, Ne staves, till safe him selfe he see from jeopardy.

LIV

Ne stayd he, till he came unto the place, Where late his treasure he entombed
had;
Where when he found it not (for Trom-part bace Had it purloyned for his maister bad)
With extreme fury he became quite mad,
And ran away, ran with him selfe away:
That who so straungely had him seene be-stadd,
With upstart haire and staring eyes dis-
may,
From Limbo lake him late escaped sure would say.

LV

High over hilles and over dales he fledd, As if the wind him on his winges had
borne,
Ne banck nor bush could stay him, when he spedd
His nimble feet, as treading still on thorne: Griefe, and despight, and gealosity, and seorne
Did all the way him follow hard behynd, And he himselfe himselfe loath'd so for-
lorne,
So shamefully forlorne of womankynd;
That, as a snake, still lurked in his wounded
mynd.

LVI

Still fled he forward, looking backward
still.
Ne stayd his flight, nor fearefull agony, Till that he came unto a rocky hill,
Over the sea suspended dreadfully, That living creature it would terrify
To looke adowne, or upward to the hight: From thence he threw him selfe despite-
ously,
All desperate of his fore-damned spright, That seemd no help for him was left in living sight.

LVII

But through long anguish and selfe-mur-ring thought,
 He was so wasted and forpined quight, That all his substance was consum'd to
 nought,
 And nothing left, but like an aery spright,
 That on the rockes he fell so flit and light,
 That he thereby receiv'd no hurt at all;
 But chanced on a craggy cliff to light; Whence he with crooked clawes so long did crall,
 That at the last he found a cave with entrance small.

LVIII

Into the same he creepes, and thenceforth
 there
 Resolv'd to build his balefull mansion, In drery darkenes, and continuall feare
 Of that rocks fall, which ever and anon Threates with huge ruine him to fall upon,
 That he dare never sleepe, but that one eye Still ope he keeps for that occasion;
 Ne ever rests he in tranquillity, The roing billowes beat his bowre so boyst-rously.

LIX

Ne ever is he wont on ought to feed But todes and frogs, his pasture poyson-
 ous,
 Which in his cold complexion doe breed
 A filthy blood, or humour rancorous, Matter of doubt and dread suspitious, That doth with curelesse care consume the
 hart,
 Corrupts the stomacke with gall vitious, Croscuts the liver with internall smart,
 And doth transfixe the soule with deathes eternall dart.

LX

Yet can he never dye, but dying lives,
 And doth himselfe with sorrow new sus-
 taine,
 That death and life attonce unto him gives,
 And painefull pleasure turnes to pleasing
 paine.
 There dwels he ever, miserable swaine, Hatefull both to him selfe and every wight;
 Where he, through privy grieffe and horrour vaine,
 Is woxen so deform'd, that he has quight Forgot he was a man, and Gelosy is hight.

CANTO XI

Britomart chaceth Ollyphant; Findes Scudamour distrest: Assayes the house of Busyrane, Where Loves spoyles are exprest.

I

O HATEFULL hellish snake! what Furie furst Brought thee from balefull house of Proserpene, Where in her bosome she thee long had
 nurst,
 And fostred up with bitter milke of tine, Fowle Gealosity! that turnest love divine To joylesse dread, and mak'st the loving
 hart
 With hatefull thoughts to languish and to pine,
 And feed it selfe with selfe-consuming
 smart?
 Of all the passions in the mind thou vilest art.

II

O let him far be banished away,
 And in his stead let Love for ever dwell, Sweete Love, that doth his golden wings embay
 In blessed nectar, and pure pleasures
 well,
 Untroubled of vile feare or bitter fell.
 And ye, faire ladies, that your kingdomes
 make
 In th' harts of men, them governe wisely
 well,
 And of faire Britomart ensample take,
 That was as trew in love as turtle to her make.

III

Who with Sir Satyrane, as earst ye red, Forth ryding from Malbeccoes hostlesse
 hous,
 Far off aspyde a young man, the which
 fled
 From an huge geaunt, that with hideous And hatefull outrage long him chaced
 thus;
 It was that Ollyphant, the brother deare
 Of that Argante vile and vitious, From whom the Squyre of Dames was reft
 whylere;
 This all as bad as she, and worse, if worse ought were.

IV

For as the sister did in feminine And filthy lust exceede all woman kinde, So he surpassed his sex masculine,
 In beastly use, all that I ever finde:
 Whom when as Britomart beheld behinde
 The fearefull boy so greedily poursew,
 She was emmoued in her noble minde
 T' employ her puissaunce to his reskew, And pricked fiercely forward, where she did him vew.

V

Ne was Sir Satyrane her far behinde, But with like fiercenesse did ensew the
 chace:
 Whom when the gyaunt saw, he soone resinde
 His former suit, and from them fled apace:
 They after both, and boldly bad him bace,
 And each did strive the other to outgoe;
 But he them both outran a wondrous space,
 For he was long, and swift as any roe, And now made better speed, t' escape his feared foe.

VI

It was not Satyrane, whom he did feare, But Britomart the flowre of chastity; For he the powre of chaste hands might not
 beare,
 But alwayes did their dread encounter fly:
 And now so fast his feet he did apply,
 That he has gotten to a forrest neare,
 Where he is shrowded in security.
 The wood they enter, and search everie
 where;
 They searched diversely, so both divided were.

VII

Fayre Britomart so long him followed,
 That she at last came to a fountaine sheare,
 By which there lay a knight all wallowed Upon the grassy ground, and by him neare His haberjeon, his helmet, and his speare:
 A little of, his shield was rudely throwne,
 On which the Winged Boy in colours cleare Depeinted was, full easie to be knowne, And he thereby, where ever it in field was showne.

VIII

His face upon the ground did groveling ly,
 As if he had beene slombring in the shade,

That the brave mayd would not for courtesy Out of his quiet slomber him abrade, Nor seeme too suddeinly him to invade:
 Still as she stood, she heard with grievous throbb

Him grone, as if his hart were peeces made,
 And with most painefull pangs to sigh and sob,

That pittie did the virgins hart of patience rob.

IX

At last forth breaking into bitter plaintes He said: 'O soverayne Lord, that sit'st on
 hye,

And raignst in blis emongst thy blessed
 saintes,

How suffrest thou such shamefull cruelty,
 So long unwreaked of thine enemy?

Or hast thou, Lord, of good mens cause no
 heed?

Or doth thy justice sleepe, and silently?

What booteth then the good and righteous
 deed,

If goodnesse find no grace, nor righteousnes no meed?

X

'If good find grace, and righteousnes re-
 ward,

Why then is Amoret in caytive band, Sith that more bounteous creature never
 far'd

On foot upon the face of living land?

Or if that hevenly justice may withstand

The wrongfull outrage of unrighteous men, Why then is Busirane with wicked hand

Suffred, these seven monethes day in secret
 den

My lady and my love so cruelly to pen?

XI

'My lady and my love is cruelly pend

In dolefull darkenes from the vew of day,

Whilst deadly torments doe her chast brest rend,

And the sharpe steele doth rive her hart in
 tway,

All for she Scudamore will not deny.

Yet thou, vile man, vile Scudamore, art
 sound,

Ne canst her ayde, ne canst her foe dismay;

Unworthy wretch to tread upon the ground, For whom so faire a lady feeles so sore a wound.'

XII

There an huge heape of singulfes did op-
 presse
 His strugling soule, and swelling throbs
 empeach
 His foltring toung with pangs of drerinesse, Choking the remnant of his plaintife speach, As if his dayes were come to their last
 reach.
 Which when she heard, and saw the ghastly
 fit, Threatning into his life to make a breach, Both with great ruth and terrour she was
 smit,
 Fearing least from her cage the wearie soule would flit.

XIII

Tho stouping downe, she him amoved light;
 Who, therewith somewhat starting, up gan
 looke,
 And seeing him behind a stranger knight, Whereas no living creature he mistooke, With great indignaunce he that sight for-
 sooke,
 And downe againe himselfe disdainefully Abjecting, th' earth with his faire forehead
 strooke:
 Which the bold virgin seeing, gan apply Fit medicine to his grieffe, and spake thus courtesly:

XIV

'Ah! gentle knight, whose deepe conceivd grieffe
 Well seemes t' excede the powre of patience,
 Yet if that hevenly grace some good re-
 liefe
 You send, submit you to High Providence,
 And ever in your noble hart prepense,
 That all the sorrow in the world is lesse Then vertues might and values confidence.
 For who will bide the burden of distresse Must not here thinke to live: for life is wretchednesse.

XV

'Therefore, faire sir, doe comfort to you
 take,
 And freely read what wicked felon so Hath outrag'd you, and thrald your gentle
 make.
 Perhaps this hand may helpe to ease your
 woe,

And wreake your sorrow on your cruell
 foe;
 At least it faire endeavour will apply.' Those feeling words so neare the quicke did goe,
 That up his head he reared easily,
 And leaning on his elbowe, these few words lett fly:

XVI

'What boots it plaine that cannot be re-
 drest,
 And sow vaine sorrow in a fruitlesse eare, Sith powre of hand, nor skill of learned
 brest,
 Ne worldly price cannot redeeme my deare
 Out of her thraldome and continuall feare?
 For he, the tyrant, which her hath in ward By strong enchauntments and blacke magicke leare,
 Hath in a dungeon deepe her close embard,
 And many dreadfull feends hath pointed to her gard.

XVII

'There he tormenteth her most terribly, And day and night afflicts with mortall
 paine,
 Because to yield him love she doth deny,
 Once to me yold, not to be yolde againe:
 But yet by torture he would her con-
 straine
 Love to conceive in her disdainfull brest;
 Till so she doe, she must in doole remaine, Ne may by living meanes be thence relest: What boots it then to plaine that cannot be redrest?'

XVIII

With this sad hersall of his heavy stresse
 The warlike damzell was empassiond sore, And sayd: 'Sir knight, your cause is nothing lesse
 Then is your sorrow, certes, if not more;
 For nothing so much pittie doth implore,
 As gentle ladyes helplesse misery.
 But yet, if please ye listen to my lore,
 I will, with prooffe of last extremity, Deliver her fro thence, or with her for you dy.'

XIX

'Ah! gentlest knight alive,' sayd Scuda-
 more,
 'What huge heroicke magnanimity

Dwells in thy bounteous brest? what couldst thou more,
 If shee were thine, and thou as now am I?
 O spare thy happy daies, and them apply To better boot, but let me die, that ought;
 More is more losse: one is enough to dy.'
 'Life is not lost,' said she, 'for which is
 bought Endlesse renown, that more then death is to be sought.'

XX

Thus shee at length persuaded him to rise,
 And with her wend, to see what new suc-
 cesse
 Mote him befall upon new enterprise:
 His armes, which he had vowed to dispropresse,
 She gathered up and did about him dresse,
 And his forwandred steed unto him gott:
 So forth they both yfere make their pro-gresse,
 And march not past the mountenance of a shott,
 Till they arriv'd whereas their purpose they did plott.

XXI

There they dismounting, drew their weapons bold,
 And stoutly came unto the castle gate, Whereas no gate they found, them to with-
 hold,
 Nor ward to wait at morne and evening
 late;
 But in the porch, that did them sore amate,
 A flaming fire, ymixt with smouldry smoke And stinking sulphure, that with griesly
 hate
 And dreadfull horror did all entraunce
 choke, Enforced them their forward footing to revoke.

XXII

Greatly thereat was Britomart dismayd, Ne in that stownd wist how her selfe to
 beare;
 For daunger vaine it were to have assayd
 That cruell element, which all things feare, Ne none can suffer to approchen neare:
 And turning backe to Scudamour, thus
 sayd:
 'What monstrous enmyty provoke we
 heare,

Foolhardy as th' Earthes children, the which
 made Batteill against the gods? so we a god invade.

'Daunger without discretion to attempt Inglorious and beastlike is: therefore, sir
 knight,
 Aread what course of you is safest dempt, And how we with our foe may come to
 fight.'
 'This is,' quoth he, 'the dolorous despight, Which earst to you I playnd: for neither
 may
 This fire be quencht by any witt or might,
 Ne yet by any meanes remov'd away; So mighty be th' enchantments which the same do stay.

XXIV

'What is there ells, but cease these fruit-lesse paines,
 And leave me to my former languishing?
 Faire Amorett must dwell in wicked chaines, And Scudamour here die with sorrowing.'
 'Perdy, not so,' saide shee; 'for shameful thing
 Yt were t' abandon noble chevisaunce,
 For shewe of perill, without venturing:
 Rather let try extremities of chaunce, Then enterprised praise for dread to dis-avaunce.'

XXV

Therewith, resolv'd to prove her utmost
 might,
 Her ample shield she threw before her
 face,
 And her swords point directing forward
 right, Assayld the flame, the which eftsoones gave place,
 And did it selfe divide with equall space,
 That through she passed, as a thonder bolt Perceth the yielding ayre, and doth dis-
 place
 The soring clouds into sad showres ymolt; So to her yold the flames, and did their force revolt.

XXVI

Whome whenas Scudamour saw past the
 fire,
 Safe and untoucht, he likewise gan assay,

With greedy will and envious desire,
And bad the stubborn flames to yield him
way:

But cruell Muleiber would not obey His threatfull pride, but did the more aug-
ment

His mighty rage, and with imperious sway Him forst (maulgre) his ferences to relent, And backe retire, all scorcht and pitifully brent.

XXVII

With huge impatience he inly swelt,
More for great sorrow that he could not pas Then for the burning torment which he felt;
That with fell woodnes he effierced was.

And wilfully him throwing on the gras, Did beat and bounce his head and brest ful
sore;

The whiles the championesse now entred
has

The utmost rowme, and past the formost
dore,

The utmost rowme, abounding with all precious store.

XXVIII

For round about, the walls yelothed were With goodly arras of great majesty, Woven with gold and silke so close and
nere,

That the rich metall lurked privily,
As faining to be hidd from envious eye;
Yet here, and there, and every where un-wares

It shewd it selfe, and shone unwillingly;
Like a discolourd snake, whose hidden snares Through the greene gras his long bright burnisht back declares.

XXIX

And in those tapets weren fashioned Many faire pourtraicts, and many a faire feate;

And all of love, and al of lusty-hed,
As seemed by their semblaunt, did entreat;
And eke all Cupids warres they did repeate, And cruell batailles, which he whilome
fought

Gainst all the gods, to make his empire
great;

Besides the huge massacres, which he
wrought

On mighty kings and kesars, into thraldome brought.

XXX

Therein was writt, how often thondring
Jove

Had felt the point of his hart percing dart, And leaving heavens kingdome, here did
rove

In straunge disguise, to slake his scalding
smart;

Now like a ram, faire Helle to pervart, Now like a bull, Europa to withdraw:

Ah! how the fearefull ladies tender hart Did lively seeme to tremble, when she saw The huge seas under her t' obey her ser-vaunts law!

XXXI

Soone after that, into a golden showre Him selfe he chaung'd, faire Danaë to vew, And through the roofe of her strong brasen
towre

Did raine into her lap an hony dew,
The whiles her foolish garde, that litle knew Of such deceit, kept th' yron dore fast bard,

And watcht, that none should enter nor is-
sew;

Vaine was the watch, and bootlesse all the
ward,

Whenas the god to golden hew him selfe transfard.

XXXII

Then was he turnd into a snowy swan,
To win faire Leda to his lovely trade:
O wondrous skill and sweet wit of the man,
That her in daffadillies sleeping made,
From scorching heat her daintie limbes to
shade:

Whiles the proud bird, ruffing his fethers
wyde

And brushing his faire brest, did her invade!

Shee slept, yet twixt her eielids closely
spyde

How towards her he rusht, and smiled at his pryde.

XXXIII

Then shewd it how the Thebaue Semelee, Deceivd of gealous Juno, did require To see him in his soverayne majestee, Armd with his thunderbolts and lightning
fire,

Whens dearely she with death bought her
desire.

But faire Alcmena better match did make, Joying his love in likenes more entire:
 Three nights in one they say that for her
 sake
 He then did put, her pleasures lenger to partake.

XXXIV

Twise was he seene in soaring eagles shape,
 And with wide winges to beat the buxome
 ayre:

Once, when he with Asterie did scape, Againe, when as the Trojane boy so fayre He snatched from Ida hill, and with him bare:
 Wondrous delight it was, there to behould
 How the rude shepheards after him did stare, Trembling through feare least down he fallen should,
 And often to him calling to take surer hould.

XXXV

In Satyres shape Antiopa he snatched:
 And like a fire, when he Aegin' assayd:
 A shepeheard, when Mnemosyne he catcht:
 And like a serpent to the Thraecian mayd.
 Whyles thus on earth great Jove these pageaunts playd,
 The Winged Boy did thrust into his throne,
 And scoffing, thus unto his mother sayd:
 'Lo! now the heavens obey to me alone,
 And take me for their Jove, whiles Jove to earth is gone.'

XXXVI

And thou, faire Phæbus, in thy colours
 bright
 Wast there enwoven, and the sad distresse In which that boy thee plunged, for de-
 spight
 That thou bewray'dst his mothers wanton-
 nesse,
 When she with Mars was meynt in joyful-
 nesse:
 Forthy he thrild thee with a leaden dart,
 To love faire Daphne, which thee loved
 lesse:
 Lesse she thee lov'd then was thy just de-sart,
 Yet was thy love her death, and her death was thy smart.

XXXVII

So lovedst thou the lusty Hyacinet,
 So lovedst thou the faire Coronis deare:

Yet both are of thy haplesse hand extinct,
 Yet both in flowres doe live, and love thee
 beare,

The one a paunce, the other a sweet breare:
 For grieve whereof, ye mote have lively
 seene

The god himselve rending his golden heare,
 And breaking quite his garlond ever greene,
 With other signes of sorrow and impatient teene.

XXXVIII

Both for those two, and for his owne deare
 sonne,

The soune of Climene, he did repent, Who, bold to guide the charet of the sunne,

Himselfe in thousand peeces fondly rent,
 And all the world with flashing fire brent:
 So like, that all the walles did seeme to
 flame.

Yet cruell Cupid, not herewith content, Forst him eftsoones to follow other game,
 And love a shephards daughter for his dearest dame.

XXXIX

He loved Isse for his dearest dame,
 And for her sake her cattell fedd a while,
 And for her sake a cowheard vile became,
 The servant of Admetus, cowheard vile, Whiles that from heaven he suffered exile.

Long were to tell each other lovely fitt,
 Now like a lyon, hunting after spoile,
 Now like a stag, now like a faulcon flit:
 All which in that faire arras was most lively writ.

XL

Next unto him was Neptune pictured,
 In his divine resemblance wondrous lyke:
 His face was rugged, and his hoarie hed Dropped with brackish deaw; his threeforkt pyke

He stearnly shooke, and therewith fierce did stryke

The raging billowes, that on every syde They trembling stood, and made a long broad dyke,

That his swift charet might have passage
 wyde,

Which foure great hippodames did draw in temewise tyde.

XLI

His seahorses did seeme to snort amayne,
 And from their nosethrilles blow the brynie
 streame,
 That made the sparckling waves to smoke
 agayne,
 And flame with gold, but the white fomy cream Did shine with silver, and shoot forth his beame.
 The god himselfe did pensive seeme and
 sad,
 And hong adowne his head, as he did dreame:
 For privy love his brest empierced had, Ne ought but deare Bisaltis ay could make him glad.

XLII

He loved eke Iphimedia deare,
 And Aeolus faire daughter, Arne hight,
 For whom he turnd him selfe into a steare,
 And fedd on fodder, to beguile her sight.
 Also to win Deucalions daughter bright,
 He turnd him selfe into a dolphin fayre;
 And like a winged horse he tooke his flight,
 To snaky-locke Medusa to repayre, On whom he got faire Pegasus, that flitteth in the ayre.

XLIII

Next Saturne was, (but who would ever
 weene
 That sullen Saturne ever weend to love ?
 Yet love is sullen, and Saturnlike seene, As he did for Erigone it prove,) That to a centaure did him selfe transmove.
 So prov'd it eke that gracious god of wine,
 When, for to compass Philliras hard love,
 He turnd himselfe into a fruitfull vine,
 And into her faire bosome made his grapes decline.

XLIV

Long were to tell the amorous assayes, And gentle pangues, with which he maked
 meeke
 The mightie Mars, to learne his wanton
 playes:
 How oft for Venus, and how often eek For many other nymphes he sore did shreeke,
 With womanish teares, and with unwarlike
 smarts,
 Privily moystening his horrid cheek.

There was he painted full of burning dartes,
 And many wide woundes launched through his inner partes.

XLV

Ne did he spare (so cruell was the elfe) His owne deare mother, (ah ! why should he so ?) Ne did he spare sometime to pricke himselfe,
 That he might taste the sweet consuming
 woe,
 Which he had wrought to many others moe.
 But to declare the mournfull tragedyes, And spoiles, wherewith he all the ground did strow,
 More eath to number with how many eyes High heven beholdes sad lovers nightly theeveryes.

XLVI

Kings, queenes, lords, ladies, knights, and damsels gent
 Were heap'd together with the vulgar sort,
 And mingled with the raskall rablement, Without respect of person or of port,
 To shew Dan Cupids powre and great
 effort:
 And round about, a border was entrayld Of broken bowes and arrowes shivered short,
 And a long bloody river through them rayld, So lively and so like that living sence it fayld.

XLVII

And at the upper end of that faire rowme,
 There was an altar built of pretious stone,
 Of passing vawle and of great renowme,
 On which there stood an image all alone Of massy gold, which with his owne light
 shone;
 And winges it had with sondry colours
 dight,
 More sondry colours then the proud pavone Beares in his boasted fan, or Iris bright, When her discoloured bow she spreds through hevens hight.

XLVIII

Blyndfold he was, and in his cruell fist
 A mortall bow and arrowes keene did hold,
 With which he shot at randon, when him list,

Some headed with sad lead, some with pure
gold;
(Ah! man, beware how thou those dartes behold.)
A wounded dragon under him did ly, Whose hideous taylor his lefte foot did en-
fold,
And with a shaft was shot through either
eye,
That no man forth might draw, ne no man remedye.

XLIX

And underneath his feet was written thus,
Unto the victor of the gods this bee :
And all the people in that ample hous Did to that image bowe their humble
knee,
And oft committed fowle idolatree.
That wondrous sight faire Britomart
amazd,
Ne seeing could her wonder satisfie,
But ever more and more upon it gazd,
The whiles the passing brightnes her fraile sences dazd.

L

Tho as she backward cast her busie eye,
To search each secrete of that goodly
sted,
Over the dore thus written she did spye, Bee bold : she oft and oft it over-red,
Yet could not find what sence it figured:
But what so were therein or writ or
ment,
She was no whit thereby discouraged
From prosecuting of her first intent, But forward with bold steps into the next roome went.

LI

Much fayrer then the former was that roome,
And richlier by many partes arayd;
For not with arras made in painefull loome,
But with pure gold, it all was overlayd, Wrought with wilde antickes, which their follies playd
In the rich metall, as they living were:
A thousand monstrous formes therein were
made,
Such as false Love doth oft upon him
weare,
For Love in thousand monstrous formes doth oft appeare.

LII

And all about, the glistring walles were hong
With warlike spoiles and with victorious
prayes
Of mightie conquerours and captaines
strong,
Which were whilome captived in their
dayes
To cruell Love, and wrought their owne decayes:
Their swerds and speres were broke, and hauberques rent,
And their proud girlonds of tryumphant
bayes Troden in dust with fury insolent, To shew the victors might and mercilesse intent.

LIII

The warlike mayd, beholding earnestly
The goodly ordinaunce of this rich place, Did greatly wonder, ne could satisfy Her greedy eyes with gazing a long space; But more she mervaild that no footings
trace Nor wight appear'd, but wastefull empti-
nesse
And solemne silence over all that place: Straunge thing it seem'd, that none was to possesse
So rich purveyaunce, ne them keepe with carefulnesse.

LIV

And as she lookt about, she did behold How over that same dore was likewise
writ,
Be bolde, be bolde, and every where Be bold,
That much she muz'd, yet could not construe it
By any ridling skill or commune wit.
At last she spyde at that rowmes upper end Another yron dore, on which was writ, Be not too bold ; whereto though she did bend Her earnest minde, yet wist not what it might intend.

LV

Thus she there wayted untill eventyde, Yet living creature none she saw appeare:
And now sad shadowes gan the world to
hyde
From mortall vew, and wrap in darkenes
dreare:

Yet nould she d'off her weary armes, for
 feare
 Of secret daunger, ne let sleepe oppresse
 Her heavy eyes with natures burdein deare, But drew her selfe aside in sickernesse, And her welperid wepons did about her dresse.

CANTO XII

The maske of Cupid, and th' enchanted chamber are displayd, Whence Britomart redeemes faire Amoret through charmes decayd.

I

THO, when as chearelesse night ycovered
 had Fayre heaven with an universall clowd, That every wight, dismayd with darkenes
 sad,
 In silence and in sleepe themselves did shrowd,
 She heard a shrilling trompet sound alowd, Signe of nigh battaill, or got victory:
 Nought therewith daunted was her courage
 prowde,
 But rather stird to cruell enmity, Expecting ever when some foe she might desery.

II

With that, an hideous storme of winde
 arose,
 With dreadfull thunder and lightning atwixt,
 And an earthquake, as if it streight would lose
 The worlds foundations from his centre fixt:
 A direfull stench of smoke and sulphure
 mixt Ensewd, whose noyaunce fild the fearefull
 sted,
 From the fourth howre of night untill the sixt;
 Yet the bold Britnesse was nought ydred, Though much emmov'd, but stedfast still persevered.

III

All suddainly a stormy whirlwind blew Throughout the house, that clapped every
 dore,
 With which that yron wicket open flew,
 As it with mighty levers had bene tore;

And forth yssewd, as on the readie flore
 Of some theatre, a grave personage, That in his hand a braunch of laurell bore,
 With comely haveour and count'nance sage, Yclad in costly garments, fit for tragicke stage.

IV

Proceeding to the midst, he stil did stand,
 As if in minde he somewhat had to say,
 And to the vulgare beckning with his hand,
 In signe of silence, as to heare a play,
 By lively actions he gan bewray
 Some argument of matter passioned;
 Which doen, he backe retyred soft away,
 And passing by, his name discovered, Ease, on his robe in golden letters cyphered.

The noble mayd, still standing, all this vewd,
 And merveild at his straunge intendment:
 With that a joyous fellowship issewd Of minstrales, making goodly meriment, With wanton bardes, and rymers impudent,
 All which together song full chearefully
 A lay of loves delight, with sweet concent:
 After whom marcht a jolly company,
 In manner of a maske, enranged orderly.

VI

The whiles a most delitious harmony In full straunge notes was sweetly heard to
 sound,
 That the rare sweetness of the melody
 The feeble sences wholly did confound, And the frayle soule in deepe delight nigh drown'd:
 And when it ceast, shrill trompets lowd did bray,
 That their report did far away rebound,
 And when they ceast, it gan againe to play, The whiles the maskers marched forth in trim aray.

VII

The first was Fanny, like a lovely boy,
 Of rare aspect and beantie without peare, Matchable ether to that ympe of Troy, Whom Jove did love and chose his cup to
 beare,
 Or that same daintie lad, which was so
 deare
 To great Alcides, that, when as he dyde,

He wailed womanlike with many a teare,
 And every wood and every valley wyde
 He filld with Hylas name; the nymphes eke Hylas cryde.

VIII

His garment nether was of silke nor say,
 But paynted plumes, in goodly order dight, Like as the sunburnt Indiaus do aray Their tawney bodies, in their proudest
 plight:

As those same plumes, so seemd he vaine
 and light,
 That by his gate might easily appeare;
 For still he far'd as daunceing in delight,
 And in his hand a windy fan did beare, That in the ydle ayre he mov'd still here and there.

IX

And him beside marcht amorous Desyre, Who seemd of ryper yeares then th' other
 swayne,
 Yet was that other swayne this elders syre,
 And gave him being, commune to them
 twayne:

His garment was disguysed very vayne,
 And his embrodered bonet sat awry; Twixt both his hands few sparks he close did strayne,
 Which still he blew, and kindled busily, That soone they life conceiv'd, and forth in flames did fly.

X

Next after him went Doubt, who was yclad
 In a discolour'd cote of straunge disguise, That at his backe a brode capuccio had,
 And sleeves dependaunt Albanese-wyse:
 He lookt askew with his mistrustfull eyes,
 And nycely trode, as thornes lay in his way,
 Or that the flore to shrinke he did avyse,
 And on a broken reed he still did stay His feeble steps, which shrunck when hard thereon he lay.

XI

With him went Daunger, cloth'd in ragged
 weed,
 Made of beares skin, that him more dreadfull made,
 Yet his owne face was dreadful, ne did need Straunge horrour to deforme his griesly
 shade:

A net in th' one hand, and a rusty blade In th' other was, this Mischiefe, that Mishap;

With th' one his foes he threatned to invade,

With th' other he his friends ment to en-wrap:

For whom he could not kill he practizd to entrap.

XII

Next him was Feare, all arm'd from top to toe,

Yet thought himselfe not safe enough
 thereby,

But feard each shadow moving too or froe,

And his owne armes when glittering he did
 spy,

Or clashing heard, he fast away did fly,
 As ashes pale of hew, and wingyheeld;

And evermore on Daunger fixt his eye, Gainst whom he alwayes bent a brasen
 shield,

Which his right hand unarmed fearefully did wield.

XIII

With him went Hope in rancke, a handsome mayd,

Of chearefull looke and lovely to behold;
 In silken samite she was light arayd,

And her fayre lockes were woven up in
 gold;

She alway smyld, and in her hand did hold An holy water sprinkle, dipt in dewe,

With which she sprinkled favours manifold

On whom she list, and did great liking sheowe,

Great liking unto many, but true love to feowe.

XIV

And after them Dissemblance and Suspect

Marcht in one rancke, yet an unequall
 paire:

For she was gentle and of milde aspect,
 Courteous to all and seeming debonaire,

Goodly adorned and exceeding faire:

Yet was that all but paynted and pourloynd,

And her bright browes were deckt with borrowed haire:

Her deeds were forged, and her words false coynd,
 And alwaies in her hand two clewes of silke she twynd.

XV

But he was fowle, ill favoured, and grim,
 Under his eibrowes looking still askaunce;
 And ever as Dissemblaunce laught on him, He lowrd on her with daungerous eye-
 glaunce,
 Shewing his nature in his countenance;
 His rolling eies did never rest in place, But walkte each where, for feare of hid
 mischaunce;
 Holding a lattis still before his face, Through which he stil did peep, as forward he did pace.

XVI

Next him went Griefe and Fury matcht
 yfere;
 Griefe all in sable sorrowfully clad, Downe hanging his dull head, with heavy
 chere,
 Yet inly being more then seeming sad:
 A paire of pincers in his hand he had,
 With which he pinched people to the hart, That from thenceforth a wretched life they ladd,
 In wilfull languor and consuming smart, Dying each day with inward wounds of dolours dart.

XVII

But Fury was full ill appareiled
 In rags, that naked nigh she did appeare, With ghastly looks and dreadfull drierihed; For from her backe her garments she did
 teare,
 And from her head ofte rent her snarled
 heare:
 In her right hand a firebrand shee did tosse
 About her head, still roming here and there;
 As a dismayed deare in chace embost, Forgetfull of his safety, hath his right way lost.

XVIII

After them went Displeasure and Pleas-
 aunce,
 He looking lompish and full sullein sad,
 And hanging downe his heavy countenance;
 She chearfull fresh and full of joyaunce
 glad,

As if no sorrow she ne felt ne drad;
 That evill matched paire they seemd to
 bee:

An angry waspe th' one in a viall had,
 Th' other in hers an hony-laden bee.
 Thus marched these six couples forth in faire degree.

XIX

After all these there marcht a most faire
 dame,
 Led of two grysie villeins, th' one De-
 spight,
 The other cleped Cruelty by name:
 She, dolefull lady, like a dreary spright Cald by strong charmes out of eternall
 night,
 Had deathes owne ymage figurd in her face,
 Full of sad signes, fearfull to living sight,
 Yet in that horror shewd a seemely grace,
 And with her feeble feete did move a comely pace.

XX

Her brest all naked, as nett yvory, Without adorne of gold or silver bright, Wherewith the craftesman wounts it beautify,
 Of her dew honour was despoyled quight, And a wide wound therein (O ruefull
 sight!)
 Entrenched deep with knyfe accursed
 keene,
 Yet freshly bleeding forth her fainting
 spright,
 (The worke of cruell hand) was to be
 seene,
 That dyde in sanguine red her skin all snowy cleene.

XXI

At that wide orifice her trembling hart
 Was drawne forth, and in silver basin layd, Quite through transfixed with a deadly dart,
 And in her blood yet steeming fresh em-
 bayd:
 And those two villeins, which her steps up-
 stayd,
 When her weake feete could scarcely her
 sustaine,
 And fading vitall powers gan to fade, Her forward still with torture did con-
 straine,
 And evermore increased her consuming
 paine.

XXII

Next after her, the Winged God him selfe Came riding on a lion ravenous, Taught to obey the menage of that elfe,
 That man and beast with powre imperious Subdeweth to his kingdome tyrannous:
 His blindfold eies he bad a while unbinde,
 That his proud spoile of that same dolorous Faire dame he might behold in perfect
 kinde,
 Which seene, he much rejoyced in his cruell minde.

XXIII

Of which ful prowde, him selfe up rearing
 hie,
 He looked round about with sterne dis-
 dayne,
 And did surway his goodly company:
 And marshalling the evill ordered trayne, With that the darts which his right hand did straine Full dreadfully he shooke, that all did
 quake,
 And clapt on hie his couloured winges
 twaine,
 That all his many it affraide did make:
 Tho, blinding him againe, his way he forth did take.

XXIV

Behinde him was Reproch, Repentaunce,
 Shame;
 Reproch the first, Shame next, Repent be-
 hinde:
 Repentaunce feeble, sorowfull, and lame; Reproch despightful, carelesse, and un-
 kinde;
 Shame most ill favourd, bestiall, and blinde: Shame lowrd, Repentaunce sigh'd, Reproch did scould; Reproch sharpe stings, Repentaunce whips entwine, Shame burning brond-yrons in her hand did
 hold:
 All three to each unlike, yet all made in one mould.

XXV

And after them a rude confused rout Of persons flockt, whose names is hard to
 read: Emongst them was sterne Strife, and Anger stout, Unquiet Care, and fond Unthriftyhead,

Lewd Losse of Time, and Sorrow seeming
 dead, Inconstant Change, and false Disloyalty, Consuming Riotise, and guilty Dread
 Of Heavenly Vengeance, faint Infirmitie, Vile Poverty, and lastly Death with Infamy.

XXVI

There were full many moe like maladies, Whose names and natures I note readen
 well;
 So many moe, as there be phantasies In wavering wemens witt, that none can
 tell,
 Or paines in love, or punishments in hell;
 All which disguised marcht in masking
 wise
 About the chamber with that damozell,
 And then returned, having marched thrise, Into the inner rowme, from whence they first did rise.

XXVII

So soone as they were in, the dore streight
 way
 Fast locked, driven with that stormy blast Which first it opened; and bore all away.
 Then the brave maid, which al this while was plast
 In secret shade, and saw both first and last, Issewed forth, and went unto the dore,
 To enter in, but fownd it locked fast:
 It vaine she thought with rigorous uprore For to efforce, when charmes had closed it afore.

XXVIII

Where force might not availe, there sleights and art
 She cast to use, both fitt for hard emprise:
 Forthy from that same rowme not to depart Till morrow next shee did her selfe avize, When that same maske againe should forth arize.
 The morrowe next appeard with joyous
 cheare,
 Calling men to their daily exercize:
 Then she, as morrow fresh, her selfe did
 reare
 Out of her secret stand, that day for to outweare.

XXIX

All that day she outwore in wandering,
 And gazing on that chambers ornament,

Till that againe the second evening
Her covered with her sable vestiment, Wherewith the worlds faire beautie she hath
blent:

Then, when the second watch was almost
past,
That brasen dore flew open, and in went Bold Britomart, as she had late forecast, Nether of ydle showes nor of false charmes aghast.

XXX

So soone as she was entred, rownd about Shee cast her eies, to see what was become

Of all those persons which she saw without:
But lo! they streight were vanisht all and some,

Ne living wight she saw in all that roome, Save that same woefull lady, both whose
hands

Were bounden fast, that did her ill become,
And her small waste girt rownd with yron
bands,

Unto a brasen pillour, by the which she stands.

XXXI

And her before, the vile enchaunter sate, Figuring straunge characters of his art:
With living blood he those characters wrote, Dreadfully dropping from her dying hart, Seeming transfixed with a cruell dart;
And all perforce to make her him to love.
Ah! who can love the worker of her smart?
A thousand charmes he formerly did prove;
Yet thousand charmes could not her stedfast hart remove.

XXXII

Soone as that virgin knight he saw in place,
His wicked bookes in hast he overthrew,
Not caring his long labours to deface;
And fiercely running to that lady trew,
A murderous knife out of his pocket drew,
The which he thought, for villenous de-
spight,

In her tormented bodie to embrew:
But the stout damzell to him leaping light, His cursed hand withheld, and maistered his might.

XXXIII

From her, to whom his fury first he ment,
The wicked weapon rashly he did wrest,

And turning to herselfe his fell intent, Unwares it strooke into her snowie chest,
That litle drops empurpled her faire brest.
Exceeding wroth therewith the virgin grew, Albe the wound were nothing deepe im-
prest,
And fiercely forth her mortall blade she
drew,
To give him the reward for such vile outrage
dew.

XXXIV

So mightily she snote him, that to ground He fell halfe dead; next stroke him should have slaine,

Had not the lady, which by him stood bound, Dernly unto her called to abstaine From doing him to dy; for else her paine Should be remedillesse, sith none but hee, Which wrought it, could the same recure
againe.

Therewith she stayd her hand, loth stayd to
bee;

For life she him envyde, and long'd revenge
to see:

XXXV

And to him said: 'Thou wicked man! whose
meed

For so huge mischiefe and vile villany Is death, or if that ought doe death exceed,
Be sure that nought may save thee from to
dy,

But if that thou this dame doe presently Restore unto her health and former state; This doe and live, els dye undoubtedly.'
He, glad of life, that lookt for death but
late,

Did yield him selfe right willing to prolong his date:

XXXVI

And rising up, gan streight to overlooke Those cursed leaves, his charmes back to reverse;

Full dreadfull things out of that balefull
booke

He red, and measur'd many a sad verse,
That horror gan the virgins hart to perse,
And her faire locks up stared stiffe on end, Hearing him those same bloody lynes re-
herse;

And all the while he red, she did extend Her sword high over him, if ought he did offend.

XXXVII

Anon she gan perceiue the house to quake,
 And all the dores to rattle round about;
 Yet all that did not her dismaied make,
 Nor slack her threatfull hand for daungers
 dout,
 But still with stedfast eye and courage stout Abode, to weet what end would come of all.
 At last that mightie chaine, which round
 about Her tender waste was wound, adowne gan
 fall,
 And that great brasen pillour broke in peeces small.

XXXVIII

The cruell steele, which thirld her dying
 hart,
 Fell softly forth, as of his owne accord,
 And the wyde wound, which lately did dis-
 part
 Her bleeding brest, and riven bowels gor'd,
 Was closed up, as it had not benee bor'd,
 And every part to safety full sownd,
 As she were never hurt, was soone restor'd:
 Tho, when she felt her selfe to be unbownd, And perfect hole, prostrate she fell unto the grownd.

XXXIX

Before faire Britomart she fell prostrate, Saying: 'Ah, noble knight! what worthy
 meede
 Can wretched lady, quitt from wofull state, Yield you in lieu of this your gracious
 deed?
 Your vertue selfe her owne reward shall
 breed,
 Even immortall prayse and glory wyde, Which I, your vassall, by your prowess freed,
 Shall through the world make to be noti-
 fyde,
 And goodly well aduance, that goodly well was tryde.'

XL

But Britomart, npreparing her from grownd, Said: 'Gentle dame, reward enough I
 weene,
 For many labours more then I have found,
 This, that in safetie now I have you seene,
 And meane of your deliverance have benee: Henceforth, faire lady, comfort to you
 take,

And put away remembrance of late teene;
 In sted thereof, know that your loving
 make Hath no lesse grieve endured for your gentle sake.'

XLI

She much was cheard to heare him men-tiond,
 Whom of all living wightes she loved best.
 Then laid the noble championesse strong
 hond
 Upon th' enchaunter, which had her dis-trest
 So sore, and with foule outrages opprest:
 With that great chaine, wherewith not long
 ygoe
 He bound that pitteous lady prisoner, now
 rest, Himselfe she bound, more worthy to be so,
 And captive with her led to wretchednesse and wo.

XLII

Returning back, those goodly rowmes, which erst
 She saw so rich and royally arayd, Now vanisht utterly and cleane subverst She found, and all their glory quite de-
 cayd,
 That sight of such a change her much
 dismayd.
 Thence forth descending to that perlous porch,
 Those dreadfull flames she also found de-
 layd,
 And quenched quite, like a consumed torch, That erst all entrens wont so cruelly to scorch.

XLIII

More easie issew now then entrance late She found: for now that fained dreadfull
 flame,
 Which chokt the porch of that enchanted
 gate,
 And passage bard to all that thither came,
 Was vanisht quite, as it were not the same,
 And gave her leave at pleasure forth to
 passe.
 Th' enchaunter selfe, which all that fraud did frame,
 To have efforst the love of that faire lasse, Seeing his worke now wasted, deepe engrieved was.

XLIV

But when the victresse arrived there Where late she left the pensife Scudamore With her own trusty squire, both full of
 feare,
 Neither of them she found where she them
 lore:
 Thereat her noble hart was stonisht sore;
 But most faire Amoret, whose gentle spright Now gan to feede on hope, which she before
 Conceived had, to see her own deare knight, Being thereof beguyld, was filld with new affright.

XLV

But he, sad man, when he had long in drede Awayted there for Britomarts returne, Yet saw her not, nor signe of her good speed,
 His expectation to despaire did turne, Misdeeming sure that her those flames did
 burne;
 And therefore gan advize with her old
 squire,
 Who her deare nourslings losse no lesse did
 mourne,
 Thence to depart for further aide t' enquire:
 Where let them wend at will, whilst here
 I doe respire.

THE SECOND PART OF THE FAERIE QUEENE

CONTAINING

THE FOURTH, FIFTH, AND SIXTH BOOKES

BY ED. SPENSER

IMPRINTED AT LONDON FOR WILLIAM PONSONBY. 1596

THE FOURTH BOOKE
 OF THE FAERIE QUEENE

CONTAINING

THE LEGEND OF CAMEL AND TRIAMOND

OF FRIENDSHIP

I

THE rugged forehead that with grave fore-
 sight
 Welds kingdomes causes and affaires of state,
 My loser rimes (I wote) doth sharply wite,
 For praising love, as I have done of late,
 And magnifying lovers deare debate;
 By which fraile youth is oft to follie led, Through false allurements of that pleasing baite,
 That better were in vertues disciplid, Then with vaine poemes weeds to have their fancies fed.

II

Such ones ill judge of love, that cannot
 love, Ne in their frozen hearts feele kindly
 flame:
 Forth they ought not thing unknowne re-
 prove,
 Ne naturall affection faultlesse blame, For fault of few that have abusd the
 same.
 For it of honor and all vertue is The roote, and brings forth glorious flowres of fame,
 That crowne true lovers with immortal
 blis,
 The meed of them that love, and do not live amisse.

III

Which who so list looke backe to former ages,
 And call to count the things that then were
 donne,

Shall find, that all the workes of those wise sages,
And brave exploits which great heroes
wonne,

In love were either ended or begunne:
Witnesse the father of philosophie.
Which to his Critias, shaded oft from sunne,
Of love full manie lessons did apply, The which these Stoicke censours cannot well deny.

IV

To such therefore I do not sing at all,
But to that sacred saint my soveraigne
Queene,

In whose chaste breast all bountie naturall
And treasures of true love enlocked beene, Bove all her sexe that ever yet was scene:
To her I sing of love, that loveth best
And best is lov'd of all alive, I weene;
To her this song most fitly is address,
The queene of love, and prince of peace from heaven blest.

Which that she may the better deigne to
heare,
Do thou, dred infant, Venus dearling dove,

From her high spirit chase imperious feare,
And use of awfull majestie remove:
In sted thereof with drops of melting love, Deawd with ambrosiall kisses, by thee gotten

From thy sweete smyling mother from
above,

Sprinkle her heart, and haughtie courage soften,

That she may hearke to love, and reade this lesson often.

CANTO I

Fayre Britomart saves Amoret: Duess a discord breeds Twixt Scudamour and Blandamour:
Their fight and warlike deedes.

I

OF lovers sad calamities of old Full many piteous stories doe remaine, But none more piteous ever was ytold,
Then that of Amorets hart-binding chaine,
And this of Florimels unworthie paine:
The deare compassion of whose bitter fit

My softened heart so sorely doth constraîne, That I with teares full oft doe pittie it,
And oftentimes doe wish it never had bene writ.

II

For from the time that Scudamour her
bought

In perillous fight, she never joyed day;
A perillous fight when he with force her
brought

From twentie knights, that did him all as-
say:

Yet fairely well he did them all dismay,
And with great glorie both the Shield of
Love

And eke the ladie selfe he brought away;
Whom having wedded, as did him behove,
A new unknown mischief did from him remove.

III

For that same vile enchauntour Busyran, The very selfe same day that she was wedded,

Amidst the bridale feast, whilest every
man,

Surcharg'd with wine, were heedlesse and ill hedded,

All bent to mirth before the bride was bedded,

Brought in that Mask of Love which late was shoven:

And there the ladie ill of friends bestedded,
By way of sport, as oft in maskes is knowen, Conveyed quite away to living wight un-knownen.

IV

Seven moneths he so her kept in bitter
smart,

Because his sinfull lust she would not serve,
Untill such time as noble Britomart Released her, that else was like to sterve, Through cruell knife that her deare heart did kerve.

And now she is with her upon the way,
Marching in lovely wise, that could deserve No spot of blame, though spite did oft as-
say

To blot her with dishonor of so faire a pray.

V

Yet should it be a pleasant tale, to tell The diverse usage, and demeanure daint,

That each to other made, as oft befell.
 For Amoret right fearefull was and faint, Lest she with blame her honor should at-taint,
 That everie word did tremble as she
 spake,
 And everie looke was coy and wondrous quaint,
 And everie limbe that touched her did
 quake:
 Yet could she not but curteous countenance to her make.

VI

For well she wist, as true it was indeed, That her lives lord and patrone of her health
 Right well deserved, as his duefull meed, Her love, her service, and her utmost
 wealth:
 All is his justly, that all freely dealth.
 Nathlesse her honor, dearer then her life, She sought to save, as thing reserv'd from stealth;
 Die had she lever with enchanters knife, Then to be false in love, profest a virgine wife.

Thereto her feare was made so much the greater Through fine abusion of that Briton mayd:
 Who, for to hide her fained sex the better And maske her wounded mind, both did and sayd
 Full many things so doubtfull to be wayd, That well she wist not what by them to gesse;
 For other whiles to her she purpos made
 Of love, and otherwhiles of lustfulnesse, That much she feard his mind would grow to some excesse.

VIII

His will she feard; for him she surely
 thought
 To be a man, such as indeed he seemed,
 And much the more, by that he lately
 wrought,
 When her from deadly thraldome he re-
 deemed,
 For which no service she too much esteemed:
 Yet dread of sham; and doubt of fowle dishonor

Made her not yeeld so much as due she
 deemed.
 Yet Britomart attended duly on her,
 As well became a knight, and did to her all honor.

IX

It so befell one evening, that they came Unto a castell, lodged there to bec, Where many a knight, and many a lovely
 dame,
 Was then assembled, deeds of armes to see:
 Amongst all which was none more faire then shee,
 That many of them mov'd to eye her sore.
 The custome of that place was such, that hee Which had no love nor lemman there in
 store
 Should either winne him one, or lye without the dore.

X

Amongst the rest there was a jolly knight, Who, being asked for his love, avow'd That fairest Amoret was his by right,
 And offred that to justifie alowd.
 The warlike virgine, seeing his so proud And boastfull chalenge, wexed inlie wroth,
 But for the present did her anger shrowd;
 And sayd, her love to lose she was full loth, But either he should neither of them have,
 or both.

XI

So forth they went, and both together giusted;
 But that same younker soone was over
 throwne,
 And made repent that he had rashly lusted
 For thing unlawfull, that was not his owne:
 Yet since he seemed valiant, though un-
 knowne,
 She, that no lesse was courteous then stout, Cast how to salve, that both the custome
 showne
 Were kept, and yet that knight not locked
 out;
 That seem'd full hard t' accord two things so far in dout.

XII

The seneschall was cal'd to deeme the
 right:
 Whom she requir'd, that first fayre Amoret Might be to her allow'd, as to a knight

That did her win and free from chalenge
set:
Which straight to her was yeelded without
let.
Then, since that strange knights love from him was quitted,
She claim'd that to her selfe, as ladies det,
He as a knight might justly be admitted;
So none should be out shut, sith all of loves were fitted.

XIII

With that, her glistring helmet she un-laced;
Which doft, her golden lockes, that were up bound Still in a knot, unto her heeles downe traced,
And like a silken veile in compasse round
About her backe and all her bodie wound:
Like as the shining skie in summers night, What time the dayes with scorching heat
abound,
Is creasted all with lines of fire light,
That it prodigious seemes in common peoples sight.

XIV

Such when those knights and ladies all
about Beheld her, all were with amazement smit,
And every one gan grow in seeret dout
Of this and that, according to each wit:
Some thought that some enchantment faygned it;
Some, that Bellona in that warlike wise To them appear'd, with shield and armour
fit;
Some, that it was a maske of strange disguise:
So diversely each one did sundrie doubts devise.

XV

But that young knight, which through her gentle deed
Was to that goodly fellowship restor'd, Ten thousand thanks did yeeld her for her
meed,
And, doubly overcommen, her ador'd:
So did they all their former strife accord;
And eke fayre Amoret, now freed from
feare,
More franke affection did to her afford,

And to her bed, which she was wont for-
beare,
Now freely drew, and found right safe assurance theare.

XVI

Where all that night they of their loves did
treat,
And hard adventures, twixt themselves
alone,
That each the other gan with passion great
And griefull pittie privately bemone.
The morow next, so soone as Titan shone, They both uprose, and to their waies them
dight:
Long wandred they, yet never met with
none
That to their willes could them direct
aright,
Or to them tydings tell that mote their harts delight.

XVII

Lo! thus they rode, till at the last they
spide
Two armed knights, that toward them did
pace,
And ech of them had ryding by his side
A ladie, seeming in so farre a space;
But ladies none they were, albee in face And outward shew faire semblance they did
beare;
For under maske of beautie and good
grace
Vile treason and fowle falshood hidden
were,
That mote to none but to the warie wise appear.

XVIII

The one of them the false Duessa hight, That now had chang'd her former wonted
hew:
For she could d'on so manie shapes in
sight,
As ever could cameleon colours new;
So could she forge all colours, save the
trew.
The other no whit better was then shee,
But that, such as she was, she plaine did
shew;
Yet otherwise much worse, if worse might
bee,
And dayly more offensive unto each degree.

XIX

Her name was Ate, mother of debate
And all dissention, which doth dayly grow Amongst fraile men, that many a publike
state

And many a private oft doth overthrow.
Her false Duessa, who full well did know To be most fit to trouble noble knights, Which hunt for honor, raised from below
Out of the dwellings of the damned sprights, Where she in darknes wastes her cursed daies and nights.

XX

Hard by the gates of hell her dwelling is, There whereas all the plagues and harmes
abound,

Which punish wicked men, that walke
amisse.

It is a darksome delve farre under ground,
With thornes and barren brakes enviroind
round,

That none the same may easily out win;
Yet many waies to enter may be found,
But none to issue forth when one is in:
For discord harder is to end then to begin.

XXI

And all within, the riven walls were hung With ragged monuments of times forepast, All which the sad effects of discord sung:
There were rent robes and broken scepters
plast,

Altars defyl'd, and holy things defast, Dissilvered speares, and shields ytorne in
twaine,

Great cities ransackt, and strong castles rast,

Nations captived, and huge armies slaine:
Of all which ruines there some relicks did remaine.

XXII

There was the signe of antique Babylon, Of fatall Thebes, of Rome that raigned
long,

Of sacred Salem, and sad Iliou,
For memorie of which on high there hong
The golden apple, cause of all their wrong, For which the three faire goddesses did
strive:

There also was the name of Nimrod strong,
Of Alexander, and his princes five,
Which shar'd to them the spoiles that he had got alive:

XXIII

And there the relicks of the drunken fray,
The which amongst the Lapithees befell:
And of the bloodie feast, which sent away
So many Centaures drunken soules to hell, That under great Alcides furie fell:
And of the dreadfull discord, which did
drive

The noble Argonauts to outrage fell,
That each of life sought others to deprive,
All mindlesse of the Golden Fleece, which made them strive.

XXIV

And eke of private persons many moe, That were too long a worke to count them
all;

Some of sworne friends, that did their faith forgoe;

Some of borne brethren, prov'd unnaturall;
Some of deare lovers, foes perpetuall:

Witnessse their broken bandes there to be
seene,

Their girlonds rent, their bowres despoyled
all;

The moniments whereof there byding
beene,

As plaine as at the first, when they were fresh and greene.

XXV

Such was her house within; but all without,
The barren ground was full of wicked
weedes,

Which she her selfe had sowen all about,
Now growen great, at first of little seedes,
The seedes of evill wordes and factious
deedes;

Which, when to ripenesse due they growen
arre,

Bring foorth an infinite increase, that breedes

Tumultuous trouble and contentious jarre, The which most often end in bloudshed and in warre.

XXVI

And those same cursed seedes doe also serve

To her for bread, and yeeld her living food:
For life it is to her, when others sterve

Through mischievous debate and deadly feood,

That she may sucke their life and drinke
their blood,

With which she from her childhood had bene fed:
For she at first was borne of hellish brood,
And by infernall furies nourished, That by her monstrous shape might easily be red.

XXVII

Her face most fowle and filthy was to see,
With squinted eyes contrarie wayes intended,
And loathly mouth, unmeete a mouth to
bee,
That nought but gall and venim comprehended, And wicked wordes that God and man offended:
Her lying tongue was in two parts divided,
And both the parts did speake, and both contended;
And as her tongue, so was her hart divided,
That never thought one thing, but doubly stil was guided.

XXVIII

Als as she double spake, so heard she double,
With matchlesse eares deformed and distorted, Fild with false rumors and seditious trouble, Bred in assemblies of the vulgar sort,
That still are led with every light report.
And as her eares, so eke her feet were odde,
And much unlike, th' one long, the other
short,
And both misplast; that, when th' one forward
yode,
The other backe retired, and contrarie trode.

XXIX

Likewise unequal were her handes twaine:
That one did reach, the other pusht away;
That one did make, the other mard againe,
And sought to bring all things unto decay; Whereby great riches, gathered manie a
day,
She in short space did often bring to
nought,
And their possessours often did dismay:
For all her studie was and all her thought, How she might overthrow the things that Concord wrought.

XXX

So much her malice did her might surpas, That even th' Almightie selfe she did maligne, Because to man so mercifull he was,
And unto all his creatures so benigne, Sith she her selfe was of his grace indigne:
For all this worlds faire workmanship she
tride
Unto his last confusion to bring,
And that great golden chaine quite to divide,
With which it blessed Concord hath together tide.

XXXI

Such was that hag which with Duessa roade,
And serving her in her malicious use,
To hurt good knights, was as it were her baude,
To sell her borrowed beautie to abuse.
For though, like withered tree that wanteth juyce,
She old and crooked were, yet now of late As fresh and fragrant as the floure deluce
She was become, by chaunge of her estate, And made full goodly joyance to her new found mate.

XXXII

Her mate, he was a jollie youthfull knight,
That bore great sway in armes and chivalrie,
And was indeed a man of mickle might:
His name was Blandamour, that did descrie His fickle mind full of inconstancie.
And now himselfe he fitted had right well With two companions of like qualitie, Faithlesse Duessa, and false Paridell, That whether were more false, full hard it is to tell.

XXXIII

Now when this gallant with his goodly crew
From farre espide the famous Britomart, Like knight adventurous in outward vew,
With his faire paragon, his conquests part, Approching nigh, eftsoones his wanton hart Was tickled with delight, and jesting sayd:
'Lo! there, Sir Paridel, for your desart, Good lucke presents you with yond lovely
mayd,
For pitie that ye want a fellow for your ayd.'

XXXIV

By that the lovely paire drew nigh to hond:
Whom when as Paridel more plaine beheld, Albee in heart he like affection fond,
Yet mindfull how he late by one was feld,
That did those armes and that same scutchion weld,
He had small lust to buy his love so deare,
But answerd: 'Sir, him wise I never held,
That, having once escaped perill neare,
Would afterwards afresh the sleeping evill reare.

XXXV

'This knight too late his manhood and his might I did assay, that me right dearely cost, Ne list I for revenge provoke new fight, Ne for light ladies love, that soone is lost.'
The hot-spurre youth so scorning to be crost,
'Take then to you this dame of mine,' quoth hee,
'And I, without your perill or your cost, Will challenge yond same other for my fee.'
So forth he fiercely priek't, that one him scarce could see.

XXXVI

The warlike Britonesse her soone adrest,
And with such uncouth welcome did receive Her fayned paramour, her forced guest,
That, being forst his saddle soone to leave,
Him selfe he did of his new love deceave,
And made him selfe thensample of his follie.
Which done, she passed forth, not taking leave,
And left him now as sad as whilome jollie,
Well warn'd to beware with whom he dar'd to dallie.

XXXVII

Which when his other companie beheld,
They to his succour ran with readie ayd:
And finding him unable once to weld,
They reared him on horsebacke, and upstayd, Till on his way they had him forth conveyd:
And all the way, with wondrous grieve of mynd
And shame, he shewd him selfe to be dismayd,

More for the love which he had left behynd, Then that which he had to Sir Paridel resynd.

XXXVIII

Nathlesse he forth did march well as he might,
And made good semblance to his companie, Dissembling his disease and evill plight;
Till that ere long they chanced to espie
Two other knights, that towards them did ply With speedie course, as bent to charge them new.
Whom when as Blandamour approching nie Perceiv'd to be such as they seemd in vew,
He was full wo, and gan his former grieffe renew.

XXXIX

For th' one of them he perfectly descride
To be Sir Scudamour, by that he bore
The God of Love with wings displayed wide, Whom mortally he hated evermore,
Both for his worth, that all men did adore,
And eke because his love he wonne by right:
Which when he thought, it grieved him full sore,
That, through the bruises of his former fight, He now unable was to wreake his old despite.

XL

Forthy he thus to Paridel bespake:
'Faire sir, of friendship let me now you pray,
That as I late adventured for your sake,
The hurts whereof me now from battell stay, Ye will me now with like good turne repay,
And justifie my cause on yonder knight.'
'Ah! sir,' said Paridel, 'do not dismay Your selfe for this; my selfe will for you fight, As ye have done for me: the left hand rubs the right.'

XLI

With that he put his spures unto his steed,
With speare in rest, and toward him did fare,
Like shaft out of a bow preventing speed.
But Scudamour was shortly well aware

Of his approch, and gan him selfe prepare Him to receive with entertainment meete.
So furiously they met, that either bare
The other downe under their horses feete, That what of them became themselves did scarsly weete.

XLII

As when two billowes in the Irish sowndes, Forcibly driven with contrarie tydes,
Do meete together, each abacke rebowndes With roaring rage; and dashing on all sides, That filleth all the sea with fume, divydes
The doubtfull current into divers wayes:
So fell those two in spite of both their pydes;

But Scudamour himselfe did soone uprayse, And mounting light, his foe for lying long upbrayes.

XLIII

Who, rolled on an heape, lay still in sbound,

All carelesse of his taunt and bitter rayle;
Till that the rest, him seeing lie on ground,
Ran hastily, to weete what did him ayle: Where finding that the breath gan him to fayle,

With busie care they strove him to awake,
And doft his helmet, and undid his mayle:
So much they did, that at the last they
brake

His slomber, yet so mazed that he nothing spake.

XLIV

Which when as Blandamour beheld, he
sayd:

'False faitour Scudamour, that hast by slight

And foule advantage this good knight dis-
mayd,

A knight much better then thy selfe be-
hight,

Well falles it thee that I am not in plight, This day, to wreake the dammage by thee
donne:

Such is thy wont, that still when any knight
'Is weakned, then thou doest him overronne: So hast thou to thy selfe false honour often
wonne.'

XLV

He little answer'd, but in manly heart
His mightie indignation did forbear,

Which was not yet so secret, but some part Thereof did in his frowning face appeare: Like as a gloomie cloud, the which doth bear

An hideous storme, is by the northerne
blast

Quite overblowne, yet doth not passe so
cleare,

But that it all the skie doth overcast With darknes dred, and threatens all the world to wast.

XLVI

'Ah! gentle knight,' then false Duessa
sayd,

'Why do ye strive for ladies love so sore, Whose chiefe desire is love and friendly
aid

Mongst gentle knights to nourish ever-
more?

Ne be ye wroth, Sir Scudamour, therefore,
That she your love list love another knight, Ne do your selfe dislike a whit the more;
For love is free, and led with selfe de-
light,

Ne will enforced be with maisterdome or might.'

XLVII

So false Duessa, but vile Ate thus:

'Both foolish knights, I can but laugh at both,

That strive and storme, with stirre outrageous,

For her that each of you alike doth loth,
And loves another, with whom now she goth In lovely wise, and sleepes, and sports, and
playes;

Whilest both you here with many a cursed oth

Sweare she is yours, and stirre up bloudie
frayes,

To win a willow bough, whilest other weares the bayes.'

XLVIII

'Vile hag,' sayd Scudamour, 'why dost thou lye?

And falsly seekst a vertuous wight to
shame?'

'Fond knight,' sayd she, 'the thing that with this eye

I saw, why should I doubt to tell the same?'

'Then tell,' quoth Blandamour, 'and feare no blame,

Tell what thou saw'st, maulgre who so it
heares.'

'I saw,' quoth she, 'a stranger knight, whose name

I wote not well, but in his shield he beares (That well I wote) the heads of many broken speares.

XLIX

'I saw him have your Amoret at will,
I saw him kisse, I saw him her embrace,
I saw him sleepe with her all night his fill,
All manie nights, and manie by in place,
That present were to testifie the case.'

Which when as Scudamour did heare, his heart

Was thrild with inward grieffe, as when in
chace

The Parthian strikes a stag with shivering
dart,

The beast astonisht stands in midst of his smart.

L

So stood Sir Scudamour, when this he
heard,

Ne word he had to speake for great dis-
may,

But lookt on Glauce grim, who woxe afeard

Of outrage for the words which she heard say, Albee untrue she wist them by assay.

But Blandamour, whenas he did espie His change of cheere, that anguish did be-
wray,

He woxe full blithe, as he had got thereby,
And gan thereat to triumph without vic-torie.

LI

'Lo! recreant,' sayd he, 'the fruitlesse end Of thy vaine boast, and spoile of love mis-
gotten,

Whereby the name of knight-hood thou dost shend,

And all true lovers with dishonor blotten:
All things not rooted well will soone be rotten.'

'Fy, fy! false knight,' then false Duessa
cryde,

'Unworthy life, that love with guile hast
gotten;

Be thou, where ever thou do go or ryde, Loathed of ladies all, and of all knights defyde.'

LII

But Scudamour, for passing great despight, Staid not to answer, scarcely did refraine,
But that in all those knights and ladies sight
He for revenge had guiltlesse Glauce
slaine:

But being past, he thus began amaine:

'False traitour squire, false squire of falsest knight,

Why doth mine hand from thine avenge
abstaine,

Whose lord hath done my love this foule
despight?

Why do I not it wreake on thee now in my might?

LIII

'Discourteous, disloyall Britomart, Untrue to God, and unto man unjust,
What vengeance due can equal thy desart, That hast with shamefull spot of sinfull
lust

Defil'd the pledge committed to thy trust?
Let ugly shame and endlesse infamy

Colour thy name with foule reproaches rust.
Yet thou, false squire, his fault shalt deare

aby,
And with thy punishment his penance shalt supply.'

LIV

The aged dame, him seeing so enraged, Was dead with feare; nathlesse, as neede required,

His flaming furie sought to have assuaged With sober words, that sufferance desired Till time the tryall of her truth expyred:

And evermore sought Britomart to cleare.
But he the more with furious rage was fyred,

And thrise his hand to kill her did upreare,
And thrise he drew it backe: so did at last forbeare.

CANTO II

Blandamour winnes false Florimell; Paridell for her strives;
They are accorded: Agape Doth lengthen her soones lives.

I

FIREBRAND of hell, first tynd in Phlegeton By thousand furies, and from thence out throwen

Into this world, to worke confusion
 And set it all on fire by force unknowen, Is wicked discord, whose small sparkes once blown None but a god or godlike man can slake; Such as was Orpheus, that when strife was growen Amongst those famous ympes of Greece,
 did take
 His silver harpe in hand, and shortly friends them make;

II

Or such as that celestiall Psalmist was,
 That when the wicked feend his lord tormented,
 With heavenly notes, that did all other pas,
 The outrage of his furious fit relented.
 Such musicke is wise words with time concented,
 To moderate stiffe mindes, disposd to
 strive:
 Such as that prudent Romane well invented,
 What time his people into partes did rive, Them reconeyld againe, and to their homes did drive.

III

Such us'd wise Glauce to that wrathfull
 knight,
 To calme the tempest of his troubled
 thought:
 Yet Blandamour, with termes of foule
 despight,
 And Paridell her scornd, and set at nought, As old and crooked and not good for ought.
 Both they unwise, and warelesse of the evill
 That by themselves unto themselves is
 wrought,
 Through that false witch, and that foule aged drevill,
 The one a feend, the other an incarnate devill.

IV

With whom as they thus rode accompaide,
 They were encountred of a lustie knight,
 That had a goodly ladie by his side, To whom he made great dalliance and
 delight.
 It was to weete the bold Sir Ferraugh
 hight,
 He that from Braggadocchio whilome reft

The snowy Florimell, whose beautie bright Made him seeme happie for so glorious theft;
 Yet was it in due trial but a wandring weft.

V

Which when as Blandamour, whose fancie
 light
 Was alwaies flitting, as the wavering wind, After each beautie that appeard in sight, Beheld, eftsoones it prickt his wanton mind With sting of lust, that reasons eye did blind,
 That to Sir Paridell these words he sent:
 'Sir knight, why ride ye dumpish thus behind,
 Since so good fortune doth to you present So fayre a spoyle, to make you joyous meriment?'

VI

But Paridell, that had too late a tryall
 Of the bad issue of his counsell vaine, Last not to hearke, but made this faire denyall:
 'Last turne was mine, well proved to my
 paine;
 This now be yours; God send you better
 gaine.'
 Whose scoffed words he taking halfe in
 scorne,
 Fiercely forth prickt his steed, as in
 disdaine,
 Against that knight, ere he him well could torne;
 By meanes whereof he hath him lightly overborne.

Who, with the sudden stroke astonisht sore Upon the ground a while in slomber lay;
 The whiles his love away the other bore,
 And shewing her, did Paridell upbray:
 'Lo! sluggish knight, the victors happie
 pray!
 So Fortune friends the bold: 'whom Paridell Seeing so faire indeede, as he did say,
 His hart with seeret envie gan to swell,
 And inly grudge at him, that he had sped so well.

VIII

Nathlesse proud man himselfe the other
 deemed,
 Having so perelesse paragon ygot:

For sure the fayrest Florinell him seemed To him was fallen for his happie lot, Whose like alive on earth he weened
not:

Therefore he her did court, did serve, did wooe,
With humblest suit that he imagine mot,
And all things did devise, and all things dooe,
That might her love prepare, and liking win theretoo.

IX

She, in regard thereof, him recompent With golden words and goodly countenance,

And such fond favours sparingly dispens't:

Sometimes him blessing with a light eye-glance,

And coy lookes temping with loose dalli-
ance;

Sometimes estranging him in sterner wise;
That, having cast him in a foolish trance,
He seemed brought to bed in Paradise, And prov'd himselfe most foole in what he seem'd most wise.

X

So great a mistresse of her art she was,
And perfectly practiz'd in womans craft, That though therein himselfe he thought to
pas,

And by his false allurements wylie draft Had thousand women of their love be-raft,

Yet now he was surpriz'd: for that false
spright,

Which that same witch had in this forme engraft,

Was so expert in every subtile slight,
That it could overreach the wisest earthly
wight.

XI

Yet he to her did dayly service more,
And dayly more deceived was thereby;

Yet Paridell him envied therefore,
As seeming plast in sole felicity:

So blind is lust, false colours to desery.
But Ate soone discovering his desire,

And finding now fit opportunity To stirre up strife twixt love and spight and ire,

Did privily put coles unto his secret fire.

XII

By sundry meanes thereto she prickt him
forth,

Now with remembrance of those spightfull speaches,

Now with opinion of his owne more worth, Now with recounting of like former breaches

Made in their friendship, as that hag him teaches:

And ever when his passion is allayd,
She it revives and new occasion reaches:

That, on a time, as they together way'd, He made him open challenge, and thus boldly sayd:

XIII

'Too boastfull Blandamour, too long I
beare

The open wrongs thou doest me day by
day:

Well know'st thou, when we friendship first did sweare,

The covenant was, that every spoyle or
pray

Should equally be shard betwixt us tway:
Where is my part, then, of this ladie bright,

Whom to thy selfe thou takest quite away?
Render therefore therein to me my right,

Or answer for thy wrong, as shall fall out in fight.'

XIV

Exceeding wroth therat was Blandamour, And gan this bitter answer to him make:

'Too foolish Paridell, that fayrest floure Wouldst gather faine, and yet no paines wouldst take!

But not so easie will I her forsake;
This hand her wonne, this hand shall her defend.'

With that they gan their shivering speares to shake,

And deadly points at eithers breast to bend, Forgetfull each to have bene ever others
frend.

XV

Their fire steedes with so untamed forse Did beare them both to fell avenges end, That both their speares, with pitillesse remorse,

Through shield and mayle and haberjeon did wend,

And in their flesh a griesly passage rend,

That with the furie of their owne affret Each other, horse and man, to ground did
send;

Where lying still awhile, both did forget The perilous present stownd in which their lives were set.

XVI

As when two warlike brigandines at sea, With murderous weapons arm'd to cruell
fight,

Doe meete together on the watry lea, They stemme ech other with so fell de-
spight,

That with the shocke of their owne heed-lesse might,

Their wooden ribs are shaken nigh a son-
der;

They which from shore behold the dread-
full sight

Of flashing fire, and heare the ordenance thonder,

Do greatly stand amaz'd at such unwonted wonder.

XVII

At length they both upstarted in amaze,
As men awaked rashly out of dreame, And round about themselves a while did
gaze;

Till, seeing her that Florimell did seme, In doubt to whom she victorie should
deeme,

Therewith their dulled sprights they edgd anew,

And drawing both their swords with rage extreme,

Like two mad mastiffes each on other flew,
And shields did share, and mailles did rash, and helmes did hew.

XVIII

So furiously each other did assayle, As if their soules they would atonce have rent

Out of their brests, that streames of blood did rayle

Adowne, as if their springs of life were
spent;

That all the ground with purple blood was sprent,

And all their armours staynd with bloudie
gore;

Yet scarcely once to breath would they re-
lent,

So mortall was their malice and so sore Become of fayned friendship which they vow'd afore.

XIX

And that which is for ladies most besit-ting,

To stint all strife, and foster friendly
peace,

Was from those dames so farre and so unfitting,

As that, in stead of praying them surcease,
They did much more their cruelty en-
crease;

Bidding them fight for honour of their
love,

And rather die then ladies cause release.
With which vaine termes so much they did them move,

That both resolv'd the last extremities to prove.

XX

There they, I weene, would fight untill this
day,

Had not a squire, even he the Squire of Dames,

By great adventure travelled that way;
Who seeing both bent to so bloody games,
And both of old well knowing by their names,

Drew nigh, to weete the cause of their debate:

And first laide on those ladies thousand blames,

That did not seeke t' appease their deadly
hate,

But gazed on their harmes, not pittying their estate.

XXI

And then those knights he humbly did beseech

To stay their hands, till he a while had spoken:

Who lookt a little up at that his speech,
Yet would not let their battell so be broken,

Both greedie fiers on other to be wroken.
Yet he to them so earnestly did call,

And them conjur'd by some well knowen
token,

That they at last their wrothfull hands let
fall,

Content to heare him speake, and glad to rest withall.

XXII

First he desir'd their cause of strife to see:
They said, it was for love of Florimell.

'Ah! gentle knights,' quoth he, 'how may
that bee,

And she so farre astray, as none can tell?'

'Fond squire,' full angry then sayd Paridell,

'Seest not the ladie there before thy face?'

He looked backe, and her advizing well,

Weend, as he said, by that her outward
grace,

That fayrest Florimell was present there in place.

XXIII

Glad man was he to see that joyous sight,
For none alive but joy'd in Florimell,

And lowly to her lowting, thus behight:

'Fayrest of faire, that fairenesse doest ex-
cell,

This happie day I have to greete you well,
In which you safe I see, whom thousand late Misdoubted lost through mischiefe that be-
fell;

Long may you live in health and happie
state.'

She litle answer'd him, but lightly did aggrate.

XXIV

Then turning to those knights, he gan
a new:

'And you, Sir Blandamour and Paridell, That for this ladie present in your vew Have rays'd this cruell warre and outrage
fell,

Certes, me seemes, bene not advised well,
But rather ought in friendship for her sake
To joyne your force, their forces to repell That seeke perforce her from you both to
take,

And of your gotten spoyle their owne triumph to make.'

XXV

Thereat Sir Blandamour, with countenance
sterne,

All full of wrath, thus fiercely him be-
spake:

'A read, thou squire, that I the man may learne,

That dare fro me thinke Florimell to take.'

'Not one,' quoth he, 'but many doe par-
take

Herein, as thus: It lately so befell, That Satyran a girdle did uptake Well knowne to appertaine to Florimell, Which for her sake he wore, as him be-seemed well.

XXVI

'But when as she her selfe was lost and
gone,

Full many knights, that loved her like
deare,

Thereat did greatly grudge, that he alone That lost faire ladies ornament should wear,

And gan therefore close spight to him to
beare:

Which he to shun, and stop vile envies
sting,

Hath lately caus'd to be proclaim'd each
where

A solemne feast, with publike turneing, To which all knights with them their ladies are to bring.

XXVII

'And of them all she that is fayrest found Shall have that golden girdle for reward,

And of those knights who is most stout on
ground

Shall to that fairest ladie be prefard.
Since therefore she her selfe is now your

ward,

To you that ornament of hers pertaines Against all those that challenge it to gard,

And save her honour with your ventrous
paines;

That shall you win more glory then ye here find gaines.'

XXVIII

When they the reason of his words had
hard,

They gan abate the rancour of their rage,
And with their honours and their loves regard

The furious flames of malice to asswage.
Tho each to other did his faith engage,

Like faithfull friends thenceforth to joyne in one

With all their force, and battell strong to wage

Gainst all those knights, as their professed
fone,

That challeng'd ought in Florimell, save they alone.

XXIX

So well accorded forth they rode together In friendly sort, that lasted but a while,
And of all old dislikes they made faire weather;

Yet all was forg'd and spred with golden foyle,

That under it hidde hate and hollow guyle.
Ne certes can that friendship long endure,
How ever gay and goodly be the style,
That doth ill cause or evill end enure:
For vertue is the band that bindeth harts most sure.

XXX

Thus as they marched all in close disguise Of fayned love, they chaunst to overtake Two knights, that lincked rode in lovely
wise,

As if they secret counsels did partake;
And each not farre behinde him had his
make,

To weete, two ladies of most goodly hew, That twixt themselves did gentle purpose
make,

Unmindfull both of that discordfull crew,
The which with speedie pace did after them pursew.

XXXI

Who, as they now approached nigh at hand, Deeming them doughtie as they did ap-
peare,

They sent that squire afore, to understand What mote they be: who, viewing them more neare,

Returned readie newes, that those same
weare

Two of the prowest knights in Faery Lond, And those two ladies their two lovers
deare;

Couragious Cambell, and stout Triamond, With Canacee and Cambine linckt in lovely bond.

XXXII

Whylome, as antique stories tellen us, Those two were foes the fellonest on
ground,

And battell made the dreddest dangerous
That ever shrilling trumpet did resound; Though now their acts be no where to be
found,

As that renowned poet them compyled
With warlike numbers and heroicke sound,

Dan Chaucer, well of English undefyled, On Fames eternall beadroll worthie to be fyled.

XXXIII

But wicked Time, that all good thoughts doth waste,

And workes of noblest wits to nought out
weare,

That famous moniment hath quite defaste, And robd the world of threasure endlesse
deare,

The which mote have enriched all us heare.
O cursed Eld, the cankerworme of writs!

How may these rimes, so rude as doth ap-
peare,

Hope to endure, sith workes of heavenly wits Are quite devourd, and brought to nought by little bits?

XXXIV

Then pardon, O most sacred happie spirit,
That I thy labours lost may thus revive,
And steale from thee the meede of thy due merit,

That none durst ever whilest thou wast
alive,

And, being dead, in vaine yet many strive:
Ne dare I like, but through infusion sweete Of thine owne spirit, which doth in me survive,

I follow here the footing of thy feete, That with thy meaning so I may the rather meete.

XXXV

Cambelloes sister was fayre Canacee,
That was the learnedst ladie in her dayes,
Well seene in everie science that mote bee,
And every secret worke of Natures wayes,
In wittie riddles, and in wise soothsayeres,

In power of herbes, and tunes of beasts and burds;

And, that augmented all her other prayse,
She modest was in all her deedes and words,
And wondrous chaste of life, yet lov'd of knights and lords.

XXXVI

Full many lords and many knights her loved,

Yet she to none of them her liking lent, Ne ever was with fond affection moved,
But rul'd her thoughts with goodly govern-ement.

For dread of blame and honours blemish-
ment;
And eke unto her lookes a law she made,
That none of them once out of order went,
But, like to warie centonels well stayd, Still watcht on every side, of secret foes affrayd.

XXXVII

So much the more as she refusd to love, So much the more she loved was and
sought,
That oftentimes unquiet strife did move Amongst her lovers, and great quarrels
wrought,
That oft for her in bloudie armes they
fought.
Which whenas Cambell, that was stout and
wise, Perceiv'd would breede great mischiefe, he bethought
How to prevent the perill that mote rise, And turne both him and her to honour in this wise.

XXXVIII

One day, when all that troupe of warlike woors Assembled were, to weet whose she should
bee,
All mightie men and dreadfull derring doers,
(The harder it to make them well agree) Amongst them all this end he did decree;
That of them all, which love to her did make,
They by consent should chose the stoutest
three,
That with himselve should combat for her
sake,
And of them all the victour should his sister take.

XXXIX

Bold was the chalenge, as himselve was
bold,
And courage full of haughtie hardiment, Approved oft in perils manifold,
Which he atchiev'd to his great ornament:
But yet his sisters skill unto him lent
Most confidence and hope of happie speed, Conceived by a ring which she him sent,
That, mongst the manie vertues which we reed,
Had power to staunch al wounds that mortally did bleed.

XL

Well was that rings great vertue knowen to all,
That dread thereof, and his redoubted
might,
Did all that youthly rout so much appall, That none of them durst undertake the
fight;
More wise they weend to make of love de-
light,
Then life to hazard for faire ladies looke,
And yet uncertaine by such outward sight, Though for her sake they all that perill
tooke,
Whether she would them love, or in her liking brooke.

XLI

Amongst those knights there were three brethren bold,
Three bolder brethren never were yborne, Borne of one mother in one happie mold,
Borne at one burden in one happie morne; Thrise happie mother, and thrise happie
morne,
That bore three such, three such not to be
fond!
Her name was Agape, whose children werne
All three as one; the first hight Priamond,
The second Dyamond, the youngest Triamond.

XLII

Stout Priamond, but not so strong to strike, Strong Diamond, but not so stout a knight,
But Triamond was stout and strong alike:
On horsebacke used Triamond to fight,
And Priamond on foote had more delight, But horse and foote knew Diamond to wield:
With curtaxe used Diamond to smite,
And Triamond to handle speare and shield, But speare and curtaxe both usd Priamond in field.

XLIII

These three did love each other dearely
well,
And with so firme affection were allyde,
As if but one soule in them all did dwell, Which did her powre into three parts divyde;
Like three faire branches budding farre and wide.

That from one roote deriv'd their vitall sap:
 And like that roote that doth her life divide
 Their mother was, and had full blessed
 hap,
 These three so noble babes to bring forth at one clap.

XLIV

Their mother was a Fay, and had the skill Of secret things, and all the powres of nature,
 Which she by art could use unto her will,
 And to her service bind each living creature,
 Through secret understanding of their feature.
 Thereto she was right faire, when so her
 face
 She list discover, and of goodly stature;
 But she, as Fayes are wont, in privie place Did spend her dayes, and lov'd in forests wyld to space.

XLV

There on a day a noble youthly knight, Seeking adventures in the salvage wood,
 Did by great fortune get of her the sight,
 As she sate carelesse by a cristall flood, Combing her golden lockes, as seemd her
 good;
 And unawares upon her laying hold,
 That strove in vaine him long to have with-
 stood,
 Oppressed her, and there (as it is told) Got these three lovely babes, that prov'd three champions bold.

XLVI

Which she with her long fostred in that
 wood,
 Till that to ripenesse of mans state they
 grew:
 Then, shewing forth signes of their fathers
 blood,
 They loved armes, and knighthood did
 ensew,
 Seeking adventures, where they anie knew.
 Which when their mother saw, she gan to
 dout
 Their safetie, least by searching daungers
 new,
 And rash provoking perils all about,
 Their days mote be abridged through their corage stout.

XLVII

Therefore desirous th' end of all their dayes
 To know, and them t' enlarge with long extent,
 By wonderful skill and many hidden wayes
 To the three Fatall Sisters house she went.
 Farre under ground from tract of living
 went,
 Downe in the bottome of the deepe Abyesse, Where Demogorgon, in dull darknesse
 pent,
 Farre from the view of gods and heavens
 blis,
 The hideous Chaos keepes, their dreadfull dwelling is.

XLVIII

There she them found, all sitting round
 about
 The direfull distaffe standing in the mid,
 And with unwearied fingers drawing out The lines of life, from living knowledge hid.
 Sad Clotho held the rocke, the whiles the thrid
 By griesly Laechesis was spun with paine, That cruell Atropos eftsoones undid, With cursed knife cutting the twist in
 twaine:
 Most wretched men, whose dayes depend on thrids so vaine!

XLIX

She them saluting, there by them sate
 still,
 Beholding how the thrids of life they span:
 And when at last she had beheld her fill, Trembling in heart, and looking pale and wau,
 Her cause of comming she to tell began.
 To whom fierce Atropos: 'Bold Fay, that durst Come see the secret of the life of man, Well worthie thou to be of Jove accurst, And eke thy childrens thrids to be a sunder burst.'

Whereat she sore affrayd, yet her besought
 To graunt her boone, and rigour to abate, That she might see her childrens thrids forth brought,
 And know the measure of their utmost
 date,
 To them ordained by eternall Fate:

Which Clotho graunting, shewed her the same:

That when she saw, it did her much amate
To see their thrids so thin as spiders frame, And eke so short, that seemd their ends out shortly came.

LI

She then began them humbly to intreate
To draw them longer out, and better twine,
That so their lives might be prolonged late.
But Lachesis thereat gan to repine, And sayd: 'Fond dame! that deem'st of things divine

As of humane, that they may altred bee, And chaung'd at pleasure for those impes of thine:

Not so; for what the Fates do once decree, Not all the gods can change, nor Jove him self can free.'

LII

'Then since,' quoth she, 'the terme of each mans life

For nought may lessened nor enlarged bee, Graunt this, that when ye shred with fatall
knife

His line which is the eldest of the three,
Which is of them the shortest, as I see, Eftsoones his life may passe into the next;
And when the next shall likewise ended
bee,

That both their lives may likewise be annext

Unto the third, that his may so be trebly west.'

LIII

They graunted it; and then that carefull
Fay

Departed thence with full contented mynd;
And comming home, in warlike fresh aray Them found all three, according to their
kynd:

But unto them what destinie was assynd, Or how their lives were eekt, she did not
tell;

But evermore, when she fit time could fynd,
She warned them to tend their safeties well,
And love each other deare, what ever them befell.

LIV

So did they surely during all their dayes,
And never discord did amongst them fall;

Which much augmented all their other
praise.

And now, t' increase affection naturall,
In love of Canacee they joynd all:
Upon which ground this same great battell
grew,

Great matter growing of beginning small;
The which, for length, I will not here
pursew,

But rather will reserve it for a canto new.

CANTO III

The battell twix three brethren with Caumbell for Canacee: Cambina with true friendships bond Doth their long strife agree.

I

O WHY doe wretched men so much desire To draw their dayes unto the utmost date,
And doe not rather wish them soone expire, Knowing the miserie of their estate,
And thousand perills which them still awate, Tossing them like a boate amid the mayne,
That every houre they knocke at Deathes
gate?

And he that happie seemes and least in
payne,

Yet is as nigh his end as he that most doth playne.

II

Therefore this Fay I hold but fond and
vaine,

The which, in seeking for her children three Long life, thereby did more prolong their
paine.

Yet whilst they lived none did ever see More happie creatures then they seem'd to
bee,

Nor more ennobled for their courtesie, That made them dearely lov'd of each
degree,

Ne more renowned for their chevalrie, That made them dreaded much of all men farre and nie.

III

These three that hardie challenge tooke in
hand,

For Canacee with Cambell for to fight:
The day was set, that all might understand,
And pledges pawnd the same to keepe
a right:

That day, the dreddest day that living
wight
Did ever see upon this world to shine,
So soone as heavens window shewed light,
These warlike champions, all in armour shine, Assembled were in field, the challenge to define.

IV

The field with listes was all about enclos'd,
To barre the prease of people farre away;
And at th' one side sixe judges were dis-pos'd,

To view and deeme the deedes of armes
that day;

And on the other side, in fresh aray, Fayre Canacee upon a stately stage
Was set, to see the fortune of that fray,
And to be scene, as his most worthie wage That could her purchase with his lives ad-ventur'd gage.

V

Then entred Cambell first into the list, With stately steps and fearelesse countenance,

As if the conquest his he surely wist.
Soone after did the brethren three advance,
In brave aray and goodly amenance, With seutehins gilt and banners broad dis-
playd;
And marching thrise in warlike ordinance, Thrise lowted lowly to the noble mayd, The whites shril trumpets and loud clarions sweetly playd.

VI

Which doen, the doughty chalienger came forth,

All arm'd to point, his challenge to abet: Gainst whom Sir Priamond, with equall
worth
And equall armes, himselfe did forward
set.

A trumpet blew; they both together met With dreadfull force and furious intent, Carelesse of perill in their fiers affret,
As if that life to losse they had forelent, And cared not to spare that should be shortly spent.

VII

Right practicke was Sir Priamond in fight, And throughly skill in use of shield and
speare.

Ne lesse approved was Cambelloes might,
Ne lesse his skill in weapons did appeare, That hard it was to weene which harder
were.

Full many mightie strokes on either side Were sent, that seemed death in them to
beare,

But they were both so watchfull and well
eyde,
That they avoyded were, and vainely by did slyde.

VIII

Yet one of many was so strongly bent
By Priamond, that with unluckie glauce Through Cambels shoulder it unwarely
went,

That forced him his shield to disadvaunce:
Much was he grieved with that gracelesse
chaunce,

Yet from the wound no drop of blond there
fell,

But wondrous paine, that did the more enhaunce

His haughtie courage to advengement fell: Smart daunts not mighty harts, but makes them more to swell.

IX

With that, his poynant speare he fierce aventred,

With doubled force, close underneath his
shield,

That through the mayles into his thigh it entred,

And there arresting, readie way did yield For bloud to gush forth on the grassie
field;

That he for paine himselfe not right up-
reare,

But too and fro in great amazement reel'd, Like an old oke, whose pith and sap is
seare,

At puffe of every storme doth stagger here and theare.

Whom so dismayd when Cambell had
espide,

Againe he drove at him with double might,
That nought mote stay the steele, till in his
side

The mortall point most cruelly empight: Where fast infixd, whilst he sought by
sight

It forth to wrest, the staffe a sunder brake,
 And left the head behind: with which des-
 pight
 He all enrag'd, his shivering speare did
 shake,
 And charging him a fresh, thus felly him bespake:

XI

'Lo! faitour, there thy meede unto thee
 take,
 The meede of thy mischallenge and abet:
 Not for thine owne, but for thy sisters
 sake,
 Have I thus long thy life unto thee let:
 But to forbear doth not forgive the det.'
 The wicked weapon heard his wrathfull vow,
 And passing forth with furious affret, Pierst through his bever quite into his brow,
 That with the force it backward forced him to bow.

XII

Therewith a sunder in the midst it brast,
 And in his hand nought but the troneheon
 left;
 The other halfe behind yet stieking fast
 Out of his headpeece Cambell fiercely reft, And with such furie backe at him it heft,
 That, making way unto his dearest life,
 His weasand pipe it through his gorget cleft:
 Thence streames of purple bloud issuing rife
 Let forth his wearie ghost, and made an end of strife.

XIII

His wearie ghost, assoyld from fleshly band, Did not, as others wont, directly fly Unto her rest in Plutoes griesly land, Ne into ayre did vanish presently,
 Ne changed was into a starre in sky:
 But through traduction was eftsoones derived,
 Like as his mother prayd the Destinie, Into his other brethren that survived.
 In whom he liv'd a new, of former life deprived.

XIV

Whom when on ground his brother next beheld,
 Though sad and sorie for so heavy sight,

Yet leave unto his sorrow did not yeeld;
 But rather stird to vengeance and despight, Through secret feeling of his generous
 spright,
 Rusht fiercely forth, the battell to renew,
 As in reversion of his brothers right;
 And challenging the virgin as his dew.
 His foe was soone adrest: the trumpets freshly blew.

XV

With that they both together fiercely met,
 As if that each ment other to devoure;
 And with their axes both so sorely bet, That neither plate nor mayle, whereas their
 powre
 They felt, could once sustaine the hideous
 stowre,
 But rived were like rotten wood a sunder, Whilst through their rifts the ruddie bloud did showre,
 And fire did flash, like lightning after thunder,
 That filld the lookers on attonce with ruth and wonder.

XVI

As when two tygers, prickt with hungers
 rage,
 Have by good fortune found some beasts fresh spoyle,
 On which they weene their famine to as-
 swage,
 And gaine a feastfull guerdon of their toyle;
 Both falling out doe stirre up strifefull broyle,
 And cruell battell twixt themselves doe
 make,
 Whiles neither lets the other touch the
 soyle,
 But either sdeignes with other to partake:
 So cruelly these knights strove for that ladies sake.

XVII

Full many strokes, that mortally were
 ment,
 The whiles were enterchaunged twixt them
 two;
 Yet they were all with so good wariment Or warded, or avoyded and let goe, That still the life stood fearelesse of her
 foe:
 Till Diamond, disdeigning long delay
 Of doubtfull fortune wavering to and fro,

Resolv'd to end it one or other way;
 And heav'd his murderous axe at him with mighty sway.

XVIII

The dreadfull stroke, in case it had arrived Where it was ment, (so deadly it was ment)
 The soule had sure out of his bodie rived,
 And stinted all the strife ineontinent.
 But Cambels fate that fortune did prevent:
 For seeing it at hand, he swarv'd asyde,
 And so gave way unto his fell intent:
 Who, missing of the marke which he had
 eyde,
 Was with the force nigh feld whilst his right foot did slyde.

XIX

As when a vulture greedie of his pray, Through hunger long, that hart to him doth
 lend,
 Strikes at an heron with all his bodies
 sway,
 That from his force seemes nought may it defend;
 The warie fowle, that spies him toward bend
 His dreadfull souse, avoydes it, shunning
 light,
 And maketh him his wing in vaine to spend;
 That with the weight of his owne weeldlesse might,
 He falleth nigh to ground, and searse recovereth flight.

XX

Which faire adventure when Cambello
 spide,
 Full lightly, ere himselfe he could recover, From dangers dread to ward his naked
 side,
 He can let drive at him with all his power,
 And with his axe him smote in evill hower, That from his shoulders quite his head he
 reft:
 The headlesse tronke, as heedlesse of that stower,
 Stood still a while, and his fast footing kept,
 Till, feeling life to fayle, it fell, and deadly slept.

XXI

They which that piteous spectaele beheld Were much amaz'd the headlesse tronke to
 see

Stand up so long, and weapon vaine to weld, Unweeting of the Fates divine decree For lifes succession in those brethren three.
 For notwithstanding that one soule was
 reft,
 Yet, had the bodie not dismembred bee,
 It would have lived, and revived eft;
 But finding no fit seat, the lifelesse corse it left.

XXII

It left; but that same soule which therein
 dwelt,
 Streight entring into Triamond, him fild With double life and griefe; which when he felt,
 As one whose inner parts had bene ythrild With point of steele, that close his hartbloud spild,
 He lightly left out of his place of rest,
 And rushing forth into the emptie field, Against Cambello fiercely him address; Who him affronting soone to fight was readie prest.

XXIII

Well mote ye wonder how that noble knight, After he had so often wounded beene,
 Could stand on foot now to renew the fight.
 But had ye then him forth advauncing seee,
 Some newborne wight ye would him surely
 weene,
 So fresh he seemed and so fieree in sight;
 Like as a snake, whom wearie winters
 teene Hath worne to nought, now feeling sommers might,
 Casts off his ragged skin and freshly doth him dight.

XXIV

All was through vertue of the ring he wore,
 The which not onely did not from him let One drop of bloud to fall, but did restore His weakned powers, and dulled spirits
 whet,
 Through working of the stone therein yset.
 Else how could one of equall might with most,
 Against so many no lesse mightie met, Oncee thinke to match three such on equall eost,
 Three such as able were to match a puissant host?

XXV

Yet nought thereof was Triamond adredde, Ne desperate of glorious victorie, But sharply him assayld, and sore bestedde,
 With heapes of strokes, which he at him let
 flie
 As thicke as hayle forth poured from the
 skie:
 He stroke, he soust, he foynd, he hewd, he lasht,
 And did his yron brond so fast applie, That from the same the fierie sparkles flasht,
 As fast as water-sprinkles gainst a rocke are dasht.

XXVI

Much was Cambello daunted with his
 blowes,
 So thicke they fell, and forcibly were sent,
 That he was forst from daunger of the throwes
 Backe to retire, and somewhat to relent, Till th' heat of his fierce furie he had spent:
 Which when for want of breath gan to abate,
 He then afresh with new encouragement Did him assayle, and mightily amate, As fast as forward erst, now backward to retrate.

XXVII

Like as the tide, that comes fro th' ocean
 mayne,
 Flowes up the Shenan with contrarie forse,
 And overruling him in his owne rayne, Drives backe the current of his kindly
 course,
 And makes it seeme to have some other
 sourse:
 But when the flood is spent, then backe
 againe,
 His borrowed waters forst to redisbourse, He sends the sea his owne with double
 gaine,
 And tribute eke withall, as to his soveraine.

XXVIII

Thus did the battell varie to and fro, With diverse fortune doubtfull to be deemed:
 Now this the better had, now had his fo;
 Then he halfe vanquisht, then the other seemed;

Yet victors both them selves alwayes esteemed.

And all the while the disentrayled blood Adowne their sides like litle rivers stremed, That with the wasting of his vitall flood Sir Triamond at last full faint and feeble stood.

XXIX

But Cambell still more strong and greater
 grew,
 Ne felt his blood to wast, ne powres emperisht,
 Through that rings vertue, that with vigour
 new,
 Still when as he enfeebled was, him cherisht,
 And all his wounds and all his bruises guarisht:
 Like as a withered tree, through husbands
 toyle,
 Is often seene full freshly to have florisht,
 And fruitfull apples to have borne awhile, As fresh as when it first was planted in the soyle.

XXX

Through which advantage, in his strength he rose,
 And smote the other with so wondrous
 might,
 That through the seame which did his hauberk close
 Into his throate and life it pierced quight, That downe he fell as dead in all mens
 sight:
 Yet dead he was not, yet he sure did die,
 As all men do that lose the living spright:
 So did one soule out of his bodie flie Unto her native home from mortall miserie.

XXXI

But nathelesse whilst all the lookers on Him dead behight, as he to all appeared,
 All unawares he started up anon,
 As one that had out of a dreame bene
 reard,
 And fresh assayld his foe; who halfe af-feard
 Of th' uncouth sight, as he some ghost had
 seene,
 Stood still amaz'd, holding his idle sward;
 Till, having often by him stricken beene, He forced was to strike, and save him selfe from teene.

XXXII

Yet from thenceforth more warily he fought,
 As one in feare the Stygian gods t' offend, Ne followd on so fast, but rather sought Him selfe to save, and daunger to defend,
 Then life and labour both in vaine to spend.
 Which Triamond perceiving, weened sure He gan to faint toward the battels end,
 And that he should not long on foote endure,
 A signe which did to him the victorie assure.

XXXIII

Whereof full blith, eftsoones his mightie
 hand
 He heav'd on high, in mind with that same blow
 To make an end of all that did withstand:
 Which Cambell seeing come, was nothing
 slow
 Him selfe to save from that so deadly
 throw;
 And at that instant reaching forth his sward, Close underneath his shield, that scarce did
 show,
 Stroke him, as he his hand to strike up-
 reard,
 In th' arm-pit full, that through both sides the wound appeard.

XXXIV

Yet still that direfull stroke kept on his
 way,
 And falling hevie on Cambelloes crest, Strooke him so hugely that in swowne he
 lay,
 And in his head an hideous wound imprest:
 And sure, had it not happily found rest Upon the brim of his brode plated shield, It would have cleft his braine downe to his
 brest.
 So both at once fell dead upon the field,
 And each to other seemd the victorie to yield.

XXXV

Which when as all the lookers on beheld,
 They weened sure the warre was at an end,
 And judges rose, and marshals of the field Broke up the listes, their armes away to
 rend;
 And Canacee gan wayle her dearest friend.

All suddenly they both upstart light,
 The one out of the swownd which him did
 blend,

The other breathing now another spright, And fiercely each assaying, gan afresh to fight.

XXXVI

Long while they then continued in that wize,
 As if but then the battell had begonne:
 Strokes, wounds, wards, weapons, all they did despise,

Ne either ear'd to ward, or perill shonne, Desirous both to have the battell donne;
 Ne either cared life to save or spill, Ne which of them did winne, ne which were
 wonne.

So wearie both of fighting had their fill,
 That life it selfe seemd loathsome, and long safetie ill.

XXXVII

Whilst thus the case in doubtfull ballance
 hong,

Unsure to whether side it would incline,
 And all mens eyes and hearts, which there among

Stood gazing, filled were with ruffull tine,
 And secret feare to see their fatall fine,
 All suddenly they heard a troublous noyes, That seemd some perilous tumult to de-sine,

Confusd with womens cries and shouts of
 boyes,

Such as the troubled theaters oftimes an-noyes.

XXXVIII

Thereat the champions both stood still a
 space,

To weeten what that sudden clamour ment; Lo! where they spyde with speedie whirling pace

One in a charet of straunge furniment Towards them driving like a storme out
 sent.

The charet decked was in wondrous wize
 With gold and many a gorgeous ornament, After the Persian Monarks antique guise, Such as the maker selfe could best by art devize.

XXXIX

And drawne it was (that wonder is to tell)
 Of two grim Lyons, taken from the wood

In which their powre all others did excell;
 Now made forget their former cruell mood,
 T' obey their riders hest, as seemed good.
 And therein sate a ladie passing faire And bright, that seemed borne of angels
 brood,

And with her beautie bountie did compare, Whether of them in her should have the greater share.

XL

Thereto she learned was in magicke leare,
 And all the artes that subtil wits discover,
 Having therein bene trained many a yeare,
 And well instructed by the Fay her mother,
 That in the same she farre exceld all other.
 Who, understanding by her mightie art Of th' evill plight in which her dearest
 brother

Now stood, came forth in hast to take his
 part,
 And pacifie the strife which causd so deadly
 smart.

XLI

And as she passed through th' unruly preace
 Of people thronging thicke her to behold, Her angrie teame, breaking their bonds of
 peace,

Great heapes of them, like sheepe in narrow fold,

For hast did over-runne, in dust enrould;
 That, thorough rude confusion of the rout, Some fearing shriekt, some being harmed
 hould,

Some laught for sport, some did for wonder shout,

And some, that would seeme wise, their wonder turnd to dout.

XLII

In her right hand a rod of peace shee
 bore,

About the which two serpents weren wound, Entrayled mutually in lovely lore,
 And by the tailes together firmly bound,
 And both were with one olive garland
 crownd,

Like to the rod which Maias sonne doth
 wield,

Wherewith the hellish fiends he doth con-
 found.

And in her other hand a cup she hild,
 The which was with Nepenthe to the brim upfild.

XLIII

Nepenthe is a drinck of soverayne grace, Devized by the gods, for to asswage Harts grief, and bitter gall away to chace, Which stirs up anguish and contentious
 rage:

In stead thereof sweet peace and quietage
 It doth establish in the troubled mynd.
 Few men, but such as sober are and sage,
 Are by the gods to drinck thereof assynd;
 But such as drinck, eternall happinesse do fynd.

XLIV

Such famous men, such worthies of the earth,

As Jove will have advaunced to the skie, And there made gods, though borne of mortall berth,

For their high merits and great dignitie,
 Are wont, before they may to heaven flie,
 To drinck hereof, whereby all cares fore-
 past

Are washt away quite from their memorie.
 So did those olde heroes hereof taste, Before that they in blisse amongst the gods were plaste.

XLV

Much more of price and of more gracious
 powre

Is this, then that same water of Ardenne,
 The which Rinaldo drunck in happie howre, Described by that famous Tuscan penne:
 For that had might to change the hearts of
 men

Fro love to hate, a change of evill choise.
 But this doth hatred make in love to brenne,
 And heavy heart with comfort doth rejoyce.
 Who would not to this vertue rather yeeld his voice ?

XLVI

At last arriving by the listes side, Shee with her rod did softly smite the raile, Which straight flew ope, and gave her way to ride.

Eftsoones out of her coch she gan availe,
 And pacing fairely forth, did bid all haile,
 First to her brother, whom she loved deare,
 That so to see him made her heart to quail:
 And next to Cambell, whose sad ruefull
 cheare

Made her to change her hew, and hidden love t' appeare.

XLVII

They lightly her requit (for small delight They had as then her long to entertaime,) And eft them turned both againe to fight:
 Which when she saw, downe on the bloody
 plaine
 Her selfe she threw, and teares gan shed
 amaine;
 Amongst her teares immixing prayers
 meeke,
 And with her prayers reasons, to restraîne From blouddy strife; and blessed peace to seeke,
 By all that unto them was deare, did them beseeke.

XLVIII

But when as all might nought with them prevaile, Shee smote them lightly with her powre-full wand.
 Then suddenly as if their hearts did faile, Their wrathfull blades downe fell out of their hand,
 And they like men astonisht still did stand.
 Thus whilst their minds were doubtfully
 distraught,
 And mighty spirites bound with mightier
 band,
 Her golden cup to them for drinke she
 raught,
 Whereof, full glad for thirst, ech drunk an hartie draught.

XLIX

Of which so soone as they once tasted had,
 Wonder it is that sudden change to see:
 Instead of strokes, each other kissed glad,
 And lovely haulst, from feare of treason
 free,
 And plighted hands for ever friends to be.
 When all men saw this sudden change of
 things,
 So mortall foes so friendly to agree,
 For passing joy, which so great marvaile brings,
 They all gan shout aloud, that all the heaven rings.

L

All which when gentle Canacee beheld,
 In hast she from her lofty chaire descended.
 Too weet what sudden tidings was befel:
 Where when she saw that cruell war so
 ended,

And deadly foes so faithfully affrended,
 In lovely wise she gan that lady greet,
 Which had so great dismay so well amended,
 And entertaining her with curt'sies meet, Profest to her true friendship and affection sweet.

LI

Thus when they all accorded goodly were,
 The trumpets sounded, and they all arose, Thence to depart with glee and gladsome
 chere.
 Those warlike champions both together
 chose Homeward to march, themselves there to repose,
 And wise Cambina, taking by her side Faire Canacee, as fresh as morning rose, Unto her coch remounting, home did ride, Admir'd of all the people and much glori-fide.

LII

Where making joyous feast their daies they spent
 In perfect love, devoide of hatefull strife, Allide with bands of mutuall complement;
 For Triamond had Canacee to wife,
 With whom he ledd a long and happie life;
 And Cambel tooke Cambina to his fere,
 The which as life were each to other liefe.
 So all alike did love, and loved were,
 That since their days such lovers were not found elsewhere.

CANTO IV

Satyrae makes a turneyment
 For love of Florimell: Britomart winnes the prize from all,
 And Artegall doth quell.

I

It often fals, (as here it earst befell)
 That mortall foes doe turne to faithfull frends,
 And friends profest are chaungd to foemen
 fell:
 The cause of both, of both their minds depends,
 And th' end of both, likewise of both their ends:
 For enmitie, that of no ill proceeds,
 But of occasion, with th' occasion ends:

And friendship, which a faint affection breeds
Without regard of good, dyes like ill grounded seeds.

II

That well (me seemes) appears by that of
late Twix Cambell and Sir Triamond befell,
As els by this, that now a new debate Stird up twix Blandamour and Paridell, The which by course befalls me here to
tell:
Who having those two other knights espide, Marching afore, as ye remember well, Sent forth their squire to have them both
descride,
And eke those masked ladies riding them beside.

III

Who backe returning, told as he had seene, That they were doughtie knights of dreaded name,
And those two ladies their two loves un-
seene;
And therefore wisht them without blot or
blame
To let them passe at will, for dread of
shame.
But Blandamour, full of vainglorious
spright,
And rather stird by his discordfull dame, Upon them gladly would have prov'd his
might,
But that he yet was sore of his late luck-lesse fight.

Yet, nigh approaching, he them fowle be-
spake, Disgracing them, him selfe thereby to
grace,
As was his wont, so weening way to make
To ladies love, where so he came in place, And with lewd termes their lovers to de-
face.
Whose sharpe provokement them incenst
so sore,
That both were bent t' avenge his usage
base,
And gan their shields addresse them selves
afore:
For evil dedes may better then bad words be bore.

V

But faire Cambina with perswasions myld Did mitigate the fiercenesse of their mode,
That for the present they were reconcyld,
And gan to treat of deeds of armes abroad, And strange adventures, all the way they rode:
Amongst the which they told, as then be-
fell,
Of that great turney which was blazed
brode,
For that rich girdle of faire Florimell, The prize of her which did in beautie most excell.

VI

To which folke-mote they all with one consent,
Sith each of them his ladie had him by,
Whose beautie each of them thought excellent,
Agreed to travell, and their fortunes try.
So as they passed forth, they did espy One in bright armes, with ready speare in
rest,
That toward them his course seem'd to apply; Gainst whom Sir Paridell himselfe ad-
drest,
Him weening, ere he nigh approcht, to have represt.

Which th' other seeing, gan his course re-
lent,
And vaunted speare eftsoones to disad-
vaunce,
As if he naught but peace and pleasure
ment,
Now false into their fellowship by chance, Whereat they shewed curteous counten-
aunce.
So as he rode with them accompanide,
His roving eie did on the lady glaunce Which Blandamour had riding by his side: Whom sure he weend that he some wher tofore had eide.

VIII

It was to weete that snowy Florimell, Which Ferrau late from Braggadochic
wonne;
Whom he now seeing, her remembered well, How, having reft her from the witches
sonne,

He soone her lost: wherefore he now begunne
To challenge her anew, as his owne prize, Whom formerly he had in battell wonne,
And proffer made by force her to reprice:
Which scornefull offer Blandamour gan soone despize;

IX

And said: 'Sir knight, sith ye this lady
clame,
Whom he that hath were loth to lose so
light,

(For so to lose a lady were great shame,) Yee shall her winne, as I have done, in fight:
And lo! shee shall be placed here in sight,
Together with this hag beside her set,
That who so winnes her may her have by
right:

But he shall have the hag that is ybet,
And with her alwaies ride, till he another get.'

X

That offer pleased all the company, So Florimell with Ate forth was brought,
At which they all gan laugh full merrily:
But Braggadochio said, he never thought For such an hag, that seemed worse then
nought,

His person to emperill so in fight:
But if to match that lady they had sought Another like, that were like faire and
bright,

His life he then would spend to justifie his right.

XI

At which his vaine excuse they all gan smile,

As scorning his unmanly cowardize:
And Florimell him fowly gan revile,
That for her sake refus'd to enterprize
The battell, offred in so knightly wize:
And Ate eke provokt him privily

With love of her, and shame of such mes-
prize.

But naught he ear'd for friend or enemy, For in base mind nor friendship dwels nor enmity.

XII

But Cambell thus did shut up all in jest:
'Brave knights and ladies, certes ye doe
wrong

To stirre up strife, when most us needeth
rest,

That we may us reserve both fresh and
strong

Against the turneiment, which is not long,
When who so list to fight may fight his fill.
Till then your challenges ye may prolong;
And then it shall be tried, if ye will, Whether shall have the hag, or hold the lady still.'

XIII

They all agreed; so, turning all to game And pleasaut bord, they past forth on their way,

And all that while, where so they rode or
came,
That masked mock-knight was their sport and play.

Till that at length, upon th' appointed day, Unto the place of turneyment they came;
Where they before them found in fresh
aray

Manie a brave knight and manie a daintie
dame

Assembled, for to get the honour of that game.

XIV

There this faire crew arrivng did divide Them selves asunder: Blandamour with those

Of his on th' one; the rest on th' other
side.

But boastfull Braggadochio rather chose,
For glorie vaine, their fellowship to lose,
That men on him the more might gaze
alone.

The rest them selves in troupes did else
dispose,

Like as it seemed best to every one;
The knights in couples marcht, with ladies linckt attone.

XV

Then first of all forth came Sir Satyrane, Bearing that precious relieke in an arke Of gold, that bad eyes might it not pro-phane:

Which drawing softly forth out of the
darke,

He open shewd, that all men it mote marke:
A gorgeous girdle, curiously embost With pearle and precious stone, worth many a marke;

Yet did the workmanship farre passe the cost:

It was the same which lately Florimel had lost.

XVI

That same aloft he hong in open vew,
To be the prize of beaatie and of might;
The which eftsoones discovered, to it drew
The eyes of all, allur'd with close delight, And hearts quite robbed with so glorious
sight,

That all men threw out vowes and wishes
vaine.

Thrise happie ladie, and thrise happie
knight,

Them seemd, that could so goodly riches
gaine,

So worthe of the perill, worthy of the
paine.

XVII

Then tooke the bold Sir Satyrane in hand An huge great speare, such as he wont to wield,

And vauncing forth from all the other
band

Of knights, addrest his maiden-headed
shield,

Shewing him selfe all ready for the field.
Gainst whom there singled from the other
side

A Painim knight, that well in armes was skild,

And had in many a battell oft bene tride, Hight Bruneheval the bold, who fierly forth did ride.

XVIII

So furiously they both together met,
That neither could the others force sus-
taine:

As two fierce buls, that strive the rule to get

Of all the heard, meete with so hideous
maine,

That both, rebutted, tumble on the plaine;
So these two champions to the ground were
feld,

Where in a maze they both did long
remaine,

And in their hands their idle troneheons
held,

Which neither able were to wag, or once to weld.

XIX

Which when the noble Ferramont espide,
He prieked forth in ayd of Satyran;
And him against Sir Blandamour did ride With all the strength and stifnesse that he can.

But the more strong and stiffely that he ran,

So much more sorely to the ground he fell,
That on an heape were tumbled horse and
man.

Unto whose rescue forth rode Paridell; But him likewise with that same speare he eke did quell.

XX

Which Braggadocchio seeing, had no will
To hasten greatly to his parties ayd, Albee his turne were next; but stood there
still,

As one that seemed doubtfull or dismayd.
But Triamond, halfe wroth to see him staid, Sternly stept forth, and raught away his
speare,

With which so sore he Ferramont assaid, That horse and man to ground he quite did
beare,

That neither could in hast themselves againe upreare.

XXI

Which to avenge, Sir Devon him did dight,
But with no better fortune then the rest,
For him likewise he quickly downe did smight;

And after him Sir Douglas him addrest,
And after him Sir Paliumord forth prest, But none of them against his strokes could
stand;

But all the more, the more his praise in-
crest:

For either they were left upon the land,
Or went away sore wounded of his haplesse
hand.

XXII

And now by this, Sir Satyrane abraid Out of the swowne, in which too long he
lay;

And looking round about, like one dismayd,
When as he saw the mercilesse affray Which doughty Triamond had wrought
that day

Unto the noble Knights of Maidenhead, His mighty heart did almost rend in tway

For very gall, that rather wholly dead Himselfe he wisht have beene, then in so bad a stead.

XXIII

Eftsoones he gan to gather up around His weapons, which lay scattered all
abrode,
And as it fell, his steed he ready found.
On whom remounting, fiercely forth he rode,
Like sparke of fire that from the andvile glode,
There where he saw the valiant Triamond Chasing, and laying on them heavy lode, That none his force were able to with-
stound,
So dreadfull were his strokes, so deadly was his hond.

XXIV

With that, at him his beamlike speare he aimed,
And thereto all his power and might applide:
The wicked steele for mischiefe first ordained,
And having now misfortune got for guide,
Staid not till it arrived in his side,
And therein made a very griesly wound, That streames of bloud his armour all bedide.
Much was he daunted with that direfull
stound,
That scarse he him upheld from falling in a sound.

XXV

Yet as he might, himselfe he soft withdrew Out of the field, that none perceiv'd it
plaine.
Then gan the part of challengers anew
To range the field, and victorlike to raine,
That none against them battell durst main-
taine.
By that the gloomy evening on them fell,
That forced them from fighting to refraine, And trumpets sound to cease did them com-
pell.
So Satyrane that day was judg'd to beare
the bell.

XXVI

The morrow next the turney gan anew,
And with the first the hardy Satyrane

Appear'd in place, with all his noble crew:
On th' other side full many a warlike
swaine
Assembled were, that glorious prize to
gaine.
But amongst them all was not Sir Triamond; Unable he new battell to darraine, Through grievance of his late received
wound,
That doubly did him grieve, when so himselfe he found.

XXVII

Which Cambell seeing, though he could not salve,
Ne done undoe, yet for to salve his name,
And purchase honour in his friends behalve,
This goodly counterfesauce he did frame:
The shield and armes, well knowne to be
the same Which Triamond had worne, unwares to
wight,
And to his friend unwist, for doubt of
blame,
If he misdid, he on himselfe did dight, That none could him discerne, and so went forth to fight.

XXVIII

There Satyrane lord of the field he found, Triumphing in great joy and jolity; Gainst whom none able was to stand on
ground;
That much he gan his glorie to envy,
And east t' avenge his friends indignity.
A mightie speare eftsoones at him he bent;
Who, seeing him come on so furiously, Met him mid-way with equall hardiment, That forcibly to ground they both together
went.

XXIX

They up againe them selves can lightly
reare,
And to their tryed swords them selves be-
take;
With which they wrought such wondrous marvels there,
That all the rest it did amazed make,
Ne any dar'd their perill to partake;
Now cuffing close, now chacing to and fro, Now hurtling round advantage for to take:
As two wild boares together grappling go, Chaufing and foming cholere each against his fo.

XXX

So as they court, and turneyd here and
theare,
It chaunst Sir Satyrane his steed at last, Whether through foundring, or through sodein feare,
To stumble, that his rider nigh he cast;
Which vantage Cambell did pursue so
fast,
That ere him selfe he had recovered well,
So sore he sowst him on the compast creast,
That forced him to leave his loftie sell, And rudely tumbling downe under his horse feete fell.

XXXI

Lightly Cambello leapt downe from his
steed,
For to have rent his shield and armes away,
That whylome wont to be the victors
meed;
When all unwares he felt an hideous sway
Of many swords, that lode on him did lay.
An hundred knights had him enclosed
round,
To resene Satyrane out of his pray;
All which at once huge strokes on him did
pound,
In hope to take him prisoner, where he stood on ground.

XXXII

He with their multitude was nought dis-
mayd,
But with stout courage turnd upon them
all,
And with his brondiron round about him
layd;
Of which he dealt large almes, as did befall:
Like as a lion, that by chaunce doth fall Into the hunters toile, doth rage and rore,
In royall heart disdainng to be thrall.
But all in vaine: for what might one do
more?
They have him taken captive, though it grieve him sore.

XXXIII

Whereof from newes to Triamond was
brought,
There as he lay, his wound he soone forgot,
And starting up, streight for his armour
sought:
In vaine he sought; for there he found it
not;

Cambello it away before had got:
Cambelloes armes therefore he on him
threw,
And lightly issewd forth to take his lot.
There he in troupe found all that warlike
crew, Leading his friend away, full sorie to his wev.

XXXIV

Into the thickest of that knightly preasse He thrust, and smote downe all that was betweene,
Caried with fervent zeale, ne did he cease, Till that he came where he had Cambell
seene,
Like captive thrall two other knights
atweene:
There he amongst them cruell havecke
makes,
That they which lead him soone enforced
beene
To let him loose, to save their proper stakes;
Who being freed, from one a weapon fiercely takes.

XXXV

With that he drives at them with dreadfull
might,
Both in remembrance of his friends late
harne,
And in revengement of his owne despight;
So both together give a new allarme,
As if but now the battell wexed warme.
As when two greedy wolves doe breake by force
Into an heard, farre from the husband farne,
They spoile and ravine without all re-
morse;
So did these two through all the field their foes enforce.

XXXVI

Fiercely they followd on their bolde em-
prize,
Till trumpets sound did warne them all to
rest;
Then all with one consent did yeeld the
prize
To Triamond and Cambell as the best.
But Triamond to Cambell it relest, And Cambell it to Triamond transferd;
Each labouring t' advance the others gest,

And make his praise before his owne preferd:
So that the doome was to another day differd.

XXXVII

The last day came, when all those knightes
again Assembled were their deedes of armes to
shew.

Full many deedes that day were shewed
plaine:

But Satyrane, bove all the other crew, His wondrous worth declared in all mens
view;

For from the first he to the last endured,
And though some while Fortune from him withdrew,

Yet evermore his honour he recured,
And with unwearied powre his party still assured.

XXXVIII

Ne was there knight that ever thought of
armes,

But that his utmost prowesse there made known;

That by their many wounds, and carelesse
harmes,

By shivered speares, and swords all under strowen,

By scattered shields was easie to be shoven.
There might ye see loose steeds at randon
ronne,

Whose luckelesse riders late were overthrowen,

And squiers make hast to helpe their lords
fordonne:

But still the Knights of Maidenhead the better womie.

XXXIX

Till that there entred on the other side A straunger knight, from whence no man could reed,

In queynt disguise, full hard to be descride.
For all his armour was like salvage weed, With woody mosse bedight, and all his
steed

With oaken leaves attrapt, that seemed
fit

For salvage wight, and thereto well agreed His word, which on his ragged shield was
writ,

Salvagesse sans finesse, shewing secret wit.

XL

He, at his first incomming, charg'd his spere
At him that first appeared in his sight:
That was to weet the stout Sir Saugliere, Who well was knowne to be a valiant
knight,

Approved off in many a perlous fight.
Him at the first encounter downe he smote,
And overbore beyond his crouper quight,
And after him another knight, that hote Sir Brianor, so sore, that none him life be-hote.

XLI

Then, ere his hand he reard, he overthrew Seven knights, one after other, as they
came:

And when his speare was brust, his sword
he drew,

The instrument of wrath, and with the
same

Far'd like a lyon in his bloodie game, Hewing and slashing shields and helmets
bright,

And beating downe what ever nigh him
came,

That every one gan shun his dreadfull sight,
No lesse then death it selfe, in daungerous
affright.

XLII

Much wondred all men, what, or whence he
came,

That did amongst the troupes so tyrannize;
And each of other gan inquire his name.

But when they could not learne it by no
wize,

Most answerable to his wyld disguise
It seemed, him to terme the Salvage Knight.

But certes his right name was otherwise, Though knowne to few that Arthegall he
hight,

The doughtiest knight that liv'd that day, and most of might.

XLIII

Thus was Sir Satyrane with all his band By his sole manhood and atchievement
stout

Dismayd, that none of them in field durst
stand,

But beaten were, and chased all about
So he continued all that day throughout, Till evening, that the sunne gan downward
bend.

Then rushed forth out of the thickest rout
A stranger knight, that did his glorie shend:
So nought may be esteemed happie till the end.

XLIV

He at his entrance charg'd his powrefull
speare
At Artegall, in midst of his pryde,
And therewith smote him on his umbriere So sore, that, tomling baecke, he downe did slyde

Over his horses taile above a stryde:
Whence litle lust he had to rise againe.
Which Cambell seeing, much the same en-
vyde,
And ran at him with all his might and
maine;
But shortly was likewise seene lying on the plaine.

XLV

Whereat full inly wroth was Triamond, And east t' avenge the shame doen to his freend:

But by his friend himselve eke soone he
fond,
In no lesse neede of helpe then him he weend.

All which when Blandamour from end to
end

Beheld, he woxe therewith displeas'd sore,
And thought in mind it shortly to amend:
His speare he feutred, and at him it bore;
But with no better fortune then the rest
afore.

XLVI

Full many others at him likewise ran:
But all of them likewise dismounted were.
Ne certes wonder; for no powre of man Could bide the force of that enhaunted
speare,

The which this famous Britomart did beare;
With which she wondrous deeds of arms atchieved,
And overthrew what ever came her neare, That all those stranger knights full sore agrieved,
And that late weaker band of chalengers relieved.

XLVII

Like as in sommers day, when raging heat Doth burne the earth, and boyled rivers drie,

That all brute beasts, forst to refraine fro meat, Doe hunt for shade, where shrowded they may lie,
And missing it, faime from themselves
flie;

All travellers tormented are with paine:
A watry cloud doth overcast the skie,
And poureth forth a sudden shoure of raie,
That all the wretched world recomforteth
againe.

XLVIII

So did the warlike Britomart restore The prize to Knights of Maydenhead that
day,

Which else was like to have bene lost, and
bore

The prayse of prowesse from them all
away.

Then shrilling trompets loudly gan to bray,
And bad them leave their labours and long
toyle

To joyous feast and other gentle play, Where beauties prize shold win that pretious spoyle:

Where I with sound of trompe will also rest a while.

CANTO V

The ladies for the girdle strive Of famous Florimell: Sendamour, coming to Cares house,
Doth sleepe from him expell.

I

It hath bene through all ages ever seene,
That with the praise of armes and chevalrie
The prize of beautie still hath joynd beene;
And that for reasons speciall privitie:
For either doth on other much relie.
For he me seemes most fit the faire to serve,

That can her best defend from villenie;
And she most fit his service doth deserve, That fairest is and from her faith will never swerve.

II

So fitly now here commeth next in plaee,
After the proove of prowesse ended well,
The controverse of beauties souveraine graece;

In which, to her that doth the most excell

Shall fall the girdle of faire Florimell:
That many wish to win for glorie vaine,
And not for vertuous use, which some doe
tell
That glorious belt did in it selfe containe, Which ladies ought to love, and seeke for to obtaine.

III

That girdle gave the vertue of chast love
And wivehood true to all that did it beare;
But whosoever contrarie doth prove Might not the same about her middle
weare:

But it would loose, or else a sunder teare.
Whilome it was (as Faeries wont report)
Dame Venus girdle, by her steemed deare, What time she usd to live in wively sort;
But layd aside, when so she usd her looser sport.

IV

Her husband Vulcan whylome for her
sake,

When first he loved her with heart entire,
This pretious ornament, they say, did make,
And wrought in Lemno with unquenched
fire:

And afterwards did for her loves first hire Give it to her, for ever to remaine, Therewith to bind lascivious desire,
And loose affectionis streightly to restraine;
Which vertue it for ever after did retaine.

V

The same one day, when she her selfe disposd

To visite her beloved paramoure, The God of Warre, she from her middle loosd,

And left behind her in her secret bowre,
On Acidalian mount, where many an howre
She with the pleasant Graces wont to playe.
There Florimell in her first ages flowre Was fostered by those Graces, (as they say) And brought with her from thence that goodly belt away.

VI

That goodly belt was Cestus hight by name,
And as her life by her esteemed deare.
No wonder then, if that to winne the same
So many ladies sought, as shall appeare; For pearelesse she was thought, that did it
beare.

And now by this their feast all being ended,
The judges which thereto selected were Into the Martian field adowne descended, To deeme this doutfull case, for which they all contended.

VII

But first was question made, which of those knights

That lately turneyd had the wager wonne:
There was it judged by those worthie
wights,

That Satyrane the first day best had donne:
For he last ended, having first begonne.

The second was to Triamond behight, For that he sav'd the victour from for-
donne:

For Cambell victour was in all mens sight, Till by mishap he in his foemens hand did
light.

VIII

The third dayes prize unto that straunger
knight,

Whom all men term'd Knight of the Hebene Speare,

To Britomart, was given by good right;
For that with puissant stroke she downe
did beare

The Salvage Knight, that victour was
whileare,

And all the rest which had the best afore,
And to the last unconquer'd did appeare; For last is deemed best. To her therefore The fayrest ladie was adjudgd for paramore.

IX

But thereat greatly grudged Arthegall, And much repynd, that both of victors
meede

And eke of honour she did him forestall.
Yet mote he not withstand what was de-creede;

But inly thought of that despightfull deede Fit time t' awaite avenged for to bee.

This being ended thus, and all agreed, Then next ensw'd the paragon to see Of beauties praise, and yeeld the fayrest her due fee.

X

Then first Cambello brought unto their view

His faire Cambina, covered with a veale;

Which being once withdrawne, most perfect hew
 And passing beautie did eftsoones reveale, That able was weake harts away to steale.
 Next did Sir Triamond unto their sight
 The face of his deare Canacee unheale; Whose beauties beame eftsoones did shine so bright,
 That daz'd the eyes of all, as with exceeding light.

XI

And after her did Paridell produce His false Duessa, that she might be seene, Who with her forged beautie did seduce
 The hearts of some, that fairest her did
 weene;
 As diverse wits affected divers beene.
 Then did Sir Ferramont unto them shew His Lucida, that was full faire and sheene:
 And after these an hundred ladies moe Appear'd in place, the which each other did outgoe.

XII

All which who so dare thinke for to enchace, Him needeth sure a golden pen, I weene,
 To tell the feature of each goodly face.
 For since the day that they created beene,
 So many heavenly faces were not seene Assembled in one place: ne he that thought For Chian folke to pourtraiet beauties queene, By view of all the fairest to him brought,
 So many faire did see, as here he might have sought.

XIII

At last, the most redoubted Britonesse Her lovely Amoret did open shew; Whose face discovered, plainly did expresse The heavenly pourtraiet of bright angels
 hew.
 Well weened all, which her that time did
 vew,
 That she should surely beare the bell away, Till Blandamour, who thought he had the
 trew
 And very Florimell, did her display:
 The sight of whom once seene did all the rest dismay.

XIV

For all afore that seemed fayre and bright,
 Now base and contemptible did appeare,

Compar'd to her, that shone as Phebes light Amongst the lesser starres in evening
 cleare.

All that her saw with wonder ravisht weare,
 And weend no mortall creature she should
 bee,

But some celestiall shape, that flesh did
 beare:

Yet all were glad there Florimell to see;
 Yet thought that Florimell was not so faire as shee.

XV

As guilefull goldsmith that, by secret skill,
 With golden foyle doth finely over spred Some baser metall, which commend he will Unto the vulgar for good gold insted, He much more goodly glosse thereon doth
 shed,

To hide his falshood, then if it were trew:
 So hard this idole was to be ared,
 That Florimell her selfe in all mens vew She seem'd to passe: so forged things do fairest shew.

XVI

Then was that golden belt by doome of
 all

Graunted to her, as to the fayrest dame.
 Which being brought, about her middle
 small

They thought to gird, as best it her became;

But by no meanes they could it thereto
 frame.

For, ever as they fastned it, it loos'd
 And fell away, as feeling secret blame.
 Full oft about her wast she it enclos'd;
 And it as oft was from about her wast dis-clos'd.

XVII

That all men wondred at the uncouth sight,
 And each one thought as to their fancies
 came.

But she her selfe did thinke it doen for
 spight,

And touched was with secret wrath and
 shame

Therewith, as thing deviz'd her to defame.
 Then many other ladies likewise tride About their tender loynes to knit the same'
 But it would not on none of them abide,
 But when they thought it fast, eftsoones it was untide.

XVIII

Which when that scornfull Squire of Dames did vew,
 He lowdly gan to laugh, and thus to jest:
 'Alas for pittie, that so faire a crew,
 As like can not be seene from east to west, Cannot find one this girdle to invest!
 Fie on the man that did it first invent,
 To shame us all with this, Ungirt unblest!
 Let never ladie to his love assent, That hath this day so many so unmanly shent.'

XIX

Thereat all knights gan laugh, and ladies lowre:
 Till that at last the gentle Amoret Likewise assayd, to prove that girdles
 powre;
 And having it about her middle set,
 Did find it fit withouten breach or let.
 Whereat the rest gan greatly to envie:
 But Florimell exceedingly did fret,
 And snatching from her hand halfe angrily
 The belt againe, about her bodie gan it tie.

XX

Yet nathemore would it her bodie fit;
 Yet nathelesse to her, as her dew right,
 It yeelded was by them that judged it:
 And she her selfe adjudged to the knight That bore the hebene speare, as womme in
 fight.
 But Britomart would not thereto assent, Ne her owne Amoret forgoe so light For that strange dame, whose beauties wonderment
 She lesse esteem'd then th' others vertuons government.

XXI

Whom when the rest did see her to refuse,
 They were full glad, in hope themselves to get her:
 Yet at her choice they all did greatly muse.
 But after that, the judges did arret her Unto the second best, that lov'd her better; That was the Salvage Knight: but he was gone
 In great displeasure, that he could not get
 her.
 Then was she judged Triamond his one;
 But Triamond lov'd Canacee, and other
 none.

XXII

Tho unto Satyran she was adjudged, Who was right glad to gaine so goodly
 need:
 But Blandamour thereat full greatly gruded,
 And litle prays'd his labours evill speed,
 That, for to winne the saddle, lost the steed.
 Ne lesse thereat did Paridell complaine, And thought t' appeale from that which was decreed
 To single combat with Sir Satyrane.
 Thereto him Ate stird, new discord to maintaine.

XXIII

And eke with these, full many other knights She through her wicked working did incense,
 Her to demaund, and chalenge as their rights,
 Deserved for their perils recompense.
 Amongst the rest, with boastfull vaine pretense
 Stept Braggadochio forth, and as his thrall Her claym'd, by him in battell wonne long sens:
 Where to her selfe he did to witnesse call;
 Who being askt, accordingly confessed all.

XXIV

Thereat exceeding wroth was Satyran;
 And wroth with Satyran was Blandamour;
 And wroth with Blandamour was Erivan;
 And at them both Sir Paridell did loure.
 So all together stird up strifull stoure,
 And readie were new battell to darraine.
 Each one profest to be her paramoure, And vow'd with speare and shield it to
 maintaine;
 Ne judges powre, ne reasons rule, mote them restraine.

XXV

Which troublous stirre when Satyrane
 aviz'd,
 He gan to cast how to appease the same,
 And, to accord them all, this meanes
 deviz'd:
 First in the midst to set that fayrest dame, To whom each one his chalenge should disclame,
 And he himselfe his right would eke release:
 Then looke, to whom she voluntarie came,

He should without disturbance her possesse: Sweete is the love that comes alone with willingnesse.

XXVI

They all agreed, and then that snowy mayd
Was in the middest plast among them all:
All on her gazing wisht, and vowd, and prayd,
And to the Queene of Beautie close did call,
That she unto their portion might befall.
Then when she long had lookt upon each
one,
As though she wished to have pleasd them
all,

At last to Braggadochio selfe alone She came of her accord, in spight of all his fone.

XXVII

Which when they all beheld, they chaft, and rag'd,

And woxe nigh mad for very harts despight, That from revenge their willes they searse asswag'd:

Some thought from him her to have reft by
might;

Some proffer made with him for her to
fight.

But he nought ear'd for all that they could
say:

For he their words as wind esteemed light.
Yet not fit place he thought it there to stay, But secretly from thence that night her bore away.

XXVIII

They which remaynd, so soone as they perceiv'd

That she was gone, departed thence with
speed,

And follow'd them, in mind her to have reav'd

From wight unworthie of so noble meed.
In which poursuit how each one did suc-
ceede,

Shall else be told in order, as it fell.
But now of Britomart it here doth neede, The hard adventures and strange haps to
tell;
Since with the rest she went not after Florimell.

XXIX

For soone as she them saw to discord set,
Her list no longer in that place abide;

But taking with her lovely Amoret, Upon her first adventure forth did ride,
To seeke her lov'd, making blind Love her
guide.

Unluckie mayd, to seeke heremie!
Unluckie mayd, to seeke him farre and
wide,

Whom, when he was unto her selfe most
nie,

She through his late disguizement could him not descrie!

XXX

So much the more her grieffe, the more her
toyle:

Yet neither toyle nor grieffe she once did
spare,

In seeking him that should her paine
assoyle;

Whereto great comfort in her sad mis-
fare

Was Amoret, companion of her care: Who likewise sought her lover long mis-
went,

The gentle Scudamour, whose hart whil-
eare

That stryfull hag with gealous discontent Had fild, that he to fell reveng was fully bent.

XXXI

Bent to revenge on blamelesse Britomart
The crinne which cursed Ate kindled earst, The which like thornes did pricke his gealous hart,

And through his soule like poysned arrow perst,

That by no reason it might be reverst, For ought that Glauce could or doe or
say.

For aye the more that she the same reherst,

The more it gauld and griev'd him night and day,

That nought but dire revenge his anger mote defray.

XXXII

So as they travelled, the drouping night, Covered with cloudie storme and bitter
showre,

That dreadfull seem'd to every living wight,
Upon them fell, before her timely howre;

That forced them to seeke some covert
bowre,

Where they might hide their heads in quiet
rest,
And shrowd their persons from that stormie
stowre.
Not farre away, not meete for any guest, They spide a little cottage, like some poore mans nest.

XXXIII

Under a steepe hilles side it placed was,
There where the mouldred earth had cav'd the banke;
And fast beside a little brooke did pas
Of muddie water, that like puddle stanke, By which few crooked sallowes grew in ranke:
Wherto approaching nigh, they heard the
sound
Of many yron hammers beating ranke,
And answering their wearie turnes around,
That seemed some blacksmith dwelt in that desert ground.

XXXIV

There entring in, they found the goodman
selfe
Full busily unto his worke ybent;
Who was to weet a wretched wearish elfe, With hollow eyes and rawbone cheekes for-
spent,
As if he had in prison long bene pent:
Full blacke and griesly did his face ap-
peare,
Besmeard with smoke that nigh his eyesight blent;
With rugged beard, and hoarie shagged
heare,
The which he never wont to combe, or comely sheare.

XXXV

rude was his garment, and to rags all rent, Ne better had he, ne for better cared:
With blistred hands emongst the cinders
brent,
And fingers filthie, with long nayles un-pared,
Right fit to rend the food on which he fared.
His name was Care; a blacksmith by his
trade,
That neither day nor night from working spared,
But to small purpose yron wedges made;
Those be unquiet thoughts, that carefull minds invade.

XXXVI

In which his worke he had sixe servants
prest,
About the andvile standing evermore, With huge great hammers, that did never
rest
From heaping stroakes, which thereon soused sore:
All sixe strong groomes, but one then other
more:
For by degrees they all were disagreed; So likewise did the hammers which they
bore
Like belles in greatnesse orderly succeed, That he which was the last the first did farre exceede.

XXXVII

He like a monstrous gyant seem'd in sight, Farre passing Bronteus or Pyracmon great,
The which in Lipari doe day and night Frame thunderbolts for Joves avengefull threate.
So dreadfully he did the andvile beat,
That seem'd to dust he shortly would it
drive:
So huge his hammer and so fierce his
heat,
That seem'd a rocke of diamond it could
rive,
And rend a sunder quite, if he thereto list strive.

XXXVIII

Sir Sendamour, there entring, much admired
The manner of their worke and wearie
paine;
And having long beheld, at last enquired The cause and end thereof: but all in
vaine;
For they for nought would from their worke refraine,
Ne let his speeches come unto their eare;
And eke the breathfull bellows blew
amaine,
Like to the northren winde, that none could
heare:
Those Pensifenesse did move; and Sighes the bellows weare.

XXXIX

Which when that warriour saw, he said no
more,
But in his armour layd him downe to rest:

To rest he layd him downe upon the flore, (Whylome for ventrous knights the bedding best,)
 And thought his wearie limbs to have re-
 drest.
 And that old aged dame, his faithfull
 squire,
 Her feeble joynts layd eke a downe to rest;
 That needed much her weake age to desire, After so long a travell, which them both did tire.

XL

There lay Sir Scudamour long while expecting
 When gentle sleepe his heavie eyes would
 close;
 Oft chaunging sides, and oft new place electing,
 Where better seem'd he mote himselfe re-
 pose;
 And oft in wrath he thence againe arose;
 And oft in wrath he layd him downe againe.
 But wheresoever he did himselfe dispose,
 He by no meanes could wished ease obtaine:
 So every place seem'd painefull, and ech chaunging vaine.

XLI

And evermore, when he to sleepe did
 thinke,
 The hammers sound his senses did molest;
 And evermore, when he began to winke,
 The bellowes noyse disturb'd his quiet rest, Ne suffred sleepe to settle in his brest.
 And all the night the dogs did barke and howle
 About the house, at sent of stranger guest:
 And now the crowing coeke, and now the owle Lowde shriking, him afflicted to the very sowle.

XLII

And if by fortune any litle nap Upon his heavie eye-lids chaunst to fall, Eftsoones one of those villeins him did rap
 Upon his headpeece with his yron mall,
 That he was soone awaked therewithall,
 And lightly started up as one affrayd,
 Or as if one him suddenly did call:
 So oftentimes he out of sleepe abrayd,
 And then lay musing long on that him ill
 apayd.

XLIII

So long he muzed, and so long he lay,
 That at the last his wearie sprite opprest With fleshly weaknesse, which no creature
 may
 Long time resist, gave place to kindly rest,
 That all his senses did full soone arrest:
 Yet, in his soundest sleepe, his dayly feare His ydle braine gan busily molest, And made him dreame those two disloyall
 were:
 The things that day most minds, at night doe most appeare.

XLIV

With that, the wicked carle, the maister smith,
 A paire of redwhot yron tongs did take Out of the burning cinders, and therewith Under his side him nipt, that, forst to wake,
 He felt his hart for very paine to quake,
 And started up avenged for to be On him the which his quiet slomber brake: Yet, looking round about him, none could
 see;
 Yet did the smart remaine, though he himselfe did flee.

XLV

In such disquiet and hartfretting payne He all that night, that too long night, did
 passe.
 And now the day out of the ocean mayne
 Began to peepe above this earthly masse, With pearly dew sprinkling the morning grasse:
 Then up he rose like heavie lumpe of lead,
 That in his face, as in a looking glasse,
 The signes of anguish one mote plainly
 read,
 And ghesse the man to be dismayd with gealous dread.

XLVI

Unto his lofty steede he clombe anone,
 And forth upon his former voiage fared,
 And with him eke that aged squire attone;
 Who, whatsoever perill was prepared,
 Both equal paines and equall perill shared:
 The end whereof and daungerous event Shall for another canticle be spared:
 But here my wearie teeme, nigh over
 spent,
 Shall breath it selfe awhile, after so long a went.

CANTO VI

Both Scudamour and Arthegall
Doe fight with Britomart;
He sees her face; doth fall in love,
And soone from her depart.

I

WHAT equall torment to the griefe of mind,
And pyning anguish hid in gentle hart,
That inly feeds it selfe with thoughts un-
kind,
And nourisheth her owne consuming
smart?

What medicine can any leaches art Yeeld such a sore, that doth her grievance
hide,
And will to none her maladie impart?
Such was the wound that Scudamour did
gride;
For which Dan Phebus selfe cannot a salve provide.

II

Who having left that restlesse House of Care,
The next day, as he on his way did ride,
Full of melancholie and sad misfare, Through misconcept, all unawares espide
An armed knight under a forrest side, Sitting in shade beside his grazing steede;
Who, soone as them approaching he describe, Gan towards them to pricke with eger
speede,
That seem'd he was full bent to some mischievous deede.

III

Which Scudamour perceiving, forth issewed
To have rencountred him in equall race;
But soone as th' other, nigh approaching, vewed
The armes he bore, his speare he gan abase,
And voide his course: at which so suddain
case
He wondred much. But th' other thus can
say:
'Ah! gentle Scudamour, unto your grace
I me submit, and you of pardon pray, That almost had against you trespassed this day.'

IV

Whereto thus Scudamour: 'Small harme it
were
For any knight upon a ventrous knight

Without displeasance for to prove his spere.

But reade you, sir, sith ye my name have
hight,

What is your owne, that I mote you re-
quite?'

'Certes,' sayd he, 'ye mote as now excuse Me from discovering you my name aright:
For time yet serves that I the same refuse;

But call ye me the Salvage Knight, as others use.'

V

'Then this, Sir Salvage Knight,' quoth he,
'areede;

Or doe you here within this forrest wonne, That seemeth well to answere to your weede?

Or have ye it for some occasion donne?
That rather seemes, sith knowen armes ye
shonne.'

'This other day,' sayd he, 'a stranger
knight

Shame and dishonour bath unto me donne;
On whom I waite to wreake that foule de-
spight,

When ever he this way shall passe by day or night.'

VI

'Shame be his meede,' quoth he, 'that meaneth shame.

But what is he by whom ye shamed were?'
'A stranger knight,' sayd he, 'unknowne
by name,

But knowne by fame, and by an hebene
speare,

With which he all that met him downe did
beare.

He in an open turney, lately held, Fro me the honour of that game did
reare;

And having me, all wearie earst, downe
feld,
The fayrest ladie reft, and ever since withheld.'

VII

When Scudamour heard mention of that
speare,

He wist right well that it was Britomart, The which from him his fairest love did
beare.

Tho gan he swell in every inner part.

For fell despight, and gnaw his gealous
hart,
That thus he sharply sayd: 'Now by my
head,
Yet is not this the first unknighly part, Which that same knight, whom by his launce I read, Hath doen to noble knights, that many makes him dread.

VIII

'For lately he my love hath fro me reft,
And eke defiled with foule villanie The sacred pledge which in his faith was
left,
In shaune of knighthood and fidelitie;
The which ere long full deare he shall abie.
And if to that avenge by you decreed This hand may helpe, or succour aught sup-
plie,
It shall not fayle, when so ye shall it need.'
So both to wreake their wrathes on Britomart agreed.

IX

Whiles thus they communed, lo! farre
away A knight soft ryding towards them they
spyde,
Attyr'd in forraine armes and straunge
aray:
Whom when they nigh approcht, they plaine deseryde
To be the same for whom they did abyde.
Sayd then Sir Seudamour, 'Sir Salvage
Knight,
Let me this crave, sith first I was defyde,
That first I may that wrong to him requite:
And, if I hap to fayle, you shall recure my right.'

X

Which being yeelded, he his threatfull
speare
Gan fewter, and against her fiercely ran.
Who soone as she him saw approaching
neare
With so fell rage, her selfe she lightly gan
To dight, to welcome him well as she can:
But entertaing him in so rude a wise,
That to the ground she smote both horse and man;
Whence neither greatly hasted to arise, But on their common harmes together did devise.

XI

But Artegall, beholding his mischaunce, New matter added to his former fire;
And eft aventring his steeleheaded launce, Against her rode, full of despiteous ire, That nought but spoyle and vengeance did require.

But to himselfe his felonous intent Returning, disappointed his desire, Whiles unawares his saddle he forwent, And found himselfe on ground in great amazement.

XII

Lightly he started up out of that stound, And snatching forth his direfull deadly
blade,

Did leape to her, as doth an eger hound Thrust to an hynd within some covert glade, Whom without perill he cannot invade.
With such fell greedines he her assayled, That though she mounted were, yet he her
made

To give him ground, (so much his force prevayled)
And shun his mightie strokes, gainst which no armes avayled.

XIII

So as they coursed here and there, it
chaunst

That, in her wheeling round, behind her crest

So sorely he her strooke, that thence it glaunst

Adowne her backe, the which it fairely
blest

From foule mischance; ne did it ever rest, Till on her horses hinder parts it fell;

Where byting deepe, so deadly it imprest, That quite it chynd his backe behind the sell,

And to alight on foote her algates did com-pell.

XIV

Like as the lightning broud from riven
skie,

Throwne out by angry Jove in his vengeance,

With dreadfull force falles on some steeple
hie;

Which battring, downe it on the church doth glance,

And teares it all with terrible mischance.

Yet she no whit dismayd, her steed for-
sooke,
And casting from her that enchanted
lance,
Unto her sword and shield her soone be-
tooke;
And therewithall at him right furiously she strooke.

XV

So furiously she strooke in her first heat, Whiles with long fight on foot he breath-lesse was,
That she him forced backward to retreat,
And yeeld unto her weapon way to pas:
Whose raging rigour neither steele nor bras
Could stay, but to the tender flesh it went,
And pour'd the purple bloud forth on the gras;
That all his mayle yriv'd, and plates yrent, Shew'd all his bodie bare unto the cruell
dent.

XVI

At length, when as he saw her hastie heat Abate, and panting breath begin to fayle, He, through long sufferance growing now more great,
Rose in his strength, and gau her fresh as-sayle,
Heaping huge strokes, as thicke as showre of bayle,
And lashing dreadfully at every part,
As if he thought her soule to disentrayle.
Ah! cruell hand, and thrise more cruell
hart,
That workst such wrecke on her to whom thou dearest art!

XVII

What yron courage ever could endure, To worke such outrage on so faire a creature?
And in his madnesse thinke with hands
impure
To spoyle so goodly workmanship of nature,
The Maker selfe resembling in her feature?
Certes some hellish furie, or some feend, This mischief frand, for their first loves defeature,
To bath their hands in bloud of dearest
freend,
Thereby to make their loves beginning their lives end.

XVIII

Thus long they trac'd and traverst to and
fro,
Sometimes pursewing, and sometimes pursewed,
Still as advantage they espyde thereto:
But toward th' end Sir Arthegall renewed His strength still more, but she still more decrewed.
At last his lucklesse hand he heav'd on
hie,
Having his forces all in one accrewed,
And therewith stroke at her so hideouslie, That seemed nought but death mote be her destinie.

XIX

The wicked stroke upon her helmet
chaunst,
And with the force which in it selfe it bore Her ventayle shard away, and thence forth
glaunst
Adowne in vaine, ne harm'd her any more.
With that, her angels face, unseene afore,
Like to the ruddie morne appeard in sight, Deawed with silver drops, through sweating sore,
But somewhat redder then beseen'd aright, Through toylesome heate and labour of her weary fight.

XX

And round about the same, her yellow
heare,
Having through stirring loosd their wonted
band,
Like to a golden border did appeare, Framed in goldsmithes forge with cunning
hand:
Yet goldsmithes cunning could not understand
To frame such subtile wire, so shinie cleare.
For it did glisten like the golden sand,
The which Pactolus, with his waters shere, Throwes forth upon the rivage round about him nere.

XXI

And as his hand he up againe did reare, Thinking to worke on her his utmost wracke,
His powrelesse arme, benumbd with secret
feare,
From his revengefull purpose shronk abacke,

And cruell sword out of his fingers slacke Fell downe to ground, as if the steele had sence,
And felt some ruth, or sence his hand did lacke,
Or both of them did thinke, obedience
To doe to so divine a beauties excellence.

XXII

And he himselfe long gazing thereupon,
At last fell humbly downe upon his knee,
And of his wonder made religion, Weening some heavenly goddesse he did
see,
Or else unweeting what it else might bee;
And pardon her besought his error frayle,
That had done outrage in so high degree: Whilste trembling horrour did his sense assayle,
And made ech member quake, and manly hart to quake.

XXIII

Nathelesse she, full of wrath for that late
stroke,
All that long while upheld her wrathfull
hand,
With fell intent on him to bene ywroke:
And looking sterne, still over him did stand, Threatning to strike, unlesse he would
withstand:
And bad him rise, or surely he should die.
But, die or live, for nought he would upstand,
But her of pardon prayd more earnestlie, Or wreake on him her will for so great injurie.

XXIV

Which when as Scudamour, who now
abrayd,
Beheld, where as he stood not farre aside,
He was therewith right wondrously dismayd, And drawing nigh, when as he plaine
descride
That peerelesse paterne of Dame Natures
pride,
And heavenly image of perfection,
He blest himselfe, as one sore terrifide,
And turning feare to faint devotion, Did worship her as some celestially vision.

XXV

But Glauce, seeing all that chanced there, Well weeting how their error to assoyle,

Full glad of so good end, to them drew
nere,
And her salewd with seemly belaccoyle, Joyous to see her safe after long toyle:
Then her besought, as she to her was deare, To graunt unto those warriours truce a whyle;
Which yeilded, they their bevers up did
reare,
And shew'd themselves to her, such as indeed they were.

XXVI

When Britomart with sharpe avizefull eye Beheld the lovely face of Artegall, Tempred with sternesse and stout majestie,
She gan eftsoones it to her mind to call,
To be the same which in her fathers hall Long since in that enchanted glasse she
saw.
Therewith her wrathfull courage gan
appall,
And haughtie spirits meekely to adaw, That her enhaunced hand she downe can soft withdraw.

XXVII

Yet she it forst to have againe upheld, As fayning choler, which was turn'd to cold:
But ever when his visage she beheld,
Her hand fell downe, and would no longer
hold
The wrathfull weapon gainst his count-nance bold:
But when in vaine to fight she oft assayd, She arm'd her tongue, and thought at him to scold;
Nathlesse her tongue not to her will obeyd, But brought forth speeches myld, when she would have missayd.

XXVIII

But Scudamour now woxen inly glad,
That all his gealous feare he false had
found,
And how that hag his love abused had With breach of faith and loyaltie unsound, The which long time his grieved hart did
wound,
Him thus bespake: 'Certes, Sir Artegall,
I joy to see you lout so low on ground,
And now become to live a ladies thrall, That whylome in your minde wont to d-spise them all.'

XXIX

Soone as she heard the name of Artegal, Her hart did leape, and all her hart-strings tremble,
 For sudden joy, and secret feare withall,
 And all her vitall powres, with motion nimble,
 To succour it, themselves gan there assemble,
 That by the swift recourse of flushing
 blood Right plaine appeard, though she it would dissemble,
 And fayned still her former angry mood, Thinking to hide the depth by troubling of the flood.

XXX

When Glauce thus gan wisely all upknit:
 'Ye gentle knights, whom fortune here hath brought,
 To be spectators of this uncouth fit, Which secret fate hath in this ladie
 wrought,
 Against the course of kind, ne mervaille
 nought,
 Ne thenceforth feare the thing that hethertoo
 Hath troubled both your mindes with idle
 thought,
 Fearing least she your loves away should woo, Feared in vaine, sith meanes ye see there wants theretoo.

XXXI

'And you, Sir Artegal, the Salvage Knight, Henceforth may not disdaine that womans
 hand
 Hath conquered you anew in second fight:
 For whylome they have conquerd sea and
 land,
 And heaven it selfe, that nought may them
 withstand:
 Ne henceforth be rebellious unto love,
 That is the crowne of knighthood, and the
 band
 Of noble minds derived from above, Which being knit with vertue, never will remove.

XXXII

'And you, faire ladie knight, my dearest
 dame, Relent the rigour of your wrathfull will,

Whose fire were better turn'd to other
 flame;
 And wiping out remembrance of all ill, Graunt him your grace, but so that he ful-
 fill
 The penance which ye shall to him em-
 part:
 For lovers heaven must passe by sorrowes
 hell.'
 Thereat full inly blushed Britomart;
 But Artegal, close smyling, joy'd in secret
 hart.

XXXIII

Yet durst he not make love so suddenly, Ne thinke th' affection of her hart to
 draw
 From one to other so quite contrary:
 Besides her modest countenance he saw
 So goodly grave, and full of princely aw,
 That it his ranging fancie did refraine, And looser thoughts to lawfull bounds withdraw;
 Whereby the passion grew more fierce and
 faine,
 Like to a stubborne steede whom strong hand would restraine.

XXXIV

But Sendamour, whose hart twixt doubtfull
 feare
 And feeble hope hung all this while sus-
 pence,
 Desiring of his Amoret to heare
 Some gladfull newes and sure intelligence, Her thus bespake: 'But, sir, without offence
 Mote I request you tydings of my love, My Amoret, sith you her freed fro thence,
 Where she, captived long, great woes did
 prove;
 That where ye left, I may her seeke, as doth behove.'

XXXV

To whom thus Britomart: 'Certes, sir
 knight,
 What is of her become, or whether reft,
 I can not unto you aread a right.
 For from that time I from enchaunters
 theft
 Her freed, in which ye her all hopelesse
 left,
 I her preserv'd from perill and from feare,
 And evermore from villenie her kept:

Ne ever was there wight to me more deare Then she, ne unto whom I more true love did beare.

XXXVI

'Till on a day, as through a desert wyld
We travelled, both wearie of the way,
We did alight, and sate in shadow myld;
Where fairelesse I to sleepe me downe did
lay.

But when as I did out of sleepe abray,
I found her not where I her left whyleare, But thought she wandred was, or gone
astray.

I cal'd her loud, I sought her farre and
neare;

But no where could her find, nor tydings of her heare.'

XXXVII

When Scudamour those heavie tydings
heard,

His hart was thrild with point of deadly
feare;

Ne in his face or bloud or life appeared,
But senselesse stood, like to a mazed steare That yet of mortall stroke the stound doth
beare;

Till Glauce thus: 'Faire sir, be nought dis-
mayd

With needlesse dread, till certaintie ye
heare:

For yet she may be safe though somewhat
strayd;

Its best to hope the best, though of the worst affrayd.'

XXXVIII

Nathlesse he hardly of her chearefull
speech

Did comfort take, or in his troubled sight Shew'd change of better cheare, so sore a breach

That sudden newes had made into his
spright;

Till Britomart him fairely thus behight:
'Great cause of sorrow certes, sir, ye have:
But comfort take: for by this heavens light
I vow, you dead or living not to leave, Till I her find, and wreake on him that did her reave.'

XXXIX

Therewith he rested, and well pleased was.
So peace being confirm'd amongst them all,

They tooke their steeds, and forward thence did pas

Unto some resting place, which mote be-
fall,

All being guided by Sir Artegall:
Where goodly solace was unto them made,
And dayly feasting both in bowre and hall, Untill that they their wounds well healed
had,

And wearie limmes recur'd after late usage bad.

XL

In all which time, Sir Artegall made way Unto the love of noble Britomart,

And with meeke service and much suit did
lay

Continuall siege unto her gentle hart:
Which being whylome launcht with lovely
dart,

More eath was new impression to receive,
How ever she her paynd with womanish art To hide her wound, that none might it perceive:

Vaine is the art that seekes it selfe for to deceive.

XLI

So well he woo'd her, and so well he wrought her,

With faire entreatie and sweet blandish-
ment,

That at the length unto a bay he brought her,
So as she to his speeches was content

To lend an eare, and softly to relent.
At last, through many vowes which forth he pour'd,

And many othes, she yeilded her consent
To be his love, and take him for her lord, Till they with mariage meet might finish that accord.

XLII

Tho, when they had long time there taken
rest,

Sir Artegall, who all this while was bound Upon an hard adventure yet in quest, Fit time for him thence to depart it found,
To follow that which he did long propound,
And unto her his congee came to take.
But her therewith full sore displeas'd he
found,

And loth to leave her late betrothed make,
Her dearest love full loth so shortly to forsake

XLIII

Yet he with strong perswasions her asswaged,
And wonne her will to suffer him depart;
For which his faith with her he fast engaged,
And thousand voves from bottome of his
hart,
That all so soone as he by wit or art Could that atchieve, whereto he did aspire,
He unto her would speedily revert:
No longer space thereto he did desire, But till the horned moone three courses did expire.

XLIV

With which she for the present was appeased,
And yeelded leave, how ever malcontent
She inly were, and in her mind displeased.
So, early in the morrow next, he went Forth on his way, to which he was ybent;
Ne wight him to attend, or way to guide, As whylome was the custome ancient Mongst knights, when on adventures they did ride,
Save that she algates him a while accompanide.

XLV

And by the way she sundry purpose found
Of this or that, the time for to delay,
And of the perils whereto he was bound,
The feare whereof seem'd much her to affray:
But all she did was but to weare out day.
Full oftentimes she leave of him did take;
And eft againe deviz'd some what to say,
Which she forgot, whereby excuse to make:
So loth she was his companie for to forsake.

XLVI

At last, when all her speeches she had
spent,
And new occasion fayld her more to find,
She left him to his fortunes government,
And backe returned with right heavie mind
To Scudamour, who she had left behind:
With whom she went to seeke faire Amoret,
Her second care, though in another kind:
For vertues onely sake, which doth beget True love and faithfull friendship, she by her did set-

XLVII

Backe to that desert forrest they retyred,
Where sorie Britomart had lost her late;
There they her sought, and every where inquired,
Where they might tydings get of her estate:
Yet found they none. But by what hap-lesse fate
Or hard misfortune she was thence convayd,
And stolne away from her beloved mate, Were long to tell; therefore I here will
stay
Untill another tyde, that I it finish may.

CANTO VII

Amoret rapt by greedie Lust Belphebe saves from dread:
The squire her loves, and being blam'd,
His dayes in dole doth lead.

I

GREAT God of Love, that with thy cruell
darts Doest conquer greatest conquerors on
ground,
And setst thy kingdome in the captive harts
Of kings and keasars, to thy service bound,
What glorie or what guerdon hast thou
found
In feeble ladies tyranning so sore,
And adding anguish to the bitter wound, With which their lives thou lanchedst long
afore,
By heaping stormes of trouble on them daily more?

II

So whylome didst thou to faire Florimell;
And so and so to noble Britomart:
So doest thou now to her of whom I tell,
The lovely Amoret, whose gentle hart Thou martyrest with sorow and with smart,
In salvage forrests and in deserts wide,
With beares and tygers taking heavie part,
Withouten comfort, and withouten guide, That pittie is to heare the perils which she tride.

III

So soone as she with that brave Britonesse Had left that turneyment for beauties prise, They travel'd long; that now for weari-
nesse,
Both of the way and warlike exercise,

Both through a forest ryding did devise T' alight, and rest their wearie limbs awhile.

There heavie sleepe the eye-lids did surprise
Of Britomart, after long tedious toyle, That did her passed paines in quiet rest assoyle.

IV

The whiles faire Amoret, of nought affeard, Walkt through the wood, for pleasure or for need;

When suddenly behind her backe she heard
One rushing forth out of the thickest weed, That ere she backe could turne to taken
heed,

Had unawares her snatched up from
ground.

Feebly she shriekt, but so feebly indeed, That Britomart heard not the shrilling
sound,

There where through weary travel she lay sleeping sound.

V

It was to weet a wilde and salvage man, Yet was no man, but onely like in shape,
And eke in stature higher by a span, All overgrowne with haire, that could awhape

An hardy hart, and his wide mouth did gape

With huge great teeth, like to a tusked
bore:

For he liv'd all on ravin and on rape
Of men and beasts; and fed on fleshly gore, The signe whereof yet stain'd his bloody lips afore.

VI

His neather lip was not like man nor beast, But like a wide deepe poke, downe hanging
low,

In which he wont the reliekes of his feast And cruell spoyle, which he had spard, to stow:

And over it his huge great nose did grow, Full dreadfully empurpled all with blood;
And downe both sides two wide long eares did glow,

And raught downe to his waste, when up he
stood,

More great then th' eares of elephants by Indus flood.

His wast was with a wreath of yvie greene Engirt about, ne other garment wore:

For all his haire was like a garment seene;
And in his hand a tall young oake he bore, Whose knottie snags were sharpened all
afore,

And beath'd in fire for steele to be in sted.
But whence he was, or of what wombe ybore,

Of beasts, or of the earth, I have not red: But certes was with milke of wolves and tygres fed.

VIII

This ugly creature in his armes her snatcht, And through the forrest bore her quite
away,

With briers and bushes all to-rent and scratcht;

Ne care he had, ne pittie of the pray,
Which many a knight had sought so many a
day.

He stayed not, but in his armes her bearing

Ran, till he came to th' end of all his
way,

Unto his cave, farre from all peoples hearing,

And there he threw her in, nought feeling, ne nought fearing.

IX

For she, deare ladie, all the way was dead, Whilst he in armes her bore; but when she felt

Her selfe downe soust, she waked out of
dread

Streight into grieffe, that her deare hart nigh swelt,

And eft gan into tender teares to melt.
Then when she lookt about, and nothing
found

But darknesse and dread horroure, where she dwelt,

She almost fell againe into a swound, Ne wist whether above she were, or under ground.

X

With that she heard some one close by her
side

Sighing and sobbing sore, as if the paine
Her tender hart in peeces would divide:

Which she long listning, softly askt againe

What mister wight it was that so did
 plaine?
 To whom thus aunswer'd was: 'Ah,
 wretched wight!
 That seekes to know anothers grieffe in
 vaine,
 Unweeting of thine owne like haplesse
 plight:
 Selfe to forget to mind another, is oversight.'

XI

'Aye me!' said she, 'where am I, or with whom?
 Emong the living, or emong the dead?
 What shall of me, unhappy maid, become?
 Shall death be th' end, or ought else worse, ahead.'
 'Unhappy mayd,' then answer'd she, 'whose
 dread
 Untride is lesse then when thou shalt it try:
 Death is to him that wretched life doth
 lead,
 Both grace and gaine; but he in hell doth
 lie,
 That lives a loathed life, and wishing cannot die.'

XII

'This dismall day hath thee a caytive
 made,
 And vassall to the vilest wretch alive,
 Whose cursed usage and ungodly trade
 The heavens abhorre, and into darknesse
 drive.
 For on the spoile of women he doth live, Whose bodies chaste, when ever in his
 powre
 He may them catch, unable to gainestrive, He with his shamefull lust doth first de-
 flowre,
 And afterwards themselves doth cruelly devoure.'

XIII

'Now twenty daies, by which the sonnes of
 men Divide their works, have past through heven sheene,
 Since I was brought into this dolefull den; During which space these sory eies have seen Seaven women by him slaine, and eaten clene.
 And now no more for him but I alone,

And this old woman, here remaining beene; Till thou cam'st hither to augment our
 mone;
 And of us three to morrow he will sure eate one.'

XIV

'Ah! dreadfull tidings which thou doest declare,' Quoth she, 'of all that ever hath bene
 knownen!
 Full many great calamities and rare
 This feeble brest endured hath, but none Equall to this, where ever I have gone.
 But what are you, whom like unlucky lot Hath linckt with me in the same chaine at-tone?'
 'To tell,' quoth she, 'that which ye see,
 needs not;
 A wofull wretched maid, of God and man forgot.'

XV

'But what I was it irkes me to reherse; Daughter unto a lord of high degree, That joyd in happy peace, till Fates perverse
 With guilefull Love did secretly agree,
 To overthrow my state and dignitie.
 It was my lot to love a gentle swaine, Yet was he but a squire of low degree;
 Yet was he meet, unlesse mine eye did
 faine,
 By any ladies side for leman to have laine.'

XVI

'But, for his meannesse and disparagement, My sire, who me too dearely well did love, Unto my choise by no meanes would assent,
 But often did my folly fowle reprove.
 Yet nothing could my fixed mind remove,
 But whether willed or nilled friend or foe,
 I me resolv'd the utmost end to prove,
 And rather then my love abandon so, Both sire, and friends, and all for ever to forgo.'

XVII

'Thenceforth I sought by secret meanes to worke
 Time to my will, and from his wrathfull
 sight
 To hide th' intent which in my heart did lurke,
 Till I thereto had all things ready dight.'

So on a day, unweeting unto wight,
I with that squire agreede away to flit,
And in a privy place, betwixt us light,
Within a grove appointed him to meete;
To which I boldly came upon my feeble feete.

XVIII

‘But ah! unhappy houre me thither
brought:
For in that place where I him thought to
find,
There was I found, contrary to my thought,
Of this accursed carle of hellish kind,
The shame of men, and plague of woman-
kind;
Who trussing me, as eagle doth his pray, Me hether brought with him, as swift as
wind,
Where yet untouched till this present day,
I rest his wretched thrall, the sad Æmylia.’

XIX

‘Ah! sad Æmylia,’ then sayd Amoret, ‘Thy ruefull plight I pittie as mine owne.
But read to me, by what devise or wit Hast thou, in all this time, from him un-
knowne
Thine honor sav’d, though into thraldome
throwne?’
‘Through helpe,’ quoth she, ‘of this old woman here
I have so done, as she to me hath showne:
For ever, when he burnt in lustfull fire,
She in my stead supplide his bestiall desire.’

XX

Thus of their evils as they did discourse,
And each did other much bewaile and mone, Loe! where the villaine selfe, their sor-rowes sourse,
Came to the cave, and rolling thence the
stone,
Which wont to stop the mouth thereof, that none Might issue forth, came rudely rushing in,
And spredding over all the flore alone,
Gan dight him selfe unto his wonted sinne; Which ended, then his bloody banquet should beginne.

XXI

Which when as fearefull Amoret perceived,
She staid not the utmost end thereof to try,

But like a ghastly gelt, whose wits are reaved,
Ran forth in hast with hideous outcry,
For horroure of his shamefull villany.
But after her full lightly he uprose,
And her pursu’d as fast as she did flie:
Full fast she flies, and farre afore him goes, Ne feesles the thorns and thickets pricke her tender toes.

XXII

Nor hedge, nor ditch, nor hill, nor dale she staies,
But overleapes them all, like robucke light,
And through the thickest makes her nigh-est waies;
And evermore when with regardfull sight
She, looking backe, espies that griesly wight Approching nigh, she gins to mend her pace, And makes her feare a spur to hast her
flight:
More swift then Myrrh’ or Daphne in her
race,
Or any of the Thracian Nimphes in salvage chase.

XXIII

Long so she fled, and so he follow’d long;
Ne living aide for her on earth appeares, But if the heavens helpe to redresse her
wrong,
Moved with pity of her plenteous teares.
It fortun’d, Belphebe with her peares, The woody nimphs, and with that lovely
boy,
Was hunting then the libbards and the beares,
In these wild woods, as was her wonted joy,
To banish sloth, that oft doth noble mindes annoy.

XXIV

It so befell, as oft it fals in chace,
That each of them from other sundred
were,
And that same gentle squire arriv’d in
place
Where this same cursed caytive did ap-
peare,
Pursuing that faire lady full of feare;
And now he her quite overtaken had;
And now he her away with him did beare Under his arme, as seeming wondrous glad,
That by his grenning laughter mote farre off be rad.

XXV

Which dreery sight the gentle squire espy-
ing,

Doth hast to crosse him by the nearest way,
Led with that wofull ladies piteous crying, And him assailes with all the might he
may:

Yet will not he the lovely spoile downe lay,
But with his craggy club in his right hand Defends him selfe, and saves his gotten
pray.

Yet had it bene right hard him to with-
stand,

But that he was full light and nimble on the land.

XXVI

Thereto the villaine used craft in fight;
For ever when the squire his javelin
shooke,

He held the lady forth before him right,
And with her body, as a buekler, broke The puissance of his intended stroke.
And if it chaunst, (as needs it must in fight)

Whilest he on him was greedy to be wroke,
That any little blow on her did light, Then would he laugh aloud, and gather great delight.

XXVII

Which subtill sleight did him encumber much,

And made him oft, when he would strike, forbare;

For hardly could he come the earle to touch,

But that he her must hurt, or hazard neare:
Yet he his hand so carefully did beare,
That at the last he did himselfe attaine,
And therein left the pike head of his speare A streame of coleblacke bloud thence gusht
amaine,

That all her silken garments did with bloud bestaine.

XXVIII

With that he threw her rudely on the flore,
And laying both his hands upon his glave, With dreadfull strokes let drive at him so
sore,

That forst him flie abacke, himselfe to save:
Yet he therewith so felly still did rave,
That searse the squire his hand could once upreare,

But, for advantage, ground unto him gave.
Tracing and traversing, now here, now there;
For bootlesse thing it was to think such blowes to beare.

XXIX

Whilest thus in battell they embusied were,
Belphebe, raunging in that Forrest wide,
The hideous noise of their huge strokes did
heare,

And drew thereto, making her eare her
guide.

Whom when that theefe approaching nigh
espide,

With bow in hand, and arrowes ready bent,
He by his former combate would not bide,
But fled away with giastly dreriment, Well knowing her to be his deaths sole instrument.

XXX

Whom seeing flie, she speedily poursewed
With winged feete, as nimble as the winde,
And ever in her bow she ready shewed
The arrow to his deadly marke desynde:
As when Latonaes daughter, cruell kynde, In vengeance of her mothers great dis-
grace,

With fell despight her cruell arrowes tynde Gainst wofull Niobes unhappy race, That all the gods did mone her miserable case.

XXXI

So well she sped her and so far she ventred,
That ere unto his hellish den he raught,
Even as he ready was there to have entred, She sent an arrow forth, with mighty
draught,

That in the very dore him overeaught,
And in his nape arriving, through it thrild His greedy throte, therewith in two distraught,

That all his vital spirites thereby spild,
And all his hairy brest with gory bloud was fild.

XXXII

Whom when on ground she groveling saw to rowle,

She ran in hast his life to have bereft:
But ere she could him reach, the sinfull
sowle,

Having his carrion corse quite sencelesse
left,

Was fled to hell, sureharg'd with spoile and theft.
 Yet over him she there long gazing stood,
 And oft admir'd his monstrous shape, and oft His mighty limbs, whilst all with filthy bloud
 The place there overflowne seemd like a sodaine flood.

XXXIII

Thenceforth she past into his dreadfull den, Where nought but darkesome dreriness she found, Ne creature saw, but hearkned now and then Some litle whispering, and soft groning sound.
 With that she askt, what ghosts there under ground Lay hid in horrour of eternall night;
 And bad them, if so be they were not bound,
 To come and shew themselves before the light,
 Now freed from feare and danger of that dismall wight.

XXXIV

Then forth the sad Emylia issewed, Yet trembling every joynt through former feare;
 And after her the hag, there with her mewed,
 A foule and lothsome creature, did appeare;
 A leman fit for such a lover deare:
 That mov'd Belphebe her no lesse to hate,
 Then for to rue the others heavy cheare;
 Of whom she gan enquire of her estate:
 Who all to her at large, as hapned, did relate.

XXXV

Thence she them brought toward the place where late
 She left the gentle squire with Amoret:
 There she him found by that new lovely mate,
 Who lay the whiles in swoune, full sadly set,
 From her faire eyes wiping the deawy wet,
 Which softly stild, and kissing them atweene,

And handling soft the hurts which she did get:
 For of that carle she sorely bruz'd had benee, Als of his owne rash hand one wound was to be seene.

XXXVI

Which when she saw, with sodaine glauncing eye, Her noble heart with sight thereof was fild
 With deepe disdain, and great indignity, That in her wrath she thought them both have thrild
 With that selfe arrow which the carle had kild:
 Yet held her wrathfull hand from vengeance sore,
 But drawing nigh, ere he her well beheld,
 'Is this the faith?' she said, — and said no more,
 But turnd her face, and fled away for evermore.

XXXVII

He, seeing her depart, arose up light, Right sore agrieved at her sharpe reproofe,
 And follow'd fast: but when he came in sight,
 He durst not nigh approach, but kept aloofe,
 For dread of her displeasures utmost proofe.
 And evermore, when he did grace entreat,
 And framed speaches fit for his behoofe,
 Her mortall arrowes she at him did threat,
 And forst him backe with fowle dishonor to retreat.

XXXVIII

At last, when long he follow'd had in vaine,
 Yet found no ease of grieffe, nor hope of grace, Unto those woods he turned backe againe,
 Full of sad anguish and in heavy case:
 And finding there fit solitary place For wofull wight, chose out a gloomy glade, Where hardly eye mote see bright heavens face,
 For mossy trees, which covered all with shade
 And sad melancholy: there he his cabin made.

XXXIX

His wonted warlike weapons all he broke,
 And threw away, with vow to use no more,

Ne thenceforth ever strike in battell stroke, Ne ever word to speake to woman more;
 But in that wilderness, of men forelore,
 And of the wicked world forgotten quight,
 His hard mishap in dolor to deplore, And wast his wretched daies in wofull
 plight;
 So on him selfe to wreake his follies owne
 despight.

XL

And eke his garment, to be thereto meet,
 He wilfully did cut and shape anew;
 And his faire lockes, that wont with ointment sweet
 To be embalm'd, and sweat out dainty dew,
 He let to grow and griesly to conerew, Uncomb'd, uncurl'd, and carelesly unshed;
 That in short time his face they overgrew,
 And over all his shoulders did dispred, That who he whilome was, uneth was to be red.

XLI

There he continued in this carefull plight, Wretchedly wearing out his youthly yeares, Through wilfull penury consumed quight,
 That like a pined ghost he soone appears.
 For other food then that wilde Forrest
 beares,
 Ne other drinke there did he ever tast, Then running water, tempred with his
 teares,
 The more his weakened body so to wast:
 That out of all mens knowledge he was worne at last.

XLII

For on a day, by fortune as it fell, His owne deare lord, Prince Arthure, came that way,
 Seeking adventures, where he mote heare
 tell;
 And as he through the wandring wood did
 stray,
 Having espide this cabin far away,
 He to it drew, to weet who there did wonne; Weening therein some holy hermit lay,
 That did resort of sinfull people shonne;
 Or else some woodman shrowded there from scorching sunne.

XLIII

Arriving there, he found this wretched man, Spending his daies in dolour and despaire,

And through long fasting woxen pale and
 wan,
 All overgrown with rude and rugged haire;
 That albeit his owne deare squire he were,
 Yet he him knew not, ne aviz'd at all, But like strange wight, whom he had seene no where,
 Saluting him, gan into speach to fall,
 And pittie much his plight, that liv'd like outcast thrall.

XLIV

But to his speach he aunswered no whit, But stood still mute, as if he had beene dum, Ne signe of sence did shew, ne common
 wit,
 As one with grieffe and anguise overcum,
 And unto every thing did aunswere mum:
 And ever when the Prince unto him spake,
 He louted lowly, as did him becum,
 And humble homage did unto him make, Midst sorrow shewing joyous semblance for his sake.

XLV

At which his uncouth guise and usage quaint
 The Prince did wonder much, yet could not ghesse
 The cause of that his sorrowfull constraint;
 Yet weend by secret signes of manlinesse, Which close appeared in that rude brutish-
 nesse,
 That he whilome some gentle swaine had
 beene, Traind up in feats of armes and knightli-
 nesse;
 Which he observ'd, by that he him had
 seene
 To weld his naked sword, and try the edges keene;

XLVI

And eke by that he saw on every tree How he the name of one engraven had,
 Which likly was his liefest love to be,
 For whom he now so sorely was bestad;
 Which was by him BELPHEBE rightly rad.
 Yet who was that Belphebe he ne wist;
 Yet saw he often how he wexed glad,
 When he it heard, and how the ground he
 kist,
 Wherein it written was, and how himselfe he blist.

XLVII

Tho, when he long had marked his demeanor,
And saw that all he said and did was vaine, Ne ought mote make him change his wonted tenor,
Ne ought mote ease or mitigate his paine,
He left him there in languor to remaine, Till time for him should remedy provide,
And him restore to former grace againe.
Which for it is too long here to abide,
I will deferre the end untill another tide.

CANTO VIII

The gentle squire recovers grace :
Sclaunder her guests doth staine :
Corflambo chaseth Placidias,
And is by Arthure slaine.

I

WELL said the wiseman, now prov'd true by this,
Which to this gentle squire did happen late,
That the displeasure of the mighty is Then death it selfe more dread and desperate.
For naught the same may calme ne miti-
gate,
Till time the tempest doe thereof delay With sufferaunce soft, which rigour can abate,
And have the sterne remembrance wypt
away
Of bitter thoughts, which deepe therein in-fixed lay.

II

Like as it fell to this unhappy boy, Whose tender heart the faire Belphebe had With one sterne looke so daunted, that no
joy
In all his life, which afterwards he lad,
He ever tasted; but with penaunce sad
And pensive sorrow pind and wore away, Ne ever laught, ne once shew'd countenance glad;
But alwaies wept and wailed night and day,
As blasted bloosme through heat doth languish and decay.

III

Till on a day, as in his wonted wise
His doole he made, there chaunst a turtle dove

To come where he his dolors did devise,
That likewise late had lost her dearest love, Which losse her made like passion also
prove.

Who seeing his sad plight, her tender heart
With deare compassion deeply did emmove,
That she gan mone his undeserved smart,
And with her dolefull accent beare with him a part.

IV

Shee sitting by him, as on ground he lay,
Her mournfull notes full piteously did
frame,
And thereof made a lamentable lay,
So sensibly compyl'd, that in the same Him seemed oft he heard his owne right
name.
With that he forth would poure so plenteous teares,
And beat his breast unworthy of such blame,
And knocke his head, and rend his rugged
heares,
That could have perst the hearts of tigris and of beares.

V

Thus, long this gentle bird to him did use Withouten dread of perill to repaire Unto his wonne, and with her mournfull
muse
Him to recomfort in his greatest care, That much did ease his mourning and mis-
fare:
And every day, for guerdon of her song, He part of his small feast to her would share;
That, at the last, of all his woe and wrong Companion she became, and so continued long.

VI

Upon a day, as she him sate beside,
By chance he certaine miniments forth
drew,
Which yet with him as relickes did abide Of all the bounty which Belphebe threw On him, whilst goodly grace she did him
shew:
Amongst the rest a jewell rich he found,
That was a ruby of right perfect hew, Shap'd like a heart yet bleeding of the
wound,
And with a little golden chaine about it bound.

The same he tooke, and with a riband new,
 In which his ladies colours were, did bind
 About the turtles necke, that with the vew Did greatly solace his engrieved mind.
 All unawares the bird, when she did find Her selfe so deekt, her nimble wings displaid,
 And flew away, as lightly as the wind:
 Which sodaine accident him much dismaid, And looking after long, did marke which way she straid.

VIII

But when as long he looked had in vaine,
 Yet saw her forward still to make her flight,
 His weary eie returnd to him againe,
 Full of discomfort and disquiet plight,
 That both his juell he had lost so light,
 And eke his deare companion of his care.
 But that sweet bird departing flew forth
 right Through the wide region of the wastfull
 aire,
 Untill she came where wonned his Belphebe faire.

IX

There found she her (as then it did betide)
 Sitting in covert shade of arbors sweet, After late weary toile, which she had tride In salvage chase, to rest as seem'd her
 meet.
 There she alighting, fell before her feet,
 And gan to her her mournfull plaint to
 make,
 As was her wont, thinking to let her weet
 The great tormenting grieve that for her
 sake
 Her gentle squire through her displeasure did pertake.

She her beholding with attentive eye,
 At length did marke about her purple brest That precious juell, which she formerly Had knowne right well, with colourd rib-bands drest:
 Therewith she rose in hast, and her adrest
 With ready hand it to have reft away:
 But the swift bird obeyd not her behest, But swarv'd aside, and there againe did
 stay;
 She follow'd her, and thought againe it to assay.

XI

And ever when she nigh approcht, the dove Would flit a litle forward, and then stay, Till she drew neare, and then againe re-
 move;
 So tempting her still to pursue the pray,
 And still from her escaping soft away:
 Till that at length into that forrest wide
 She drew her far, and led with slow delay.
 In th' end she her unto that place did guide, Whereas that wofull man in languor did abide.

XII

Eftsoones she flew unto his fearelesse hand,
 And there a piteous ditty new devis'd,
 As if she would have made her understand His sorrowes cause, to be of her despis'd.
 Whom when she saw in wretched weedes disguiz'd,
 With heary glib deform'd, and meiger face, Like ghost late risen from his grave agryz'd,
 She knew him not, but pittied much his
 case,
 And wisht it were in her to doe him any grace.

XIII

He her beholding, at her feet downe fell,
 And kist the ground on which her sole did
 tread,
 And washt the same with water, which did
 well
 From his moist eies, and like two streames procead;
 Yet spake no word whereby she might aread What mister wight he was, or what he
 ment;
 But as one daunted with her presence
 dread,
 Onely few ruefull lookes unto her sent,
 As messengers of his true meaning and intent.

XIV

Yet nathemore his meaning she ared,
 But wondred much at his so selcouth case,
 And by his persons seeret seemlyhed Well weend that he had beene some man of place,
 Before misfortune did his hew deface:
 That, being mov'd with ruth, she thus be-
 spake:

' Ah, wofull man ! what Heavens hard disgrace,
Or wrath of cruell wight on thee ywrake, Or selfe disliked life, doth thee thus wretched make ?

XV

' If Heaven, then none may it redresse or
blame,
Sith to his powre we all are subject borne;
If wrathfull wight, then fowle rebuke and
shame

Be theirs, that have so cruell thee forlorne;
But if through inward grieffe or wilfull
scorne

Of life it be, then better doe advise;
For he whose daies in wilfull woe are
worne,

The grace of his Creator doth despise, That will not use his gifts for thanklesse nigardise.'

XVI

When so he heard her say, eftsoones he
brake

His sodaine silence, which he long had pent,
And sighing inly deepe, her thus bespake:

' Then have they all themselves against me
bent:

For Heaven, first author of my languish-
ment,

Envyng my too great felicity, Did closely with a cruell one consent To cloud my daies in dolefull misery,

And make me loath this life, still longing for to die.

XVII

' Ne any but your selfe, O dearest dred, Hath done this wrong, to wreake on worthlesse wight

Your high displeasure, through misdeeming
bred:

That, when your pleasure is to deeme aright, Ye may redresse, and me restore to light.'
Which sory words her mightie hart did mate

With mild regard, to see his ruefull plight,
That her inburning wrath she gan abate, And him receiv'd againe to former favours state.

XVIII

In which he long time afterwards did lead
An happie life with grace and good accord,

Fearlesse of fortunes change or envies
dread,
And eke all mindlesse of his owne deare
lord,

The noble Prince, who never heard one
word

Of tydings, what did unto him betide,
Or what good fortune did to him afford,
But through the endlesse world did wander
wide,

Him seeking evermore, yet no where him deseride.

XIX

Till on a day, as through that wood he rode,

He chaunst to come where those two ladies
late,

Æmylia and Amoret, abode,
Both in full sad and sorrowfull estate;
The one right feeble through the evill rate Of food, which in her duresse she had
found:

The other almost dead and desperate Through her late hurts, and through that haplesse wound

With which the squire in her defence her sore astound.

XX

Whom when the Prince beheld, he gan to
rew

The evill case in which those ladies lay;
But most was moved at the piteous vew,
Of Amoret, so neare unto decay, That her great daunger did him much
dismay.

Eftsoones that pretious liquour forth he
drew,

Which he in store about him kept alway,
And with few drops thereof did softly dew Her wounds, that unto strength restor'd her soone anew.

XXI

Tho, when they both recovered were right
well,

He gan of them inquire, what evill guide Them thether brought, and how their harnes befell.

To whom they told all that did them be-
tide,

And how from thraldome vile they were untide

Of that same wicked earle, by virgins hond;

Whose bloudie corse they shew'd him there beside,
And eke his cave, in which they both were
bond:
At which he wondred much, when all those signes he fond.

XXII

And evermore he greatly did desire To know, what virgin did them thence unbind;
And oft of them did earnestly inquire,
Where was her won, and how he mote her
find.
But when as nought according to his mind
He could outlearne, he them from ground did reare, (No service lothsome to a gentle kind)
And on his warlike beast them both did beare, Himselfe by them on foot, to succour them from feare.

XXIII

So when that Forrest they had passed well,
A litle cotage farre away they spide, To which they drew, ere night upon them
fell;
And entring in, found none therein abide,
But one old woman sitting there beside,
Upon the ground, in ragged rude attyre,
With filthy lockes about her scattered wide, Gnawing her nayles for felnesse and for yre,
And there out sucking venime to her parts entyre.

XXIV

A foule and loathly creature sure in sight,
And in conditions to be loath'd no lesse:
For she was stuff with rancour and despight
Up to the throat; that oft with bitternesse It forth would breake, and gush in great excesse,
Pouring out streames of poyson and of gall Gainst all that truth or vertue doe professe; Whom she with leasings lewdly did miscall,
And wickedly backbite: her name men Sclaunder call.

XXV

Her nature is, all goodnesse to abuse,
And causelesse crimes continually to frame,
With which she guiltlesse persons may accuse,
And steale away the crowne of their good
name;

Ne ever knight so bold, ne ever dame So chast and loyall liv'd, but she would strive
With forged cause them falsely to defame;
Ne ever thing so well was doen alive, But she with blame would blot, and of due praise deprive.

XXVI

Her words were not, as common words are
ment,
T' expresse the meaning of the inward
mind,
But noysome breath, and poysnous spirit
sent From inward parts, with cancred malice lind,
And breathed forth with blast of bitter
wind;
Which passing through the eares would pierce the hart,
And wound the soule it selfe with grieve
unkind:
For like the stings of aspes, that kill with
smart,
Her spightfull words did pricke and wound the inner part.

XXVII

Such was that hag, unmeet to host such guests,
Whom greatest princes court would welcome fayne;
But neede, that answers not to all requests, Bad them not looke for better entertayne;
And eke that age despysed nicenesse vaine, Enur'd to hardnesse and to homely fare, Which them to warlike discipline did trayne,
And manly limbs endur'd with litle care Against all hard mishaps and fortunelesse misfare.

XXVIII

Then all that evening, welcommed with cold
And chearelesse hunger, they together
spent;
Yet found no fault, but that the hag did scold
And rayle at them with grudgefull discon-
tent,
For lodging there without her owne consent:
Yet they endured all with patience milde,

And unto rest themselves all onely lent; Regardlesse, of that queane so base and vilde
 To be unjustly bland, and bitterly revilde.

XXIX

Here well I weene, when as these rimes be
 red
 With misregard, that some rash witted
 wight,
 Whose looser thought will lightly be mis-
 led,
 These gentle ladies will misdeeme too light,
 For thus conversing with this noble knight;
 Sith now of dayes such temperance is rare And hard to finde, that heat of youthfull
 spright
 For ought will from his greedie pleasure
 spare:
 More hard for hungry steed t' abstaine from pleasant lare.

XXX

But antique age, yet in the infancie
 Of time, did live then like an innocent,
 In simple truth and blamelesse chastitie, Ne then of guile had made experiment,
 But voide of vile and treacherous intent, Held vertue for it selfe in souveraine awe:
 Then loyall love had royall regiment,
 And each unto his lust did make a lawe, From all forbidden things his liking to withdraw.

XXXI

The lyon there did with the lambe consort,
 And eke the dove sate by the faulecons side, Ne each of other feared fraud or tort,
 But did in safe securitie abide,
 Withouten perill of the stronger pride:
 But when the world woxe old, it woxe warre old (Whereof it hight) and having shortly tride
 The traines of wit, in wickednesse woxe
 bold,
 And dared of all sinnes the secrets to unfold.

XXXII

Then beautie, which was made to represent
 The great Creatours owne resemblance
 bright,
 Unto abuse of lawlesse lust was lent,
 And made the baite of bestiall delight:

Then faire grew foule, and foule grew faire
 in sight,
 And that which wont to vanquish God and
 man
 Was made the vassall of the victors might; Then did her glorious flowre wex dead and
 wan, Despid and troden downe of all that over-ran.

XXXIII

And now it is so utterly decayd,
 That any bud thereof doth scarce remaine, But if few plants, preserv'd through heavenly ayd,
 In princes court doe hap to sprout againe, Dew'd with her drops of bountie souveraine, Which from that goodly glorious flowre
 proceed,
 Sprung of the auncient stocke of princes
 straine,
 Now th' onely remnant of that royall breed, Whose noble kind at first was sure of heavenly seed.

XXXIV

Tho, soone as day discovered heavens face
 To sinfull men with darknes overdight, This gentle crew gan from their eye-lids
 chace
 The drowzie humour of the dampish night,
 And did themselves unto their journey dight.
 So forth they yode, and forward softly
 paced,
 That them to view had bene an uncouth
 sight,
 How all the way the Prince on footpace
 traced,
 The ladies both on horse, together fast embraced.

XXXV

Soone as they thence departed were afore,
 That shamefull hag, the slaunder of her sexe,
 Them follow'd fast, and them reviled sore, Him calling theefe, them whores; that much did vexe
 His noble hart: thereto she did annexe False crimes and facts, such as they never
 ment,
 That those two ladies much asham'd did wexe:
 The more did she pursue her lewd intent,
 And rayl'd and rag'd, till she had all her poyson spent.

XXXVI

At last, when they were passed out of sight, Yet she did not her spightfull speach forbear,
But after them did barke, and still back-bite,

Though there were none her hatefull words
to heare:
Like as a curre doth felly bite and teare
The stone which passed straunger at him
threw;

So she them seeing past the reach of eare, Against the stones and trees did rayle
anew,

Till she had duld the sting which in her tonges end grew.

XXXVII

They, passing forth, kept on their readie
way,

With easie steps so soft as foot could stryde, Both for great feeblesse, which did oft as-
say

Faire Amoret, that scarcely she could ryde, And eke through heauey armes, which sore
annoyd

The Prince on foot, not wanted so to fare; Whose steadie hand was faine his steede to
guyde,

And all the way from trotting hard to
spare;

So was his toyle the more, the more that was his care.

XXXVIII

At length they spide where towards them with speed

A squire came gallopping, as he would flie, Bearing a litle dwarfe before his steed,
That all the way full loud for aide did erie, That seem'd his shrikes would rend the brasen skie:

Whom after did a mightie man pursew, Ryding upon a dromedare on hie,
Of stature huge, and horrible of hew,
That would have maz'd a man his dreadfull face to vew.

XXXIX

For from his fearefull eyes two fierie
beames,

More sharpe then points of needles, did proceede,

Shooting forth farre away two flaming
streames,

Full of sad powre, that poysonous bale did breede

To all that on him lookt without good
heed,

And secretly his enemies did slay:
Like as the basiliske, of serpents seede, From powrefull eyes close venim doth convey

Into the lookers hart, and killeth farre away.

XL

He all the way did rage at that same squire,
And after him full many threatnings threw,
With curses vaine in his avengefull ire:

But none of them (so fast away he flew) Him overtooke before he came in vew.

Where when he saw the Prince in armour
bright,

He cald to him aloud, his case to rew, And rescue him through succour of his
might,

From that his cruell foe, that him pursewd in sight.

XLI

Eftsoones the Prince tooke downe those ladies twaine

From loftie steede, and mounting in their stead,

Came to that squire, yet trembling every
vaine:

Of whom he gan enquire his cause of dread:
Who as he gan the same to him aread,

Loe! hard behind his backe his foe was
prest,

With dreadfull weapon aymed at his head,
That unto death had doen him unredrest, Had not the noble Prince his readie stroke represt.

XLII

Who, thrusting boldly twixt him and the blow,

The burden of the deadly brunt did beare Upon his shield, which lightly he did throw Over his head, before the harme came
neare.

Nathlesse it feil with so despiteous dreare
And heauey sway, that hard unto his crowne
The shield it drove, and did the covering
reare:

Therewith both squire and dwarfe did tomble downe

Unto the earth, and lay long while in senselesse swowne.

XLIII

Whereat the Prince full wrath, his strong right hand
In full avengement heaved up on hie,
And stroke the Pagan with his steely brand So sore, that to his saddle bow thereby He bowed low, and so a while did lie:
And sure, had not his massie yron mace Betwixt him and his hurt bene happily,
It would have eleft him to the girding place;
Yet, as it was, it did astomish him long
space.

XLIV

But when he to himselfe returnd againe,
All full of rage he gan to curse and swaere, And vow by Mahonne that he should be
slaine.
With that his murdrous mace he up did
reare,
That seemed nought the souse thereof could beare,
And therewith smote at him with all his
might.
But ere that it to him approched neare,
The royall child, with readie quicke fore-
sight,
Did shun the prooffe thereof and it avoyded
light.

XLV

But ere his hand he could recure againe,
To ward his bodie from the balefull stound, He smote at him with all his might and
maine,
So furiously, that, ere he wist, he found His head before him tombling on the
ground.
The whiles his babling tongue did yet blaspheme
And curse his god, that did him so con-
found;
The whiles his life ran fourth in blouddie
streame,
His soule descended downe into the Stygian reame.

XLVI

Which when that squire beheld, he woxe full glad To see his foe breath out his spright in
vaine:
But that same dwarfe right sorie seem'd and sad,
And howld aloud to see his lord there slaine,

And rent his haire and scratcht his face for paine.
Then gan the Prince at leasure to inquire Of all the accident, there hapned plaine, And what he was, whose eyes did flame with
fire;
All which was, thus to him declared by that squire.

XLVII

'This mightie man,' quoth he, 'whom you
have slaine,
Of an huge geauntesse whylome was bred;
And by his strength rule to himselfe did
gaine
Of many nations into thraldome led,
And mightie kingdomes of his force adred; Whom yet he conquer'd not by blouddie
fight,
Ne hostes of men with banners brode di-spread,
But by the powre of his infectious sight,
With which he killed all that came witbin his might.

XLVIII

'Ne was he ever vanquished afore, But ever vanquisht all with whom he fought;
Ne was there man so strong, but he downe
bore,
Ne woman yet so faire, but he her brought Unto his bay, and captived her thought.
For most of strength and beautie his desire
Was spoyle to make, and wast them unto
nought,
By casting secret flakes of lustfull fire From his false eyes, into their harts and parts entire.

XLIX

'Therefore Corflambo was he cald aright, Though namelesse there his bodie now doth
lie;
Yet hath he left one daughter that is
hight
The faire Pæana; who seemes outwardly So faire as ever yet saw living eie:
And were her vertue like her beautie
bright,
She were as faire as any under skie.
But ah! she given is to vaine delight,
And eke too loose of life, and eke of love too light.

L

‘So as it fell, there was a gentle squire,
That lov’d a ladie of high parentage;
But for his meane degree might not aspire To match so high, her friends with counsell sage Dissuaded her from such a disparage.
But she, whose hart to love was wholly
lent,
Out of his hands could not redeeme her
gage,
But firmly following her first intent, Resolv’d with him to wend, gainst all her friends consent.

LI

‘So twixt themselves they pointed time and
place,
To which when he according did repaire,
An hard mishap and disaventrous case Him chaunst; in stead of his Æmylia faire, This gyants sonne, that lies there on the laire
An headlesse heape, him unawares there
caught,
And, all dismayd through mercillesse de-
spaire,
Him wretched thrall unto his dongeon
brought,
Where he remains, of all unsuccour’d and unsought.

LII

‘This gyants daughter came upon a day Unto the prison in her joyous glee, To view the thralls which there in bondage
lay:
Amongst the rest she chaunced there to see This lovely swaine, the squire of low degree;
To whom she did her liking lightly cast,
And wooed him her paramour to bee:
From day to day she woo’d and prayd him
fast,
And for his love him promist libertie at last.

LIII

‘He, though affide unto a former love,
To whom his faith he firmly ment to hold, Yet seeing not how thence he mote remove,
But by that meanes which fortune did unfold,
Her graunted love, but with affection cold,
To win her grace his libertie to get.
Yet she him still detaines in captive hold,

Fearing least, if she should him freely set,
He would her shortly leave, and former love forget.

LIV

‘Yet so much favour she to him hath high Above the rest, that he sometimes may
space
And walke about her gardens of delight, Having a keeper still with him in place;
Which keeper is this dwarfe, her dearling
base,
To whom the keyes of every prison dore
By her committed be, of speciall grace,
And at his will may whom he list restore,
And whom he list reserve, to be afflicted
more.

LV

‘Whereof when tydings came unto mine
eare,
Full inly sorie, for the fervent zeale
Which I to him as to my soule did beare,
I thether went; where I did long conceale My selfe, till that the dwarfe did me reveale,
And told his dame her squire of low degree
Did secretly out of her prison steale;
For me he did mistake that squire to bee;
For never two so like did living creature
see.

LVI

‘Then was I taken and before her brought:
Who, through the likenesse of my outward
hew,
Being likewise beguiled in her thought,
Gan blame me much for being so untrew,
To seeke by flight her fellowship t’eschew,
That lov’d me deare, as dearest thing alive.
Thence she commaunded me to prison new;
Whereof I glad did not gainesay nor strive,
But suffred that same dwarfe me to her dongeon drive.

LVII

‘There did I finde mine onely faithfull frend
In heavy plight and sad perplexitie; Whereof I sorie, yet my selfe did bend Him to recomfort with my companie.
But him the more agreev’d I found thereby.
For all his joy, he said, in that distresse,
Was mine and his Æmylias libertie.

Æmylia well he lov'd, as I mote ghesse; Yet greater love to me then her he did professe.

LVIII

'But I with better reason him aviz'd, And shew'd him how, through error and mis-thought
Of our like persons, eath to be disguiz'd, Or his exchange or freedome might be
wrought.
Whereto full loth was he, ne would for ought Consent that I, who stood all fearelesse
free,
Should willfully be into thraldome brought,
Till Fortune did perforce it so decree.
Yet, overrul'd at last, he did to me agree.

LIX

'The morrow next, about the wonted
howre,
The dwarfe cald at the doore of Amyas,
To come forthwith unto his ladies bowre.
In steed of whom forth came I, Placidus,
And undiscerned forth with him did pas.
There with great joyance and with glad-some glee
Of faire Pæana I received was,
And oft imbrast, as if that I were hee, And with kind words accoyd, vowing great love to mee.

LX

'Which I, that was not bent to former love,
As was my friend, that had her long refusd, Did well accept, as well it did behove,
And to the present neede it wisely usd.
My former hardnesse first I faire excusd;
And after promist large amends to make.
With such smooth termes her error I
abusd,
To my friends good more then for mine owne sake,
For whose sole libertie I love and life did stake.

LXI

'Thenceforth I found more favour at her
hand,
That to her dwarfe, which had me in his
charge,
She bad to lighten my too heavie band,
And graunt more scope to me to walke at large.

So on a day, as by the flowrie marge
Of a fresh streame I with that elfe did
play,

Finding no meanes how I might us enlarge, But if that dwarfe I could with me con-vay,
I lightly snatcht him up, and with me bore
away.

LXII

'Thereat he shriekt aloud, that with his cry
The tyrant selfe came forth with yelling
bray,
And me pursew'd; but nathemore would I Forgoe the purchase of my gotten pray, But have perforce him hether brought
away.'
Thus as they talked, loe! where nigh at
hand
Those ladies two, yet doubtfull through dis-
may,
In presence came, desirous t' understand Tydings of all which there had hapned on the land.

LXIII

Where soone as sad Æmylia did espie Her captive lovers friend, young Placidus, All mindlesse of her wonted modestie, She to him ran, and him with streight embras Enfolding said: 'And lives yet Amyas?'
'He lives,' quoth he, 'and his Æmylia
loves.'
'Then lesse,' said she, 'by all the woe I
pas,
With which my weaker patience Fortune proves.
But what mishap thus long him fro my selfe removes?'

LXIV

Then gan he all this storie to renew,
And tell the course of his captivtie; That her deare hart full deeply made to
rew,
And sigh full sore, to heare the miserie,
In which so long he mercilesse did lie.
Then, after many teares and sorrowes
spent,
She deare besought the Prince of remedie:
Who thereto did with readie will consent, And well perform'd, as shall appeare by his event.

CANTO IX

The squire of low degree, releast, Pœana takes to wife:
 Britomart fightes with many knights;
 Prince Arthur stints their strife.

I

HARD is the doubt, and difficult to deeme,
 When all three kinds of love together meet,
 And doe dispart the hart with powre extreme,

Whether shall weigh the balance downe;
 to weet,

The deare affection unto kindred sweet,
 Or raging fire of love to woman kind,
 Or zeale of friends combynd with vertues meet.

But of them all, the band of vertuous mind,
 Me seemes, the gentle hart should most assured bind.

II

For naturall affection soone doth cesse,
 And quenched is with Cupids greater flame:
 But faithfull friendship doth them both suppress,

And them with maystring discipline doth tame,

Through thoughts aspyring to eternall fame.
 For as the soule doth rule the earthly masse,
 And all the service of the bodie frame,
 So love of soule doth love of bodie passe,
 No lesse then perfect gold surmounts the meanest brasse.

III

All which who list by tryall to assay, Shall in this storie find approved plaine;
 In which these squires true friendship more did sway,

Then either care of parents could refraine,
 Or love of fairest ladie could constraine.

For though Pœana were as faire as morne, Yet did this trustie squire with proud disdain

For his friends sake her offred favours scorne,

And she her selfe her syre, of whom she was yborne.

Now after that Prince Arthur graunted had

To yeeld strong succour to that gentle swayne,

Who now long time had lyen in prison sad,

He gan advise how best he mote darrayne That enterprize, for greatest glories gayne.
 That headlesse tyrants tronke he reard
 from ground,

And having ympt the head to it agayne,
 Upon his usuall beast it firmly bound,
 And made it so to ride as it alive was found.

Then did he take that chaced squire, and layd

Before the ryder, as he captive were,
 And made his dwarfe, though with unwilling ayd,

To guide the beast that did his maister beare,

Till to his castle they approched neare.

Whom when the watch, that kept continuall ward,

Saw comming home, all voide of doubtfull feare,

He, running downe, the gate to him unbar'd;

Whom straight the Prince ensuing, in together far'd.

VI

There he did find in her delitious boure
 The faire Pœana playing on a rote, Complaying of her cruell paramoure,
 And singing all her sorrow to the note,
 As she had learned readily by rote;
 That with the sweetnesse of her rare delight

The Prince halfe rapt, began on her to dote:
 Till, better him bethinking of the right,
 He her unwares attacht, and captive held by might.

VII

Whence being forth produc'd, when she perceived

Her owne deare sire, she cald to him for aide.

But when of him no aunswere she received,
 But saw him sencelesse by the squire upstaide,

She weened well that then she was betraide:

Then gan she loudly cry, and weepe, and waile,

And that same squire of treason to upbraide:

But all in vaine; her plaints might not pre-
vaile;
Ne none there was to reskue her, ne none to baile.

VIII

Then tooke he that same dwarfe, and him compeld
To open unto him the prison dore, And forth to bring those thrals which there he held.
Thence forth were brought to him above a score
Of knights and squires to him unknowne
afore:
All which he did from bitter bondage free,
And unto former liberty restore.
Amongst the rest, that squire of low degree Came forth full weake and wan, not like him selfe to bee.

IX

Whom soone as faire Emylia beheld,
And Placidus, they both unto him ran,
And him embracing fast betwixt them
held,
Striving to comfort him all that they can,
And kissing off his visage pale and wan;
That faire Pæana, them beholding both,
Gan both envy, and bitterly to ban;
Through jealous passion weeping inly wroth, To see the sight perforce, that both her eyes were loth.

X

But when a while they had together beene,
And diversly conferred of their case, She, though full oft she both of them had
seene
A sunder, yet not ever in one place, Began to doubt, when she them saw embrace,
Which was the captive squire she lov'd so
deare,
Deceived through great likenesse of their
face,
For they so like in person did appeare, That she unneath discerned, whether whether weare.

XI

And eke the Prince, when as he them avized,
Their like resemblaunce much admired
there,

And mazed how Nature had so well disguized
Her worke, and counterfet her selfe so
nere,
As if that by one patterne seene somewhere
She had them made a paragone to be,
Or whether it through skill or errour were.
Thus gazing long, at them much wondred
he;
So did the other knights and squires, which them did see.

XII

Then gan they ransacke that same castle
strong,
In which he found great store of hoarded
treasure,
The which that tyrant gathered had by
wrong
And tortious powre, without respect or measure.
Upon all which the Briton Prince made seasure,
And afterwards continu'd there a while,
To rest him selfe, and solace in soft pleasure
Those weaker ladies after weary toile;
To whom he did divide part of his purchast spoile.

XIII

And for more joy, that captive lady faire,
The faire Pæana, he enlarged free,
And by the rest did set in sumptuous chaire, To feast and frolicke; nathemore would
she Shew gladsome countenance nor pleasaunt
glee,
But grieved was for losse both of her sire,
And eke of lordship, with both land and fee:
But most she touched was with grieffe entire
For losse of her new love, the hope of her desire.

XIV

But her the Prince, through his well wonted
grace,
To better termes of myldnesse did entreat From that fowle rudenesse which did her deface;
And that same bitter corsive, which did eat Her tender heart, and made refraine from meat,

He with good thewes and speaches well ap-
plyde
Did mollifie, and calme her raging heat.
For though she were most faire, and goodly
dyde, Yet she it all did mar with cruelty and pride.

XV

And for to shut up all in friendly love, Sith love was first the ground of all her
griefe,
That trusty squire he wisely well did move Not to despise that dame, which lov'd him
liefe,
Till he had made of her some better priefe,
But to accept her to his wedded wife.
Thereto he offred for to make him chiefe
Of all her land and lordship during life:
He yeelded, and her tooke; so stinted all their strife.

XVI

From that day forth in peace and joyous
blis
They liv'd together long without debate, Ne private jarre, ne spite of enemis Could shake the safe assuraunce of their
state.
And she, whom Nature did so faire create That she mote match the fairest of her
daies,
Yet with lewd loves and lust intemperate Had it defaste, thenceforth reformd her
waies,
That all men much admyrde her change, and spake her praise.

XVII

Thus when the Prince had perfectly compylde
These paires of friends in peace and setled
rest,
Him selfe, whose minde did travell as with chylde
Of his old love, conceav'd in secret brest, Resolved to pursue his former quest;
And taking leave of all, with him did beare Faire Amoret, whom Fortune by bequest Had left in his protection whileare, Exchanged out of one into an other feare.

XVIII

Feare of her safety did her not constraine,
For well she wist now in a mighty hond

Her person, late in perill, did remaine, Who able was all daungers to withstand:
But now in feare of shame she more did
stond,
Seeing her selfe all soly succourlesse,
Left in the victors powre, like vassall bond; Whose will her weakenesse could no way represe,
In case his burning lust should breake into excesse.

XIX

But cause of feare sure had she none at
all
Of him, who goodly learned had of yore
The course of loose affection to forstall,
And lawlesse lust to rule with reasons lore;
That all the while he by his side her bore,
She was as safe as in a sanctuary.
Thus many miles they two together wore,
To seeke their loves dispersed diversly, Yet neither shewed to other their hearts privy.

XX

At length they came, whereas a troupe of knights
They saw together skirmishing, as seemed:
Sixe they were all, all full of fell despight, But foure of them the battell best be-
seemed,
That which of them was best mote not be deemed.
Those foure were they from whom false Florinell
By Braggadochio lately was redeemed; To weat, sterne Druon, and lewd Clari-
bell,
Love-lavish Blandamour, and lustfull Pari-dell.

XXI

Druons delight was all in single life,
And unto ladies love would lend no leasure:
The more was Claribell enraged rife With fervent flames, and loved out of measure:
So eke lov'd Blandamour, but yet at pleasure
Would change his liking, and new lemans
prove:
But Paridell of love did make no threasure,
But lusted after all that him did move.
So diversly these foure disposed were to love.

XXII

But those two other, which beside them stooede,
 Were Britomart and gentle Scudamour; Who all the while beheld their wrathfull moode,
 And wondred at their impacable stoure, Whose like they never saw till that same
 houre:
 So dreadfull strokes each did at other drive,
 And laid on load with all their might and
 powre,
 As if that every dint the ghost would rive Out of their wretched corses, and their lives deprive.

XXIII

As when Dan .Eolus, in great displeasure, For losse of his deare love by Neptune
 hent,
 Sends forth the winds out of his hidden
 treasure,
 Upon the sea to wreake his fell intent;
 They, breaking forth with rude unruliment From all foure parts of heaven, doe rage full sore,
 And tosse the deepes, and teare the firma-
 ment,
 And all the world confound with wide up-
 rore,
 As if in stead thereof they Chaos would restore.

XXIV

Cause of their discord and so fell debate Was for the love of that same snowy
 maid, Whome they had lost in turneyment of
 late,
 And seeking long, to weet which way she straid,
 Met here together, where, through lewd upbraide
 Of Ate and Duessa, they fell out,
 And each one taking part in others aide,
 This cruell conflict raised thereabout, Whose dangerous successe depended yet in dout.

XXV

For sometimes Paridell and Blandamour
 The better had, and bet the others backe; Eftsoones the others did the field recoure, And on their foes did worke full cruell
 wracke:

Yet neither would their fiendlike fury
 slacke,
 But evermore their malice did augment;
 Till that uneth they forced were, for lacke
 Of breath, their raging rigour to relent, And rest themselves for to recover spirits
 spent.

XXVI

Then gan they change their sides, and new parts take;
 For Paridell did take to Druons side, For old despite, which now forth newly
 brake Gainst Blandamour, whom alwaies he en-
 vide;
 And Blandamour to Claribell relide:
 So all afresh gan former fight renew.
 As when two barkes, this caried with the
 tide,
 That with the wind, contrary courses sew, If wind and tide doe change, their courses change anew.

XXVII

Thenceforth they much more furiously gan
 fare,
 As if but then the battell had begonne, Ne helmets bright ne hawberks strong did spare,
 That through the cliffs the vermeil blood out sponne,
 And all adowne their riven sides did ronne.
 Such mortall malice wonder was to see In friends profest, and so great outrage
 donne:
 But sooth is said, and tride in each degree, Faint friends when they fall out most cruell fomen bee.

XXVIII

Thus they long while continued in fight, Till Scudamour and that same Briton maide By fortune in that place did chance to
 light:
 Whom soone as they with wrathfull eie bewraide,
 They gan remember of the fowle upbraide, The which that Britonesse had to them
 donne,
 In that late turney for the snowy maide; Where she had them both shamefully for-
 donne,
 And eke the famous prize of beauty from them wonne.

XXIX

Eftsoones all burning with a fresh desire Of fell revenge, in their malicious mood They from them selves gan turne their furious ire,
 And cruell blades, yet steeming with whot bloud, Against those two let drive, as they were
 wood:
 Who wondring much at that so sodaine
 fit, Yet nought dismayd, them stoutly well
 withstood;
 Ne yeelded foote, ne once abacke did flit, But being doubly smitten, likewise doubly smit.

XXX

The warlike dame was on her part assaid
 Of Claribell and Blandamour attone;
 And Paridell and Druon fiercely laid
 At Seudamour, both his professed fone.
 Foure charged two, and two surcharged
 one;
 Yet did those two them selves so bravely
 beare,
 That the other litle gained by the lone,
 But with their owne repayed duely weare, And usury withall: such gaine was gotten
 deare.

XXXI

Full oftentimes did Britomart assay To speake to them, and some emparlance
 move;
 But they for nought their cruell hands would stay, Ne lend an eare to ought that might be-
 hove:
 As when an eager mastiffe once doth prove The tast of bloud of some engored beast, No words may rate, nor rigour him remove
 From greedy hold of that his blouddy
 feast:
 So litle did they hearken to her sweet beheast.

XXXII

Whom when the Briton Prince a farre be-
 held
 With ods of so unequal match opprest, His mighty heart with indignation sweld,
 And inward grudge fild his heroicke brest: Eftsoones him selfe he to their aide addressd,

And thrusting fierce into the thickest preace,
 Divided them, how ever loth to rest,
 And would them faine from battell to surceasse,
 With gentle words perswading them to friendly peace.

XXXIII

But they so farre from peace or patience
 were,
 That all at once at him gan fiercely flie, And lay on load, as they him downe would
 beare:
 Like to a storme, which hovers under
 skie,
 Long here and there and round about doth
 stie,
 At length breakes downe in raine, and haile, and sleet,
 First from one coast, till nought thereof be drie;
 And then another, till that likewise fleet;
 And so from side to side till all the world it weet.

XXXIV

But now their forces greatly were decayd,
 The Prince yet being fresh untoucht afore; Who them with speaches milde gan first dissuade
 From such foule outrage, and them long forbore:
 Till, seeing them through suffrance hartned
 more,
 Him selfe he bent their furies to abate,
 And layd at them so sharpely and so sore,
 That shortly them compelled to retrate, And being brought in daunger, to relent too late

XXXV

But now his courage being throughly fired, He ment to make them know their follies
 prise,
 Had not those two him instantly desired T' assuage his wrath, and pardon their mesprise.
 At whose request he gan him selfe advise
 To stay his hand, and of a truce to treat In milder tearmes, as list them to devise:
 Mongst which, the cause of their so cruell
 heat
 He did them aske: who all that passed gan repeat;

XXXVI

And told at large how that same errant knight,
 To weet, faire Britomart, them late had foyled In open turney, and by wrongfull fight Both of their publicke praise had them despoyled,
 And also of their private loves beguyled;
 Of two full hard to read the harder theft.
 But she that wrongfull challenge soone asoyled,
 And shew'd that she had not that lady reft, (As they supposd) but her had to her liking left.

XXXVII

To whom the Prince thus goodly well replied:
 'Certes, sir knights, ye seemen much to blame,
 To rip up wrong that battell once hath tried;
 Wherein the honor both of armes ye shame,
 And eke the love of ladies foule defame;
 To whom the world this franchise ever yeelded,
 That of their loves choise they might freedom claime,
 And in that right should by all knights be shielded:
 Gainst which, me seemes, this war ye wrongfully have wielded.'

XXXVIII

'And yet,' quoth she, 'a greater wrong remains:
 For I thereby my former love have lost,
 Whom seeking ever since, with endlesse paines, Hath me much sorrow and much travell cost:
 Aye me, to see that gentle maide so tost!'
 But Scudamour, then sighing deepe, thus saide:
 'Certes her losse ought me to sorrow most,
 Whose right she is, where ever she be straide,
 Through many perils wonne, and many fortunes waide.

XXXIX

'For from the first that I her love profest, Unto this houre, this present lucklesse howre,

I never joyed happinesse nor rest,
 But thus turmoild from one to other stowre,
 I wast my life, and doe my daies devowre In wretched anguise and incessant woe, Passing the measure of my feeble powre,
 That, living thus a wretch and loving so,
 I neither can my love, ne yet my life forgo.'

XL

Then good Sir Claribell him thus bespake:
 'Now were it not, Sir Scudamour, to you Dislikefull paine, so sad a taske to take,
 Mote we entreat you, sith this gentle crew
 Is now so well accorded all anew,
 That, as we ride together on our way, Ye will recount to us in order dew
 All that adventure, which ye did assay
 For that faire ladies love: past perils well apay.'

XLI

So gan the rest him likewise to require,
 But Britomart did him importune hard To take on him that paine: whose great desire He glad to satisfie, him selfe prepar'd To tell through what misfortune he had far'd
 In that atchievement, as to him befell;
 And all those daungers unto them declar'd,
 Which sith they cannot in this canto well Comprised be, I will them in another tell.

CANTO X

Scudamour doth his conquest tell Of vertuous Amoret: Great Venus temple is describ'd,
 And lovers life forth set.

I

'TRUE he it said, what ever man it sayd, That love with gall and hony doth abound,
 But if the one be with the other wayd,
 For every dram of hony therein found,
 A pound of gall doth over it redound.
 That I too true by triall have approved:
 For since the day that first with deadly wound
 My heart was launcht, and learned to have loved, I never joyed howre, but still with care was moved.

II

'And yet such grace is given them from
above,
That all the cares and evill which they meet
May nought at all their settled mindes remove,
But seeme, gainst common sence, to them most sweet;
As bosting in their martyrdom unmeet.
So all that ever yet I have endured I count as naught, and tread downe under
feet,
Since of my love at length I rest assured,
That to disloyalty she will not be allured.

III

'Long were to tell the travell and long toile,
Through which this Shield of Love I late
have wonne,
And purchased this peerelesse beauties spoil,
That harder may be ended, then begonne:
But since ye so desire, your will be donne.
Then hearken, ye gentle knights and ladies
free,
My hard mishaps, that ye may learne to
shonne;
For though sweet love to conquer glorious
bee,
Yet is the paine thereof much greater then the fee.

IV

'What time the fame of this renowned
prise
Flew first abroad, and all mens eares pos-sest,
I, having armes then taken, gan advise
To winne me honour by some noble gest, And purchase me some place amongst the
best.
I boldly thought (so young mens thoughts are bold)
That this same brave emprize for me did
rest,
And that both shield and she whom I be-
hold Might be my lucky lot; sith all by lot we hold.

V

'So on that hard adventure forth I went,
And to the place of perill shortly came.

That was a temple faire and auncient, Which of great mother Venus bare the
name,
And farre renowned through exceeding
fame;
Much more then that which was in Paphos
built,
Or that in Cyprus, both long since this
same,
Though all the pillours of the one were guilt,
And all the others pavement were with yvory spilt.

VI

'And it was seated in an island strong, Abounding all with delices most rare,
And wall'd by nature gainst invaders
wrong,
That none mote have accesse, nor inward
fare,
But by one way, that passage did prepare.
It was a bridge ybuilt in goodly wize, With curious corbes and pendants graven
faire,
And, arched all with porches, did arize On stately pillours, fram'd after the Doricke guize.

VII

'And for defence thereof, on th' other end
There reared was a castle faire and strong,
That warded all which in or out did wend,
And flanked both the bridges sides along, Gainst all that would it faine to force or
wrong.
And therein wonned twenty valiant
knights;
All twenty tride in warres experience long;
Whose office was, against all manner
wights
By all meanes to maintaine that castels ancient rights.

VIII

'Before that castle was an open plaine,
And in the midst thereof a pillar placed;
On which this shield, of many sought in
vaine,
The Shield of Love, whose guerdon me hath graced,
Was hangd on high with golden ribbands
laced;
And in the marble stone was written this,
With golden letters goodly well enlaced:

*Blessed the man that well can use his blis:
Whose ever be the shield, faire Amoret be his.*

IX

'Which when I red, my heart did inly
earne,
And pant with hope of that adventures hap:
Ne stayed further newes thereof to learne,
But with my speare upon the shield did rap,
That all the castle ringed with the clap.
Streight forth issewd a knight all arm'd to prooffe,
And bravely mounted to his most mishap:
Who, staying nought to question from aloofe, Ran fierce at me, that fire glaunst from his horses hoofe.

X

'Whom boldly I encountred as I could,
And by good fortune shortly him unseated.
Eftsoones out sprung two more of equall
mould;
But I them both with equall hap defeated:
So all the twenty I likewise entreated, And left them groning there upon the
plaine.
Then, preacing to the pillour, I repeated
The read thereof for guerdon of my paine, And taking downe the shield, with me did it retaine.

XI

'So forth without impediment I past, Till to the bridges utter gate I came:
The which I found sure lockt and chained
fast.
I knockt, but no man aunswred me by
name;
I cald, but no man answerd to my clame.
Yet I persever'd still to knocke and call, Till at the last I spide within the same Where one stood peeping through a crevis
small,
To whom I cald aloud, halfe angry therewithall.

XII

'That was to weet the porter of the place, Unto whose trust the charge thereof was
lent:
His name was Doubt, that had a double
face,
Th' one forward looking, th' other backe-ward bent,

Therein resembling Janus auncient, Which hath in charge the ingate of the yeare:
And evermore his eyes about him went,
As if some proved perill he did feare, Or did misdoubt some ill, whose cause did not appeare.

XIII

'On th' one side he, on th' other sate Delay, Behinde the gate, that none her might espy;
Whose manner was, all passengers to stay
And entertaime with her occasions sly; Through which some lost great hope unheedily,
Which never they recover might againe;
And others, quite excluded forth, did ly Long languishing there in unpittied paine, And seeking often entraunce afterwards in vaine.

XIV

'Me when as he had privily espide Bearing the shield which I had conquerd
late,
He kend it streight, and to me opened wide.
So in I past, and streight he cload the gate.
But being in, Delay in close awaite Caught hold on me, and thought my steps
to stay,
Feigning full many a fond excuse to prate,
And time to steale, the threasure of mans
day,
Whose smallest minute lost no riches render may.

XV

'But by no meanes my way I would forslow,
For ought that ever she could doe or say,
But from my lofty steede dismounting low, Past forth on foote, beholding all the way
The goodly workes, and stones of rich
assay,
Cast into sundry shapes by wondrous skill,
That like on earth no where I reckon may:
And underneath, the river rolling still With murmure soft, that seem'd to serve the workmans will.

XVI

'Thence forth I passed to the second gate, The Gate of Good Desert, whose goodly
pride

And costly frame were long here to relate.
 The same to all stoo'de alwaies open wide:
 But in the porch did evermore abide An hideous giant, dreadfull to behold, That stoop't the entraunce with his spacious stride,
 And with the terrour of his countenance
 bold
 Full many did affray, that else faine enter would.

XVII

'His name was Daunger, dreaded over all, Who day and night did watch and duely
 ward,
 From fearefull cowards entrance to for-
 stall,
 And faint-heart-fooles, whom shew of perill
 hard
 Could terrifie from Fortunes faire adward:
 For oftentimes faint hearts, at first espiall Of his grim face, were from approaching scard:
 Unworthy they of grace, whom one deniall Excludes from fairest hope, withouten further triall.

XVIII

'Yet many doughty warriours, often tride
 In greater perils to be stout and bold, Durst not the sternesse of his looke abide,
 But soone as they his countenance did be-
 hold,
 Began to faint, and feele their corage cold.
 Againe, some other, that in hard assaies Were cowards knowne, and litle count did
 hold,
 Either through gifts, or guile, or such like
 waies,
 Crept in by stouping low, or stealing of the kaies.

XIX

'But I, though meanest man of many moe, Yet much disdainning unto him to lout,
 Or creepe betweene his legs, so in to goe, Resolv'd him to assault with manhood stout,
 And either beat him in or drive him out.
 Eftsoones, advauncing that enchanted
 shield,
 With all my might I gan to lay about:
 Which when he saw, the glaive which he did wield
 He gan forthwith t' avale, and way unto me yield.

XX

'So as I entred, I did backward looke, For feare of harme, that might lie hidden
 there;
 And loe! his hindparts, whereof heed I
 tooke,
 Much more deformed fearefull ugly were,
 Then all his former parts did eart appere:
 For Hatred, Murther, Treason, and De-
 spight,
 With many moe, lay in ambushment there, Awayting to entrap the warelesse wight, Which did not them prevent with vigilant foresight.

XXI

'Thus having past all perill, I was come Within the compasse of that islands space;
 The which did seeme, unto my simple
 doome,
 The onely pleasant and delightfull place
 That ever troden was of footings trace.
 For all that Nature by her mother wit Could frame in earth, and forme of substance base,
 Was there, and all that Nature did omit, Art, playing second Natures part, supplyed it.

XXII

'No tree, that is of count, in greenewood
 growes,
 From lowest juniper to ceder tall, No flowre in field, that daintie odour
 throwes,
 And deckes his branch with blossomes over
 all,
 But there was planted, or grew naturall:
 Nor sense of man so coy and curious nice, But there mote find to please it selfe with-
 all;
 Nor hart could wish for any queint device,
 But there it present was, and did fraile sense entiee.

XXIII

'In such luxurious plentie of all pleasure,
 It seem'd a second paradise to ghesse,
 So lavishly enricht with Natures threasure, That if the happie soules, which doe posse-sesse
 Th' Elysian fields and live in lasting blesse, Should happen this with living eye to see,
 They soone would loath their lesser happi-
 nesse,

And wish to life return'd againe to bee, That in this joyous place they mote have joyance free.

XXIV

Fresh shadowes, fit to shroud from sunny
ray;
Faيرة lawnds, to take the sunne in season
dew;
Sweet springs, in which a thousand nymphs
did play;
Soft rombling brookes, that gentle slomber
drew;
High reared mounts, the lands about to
vew;
Low looking dales, disloignd from common
gaze;
Delightfull bowres, to solace lovers trew;
False labyrinthes, fond runners eyes to daze;
All which by Nature made did Nature selfe amaze.

XXV

'And all without were walkes and alleyes
dight
With divers trees, enrang'd in even rankes;
And here and there were pleasant arbors
pight,
And shadie seates, and sundry flowering bankes,
To sit and rest the walkers wearie shankes;
And therein thousand payres of lovers walkt, Praying their god, and yeelding him great thankes,
Ne ever ought but of their true loves talkt, Ne ever for rebuke or blame of any balkt.

XXVI

'All these together by themselves did sport Their spotlesse pleasures, and sweet loves content.
But farre away from these, another sort Of lovers lincked in true harts consent;
Which loved not as these, for like intent,
But on chaste vertue grounded their desire, Farre from all fraud, or fayned blandish-
ment;
Which, in their spirits kindling zealous fire, Brave thoughts and noble deedes did evermore aspire.

XXVII

'Such were great Hercules, and Hyllus
deare;
Trew Jonathan, and David trustie tryde;

Stout Theseus, and Pirithous his feare; Pylades, and Orestes by his syde; Myld Titus and Gesippus without pryde; Damon and Pythias, whom death could not
sever:

All these, and all that ever had bene tyde In bands of friendship, there did live for ever;
Whose lives although decay'd, yet loves decayed never.

XXVIII

'Which when as I, that never tasted blis Nor happie howre, beheld with gazefull
eye,
I thought there was none other heaven then
this;
And gan their endlesse happinesse envye,
That, being free from feare and gealosye, Might frankly there their loves desire
possesse;
Whilst I through paines and perlous jeopardie
Was forst to seeke my lifes deare patron-esse:
Much dearer be the things which come through hard distresse.

XXIX

'Yet all those sights, and all that else I
saw,
Might not my steps withhold, but that forthright Unto that purposd place I did me draw, Where as my love was lodged day and
night:
The temple of great Venus, that is hight The Queene of Beautie, and of Love the mother,
There worshipped of every living wight; Whose goodly workmanship farre past all other
That ever were on earth, all were they set together.

XXX

'Not that same famous temple of Diane, Whose hight all Ephesus did oversee,
And which all Asia sought with vowes pro-
phane,
One of the worlds seven wonders sayd to
bee,
Might match with this by many a degree:
Nor that which that wise king of Jurie framed,

With endlesse cost, to be th' Almighties
see;
Nor all that else through all the world is named
To all the heathen gods, might like to this be clamed.

XXXI

'I, much admyring that so goodly frame, Unto the porch approacht, which open
stood;

But therein sate an amiable dame,
That seem'd to be of very sober mood,
And in her semblant shewed great womanhood:

Strange was her tyre; for on her head a crowne

She wore, much like unto a Danisk hood, Pondred with pearle and stone, and all her gowne

Enwoven was with gold, that raught full low a downe.

XXXII

'On either side of her two young men
stood,

Both strongly arm'd, as fearing one another;

Yet were they brethren both of halfe the
blood,

Begotten by two fathers of one mother, Though of contrarie natures each to other:
The one of them hight Love, the other
Hate;

Hate was the elder, Love the younger brother;

Yet was the younger stronger in his state Then th' elder, and him maystred still in all debate.

XXXIII

'Nathlesse that dame so well them temperd both,
That she them forced hand to joyne in
hand,

Albe that Hatred was thereto full loth,
And turn'd his face away, as he did stand, Unwilling to behold that lovely band.

Yet she was of such grace and vertuous
might,

That her commaundment he could not
withstand,

But bit his lip for felonous despight,
And gnasht his yron tuskes at that displeasing sight.

XXXIV

'Concord she cleeped was in common reed, Mother of blessed Peace and Friendship
trew;

They both her twins, both borne of heavenly seed,

And she her selfe likewise divinely grew;
The which right well her workes divine
did shew:

For strength and wealth and happinesse
she lends,

And strife and warre and anger does sub-
dew;

Of litle much, of foes she maketh friends,
And to afflicted minds sweet rest and quiet sends.

XXXV

'By her the heaven is in his course contained,

And all the world in state unmoved stands,
As their Almighty Maker first ordained,
And bound them with inviolable bands;

Else would the waters overflow the lands,
And fire devoure the ayre, and hell them
quight,

But that she holds them with her blessed
hands.

She is the nurse of pleasure and delight,
And unto Venus grace the gate doth open right.

XXXVI

'By her I entring halfe dismayed was,
But she in gentle wise me entertayned, And twixt her selfe and Love did let me
pas;

But Hatred would my entrance have restrayned,

And with his club me threatned to have brayned,

Had not the ladie with her powrefull
speach

Him from his wicked will uneath refrayned;

And th' other eke his malice did empeach, Till I was throughly past the perill of his reach

XXXVII

'Into the inmost temple thus I came, Which fuming all with frankensence I
found,

And odours rising from the altars flame.
Upon an hundred marble pillars round

The rooſe up high was reared from the
ground,
All deckt with crownes, and chaynes, and girlands gay,
And thousand pretious gifts worth many a
pound,
The which ſad lovers for their vowes did
pay;
And all the ground was ſtrow'd with flow-res, as fresh as May.

XXXVIII

'An hundred altars round about were ſet, All flaming with their ſacrifices fire,
That with the ſteme thereof the temple ſwet,
Which rould in clouds to heaven did aſpire,
And in them bore true lovers vowes entire:
And eke an hundred braſen caudrons
bright,
To bath in joy and amorous deſire,
Every of which was to a damzell hight;
For all the prieſts were damzels, in ſoft linnen dight.

XXXIX

'Right in the miſt the goddeſſe ſelfe did ſtand
Upon an altar of ſome coſtly maſſe, Whoſe ſubſtance was uneath to underſtand:
For neither pretious ſtone, nor durefull braſſe, Nor ſhining gold, nor mouldring clay it was;
But much more rare and pretious to eſ-
teeme,
Pure in aſpect, and like to chriſtall glaſſe, Yet glaſſe was not, if one did rightly
deeme,
But being faire and brickle, likeſt glaſſe did ſeeme.

XL

'But it in ſhape and beautie did excell
All other idoles which the heathen adore, Farre paſſing that which by ſurpaſſing ſkill Phidias did make in Paphos iſle of yore, With which that wretched Greeke, that life
forlore,
Did fall in love; yet this much fairer ſhined,
But covered with a ſlender veile afore;
And both her feete and legs together twyned
Were with a ſnake, whoſe head and tail were faſt combyned.

XLI

'The cauſe why ſhe was covered with a veile
Was hard to know, for that her prieſts the ſame
From peoples knowledge labour'd to concele.
But ſooth it was not ſure for womanish ſhame,
Nor any blemish, which the worke mote
blame;
But for, they ſay, ſhe hath bo'h kinds in
one,
Both male and femate, both under one
name:
She ſyre and mother is her ſelfe alone, Begets and eke conceives, ne needeth other none.

XLII

'And all about her necke and ſhoulders flew A flocke of litle loves, and ſports, and
joyes,
With nimble wings of gold and purple hew, Whoſe ſhapes ſeem'd not like to terreſtriall
boyes,
But like to angels playing heavenly toyes;
The whileſt their eldeſt brother was away, Cupid, their eldeſt brother: he enjoyes The wide kingdome of Love with lordly ſway,
And to his law compels all creatures to obay.

XLIII

'And all about her altar, ſcattered lay Great ſorts of lovers piteouſly complayn-
ing,
Some of their loſſe, ſome of their loves de-
lay,
Some of their pride, ſome paragons diſ-dayning,
Some fearing fraud, ſome fraudulently fayning,
As every one had cauſe of good or ill.
Amongſt the reſt ſome one, through loves conſtrayning,
Tormented ſore, could not containe it ſtill, But thus brake forth, that all the temple it did fill:

XLIV

“Great Venus, queene of beautie and of
grace,
The joy of gods and men, that under ſkie

Doest fayrest shine, and most adorne thy
 place,
 That with thy smyling looke doest pacifie The raging seas, and makst the stormes to
 flie;
 Thee, goddesse, thee the winds, the clouds doe feare,
 And when thou spredst thy mantle forth on hie,
 The waters play, and pleasant lands ap-
 peare,
 And heavens laugh, and al the world shews joyous cheare.

XLV

“Then doth the dædale earth throw forth to thee
 Out of her fruitfull lap abundant flowres;
 And then all living wights, soone as they
 see
 The Spring breake forth out of his lusty
 bowres,
 They all doe learne to play the para-mours:
 First doe the merry birds, thy pretie pages, Privily pricked with thy lustfull powres, Chirpe loud to thee out of their leavy cages,
 And thee their mother call to coole their kindly rages.

XLVI

“Then doe the salvage beasts begin to
 play
 Their pleasant friskes, and loath their wonted food;
 The Lyons rore, the tygres loudly bray, The raging buls rebellow through the
 wood,
 And breaking forth, dare tempt the deepest flood,
 To come where thou doest draw them with
 desire:
 So all things else, that nourish vitall blood, Soone as with fury thou doest them inspire,
 In generation seeke to quench their inward
 fire.

XLVII

“So all the world by thee at first was
 made,
 And daily yet thou doest the same repayre:
 Ne ought on earth that merry is and glad,
 Ne ought on earth that lovely is and fayre,

But thou the same for pleasure didst prepayre.
 Thou art the root of all that joyous is, Great god of men and women, queene of th' ayre,
 Mother of laughter, and welspring of blisse, O graunt that of my love at last I may not misse.”

XLVIII

‘So did he say: but I with murmure soft, That none might heare the sorrow of my
 hart,
 Yet inly groning deepe and sighing oft, Besought her to graunt ease unto my
 smart,
 And to my wound her gracious help impart.
 Whilest thus I spake, behold! with happy
 eye
 I spyde where at the idoles feet apart
 A bevie of fayre damzels close did lye, Wayting when as the antheme should be sung on hie.

XLIX

‘The first of them did seeme of ryper
 yeares
 And graver countenance then all the rest;
 Yet all the rest were eke her equall peares, Yet unto her obeyed all the best.
 Her name was Womanhood, that she ex-
 prest
 By her sad semblant and demeanure wyse
 For stedfast still her eyes did fixed rest, Ne rov'd at randon, after gazers guyse, Whose luring baytes oftymes doe heedlesse harts entyse.

L

‘And next to her sate goodly Shamefast-
 nesse,
 Ne ever durst her eyes from ground up-
 reare,
 Ne ever once did looke up from her desse,
 As if some blame of evill she did feare,
 That in her cheekes made roses oft ap-
 peare:
 And her against sweet Cherefulnessse was placed,
 Whose eyes, like twinkling stars in evening
 cleare,
 Were deckt with smyles, that all sad humors ehaeced,
 And darted forth delights, the which her goodly graced.

LI

‘ And next to her sate sober Modestie, Holding her hand upon her gentle hart;
 And her against sate comely Curtesie, That unto every person knew her part;
 And her before was seated overthwart Soft Silence, and submisse Obedience, Both linckt together never to dispart, Both gifts of God not gotten but from thence,
 Both girlonds of his saints against their foes offence.

LII

‘ Thus sate they all a round in seemely rate.
 And in the midst of them a goodly mayd, Even in the lap of Womanhood, there
 sate,
 The which was all in lilly white arayd, With silver streames amongst the linnen
 stray’d;
 Like to the Morne, when first her shyning
 face Hath to the gloomy world it selfe be-wray’d:
 That same was fayrest Amoret in place, Shyning with beauties light and heavenly vertues grace.

LIII

‘ Whom soone as I beheld, my hart gan
 throbb,
 And wade in doubt, what best were to be
 donne:
 For sacrilege me seem’d the church to rob,
 And folly seem’d to leave the thing un-
 donne,
 Which with so strong attempt I had be-
 gonne.
 Tho, shaking off all doubt and shamefast
 feare,
 Which ladies love I heard had never wonne Mongst men of worth, I to her stepped
 neare,
 And by the lilly hand her labour’d up to reare.

LIV

‘ Thereat that formost matrone me did
 blame,
 And sharpe rebuke, for being over bold;
 Saying it was to knight unseemely shame,
 Upon a recluse virgin to lay hold,
 That unto Venus services was sold.
 To whom I thus: “ Nay, but it fitteth best

For Cupids man with Venus mayd to hold;
 For ill your goddesse services are drest
 By virgins, and her sacrifices let to rest.”

LV

‘ With that my shield I forth to her did
 show,
 Which all that while I closely had conceald;
 On which when Cupid with his killing bow
 And cruell shafts emblazond she beheld,
 At sight thereof she was with terror quelld,
 And said no more: but I, which all that
 while
 The pledge of faith, her hand, engaged held,
 Like warie hynd within the weedie soyle, For no intreatie would forgoe so glorious spoyle.

LVI

‘ And evermore upon the goddesse face Mine eye was fixt, for feare of her offence:
 Whom when I saw with amiable grace
 To laugh at me, and favour my pretence,
 I was emboldn’d with more confidence, And nought for nicnesse nor for envy sparing,
 In presence of them all forth led her
 thence,
 All looking on, and like astonisht staring, Yet to lay hand on her not one of all them daring.

LVII

‘ She often prayd, and often me besought, Sometime with tender teares to let her goe, Sometime with witching smyles: but yet, for nought
 That ever she to me could say or doe, Could she her wished freedome fro me
 wooe;
 But forth I led her through the temple
 gate,
 By which I hardly past with much adoe:
 But that same ladie, which me friended
 late
 In entrance, did me also friend in my retrate.

LVIII

‘ No lesse did Daunger threaten me with
 dread,
 When as he saw me, maugre all his powre,
 That glorious spoyle of beautie with me
 lead,
 Then Cerberus, when Orpheus did recoure

His leman from the Stygian princes boure.
 But evermore my shield did me defend Against the storme of every dreadfull
 stoure:
 Thus safely with my love I thence did
 wend.
 So ended he his tale, where I this canto
 end.

CANTO XI

Marinells former wound is heald;
 He comes to Proteus hall, Where Thames doth the Medway wedd,
 And feasts the sea-gods all.

I

BUT ah for pittie that I have thus long Left a fayre ladie languishing in payne!
 Now well away! that I have doen such
 wrong,
 To let faire Florimell in bands remayne, In bands of love, and in sad thraldomes chayne!
 From which unlesse some heavenly powre her free
 By miracle, not yet appearing playne,
 She lenger yet is like captiv'd to bee:
 That even to thinke thereof it inly pitties
 mee.

II

Here neede you to remember, how erewhile Unlovely Proteus, missing to his mind That virgins love to win by wit or wile,
 Her threw into a dongeon deepe and blind,
 And there in chaynes her cruelly did bind,
 In hope thereby her to his bent to draw:
 For when as neither gifts nor graces kind Her constant mind could move at all, he
 saw,
 He thought her to compell by crueltie and awe.

Deepe in the bottome of an huge great rocke
 The dongeon was, in which her bound he
 left,
 That neither yron barres, nor brasen locke,
 Did neede to gard from force or secret theft Of all her lovers, which would her have
 reft.
 For wall'd it was with waves, which rag'd and ror'd

As they the cliffe in peeces would have
 cleft;
 Besides, ten thousand monsters foule ab-hor'd Did waite about it, gaping griesly, all begor'd.

IV

And in the midst thereof did horror dweli, And darkenesse dredd, that never viewed
 day,
 Like to the balefull house of lowest hell,
 In which old Styx her aged bones alway, Old Styx the grandame of the gods, doth
 lay.
 There did this lucklesse mayd seven months
 abide,
 Ne ever evening saw, ne mornings ray,
 Ne ever from the day the night descride, But thought it all one night, that did no houres divide.

V

And all this was for love of Marinell, Who her despysd (ah! who would her despyse?)
 And womens love did from his hart expell,
 And all those joyes that weake mankind entyse.
 Natllesse his pride full dearely he did pryse;
 For of a womans hand it was ywroke,
 That of the wound he yet in languor lyes, Ne can be cured of that cruell stroke Which Britomart him gave, when he did her provoke.

VI

Yet farre and neare the nymph, his mother,
 sought,
 And many salves did to his sore applie, And many herbes did use. But when as
 nought
 She saw could ease his rankling maladie,
 At last to Tryphon she for helpe did hie, (This Tryphon is the seagods surgeon hight) Whom she besought to find some remedie:
 And for his paines a whistle him behight, That of a fishes shell was wrought with rare
 delight.

VII

So well that leach did hearke to her request,
 And did so well employ his carefull paine,

That in short space his hurts he had redrest,
And him restor'd to healthfull state againe:
In which he long time after did remaine There with the nymph his mother, like her
thrall;

Who sore against his will did him retaine,
For feare of perill, which to him mote fall, Through his too ventrous prowesse proved over all.

VIII

It fortun'd then, a solemne feast was there
To all the sea-gods and their fruitfull seede, In honour of the spousalls which then were Betwixt the Medway and the Thames agreed.

Long had the Thames (as we in records reed)

Before that day her wooed to his bed;
But the proud nymph would for no worldly
meed,

Nor no entreatie to his love be led;
Till now at last relenting, she to him was wed.

IX

So both agreed that this their bridale feast Should for the gods in Proteus house be
made;

To which they all repayr'd, both most and
least,

Aswell which in the mightie ocean trade,
As that in rivers swim, or brookes doe wade.
All which not if an hundred tongues to tell,
And hundred mouthes, and voice of brasse I
had,

And endlesse memorie, that mote excell, In order as they came, could I recount them
well.

Helpe therefore, O thou sacred imp of Jove,

The noursling of Dame Memorie his deare, To whom those rolles, layd up in heaven
above,

And records of antiquitie appeare,
To which no wit of man may comen neare; Helpe me to tell the names of all those floods,

And all those nymphes, which then assembled were

To that great banquet of the watry gods,
And all their sundry kinds, and all their hid abodes.

XI

First came great Neptune with his threeforkt mace,

That rules the seas, and makes them rise or fall;

His dewy lockes did drop with brine apace
Under his diademe imperiall:

And by his side his queene with coronall, Faire Amphitrite, most divinely faire, Whose yvorie shoulders weren covered all,
As with a robe, with her owne silver haire, And deckt with pearles, which th' Indian seas for her prepaire.

XII

These marched farre afore the other crew;
And all the way before them as they went,
Triton his trompet shrill before them blew,
For goodly triumph and great jollyment, That made the rockes to roare, as they were rent.

And after them the royall issue came,
Which of them sprung by lineall descent:
First the sea-gods, which to themselves doe claime

The powre to rule the billowes, and the waves to tame:

XIII

Phoreys, the father of that fatall brood, By whom those old heroes woune such
fame:

And Glaucus, that wise southsayeres understood;

And tragicke Inoes sonne, the which became

A god of seas through his mad mothers
blame,

Now hight Palemon, and is saylers frend;
Great Brontes, and Astræus, that did shame Himselfe with incest of his kin unkend;

And huge Orion, that doth tempests still portend;

XIV

The rich Cteatus, and Eurytus long;
Neleus and Pelias, lovely brethren both;

Mightie Chrysaor, and Cæteus strong;
Euryulus, that calmes the waters wroth;
And faire Euphæmus, that upon them got As on the ground, without dismay or dread; Fierce Eryx, and Alebius that know'th
The waters depth, and doth their bottom
tread;

And sad Asopus, comely with his hoarie head.

XV

There also some most famous founders
 were
 Of puissant nations, which the world pos-
 sest;
 Yet sommes of Neptune, now assembled here:
 Ancient Ogyges, even th' auncientest,
 And Inachus renowmd above the rest; Phœnix, and Aon, and Pelasgus old, Great Belus, Phœax, and Agenor best;
 And mightie Albion, father of the hold And warlike people which the Britaine Islands hold.

XVI

For Albion the sonne of Neptune was,
 Who, for the prooffe of his great puissance,
 Out of his Albion did on dry-foot pas Into old Gall, that now is cleeped France,
 To fight with Hercules, that did advance To vanquish all the world with matchlesse
 might,
 And there his mortall part by great mis-chance
 Was slaine: but that which is th' immortall
 spright
 Lives still, and to this feast with Neptunes seed was dight.

XVII

But what doe I their names seeke to re-
 herse,
 Which all the world have with their issue
 fild?
 How can they all in this so narrow verse Contayned be, and in small compasse hild?
 Let them record them, that are better skild,
 And know the monuments of passed age:
 Onely what needeth shall be here fulfilld, T' expresse some part of that great equip-
 age,
 Which from great Neptune do derive their parentage.

XVIII

Next came the aged Ocean, and his dame, Old Tethys, th' oldest two of all the rest,
 For all the rest of those two parents came,
 Which afterward both sea and land pos-
 sest:
 Of all which Nereus, th' eldest and the best, Did first proceed, then which none more upright,
 Ne more sincere in word and deed profest;

Most voide of guile, most free from fowle
 despight,
 Doing him selfe, and teaching others to doe
 right.

XIX

Thereto he was expert in prophecies,
 And could the ledden of the gods unfold, Through which, when Paris brought his famous prise,
 The faire Tindarid lasse, he him fortold, That her all Greece with many a champion
 bold
 Should fetch againe, and finally destroy Proud Priams towne. So wise is Nereus
 old,
 And so well skild; nathlesse he takes great
 joy
 Oft-times amongst the wanton nymphs to sport and toy.

XX

And after him the famous rivers came,
 Which doe the earth enrich and beautifie:
 The fertile Nile, which creatures new doth
 frame;
 Long Rhodanus, whose sourse springs from
 the skie;
 Faire Ister, flowing from the mountaines
 hie;
 Divine Scamander, purpled yet with blood Of Greekes and Trojans, which therein did
 die;
 Pactolus glistring with his golden flood,
 And Tygris fierce, whose streames of none may be withstood;

XXI

Great Ganges, and immortall Euphrates, Deepe Indus, and Mæander intricate,
 Slow Peneus, and tempestuous Phasides, Swift Rhene, and Alpheus still immacu-
 late;
 Ooraxes, feared for great Cyrus fate;
 Tybris, renowmd for the Romaines fame;
 Rich Oranochy, though but knowen late;
 And that huge river, which doth beare his
 name
 Of warlike Amazous, which doe possesse
 the same.

XXII

Joy on those warlike women, which so long Can from all men so rich a kingdome hold!

And shame on you, O men, which boast your strong And valiant hearts, in thoughts lesse hard and bold,
 Yet quail in conquest of that land of gold !
 But this to you, O Britons, most pertaines, To whom the right hereof it selfe bath
 sold;
 The which, for sparing litle cost or paines, Loose so immortall glory, and so endlesse gaines.

XXIII

Then was there heard a most celestiall
 sound
 Of dainty musicke, which did next ensw
 Before the spouse: that was Arion crownd;
 Who, playing on his harpe, unto him drew The eares and hearts of all that goodly
 crew,
 That even yet the dolphin, which him bore Through the Agean seas from pirates vew, Stood still by him astonisht at his lore,
 And all the raging seas for joy forgot to rore.

XXIV

So went he playing on the watery plaine.
 Soone after whom the lovely bridegroom
 came,
 The noble Thamis, with all his goodly
 traine;
 But him before there went, as best became,
 His aunccient parents, namely th' aunccient Thame:
 But much more aged was his wife then he,
 The Ouze, whom men doe Isis rightly
 name;
 Full weake and crooked creature seemed
 shee,
 And almost blind through eld, that scarce her way could see.

XXV

Therefore on either side she was sustained Of two smal grooms, which by their names were hight
 The Churne and Charwell, two small streames, which pained Them selves her footing to direct aright, Which fayled off through faint and feeble
 plight:
 But Thame was stronger, and of better
 stay;
 Yet seem'd full aged by his outward sight,

With head all hoary, and his beard all gray, Deawed with silver drops, that trickled downe alway.

XXVI

And eke he somewhat seem'd to stoupe
 afore
 With bowed backe, by reason of the lode
 And aunccient heavy burden which he bore
 Of that faire city, wherein make abode
 So many learned impes, that shoote abrode,
 And with their branches spred all Britany,
 No lesse then do her elder sisters broode.
 Joy to you both, ye double nourser Of arts! but, Oxford, thine doth Thame most glorify.

XXVII

But he their sonne full fresh and jolly was,
 All decked in a robe of watchet hew,
 On which the waves, glittering like christall
 glas,
 So cunningly enwoven were, that few Could weenen whether they were false or trew.
 And on his head like to a coronet
 He wore, that seemed strange to common
 vew,
 In which were many towres and castels set,
 That it encompass round as with a golden fret.

XXVIII

Like as the mother of the gods, they say,
 In her great iron charet wonts to ride, When to Joves pallace she doth take her
 way,
 Old Cybele, arayd with pompous pride, Wearing a diademe embattild wide With hundred turrets, like a turribant.
 With such an one was Thamis beautifide;
 That was to weet the famous Troynovant, In which her kingdomes throne is chiefly resiant.

XXIX

And round about him many a pretty page Attended duely, ready to obay;
 All litle rivers, which owe vassallage
 To him, as to their lord, and tribute pay:
 The chauiky Kenet, and the Thetis gray,
 The morish Cole, and the soft sliding Breane,
 The wanton Lee, that oft doth loose his
 way.

And the still Darent, in whose waters
cleane
Ten thousand fishes play, and decke his pleasant streame.

XXX

Then came his neighbour fouds, which nigh him dwell,
And water all the English soile throughout;

They all on him this day attended well,
And with meet service waited him about;
Ne none disdained low to him to lout:
No, not the stately Severne grudg'd at
all,

Ne storming Humber, though he looked
stout;

But both him honor'd as their principall, And let their swelling waters low before him fall.

XXXI

There was the speedy Tamar, which de-vides

The Cornish and the Devonish confines; Through both whose borders swiftly downe it glides,

And meeting Plim, to Plimmouth thence declines:

And Dart, nigh choekt with sands of tinny mines.

But Avon marched in more stately path, Proud of his adamants, with which he shines

And glisters wide, as als' of wondrous Bath,

And Bristow faire, which on his waves he buildd hath.

XXXII

And there came Stoure with terrible aspect, Bearing his sixe deformed heads on hye, That doth his course through Blandford plains direct,

And washeth Winborne meades in season drye.

Next him went Wylibourne with passage slye,

That of his wylinesse his name doth take,
And of him selfe doth name the shire
thereby:

And Mole, that like a nousling mole doth
make

His way still under ground, till Thamis he overtake.

XXXIII

Then came the Rother, decked all with woods

Like a wood god, and flowing fast to Rhy:
And Sture, that parteth with his pleasant floods

The easterne Saxons from the southerne ny, And Clare and Harwitch both doth beautify:

Him follow'd Yar, soft washing Norwitch
wall,

And with him brought a present joyfully
Of his owne fish unto their festivall, Whose like none else could shew, the which they ruffins call.

XXXIV

Next these the plenteous Ouse came far from land,

By many a city, and by many a towne,
And many rivers taking under hand Into his waters, as he passeth downe, The Cle, the Were, the Grant, the Sture, the Rowne,

Thence doth by Huntingdon and Cambridge
flit,

My mother Cambridge, whom as with a crowne

He doth adorne, and is adorn'd of it With many a gentle muse, and many a learned wit.

XXXV

And after him the fatall Welland went,
That if old sawes prove true (which God forbid)

Shall drowne all Holland with his excre-
ment,

And shall see Stamford, though now homely hid,

Then shine in learning, more then ever did

Cambridge or Oxford, Englands goodly
beames.

And next to him the Nene downe softly
slid;

And bounteous Trent, that in him selfe enseames

Both thirty sorts of fish and thirty sundry streames.

XXXVI

Next these came Tyne, along whose stony
bancke

Tha' Romaine monarch built a brasen wall,

Which mote the feebled Britons strongly flanke Against the Piets, that swarmed over all,
Which yet thereof Gualsever they doe call:
And Twede, the limit betwixt Logris land And Albany: and Eden, though but small, Yet often stainde with bloud of many a band Of Scots and English both, that tynd on his strand.

XXXVII

Then came those sixe sad brethren, like
forlorne,
That whilome were (as antique fathers tell) Sixe valiant knights, of one faire nymphe yborne,
Which did in noble deedes of armes excell,
And womed there where now Yorke people
dwell:
Still Ure, swift Werfe, and Oze the most of might,
High Swale, unquiet Nide, and troublous Skell;
All whom a Scythian king, that Humber
hight,
Slew cruelly, and in the river drowned
quight.

XXXVIII

But past not long, ere Brutus warlicke
sonne,
Loerinus, them aveng'd, and the same date, Which the proud Humber unto them had
donne,
By equall dome repayd on his owne pate:
For in the selfe same river, where he late Had drenched them, he drowned him
again;e;
And nam'd the river of his wretched fate;
Whose bad condition yet it doth retaine, Oft tossed with his stormes, which therein still remaine.

XXXIX

These after, came the stony shallow Lone,
That to old Loncaster his name doth lend;
And following Dee, which Britons long ygone
Did call divine, that doth by Chester tend;
And Conway, which out of his streame doth
send Plenty of pearles to decke his dames with-
all;
And Lindus, that his pikes doth most commend,

Of which the auncient Lincolne men doe
call:
All these together marched toward Proteus hall.

XL

Ne thence the Irishe rivers absent were:
Sith no lesse famous then the rest they bee,
And joyne in neighbourhood of kingdome
nere,
Why should they not likewise in love agree,
And joy likewise this solemne day to see?
They saw it all, and present were in place;
Though I them all, according their degree, Cannot recount, nor tell their hidden race, Nor read the salvage cuntries thorough which they pace.

XLI

There was the Liffy rolling downe the lea,
The sandy Slane, the stony Aubrian,
The spacious Shenan spreading like a sea,
The pleasant Boyne, the fishy fruitfull Ban, Swift Awniduff, which of the English man Is cal'de Blackewater, and the Liffar deep, Sad Trowis, that once his people overran, Stroug Allo tomling from Slewlogher
steep,
And Mulla mine, whose waves I whilom taught to weep.

XLII

And there the three renowned brethren
were,
Which that great gyant Blomius begot
Of the faire nymphe Rheusa wandring there.
One day, as she to shunne the season whot, Under Slewblome in shady grove was got,
This gyant found her, and by force de-flour'd;
Whereof conceiving, she in time forth
brought These three faire sons, which, being thence forth powrd,
In three great rivers ran, and many cuntries scowrd.

XLIII

The first, the gentle Shure, that, making
way
By sweet Clonmell, adornes rich Water-
ford;
The next, the stubborne Newre, whose waters gray
By faire Kilkenny and Rossepointe boord;

The third, the goodly Barow, which doth hoord
Great heapes of salmons in his deepe bosome:
All which long sundred, doe at last accord
To joyne in one, ere to the sea they come, So, flowing all from one, all one at last become.

XLIV

There also was the wide embayed Mayre, The pleasaut Bandon, crownd with many a
wood,
The spreading Lee, that like an island
fayre
Encloseth Corke with his devided flood;
And balefull Oure, late staind with English
blood:
With many more, whose names no tongue can tell.
All which that day in order seemly good Did on the Thamis attend, and waited
well
To doe their duefull service, as to them befell.

XLV

Then came the bride, the lovely Medua
came,
Clad in a vesture of unknowen geare,
And uncouth fashion, yet her well became;
That seem'd like silver, sprinkled here and
there
With glittering spangs, that did like starres
appeare,
And wav'd upon, like water chamelot, To hide the metall, which yet every where Bewrayd it selfe, to let men plainly wot, It was no mortall worke, that seem'd and yet was not.

XLVI

Her goodly lockes adowne her backe did
flow
Unto her waste, with flowres bescattered, The which ambrosiall odours forth did
throw
To all about, and all her shoulders spred
As a new spring; and likewise on her hed
A chapelet of sundry flowers she wore,
From under which the deawy humour shed Did tricle downe her haire, like to the hore Congealed litle drops, which doe the morne adore

XLVII

On her two pretty handmaidens did attend, One cald the Theise, the other cald the Crane; Which on her waited, things amisse to
mend,
And both behind upheld her spredding
traine;
Under the which her feet appeared plaine, Her silver feet, faire washt against this
day:
And her before there paced pages twaine,
Both clad in colours like, and like array,
The Doune and eke the Frith, both which prepard her way.

XLVIII

And after these the sea nymphs marched
all,
All goodly damzels, deckt with long greene
haire,
Whom of their sire Nereides men call,
All which the Oceans daughter to hir
bare,
The gray eyde Doris: all which fifty are;
All which she there on her attending had:
Swift Proto, milde Eucerate, Thetis faire, Soft Spio, sweete Endore, Sao sad, Light Doto, wanton Glauce, and Galene glad,

XLIX

White hand Eunice, proud Dynamene, Joyous Thalia, goodly Amphitrite, Lovely Pasithee, kinde Eulimene, Light foote Cymothoe, and sweete Melite, Fairest Pherusa, Phao lilly white, Wondred Agave, Poris, and Nesæa, With Erato, that doth in love delite,
And Panopæ, and wise Protomedæa, And snowy neckd Doris, and milkewhite Galathæa,

L

Speedy Hippothoe, and chaste Actea, Large Lisianassa, and Pronæa sage, Evagore, and light Pontoporea, And she that with her least word can asswage
The surging seas, when they do sorest rage, Cymodoce, and stout Autonoe,
And Neso, and Eione well in age,
And seeming still to smile, Glauconome,
And she that hight of many heastes Polynome,

LI

Fresh Alimeda, deckt with girland greene, Hyponeo, with salt bedewed wrests, Laomedia, like the christall sheene, Liagore, much praised for wise behests,
 And Psamathe, for her brode snowy breasts, Cymo, Eupompe, and Thœmiste just,
 And she that vertue loves and vice detests, Evarna, and Menippe true in trust,
 And Nemertea, learned well to rule her lust.

LII

All these the daughters of old Nereus were,
 Which have the sea in charge to them as-
 side,
 To rule his tides, and surges to upere,
 To bring forth stormes, or fast them to up-binde,
 And sailers save from wreckes of wrath-full winde.
 And yet besides, three thousand more there
 were
 Of th' Oceans seede, but Joves and Phœbus
 kinde;
 The which in floods and fountaines doe ap-
 pere,
 And all mankinde do nourish with their waters clere.

LIII

The which, more eath it were for mortall
 wight
 To tell the sands, or count the starres on
 hye,
 Or ought more hard, then thinke to reckon
 right.
 But well I wote that these which I desery Were present at this great solemnity:
 And there, amongst the rest, the mother was Of luckelesse Marinell, Cymodoce; Which, for my Muse her selfe now tyred
 has,
 Unto an other canto I will overpas.

CANTO XII

Marin, for love of Florimell, In languor wastes his life:
 The nymphe his mother getteth her,
 And gives to him for wife.

I

O WHAT an endlesse worke have I in
 hand,
 To count the seas abundant progeny,

Whose fruitfull seede farre passeth those in land,
 And also those which wonne in th' azure
 sky!
 For much more eath to tell the starres on
 hy, Albe they endlesse seeme in estimation,
 Then to recount the seas posterity:
 So fertile be the floods in generation, So huge their numbers, and so numberlesse their nation.

II

Therefore the antique wisards well invented,
 That Venus of the fomy sea was bred;
 For that the seas by her are most augmented.
 Witnesse th' exceeding fry which there are
 fed,
 And wondrous sholes, which may of none
 be red.
 Then blame me not, if I have err'd in count
 Of gods, of nymphs, of rivers yet unred:
 For though their numbers do much more surmount,
 Yet all those same were there, which erst I did recount.

III

All those were there, and many other more, Whose names and nations were too long to
 tell,
 That Proteus house they filld even to the
 dore;
 Yet were they all in order, as befell,
 According their degrees disposed well.
 Amongst the rest was faire Cymodoce,
 The mother of unlucky Marinell, Who thither with her came, to learne and
 see
 The manner of the gods when they at banquet be.

IV

But for he was halfe mortall, being bred Of mortall sire, though of immortal wombe,
 He might not with immortal food be fed,
 Ne with th' eternall gods to banquet come;
 But walkt abrode, and round about did
 rome,
 To view the building of that uncouth place,
 That seem'd unlike unto his earthly home:

Where, as he to and fro by chauce did
trace,
There unto him betid a disaventrous case.

V

Under the hanging of an hideous clieffe
He heard the lamentable voice of one That piteously complaind her carefull
grieffe,
Which never she before disclosd to none,
But to her selfe her sorrow did bemone.
So feelingly her case she did complaine,
That ruth it moved in the rocky stone,
And made it seeme to feele her grievous
paine,
And off to grone with billowes beating from the maine.

VI

'Though vaine I see my sorrowes to unfold, And count my cares, when none is nigh to
heare,
Yet, hoping griefe may lessen being told,
I will them tell though unto no man neare:
For Heaven, that unto all lends equal eare,
Is farre from hearing of my heavy plight;
And lowest Hell, to which I lie most neare, Cares not what evils hap to wretched wight;
And greedy seas doe in the spoile of life
delight.

VII

'Yet loe! the seas I see by often beating Doe pearce the rockes, and hardest marble weares;
But his hard rocky hart for no entreating Will yeeld, but when my piteous plaints he
heares,
Is hardned more with my abundant teares.
Yet though he never list to me relent, But let me waste in woe my wretched
yeares,
Yet will I never of my love repent,
But joy that for his sake I suffer prisonment.

VIII

'And when my weary ghost, with griefe outworne,
By timely death shall winne her wished
rest,
Let then this plaint unto his eares be borne,
That blame it is to him, that armes pro-
fest,
To let her die, whom he might have re-
drest.'

There did she pause, inforced to give place Unto the passion that her heart opprest;
And after she had wept and wail'd a space,
She gan afresh thus to renew her wretched
case:

IX

'Ye gods of seas, if any gods at all Have care of right, or ruth of wretches
wrong,
By one or other way me, woefull thrall, Deliver hence out of this dungeon strong,
In which I daily dying am too long.
And if ye deeme me death for loving one That loves not me, then doe it not prolong,
But let me die and end my daies attone,
And let him live unlov'd, or love him selfe alone.

X

'But if that life ye unto me decree,
Then let mee live as lovers ought to do,
And of my lifes deare love beloved be:
And if he shall through pride your doome undo,
Do you by duresse him compell thereto,
And in this prison put him here with me:
One prison fittest is to hold us two:
So had I rather to be thrall then free; Such thraldome or such freedome let it surely be.

XI

'But O vaine judgement, and conditions
vaine,
The which the prisoner points unto the free!
The whiles I him condemne, and deeme his
paine,
He where he list goes loose, and laughs at me.
So ever loose, so ever happy be.
But where so loose or happy that thou art, Know, Marinell, that all this is for thee.'
With that she wept and wail'd, as if her
hart
Would quite have burst through great abundance of her smart.

XII

All which complaint when Marinell had
heard,
And understood the cause of all her care
To come of him, for using her so hard,
His stubborne heart, that never felt mis-
fare.

Was toucht with soft remorse and pittie rare;
That even for griefe of minde he oft did
grone,
And inly wish that in his powre it weare Her to redresse: but since he meanes found
none,
He could no more but her great misery be-
mone.

XIII

Thus whilst his stony heart with tender ruth
Was toucht, and mighty courage mollifide, Dame Venus sonne, that tameth stubborne youth
With iron bit, and maketh him abide,
Till like a victor on his backe he ride,
Into his mouth his maystring bridle threw,
That made him stoupe, till he did him be-
stride:
Then gan he make him tread his steps
anew,
And learne to love, by learning lovers paines to rew.

XIV

Now gan he in his grieved minde devise,
How from that dungeon he might her enlarge:
Some while he thought, by faire and humble wise
To Proteus selfe to sue for her discharge; But then he fear'd his mothers former
charge Gainst womens love, long given him in
vaine:
Then gan he thinke, perforce with sword and targe Her forth to fetch, and Proteus to con-
straine;
But soone he gan such folly to forthinke again.

XV

Then did he cast to steale her thence away,
And with him beare, where none of her might know.
But all in vaine: forwhy he found no way To enter in, or issue forth below:
For all about that rocke the sea did flow.
And though unto his will she given were,
Yet without ship or bote her thence to row,
He wist not how her thence away to bere;
And daunger well he wist long to continue
there.

XVI

At last when as no meanes he could invent, Baeke to him selfe he gan returne the
blame,
That was the author of her punishment;
And with vile curses and reprochfull shame
To damne him selfe by every evill name;
And deeme unworthy or of love or life,
That had despise so chast and faire a
dame,
Which him had sought through trouble and long strife, Yet had refusde a god that her had sought to wife.

XVII

In this sad plight he walked here and there,
And romed round about the rocke in vaine,
As he had lost him selfe, he wist not where;
Oft listening if he mote her heare againe,
And still bemoning her unworthy paine:
Like as an hynde whose calfe is falne un-wares
Into some pit, where she him heares com-
plaine,
An hundred times about the pit side fares, Right sorrowfully mourning her bereaved cares.

XVIII

And now by this the feast was throughly
ended,
And every one gan homeward to resort.
Which seeing, Marinell was sore offended, That his departure thence should be so
short,
And leave his love in that sea-walled fort.
Yet durst he not his mother disobay;
But her attending in full seemly sort,
Did march amongst the many all the way:
And all the way did inly mourne, like one astray.

XIX

Being returned to his mothers bowre,
In solitary silence far from wight,
He gan record the lamentable stowre In which his wretched love lay day and
night,
For his deare sake, that ill deserv'd that
plight:
The thought whereof empierst his hart so
deepe,
That of no worldly thing he tooke delight;

Ne dayly food did take, ne nightly sleepe, But pyn'd, and mourn'd, and languisht, and alone did weepe;

XX

That in short space his wonted chearefull
hew
Gan fade, and lively spirits deaded quight:
His cheeke bones raw, and eie-pits hollow
grew,
And brawney armes had lost their knowen
might,
That nothing like himselve he seem'd in
sight.
Ere long so weake of limbe, and sicke of
love
He woxe, that lenger he note stand up-
right,
But to his bed was brought, and layd above, Like ruefull ghost, unable once to stirre or move.

XXI

Which when his mother saw, she in her
mind
Was troubled sore, ne wist well what to
weene,
Ne could by search nor any meanes out
find
The secret cause and nature of his teene, Whereby she might apply some medicine;
But weeping day and night, did him attend,
And mourn'd to see her losse before her
eyne,
Which griev'd her more that she it could not mend:
To see an helpelesse evill double grieffe doth lend.

XXII

Nought could she read the roote of his disease, Ne weene what mister maladie it is, Whereby to seeke some meanes it to ap-
pease.
Most did she thinke, but most she thought
amis,
That that same former fatall wound of his Whyleare by Tryphon was not throughly healed,
But closely rankled under th' orifis:
Least did she thinke, that which he most concealed,
That love it was, which in his hart lay unrevealed.

XXIII

Therefore to Tryphon she againe doth hast, And him doth chyde as false and fraudulent,
That fayld the trust which she in him had
plast,
To cure her sonne, as he his faith had lent:
Who now was falne into new languishment
Of his old hurt, which was not throughly cured.
So backe he came unto her patient: Where searching every part, her well assured,
That it was no old sore which his new paine procured;

XXIV

But that it was some other maladie, Or grieffe unknowne, which he could not discerne:
So left he her withouten remedie.
Then gan her heart to faint, and quake, and
earne,
And inly troubled was, the truth to learne.
Unto himselve she came, and him besought, Now with faire speches, now with threatnings sterne,
If ought lay hidden in his grieved thought,
It to reveale: who still her answered, there was nought.

XXV

Nathlesse she rested not so satisfide,
But leaving watry gods, as booting nought, Unto the shinie heaven in haste she hide,
And thence Apollo, king of leaches,
brought.
Apollo came; who, soone as he had sought Through his disease, did by and by out
find
That he did languish of some inward
thought,
The which afflicted his engrieved mind;
Which love he red to be, that leads each living kind.

XXVI

Which when he had unto his mother told,
She gan thereat to fret and greatly grieve;
And comming to her sonne, gan first to scold
And chyde at him, that made her misbe-lieve:
But afterwards she gan him soft to shrieve,
And woove with faire intreatie, to disclose

Which of the nymphes his heart so sore did mieve;
 For sure she weend it was some one of those Which he had lately seene, that for his love he chose.

XXVII

Now lesse she feared that same fatall read,
 That warned him of womens love beware:
 Which being ment of mortall creatures sead,
 For love of nymphes she thought she need not care, But promist him, what ever wight she
 weare,
 That she her love to him would shortly
 gaine:
 So he her told: but soone as she did heare That Florimell it was, which wrought his
 paine,
 She gan a fresh to chafe, and grieve in every vaine.

XXVIII

Yet since she saw the streight extremitie,
 In which his life unluckily was layd,
 It was no time to scan the prophecie,
 Whether old Proteus true or false had sayd,
 That his decay should happen by a mayd:
 It's late, in death, of daunger to advize,
 Or love forbid him that is life denyd:
 But rather gan in troubled mind devize How she that ladies libertie might enterprize.

XXIX

To Proteus selfe to sew she thought it
 vaine,
 Who was the root and worker of her woe,
 Nor unto any meaner to complaine;
 But unto great King Neptune selfe did goe,
 And on her knee before him falling lowe,
 Made humble suit unto his Majestie, To graunt to her her sommes life, which his
 foe,
 A cruell tyrant, had presumpteonslie By wicked doome condemn'd a wretched death to die.

XXX

To whom God Neptune, softly smyling,
 thus:
 'Daughter, me seemes of double wrong ye
 plaine,

Gainst one that hath both wronged you and us:
 For death t'ward I ween'd did apper-
 taine
 To none but to the seas sole souveraine.
 Read therefore who it is, which this hath
 wrought,
 And for what cause; the truth discover
 plaine.
 For never wight so evill did or thought,
 But would some rightfull cause pretend, though rightly nought.'

XXXI

To whom she answer 'Then it is by name ld I

So oft as I wit^h state of present time
 The image of the antique world compare, When as mans age was in his freshest prime,
 And the first blossome of faire vertue bare, Such oddes I finde twixt those, and these which are,
 As that, through long continuance of his course,
 Me seemes the world is runne quite out of square
 From the first point of his appointed sourse,
 And being once amisse, growes daily wourse and wourse.

II

For from the golden age, that first was named,
 It's now at earst become a stonie one;
 And men themselves, the which at first were framed Of earthly mould, and form'd of flesh and
 bone,
 Are now transformed into hardest stone: Such as behind their backs (so backward bred)
 Were throwne by Pyrrha and Deucalione:
 And if then those may any worse be red,
 They into that ere long will be degendered.

III

Let none then blame me, if in discipline
 Of vertue and of civill uses lore,
 I doe not forme them to the common line Of present dayes, which are corrupted
 sore,
 But to the antique use which was of yore,
 When good was onely for it selfe desyred,
 And all men sought their owne, and none
 no more;
 When Justice was not for most meed outhyred,
 But simple Truth did rayne, and was of all admyred.

IV

For that which all men then did vertue
 call
 Is now cald vice; and that which vice was
 hight,
 Is now hight vertue, and so us'd of all:
 Right now is wrong, and wrong that was is
 right,
 As all things else in time are chaunged
 quight.
 Ne wonder; for the heavens revolution Is wandred farre from where it first was
 pight,
 And so doe make contrarie constitution Of all this lower world, toward his dissolution.

V

For who so list into the heavens looke, And search the courses of the rowling
 spheares,
 Shall find that from the point where they first tooke Their setting forth, in these few thousand
 yeares

They all are wandred much; that plaine appeares.
For that same golden fleecy Ram, which
bore Phrixus and Helle from their stepdames
feares,
Hath now forgot where he was plast of
yore,
And shouldred hath the Bull, which fayre Europa bore.

VI

And eke the Bull hath with his bow-beut horne
So hardly butted those two Twinnes of Jove,
That they have crusht the Crab, and quite him borne Into the great Nemæan Lions grove.
So now all range, and doe at randon rove
Out of their proper places farre away,
And all this world with them amisse doe
move,
And all his creatures from their course
astray,
Till they arrive at their last ruinous decay.

VII

Ne is that same great glorious lampe of
light,
That doth enlumine all these lesser fyres, In better case, ne keeps his course more
right,
But is miscaried with the other spheres.
For since the terme of fourteene hundred
yeres,
That learned Ptolomæ his hight did
take,
He is deelyned from that marke of theirs
Nigh thirtie minutes to the southerne lake; That makes me feare in time he will us quite forsake.

VIII

And if to those Ægyptian wisards old, Which in star-read were wont have best in-
sight,
Faith may be given, it is by them told,
That since the time they first tooke the sunnes hight, Foure times his place he shifted hath in
sight,
And twice hath risen where he now doth west.

And wested twice where he ought rise
aright.
But most is Mars amisse of all the rest,
And next to him old Saturne, that was wont be best.

IX

For during Saturnes ancient raigue it's
sayd
That all the world with goodnesse did
abound:
All loved vertue, no man was affrayd
Of force, ne fraud in wight was to be found.
No warre was knowne, no dreadfull trompets sound, Peace universall rayn'd mongst men and beasts,
And all things freely grew out of the
ground:
Justice sate high ador'd with solemne feasts,
And to all people did divide her dred beheasts.

X

Most sacred vertue she of all the rest, Resembling God in his imperiall might; Whose soveraine powre is herein most exprest,
That both to good and bad he dealeth
right,
And all his workes with justice hath be-
dight.
That powre he also doth to princes lend,
And makes them like himselfe in glorious
sight,
To sit in his owne seate, his cause to end,
And rule his people right, as he doth recommend.

XI

Dread soverayne goddesse, that doest highest sit
In seate of judgement, in th' Almightyes
stead,
And with magnificke might and wondrous
wit
Doest to thy people righteous doome aread, That furthest nations filles with awfull
dread,
Pardon the boldnesse of thy basest thrall,
That dare discourse of so divine a read,
As thy great justice praysed over all:
The instrument whereof, loe! here thy Antequall.

CANTO I

Artegall trayn'd in Justice lore Ireanaes quest pursewed;
He doeth avenge on Sanglier His ladies bloud embrewed.

I

THOUGH vertue then were held in highest price,
In those old times of which I doe intreat, Yet then likewise the wicked seede of vice Began to spring; which shortly grew full
great,
And with their boughes the gentle plants did beat.
But evermore some of the vertuous race Rose up, inspired with heroicke heat,
That crompt the branches of the sient base,
And with strong hand their fruitfull ranck-nes did deface.

II

Such first was Bacchus, that with furious
might
All th' East, before untam'd, did overronne, And wrong repressed, and establish right,
Which lawlesse men had formerly fordonne: There Justice first her princely rule be-
gonne.
Next Hercules his like ensample shewed, Who all the West with equall conquest
wonne,
And moustrous tyrants with his club subdewed;
The club of Justice dread, with kingly powre endewed.

III

And such was he of whom I have to tell,
The champion of true Justice, Artégall:
Whom (as ye lately mote remember well)
An hard adventure, which did then befall, An redoubted perill forth did call;
That was to succour a distressed dame,
Whom a strong tyrant did unjustly thrall,
And from the heritage which she did clame Did with strong hand withhold: Grantorto was his name.

IV

Wherefore the lady, which Eirena hight, Did to the Faery Queene her way addresse,
To whom complying her afflicted plight,
She her besought of gracious redresse.

That soveraine queene, that mightie emperesse, Whose glorie is to aide all suppliants pore,
And of weake princes to be patronesse, Chose Artégall to right her to restore;
For that to her he seem'd best skild in righteous lore.

For Artégall in justice was upbrought Even from the cradie of his infancie, And all the depth of rightfull doome was taught
By faire Astræa, with great industrie, Whilest here on earth she lived mortallie.
For till the world from his perfection fell Into all filth and foule iniquitie, Astræa here mongst earthly men did dwell,
And in the rules of justice them instructed
well.

VI

Whiles through the world she walked in this sort,
Upon a day she found this gentle childe, Amongst his peres playing his childish
sport:
Whom seeing fit, and with no crime de-
fild,
She did allure with gifts and speaches milde
To wend with her. So thence him farre she brought Into a cave from companie exilde, In which she nousled him, till yeares he
raught,
And all the discipline of justice there him taught.

VII

There she him taught to weigh both right and wrong
In equall ballance with due recompence,
And equitie to measure out along,
According to the line of conscience, When so it needs with rigour to dis-
pence.
Of all the which, for want there of mankind,
She caused him to make experience Upon wyld beasts, which she in woods did find,
With wrongfull powre oppressing others of their kind.

VIII

Thus she him trayned, and thus she him
taught,
In all the skill of deeming wrong and
right,
Untill the ripenesse of mans yeares he
raught;
That even wilde beasts did feare his awfull
sight,
And men admyr'd his overruling might;
Ne any liv'd on ground, that durst with-
stand
His dreadfull heast, much lesse him match
in fight,
Or bide the horror of his wreakfull hand, When so he list in wrath lift up his steely brand.

IX

Which steely brand, to make him dreaded
more,
She gave unto him, gotten by her slight And earnest search, where it was kept in
store
In Joves eternall house, unwist of wight, Since he himsele it us'd in that great fight Against the Titans, that whylome rebelled Gainst highest heaven; Chrysaor it was
hight;
Chrysaor that all other swords excelled, Well prov'd in that same day, when Jove those gyants quelled.

X

For of most perfect metall it was made, Tempred with adamant amongst the same,
And garnisht all with gold upon the blade
In goodly wise, whereof it tooke his name,
And was of no lesse vertue then of fame:
For there no substance was so firme and
hard,
But it would pierce or cleave, where so it
came;
Ne any armour could his dint out ward;
But wheresoever it did light, it throughly shard.

XI

Now when the world with sinne gan to
abound,
Astraea loathing lenger here to space Mongst wicked men, in whom no truth she
found,
Return'd to heaven, whence she deriv'd her
race;

Where she hath now an everlasting place, Mongst those twelve signes which nightly we doe see

The heavens bright-shining baudricke to en-
chace;
And is the Virgin, sixt in her degree,
And next her selfe her righteous ballance hanging bee.

XII

But when she parted hence, she left her groome,
An yron man, which did on her attend Alwayes, to execute her stedfast doome,
And willed him with Arte gall to wend,
And doe what ever thing he did intend.
His name was Talus, made of yron mould, Immoveable, resistlesse, without end;
Who in his hand an yron flae did hould, With which he thresht out falshood, and did truth unould.

XIII

He now went with him in this new inquest,
Him for to aide, if aide he chaunst to neede, Against that eruell tyrant, which opprest
The faire Irena with his foule misdeede, And kept the crowne in which she should succeed.
And now together on their way they bin,
When as they saw a squire in squallid weed, Lamenting sore his sorrowfull sad tyne, With many bitter teares shed from his blubbred eyne.

XIV

To whom as they approched, they espide
A sorie sight, as ever seene with eye;
An headlesse ladie lying him beside,
In her owne blood all wallow'd wofully,
That her gay clothes did in discolour die.
Much was he moved at that ruefull sight;
And flam'd with zeale of vengeance inwardly,
He askt who had that dame so foully dight;
Or whether his owne hand, or whether other wight?

XV

' Ah, woe is me, and well away ! ' quoth hee, Bursting forth teares, like springs out of a banke.
' That ever I this dismall day did see !
Full farre was I from thinking such a pranke;

Yet litle losse it were, and mickle thanke, If I should graunt that I have doen the
same,
That I mote drinke the cup whereof she dranke:
But that I should die guiltie of the blame,
The which another did, who now is fled with shame.'

XVI

'Who was it then,' sayd Artegall, 'that
wrought?
And why? doe it declare unto me trew.'
'A knight,' said he, 'if knight he may be
thought,
That did his hand in ladies bloud embrew,
And for no cause, but as I shall you shew.
This day as I in solace sate hereby With a fayre love, whose losse I now do
rew,
There came this knight, having in com-panie
This lucklesse ladie, which now here doth headlesse lie.

XVII

'He, whether mine seem'd fayrer in his
eye,
Or that he wexed weary of his owne,
Would change with me; but I did it denye; So did the ladies both, as may be knowne:
But he, whose spirit was with pride up-blowne,
Would not so rest contented with his right, But having from his courser her downe
throwne,
Fro me reft mine away by lawlesse might,
And on his steed her set, to beare her out of sight.

XVIII

'Which when his ladie saw, she follow'd
fast,
And on him catching hold, gan loud to erie
Not so to leave her, nor away to cast,
But rather of his hand besought to die.
With that his sword he drew all wrath-
fully,
And at one stroke cropt off her head with
scorne,
In that same place whereas it now doth
lie.
So he my love away with him hath borne,
And left me here, both his and mine owne love to morne.'

XIX

'Aread,' sayd he, 'which way then did he
make?
And by what markes may he be knowne
again?'
'To hope,' quoth he, 'him soone to over-
take,
That hence so long departed, is but vaine:
But yet he pricked over yonder plaine,
And as I marked, bore upon his shield,
By which it's easie him to know againe,
A broken sword within a bloodie field; Expressing well his nature, which the same did wield.'

XX

No sooner sayd, but streight he after sent His yron page, who him pursew'd so light,
As that it seem'd above the ground he went:
For he was swift as swallow in her flight,
And strong as lyon in his lordly might.
It was not long before he overtooke Sir Sanglier (so cleeped was that knight); Whom at the first he ghesed by his looke,
And by the other markes which of his shield he tooke.

XXI

He bad him stay, and backe with him retire;
Who, full of scorne to be commaunded so,
The lady to alight did eft require,
Whilst he reformed that uncivill fo:
And streight at him with all his force did go.
Who mov'd no more therewith, then when a rocke
Is lightly stricken with some stones throw;
But to him leaping, lent him such a knoecke, That on the ground he layd him like a sencelesse bloeke.

XXII

But ere he could him selfe recure againe, Him in his iron paw he seized had;
That when he wak't out of his warelesse
paine,
He found him selfe, unwist, so ill bestad, That lim he could not wag. Thence he him lad,
Bound like a beast appointed to the stall:
The sight whereof the lady sore adrad,
And fain'd to fly for feare of being thrall;
But he her quickly stayd, and forst to wend withall.

XXIII

When to the place they came, where Artegall

By that same carefull squire did then abide,
He gently gan him to demaund of all,
That did betwixt him and that squire betide.
Who with sterne countenance and indignant
pride

Did aunswere, that of all he guiltlesse
stood,

And his accuser thereupon defide:
For neither he did shed that ladies bloud, Nor tooke away his love, but his owne proper good.

XXIV

Well did the squire perceive him selfe too
weake,

To aunswere his defiaunce in the field, And rather chose his challenge off to breaque,

Then to approve his right with speare and
shield,

And rather guilty chose him selfe to yield.
But Artegall by signes perceiving plaine
That he it was not which that lady kild, But that strange knight, the fairer love to
gaine,

Did cast about by sleight the truth thereout to straine;

XXV

And sayd: 'Now sure this doubtfull causes
right

Can hardly but by sacrament be tride,
Or else by ordele, or by bloody fight;
That ill perhaps mote fall to either side.

But if ye please that I your cause decide, Perhaps I may all further quarrell end,
So ye will sweare my judgement to abide.'
Thereto they both did franckly condescend, And to his doome with listfull eares did both attend.

XXVI

'Sith then,' sayd he, 'ye both the dead deny,

And both the living lady claime your right, Let both the dead and living equally Devided be betwixt you here in sight,
And each of either take his share aright.

But looke, who does dissent from this my
read,

He for a twelve moneths day shall in de-
spight

Bear for his penaunce that same ladies
head;

To witnesse to the world that she by him is dead.'

XXVII

Well pleased with that doome was San-gliere,

And offred streight the lady to be slaine.
But that same squire, to whom she was more dere,

When as he saw she should be cut in twaine, Did yield, she rather should with him re-
maine

Alive, then to him selfe be shared dead;
And rather then his love should suffer
paine,

He chose with shame to beare that ladies
head.

True love despiseth shame, when life is cald in dread.

XXVIII

Whom when so willing Artegall perceaved,
'Not so, thou squire,' he sayd, 'but thine
I deeme

The living lady, which from thee he reaved:

For worthy thou of her doest rightly seeme.
And you, sir knight, that love so light este-
teeme,

As that ye would for little leave the same, Take here your owne, that doth you best beseeume,

And with it beare the burden of defame;
Your owne dead ladies head, to tell abroad your shame.'

XXIX

But Sangliere disdaind much his doome,
And sternly gan repine at his behest; Ne would for ought obay, as did become,
To beare that ladies head before his breast:

Untill that Talus had his pride represt,
And forced him, maulgre, it up to reare.
Who when he saw it bootelesse to resist, He tooke it up, and thence with him did
beare,

As rated spaniell takes his burden up for feare.

XXX

Much did that squire Sir Artegall adore,
For his great justice, held in high regard;

And as his squire him offred evermore
To serve, for want of other meete reward,
And wend with him on his adventure hard.
But he thereto would by no meanes con-
sent;

But leaving him, forth on his journey far'd:
Ne wight with him but onely Talus went;
They two enough t'encounter an whole regiment.

CANTO II

Arteggall heares of Florimell :
Does with the Pagan fight :
Him slaies, drownes Lady Munera, Does race her castle quight

I

NOUGHT is more honorable to a knight, Ne better doth besee me brave chevalry,
Then to defend the feeble in their right,
And wroug redresse in such as wend awry.
Whilome those great heroes got thereby Their greatest glory, for their rightfull
deedes,

And place deserved with the gods on hy.
Herein the noblesse of this knight exceeds,
Who now to perils great for justice sake proceedes.

II

To which as he now was upon the way, He chaunst to meet a dwarfe in hasty
course;

Whom he requir'd his forward hast to
stay,

Till he of tidings mote with him discourse.
Loth was the dwarfe, yet did he stay per-
forse,

And gan of sundry newes his store to tell,
As to his memory they had recourse:
But chiefly of the fairest Florimell, How she was found againe, and spouse to Marimell.

III

For this was Dony, Florimels owne dwarfe, Whom having lost (as ye have heard whyleare)

And finding in the way the seattered scarfe,
The fortune of her life long time did feare.
But of her health when Arteggall did heare,
And safe returne, he was full inly glad,
And askt him where and when her bridale
cheare

Should be solemniz'd: for if time he had,
He would be there, and honor to her spousall ad.

IV

'Within three daies,' quoth he, 'as I do here,
It will be at the Castle of the Strond;
What time, if naught me let, I will be there To doe her service, so as I am bond.
But in my way a little here beyond A cursed cruell Sarazin doth wonne, That keeps a bridges passage by strong
hond,

And many errant knights hath there fordounne;

That makes all men for feare that passage for to shonne.'

V

'What mister wight,' quoth he, 'and how far hence

Is he, that doth to travellers such harmes?'
'He is,' said he, 'a man of great defence; Expert in battell and in deedes of armes;
And more emboldned by the wicked
charmes,

With which his daughter doth him still support;

Having great lordships got and goodly farmes,

Through strong oppression of his powre extort;

By which he stil them holds, and keeps with strong effort.

VI

'And dayly he his wrongs increaseth more;
For never wight he lets to passe that way,
Over his bridge, albee he rich or poore,

But he him makes his passage-penny pay:
Else he doth hold him backe or beat away.
Thereto he hath a groome of evill guise, Whose scalp is bare, that bondage doth be-
wray,

Which pils and pils the poore in piteous
wize;

But he him selfe upon the rich doth tyrannize.

VII

'His name is high Pollente, rightly so,
For that he is so puissant and strong,
That with his powre he all doth overgo,
And makes them subject to his mighty wroug;

And some by sleight he eke doth under-fong;
For on a bridge he custometh to fight,
Which is but narrow, but exceeding leng;
And in the same are many trap fals pight, Through which the rider downe doth fall through oversight.

VIII

'And underneath the same a river flowes, That is both swift and dangerous deepe
withall;
Into the which whom so he overthrowes,
All destitute of helpe doth headlong fall;
But he him selfe, through practise usuall, Leapes forth into the flood, and there assaies
His foe confused through his sodaine fall,
That horse and man he equally dismaies, And either both them drownes, or trayterously slaies.

IX

'Then doth he take the spoile of them at
will,
And to his daughter brings, that dwels
thereby:
Who all that comes doth take, and therewith fill
The coffers of her wicked threasury; Which she with wrongs hath heaped up so
hy,
That many princes she in wealth exceedes,
And purchast all the country lying ny
With the revenue of her plenteous meedes:
Her name is Munera, agreeing with her deedes.

X

'Thereto she is full faire, and rich attired, With golden hands and silver feete beside,
That many lords have her to wife desired:
But she them all despiseth for great pride.'
'Now by my life,' sayd he, 'and God to
guide,
None other way will I this day betake,
But by that bridge, whereas he doth abide: Therefore me thither lead.' No more he
spake,
But thitherward forthright his ready way did make.

XI

Unto the place he came within a while,
Where on the bridge he ready armed saw

The Sarazin, awayting for some spoile.
Who as they to the passage gan to draw,
A villaine to them came with scull all raw,
That passage money did of them require,
According to the custome of their law.
To whom he answerd wroth, 'Loe! there thy hire;'
And with that word him strooke, that streight he did expire.

XII

Which when the Pagan saw, he wexed
wroth,
And streight him selfe unto the fight ad-
drest,
Ne was Sir Artegall behinde: so both Together ran with ready speares in rest.
Right in the midst, whereas they brest to
brest Should meete, a trap was letten downe to
fall
Into the flood: streight leapt the carle un-
blest,
Well weening that his foe was falne withall:
But he was well aware, and leapt before his fall.

XIII

There being both together in the flood,
They each at other tyrannously flew;
Ne ought the water cooled their whot
blood,
But rather in them kindled choler new.
But there the Paynim, who that use well
knew
To fight in water, great advantage had,
That oftentimes him nigh he overthrowd:
And eke the courser whereuppon he rad Could swim like to a fish, whiles he his backe bestrad.

XIV

Which oddes when as Sir Artegall espide,
He saw no way but close with him in hast;
And to him driving strongly downe the
tide,
Uppon his iron coller griped fast, That with the straint his wesand nigh he
brast.
There they together strove and struggled
long,
Either the other from his steede to cast;
Ne ever Artegall his griple strong For any thing wold slacke, but still uppon him hong.

XV

As when a dolphin and a sele are met In the wide champian of the ocean plaine:
 With cruell chaufe their courages they whet, The maysterdome of each by force to
 gaine,
 And dreadfull battaile twixt them do dar-
 raine:
 They snuf, they snort, they bounce, they rage, they rore,
 That all the sea, disturbed with their traine, Doth frie with fome above the surges hore:
 Such was betwixt these two the troublesome uprore.

XVI

So Artegal at length him forst forsake His horses backe, for dread of being
 drown'd,
 And to his handy swimming him betake.
 Eftsoones him selfe he from his hold un-
 bownd,
 And then no ods at all in him he fownd:
 For Artegal in swimming skilfull was,
 And durst the depth of any water sownd.
 So ought each knight, that use of perill has,
 In swimming be expert, through waters force to pas.

XVII

Then very doubtfull was the warres event, Uncertaine whether had the better side:
 For both were skild in that experiment,
 And both in armes well traund and throughly
 tride.
 But Artegal was better breath'd beside,
 And towards th' end grew greater in his
 might,
 That his faint foe no longer could abide His puissance, ne beare him selfe upright, But from the water to the land betooke his flight.

XVIII

But Artegal pursewd him still so neare, With bright Chrysaor in his cruell hand,
 That, as his head he gan a litle reare Above the brincke, to tread upon the land, He smote it off, that tumbling on the strand
 It bit the earth for very fell despight,
 And gnashed with his teeth, as if he band High God, whose goodnesse he despaired
 quight,
 Or curst the hand which did that vengeance on him dight.

XIX

His corps was carried downe along the lee, Whose waters with his filthy bloud it stayned:
 But his blasphemous head, that all might
 see,
 He pitcht upon a pole on high ordayned;
 Where many years it afterwards remain'd,
 To be a mirrour to all mighty men, In whose right hands great power is contayned,
 That none of them the feeble overren, But alwaies doe their powre within just compasse pen.

XX

That done, unto the castle he did wend,
 In which the Paynims daughter did abide, Guarded of many which did her defend:
 Of whom he entrance sought, but was de-nide,
 And with reprochfull blasphemy defide, Beaten with stones downe from the battil-
 ment,
 That he was forced to withdraw aside;
 And bad his servant Talus to invent Which way he enter might without endangerment.

XXI

Eftsoones his page drew to the castle gate,
 And with his iron flae at it let flie,
 That all the warders it did sore amate,
 The which erewhile spake so reprochfully, And made them stoupe, that looked earst so hie.
 Yet still he bet and bounst upon the dore,
 And thundred strokes thereon so hideous-
 lie,
 That all the peece he shook from the
 flore,
 And filled all the house with feare and great uprore.

XXII

With noise whereof the lady forth appeared Upon the castle wall; and when she saw The daungerous state in which she stood, she feared
 The sad effect of her neare overthrow;
 And gan entreat that iron man below To cease his outrage, and him faire be-
 sought,
 Sith neither force of stones which they did
 throw,

Nor powr of charms, which she against him
wrought,
Might otherwise prevaile, or make him cease for ought.

XXIII

But when as yet she saw him to proceede, Unmov'd with praiers or with piteous
thought,
She ment him to corrupt with goodly
meede;
And causde great sakes with endlesse riches fraught,
Unto the battilment to be upbrought,
And powred forth over the castle wall,
That she might win some time, though dearly bought, Whilist he to gathering of the gold did
fall.
But he was nothing mov'd nor tempted therewithall;

XXIV

But still continu'd his assault the more,
And layd on load with his huge yron
flaile,
That at the length he has yrent the dore,
And made way for his maister to assaile.
Who being entred, nought did then availe For wight, against his powre them selves to
reare:
Each one did flie; their hearts began to
faile;
And hid them selves in corners here and
there;
And eke their dame halfe dead did hide her self for feare.

XXV

Long they her sought, yet no where could they finde her,
That sure they ween'd she was escapt
away:
But Talus, that could like a limehound winde her,
And all things secrete wisely could be-
wray,
At length found out whereas she hidden
lay Under an heape of gold. Thence he her
drew
By the faire lockes, and fowly did array, Withouten pitty of her goodly hew, That Artegall him selfe her seemelesse plight did rew.

XXVI

Yet for no pitty would he change the cours
Of justice, which in Talus hand did lye; Who rudely hayld her forth without re-
morse,
Still holding up her suppliant hands on
hye,
And kneeling at his feete submissively.
But he her suppliant hands, those hands o
gold,
And eke her feete, those feete of silver trye,
Which sought unrighteousnesse, and justice sold, Chopt off, and nayld on high, that all might them behold.

XXVII

Her selfe then tooke he by the selender
wast,
In vaine loud crying, and into the flood Over the castle wall adowne her cast,
And there her drowned in the durty mud:
But the streame washt away her guilty
blood.
Thereafter all that mucky pelfe he tooke,
The spoile of peoples evill gotten good,
The which her sire had scrap't by hooke and crooke,
And burning all to ashes, powr'd it downe the brooke.

XXVIII

And lastly all that castle quite he raced, Even from the sole of his foundation,
And all the hewen stones thereof defaced,
That there mote be no hope of reparation, Nor memory thereof to any nation.
All which when Talus throughly had per-fourmed,
Sir Artegall undid the evill fashion, And wicked customes of that bridge re-
fourmed:
Which done, unto his former journey he retourned.

XXIX

In which they measur'd mickle weary
way,
Till that at length nigh to the sea they
drew;
By which as they did travell on a day, They saw before them, far as they could
vew,
Full many people gathered in a crew;

Whose great assembly they did much admire;
 For never there the like resort they knew.
 So towards them they coasted, to enquire What thing so many nations met did there desire.

XXX

There they beheld a mighty gyant stand Upon a rocke, and holding forth on hie An huge great paire of ballance in his hand,

With which he boasted in his surquedrie,
 That all the world he would weigh equallie,
 If ought he had the same to counterpoys.
 For want whereof he weighed vanity,
 And fild his ballance full of idle toys:
 Yet was admired much of fooles, women, and boys.

XXXI

He sayd that he would all the earth up-
 take,

And all the sea, devided each from either:
 So would he of the fire one ballaunce make,
 And one of th' ayre, without or wind or wether:

Then would he ballaunce heaven and hell
 together,

And all that did within them all containe;
 Of all whose weight he would not misse a fether:

And looke what surplus did of each re-
 maine,

He would to his owne part restore the same againe.

XXXII

Forwhy, he sayd, they all unequal were,
 And had enroched upon others share, Like as the sea (which plaine he shewed
 there)

Had worne the earth, so did the fire the aire,

So all the rest did others parts empaire,
 And so were realmes and nations run awry.

All which he undertooke for to repaire,
 In sort as they were formed aunciently;
 And all things would reduce unto equality.

XXXIII

Therefore the vulgar did about him flocke,
 And cluster thicke unto his leasings vaine,
 Like foolish flies about an hony croke,
 In hope by him great benefite to gaine,

And uncontrolled freedome to obtaine.
 All which when Artegall did see and heare,
 How he mis-led the simple peoples traine,
 In sdeignfull wize he drew unto him neare,
 And thus unto him spake, without regard or feare:

XXXIV

'Thou that presum'st to weigh the world
 anew,

And all things to an equall to restore,
 In stead of right me seemes great wrong dost shew,

And far above thy forces pitch to sore.
 For ere thou limit what is lesse or more In every thing, thou oughtest first to know, What was the poyse of every part of yore:
 And looke then, how much it doth over-
 flow,

Or faile thereof, so much is more then just to trow.

XXXV

'For at the first they all created were In goodly measure by their Makers might,
 And weighed out in ballaunces so nere, That not a dram was missing of their
 right:

The earth was in the middle centre pight,
 In which it doth immoveable abide,
 Hemd in with waters like a wall in sight;
 And they with aire, that not a drop can slide:

All which the heavens containe, and in their courses guide.

XXXVI

'Such heavenly justice doth among them
 raine,

That every one doe know their certaine
 bound,

In which they doe these many yeares re-
 maine,

And mongst them al no change hath yet bene found.

But if thou now shouldst weigh them new in pound,

We are not sure they would so long re-
 maine:

All change is perillous, and all chaunce un-
 sound.

Therefore leave off to weigh them all
 againe,

Till we may be assur'd they shall their course retaine.'

XXXVII

'Thou foolishhe Elfe,' said then the gyant
wroth,
'Seest not, how badly all things present
bee,
And each estate quite out of order goth ?
The sea it selfe doest thou not plainly see Enroach upon the land there under thee;
And th' earth it selfe how daily its increast By all that dying to it turned be ?
Were it not good that wrong were then
surceast,
And from the most, that some were given to the least ?

XXXVIII

'Therefore I will throw downe these moun-taines hie,
And make them leuell with the lowly
plaine:
These towring rocks, which reach unto the
skie,
I will thrust downe into the deepest maine,
And as they were, them equalize againe.
Tyrants, that make men subject to their
law,
I will suppress, that they no more may raigne;
And lordings curbe, that commons over-aw;
And all the wealth of rich men to the poore will draw.'

XXXIX

'Of things unseene how canst thou deeme
aright,'
Then answered the righteous Artegal, 'Sith thou misdeem'st so much of things in
sight ?
What though the sea with waves continuall Doe eate the earth ? it is no more at all, Ne is the earth the lesse, or loseth ought:
For whatsoever from one place doth fall Is with the tide unto an other brought:
For there is nothing lost, that may be found, if sought.

XL

'Likewise the earth is not augmented more
By all that dying into it doe fade:
For of the earth they formed were of yore;
How ever gay their blossome or their blade Doe flourish now, they into dust shall vade.
What wrong then is it, if that when they die, They turne to that whereof they first were
made ?

All in the powre of their great Maker lie:
All creatures must obey the voice of the Most Hie.

XLI

'They live, they die, like as He doth ordaine, Ne ever any asketh reason why.
The hils doe not the lowly dales disdain;
The dales doe not the lofty hils envy.
He maketh kings to sit in sovereignty;
He maketh subjects to their powre obay;
He pulleth downe, He setteth up on hy;
He gives to this, from that He takes away:
For all we have is His: what He list doe, He may.

XLII

'What ever thing is done, by Him is donne, Ne any may His mighty will withstand;
Ne any may His sovaine power shonne, Ne loose that He hath bound with stedfast
band.
In vaine therefore doest thou now take in
hand,
To call to count, or weigh His workes anew, Whose counsels depth thou canst not understand;
Sith of things subject to thy daily vew Thou doest not know the causes, nor their courses dew.

XLIII

'For take thy ballaunce, if thou be so wise, And weigh the winde that under heaven doth blow;
Or weigh the light that in the East doth rise;
Or weigh the thought that from mans mind doth flow.
But if the weight of these thou canst not
show,
Weigh but one word which from thy lips doth fall:
For how canst thou those greater secrets
know,
That doest not know the least thing of them all ?
Ill can he rule the great, that cannot reach the small.'

XLIV

Therewith the gyant much abashed sayd, That he of little things made reckoning
light,
Yet the least word that ever could be layd Within his ballaunce he could way aright.

'Which is,' sayd he, 'more heavy then in weight, The right or wrong, the false or else the
trew?'
He answered that he would try it streight:
So he the words into his ballaunce threw;
But streight the winged words out of his ballaunce flew.

XLV

Wroth wext he then, and sayd that words
were light,
Ne would within his ballaunce well abide:
But he could justly weigh the wrong or
right.
'Well then,' sayd Artegall, 'let it be tride.
First in one ballance set the true aside.'
He did so first; and then the false he
layd
In th' other scale; but still it downe did
slide,
And by no meane could in the weight be
stayd:
For by no meanes the false will with the truth be wayd.

XLVI

'Now take the right likewise,' sayd Artegale,
'And counterpeise the same with so much
wrong.'
So first the right he put into one scale;
And then the gyant strove with puissance
strong
To fill the other scale with so much wrong.
But all the wrongs that he therein could
lay
Might not it peise; yet did he labour long, And swat, and chauf'd, and proved every
way:
Yet all the wrongs could not a litle right downe way.

XLVII

Which when he saw, he greatly grew in
rage,
And almost would his balances have broken:
But Artegall him fairely gan asswage, And said: 'Be not upon thy balance wroken;
For they doe nought but right or wrong be-
token;
But in the mind the doome of right must
bee:

And so likewise of words, the which be spoken,
The eare must be the ballance, to decree And judge, whether with truth or falshood they agree.

XLVIII

'But set the truth and set the right aside, For they with wrong or falshood will not
fare;
And put two wrongs together to be tride,
Or else two falses, of each equall share,
And then together doe them both compare:
For truth is one, and right is ever one.'
So did he, and then plaine it did appeare, Whether of them the greater were attone.
But right sate in the midst of the beame alone.

XLIX

But he the right from thence did thrust
away,
For it was not the right which he did seeke;
But rather strove extremities to way,
Th' one to diminish, th' other for to eeke:
For of the meane he greatly did misleeke.
Whom when so lewdly minded Talus found, Approching nigh unto him, cheeke by cheeke,
He shouldered him from off the higher
ground,
And down the rock him throwing, in the sea him dround.

Like as a ship, whom cruell tempest drives Upon a rocke with horrible dismay,
Her shattered ribs in thousand peeces rives,
And spoyling all her geares and goodly ray, Does make her selfe misfortunes piteous
pray:
So downe thecliffe the wretched gyant tumbled;
His batted ballances in peeces lay,
His timbered bones all broken rudely rum-
bled:
So was the high aspyring with huge ruine humbled.

LI

That when the people, which had there
about
Long wayted, saw his sudden desolation,
They gan to gather in tumultuous rout,
And mutining, to stirre up civill faction,

For certaine losse of so great expectation.
 For well they hoped to have got great
 good,
 And wondrous riches by his innovation.
 Therefore resolving to revenge his blood, They rose in armes, and all in battell order
 stood.

LII

Which lawlesse multitude him comming
 too,
 In warlike wise, when Artegall did vew, He much was troubled, ne wist what to doo.
 For loth he was his noble hands t' embrew
 In the base blood of such a rascall crew;
 And otherwise, if that he should retire, He fear'd least they with shame would him
 pursew.
 Therefore he Talus to them sent, t' inquire The cause of their array, and truce for to desire.

LIII

But soone as they him nigh approaching
 spide,
 They gan with all their weapons him as-
 say,
 And rudely stroke at him on every side: Yet nought they could him hurt, ne ought
 dismay.
 But when at them he with his flaile gan
 lay,
 He like a swarme of flyes them overthrew;
 Ne any of them durst come in his way, But here and there before his presence
 flew,
 And hid themselves in holes and bushes from his vew.

LIV

As when a falcon hath with nimble flight Flowne at a flush of ducks, foreby the
 brooke,
 The trembling foule, dismayd with dread-
 full sight
 Of death, the which them almost overtooke, Doe hide themselves from her astonying
 looke
 Amongst the flags and covert round about.
 When Talus saw they all the field for-
 sooke,
 And none appear'd of all that raskall rout, Fo Artegall he turn'd, and went with him throughout.

CANTO III

The spousals of faire Florimell, Where turney many knights:
 There Braggadochio is uncas'd
 In all the ladies sights.

I

AFTER long stormes and tempests over-
 blowne,
 The sunne at length his joyous face doth
 cleare:
 So when as Fortune all her spight hath
 showne,
 Some blisfull houres at last must needes
 appeare;
 Else should afflicted wights oftimes despeire.
 So comes it now to Florimell by tourne,
 After long sorrowes suffered whyleare, In which captiv'd she many moneths did
 mourne,
 To tast of joy, and to wont pleasures to re-tourne.

II

Who being freed from Proteus cruell band
 By Marinell, was unto him affide,
 And by him brought againe to Faerie Land; Where he her spous'd, and made his joyous bride.
 The time and place was blazed farre and
 wide,
 And solemne feasts and giusts ordain'd
 therefore.
 To which there did resort from every
 side
 Of lords and ladies infinite great store; Ne any knight was absent, that brave courage bore.

III

To tell the glorie of the feast that day,
 The goodly service, the devicefull sights, The bridegromes state, the brides most rich aray,
 The pride of ladies, and the worth of
 knights,
 The royall banquets, and the rare delights
 Were worke fit for an herauld, not for
 me:
 But for so much as to my lot here lights,
 That with this present treatise doth agree, True vertue to advance, shall here recounted bee.

IV

When all men had with full satietie Of meates and drinckes their appetites suffiz'd,

To deedes of armes and prooffe of cheualrie They gan themselves addresse, full rich agniz'd,

As each one had his furnitures deviz'd.
And first of all issu'd Sir Marinell, And with him sixe knights more, which en-terpriz'd

To challenge all in right of Florimell, And to maintaine that she all others did excell.

V

The first of them was hight Sir Orimont,
A noble knight, and tride in hard assayes;
The second had to name Sir Bellisont,
But second unto none in prowesse prayse;
The third was Brunell, famous in his dayes;
The fourth Ecastor, of exceeding might;
The fift Armeddan, skild in lovely layes;
The sixt was Lansack, a redoubted knight:
All sixe well seene in armes, and prov'd in many a fight.

VI

And then against came all that list to giust,

From every coast and countrie under sunne:
None was debar'd, but all had leave that lust.

The trompets sound; then all together roune.

Full many deedes of armes that day were
donne,

And many knights unhorst, and many wounded,

As fortune fell; yet litle lost or wonne:
But all that day the greatest prayse redounded

To Marinell, whose name the heralds loud resounded.

VII

The second day, so soone as morrow light Appear'd in heaven, into the field they
came,

And there all day continew'd cruell fight,
With divers fortune fit for such a game,
In which all strove with perill to winne
fame.

Yet whether side was victor note be ghest:
But at the last the trompets did proclame

That Marinell that day deserved best.
So they departed were, and all men went to rest.

VIII

The third day came, that should due tryall
lend

Of all the rest, and then this warlike crew Together met, of all to make an end.

There Marinell great deedes of armes did
shew;

And through the thickest like a Lyon flew, Rashing off helmes, and ryving plates a sonder,

That every one his daunger did eschew.
So terribly his dreadfull strokes did thunder, That all men stood amaz'd, and at his might did wonder.

IX

But what on earth can alwayes happie
stand?

The greater prowesse greater perils find.
So farre he past amongst his enemies band,
That they have him enclosed so behind,
As by no meanes he can himselfe outwind.
And now perforce they have him prisoner taken;

And now they doe with captive bands him bind;

And now they lead him thence, of all forsaken,

Unlesse some succour had in time him overtaken.

It fortun'd whylest they were thus ill beset, Sir Artegall into the tilt-yard came,
With Braggadochio, whom he lately met Upon the way, with that his snowy dame.
Where when he understood by common
fame

What evill hap to Marinell betid,
He much was mov'd at so unworthie shame,
And streight that boaster prayd, with whom he rid,

To change his shield with him, to be the better hid.

XI

So forth he went, and soone them over hent, Where they were leading Marinell away;
Whom he assayld with dreadlesse hardiment,
And forst the burden of their prize to stay.
They were an hundred knights of that array;

Of which th' one halfe upon himselfe did set,
The other stayd behind to gard the pray.
But he ere long the former fittie bet;
And from the other fittie soone the prisoner fet.

XII

So backe he brought Sir Marinell againe; Whom having quickly arm'd againe anew, They both together joynd might and
maine,
To set afresh on all the other crew.
Whom with sore havocke soone they over-
threw,
And elaced quite out of the field, that none Against them durst his head to perill shew.
So were they left lords of the field alone:
So Marinell by him was rescu'd from his fone.

XIII

Which when he had perform'd, then backe
againe
To Braggadochio did his shield restore:
Who all this while behind him did remaine, Keeping there close with him in pretious
store
That his false ladie, as ye heard afore.
Then did the trumpets sound, and judges
rose,
And all these knights, which that day armour bore, Came to the open hall, to listen whose The honour of the prize should be adjudg'd by those.

XIV

And thether also came in open sight Fayre Florimell, into the common hall,
To greet his guerdon unto every knight, And best to him to whom the best should
fall.
Then for that stranger knight they loud did eall,
To whom that day they should the girlond
yield:
Who came not forth: but for Sir Artegall Came Braggadochio, and did shew his shield, Which bore the sunne brode blazed in a golden field.

XV

The sight whereof did all with gladnesse
fill:
So unto him they did addeeme the prise

Of all that tryumph. Then the trumpets
shrill
Don Braggadochios name resounded thrise:
So courage lent a cloke to cowardise.
And then to him came fayrest Florimell, And goodly gan to greet his brave em-
prise,
And thousand thanks he yeeld, that had so well Approv'd that day that she all others did excell.

XVI

To whom the boaster, that all knights did blot,
With proud disdain did scornfull answer
make,
That what he did that day, he did it not For her, but for his owne deare ladies
sake,
Whom on his perill he did undertake,
Both her and eke all others to excell:
And further did uncomely speaches crake.
Much did his words the gentle ladie quell, And turn'd aside for shame to heare what he did tell.

XVII

Then forth he brought his snowy Florimele, Whom Trompart had in keeping there be-
side, Covered from peoples gazement with a vele.
Whom when discovered they had throughly
eide,
With great amazement they were stupe-
fide;
And said, that surely Florimell it was,
Or if it were not Florimell so tride,
That Florimell her selfe she then did pas.
So feeble skill of perfect things the vulgar has.

XVIII

Which when as Marinell beheld likewise,
He was therewith exceedingly dismayd;
Ne wist he what to thinke, or to devise,
But, like as one whom feends had made
affrayd,
He long astonisht stood, ne ought he sayd, Ne ought he did, but with fast fixed eies
He gazed still upon that snowy mayd;
Whom ever as he did the more avize,
The more to be true Florimell he did surmize.

XIX

As when two sunnes appeare in the azure
 skye,
 Mounted in Phœbus charet fierie bright, Both darting forth faire beames to each mans eye,
 And both adorn'd with lampes of flaming
 light,
 All that behold so strange prodigious
 sight,
 Not knowing Natures worke, nor what to
 weene,
 Are rapt with wonder and with rare af-
 fright:
 So stood Sir Marinell, when he had seene
 The semblant of this false by his faire beauties queene.

XX

All which when Arteggall, who all this
 while Stood in the preasse close covered, well adveved,
 And saw that boasters pride and gracelesse
 guile,
 He could no longer beare, but forth is-
 sewed,
 And unto all himselfe there open shewed,
 And to the boaster said: 'Thou losell
 base,
 That hast with borrowed plumes thy selfe endewed,
 And others worth with leasings doest de-
 face,
 When they are all restor'd, thou shalt rest in disgrace.

XXI

'That shield, which thou doest beare, was it indeed,
 Which this dayes honour sav'd to Mari-nell;
 But not that arme, nor thou the man, I
 reed,
 Which didst that service unto Florimell.
 For prooffe shew forth thy sword, and let it tell What strokes, what dreadfull stoure it stird this day:
 Or shew the wounds which unto thee be-
 fell;
 Or shew the sweat with which thou diddest
 sway
 So sharpe a battell, that so many did dismay.

XXII

'But this the sword which wrought those cruell stounds,
 And this the arme the which that shield
 did beare,
 And these the signes,' (so shewed forth his wounds)
 'By which that glorie gotten doth appeare.
 As for this ladie, which he sheweth here,
 Is not (I wager) Florimell at all;
 But some fayre franion, fit for such a fere,
 That by misfortune in his hand did fall.'
 For prooffe whereof, he bad them Florimell forth call.

XXIII

So forth the noble ladie was ybrought, Adorn'd with honor and all comely grace: Whereto her bashfull shamefastnesse ywrought
 A great increase in her faire blushing face;
 As roses did with lillies interlace.
 For of those words, the which that boaster
 threw,
 She inly yet conceived great disgrace.
 Whom when as all the people such did
 vew,
 They shouted loud, and signes of gladnesse all did shew.

XXIV

Then did he set her by that snowy one,
 Like the true saint beside the image set,
 Of both their beauties to make paragone,
 And triall, whether should the honor get.
 Streight way so soone as both together met, Th' enchanted damzell vanisht into
 nought:
 Her snowy substance melted as with heat, Ne of that goodly hew remayned ought,
 But th' emptie girdle, which about her wast was wrought.

XXV

As when the daughter of Thaumantes faire Hath in a watry cloud displayed wide Her godly bow, which paints the liquid
 ayre;
 That all men wonder at her colours pride;
 All suddenly, ere one can looke aside,
 The glorious picture vanisheth away, Ne any token doth thereof abide:
 So did this ladies goodly forme decay,
 And into nothing goe, ere one could it bewray.

XXVI

Which when as all that present were be-
held,
They stricken were with great astonishment,
And their faint harts with senselesse horrour queld,
To see the thing, that seem'd so excellent,
So stolen from their fancies wonderment;
That what of it became none understood.
And Braggadochio selfe with dreriment
So daunted was, in his despeyring mood, That like a lifelesse corse immoveable he stood.

XXVII

But Artegall that golden belt uptooke,
The which of all her spoyle was onely left;
Which was not hers, as many it mistooke,
But Florimells owne girdle, from her reft, While she was flying, like a weary weft, From that foule monster which did her compell
To perils great; which he unbuckling eft, Presented to the fayrest Florimell;
Who round about her tender wast it fitted
well.

XXVIII

Full many ladies often had assayd
About their middles that faire belt to knit;
And many a one suppos'd to be a mayd:
Yet it to none of all their loynes would fit, Till Florimell about her fastned it.
Such power it had, that to no womans wast
By any skill or labour it would sit,
Unless that she were continent and chast, But it would lose or breake, that many had disgrast.

XXIX

Whilist thus they busied were bout Flori-mell,
And boastfull Braggadochio to defame, Sir Guyon, as by fortune then befell, Forth from the thickest preasse of people
came,
His owne good steed, which he had stolne, to clame;
And th' one hand seizing on his golden bit, With th' other drew his sword: for with
the same
He ment the thiefe there deadly to have
smit:
And had he not bene held, he nought had fayld of it.

XXX

Thereof great hurly burly moved was Throughout the hall, for that same warlike horse:
For Braggadochio would not let him pas;
And Guyon would him algates have per-
forse,
Or it approve upon his carrion corse.
Which troublous stirre when Artegall perceived,
He nigh them drew to stay th' avengers
forse,
And gan inquire how was that steed bereaved,
Whether by might extort, or else by slight deceaved.

XXXI

Who all that piteous storie, which befell
About that wofull couple which were slaïne, And their young bloodie babe, to him gan
tell;
With whom whiles he did in the wood re-
maine,
His horse parloyned was by subtile traine:
For which he chalenged the thiefe to fight.
But he for nought could him thereto con-
straine;
For as the death he hated such despight,
And rather had to lose, then trie in armes his right.

XXXII

Which Artegall well hearing, though no
more
By law of armes there neede ones right to trie,
As was the wont of warlike knights of
yore,
Then that his foe should him the field de-
nie,
Yet further right by tokens to descrie,
He askt what privie tokens he did beare.
'If that,' said Guyon, 'may you satisfie, Within his mouth a blacke spot doth ap-
peare,
Shapt like a horses shoe, who list to seeke it there.'

XXXIII

Whereof to make due tryall, one did take The horse in hand, within his mouth to
looke:
But with his heeles so sorely he him strake,
That all his ribs he quite in peeces broke,

That never word from that day forth he spoke.

Another, that would seeme to have more wit,

Him by the bright embrodered hedstall tooke:

But by the shoulder him so sore he bit, That he him maymed quite, and all his shoulder split.

XXXIV

Ne he his mouth would open unto wight, Untill that Guyon selfe unto him spake,
And called Brigadore (so was he hight);
Whose voice so soone as he did undertake,

Eftsoones he stood as still as any stake,
And suffred all his secret marke to see:
And when as he him nam'd, for joy he brake

His bands, and follow'd him with gladfull
glee,
And friskt, and flong aloft, and louted low on knee.

XXXV

Thereby Sir Artegal did plaine areed, That unto him the horse belong'd, and
sayd:

'Lo there, Sir Guyon, take to you the
steed,

As he with golden saddle is arayd;
And let that losell, plainely now displayd, Hence fare on foot, till he an horse have gayned.'

But the proud boaster gan his doome up-
brayd,

And him revil'd, and rated, and disdayned, That judgement so unjust against him had ordayned.

XXXVI

Much was the knight incenst with his lewd
word,

To have revenged that his villeny;
And thrise did lay his hand upon his sword,
To have him slaine, or dearely doen aby.

But Guyon did his choler pacify, Saying, 'Sir knight, it would dishonour
bee

To you, that are our judge of equity, To wreake your wrath on such a carle as
hee:

It's punishment enough, that all his shame doe see.'

XXXVII

So did he mitigate Sir Artegal;
But Talus by the backe the boaster hent,
And drawing him out of the open hall,
Upon him did infliet this punishment:
First he his beard did shave, and fowly
shent;

Then from him reft his shield, and it reverst,
And blotted out his armes with falshood
blent.

And himselfe baffuld, and his armes un-herst,
And broke his sword in twaine, and all his armour sperst.

XXXVIII

The whiles his guilefull groome was fled
away:

But vaine it was to thinke from him to flie.

Who overtaking him did disaray,
And all his face deform'd with infamie,
And out of court him scourged openly.
So ought all faytours, that true knighthood
shame,

And armes dishonour with base villanie, From all brave knights be banisht with defame:

For oft their lewdnes blotteth good deserts with blame.

XXXIX

Now when these counterfeits were thus uncased

Out of the foreside of their forgerie, And in the sight of all men cleane disgraced,

All gan to jest and gibe full merilie
At the remembrance of their knaverie.
Ladies can laugh at ladies, knights at
knights,

To thinke with how great vaunt of braverie
He them abused, through his subtill slights, And what a glorious shew he made in all their sights.

XL

There leave we them in pleasure and re-
past

Spending their joyous dayes and gladfull nights,

And taking usurie of time forepast,
With all deare delices and rare delights, Fit for such ladies and such lovely knights:

And turne we here to this faire furrowes
end
Our wearie yokes, to gather fresher sprights, That, when as time to Artegall shall tend,
We on his first adventure may him forward send.

CANTO IV

Artegall dealeth right betwixt Two brethren that doe strive ;
Saves Terpine from the gallow tree,
And doth from death reprove.

I

WHO so upon him selfe will take the skill True justice unto people to divide, Had neede have mightie hands, for to fulfill That which he doth with righteous doome decide,
And for to maister wrong and puissant
pride.

For vaine it is to deeme of things aright,
And makes wrong doers justice to deride, Unless it be perform'd with dreadlesse
might:
For powre is the right hand of Justice truely hight.

II

Therefore whylome to knights of great emprise
The charge of Justice given was in trust, That they might execute her judgements
wise,
And with their might beat downe licentious
lust,
Which proudly did impugne her sentence
just.
Whereof no braver president this day Remaines on earth, preserv'd from yron rust
Of rude oblivion, and long times decay, Then this of Artegall, which here we have to say.

III

Who, having lately left that lovely payre, Enlincked fast in wedlockes loyall bond, Bold Marinell with Florimell the fayre, With whom great feast and goodly glee he
fond,
Departed from the Castle of the Strond,
To follow his adventures first intent,
Which long agoe he taken had in hond:

Ne wight with him for his assistance went,
But that great yron groome, his gard and government.

IV

With whom as he did passe by the sea
shore,
He chaunst to come whereas two comely
squires,
Both brethren, whom one wombe together
bore,
But stirred up with different desires, Together strove, and kindled wrathfull fires:
And them beside two seemely damzels
stood,
By all meanes seeking to asswage their ired, Now with faire words ; but words did little
good,
Now with sharpe threats ; but threats the more increast their mood.

And there before them stood a coffer
strong,
Fast bound on every side with iron bands,
But seeming to have suffred mickle wrong,
Either by being wreckt upon the sands,
Or being carried farre from forraine lands.
Seem'd that for it these squires at ods did
fall,
And bent against them selves their cruell
hands.
But evermore, those damzels did forestall Their furious encounter, and their fiercenesse pall.

VI

But firmly fixt they were, with dint of
sword
And battailes doubtfull prooffe their rights to try,
Ne other end their fury would afford,
But what to them fortune would justify.
So stood they both in readinesse, thereby To joyne the combate with cruell intent ;
When Artegall arriving happily, Did stay a while their greedy bickerment, Till he had questioned the cause of their dissent.

VII

To whom the elder did this aunswere
frame:
'Then weete ye, sir, that we two brethren be,

To whom our sire, Milesio by name, Did equally bequeath his lands in fee,
 Two ilands, which ye there before you see Not farre in sea; of which the one appears But like a little mount of small degree;
 Yet was as great and wide ere many yeares,
 As that same other isle, that greater bredth now beares.

VIII

‘But tract of time, that all things doth decay,
 And this devouring sea, that naught doth
 spare,
 The most part of my land hath washt
 away,
 And throwne it up unto my brothers share:
 So his encreased, but mine did empaire.
 Before which time I lov’d, as was my lot,
 That further mayd, light Philtera the faire, With whom a goodly dowre I should have got,
 And should have joynd bene to her in wedlocks knot.

IX

‘Then did my younger brother Amidas Love that same other damzell, Lucy bright, To whom but little dowre allotted was;
 Her vertue was the dowre that did delight.
 What better dowre can to a dame be hight?
 But now when Philtra saw my lands decay,
 And former livelod fayle, she left me
 quight,
 And to my brother did ellope streight way:
 Who, taking her from me, his owne love left astray.

‘She seeing then her selfe forsaken so, Through dolorous despaire, which she conceived,
 Into the sea her selfe did headlong throw, Thinking to have her griebe by death bereaved.
 But see how much her purpose was deceaved.
 Whilest thus amidst the billowes beating of her Twixt life and death, long to and fro she weaved,
 She chaunst unwares to light upon this coffer,
 Which to her in that daunger hope of life did offer.

XI

‘The wretched mayd, that earst desir’d to
 die,
 When as the paine of death she tasted had,
 And but halfe seene his ugly visnomie, Gan to repent that she had beene so mad, For any death to chaunge life, though most
 bad:
 And catching hold of this sea-beaten chest,
 The lucky pylot of her passage sad,
 After long tossing in the seas distrest, Her weary barke at last uppon mine isle did rest.

XII

‘Where I, by chaunce then waudring on the shore,
 Did her espy, and through my good endeavour From dreadfull mouth of death, which threatned sore Her to have swallow’d up, did helpe to save her.
 She then, in recompence of that great favour
 Which I on her bestowed, bestowed on me
 The portion of that good which fortune gave her,
 Together with her selfe in dowry free;
 Both goodly portions, but of both the better she.

XIII

‘Yet in this coffer, which she with her
 brought,
 Great threasure sithence we did finde contained;
 Which as our owne we tooke, and so it
 thought.
 But this same other damzell since hath fained,
 That to her selfe that threasure apper-tained;
 And that she did transport the same by sea,
 To bring it to her husband new ordained,
 But suffred crnell shipwracke by the way.
 But whether it be so or no, I can not say.

XIV

‘But whether it indeede be so or no,
 This doe I say, that what so good or ill Or God or Fortune unto me did throw, Not wronging any other by my will,

I hold mine owne, and so will hold it still.
 And though my land he first did winne
 away,
 And then my love (though now it little
 skill)
 Yet my good lucke he shall not likewise
 pray;
 But I will it defend, whilst ever that I may.'

XV

So having sayd, the younger did ensew:
 'Full true it is, what so about our land
 My brother here declared hath to you:
 But not for it this ods twixt us doth stand, But for this threasure throwne upon his strand;
 Which well I prove, as shall appeare by triall,
 To be this maides with whom I fastned
 hand,
 Known by good markes and perfect good espiall, Therefore it ought be rendred her without deniall.'

XVI

When they thus ended had, the knight began:
 'Certes your strife were easie to accord, Would ye remit it to some righteous man.'
 'Unto your selfe,' said they, 'we give our
 word,
 To bide what judgement ye shall us afford.'
 'Then for assuraunce to my doome to
 stand,
 Under my foote let each lay downe his
 sword,
 And then you shall my sentence understand.'
 So each of them layd downe his sword out of his hand.

XVII

Then Arte gall thus to the younger sayd:
 'Now tell me, Amidas, if that ye may,
 Your brothers land, the which the sea hath
 layd
 Unto your part, and pluckt from his away, By what good right doe you withhold this
 day?'
 'What other right,' quoth he, 'should you
 esteeme,
 But that the sea it to my share did lay?'

'Your right is good,' sayd he, 'and so I
 deeme,
 That what the sea unto you sent your own should seeme.'

XVIII

Then turning to the elder thus he sayd:
 'Now, Bracidas, let this likewise be showne: Your brothers threasure, which from him is
 strayd,
 Being the dowry of his wife well knowne, By what right doe you claime to be your owne?'
 'What other right,' quoth he, 'should you
 esteeme,
 But that the sea hath it unto me throwne?'
 'Your right is good,' sayd he, 'and so I
 deeme,
 That what the sea unto you sent your own should seeme.'

XIX

'For equall right in equall things doth
 stand;
 For what the mighty sea hath once possest,
 And plucked quite from all possessors hand, Whether by rage of waves, that never
 rest,
 Or else by wracke, that wretches hath dis-
 trest,
 He may dispose by his imperiall might,
 As thing at randon left, to whom he list.
 So, Amidas, the land was yours first hight, And so the threasure yours is, Bracidas, by right.'

XX

When he his sentence thus pronounced had,
 Both Amidas and Philtra were displeas'd:
 But Bracidas and Lucey were right glad,
 And on the threasure by that judgement seased.
 So was their discord by this doome appeased,
 And each one had his right. Then Arte-
 gall,
 When as their sharpe contention he had ceased,
 Departed on his way, as did befall,
 To follow his old quest, the which him forth did call.

XXI

So as he travelled upon the way,
 He chaunst to come, where happily he spide

A rout of many people farre away;
To whom his course he hastily applide, To weete the cause of their assemblaunce
wide.

To whom when he approched neare in sight, (An uncouth sight) he plainly then describe

To be a troupe of women warlike dight, With weapons in their hands, as ready for to fight.

XXII

And in the midst of them he saw a knight,
With both his hands behinde him pinnoed
hard,

And round about his necke an halter tight,
As ready for the gallow tree prepard:

His face was covered, and his head was bar'd,

That who he was uneach was to descry;
And with full heavy heart with them he
far'd,

Griev'd to the soule, and groning inwardly,

That he of womens hands so base a death should dy.

XXIII

But they like tyrants, mercilesse the more, Rejoyced at his miserable case,
And him reviled, and reproched sore With bitter taunts, and termes of vile disgrace.

Now when as Artegall, arriv'd in place, Did aske what cause brought that man to
decay,

They round about him gan to swarme
apace,

Meaning on him their cruell hands to lay,
And to have wrought unwares some villanous assay.

XXIV

But he was soone aware of their ill minde,
And drawing backe deceived their intent; Yet though him selfe did shame on woman-
kinde

His mighty hand to shend, he Talus sent To wrecke on them their follies hardy-
ment:

Who with few sowces of his yron flae Dispersed all their troupe incontinent,
And sent them home to tell a piteous tale Of their vaine prowesse turned to their proper bale.

XXV

But that same wretched man, ordaynd to
die,

They left behind them, glad to be so quit:
Him Talus tooke out of perplexitie,
And horroure of fowle death for knight unfit,
Who more then losse of life ydreaded it;
And him restoring unto living light,
So brought unto his lord, where he did sit,
Beholding all that womanish weake fight; Whom soone as he beheld, he knew, and thus behight:

XXVI

'Sir Turpine, haplesse man, what make you here ?

Or have you lost your selfe and your discretion,

That ever in this wretched case ye were ?
Or have ye yeelded you to proude oppression

Of womens powre, that boast of mens subjection ?

Or else what other deadly dismall day
Is falne on you, by heavens hard direction, That ye were runne so fondly far astray,
As for to lead your selfe unto your owne
decay ?'

XXVII

Much was the man confounded in his mind, Partly with shame, and partly with dismay,
That all astonisht he him selfe did find,
And little had for his excuse to say, But onely thus: 'Most haplesse well ye
may

Me justly terme, that to this shame am
brought,

And made the scorn of knighthod this same day.

But who can scape what his owne fate hath
wrought ?

The worke of heavens will surpasseth humaine thought.'

XXVIII

'Right true: but faulty men use oftentimes To attribute their folly unto fate, And lay on heaven the guilt of their owne crimes.

But tell, Sir Terpin, ne let you amate Your misery, how fell ye in this state ?'

'Then sith ye needs,' quoth he, 'will know my shame,

And all the ill which chaunst to me of late,

I shortly will to you rehearse the same,
In hope ye will not turne misfortune to my blame.

XXIX

‘Being desirous (as all knights are woont) Through hard adventures deedes of armes
to try,

And after fame and honour for to hunt,
I heard report that farre abroad did fly,
That a proud Amazon did late defy All the brave knights that hold of Maiden-
head,

And unto them wrought all the villany
That she could forge in her malicious head, Which some hath put to shame, and many done be dead.

XXX

‘The cause, they say, of this her cruell
hate,
Is for the sake of Bellodant the bold, To whom she bore most fervent love of
late,

And wooed him by all the waies she could:
But when she saw at last, that he ne would For ought or nought be wonne unto her
will,

She turn’d her love to hatred manifold,
And for his sake vow’d to doe all the ill Which she could doe to knights; which now she doth fulfill.

XXXI

‘For all those knights, the which by force or guile

She doth subdue, she fowly doth entreate.
First she doth them of warlike armes de-
spoyle,

And cloth in womens weedes: and then with threat

Doth them compell to worke, to earne their meat,

To spin, to card, to sew, to wash, to wring; Ne doth she give them other thing to
eat,

But bread and water, or like feeble thing,
Them to disable from revenge adventuring.

XXXII

‘But if through stout disdaine of manly
mind,

Any her proud observaunce will withstand,
Uppon that gibbet, which is there behind,
She causeth them be hang’d up out of hand;

In which condition I right now did stand.
For being overcome by her in fight,
And put to that base service of her band,
I rather chose to die in lives despight, Then lead that shamefull life, unworthy of a knight.’

XXXIII

‘How hight that Amazon,’ sayd Artegall, ‘And where and how far hence does she abide?’

‘Her name,’ quoth he, ‘they Radigund doe
call,

A princesse of great powre and greater
pride,

And queene of Amazons, in armes well
tride

And sundry battels, which she hath atchieved

With great successe, that her hath glorifide, And made her famous, more then is believed;

Ne would I it have ween’d, had I not late it prievd.’

XXXIV

‘Now sure,’ said he, ‘and by the faith that I To Maydenhead and noble knighthood owe,
I will not rest, till I her might doe trie, And venge the shame that she to knights doth show.

Therefore, Sir Terpin, from you lightly
throw

This squalid weede, the patterne of di-spaire,

And wend with me, that ye may see and
know,

How fortune will your ruin’d name repaire, And knights of Maidenhead, whose praise she would empaire.’

XXXV

With that, like one that hopelesse was repryv’d

From deathes dore, at which he lately lay,
Those yron fetters wherewith he was gyv’d,

The badges of reproch, he threw away,
And nimble did him dight to guide the
way

Unto the dwelling of that Amazone, Which was from thence not past a mile or
tway:

A goodly citty and a mighty one,
The which of her owne name she called Radegone.

XXXVI

Where they arriving, by the watchman
 were Descried streight, who all the city warned, How that three warlike persons did ap-
 peare,
 Of which the one him seem'd a knight all armed,
 And th' other two well likely to have harmed.
 Eftsoones the people all to harnesse ran,
 And like a sort of bees in clusters swarmed:
 Ere long their queene her selfe, halfe like
 a man,
 Came forth into the rout, and them t' array began.

XXXVII

And now the knights, being arrived neare, Did beat upon the gates to enter in,
 And at the porter, skorning them so few,
 Threw many threats, if they the towne did
 win,
 To teare his flesh in peeces for his sin.
 Which when as Radigund there comming
 heard,
 Her heart for rage did grate, and teeth did grin:
 She bad that streight the gates should be unbar'd,
 And to them way to make, with weapons well prepar'd.

XXXVIII

Soone as the gates were open to them set, They pressed forward, entraunce to have
 made.
 But in the middle way they were ymet With a sharpe showre of arrowes, which them staid,
 And better bad advise, ere they assaid Unknowen perill of bold womens pride.
 Then all that rout upon them rudely laid,
 And heaped strokes so fast on every side, And arrowes haild so thicke, that they could not abide.

XXXIX

But Radigund her selfe, when she espide Sir Terpin, from her direfull doome acquit, So cruell doale amongst her maides divide, T' avenge that shame they did on him commit,
 All sodainely enflam'd with furious fit,
 Like a fell lionesse at him she flew,

And on his head-peece him so fiercely smit,
 That to the ground him quite she overthrew, Dismayd so with the stroke that he no colours knew.

XL

Soone as she saw him on the ground to grovell,
 She lightly to him leapt, and in his necke Her proud foote setting, at his head did levell, Weening at once her wrath on him to wreake,
 And his contempt, that did her judg'ment
 breake.
 As when a beare hath seiz'd her cruell
 clawes
 Upon the carkasse of some beast too
 weake,
 Proudly stands over, and a while doth pause,
 To heare the piteous beast pleading her plaintiffe cause.

XLI

Whom when as Artegall in that distresse By chance beheld, he left the bloody slaughter
 In which he swam, and ranne to his re-
 dresse.
 There her assayling fiercely fresh, he rought her Such an huge stroke, that it of sence distraught her:
 And had she not it warded warily,
 It had depriv'd her mother of a daughter.
 Nathlesse for all the powre she did apply, It made her stagger oft, and stare with ghastly eye.

XLII

Like to an eagle in his kingly pride, Soring through his wide empire of the aire,
 To weather his brode sailes, by chance hath spide
 A goshanke, which hath seized for her share
 Upon some fowle, that should her feast prepare;
 With dreadfull force he flies at her bylive,
 That with his souce, which none enduren
 dare,
 Her from the quarrey he away doth drive,
 And from her griping pounce the greedy prey doth rive.

XLIII

But soone as she her sence recover'd had,
She fiercely towards him her selfe gan dight, Through vengeful wrath and sdeignfull pride half mad:

For never had she suffred such despight.
But ere she could joyne hand with him to
fight,
Her warlike maides about her floekt so
fast,
That they disparted them, maugre their
might,
And with their troupes did far a sunder
cast:

But mongst the rest the fight did untill evening last.

XLIV

And every while that mighty yron man, With his strange weapon, never went in
warre,

Them sorely vext, and courst, and overran, And broke their bowes, and did their shooting marre,

That none of all the many once did darre
Him to assault, nor once approach him nie, But like a sort of sheepe dispersed farre
For dread of their devouring enemie, Through all the fields and vallies did before him flie.

XLV

But when as daies faire shinie-beame, yellowed

With fearefull shadowes of deformed night, Warn'd man and beast in quiet rest be shrowded,

Bold Radigund, with sound of trumpe on
hight,

Causd all her people to surcease from
fight,

And gathering them unto her citties gate,
Made them all enter in before her sight,
And all the wounded, and the weake in
state,

To be convayed in, ere she would once retrate.

XLVI

When thus the field was voided all away,
And all things quieted, the Elfin knight, Weary of toile and travell of that day, Causd his pavilion to be richly pight Before the city gate, in open sight;
Where he him selfe did rest in safety,

Together with Sir Terpin, all that night:
But Talus usde in times of jeopardy To keepe a nightly watch, for dread of treachery.

XLVII

But Radigund full of heart-gnawing grieffe, For the rebuke which she sustain'd that
day,

Could take no rest, ne would receive re-
liefe,

But tossed in her troublous minde, what
way

She mote revenge that blot which on her
lay.

There she resolv'd her selfe in single fight
To try her fortune, and his force assay, Rather then see her people spoiled quight,
As she had scene that day, a disaventerous sight.

XLVIII

She called forth to her a trusty mayd, Whom she thought fittest for that busi-
nesse,

(Her name was Clarin,) and thus to her
sayd:

'Goe, damzell, quickly, doe thy selfe ad-
dresse,

To doe the message which I shall expresse Goe thou unto that stranger Faery knight, Who yester day drove us to such disstresse;

Tell, that to morrow I with him wil fight, And try in equall field, whether hath greater might.

XLIX

'But these conditions doe to him propound

That if I vanquishe him, he shall obay

My law, and ever to my lore be bound;

And so will I, if me he vanquish may,

What ever he shall like to doe or say.

Goe streight, and take with thee, to wit-nesse it,

Sixe of thy fellowes of the best array,

And beare with you both wine and jun-cates fit,

And bid him eate; henceforth he oft shall hungry sit.'

L

The damzell streight obayd, and putting all In readinesse, forth to the towne-gate
went,

Where sounding loud a trumpet from the wall,
Unto those warlike knights she warning
sent.
Then Talus, forth issuing from the tent, Unto the wall his way did fearelesse take,
To weeten what that trumpets sounding
ment:
Where that same damzell lowdly him be-
spake,
And shew'd that with his lord she would emparlaunce make.

LI

So he them streight conducted to his lord, Who, as he could, them goodly well did greete, Till they had told their message word by
word:
Which he accepting well, as he could weete, Them fairely entertaynd with curt'sies
meete,
And gave them gifts and things of deare
delight.
So backe againe they homeward turnd their feete.
But Artegall him selfe to rest did dight, That he mote fresher be against the next daies fight.

CANTO V

Artegall fights with Radigund,
And is subdewd by guile:
He is by her emprisoned,
But wrought by Clarins wile.

I

So soone as day forth dawning from the East,
Nights humid curtaine from the heavens
withdrew,
And earely calling forth both man and
beast,
Comaunded them their daily workes renew,
These noble warriors, mindefull to pursue The last daies purpose of their vowed
fight,
Them selves thereto preparte in order
dew;
The knight, as best was seeming for a
knight,
And th' Amazon, as best it likt her selfe to
dight:

II

All in a camis light of purple silke Woven uppon with silver, subtly wrought,
And quilted uppon sattin white as milke, Trayled with ribbands diversly distraught, Like as the workeman had their courses
taught;
Which was short tucked for light motion
Up to her ham, but, when she list, it raught Downe to her lowest heele, and thereuppon She wore for her defence a mayled habergeon.

III

And on her legs she painted buskins wore, Basted with bends of gold on every side,
And mailes betweene, and laced close afore:
Uppon her thigh her cemitare was tide,
With an embrodered belt of mickell pride;
And on her shoulder hung her shield, be-deckt Uppon the bosse with stones, that shined
wide
As the faire moone in her most full aspect,
That to the moone it mote be like in each respect.

IV

So forth she came out of the citty gate,
With stately port and proud magnificence, Guarded with many damzels, that did waite Uppon her person for her sure defence, Playing on shaumes and trumpets, that from hence Their sound did reach unto the heavens
hight.
So forth into the field she marched thence,
Where was a rich pavilion ready pight, Her to receive, till time they should begin the fight.

V

Then forth came Artegall out of his tent, All arm'd to point, and first the lists did enter:
Soone after eke came she, with fell intent,
And countenance fierce, as having fully bent her,
That battels utmost triall to adventer.
The lists were closed fast, to barre the rout
From rudely pressing to the middle center; Which in great heapes them circled all
about,
Wayting how fortune would resolve that daungerous dout.

VI

The trumpets sounded, and the field began;
With bitter strokes it both began and ended.

She at the first encounter on him ran With furious rage, as if she had intended Out of his breast the very heart have
rended:

But he, that had like tempests often tride, From that first flaw him selfe right well defended.

The more she rag'd, the more he did abide;
She hewd, she foyn'd, she lasht, she laid on every side.

VII

Yet still her blowes he bore, and her for-
bore,

Weening at last to win advantage new;
Yet still her crueltie increased more,
And though powre faild, her courage did acrew;

Which fayling, he gan fiercely her pursew.
Like as a smith that to his cunning feat
The stubborne mettall seeketh to subdew, Soone as he feesles it mollifide with heat,
With his great yron sledge doth strongly on it beat.

VIII

So did Sir Artegal upon her lay,
As if she had an yron and vile beene, That flakes of fire, bright as the sunny
ray,

Out of her steely armes were flashing seene,
That all on fire ye would her surely weene.
But with her shield so well her selfe she warded

From the dread daunger of his weapon
keene,

That all that while her life she safely garded:

But he that helpe from her against her will discarded.

IX

For with his trenchant blade at the next blow

Halfe of her shield he shared quite away,
That halfe her side it selfe did naked show,
And thenceforth unto daunger opened way.
Much was she moved with the mightie
sway

Of that sad stroke, that halfe enrag'd she
grew,

And like a greedie beare unto her pray,
With her sharpe cemitare at him she flew,
That glauncing downe his thigh, the purple bloud forth drew.

Thereat she gan to triumph with great
boast,

And to upbrayd that chaunce which him misfell,

As if the prize she gotten had almost,
With spightfull speaches, fitting with her
well;

That his great hart gan inwardly to swell
With indignation at her vaunting vaine,
And at her strooke with puissance fearefull
fell;

Yet with her shield she warded it againe, That shattered all to peeces round about the plaine.

XI

Having her thus disarmed of her shield, Upon her helmet he againe her strooke,
That downe she fell upon the grassie field, In senselesse swoune, as if her life for-
sooke,

And pangs of death her spirit overtooke.
Whom when he saw before his foote prostrated,

He to her lept with deadly dreadfull looke,
And her sunshynie helmet soone unlaced, Thinking at once both head and helmet to have raced.

XII

But when as he discovered had her face,
He saw, his senses straunge astonishment,
A miracle of Natures goodly grace
In her faire visage voide of ornament, But bath'd in bloud and sweat together
ment;

Which, in the rudenesse of that evill plight, Bewrayd the signes of feature excellent:
Like as the moone, in foggie winters night, Doth seeme to be her selfe, though dark-ned be her light.

XIII

At sight thereof his cruell minded hart Empierced was with pittifull regard,
That his sharpe sword he threw from him
apart,

Cursing his hand that had that visage mard:
No hand so cruell, nor no hart so hard,

But ruth of beautie will it mollife.
 By this upstarting from her swoune, she star'd
 A while about her with confused eye; Like one that from his dreame is waked suddenlye.

XIV

Soone as the knight she there by her did
 spy,
 Standing with emptie hands all weapon-
 lesse,
 With fresh assault upon him she did fly,
 And gan renew her former crueltiesse:
 And though he still retyr'd, yet nathelesse With huge redoubled strokes she on him
 layd;
 And more increast her outrage mercilesse, The more that he with meeke intreatie
 prayd,
 Her wrathful hand from greedy vengeance to have stayd.

XV

Like as a puttocke having spyde in sight
 A gentle faulcon sitting on an hill, Whose other wing, now made unmeete for
 flight,
 Was lately broken by some fortune ill;
 The foolish kyte, led with licentious will,
 Doth beat upon the gentle bird in vaine,
 With many idle stoups her troubling still:
 Even so did Radigund with bootlesse paine Annoy this noble knight, and sorely him constraine.

XVI

Nought could he do, but shun the dred despyght
 Of her fierce wrath, and backward still retyre,
 And with his single shield, well as he might,
 Beare off the burden of her raging yre;
 And evermore he gently did desyre To stay her stroks, and he himselfe would
 yield:
 Yet nould she hearke, ne let him once respyre,
 Till he to her delivered had his shield,
 And to her mercie him submitted in plaine field.

XVII

So was he overcome, not overcome,
 But to her yeelded of his owne accord;

Yet was he justly damned by the doome
 Of his owne mouth, that spake so warelesse
 word,
 To be her thrall, and service her afford.
 For though that he first victorie obtayned, Yet after, by abandoning his sword,
 He wilfull lost that he before attayned.
 No fayrer conquest then that with goodwill is gayned.

XVIII

Tho with her sword on him she flatling
 strooke,
 In signe of true subjection to her powre,
 And as her vassall him to thraldome tooke.
 But Terpine, borne to' a more unhappy
 howre,
 As he on whom the lucklesse starres did lowre,
 She causd to be attacht, and forthwith led Unto the crooke, t' abide the balefull stowre From which he lately had through reskew
 fled:
 Where he full shamefully was hanged by the hed.

XIX

But when they thought on Talus hands to
 lay,
 He with his yron flaile amongst them thondred,
 That they were fayne to let him scape away,
 Glad from his companie to be so sondred; Whose presence all their troupes so much encombred,
 That th' heapes of those which he did wound and slay, Besides the rest dismayd, might not be nombred:
 Yet all that while he would not once assay To reskew his owne lord, but thought it just t' obay.

XX

Then tooke the Amazon this noble knight, Left to her will by his owne wilfull blame,
 And causd him to be disarmed quight
 Of all the ornaments of knightly name, With which whylome he gotten had great
 fame:
 In stead whereof she made him to be dight In womans weedes, that is to manhood
 shame,
 And put before his lap a napron white,
 In stead of curiets and bases fit for fight.

XXI

So being clad, she brought him from the field,

In which he had bene trayned many a day,
Into a long large chamber, which was sield
With monuments of many knights decay,
By her subdued in victorious fray:

Amongst the which she causd his warlike armes

Be hang'd on high, that mote his shame bewray;

And broke his sword, for feare of further harmes,

With which he wont to stirre up battailous alarmes.

XXII

There entred in, he round about him saw Many brave knights, whose names right well he knew,

There bound t' obay that Amazons proud law,

Spinning and carding all in comely rew,
That his bigge hart loth'd so uncomely vew.

But they were forst, through penurie and pyne,

To doe those workes to them appointed dew:

For nought was given them to sup or dyne, But what their hands could earne by twisting linnen twyne.

XXIII

Amongst them all she placed him most low,

And in his hand a distaffe to him gave,
That he thereon should spin both flax and tow;

A sordid office for a mind so brave:

So hard it is to be a womans slave.

Yet he it tooke in his owne selves despight,
And thereto did himselfe right well behave,

Her to obay, sith he his faith had plight, Her vassall to become, if she him wonne in fight.

XXIV

Who had him seene, imagiue mote thereby That whylome hath of Hercules bene told,

How for Iolas sake he did apply

His mightie hands the distaffe vile to hold,
For his huge club, which had subdew'd of

old

So many monsters which the world annoyed;
His Lyons skin chaungd to a pall of gold,

In which, forgetting warres, he onely joyed In combats of sweet love, and with his mis-tresse toyed.

XXV

Such is the erneltie of women kynd,
When they have shaken off the shamefast band,

With which wise Nature did them strongly bynd,

T' obay the heasts of mans well ruling hand,

That then all rule and reason they with-stand,

To purchase a licentious libertie.

But vertuous women wisely understand,
That they were borne to base humilitie, Unlesse the heavens them lift to lawfull soveraintie.

XXVI

Thus there long while continu'd Artegall, Serving proud Radigund with true subjection;

How ever it his noble heart did gall T' obay a womans tyrannous direction,

That might have had of life or death election:

But having chosen, now he might not change.

During which time, the warlike Amazon, Whose wandring fancie after lust did
raunge,

Gan cast a secret liking to this captive
straunge.

XXVII

Which long concealing in her covert brest,
She chaw'd the end of lovers carefull plight;

Yet could it not so thoroughly digest,
Being fast fixed in her wounded spright,

But it tormented her both day and night:
Yet would she not thereto yeeld free accord,

To serve the lowly vassall of her might,
And of her servant make her soverayne

lord:

So great her pride, that she such basenesse much abhord.

XXVIII

So much the greater still her anguish grew, Through stubborne handling of her love-sicke hart;

And still the more she strove it to subdow,

The more she still augmented her owne
 smart,
 And wyder made the wound of th' hidden
 dart.
 At last, when long she struggled had in
 vaine,
 She gan to stoupe, and her proud mind convert
 To meeke obeysance of Loves mightie raine,
 And him entreat for grace, that had pro-cur'd her paine.

XXIX

Unto her selfe in secret she did call Her nearest handmayd, whom she most did
 trust,
 And to her said: 'Clarinda, whom of all I trust a live, sith I thee fostred first;
 Now is the time that I untimely must Thereof make tryall, in my greatest need:
 It is so hapned that the heavens unjust, Spighting my happie freedome, have agreed To thrall my looser life, or my last bale to breed.'

XXX

With that she turn'd her head, as halfe abashed,
 To hide the blush which in her visage
 rose,
 And through her eyes like sudden lightning flashed,
 Decking her cheeke with a vermilion rose:
 But soone she did her countenance com-
 pose,
 And to her turning, thus began againe:
 'This griefes deepe wound I would to thee disclose, Thereto compelled through hart-murdring
 paine,
 But dread of shame my doubtfull lips doth still restraine.'

XXXI

'Ah! my deare dread,' said then the faith-full mayd,
 'Can dread of ought your dreadlesse hart
 withhold,
 That many hath with dread of death dis-
 mayd,
 And dare even deathes most dreadfull face
 behold?
 Say on, my soverayne ladie, and be bold: Doth not your handmayds life at your foot
 lie?'

Therewith much comforted, she gan unfold
 The cause of her conceived maladie, As one that would confesse, yet faine would it denie.

XXXII

'Clarín,' sayd she, 'thou seest yond Fayry
 knight,
 Whom not my valour, but his owne brave
 mind
 Subjected bath to my unequall might:
 What right is it, that he should thraldome
 find,
 For lending life to me, a wretch unkind,
 That for such good him recompence with ill?
 Therefore I cast how I may him unbind,
 And by his freedome get his free goodwill;
 Yet so, as bound to me he may continue still:

XXXIII

'Bound unto me, but not with such hard
 bands
 Of strong compulsion and streight violence,
 As now in miserable state he stands;
 But with sweet love and sure benevolence, Voide of malicious mind or foule offence.
 To which if thou canst win him any way,
 Without discoverie of my thoughts pretence, Both goodly meede of him it purchase may,
 And eke with gratefull service me right well apay.

XXXIV

'Which that thou mayst the better bring to
 pas, Loe here this ring, which shall thy warrant
 bee,
 And token true to old Eumenias, From time to time, when thou it best shalt
 see,
 That in and out thou mayst have passage
 free.
 Goe now, Clarinda; well thy wits advise,
 And all thy forces gather unto thee,
 Armies of lovely lookes, and speeches wise,
 With which thou canst even Jove himselfe to love entise.'

XXXV

The trustie mayd, conceiving her intent, Did with sure promise of her good indeavour Give her great comfort and some harts content.
 So from her parting, she thenceforth did labour

By all the meanes she might, to curry favour
With th' Elfin knight, her ladies best beloved:
With daily shew of courteous kind behaviour, Even at the markewhite of his hart she roved,
And with wide glauncing words, one day she thus him proved:

XXXVI

'Unhappie knight, upon whose hopelesse
state
Fortune, envying good, hath felly frowned, And cruell heavens have heapt an heavy
fate;
I rew that thus thy better dayes are drowned
In sad despaire, and all thy senses swowned
In stupid sorow, sith thy juster merit Might else have with felicitie bene crowned:
Looke up at last, and wake thy dulled spirit,
To thinke how this long death thou mightest disinherit.'

XXXVII

Much did he marvell at her uncouth speach, Whose hidden drift he could not well perceive;
And gan to doubt, least she him sought t' appeach
Of treason, or some guilefull traine did weave,
Through which she might his wretched life bereave.
Both which to barre, he with this answer met her:
'Faire damzell, that with ruth (as I perceave)
Of my mishaps, art mov'd to wish me
better,
For such your kind regard I can but rest your detter.

XXXVIII

'Yet weet ye well, that to a courage great
It is no lesse beseeing well, to beare
The storme of Fortunes frowne, or Heavens
threat,
Then in the sunshine of her countenance
cleare
Timely to joy and carrie comely cheare.
For though this cloud have now me over-
cast,

Yet doe I not of better times despeyre;
And, though unlike, they should for ever
last,
Yet in my truthes assurance I rest fixed fast.'

XXXIX

'But what so stonie mind,' she then replyde,
'But, if in his owne powre occasion lay,
Would to his hope a windowe open wyde,
And to his fortunes helpe make readie
way?'
'Unworthy sure,' quoth he, 'of better day,
That will not take the offer of good hope,
And eke pursew, if he attaine it may.'
Which speaches she applying to the scope Of her intent, this further purpose to him shope:

XL

'Then why doest not, thou ill advized man, Make meanes to win thy libertie forlorne,
And try if thou by faire entreatie can Move Radigund? who, though she still have worne
Her dayes in warre, yet (weet thou) was not borne Of beares and tygres, nor so salvage mynded,
As that, albe all love of men she scorne, She yet forgets that she of men was kynded:
And sooth oft seene, that proudest harts base love hath blynded.'

XLI

'Certes, Clarinda, not of canered will,' Sayd he, 'nor obstinate disdainefull mind,
I have forbore this duetie to fulfill:
For well I may this weene, by that I fynd, That she, a queene, and come of princely
kynd,
Both worthie is for to be sewd unto,
Chiefely by him whose life her law doth
bynd,
And eke of powre her owne doome to undo,
And als' of princely grace to be inclyn'd thereto.

XLII

'But want of meanes hath bene mine onely
let
From seeking favour, where it doth abound; Which if I might by your good office get,
I to your selfe should rest for ever bound,

And readie to deserve what grace I found.
 She feeling him thus bite upon the bayt, Yet doubting least his hold was but un-
 sound,
 And not well fastened, would not strike
 him strayt,
 But drew him on with hope, fit leasure to awayt.

XLIII

But foolish mayd ! whyles, heedlesse of the hooke,
 She thus oft times was beating off and
 on,
 Through slipperie footing fell into the
 brooke,
 And there was caught to her confusion.
 For seeking thus to salve the Amazon, She wounded was with her deceipts owne
 dart,
 And gan thenceforth to cast affection, Conceived close in her beguiled hart,
 To Artegal, through pittie of his causelesse smart.

XLIV

Yet durst she not disclose her fancies
 wound,
 Ne to himselfe, for doubt of being slayned, Ne yet to any other wight on ground,
 For feare her mistresse shold have knowledge gayned,
 But to her selfe it secretly retayned,
 Within the closet of her covert breast:
 The more thereby her tender hart was payned.
 Yet to awayt fit time she weened best,
 And fairely did dissemble her sad thoughts unrest.

XLV

One day her ladie, calling her apart, Gan to demaund of her some tydings good, Touching her loves successe, her lingring
 smart.
 Therewith she gan at first to change her
 mood,
 As one adaw'd, and halfe confused stood;
 But quickly she it overpast, so soone As she her face had wypt, to fresh her
 blood:
 Tho gan she tell her all that she had
 donne,
 And all the wayes she sought, his love for to have wonne:

XLVI

But sayd, that he was obstinate and sterne, Scorning her offers and conditions vaine;
 Ne would be taught with any termes to lerne
 So fond a lesson as to love againe.
 Die rather would he in penurious paine,
 And his abridged dayes in dolour wast,
 Then his foes love or liking entertaine:
 His resolution was, both first and last,
 His bodie was her thrall, his hart was freely plast.

XLVII

Which when the cruell Amazon perceived, She gan to storme, and rage, and rend her
 gall,
 For very fell despight, which she conceived,
 To be so scorned of a base borne thrall,
 Whose life did lie in her least eye-lids fall;
 Of which she vow'd with many a cursed
 threat,
 That she therefore would him ere long for-
 stall.
 Nathlesse, when calmed was her furious
 heat,
 She chang'd that threatfull mood, and mildly gan entreat:

'What now is left, Clarinda? what re-
 maines,
 That we may compasse this our enterprize?
 Great shame to lose so long employed
 paines,
 And greater shame t' abide so great mis-
 prize,
 With which he dares our offers thus de-spize.
 Yet that his guilt the greater may appeare,
 And more my gracious mercie by this wize,
 I will a while with his first folly beare, Till thou have tride againe, and tempted him more neare.

XLIX

'Say and do all that may thereto prevaile; Leave nought unpromist that may him per-
 swade,
 Life, freedom, grace, and gifts of great availe,
 With which the gods themselves are mylder made:
 Thereto adde art, even womens witty trade,
 The art of mightie words, that men can charme;

With which in ease thou canst him not invade,
 Let him feele hardnesse of thy heavie arme:
 Who will not stoupe with good shall be made stoupe with harme.

‘Some of his diet doe from him withdraw;
 For I him find to be too proudly fed:
 Give him more labour, and with streighter law,
 That he with worke may be forwearied:
 Let him lodge hard, and lie in strawen bed,
 That may pull downe the courage of his pride;
 And lay upon him, for his greater dread,
 Cold yron chaines, with which let him be tide;
 And let what ever he desires be him denide.

LI

‘When thou hast all this doen, then bring me newes
 Of his demeane: thenceforth not like a lover,
 But like a rebell stout I will him use.
 For I resolve this siege not to give over, Till I the conquest of my will recover.’
 So she departed, full of griefe and sdaine, Which inly did to great impatience move her.
 But the false mayden shortly turn’d againe Unto the prison, where her hart did thrall remaine.

LII

There all her subtill nets she did unfold,
 And all the engins of her wit display;
 In which she meant him warelesse to enfold,
 And of his innocence to make her pray.
 So cunningly she wrought her crafts assay,
 That both her ladie, and her selfe withall,
 And eke the knight attonce she did betray:
 But most the knight, whom she with guilefull call Did cast for to allure, into her trap to fall.

LIII

As a bad nurse, which, fayning to receive
 In her owne mouth the food ment for her ehylde, Withholdes it to her selfe, and doeth deceive

 The infant, so for want of nourture spoyld:
 Even so Clarinda her owne dame beguyld,
 And turn’d the trust which was in her affyde
 To feeding of her private fire, which boyld Her inward brest, and in her entrayles fryde,
 The more that she it sought to cover and to hyde.

LIV

For comming to this knight, she purpose fayned, How earnest suit she earst for him had made Unto her queene, his freedome to have gayned;
 But by no meanes could her thereto perswade:
 But that, in stead thereof, she sternely bade His miserie to be augmented more,
 And many yron bands on him to lade;
 All which nathlesse she for his love fore-
 bore:
 So praying him t’ accept her service ever-
 more.

LV

And more then that, she promist that she would,
 In case she might finde favour in his eye, Devize how to enlarge him out of hould.
 The Fayrie, glad to gaine his libertie,
 Can yeeld great thanks for such her curtesie;
 And with faire words, fit for the time and place,
 To feede the humour of her maladie, Promist, if she would free him from that case,
 He wold, by all good means he might, deserve such grace.

LVI

So daily he faire semblant did her shew, Yet never meant he in his noble mind,
 To his owne absent love to be untrew:
 Ne ever did deceitfull Clarin find In her false hart, his bondage to unbind;
 But rather how she mote him faster tye.
 Therefore unto her mistresse most unkind
 She daily told, her love he did defye,
 And him she told, her dame his freedome did denye.

LVII

Yet thus much friendship she to him did show,
 That his scarce diet somewhat was amended,
 And his worke lessened, that his love mote grow:
 Yet to her dame him still she discommended,
 That she with him mote be the more offended.
 Thus he long while in thraldome there remayned,
 Of both beloved well, but litle frended;
 Untill his owne true love his freedome gayned,
 Which in an other canto will be best containned.

CANTO VI

Talus brings newes to Britomart Of Artegals mishap:
 She goes to seeke him, Dolon meetes,
 Who seekes her to entrap.

I

SOME men, I wote, will deeme in Artegal Great weaknesse, and report of him much ill,
 For yeelding so himselfe a wretched thrall To th' insolent commaund of womens will;
 That all his former praise doth fowly spill.
 But he the man, that say or doe so dare, Be well adviz'd that he stand stedfast still:
 For never yet was wight so well aware,
 But he at first or last was trapt in womens snare.

II

Yet in the streightnesse of that captive state,
 This gentle knight himselfe so well behaved,
 That notwithstanding all the subtill bait,
 With which those Amazons his love still craved,
 To his owne love his loialtie he saved:
 Whose character in th' adamantine mould
 Of his true hart so firmly was engraved,
 That no new loves impression ever could Bereave it thence: such blot his honour blemish should.

III

Yet his owne love, the noble Britomart, Scarce so conceived in her jealous thought,

What time sad tydings of his balefull smart In womans bondage Talus to her brought Brought in untimely houre, ere it was sought.

For after that the utmost date, assynde
 For his returne, she waited had for nought, She gan to cast in her misdoubtfull mynde A thousand feares, that love-sicke fancies faine to fynde.

IV

Sometime she feared, least some hard mishap Had him misfalne in his adventurous quest; Sometime least his false foe did him entrap
 In traytrous traine, or had unwares opprest:
 But most she did her troubled mynd molest,
 And secretly afflicth with jealous feare, Least some new love had him from her possesst;
 Yet loth she was, since she no ill did heare,
 To thinke of him so ill: yet could she not forbear.

One while she blam'd her selfe; another whyle
 She him condemn'd, as trustlesse and untrew:
 And then, her griefe with error to beguyle,
 She fayn'd to count the time againe anew,
 As if before she had not counted trew.
 For houres but dayes; for weekes, that passed were,
 She told but moneths, to make them seeme more few:
 Yet when she reckned them, still drawing
 neare,
 Each hour did seeme a moneth, and every moneth a yeare.

VI

But when as yet she saw him not returne,
 She thought to send some one to seeke him out;
 But none she found so fit to serve that
 turne,
 As her owne selfe, to ease her selfe of dout.
 Now she deviz'd, amongst the warlike rout Of errant knights, to seeke her errant
 knight;
 And then againe resolv'd to hunt him out Amongst loose ladies, lapped in delight:
 And then both knights envide, and ladies eke did spight.

One day, when as she long had sought for ease
 In every place, and every place thought best, Yet found no place that could her liking please,
 She to a window came, that opened west,
 Towards which coast her love his way ad-drest.
 There looking forth, shee in her heart did find Many vaine fancies, working her unrest;
 And sent her winged thoughts, more swift then wind,
 To beare unto her love the message of her mind.

VIII

There as she looked long, at last she spide
 One comming towards her with hasty speede:
 Well weend she then, ere him she plaine descride,
 That it was one sent from her love indeede.
 Who when he nigh approcht, shee mote arede
 That it was Talus, Artegal his groome; Whereat her heart was fild with hope and drede;
 Ne would she stay till he in place could come,
 But ran to meeete him forth, to know his tidings somme.

IX

Even in the dore him meeting, she begun:
 'And where is he thy lord, and how far hence?
 Declare at once; and hath he lost or wun?'
 The yron man, albe he wanted sence
 And sorrowes feeling, yet with conscience
 Of his ill newes, did inly chill and quake,
 And stood still mute, as one in great suspense, As if that by his silence he would make Her rather reade his meaning, then him selfe it spake.

X

Till she againe thus sayd: 'Talus, be bold,
 And tell what ever it be, good or bad,
 That from thy tongue thy hearts intent doth hold.'
 To whom he thus at length: 'The tidings sad,

That I would hide, will needs, I see, be rad.
 My lord, your love, by hard mishap doth lie In wretched bondage, wofully bestad.'
 'Ay me,' quoth she, 'what wicked destinie!
 And is he vanquisht by his tyrant enemy?'

XI

'Not by that tyrant, his intended foe;
 But by a tyrannesse,' he then replide,
 'That him captived hath in haplesse woe.'
 'Cease, thou bad newes-man; badly doest thou hide Thy maisters shame, in harlots bondage tide.
 The rest my selfe too readily can spell.
 With that in rage she turn'd from him aside, Forcing in vaine the rest to her to tell,
 And to her chamber went like solitary cell.

XII

There she began to make her monefull plaint Against her knight, for being so untrew;
 And him to touch with falshoods fowle at-taint,
 That all his other honour overthrew.
 Oft did she blame her selfe, and often rew,
 For yeelding to a straungers love so light, Whose life and manners straunge she never knew;
 And evermore she did him sharpely twight For breach of faith to her, which he had firmly plight.

XIII

And then she in her wrathfull will did cast,
 How to revenge that blot of honour blent;
 To fight with him, and goodly die her last:
 And then againe she did her selfe torment, Inflicting on her selfe his punishment.
 A while she walkt, and chaufft; a while she threw Her selfe uppon her bed, and did lament:
 Yet did she not lament with loude alew,
 As women wont, but with deepe sighes, and singulfs few.

XIV

Like as a wayward childe, whose sounder sleepe
 Is broken with some fearefull dreames affright,
 With froward will doth set him selfe to weepe; Ne can be stild for all his nurses might,

But kicks, and squals, and shriekes for fell
despight;
Now scratching her, and her loose locks misusing;
Now seeking darknesse, and now seeking
light;
Then craving sucke, and then the sucke refusing:
Such was this ladies fit, in her loves fond accusing.

XV

But when she had with such unquiet fits Her selfe there close afflicted long in vaine,
Yet found no easement in her troubled wits,
She unto Talus forth return'd againe, By change of place seeking to ease her
paine;
And gan enquire of him, with mylder mood,
The certaine cause of Artegals detaine; And what he did, and in what state he
stood,
And whether he did woo, or whether he were woo'd.

XVI

' Ah wellaway !' sayd then the yron man,
' That he is not the while in state to woo;
But lies in wretched thralldome, weake and
wan,
Not by strong hand compelled thereunto, But his owne doome, that none can now undoo.'
' Sayd I not then,' quoth shee, ' erwhile
aright,
That this is thinge compacte betwixt you
two,
Me to deceive of faith unto me plight, Since that he was not forst, nor overcome in fight ?'

XVII

With that he gan at large to her dilate
The whole discourse of his captivance sad,
In sort as ye have heard the same of late.
All which when she with hard enduraunce
had Heard to the end, she was right sore bestad, With sodaine stounds of wrath and grieffe
attone:
Ne would abide, till she had aunswere made,
But streight her selfe did dight, and armor
don;
And mounting to her steede, bad Talus guide her on.

XVIII

So forth she rode upon her ready way, To seeke her knight, as Talus her did
guide:
Sadly she rode, and never word did say,
Nor good nor bad, ne ever lookt aside, But still right downe, and in her thought did
hide
The felnesse of her heart, right fully bent
To fierce avengement of that womans pride, Which had her lord in her base prison
pent,
And so great honour with so fowle reproch had blent.

XIX

So as she thus melancholicke did ride, Chawing the cud of grieffe and inward paine,
She chaunst to meete toward the even-tide
A knight, that softly paced on the plaine,
As if him selfe to solace he were faine.
Well shot in yeares he seem'd, and rather
bent
To peace, then needlesse trouble to con-
straine;
As well by view of that his vestiment,
As by his modest semblant, that no evill
ment.

XX

He, comming neare, gan gently her salute With curteous words, in the most comely
wize;
Who though desirous rather to rest mute,
Then termes to entertaime of common guize, Yet rather then she kindnesse would de-
spize,
She would her selfe displease, so him re-
quite.
Then gan the other further to devise
Of things abrode, as next to hand did light, And many things demaund, to which she aunser'd light.

XXI

For little lust had she to talke of ought,
Or ought to heare, that mote delightfull
bee;
Her minde was whole possessed of one
thought,
That gave none other place. Which when as hee
By outward signes (as well he might) did
see,
He list no lenger to use lothfull speach,

But her besought to take it well in gree, Sith shady dampe had dimd the heavens
reach,
To lodge with him that night, unles good cause empeach.

XXII

The championesse, now seeing night at
dore,
Was glad to yeeld unto his good request:
And with him went without gaine-saying
more.
Not farre away, but little wide by west,
His dwelling was, to which he him address; Where soone arriving, they received were In seemly wise, as them beseeemed best:
For he their host them goodly well did
cheare,
And talk't of pleasant things, the night away to weare.

XXIII

Thus passing th' evening well, till time of
rest,
Then Britomart unto a bowre was brought;
Where groomes awayted her to have un-
drest.
But she ne would undressed be for ought, Ne doffe her armes, though he her much besought.
For she had vow'd, she sayd, not to forgo
Those warlike weedes, till she revenge had
wrought
Of a late wrong upon a mortall foe;
Which she would sure performe, betide her wele or wo.

XXIV

Which when their host perceiv'd, right discontent
In minde he grew, for feare least by that
art
He should his purpose misse, which close he ment:
Yet taking leave of her, he did depart.
There all that night remained Britomart, Restlesse, recomfortlesse, with heart deepe grieved,
Not suffering the least twinkling sleepe to start Into her eye, which th' heart mote have relieved,
But if the least appear'd, her eyes she streight reprevied.

XXV

'Ye guilty eyes,' sayd she, 'the which with guyle
My heart at first betrayd, will ye betray My life now to, for which a little whyle Ye will not watch? False watches, well-
away!
I wote when ye did watch both night and
day
Unto your losse: and now needes will ye
sleepe?
Now ye have made my heart to wake al-
way,
Now will ye sleepe? ah! wake, and rather
weepe,
To thinke of your nights want, that should yee waking keepe.'

XXVI

Thus did she watch, and weare the weary
night
In wayfull plaints, that none was to ap-
pease;
Now walking soft, now sitting still upright,
As sundry change her seemed best to ease.
Ne lesse did Talus suffer sleepe to seaze His eye-lids sad, but watcht continually, Lying without her dore in great disease;
Like to a spaniell wayting carefully, Least any should betray his lady treacherously.

XXVII

What time the native belman of the night,
The bird that warn'd Peter of his fall, First rings his silver bell t' each sleepey
wight,
That should their mindes up to devotion
call,
She heard a wondrous noise below the hall.
All sodainely the bed, where she should lie,
By a false trap was let adowne to fall Into a lower roome, and by and by The loft was raysd againe, that no man could it spie.

XXVIII

With sight whereof she was dismayd right
sore, Perceiving well the treason which was
ment:
Yet stirred not at all for doubt of more,
But kept her place with courage confident, Wayting what would ensue of that event.
It was not long before she heard the sound

Of armed men, comming with close intent Towards her chamber; at which dreadfull
stound
She quickly caught her sword, and shield about her bound.

XXIX

With that there came unto her chamber
dore
Two knights, all armed ready for to fight,
And after them full many other more,
A raskall rout, with weapons rudely dight.
Whom soone as Talus spide by glims of
night,
He started up, there where on ground he
lay,
And in his hand his thresher ready keight.
They seeing that, let drive at him streight
way,
And round about him preace in riotous aray.

XXX

But soone as he began to lay about
With his rude yron flaile, they gan to flie, Both armed knights and eke unarmed rout:
Yet Talus after them apace did plie, Where ever in the darke he could them
spie;
That here and there like scattred sheepe they lay.
Then backe returning, where his dame did
lie,
He to her told the story of that fray,
And all that treason there intended did bewray.

XXXI

Wherewith though wondrous wroth, and inly burning
To be avenged for so fowle a deede, Yet being forst to abide the daies returning,
She there remain'd, but with right wary heede,
Least any more such practise should pro-
ceede.
Now mote ye know (that which to Britomart Unknown was) whence all this did pro-
ceede,
And for what cause so great mischievous
smart
Was sent to her, that never evill ment in hart.

XXXII

The Goodman of this house was Dolon
hight,
A man of subtile wit and wicked minde,
That whilome in his youth had bene a knight,
And armes had borne, but little good could finde,
And much lesse honour by that warlike
kinde
Of life: for he was nothing valorous, But with slie shiftes and wiles did under-
minde
All noble knights which were adventurous, And many brought to shame by treason treacherous.

XXXIII

He had three sonnes, all three like fathers sonnes, Like treacherous, like full of fraud and
guile,
Of all that on this earthly compasse wonnes:
The eldest of the which was slaine erewhile
By Artegall, through his owne guilty wile;
His name was Guizor; whose untimely fate For to avenge, full many treasons vile His father Dolon had deviz'd of late With these his wicked sons, and shewed his cankred hate.

XXXIV

For sure he weend that this his present
gwest
Was Artegall, by many tokens plaine;
But chiefly by that yron page he ghest, Which still was wont with Artegall re-
maine;
And therefore ment him surely to have
slaine.
But by Gods grace, and her good heedinesse,
She was preserved from their traytrous
traîne.
Thus she all night wore out in watchfulnesse, Ne suffred slothfull sleepe her eyelids to opresse.

XXXV

The morrow next, so soone as dawning
houre
Discovered had the light to living eye,
She forth yssew'd out of her loathed bowre,
With full intent t' avenge that villany
On that vilde man and all his family:
And comming down to seeke them where they wond,

Nor sire, nor sonnes, nor any could she spie:
Each rowme she sought, but them all empty fond:
They all were fled for feare, but whether,
nether kond.

XXXVI

She saw it vaine to make there lenger stay, But tooke her steede, and thereon mounting light,
Gan her addresse unto her former way.
She had not rid the mountenance of a flight,
But that she saw there present in her sight Those two false brethren, on that perillous bridge
On which Pollente with Artegal did fight.
Streight was the passage like a ploughed ridge,
That, if two met, the one mote needes fall over the lidge.

XXXVII

There they did thinke them selves on her to wreake:
Who as she nigh unto them drew, the one These vile reproches gan unto her speake:
'Thou recreant false traytor, that with lone Of armes hast knighthood stolne, yet knight art none,
No more shall now the darkenesse of the
night
Defend thee from the vengeance of thy fone, But with thy bloud thou shalt appease the
spright
Of Guizor, by thee slaine, and murdered by thy slight.'

XXXVIII

Strange were the words in Britomartis eare; Yet stayd she not for them, but forward fared,
Till to the perillous bridge she came, and
there Talus desir'd that he might have prepared
The way to her, and those two losels scared.
But she thereat was wroth, that for despight
The glauncing sparkles through her bever glared,
And from her eies did flash out fiery light, Like coles that through a silver censer sparkle bright.

XXXIX

She stayd not to advise which way to take;
But putting spurres unto her fiery beast,

Thorough the midst of them she way did
make.

The one of them, which most her wrath
increast,

Uppon her speare she bore before her breast,
Till to the bridges further end she past, Where falling downe, his challenge he ve-
least:

The other over side the bridge she cast Into the river, where he drunke his deadly last.

XL

As when the flashing levin haps to light Uppon two stubborne oakes, which stand so
neare

That way betwixt them none appears in
sight;

The engin fiercely flying forth, doth teare Th' one from the earth, and through the aire doth beare;

The other it with force doth overthrow Uppon one side, and from his rootes doth
reare:

So did the Championesse those two there strow,

And to their sire their carcasses left to bestow.

CANTO VII

Britomart comes to Isis Church, Where shee strange visions sees:
She fights with Radigund, her slaies,
And Artegal thence frees.

I

NOUGHT is on earth more sacred or divine,
That gods and men doe equally adore, Then this same vertue that doth right define:

For th' hevens themselves, whence mortal men implore

Right in their wrongs, are rul'd by righteous lore

Of highest Jove, who doth true justice deale

To his inferiour gods, and evermore Therewith containes his heavenly common-weale:

The skill whereof to princes hearts he doth reveale.

II

Well therefore did the antique world invent,
That Justice was a god of souveraine grace,

And altars unto him, and temples lent,
 And heavenly honours in the highest place;
 Calling him great Osyris, of the race Of th' old Ægyptian kings, that whylome
 were;

With fayned colours shading a true case:
 For that Osyris, whilest he lived here,
 The justest man alive and truest did ap-
 peare.

III

His wife was Isis, whom they likewise made A goddesse of great powre and sovereignty,
 And in her person cunningly did shade
 That part of justice which is equity, Whereof I have to treat here presently.
 Unto whose temple when as Britomart Arrived, shee with great humility Did enter in, ne would that night depart;
 But Talus mote not be admitted to her part.

IV

There she received was in goodly wize
 Of many priests, which duely did attend Uppon the rites and daily sacrifice,
 All clad in linnen robes with silver hemd;
 And on their heads, with long locks comely kemd,
 They wore rich mitres shaped like the
 moone,
 To shew that Isis doth the moone portend;
 Like as Osyris signifies the sunne:
 For that they both like race in equall justice runne.

V

The championesse them greeting, as she could,
 Was thence by them into the temple led;
 Whose goodly building when she did be-
 hold,
 Borne uppon stately pillours, all dispred
 With shining gold, and arched over hed, She wondred at the workemans passing
 skill,
 Whose like before she never saw nor red;
 And thereupon long while stood gazing
 still,
 But thought that she thereon could never gaze her fill.

VI

Thence forth unto the idoll they her
 brought,
 The which was framed all of silver fine,

So well as could with cunning hand be
 wrought,
 And clothed all in garments made of line,
 Hemd all about with fringe of silver twine.
 Uppon her head she wore a crowne of gold,
 To shew that she had powre in things divine;
 And at her feete a crocodile was rold,
 That with his wreathed taile her middle did enfold.

VII

One foote was set uppon the crocodile,
 And on the ground the other fast did stand,
 So meaning to suppress both forged guile
 And open force: and in her other hand She stretched forth a long white sclender wand.
 Such was the goddesse; whom when Britomart
 Had long beheld, her selfe uppon the land
 She did prostrate, and with right humble
 hart,
 Unto her selfe her silent prayers did impart.

VIII

To which the idoll as it were inclining,
 Her wand did move with amiable looke, By outward shew her inward sence desin-
 ing.
 Who well perceiving how her wand she
 shooke,
 It as a token of good fortune tooke.
 By this the day with damp was overcast, And joyous light the house of Jove for-
 sooke:
 Which when she saw, her helmet she un-
 laste,
 And by the altars side her selfe to slumber plaste.

IX

For other beds the priests there used none, But on their mother Earths deare lap did
 lie,
 And bake their sides uppon the cold hard
 stone,
 T' enure them selves to sufferance thereby
 And proud rebellious flesh to mortify.
 For, by the vow of their religion,
 They tied were to stedfast chastity,
 And continence of life, that, all forgon, They mote the better tend to their devotion.

X

Therefore they mote not taste of fleshly
 food, Ne feed on ought the which doth bloud
 containe, Ne drinke of wine, for wine they say is
 blood,
 Even the bloud of gyants, which were
 slaine
 By thundering Jove in the Phlegrean plaine: For which the Earth (as they the story
 tell) Wroth with the gods, which to perpetuall
 paine
 Had damn'd her sonnes, which gainst them did rebell,
 With inward griefe and malice did against them swell.

XI

And of their vitall bloud, the which was shed
 Into her pregnant bosome, forth she brought The fruitfull vine, whose liquor blouddy
 red,
 Having the mindes of men with fury fraught, Mote in them stirre up old rebellious
 thought,
 To make new warre against the gods againe: Such is the powre of that same fruit, that
 nought
 The fell contagion may thereof restraine, Ne within reasons rule her madding mood
 containe.

XII

There did the warlike maide her selfe re-
 pose,
 Under the wings of Isis all that night,
 And with sweete rest her heavy eyes did
 close,
 After that long daies toile and weary plight.
 Where whilst her earthly parts with soft
 delight
 Of sencelesse sleepe did deeply drowned lie,
 There did appeare unto her heavenly spright
 A wondrous vision, which did close implie
 The course of all her fortune and posteritie.

XIII

Her seem'd, as she was doing sacrificize
 To Isis, deckt with mitre on her hed
 And linnen stole, after those priestes guize, All sodainely she saw transfigured Her linnen stole to robe of scarlet red,

And moone-like mitre to a crowne of gold,
 That even she her selfe much wondered At such a chaunge, and joyed to behold Her selfe adorn'd with gems and jewels manifold.

XIV

And in the midst of her felicity, An hideous tempest seemed from below
 To rise through all the temple sodainely, That from the altar all about did blow
 The holy fire, and all the embers strow Uppon the ground, which, kindled privily, Into outrageous flames unwares did grow,
 That all the temple put in jeopardy Of flaming, and her selfe in great perplexity.

XV

With that the crocodile, which sleeping lay Under the idols feete in fearelesse bowre, Seem'd to awake in horrible dismay,
 As being troubled with that stormy stowre;
 And gaping greedy wide, did streight de-voure Both flames and tempest: with which growen great,
 And swolne with pride of his owne peere-lesse powre,
 He gan to threaten her likewise to eat;
 But that the goddesse with her rod him backe did beat.

XVI

Tho turning all his pride to humblesse
 meeke,
 Him selfe before her feete he lowly threw,
 And gan for grace and love of her to seeke:
 Which she accepting, he so neare her drew,
 That of his game she soone enwombd
 grew,
 And forth did bring a lion of great might;
 That shortly did all other beasts subdew.
 With that she waked, full of fearefull
 fright,
 And doubtfully dismayd through that so uncouth sight.

XVII

So thereuppon long while she musing lay,
 With thousand thoughts feeding her fan-tasie, Untill she spide the lampe of lightsome
 day,
 Up-lifted in the porch of heaven hie.

Then up she rose fraught with melancholy,
 And forth into the lower parts did pas;
 Whereas the priestes she found full busily
 About their holy things for morrow mas:
 Whom she saluting faire, faire resaluted
 was.

XVIII

But, by the change of her unchearefull
 looke,
 They might perceiue she was not well in
 plight;
 Or that some pensiveness to heart she
 tooke.
 Therefore thus one of them, who seem'd in sight
 To be the greatest and the gravest wight, To her bespake: 'Sir knight, it seemes to
 me,
 That, thorough evill rest of this last night,
 Or ill apayd or much dismayd ye be,
 That by your change of cheare is easie for
 to see.'

XIX

'Certes,' sayd she, 'sith ye so well have
 spide
 The troublous passion of my pensive mind,
 I will not seeke the same from you to hide,
 But will my cares unfolde, in hope to find Your aide, to guide me out of errour blind.'
 'Say on,' quoth he, 'the secret of your hart:
 For by the holy vow which me doth bind
 I am adjur'd, best counsell to impart To all that shall require my comfort in their smart.'

XX

Then gan she to declare the whole discourse
 Of all that vision which to her appeard,
 As well as to her minde it had recourse.
 All which when he unto the end had heard,
 Like to a weake faint-hearted man he fared, Through great astonishment of that strange
 sight;
 And with long locks up-standing, stifly stared Like one adawed with some dreadfull
 spright.
 So filld with heavenly fury, thus he her be-height:

XXI

'Magnifike virgin, that in queint disguise Of British armes doest maske thy royall
 blood,

So to pursue a perillous emprize, How couldst thou weene, through that disguized hood,

To hide thy state from being understood?
 Can from th' immortall gods ought hidden
 bee?

They doe thy linage, and thy lordly brood,
 They doe thy sire, lamenting sore for thee, They doe thy love, forlorne in womens thraldome, see.

XXII

'The end whereof, and all the long event, They doe to thee in this same dreame discover.

For that same crocodile doth represent The righteous knight that is thy faithfull lover,

Like to Osyris in all just endever.
 For that same crocodile Osyris is,
 That under Isis feete doth sleepe for ever.
 To shew that clemence oft, in things amis, Restraines those sterne behests and cruell doomes of his.

XXIII

'That knight shall all the troublous stormes
 asswage,
 And raging flames, that many foes shall
 reare,

To hinder thee from the just heritage Of thy sires crowne, and from thy countrey
 deare.

Then shalt thou take him to thy loved fere,
 And joyne in equall portion of thy realme:
 And afterwards a soune to him shalt beare, That lion-like shall shew his powre extreame.

So blesse thee God, and give thee joyance of thy dreame.'

XXIV

All which when she unto the end had
 heard,

She much was eased in her troublous
 thought,

And on those priests bestowed rich reward:
 And royall gifts of gold and silver wrought She for a present to their goddess brought.
 Then taking leave of them, she forward
 went,

To seeke her love, where he was to be
 sought;

Ne rested till she came without relent Unto the land of Amazons, as she was bent

XXV

Whereof when newes to Radigund was
brought,
Not with amaze, as women wonted bee,
She was confused in her troublous thought,
But filld with courage and with joyous glee,
As glad to heare of armes, the which now
she
Had long surceast, she bad to open bold,
That she the face of her new foe might see.
But when they of that yron man had told,
Which late her folke had slaine, she bad them forth to hold.

XXVI

So there without the gate (as seemed best)
She caused her pavilion be pight;
In which stout Britomart her selfe did rest, Whiles Talus watched at the dore all night.
All night likewise, they of the towne in
fright
Upon their wall good watch and ward did
keepe.
The morrow next, so soone as dawning light Bad doe away the dampe of drouzie sleepe, The warlike Amazon out of her bowre did peepe;

XXVII

And caused streight a trumpet loud to
shrill,
To warne her foe to battell soone be prest:
Who, long before awoke, (for she ful ill Could sleepe all night, that in unquiet brest Did closely harbour such a jealous guest)
Was to the battell whilome ready dight.
Eftsoones that warriouresse with haughty
crest
Did forth issue, all ready for the fight:
On th' other side her foe appeared soone in sight.

XXVIII

But ere they reared hand, the Amazone Began the streight conditions to propound, With which she used still to tye her fone:
To serve her so, as she the rest had bound.
Which when the other heard, she sternly frownd
For high disdain of such indignity, And would no lenger treat, but bad them
sound.
For her no other termes should ever tie, Then what prescribed were by lawes of chevalrie.

XXIX

The trumpets sound, and they together run With greedy rage, and with their faulchius smot;
Ne either sought the others strokes to shun, But through great fury both their skill
forgot,
And practicke use in armes: ne spared not Their dainty parts, which Nature had created So faire and tender, without staine or spot, For other uses then they them translated;
Which they now hackt and hewd, as if such use they hated.

XXX

As when a tygre and a lionesse Are met at spoyling of some hungry pray, Both challenge it with equal greedinesse:
But first the tygre claws thereon did lay;
And therefore loth to loose her right away, Doth in defence thereof full stoutly stond:
To which the lion strongly doth gainesay, That she to hunt the beast first tooke in
hond;
And therefore ought it have, where ever she it fond.

XXXI

Full fiercely layde the Amazon about,
And dealt her blowes unmercifully sore:
Which Britomart withstood with courage
stout,
And them repaide againe with double more.
So long they fought, that all the grassie
flore
Was filld with bloud, which from their sides did flow,
And gushed through their armes, that all in gore
They trode, and on the ground their lives
did strow,
Like fruitles seede, of which untimely death should grow.

XXXII

At last proud Radigund with fell despight, Having by chaunce espide advantage neare, Let drive at her with all her dreadfull
might,
And thus unbryding said: 'This token
beare
Unto the man whom thou doest love so
deare;
And tell him for his sake thy life thou gavest.'

Which spitefull words she sore engriev'd to
 heare,
 Thus answer'd: 'Lewdly thou my love de-pravest,
 Who shortly must repent that now so vainely bravest.'

XXXIII

Nath'lesse that stroke so cruell passage
 found,
 That, glauncing on her shoulder plate, it bit Unto the bone, and made a griesly wound, That she her shield through raging smart of it Could scarce uphold; yet soone she it re-quit:
 For having force increast through furious
 paine,
 She her so rudely on the helmet smit,
 That it empierced to the very braine, And her proud person low prostrated on the plaine.

XXXIV

Where being layd, the wrothfull Britonesse Stayd not till she came to her selfe againe,
 But in revenge both of her loves distresse,
 And her late vile reproch, though vaunted
 vaine,
 And also of her wound, which sore did
 paine,
 She with one stroke both head and helmet
 cleft.
 Which dreadfull sight when all her warlike
 traine
 There present saw, each one, of sence bereft, Fled fast into the towne, and her sole victor left.

XXXV

But yet so fast they could not home retrate,
 But that swift Talus did the formost win;
 And pressing through the preace unto the
 gate, Pelmell with them attonce did enter in.
 There then a piteous slaughter did begin:
 For all that ever came within his reach
 He with his yron flae did thresh so thin.
 That he no worke at all left for the leach:
 Like to an hideous storme, which nothing may empeach.

XXXVI

And now by this the noble conqueresse
 Her selfe came in, her glory to partake;

Where, though revengefull vow she did
 professe,
 Yet when she saw the heapes which he did
 make
 Of slaughtred carkasses, her heart did
 quake
 For very ruth, which did it almost rive,
 That she his fury willed him to slake:
 For else he sure had left not one alive, But all, in his revenge, of spirite would deprive.

XXXVII

Tho, when she had his execution stayd,
 She for that yron prison did enquire,
 In which her wretched love was captive layd:
 Which breaking open with indignant ire, She entred into all the partes entire:
 Where when she saw that lothly uncouth
 sight,
 Of men disguiz'd in womanishe attire,
 Her heart gan grudge, for very deepe
 despight
 Of so unmanly maske, in misery midght.

XXXVIII

At last when as to her owne love she came,
 Whom like disguise no lesse deformed had,
 At sight thereof abasht with secrete shame,
 She turnd her head aside, as nothing glad To have beheld a spectacle so bad.
 And then too well beleev'd that which tofore Jealous suspect as true untruely drad:
 Which vaine conceipt now nourishing no
 more,
 She sought with ruth to salve his sad misfortunes sore.

XXXIX

Not so great wonder and astonishment Did the most chast Penelope possesse,
 To see her lord, that was reported drent,
 And dead long since in dolorous distresse, Come home to her in piteous wretchednesse, After long travell of full twenty yeares,
 That she knew not his favours likeliness,
 For many scarres and many hoary heares, But stood long staring on him, mongst un-certaine feares.

XL

'Ah! my deare lord, what sight is this?'
 quoth she;
 'What May-game hath misfortune made of
 you?'

Where is that dreadfull manly looke?
 where be Those mighty palmes, the which ye wout t' eubrew
 In bloud of kings, and great hoastes to subdew?
 Could ought on earth so wondrous change have wrought,
 As to have robde you of that manly hew?
 Could so great courage stouped have to ought?
 Then farewell, fleshly force; I see thy pride is nought.'

XLI

Thenceforth she streight into a bowre him
 brought,
 And causd him those uncomely weedes un-
 dight,
 And in their steede for other rayment
 sought,
 Whereof there was great store, and armours bright,
 Which had bene reft from many a noble
 knight;
 Whom that proud Amazon subdewed had, Whilst fortune favoured her successe in
 fight:
 In which when as she him anew had clad,
 She was reviv'd, and joyd much in his semblance glad.

XLII

So there a while they afterwards remained, Him to refresh, and her late wounds to
 heale:
 During which space she there as princes
 rained,
 And changing all that forme of common
 weale,
 The liberty of women did repeale, Which they had long usurpt; and them restoring
 To mens subjection, did true justice deale:
 That all they, as a goddesse her adoring, Her wisdom did admire, and hearkned to her loring.

XLIII

For all those knights, which long in captive
 shade
 Had shrowded bene, she did from thraldome
 free,
 And magistrates of all that city made,
 And gave to them great living and large fee:

And that they should for ever faithfull bee,
 Made them sweare fealty to Artegall:
 Who when him selfe now well recur'd did
 see,
 He purposd to proceed, what so be fall, Uppon his first adventure, which him forth did call.

XLIV

Full sad and sorrowfull was Britomart
 For his departure, her new cause of grieft;
 Yet wisely moderated her owne smart, Seeing his honor, which she tendred chiefe, Consisted much in that adventures priefe.
 The care whereof, and hope of his successe, Gave unto her great comfort and reliefe,
 That womanish complaints she did repress, And tempred for the time her present heavinesse.

XLV

There she continu'd for a certaine space, Till through his want her woe did more increase:
 Then, hoping that the change of aire and
 place
 Would change her paine, and sorrow somewhat ease,
 She parted thence, her anguish to appease.
 Meane while her noble lord, Sir Artegall, Went on his way, ne ever howre did cease, Till he redeemed had that lady thrall:
 That for another canto will more fitly fall.

CANTO VIII

Prince Arthure and Sir Artegall
 Free Samient from feare:
 They slay the Soudan, drive his wife Adicia to despaire.

I

NOUGHT under heaven so strongly doth allure
 The sence of man, and all his minde pos-sesse,
 As beauties lovely baite, that doth procure Great warriors oft their rigour to repress,
 And mighty hands forget their manlinesse; Drawne with the powre of an heart-robbing
 eye,
 And wrapt in fetters of a golden tresse,
 That can with melting pleasaunce mollifye Their hardned hearts, enur'd to bloud and cruelty.

II

So whylome learnd that mighty Jewish
swaine,
Each of whose lockes did match a man in
might,
To lay his spoiles before his lemans traine:
So also did that great Oetean knight
For his loves sake his lions skin undight:
And so did warlike Antony neglect
The worlds whole rule for Cleopatras sight.
Such wondrous powre hath wemens faire aspect,
To captive men, and make them all the world reject.

III

Yet could it not sterne Artegall retaine, Nor hold from suite of his avowed quest,
Which he had undertane to Gloriane;
But left his love, albe her strong request, Faire Britomart, in languor and unrest, And rode him selfe uppon his first intent:
Ne day nor night did ever idly rest;
Ne wight but onely Talus with him went,
The true guide of his way and vertuous government.

IV

So travelling, he chaunst far off to heed
A damzell, flying on a palfrey fast Before two knights, that after her did
speed
With all their powre, and her full fiercely
chast
In hope to have her overhent at last:
Yet fled she fast, and both them farre out-
went,
Carried with wings of feare, like fowle aghost,
With locks all loose, and rayment all to-
rent;
And ever as she rode, her eye was backe-ward bent.

Soone after these he saw another knight,
That after those two former rode apace, With speare in rest, and prickt with all his
might:
So ran they all, as they had bene at bace,
They being chased, that did others chase.
At length he saw the hindmost overtake One of those two, and force him turne his
face;

How ever loth he were his way to slake, Yet mote he algates now abide, and an-swere make.

VI

But th' other still pursu'd the fearefull
mayd;
Who still from him as fast away did flie, Ne once for ought her speedy passage
stayd,
Till that at length she did before her spie Sir Artegall, to whom she streight did hie With gladfull hast, in hope of him to get Succour against her greedy enemy:
Who, seeing her approach, gan forward set,
To save her from her feare, and him from force to let.

VII

But he like hound full greedy of his pray,
Being impatient of impediment, Continu'd still his course, and by the way Thought with his speare him quight have overwent.
So both together, ylike felly bent, Like fiercely met. But Artegall was stronger,
And better skild in tilt and turnament,
And bore him quite out of his saddle, longer Then two speares length: so mischief overmatcht the wronger.

VIII

And in his fall misfortune him mistooke;
For on his head unhappily he pight,
That his owne waight his necke asunder
broke,
And left there dead. Meane while the other knight
Defeated had the other faytour quight,
And all his bowels in his body brast:
Whom leaving there in that dispiteous
plight,
He ran still on, thinking to follow fast His other fellow Pagan, which before him past.

IX

In stead of whom finding there ready prest Sir Artegall, without discretion
He at him ran, with ready speare in rest:
Who, seeing him come still so fiercely on,
Against him made againe. So both anon Together met, and strongly either strooke

And broke their speares; yet neither has forgon
 His horses backe, yet to and fro long shooke, And tottred like two towres, which through a tempest quooke.

X

But when againe they had recovered sence, They drew their swords, in mind to make amends

For what their speares had fayld of their pretence.

Which when the damzell, who those deadly ends

Of both her foes had seene, and now her frends

For her beginning a more fearefull fray, She to them runnes in hast, and her haire rends,

Crying to them their cruell hands to stay, Untill they both doe heare what she to them will say.

XI

They stayd their hands, when she thus gan to speake:

'Ah! gentle knights, what meane ye thus unwise

Upon your selves anothers wrong to wreake?

I am the wrong'd, whom ye did enterprise Both to redresse, and both redrest like-
 wise:

Witnesse the Paynims both, whom ye may
 see

There dead on ground. What doe ye then devise

Of more revenge? if more, then I am shee Which was the roote of all; end your revenge on mee.'

XII

Whom when they heard so say, they lookt
 about,

To weete if it were true, as she had told;
 Where when they saw their foes dead out of doubt,

Eftsoones they gan their wrothfull hands
 to hold,

And ventailes reare, each other to behold.
 Tho, when as Artegall did Arthure vew,
 So faire a creature, and so wondrous bold,
 He much admired both his heart and hew,
 And touched with intire affection, nigh him
 drew,

XIII

Saying: 'Sir knight, of pardon I you pray, That all unweeting have you wrong'd thus
 sore,

Suffring my hand against my heart to stray:
 Which if ye please forgive, I will therefore Yeeld for amends my selfe yours evermore,

Or what so penaunce shall by you be red.'
 To whom the Prince: 'Certes, me needeth
 more

To crave the same, whom errorr so misled,
 As that I did mistake the living for the ded.

XIV

'But sith ye please that both our blames shall die,

Amends may for the trespasse soone be made, Since neither is endamadg'd much thereby.'
 So can they both them selves full eath per-
 swade

To faire accordaunce, and both faults to
 shade,

Either embracing other lovingly,
 And swearing faith to either on his blade, Never thenceforth to nourish enmity, But either others cause to maintaine mutually.

XV

Then Artegall gan of the Prince enquire, What were those knights, which there on ground were layd,

And had receiv'd their follies worthy hire,
 And for what cause they chased so that
 mayd.

'Certes, I wote not well,' the Prince then
 sayd,

'But by adventure found them faring so,
 As by the way unweetingly I strayd, And lo the damzell selfe, whence all did
 grow,

Of whom we may at will the whole occasion know.'

XVI

Then they that damzell called to them nie, And asked her, what were those two her
 fone,

From whom she earst so fast away did flie;
 And what was she her selfe so woe begone,
 And for what cause pursu'd of them attone.
 To whom she thus: 'Then wote ye well, that I

Doe serve a queene, that not far hence doth wone,

A princesse of great powre and majestie, Famous through all the world, and honor'd far and nie.

XVII

' Her name Mercilla most men use to call;
That is a mayden queene of high renoune,
For her great bounty knowne over all,
And soveraine grace, with which her royall
crowne
She doth support, and strongly beateth
downe

The malice of her foes, which her envy,
And at her happinesse do fret and frowne:
Yet she her selfe the more doth magnify,
And even to her foes her mercies multiply.

XVIII

' Mongst many which maligne her happy
state,
There is a mighty man, which wounes here
by,
That with most fell despight and deadly
hate

Seekes to subvert her crowne and dignity,
And all his powre doth thereunto apply:
And her good knights, of which so brave a
band

Serves her as any princesse under sky,
He either spoiles, if they against him stand, Or to his part allures, and bribeth under
hand.

XIX

' Ne him sufficeth all the wrong and ill,
Which he unto her people does each day, But that he seekes by traytrous traines to
spill

Her person, and her sacred selfe to slay:
That, O ye heavens, defend, and turne away From her unto the miscreant him selfe, That neither hath religion nor fay,
But makes his god of his ungodly pelfe, And idols serves; so let his idols serve the elfe.

XX

' To all which cruell tyranny, they say,
He is provokt, and stird up day and night
By his bad wife, that hight Adicia, Who counsels him, through confidence of
might,
To breake all bonds of law and rules of
right.
For she her selfe professeth mortall foe

To Justice, and against her still doth fight, Working to all that love her deadly woe, And making all her knights and people to doe so.

XXI

' Which my liege lady seeing, thought it
best,

With that his wife in friendly wise to deale,
For stint of strife and stablishment of rest Both to her selfe and to her common weale,
And all forepast displeasures to repeale.

So me in message unto her she sent,
To treat with her, by way of enterdeale,
Of finall peace and faire attonement, Which might concluded be by mutuall consent.

XXII

' All times have wout safe passage to afford To messengers that come for causes just:
But this proude dame, disdayning all accord,
Not onely into bitter termes forth brust, Reviling me, and rayling as she lust, But lastly, to make proofe of utmost
shame,

Me like a dog she out of dores did thrust, Miscalling me by many a bitter name,
That never did her ill, ne once deserved
blame.

XXIII

' And lastly, that no shame might wanting
be,

When I was gone, soone after me she sent These two false knights, whom there ye lying see,

To be by them dishonoured and shent:
But thank be God, and your good hardi-
ment,

They have the price of their owne folly
payd.'

So said this damzell, that hight Samient,
And to those knights, for their so noble ayd, Her selfe most gratefull shew'd, and heaped thanks repayd.

XXIV

But they now having throughly heard, and scene

Al those great wrongs, the which that mayd complained

To have bene done against her lady queene By that proud dame, which her so much disdained.

Were moved much thereat, and twixt them
 fained
 With all their force to worke avengement
 strong
 Upon the Souldan selfe, which it mayn-tained,
 And on his lady, th' author of that wrong,
 And upon all those knights that did to her belong.

XXV

But thinking best by counterfet disguise
 To their desaigne to make the easier way, They did this complot twixt them selves devise:
 First, that Sir Artegall should him array Like one of those two knights which dead there lay;
 And then that damzell, the sad Samient, Should as his purchast prize with him convey Unto the Souldans court, her to present Unto his scornfull lady, that for her had sent.

XXVI

So as they had deviz'd, Sir Artegall Him clad in th' armour of a Pagan
 knight,
 And taking with him, as his vanquisht
 thrall,
 That danzell, led her to the Souldans
 right.
 Where soone as his proud wife of her had
 sight,
 Forth of her window as she looking lay,
 She weened streight it was her Paynim
 knight,
 Which brought that danzell as his purchast
 pray;
 And sent to him a page, that mote direct his way.

XXVII

Who bringing them to their appointed place, Offred his service to disarme the knight;
 But he refusing him to let unlace,
 For doubt to be discovered by his sight, Kept himselfe still in his straunge armour
 dight.
 Soone after whom the Prince arrived there,
 And sending to the Souldan in despight
 A bold defyance, did of him requere That damzell, whom he held as wrongfull prisonere.

XXVIII

Wherewith the Souldan all with furie
 fraught,
 Swearing and banning most blasphemously, Commaunded straight his armour to be
 brought,
 And mounting straight upon a charret hye, (With yron wheelles and hookes arm'd dreadfully,
 And drawne of cruell steedes, which he had fed With flesh of men, whom through fell tyranny
 He slaughtred had, and ere they were halfe
 ded,
 Their bodies to his beasts for provender did spred,)

XXIX

So forth he came, all in a cote of plate, Burnisht with bloudie rust; whiles on the
 greene
 The Briton Prince him readie did awayte, In glistering armes right goodly well be-
 seene,
 That shone as bright as doth the heaven
 sheene;
 And by his stirrup Talus did attend, Playing his pages part, as he had beene Before directed by his lord; to th' end He should his fle to finall execution bend.

XXX

Thus goe they both together to their geare, With like fierce minds, but meanings different:
 For the proud Souldan, with presumptuous
 cheare,
 And countenance sublime and insolent, Sought onely slaughter and avengement:
 But the brave Prince for honour and for
 right,
 Gainst tortious powre and lawlesse regiment,
 In the behalfe of wronged weake did fight:
 More in his causes truth he trusted then in might.

XXXI

Like to the Thracian tyrant, who, they
 say,
 Unto his horses gave his guests for meat, Till he himselfe was made their greedie
 pray,
 And torne in peeces by Alcides great:

So thought the Souldan in his follies threat, Either the Prince in peeces to have torne With his sharpe wheeles, in his first rages
 heat,
 Or under his fierce horses feet have borne,
 And trampled downe in dust his thoughts disdained scorne.

XXXII

But the bold child that perill well espying,
 If he too rashly to his charet drew,
 Gave way unto his horses speedie flying,
 And their resistlesse rigour did eschew.
 Yet, as he passed by, the Pagan threw A shivering dart with so impetuous force, That, had he not it shun'd with heedfull
 vew,
 It had himselfe transfixed, or his horse, Or made them both one masse withouten more remorse.

XXXIII

Oft drew the Prince unto his charret nigh, In hope some stroke to fasten on him
 neare;
 But he was mounted in his seat so high,
 And his wingfooted coursers him did beare
 So fast away, that ere his readie speare He could advance, he farre was gone and
 past.
 Yet still he him did follow every where,
 And followed was of him likewise full
 fast,
 So long as in his steedes the flaming breath did last.

XXXIV

Againe the Pagan threw another dart,
 Of which he had with him abundant store,
 On every side of his embatteld cart,
 And of all other weapons lesse or more,
 Which warlike uses had deviz'd of yore.
 The wicked shaft, guyded through th' ayrie
 wyde
 By some bad spirit, that it to mischief
 bore, Stayd not, till through his curat it did
 glyde,
 And made a griesly wound in his enriven
 side.

XXXV

Much was he grieved with that haplesse
 throe,
 That opened had the welspring of his blood;

But much the more that to his hateful foe
 He mote not come, to wreake his wrathfull
 mood.

That made him rave, like to a lyon wood,
 Which, being wounded of the huntsmans
 hand,
 Can not come neare him in the covert
 wood,
 Where he with boughes hath built his shady stand,
 And fent himselfe about with many a flaming brand.

XXXVI

Still when he sought t' approach unto him ny,
 His charret wheeles about him whirled
 round,
 And made him backe againe as fast to fly;
 And eke his steedes, like to an hungry
 hound,
 That hunting after game hath carrion
 found,
 So cruelly did him pursew and chace,
 That his good steed, all were he much re-
 round
 For noble courage and for hardie race, Durst not endure their sight, but fled from place to place.

XXXVII

Thus long they trast and traverst to and
 fro, Seeking by every way to make some breach,
 Yet could the Prince not nigh unto him goe, That one sure stroke he might unto him
 reach,
 Whereby his strengthes assay he might him teach.
 At last from his victorious shield he drew The vaile which did his powrefull light em-
 peach;
 And comming full before his horses vew,
 As they upon him prest, it plaine to them did shew.

XXXVIII

Like lightening flash, that hath the gazer burned,
 So did the sight thereof their sense dismay, That backe againe upon themselves they turned,
 And with their ryder ranne perforce away:
 Ne could the Souldan them from flying stay

With raynes, or wonted rule, as well he
knew.
Nought feared they what he could do or
say,
But th' onely feare that was before their
vew;
From which, like mazed deare, dismayfully they flew.

XXXIX

Fast did they fly as them their feete could
beare,
High over hilles, and lowly over dales, As they were follow'd of their former
feare.
In vaine the Pagan bannes, and swears, and rayles,
And backe with both his hands unto him hayles
The resty raynes, regarded now no more:
He to them calles and speakes, yet nought avayles;
They heare him not, they have forgot his
lore,
But go which way they list; their guide they have forlore.

XL

As when the fire-mouthed steeds, which
drew
The sunnes bright wayne to Phaetons decay, Soone as they did the monstrous Scorpion
vew,
With ugly craples crawling in their way,
The dreadfull sight did them so sore affray, That their well known courses they for-
went,
And leading th' ever-burning lampe astray,
This lower world nigh all to ashes brent,
And left their scorched path yet in the firmament.

XLI

Such was the furie of these head-strong steeds, Soone as the infants sunlike shield they
saw,
That all obedience both to words and deeds They quite forgot, and scornd all former
law:
Through woods, and rocks, and mountaines they did draw
The yron charet, and the wheelles did teare, Aud tost the Paynim, without feare or awe;

From side to side they tost him here and
there,
Crying to them in vaine, that nould his crying heare.

XLII

Yet still the Prince pursew'd him close behind,
Oft making offer him to smite, but found No easie meanes according to his mind.
At last they have all overthrowne to
ground,
Quite topside turvey, and the Pagan hound Amongst the yron hookes and graples keene Torne all to rags, and rent with many a
wound,
That no whole peece of him was to be
seene,
But scattred all about, and strow'd upon the greene.

XLIII

Like as the cursed some of Theseus, That, following his chace in dewy morne,
To fly his stepdames loves outrageous,
Of his owne steedes was all to peeces torne,
And his faire limbs left in the woods for-
lorne;
That for his sake Diana did lament, And all the wooddy nymphes did wayle and
mourne:
So was this Souldan rapt and all to-rent,
That of his shape appear'd no litle moni-
ment.

XLIV

Onely his shield and armour, which there
lay,
Though nothing whole, but all to-brusd and broken,
He up did take, and with him brought away,
That mote remaine for an eternall token To all mongst whom this storie should be spoken,
How worthily, by Heavens high decree, Justice that day of wrong her selfe had wroken,
That all men which that spectacle did see,
By like ensample mote for ever warned bee.

XLV

So on a tree, before the tyrants dore,
He caused them be hung in all mens sight,
To be a monument for evermore.
Which when his ladie from the castles hight

Beheld, it much appald her troubled spright:
 Yet not, as women wont, in dolefull fit She was dismayd, or faynted through
 affright,
 But gathered unto her her troubled wit,
 And gan eftsoones devise to be aveng'd for it.

XLVI

Streight downe she ranne, like an enraged cow,
 That is berobbed of her youngling dere,
 With knife in hand, and fatally did vow
 To wreake her on that mayden messengere, Whom she had causd be kept as prisoner
 By Artegall, misween'd for her owne knight, That brought her backe. And comming present there,
 She at her ran with all her force and might,
 All flaming with revenge and furious de-
 spight.

XLVII

Like raging Ino, when with knife in hand She threw her husbands murdred infant
 out;
 Or fell Medea, when on Colchicke strand Her brothers bones she scattered all about;
 Or as that madding mother, mongst the rout
 Of Bacchus priests, her owne deare flesh
 did teare.
 Yet neither Ino, nor Medea stout, Nor all the Mœnades so furious were,
 As this bold woman, when she saw that damzell there.

XLVIII

But Artegall, being thereof aware, Did stay her cruell hand, ere she her
 rought,
 And as she did her selfe to strike prepare,
 Out of her fist the wicked weapon caught:
 With that, like one enfelon'd or distraught, She forth did rome, whether her rage her
 bore,
 With franticke passion and with furie
 fraught;
 And breaking forth out at a posterne dore, Unto the wyld wood ranne, her dolours to deplore.

XLIX

As a mad bytch, when as the franticke fit Her burning tongue with rage inflamed hath,

Doth runne at randon, and with furious
 bit Snatching at every thing, doth wreake her
 wrath
 On man and beast that commeth in her path.
 There they doe say that she transformed
 was
 Into a tygre, and that tygres seath
 In crueltie and outrage she did pas, To prove her surname true, that she imposed has.

L

Then Artegall himselve discovering plaine, Did issue forth gainst all that warlike rout Of knights and armed men, which did
 maintaine
 That ladies part, and to the Souldan lout:
 All which he did assault with courage stout, All were they nigh an hundred knights of
 name,
 And like wyld goates them chaced all about, Flying from place to place with cowheard
 shame,
 So that with final force them all he overcame.

LI

Then caused he the gates be opened wyde, And there the Prince, as victour of that
 day,
 With tryumph entertayn'd and glorifyde, Presenting him with all the rich array And roiall pompe, which there long hidden
 lay, Purchast through lawlesse powre and tortious wrong
 Of that proud Souldan, whom he earst did slay.
 So both, for rest there having stayd not
 long, Marcht with that mayd, fit matter for another song.

CANTO IX

Arthur and Artegall catch Guyle, Whom Talus doth dismay:
 They to Mercillaes pallace come,
 And see her rich array.

I

WHAT tygre, or what other salvage wight,
 Is so exceeding furious and fell

As Wrong, when it hath arm'd it selfe with
 might ?
 Not fit mongst men, that doe with reason
 mell,
 But mongst wyld beasts and salvage woods to dwell;
 Where stail the stronger doth the weake de-
 voure,
 And they that most in boldnesse doe excell Are dreedd most, and feared for their
 powre:
 Fit for Adicia, there to build her wicked
 bowre.

II

There let her wonne farre from resort of
 men,
 Where righteous Artegall her late exyled;
 There let her ever keepe her damned den, Where none may be with her lewd parts defyled, Nor none but beasts may be of her de-spoyled:
 And turne we to the noble Prince, where
 late
 We did him leave, after that he had foyled
 The cruell Souldan, and with dreadfull
 fate
 Had utterly subverted his unrighteous
 state.

III

Where having with Sir Artegall a space Well solast in that Souldans late delight, They both resolving now to leave the place,
 Both it and all the wealth therein behight Unto that damzell in her ladies right,
 And so would have departed on their way.
 But she them woo'd by all the meanes she
 might,
 And earnestly besought, to wend that day
 With her, to see her ladie thence not farre
 away.

IV

By whose entreatie both they overcommen, Agree to goe with her, and by the way, (As often falles) of sundry things did com-
 men.
 Mongst which that damzell did to them
 bewray
 A straunge adventure, which not farre thence lay;
 To weet, a wicked villaine, bold and stout,
 Which wonned in a rocke not farre away,

That robbed all the countrie there about,
 And brought the pillage home, whence none could get it out.

V

Thereto both his owne wylie wit (she sayd)
 And eke the fastnesse of his dwelling place, Both unassaylable, gave him great ayde:
 For he so crafty was to forge and face,
 So light of hand, and nymble of his pace,
 So smooth of tongue, and subtile in his tale,
 That could deceive one looking in his face;
 Therefore by name Malengin they him call, Well known by his feates, and famous over all.

VI

Through these his slights he many doth
 confound,
 And eke the rocke, in which he wents to
 dwell,
 Is wondrous strong, and hewen farre under ground
 A dreadfull depth, how deepe no man can
 tell;
 But some doe say, it goeth downe to hell.
 And all within, it full of wyndings is,
 And hidden wayes, that searse an hound by smell
 Can follow out those false footsteps of his, Ne none can baekc returne that once are gone amis.

VII

Which when those knights had heard, their harts gan earne
 To understand that villeins dwelling place,
 And greatly it desir'd of her to learne, And by which way they towards it should trace.
 'Were not,' sayd she, 'that it should let your pace
 Towards my ladies presencc by you ment,
 I would you gujde directly to the place.'
 'Then let not that,' said they, 'stay your intent;
 For neither will one foot, till we that earle have hent.'

VIII

So forth they past, till they approched ny Unto the rocke where was the villains
 won:
 Which when the damzell neare at hand did
 spy,

She warn'd the knights thereof: who thereupon
Gan to advize what best were to be done.
So both agreed to send that mayd afore,
Where she might sit nigh to the den alone, Wayling, and raysing pittifull uprore,
As if she did some great calamitie deplore.

IX

With noyse whereof when as the caytive carle Should issue forth, in hope to find some
spoyle,
They in awyt would closely him ensnarle, Ere to his den he backward could recoyle,
And so would hope him easily to foyle.
The damzell straight went, as she was directed,
Unto the rocke, and there upon the soyle Having her selfe in wretched wize ab-jected, Gan weepe and wayle, as if great griefe had her affected.

X

The cry whereof entring the hollow cave, Eftsoones brought forth the villaine, as they ment,
With hope of her some wishfull boot to
have.
Full dreadfull wight he was, as ever went Upon the earth, with hollow eyes deepe
pent,
And long curld locks, that downe his shoulders shagged,
And on his backe an uncouth vestiment Made of straunge stuffe, but all to-worne and ragged,
And underneath his breech was all to-torne and jagged.

XI

And in his hand an huge long staffe he
held,
Whose top was arm'd with many an yron
hooke,
Fit to catch hold of all that he could weld,
Or in the compasse of his clouches tooke;
And ever round about he cast his looke.
Als at his backe a great wyde net he bore,
With which he seldome fished at the brooke,
But usd to fish for fooles on the dry shore,
Of which he in faire weather wont to take great store.

XII

Him when the damzell saw fast by her side,
So ugly creature, she was nigh dismayd,
And now for helpe aloud in earnest cride.
But when the villaine saw her so affrayd, He gan with guilefull words her to per-
swade

To banish feare, and with Sardonian smyle Laughing on her, his false intent to shade, Gan forth to lay his bayte her to beguyle, That from her self unwares he might her steale the whyle.

XIII

Like as the fouler on his guilefull pype Charmes to the birds full many a pleasant
lay,
That they the whiles may take lesse heedie
keepe,
How he his nets doth for their ruine lay:
So did the villaine to her prate and play,
And many pleasant trickes before her show,
To turne her eyes from his intent away:
For he in slights and jugling feates did flow,
And of legierdemayne the mysteries did
know.

XIV

To which whilest she lent her intentive
mind,
He suddenly his net upon her threw,
That oversprad her like a puffe of wind;
And snatching her soone up, ere well she
knew,
Ran with her fast away unto his mew, Crying for helpe aloud. But when as ny
He came unto his cave, and there did vew
The armed knights stopping his passage by,
He threw his burden downe, and fast away did fly.

XV

But Artegall him after did pursew, The whiles the Prince there kept the entrance still:
Up to the rocke he ran, and thereon flew Like a wyld gote, leaping from hill to hill, And dauncing on the craggy cliffes at will;
That deadly daunger seem'd in all mens
sight,
To tempt such steps, where footing was so
ill:
Ne ought avayled for the armed knight To thinke to follow him, that was so swift and light.

XVI

Which when he saw, his yron man he sent To follow him; for he was swift in chace.
 He him pursewd, where ever that he went;
 Both over rockes, and hilles, and every
 place,
 Where so he fled, he followd him apace:
 So that he shortly forst him to forsake The light, and downe descend unto the
 base.
 There he him courst a fresh, and soone did
 make
 To leave his proper forme, and other shape
 to take.

XVII

Into a foxe himselve he first did tourne;
 But he him hunted like a foxe full fast:
 Then to a bush himselve he did transforme;
 But he the bush did beat, till that at last Into a bird it chaung'd, and from him past, Flying from tree to tree, from wand to wand:
 But he then stones at it so long did cast,
 That like a stone it fell upon the land;
 But he then tooke it up, and held fast in his hand.

XVIII

So he it brought with him unto the knights,
 And to his lord, Sir Arte gall, it lent, Warning him hold it fast, for feare of
 slights.
 Who whilst in hand it gryping hard he
 hent,
 Into a hedgehogge all unwares it went,
 And prickt him so that he away it threw.
 Then gan it runne away incontinent,
 Being returned to his former hew:
 But Talus soone him overtooke, and backward drew.

XIX

But when as he would to a snake againe
 Have turn'd himselve, he with his yron flayle Gan drive at him, with so huge might and
 maine,
 That all his bones as small as sandy grayle
 He broke, and did his bowels disentrayne; Crying in vaine for helpe, when helpe was
 past.
 So did decept the selfe deceiver fayle.
 There they him left a carrion outcast, For beasts and foules to feede upon for their repast.

XX

Thence forth they passed with that gentle
 mayd,
 To see her ladie, as they did agree.
 To which when she approached, thus she
 sayd:
 'Loe now, right noble knights, arriv'd ye
 bee
 Nigh to the place which ye desir'd to see:
 There shall ye see my soverayne Lady
 Queene,
 Most sacred wight, most debonayre and
 free,
 That ever yet upon this earth was seene, Or that with diademe hath ever crowned beene.'

XXI

The gentle knights joyced much to heare
 The prayes of that prince so manifold, And passing litle further, commen were Where they a stately pallace did behold, Of pompous show, much more then she had
 told;
 With many towres and tarras mounted hye, And all their tops bright glistening with
 gold,
 That seemed to outshine the dimmed skye, And with their brightnesse daz'd the strange beholders eye.

XXII

There they alighting, by that damzell were Directed in, and shewed all the sight:
 Whose porch, that most magnificke did ap-
 peare,
 Stood open wyde to all men day and night;
 Yet warded well by one of mickle might,
 That sate thereby, with gyantlike resemblance,
 To keepe out Guyle, and Malice, and De-
 spight,
 That under shew oftymes of fayned semblance
 Are wont in princes courts to worke great seath and hindrance.

XXIII

His name was Awe; by whom they passing in Went up the hall, that was a large wyde
 roome,
 All full of people making troublous din, And wondrous noyse, as if that there were some

Which unto them was dealing righteous
doome.

By whom they passing, through the thickest
preasse,

The marshall of the hall to them did
come;

His name hight Order, who, commaunding
peace,

Them guyded through the throng, that did their clamors cease.

XXIV

They ceast their clamors upon them to
gaze;

Whom seeing all in armour bright as day, Straunge there to see, it did them much
amaze,

And with unwonted terror halfe affray:
For never saw they there the like array; Ne ever was the name of warre there
spoken,

But joyous peace and quietnesse alway, Dealing just judgements, that mote not be broken

For any brybes, or threates of any to be wroken.

XXV

There as they entred at the scriene, they
saw

Some one, whose tongue was for his tres-passe vyle

Nayld to a post, adjudged so by law:
For that therewith he falsely did revyle

And foule blasphemie that queene for forged guyle,

Both with bold speaches which he blazed
had,

And with lewd poems which he did compile;

For the bold title of a poet bad He on himselfe had ta'en, and rayling rymes had sprad.

XXVI

Thus there he stood, whylest high over his
head

There written was the purport of his sin,
In cyphers strange, that few could rightly
read,

Bon font: but Bon, that once had written
bin,

Was raced out, and Mal was now put in:

So now Malfont was plainly to be red;

Eyther for th' evill which he did therein,

Or that he likened was to a welhed Of evill words, and wicked sclaunders by him shed.

XXVII

They, passing by, were guyded by degree Unto the presence of that gracious queene:
Who sate on high, that she might all men
see,

And might of all men royally be seene, Upon a throne of gold full bright and sheene,

Adorned all with gemmes of endlesse price, As either might for wealth have gotten
bene,

Or could be fram'd by workmans rare device;

And all embost with lyons and with flourdelice.

XXVIII

All over her a cloth of state was spred,
Not of rich tissew, nor of cloth of gold, Nor of ought else that may be richest
red,

But like a cloud, as likest may be told,
That her brode spreading wings did wyde unfold;

Whose skirts were bordred with bright sunny beams,

Glistring like gold, amongst the plights en-rolld,

And here and there shooting forth silver
streames,

Mongst which crept litle angels through the glittering gleames.

XXIX

Seemed those litle angels did uphold The cloth of state, and on their purpled
wings

Did beare the pendants, through their nimblesse bold:

Besides, a thousand more of such as sings Hymnes to High God, and carols heavenly
things,

Encompassed the throne on which she sate:
She angel-like, the heyre of ancient kings
And mightie conquerors, in royall state,

Whylest kings and kesars at her feet did them prostrate.

XXX

Thus she did sit in soverayne majestie, Holding a scepter in her royall hand,

The sacred pledge of peace and clemencie, With which High God had blest her happie
 land, Maugre so many foes which did withstand.
 But at her feet her sword was likewise layde,
 Whose long rest rusted the bright steely
 brand;
 Yet when as foes enforst, or friends sought
 ayde,
 She could it sternely draw, that all the world dismayde.

XXXI

And round about, before her feet there sate
 A bevie of faire virgins clad in white, That goodly seem'd t' adorne her royall
 state,
 All lovely daughters of high Jove, that
 hight
 Lite, by him begot in loves delight Upon the righteous Themis: those they say Upon Joves judgement seat wayt day and
 night,
 And when in wrath he threats the worlds deay,
 They doe his anger calme, and cruell vengeance stay.

XXXII

They also doe by his divine permission Upon the thrones of mortall princes tend,
 And often treat for pardon and remission To suppliants, through frayltie which offend.
 Those did upon Mercillaes throne attend:
 Just Dice, wise Eunomie, myld Eirene;
 And them amongst, her glorie to commend,
 Sate goodly Temperance in garments elene, And sacred Reverence, yborne of heavenly strene.

XXXIII

Thus did she sit in royall rich estate, Admyr'd of many, honoured of all, Whylest underneath her feete, there as she sate,
 An huge great Lyon lay, that mote appall
 An hardie courage, like captived thrall,
 With a strong yron chaine and collar bound,
 That once he could not move, nor quich at
 all;
 Yet did he murmure with rebellious sound,
 And softly royne, when salvage cholour gan redound.

XXXIV

So sitting high in dreaded soverayntie, Those two strange knights were to her presence brought;
 Who, bowing low before her majestie, Did to her myld obeysance, as they ought,
 And meekest boone that they imagine mought.
 To whom she eke inelyning her withall, As a faire stoupe of her high soaring
 thought,
 A chearefull countenance on them let fall, Yet tempred with some majestie imperiall.

XXXV

As the bright sunne, what time his fierie
 teme
 Towards the westerne brim begins to draw, Gins to abate the brightness of his beme,
 And fervour of his flames somewhat adaw:
 So did this mightie ladie, when she saw Those two strange knights such homage to her make,
 Bate somewhat of that majestie and awe,
 That whylome wont to doe so many quake, And with more myld aspect those two to entertake.

XXXVI

Now at that instant, as occasion fell, When these two stranger knights arriv'd in
 place,
 She was about affaires of common wele, Dealing of justice with indifferent grace, And hearing pleas of people meane and
 base.
 Mongst which, as then, there was for to be
 heard
 The tryall of a great and weightie ease, Which on both sides was then debating
 hard:
 But at the sight of these, those were a while debard.

XXXVII

But after all her princely entertayne, To th' hearing of that former cause in
 hand
 Her selfe eftsoones she gan convert againe; Which that those knights likewise mote understand,
 And wisse forth aright in forrain land,
 Taking them up unto her stately throne, Where they mote heare the matter throughly scand

On either part, she placed th' one on th'
one,
The other on the other side, and neare them
none.

XXXVIII

Then was there brought, as prisoner to the barre,
A ladie of great countenance and place,
But that she it with foule abuse did marre;
Yet did appeare rare beautie in her face,
But blotted with condition vile and base,
That all her other honour did obscure,
And titles of nobilitie deface:
Yet in that wretched semblant, she did sure The peoples great compassion unto her al-lure.

XXXIX

Then up arose a person of deepe reach,
And rare in-sight, hard matters to revele; That well could charme his tongue, and time his speach
To all assayes; his name was called Zele:
He gan that ladie strongly to appele
Of many haynous crymes, by her enured, And with sharpe reasons rang her such a pele,
That those whom she to pitie had allured He now t' abhorre and loath her person had procured.

XL

First gan he tell, how this, that seem'd so
faire
And royally arayd, Duessa hight, That false Duessa, which had wrought great
care
And mickle mischief unto many a knight,
By her beguyled and confounded quight:
But not for those she now in question came, Though also those mote question'd be
aright,
But for vyld treasons and outrageous shame, Which she against the dred Mercilla oft did frame.

XLI

For she whylome (as ye mote yet right
well Remember) had her counsels false conspyred
With faithlesse Blandamour and Paridell, (Both two her paramours, both by her
hyred,

And both with hope of shadowes vaine in-spyred,)
And with them practiz'd, how for to depryve Mercilla of her crowne, by her aspyred,
That she might it unto her selfe deryve, And tryumph in their blood, whom she to death did dryve.

XLII

But through high heavens grace, which favour not
The wicked driftes of trayterous desynes Gainst loiall princes, all this cursed plot, Ere prooffe it tooke, discovered was betymes,
And th' actours won the meede meet for their crymes.
Such be the meede of all that by such mene Unto the type of kingdomes title clymes.
But false Duessa, now untitled queene, Was brought to her sad doome, as here was to be seene.

XLIII

Strongly did Zele her haynous fact enforce,
And many other crimes of foule defame Against her brought, to banish all remorse,
And aggravate the horror of her blame.
And with him to make part against her,
came
Many grave persons, that against her pled:
First was a sage old syre, that had to name The Kingdomes Care, with a white silver
hed,
That many high regards and reasons gainst her red.

XLIV

Then gan Authority her to appose With peremptorie powre, that made all mute;
And then the Law of Nations gainst her
rose,
And reasons brought, that no man could refute;
Next gan Religion gainst her to impute High Gods behest, and powre of holy lawes;
Then gan the Peoples Cry and Commons
Sute
Importune care of their owne publicke cause;
And lastly Justice charged her with breach of lawes.

XLV

But then for her, on the contrarie part,
 Rose many advocates for her to plead:
 First there came Pittie, with full tender
 hart,
 And with her joyn'd Regard of Woman-
 head;
 And then came Daunger, threatening hidden dread
 And high alliance unto forreun powre;
 Then came Nobilitie of Birth, that bread Great ruth through her misfortunes tra-gicke stowre;
 And lastly Griefe did plead, and many teares forth powre.

XLVI

With the neare touch whereof in tender
 hart
 The Briton Prince was sore empassionate, And woxe inclined much unto her part,
 Through the sad terror of so dreadfull fate,
 And wretched ruine of so high estate,
 That for great ruth his courage gan relent.
 Which when as Zele perceived to abate,
 He gan his earnest fervour to augment,
 And many fearefull objects to them to present.

XLVII

He gan t' efforce the evidence anew,
 And new accusements to produce in place:
 He brought forth that old hag of hellish
 hew,
 The cursed Ate, brought her face to face,
 Who privie was, and partie in the case:
 She, glad of spoyle and ruinous decay, Did her appeach, and, to her more dis-
 grace,
 The plot of all her practise did display,
 And all her traynes and all her treasons forth did lay.

XLVIII

Then brought he forth, with griesly grim aspect,
 Abhorred Murder, who with blondie knyfe Yet dropping fresh in hand did her detect,
 And there with guiltie bloudshed charged ryfe:
 Then brought he forth Sedition, breeding stryfe
 In troublous wits, and mutinous uprore:
 Then brought he forth Incontinence of Lyfe,

Even foule Adulterie her face before,
 And lewd Impietie, that her accused sore.

XLIX

All which when as the Prince had heard and seene,
 His former fancies ruth he gan repent,
 And from her partie eftsoones was drawen
 cleene.
 But Artegall, with constant firme intent,
 For zeale of justice was against her bent.
 So was she guiltie deemed of them all.
 Then Zele began to urge her punishment,
 And to their queene for judgement loudly
 call,
 Unto Mercilla myld, for justice gainst the thrall.

L

But she, whose princely breast was touched
 nere
 With piteous ruth of her so wretched
 plight,
 Though plaine she saw, by all that she did
 heare,
 That she of death was guiltie found by
 right, Yet would not let just vengeance on her
 light;
 But rather let in stead thereof to fall Few perling drops from her faire lampes of light;
 The which she covering with her purple pall
 Would have the passion hid, and up arose withall.

CANTO X

Prince Arthur takes the enterprize For Belgee for to fight:
 Gerioneos seneschall
 He slayes in Belges right.

I

SOME clarkes doe doubt in their devicefull
 art, Whether this heavenly thing whereof I
 treat,
 To weeten Mercie, be of Justice part,
 Or drawne forth from her by divine ex-
 treat.
 This well I wote, that sure she is as great,
 And meriteth to have as high a place, Sith in th' Almightyes everlasting seat

She first was bred, and borne of heavenly
 race;
 From thence pour'd down on men, by influence of grace.

II

For if that vertue be of so great might,
 Which from just verdict will for nothing
 start,

But, to preserve inviolated right,
 Oft spills the principall, to save the part;
 So much more then is that of powre and
 art,

That seekes to save the subject of her
 skill,

Yet never doth from doome of right de-
 part:

As it is greater prayse to save then spill,
 And better to reforme then to cut off the ill.

III

Who then can thee, Mercilla, throughly
 prayse,

That herein doest all earthly princes pas?
 What heavenly muse shall thy great honour
 rayse

Up to the skies, whence first deriv'd it was,
 And now on earth it selfe enlarged has From th' utmost brinke of the Americke
 shore

Unto the margent of the Molucas?
 Those nations farre thy justice doe adore:
 But thine owne people do thy mercy prayse much more.

IV

Much more it praysed was of those two
 knights,

The noble Prince and righteous Artegall, When they had seene and heard her doome a rights

Against Duessa, damned by them all;
 But by her tempred without grieffe or gall, Till strong constraint did her thereto enforce:

And yet even then ruing her wilfull fall
 With more then needfull naturall remorse, And yeelding the last honour to her wretched corse.

During all which, those knights continu'd
 there,

Both doing and receiving curtesies

Of that great ladie, who with goodly chere Them entertayn'd, fit for their dignities, Approving dayly to their noble eyes Royall examples of her merces rare,
 And worthie paterns of her clemencies;
 Which till this day mongst many living
 are,

Who them to their posterities doe still declare.

VI

Amongst the rest, which in that space
 befell,

There came two springals of full tender
 yeares,

Farre thence from forrein land, where they did dwell,

To seeke for succour of her and of her
 peares,

With humble prayers and intreatfull teares;
 Sent by their mother, who a widow was,
 Wrapt in great dolours and in deadly feares By a strong tyrant, who invaded has Her land, and slaine her children ruefully, alas!

VII

Her name was Belge, who in former age A ladie of great worth and wealth had benee,

And mother of a frutefull heritage, Even seventeene goodly sonnes; which who had seene

In their first flowre, before this fatall teene Them overtooke, and their faire blossomes
 blasted,

More happie mother would her surely weene Then famous Niobe, before she tasted Latonaes childrens wrath, that all her issue wasted.

VIII

But this fell tyrant, through his tortious
 powre,

Had left her now but five of all that brood:
 For twelve of them he did by times de-
 voure,

And to his idole sacrifice their blood, Whylest he of none was stopped, nor with-
 stood.

For soothly he was one of matchlesse might,
 Of horrible aspect and dreadfull mood,
 And had three bodies in one wast emight,
 And th' armes and legs of three, to succour him in fight.

IX

And sooth they say that he was borne and bred

Of gyants race, the sonne of Geryon,
He that whylome in Spaine so sore was dreed

For his huge powre and great oppression, Which brought that land to his subjection Through his three bodies powre, in one combynd;

And eke all strangers, in that region Arryving, to his kyne for food assynd;
The fayrest kyne alive, but of the fiercest kynd.

X

For they were all, they say, of purple hew, Kept by a cowheard, hight Eurytion,
A cruell earle, the which all strangers slew,

Ne day nor night did sleepe, t' attend them on,

But walkt about them ever and anone,
With his two headed dogge, that Orthrus hight;

Orthrus begotten by great Typhaon
And foule Echidna, in the house of Night;
But Hercules them all did overcome in fight.

XI

His some was this, Geryoneo hight;
Who, after that his monstrous father fell Under Aleides club, streight tooke his flight From that sad land, where he his syre did quell,

And came to this, where Belge then did dwell

And flourish in all wealth and happinesse, Being then new made widow (as befell)
After her noble husbands late deesse;
Which gave beginning to her woe and wretchednesse.

XII

Then this bold tyrant, of her widowed Taking advantage, and her yet fresh woes, Himselfe and service to her offered,
Her to defend against all forrein foes,
That should their powre against her right oppose.

Whereof she glad, now needing strong defence, Him entertayn'd, and did her champion chose:

Which long he usd with carefull diligence,
The better to confirme her fearelesse confidence.

XIII

By meanes whereof, she did at last commit All to his hands, and gave him souveraine powre

To doe what ever he thought good or fit.
Which having got, he gan forth from that howre

To stirre up strife, and many a tragicke stowre,

Giving her dearest children one by one Unto a dreadfull monster to devoure,
And setting up an idole of his owne,
The image of his monstrous parent Geryone.

XIV

So tyrannizing, and oppressing all,
The woefull widow had no meanes now left,
But unto gracious great Mercilla call

For ayde against that cruell tyrants theft, Ere all her children he from her had reft.
Therefore these two, her eldest sonnes, she sent,

To seeke for succour of this ladies giest:
To whom their sute they humbly did present,

In th' hearing of full many knights and ladies gent.

XV

Amongst the which then fortun'd to bee
The noble Briton Prince, with his brave peare;

Who when he none of all those knights did see

Hastily bent that enterprise to heare, Nor undertake the same, for cowheard feare,
He stepped forth with courage bold and great,

Admyr'd of all the rest in presence there,
And humbly gan that mightie queene entreat

To graunt him that adventure for his former feat.

XVI

She gladly graunted it: then he straight way

Himselfe unto his journey gan prepare,
And all his armours readie dight that day,
That nought the morrow next mote stay his fare.

The merrow next appear'd, with purple
hayre
Yet dropping fresh out of the Indian fount,
And bringing light into the heavens fayre,
When he was readie to his steede to mount, Unto his way, which now was all his care and count.

XVII

Then taking humble leave of that great
queene,
Who gave him roiall giftes and riches rare,
As tokens of her thankfull mind besene,
And leaving Artegall to his owne care,
Upon his voyage forth he gan to fare, With those two gentle youthes, which him did guide,
And all his way before him still prepare.
Ne after him did Artigall abide,
But on his first adventure forward forth did ride.

XVIII

It was not long till that the Prince arrived Within the land where dwelt that ladie sad, Whereof that tyrant had her now deprived,
And into moores and marshes banisht had,
Out of the pleasant soyle and citties glad,
In which she went to harbour happily:
But now his cruelty so sore she drad,
That to those fennes for fastnesse she did
fly,
And there her selfe did hyde from his hard tyranny.

XIX

There he her found in sorrow and dismay,
All solitarie without living wight;
For all her other children, through affray, Had hid themselves, or taken further
flight:
And eke her selfe through sudden strange
affright,
When one in armes she saw, began to
fly;
But when her owne two sonnes she had in
sight,
She gan take hart, and looke up joyfully:
For well she wist this knight came succour to supply:

XX

And running unto them with greedy joyes, Fell straight about their neckes, as they did kneelee,

And bursting forth in teares, 'Ah! my sweet boyes,' Sayd she, 'yet now I gin new life to feele,
And feeble spirits, that gan faint and reele,
Now rise againe at this your joyous sight.
Alreadie seemes that Fortunes headlong wheele Begins to turne, and sunne to shine more
bright
Then it was wont, through comfort of this noble knight.'

XXI

Then turning unto him, 'And you, sir
knight,'
Said she, 'that taken have this toylesome
paine
For wretched woman, miserable wight, May you in heaven immortall guerdon gaine
For so great travell as you doe sustaine:
For other meede may hope for none of
mee,
To whom nought else but bare life doth re-
maine;
And that so wretched one, as ye do see,
Is liker lingring death then loathed life to bee.'

XXII

Much was he moved with her piteous plight,
And low dismounting from his loftie steede, Gan to recomfort her all that he might,
Seeking to drive away deepe rooted dreede, With hope of helpe in that her greatest need.
So thence he wished her with him to wend, Unto some place where they mote rest and
feede,
And she take comfort, which God now did
send:
Good hart in evils doth the evils much amend.

XXIII

'Ay me!' sayd she, 'and whether shall I
goe?
Are not all places full of forraine powres?
My pallaces possessed of my foe, My citties sackt, and their sky-threatening
towres
Raced, and made smooth fields now full of flowres?
Onely these marishes and myrie bogs, In which the fearefull ewftes do build their
bowres,

Yeeld me an hostry mongst the croking frogs,
And harbour here in safety from those ravenous dogs.'

XXIV

'Nathlesse,' said he, 'deare ladie, with me
goe;
Some place shall us receive, and harbour
yield;
If not, we will it force, maugre your foe,
And purchase it to us with speare and
shield:

And if all fayle, yet farewell open field:
The Earth to all her creatures lodging lends.'

With such his chearefull speaches he doth wield

Her mind so well, that to his will she bends,

And bynding up her locks and weeds, forth with him wends.

XXV

They came unto a citie farre up land, The which whylome that ladies owne had
bene;

But now by force extort out of her hand
By her strong foe, who had defaced cleene Her stately towres and buildings sunny
sheene,

Shut up her haven, mard her marchants
trade,

Robbed her people, that full rich had
beene,

And in her necke a castle huge had made,
The which did her commaund, without needing perswade.

XXVI

That castle was the strength of all that
state,

Untill that state by strength was pulled
downe,

And that same citie, so now ruinate, Had bene the keye of all that kingdomes
crowne;

Both goodly castle, and both goodly towne, Till that th'offended Heavens list to lowre Upon their blisse, and balefull Fortune
frowne.

When those gainst states and kingdomes do conjure,

Who then can thinke their hedlong ruine to recure?

XXVII

But he had brought it now in servile bond,
And made it beare the yoke of Inquisition, Stryving long time in vaine it to withstond; Yet glad at last to make most base submission,

And life enjoy for any composition.
So now he hath new lawes and orders new Imposd on it, with many a hard condition,

And forced it the honour that is dew
To God to doe unto his idole most untrew.

XXVIII

To him he hath, before this castle greene, Built a faire chappell, and an altar framed Of costly ivory, full rich beseene,
On which that cursed idole, farre proclaimed, He hath set up, and him his god hath
named,

Offering to him in sinfull sacrifice
The flesh of men, to Gods owne likenesse framed,

And powring forth their bloud in brutishe
wize,

That any yron eyes to see it would agrize.

XXIX

And for more horror and more crueltie, Under that cursed idols altar stone
An hideous monster doth in darknesse lie, Whose dreadfull shape was never seene of
none

That lives on earth, but unto those alone
The which unto him sacrificed bee.

Those he devoures, they say, both flesh and
bone:

What else they have is all the tyrants fee;
So that no whit of them remayning one may see.

XXX

There eke he placed a strong garrisone, And set a seneschall of dreaded might,
That by his powre oppressed every one,
And vanquished all ventrous knights in
fight;

To whom he wout shew all the shame he
might,

After that them in battell he had wonne.
To which when now they gan approach in
sight,

The ladie counseld him the place to shonne, Whereas so many knights had foully bene fordonne.

XXXI

Her fearefull speaches nought he did regard,
But ryding streight under the castle wall, Called aloud unto the watchfull ward, Which there did wayte, willing them forth to call

Into the field their tyrants seneschall.
To whom when tydings thereof came, he streight

Cals for his armes, and arming him withall, Eftsoones forth pricked proudly in his
might,

And gan with courage fierce addressse him to the fight.

XXXII

They both encounter in the middle plaine,
And their sharpe speares doe both together
smite

Amid their shields, with so huge might and maine,

That seem'd their soules they wold have ryven quight

Out of their breasts, with furious despight.
Yet could the seneschals no entrance find

Into the Princes shield, where it empight, So pure the mettall was, and well refynd, But shivered all about, and scattered in the wynd.

XXXIII

Not so the Princes, but with restlesse force Into his shield it readie passage found, Both through his haberjeon and eke his
corse:

Which tumbling downe upon the senselesse ground,

Gave leave unto his ghost from thraldome
bound,

To wander in the griesly shades of night.
There did the Prince him leave in deadly swound,

And thence unto the castle marched right,
To see if entrance there as yet obtaine he might.

XXXIV

But as he nigher drew, three knights he
spyde,

All arm'd to point, issuing forth a pace, Which towards him with all their powre did ryde,

And meeting him right in the middle race, Did all their speares attonce on him en-
chace.

As three great culverings for battrie bent,
And leveld all against one certaine place, Doe all attonce their thunders rage forth
rent,

That makes the wals to stagger with astonishment.

XXXV

So all attonce they on the Prince did thon-
der;

Who from his saddle swarved nought
asyde,

Ne to their force gave way, that was great
wonder,

But like a bulwarke firmly did abyde, Rebutting him which in the midst did
ryde,

With so huge rigour, that his mortall
speare

Past through his shield, and pierst through either syde,

That downe he fell upon his mother deare, And powred forth his wretched life in deadly dreare.

XXXVI

Whom when his other fellowes saw, they fled

As fast as feete could carry them away;
And after them the Prince as swiftly sped,
To be aveng'd of their unknighly play.

There whilst they, entring, th' one did th' other stay,

The hindmost in the gate he overhent,
And as he pressed in, him there did slay:

His carkasse, tumbling on the threshold,
sent

His groning soule unto her place of punishment.

XXXVII

The other, which was entred, laboured fast To sperre the gate; but that same lumpes of clay,

Whose grudging ghost was thereout fled and past,

Right in the midst of the threshold lay,
That it the posterne did from closing stay:

The whiles the Prince hard preased in be-twene,

And entraunce wonne. Streight th' other fled away,

And ran into the hall, where he did weene Him selfe to save: but he there slew him at the skreene.

XXXVIII

Then all the rest which in that castle were, Seeing that sad ensample them before,
 Durst not abide, but fled away for feare,
 And them convoyd out at a posterne dore.
 Long sought the Princee, but when he found no more T' oppose against his powre, he forth issued Unto that lady, where he her had lore, And her gan cheare with what she there had vewed,
 And what she had not seene within unto her shewed.

XXXIX

Who with right humble thanks him goodly greeting,
 For so great prowesse as he there had proved,
 Much greater then was ever in her weeting, With great admiraunce inwardly was moved,
 And honourd him with all that her behoved.
 Thenceforth into that castle he her led,
 With her two sonnes, right deare of her beloved,
 Where all that night them selves they cherished,
 And from her balefull minde all care he banished.

CANTO XI

Prince Arthure overcomes the great Gerioneo in fight:
 Doth slay the monster, and restore Belge unto her right.

I

It often fals in course of common life, That right long time is overborne of
 wrong,
 Through avarice, or powre, or guile, or
 strife,
 That weakens her, and makes her party
 strong:
 But Justice, though her dome she doe pro-
 long,
 Yet at the last she will her owne cause
 right:
 As by sad Belge seemes, whose wrongs though long

She suffred, yet at length she did requight,
 And sent redresse thereof by this brave Briton knight.

II

Whereof when newes was to that tyrant
 brought,
 How that the Lady Belge now had found A champion, that had with his champion
 fought,
 And laid his seneschall low on the ground,
 And eke him selfe did threaten to con-
 found,
 He gan to burne in rage, and friese in
 feare,
 Doubting sad end of principle unsound:
 Yet sith he heard but one that did appeare, He did him selfe encourage, and take better cheare.

III

Nathelesse him selfe he armed all in hast,
 And forth he far'd with all his many bad, Ne stayed step, till that he came at last Unto the castle which they conquerd had.
 There with huge terrour, to be more ydrad,
 He sternely marcht before the castle gate,
 And with bold vaunts and ydle threatning
 bad
 Deliver him his owne, ere yet too late,
 To which they had no right, nor any wrong-full state.

IV

The Prince staid not his aunswere to devise, But opening streight the sparre, forth to him came,
 Full nobly mounted in right warlike wize;
 And asked him, if that he were the same,
 Who all that wrong unto that wofull dame
 So long had done, and from her native land Exiled her, that all the world spake shame.
 He boldly aunswerd him, he there did
 stand
 That would his doings justifie with his owne
 hand.

V

With that so furiously at him he flew,
 As if he would have overrun him streight,
 And with his huge great yron axe gan hew
 So hideously uppon his armour bright,
 As he to peeces would have chopt it quight:
 That the bold Prince was forced foote to give

To his first rage, and yeeld to his despight;
The whilest at him so dreadfully he drive, That seem'd a marble rocke asunder could have rive.

VI

Thereto a great advauntage eke he has Through his three double hands thrise multiplyde,
Besides the double strength which in them
was:

For stil when fit occasion did betyde,
He could his weapon shift from side to syde, From hand to hand, and with such nimblesse
sly
Could wield about, that ere it were espide,
The wicked stroke did wound his enemy, Behinde, beside, before, as he it list apply.

VII

Which uncouth use when as the Prince perceived,
He gan to watch the wielding of his hand, Least by such slight he were unwares deceived;

And ever ere he saw the stroke to land,
He would it meete and warily withstand.
One time, when he his weapon faynd to shift,
As he was wont, and chang'd from hand to
hand,
He met him with a counterstroke so swift,
That quite smit off his arme, as he it up did lift.

VIII

Therewith, all fraught with fury and dis-
daine,
He brayd aloud for very fell despight,
And sodainely t' avenge him selfe againe, Gan into one assemble all the might
Of all his hands, and heaved them on hight, Thinking to pay him with that one for all:
But the sad steele seizd not, where it was
hight, Uppon the childe, but somewhat short did
fall,
And lighting on his horses head, him quite did mall.

IX

Downe streight to ground fell his astonisht
steed,
And eke to th' earth his burden with him
bare:

But he him selfe full lightly from him
freed,
And gan him selfe to fight on foote prepare.
Whereof when as the gyant was aware,
He wox right blyth, as he had got thereby,
And laught so loud, that all his teeth wide
bare
One might have seene enraung'd disorderly, Like to a rancke of piles, that pitched are awray.

Eftsoones againe his axe he raught on hie, Ere he were thoroughly buckled to his geare,
And can let drive at him so dreadfullie, That had he chanced not his shield to
reare,
Ere that huge stroke arrived on him neare,
He had him surely cloven quite in twaine.
But th' adamantine shield which he did bear
So well was tempred, that, for all his maine, It would no passage yeeld unto his purpose
vaine.

XI

Yet was the stroke so forcibly applide, That made him stagger with uncertaine
sway,
As if he would have tottered to one side.
Wherewith full wroth, he fiercely gan assay That curt'sie with like kindnesse to repay;
And smote at him with so importune might,
That two more of his armes did fall away, Like fruitlesse braunches, which the hatchets slight Hath pruned from the native tree, and cropped quight.

XII

With that all mad and furious he grew,
Like a fell mastiffe through enraging heat,
And curst, and band, and blasphemies forth
threw Against his gods, and fire to them did
threat,
And hell unto him selfe with horroure great.
Thenceforth he car'd no more which way he strooke, Nor where it light, but gan to chaufe and
sweat,
And gnasht his teeth, and his head at him
shooke,
And sternely him beheld with grim and ghastly looke.

XIII

Nought fear'd the childe his lookes, ne yet his threats,
But onely wexed now the more aware,
To save him selfe from those his furious heats,
And watch advauntage, how to worke his
care;
The which good fortune to him offred faire.
For as he in his rage him overstrooke,
He, ere he could his weapon backe repaire,
His side all bare and naked overtooke, And with his mortal steel quite through the body strooke.

XIV

Through all three bodies he him strooke attonce,
That all the three attonce fell on the plaine: Else should he thrise have needed for the nonce
Them to have stricken, and thrise to have
slaine.
So now all three one sencelesse lumpe re-
maine,
Enwallow'd in his owne blacke bloody
gore,
And byting th' earth for very deaths dis-
daine;
Who, with a cloud of night him covering,
bore
Downe to the house of dole, his daies there to deplore.

XV

Which when the lady from the castle
saw,
Where she with her two sonnes did looking stand,
She towards him in hast her selfe did
draw,
To greet him the good fortune of his hand:
And all the people both of towne and
land,
Which there stood gazing from the citties
wall Uppon these warriours, greedy t' understand
To whether should the victory befall, Now when they saw it falne, they eke him greeted all.

XVI

But Belge with her sonnes prostrated low Before his feete, in all that peoples sight,

Mongst joyes mixing some tears, mongst wele some wo,
Him thus bespake: 'O most redoubted
knight,
The which hast me, of all most wretched
wight,
That earst was dead, restor'd to life againe, And these weake impes replanted by thy
might;
What guerdon can I give thee for thy paine, But even that which thou savedst, thine still to remaine?'

XVII

He tooke her up forby the lilly hand,
And her recomforted the best he might, Saying: 'Deare lady, deedes ought not be scand
By th' authors manhood, nor the doers
might,
But by their trueth and by the causes right:
That same is it, which fought for you this
day.
What other meed then need me to requight, But that which yeeldeth vertues meed alway?
That is the vertue selfe, which her reward doth pay.'

XVIII

She humbly thankt him for that wondrous
grace,
And further sayd: 'Ah! sir, but mote ye
please,
Sith ye thus farre have tendred my poore
case,
As from my chieftest foe me to release,
That your victorious arme will not yet
cease,
Till ye have rooted all the relickes out Of that vilde race, and stablished my peace.'
'What is there else,' sayd he, 'left of their rou?'
Declare it boldly, dame, and doe not stand in dout.'

XIX

'Then wote you, sir, that in this church
hereby,
There stands an idole of great note and
name,
The which this gyant reared first on hie,
And of his owne vaine fancies thought did
frame:

To whom, for endlesse horroure of his
shame,
He offred up for daily sacrificize
My children and my people, burnt in flame,
With all the tortures that he could devise,
The more t' aggrate his god with such his blouddy guize.

XX

' And underneath this idoll there doth lie An hideous monster, that doth it defend,
And feedes on all the carkasses that die
In sacrificize unto that cursed feend: Whose ugly shape none ever saw, nor
kend,

That ever seap'd: for of a man they say It has the voice, that speaches forth doth
send,
Even blasphemous words, which she doth
bray
Out of her poysnous entrails, fraught with dire decay.'

XXI

Which when the Prince heard tell, his heart gan earne
For great desire, that monster to assay, And prayd the place of her abode to learne.

Which being shew'd, he gan him selfe
streight way

Thereto addresse, and his bright shield
display.

So to the church he came, where it was
told

The monster underneath the altar lay;
There he that idoll saw of massy gold Most richly made, but there no monster did behold.

XXII

Upon the image with his naked blade
Three times, as in defiance, there he strooke;
And the third time, out of an hidden shade, There forth issewd, from under th' altars smooke,

A dreadfull feend, with fowle deformed
looke,

That stretcht it selfe, as it had long lye
still;

And her long taile and fethers strongly
shooke,

That all the temple did with terrour fill;
Yet him nought terrifide, that feared no thing ill.

XXIII

An huge great beast it was, when it in length

Was stretched forth, that nigh filld all the
place,

And seem'd to be of infinite great strength;
Horrible, hideous, and of hellish race, Borne of the brooding of Echidna base,
Or other like infernall Furies kinde:

For of a mayd she had the outward face, To hide the horroure which did lurke be-
hinde,

The better to beguile whom she so fond did finde.

XXIV

Thereto the body of a dog she had,
Full of fell ravin and fierce greedinesse;
A lions clawes, with powre and rigour clad,
To rend and teare what so she can op-
presse;

A dragons taile, whose sting without re-
dresse

Full deadly wounds, where so it is em-
pight;

And eagles wings, for scope and speedinesse, That nothing may escape her reaching
night,

Whereto she ever list to make her hardy
flight.

XXV

Much like in foulnesse and deformity Unto that monster whom the Theban
knight,

The father of that fatall progeny, Made kill her selfe for very hearts de-
spight,

That he had red her riddle, which no wight Could ever loose, but suffred deadly doole.

So also did this monster use like slight
To many a one which came unto her schoole, Whom she did put to death, deceived like a foole.

XXVI

She comming forth, when as she first be-
held

The armed Princee, with shield so blazing
bright,

Her ready to assaile, was greatly queld,
And much dismayd with that dismayfull
sight,

That baek she would have turnd for great
affright.

But he gan her with courage fierce assay,
That forst her turne againe in her despight,
To save her selfe, least that he did her slay:
And sure he had her slaine, had she not turnd her way.

XXVII

Tho, when she saw that she was forst to
fight,
She flew at him, like to an hellish feend,
And on his shield tooke hold with all her
might,
As if that it she would in peeces rend,
Or reave out of the hand that did it hend.
Strongly he strove out of her greedy gripe To loose his shield, and long while did contend:
But when he could not quite it, with one stripe
Her lions clawes he from her feete away did wipe.

XXVIII

With that aloude she gan to bray and yell,
And fowle blasphemous speaches forth did
cast,
And bitter curses, horrible to tell,
That even the temple, wherein she was plast, Did quake to heare, and nigh asunder brast.
Tho with her huge long taile she at him
strooke,
That made him stagger, and stand halfe agast
With trembling joynts, as he for terrour
shooke;
Who nought was terrifide, but greater courage tooke.

XXIX

As when the mast of some well timbred hulke
Is with the blast of some outragious storme Blowne downe, it shakes the bottome of the bulke,
And makes her ribs to cracke, as they were torne, Whilist still she stands as stonisht and
forlorne:
So was he stound with stroke of her huge
taile.
But ere that it she backe againe had borne,
He with his sword it strooke, that without faile
He joynted it, and mard the swinging of her flaile.

XXX

Then gan she cry much louder then afore,
That all the people there without it heard,
And Belge selfe was therewith stonied sore,
As if the onely sound thereof she feard.
But then the feend her selfe more fiercely
reard Uppon her wide great wings, and strongly flew
With all her body at his head and beard, That had he not foresene with heedfull
vew,
And thrown his shield atween, she had him done to rew.

XXXI

But as she prest on him with heavy sway, Under her wombe his fatall sword he thrust,
And for her entrailes made an open way To issue forth; the which, once being Brust, Like to a great mill damb forth fiercely gusht,
And powred out of her infernall sinke
Most ugly filth, and poyson therewith rusht, That him nigh choked with the deadly stinke:
Such loathly matter were small lust to speake, or thinke.

XXXII

Then downe to ground fell that deformed masse,
Breathing out clouds of sulphure fowle and blacke,
In which a puddle of contagion was,
More loathd then Lerna, or then Stygian
lake,
That any man would nigh awhaped make.
Whom when he saw on ground, he was full
glad,
And streight went forth his gladnesse to partake
With Belge, who watcht all this while full
sad, Wayting what end would be of that same daunger drad.

XXXIII

Whom when she saw so joyously come
forth,
She gan rejoyce, and shew triumphant chere, Lauding and praying his renowned worth By all the names that honorable were.
Then in he brought her, and her shewed
there

The present of his paines, that monsters
 spoyle,
 And eke that idoll deem'd so costly dere; Whom he did all to peeces breake, and foyle
 In filthy durt, and left so in the loathely
 soyle.

XXXIV

Then all the people, which beheld that day, Gan shout aloud, that unto heaven it rong;
 And all the damzels of that towne in ray Came dauncing forth, and joyous carrols
 song:
 So him they led through all their streetes along,
 Crowned with girlonds of inmortall baies,
 And all the vulgar did about them throng,
 To see the man, whose everlasting praise They all were bound to all posterities to raise.

XXXV

There he with Belgæ did a while remaine, Making great feast and joyous merriment, Untill he had her settled in her raine,
 With safe assuraunce and establishment.
 Then to his first emprize his mind he lent, Full loath to Belgæ and to all the rest:
 Of whom yet taking leave, thenceforth he
 went
 And to his former journey him adrest, On which long way he rode, ne ever day did rest.

XXXVI

But turne we now to noble Artegall; Who, having left Mercilla, streight way went On his first quest, the which him forth did
 call,
 To weete, to worke Irenæes franchisement,
 And eke Grantortoes worthy punishment.
 So forth he fared as his manner was,
 With onely Talus wayting diligent, Through many perils and much way did
 pas,
 Till nigh unto the place at length approcht he has.

XXXVII

There as he traveld by the way, he met An aged wight, wayfaring all alone, Who through his yeares long since aside had set
 The use of armes, and battell quite forgone:

To whom as he approcht, he knew anone
 That it was he which whilome did attend On faire Irene in her affliction, When first to Faery court he saw her
 wend, Unto his Sovereaine Queene her suite for to commend.

XXXVIII

Whom by his name saluting, thus he gan:
 'Haile, good Sir Sergis, truest knight alive, Well tride in all thy ladies troubles than When her that tyrant did of crowne deprive;
 What new ocasion doth thee hither drive, Whiles she alone is left, and thou here
 found?
 Or is she thrall, or doth she not survive?' To whom he thus: 'She liveth sure and
 sound;
 But by that tyrant is in wretched thraldome bound.

XXXIX

'For she, presuming on th' appointed tyde,
 In which ye promist, as ye were a knight,
 To meeete her at the Salvage Ilands syde,
 And then and there for triall of her right
 With her unrighteous enemy to fight, Did thither come, where she, afrajd of
 nought,
 By guilefull treason and by subtile slight Surprized was, and to Grantorto brought,
 Who her imprisond hath, and her life often sought.

XL

'And now he hath to her prefixt a day,
 By which if that no champion doe appeare,
 Which will her cause in battailous array Against him justifie, and prove her cleare Of all those crimes that he gainst her doth
 reare,
 She death shall sure aby.' Those tidings
 sad
 Did much abash Sir Artegall to heare, And grieved sore, that through his fault she had Fallen into that tyrants hand and usage bad.

XLI

Then thus replide: 'Now sure and by my
 life,
 Too much am I too blame for that faire
 maide,

That have her drawne to all this troublous
strife,
Through promise to afford her timely aide,
Which by default I have not yet defraide.
But witness unto me, ye heavens, that
know How cleare I am from blame of this up-braide:
For ye into like thraldome me did throw,
And kept from complishing the faith which I did owe.

XLII

'But now aread, Sir Sergis, how long space Hath he her lent, a champion to provide.'
'Ten daies,' quoth he, 'he graunted hath of
grace,
For that he weeneth well, before that tide None can have tidings to assist her side.
For all the shores, which to the sea accoste, He day and night doth ward both far and
wide,
That none can there arrive without an hoste:
So her he deemes already but a damned ghoste.'

XLIII

'Now turne againe,' Sir Artegeall then
sayd;
'For if I live till those ten daies have end, Assure your selfe, sir knight, she shall have
ayd,
Though I this dearest life for her doe
spend.'
So backward he attone with him did wend.
Tho, as they rode together on their way,
A rout of people they before them kend,
Flocking together in confusde array,
As if that there were some tumultuous affray.

XLIV

To which as they approcht, the cause to
know,
They saw a knight in daungerous distresse
Of a rude rout him chasing to and fro, That sought with lawlesse powre him to opresse,
And bring in bondage of their brutishnesse:
And farre away, amid their rakehell bands,
They spide a lady left all succourlesse, Crying, and holding up her wretched hands To him for aide, who long in vaine their rage withstands.

XLV

Yet still he strives, ne any perill spares,
To reskue her from their rude violence,
And like a lion wood amongst them fares, Dealing his dreadfull blowes with large dis-
pence, Gainst which the pallid death findes no defence.
But all in vaine; their numbers are so
great,
That naught may boot to banishe them from thence:
For soone as he their outrage backe doth
beat,
They turne afresh, and oft renew their former threat.

XLVI

And now they doe so sharply him assay, That they his shield in peeces battred have,
And forced him to throw it quite away,
Fro dangers dread his doubtfull life to save; Albe that it most safety to him gave,
And much did magnifie his noble name:
For from the day that he thus did it leave, Amongst all knights he blotted was with
blame,
And counted but a recreant knight, with endles shame.

XLVII

Whom when they thus distressed did be-
hold,
They drew unto his aide; but that rude
rout
Them also gan assaile with outrage bold, And forced them, how ever strong and
stout
They were, as well approv'd in many a doubt, Backe to recule; untill that yron man
With his huge flaile began to lay about,
From whose sterne presence they diffused
ran,
Like scattred chaffe, the which the wind away doth fan.

XLVIII

So when that knight from perill cleare was freed,
He, drawing neare, began to greeete them
faire,
And yeeld great thanks for their so goodly deed,
In saving him from daungerous despaire

Of those which sought his life for to em-
paire.
Of whom Sir Artegall gan then enquire
The whole occasion of his late misfare, And who he was, and what those villaines
were,
The which with mortall malice him pursu'd so nere.

XLIX

To whom he thus: 'My name is Burbon
hight,
Well knowne, and far renowned hereto-
fore,
Untill late mischiefe did uppon me light,
That all my former praise hath blemisht
sore;
And that faire lady, which in that uprore Ye with those caytives saw, Flourdels
hight,
Is mine owne love, though me she have
forlore,
Whether withheld from me by wrongfull
might,
Or with her owne good will, I cannot read aright.

L

'But sure to me her faith she first did
plight,
To be my love, and take me for her lord,
Till that a tyrant, which Grandtorto hight, With golden giftes and many a guilefull
word
Entyce her, to him for to accord.
O who may not with gifts and words be tempted?
Sith which she hath me ever since abhord,
And to my foe hath guilefully consented: Ay me, that ever guyle in wemen was invented!

LI

'And now he hath this troupe of villains
sent,
By open force to fetch her quite away: Gainst whom my selfe I long in vaine have
bent
To rescue her, and daily meanes assay, Yet rescue her thence by no meanes I may:
For they doe me with multitude oppresse,
And with unquall might doe overlay,
That oft I driven am to great distresse, And forced to forgoe th' attempt remedilesse.'

LII

'But why have ye,' said Artegall, 'forborne Your owne good shield in dangerous dis-
may?
That is the greatest shame and foulest
scorene,
Which unto any knight be happen may,
To loose the badge that should his deedes
display.' To whom Sir Burbon, blushing halfe for
shame,
'That shall I unto you,' quoth he, 'bewray;
Least ye therefore mote happily me blame,
And deeme it doen of will, that through inforcement came.

LIII

'True is, that I at first was dubbed knight By a good knight, the Knight of the Red-
crosse;
Who when he gave me arnes, in field to
fight,
Gave me a shield, in which he did endosse His deare Redeemers badge upon the bosse:
The same long while I bore, and there-
withall
Fought many battels without wound or
losse;
Therewith Grandtorto selfe I did appall, And made him oftentimes in field before me fall.

LIV

'But for that many did that shield envie,
And cruell enemies increased more;
To stint all strife and troublous enmitie,
That bloudie scutchin being battered sore,
I layd aside, and have of late forbore, Hoping thereby to have my love obtayned:
Yet can I not my love have nathemore;
For she by force is still fro me detayned,
And with corruptfull brybes is to untruth mis-trayned.'

LV

To whom thus Artegall: 'Certes, sir knight, Hard is the case the which ye doe com-
plaine;
Yet not so hard (for nought so hard may
light,
That it to such a streight mote you con-
straine)
As to abandon that which doth containe Your honours stile, that is your warlike
shield.

All perill ought be lesse, and lesse all
paine,
Then losse of fame in disaveutrous field:
Dye rather, then doe ought that mote dishonour yield.'

LVI

'Not so,' quoth he; 'for yet, when time doth serve,

My former shield I may resume againe:
To temporize is not from truth to swerve,
Ne for advantage terme to entertaime, When as necessitie doth it constraime.'
'Fie on such forgerie,' said Artegal,
'Under one hood to shadow faces twaine!
Knights ought be true, and truth is one in
all:
Of all things, to dissemble foully may befall.'

LVII

'Yet let me you of courtesie request,' Said Burbon, 'to assist me now at need Against these pesants which have me op-
prest,
And forced me to so infamous deed, That yet my love may from their hands be freed.'

Sir Artegal, albe he earst did wyte His wavering mind, yet to his aide agreed,
And buckling him eftsoones unto the fight, Did set upon those troupes with all his powre and might.

LVIII

Who flocking round about them, as a swarme
Of flies upon a birchen bough doth cluster,
Did them assault with terrible allarme, And over all the fields themselves did muster,
With bills and grayves making a dreadfull luster;
That first at first those knights backe to retyre:
As when the wrathfull Boreas doth bluster, Nought may abide the tempest of his yre; Both man and beast doe fly, and succour doe inquire.

LIX

But when as overblowen was that brunt,
Those knights began a fresh them to assayle,
And all about the fields like squirrels hunt;
But chiefly Talus with his yron flyale,

Gainst which no flight nor rescue mote avayle,
Made cruell havocke of the baser crew,
And chased them both over hill and dale:
The raskall manie soone they overthrew, But the two knights themselves their captains did subdew.

LX

At last they came whereas that ladie bode, Whom now her keepers had forsaken
quight,
To save themselves, and scattered were
abrode:
Her halfe dismayd they found in doubtfull
plight,
As neither glad nor sorie for their sight;
Yet wondrous faire she was, and richly
clad
In roiall robes, and many jewels dight, But that those villens through their usage
bad
Them foully rent and shamefully defaced had.

LXI

But Burbon, streight dismounting from his
steed,
Unto her ran with greedie great desyre,
And catching her fast by her ragged weed,
Would have embraced her with hart entyre.
But she, backstarting with disdainfull yre, Bad him avaunt, ne would unto his lore Allured be, for prayer nor for meed.
Whom when those knights so froward and
forlore
Beheld, they her rebuked and upbrayded
sore.

LXII

Sayd Artegal: 'What foule disgrace is this
To so faire ladie as ye seeme in sight,
To blot your beutie, that unblemisht is,
With so foule blame as breach of faith once
plight,
Or change of love for any worlds de-
light!
Is ought on earth so pretious or deare, As prayse and honour? Or is ought so
bright
And beautifull as glories beames appeare, Whose goodly light then Phebus lampe doth shine more cleare?

LXIII

'Why then will ye, fond dame, attempted
bee

Unto a strangers love, so lightly placed,
For guiftes of gold or any worldly glee,
To leave the love that ye before embraced,
And let your fame with falshood be defaced?

Fie on the pelfe for which good name is
sold,

And honour with indignitie debased!
Dearer is love then life, and fame then
gold;

But dearer then them both your faith once plighted hold.'

LXIV

Much was the ladie in her gentle mind Abasht at his rebuke, that bit her neare, Ne ought to answere thereunto did find;
But hanging downe her head with heavie
cheare,

Stood long amaz'd, as she amated weare.
Which Burbon seeing, her againe assayd, And clasping twixt his armes, her up did
reare

Upon his steede, whiles she no whit gaine-
sayd;

So bore her quite away, nor well nor ill
apayd.

LXV

Nathlesse the yron man did still pursew
That raskall many with unpittied spoyle, Ne ceased not, till all their scatted crew Into the sea he drove quite from that soyle, The which they troubled had with great turmoyle.

But Artegall, seeing his cruell deed, Commaunded him from slaughter to recoyle,

And to his voyage gan againe proceed:
For that the terme, approaching fast, required speed.

CANTO XII

Artegall doth Sir Burbon aide,
And blames for changing shield:
He with the great Grantorto fights,
And slaieth him in field.

I

O SACRED hunger of ambitious mindes,
And impotent desire of men to raine,

Whom neither dread of God, that devils bindes, Nor lawes of men, that common weales
containe,
Nor bands of nature, that wilde beastes
restraine,
Can keepe from outrage and from doing
wrong,
Where they may hope a kingdome to obtaine.
No faith so firme, no trust can be so strong,
No love so lasting then, that may endure
long.

II

Witnesse may Burbon be, whom all the bands

Which may a knight assure had surely
bound,

Untill the love of lordship and of lands Made him become most faithlesse and un-
sound:

And witnesse be Gerioneo found,
Who for like cause faire Belge did oppresse, And right and wrong most cruelly con-
found:

And so be now Grantorto, who no lesse Then all the rest burst out to all outragiousnesse.

III

Gainst whom Sir Artegall, long having since

Taken in hand th' exploit, being theretoo Appointed by that mightie Faerie prince, Great Gloriane, that tyrant to fordoo, Through other great adventures hethertoo Had it forsackt. But now time drawing ny, To him assynd, her high behest to doo,
To the sea shore he gan his way apply,
To weete if shipping readie he mote there descry.

IV

Tho, when they came to the sea coast, they
found

A ship all readie (as good fortune fell)
To put to sea, with whom they did compound

To passe them over, where them list to tell:
The winde and weather served them so
well,

That in one day they with the coast did
fall;

Whereas they readie found, them to repell,

Great hostes of men in order martiall, Which them forbad to land, and footing did forstall.

V

But nathemore would they from land refraine,
But when as nigh unto the shore they drew,
That foot of man might sound the bottome
plaine,
Talus into the sea did forth issew, Though darts from shore and stones they at him threw;
And wading through the waves with sted-fast sway, Maugre the might of all those troupes in
vew,
Did win the shore, whence he them chast
away,
And made to fly, like doves whom the eagle doth affray.

VI

The whyles Sir Artegall with that old
knight
Did forth descend, there being none them
neare,
And forward marched to a towne in sight.
By this came tydings to the tyrants eare,
By those which earst did fly away for feare,
Of their arrivall: wherewith troubled sore,
He all his forces streight to him did reare,
And forth issuing with his scouts afore, Meant them to have incountred, ere they left the shore.

VII

But ere he marched farre, he with them met,
And fiercely charged them with all his
force;
But Talus sternely did upon them set,
And brusht and battred them without remorse,
That on the ground he left full many a corse;
Ne any able was him to withstand,
But he them overthrew both man and horse,
That they lay scattred over all the land,
As thicke as doth the seede after the sowers hand.

VIII

Till Artegall, him seeing so to rage, Willd him to stay, and signe of truce did
make:

To which all harkning, did a while asswage Their forces furie, and their terror slake; Till he an herauld cald, and to him spake, Willing him wend unto the tyrant streight, And tell him that not for such slaughters
sake

He thether came, but for to trie the right Of fayre Irenas cause with him in siugle
fight:

IX

And willed him for to reclayme with speed
His scattred people, ere they all were slaine,
And time and place convenient to areed, In which they two the combat might dar-
raine.

Which message when Grantorto heard, full
fayre

And glad he was the slaughter so to stay,
And pointed for the combat twixt them
twayne

The morrow next, ne gave him longer day:
So sounded the retraite, and drew his folke
away.

X

That night Sir Artegall did cause his tent
There to be pitched on the open plaine;
For he had given streight commaundement, That none should dare him once to enter-
taine:

Which none durst breake, though many would right faine

For fayre Irena, whom they loved deare.
But yet old Sergis did so well him paine, That from close friends, that dar'd not to
appeare,
He all things did purvay, which for them needfull weare.

XI

The morrow next, that was the dismall day Appointed for Irenas death before,
So soone as it did to the world display His chearefull face, and light to men re-
store,

The heavy mayd, to whom none tydings
bore

Of Artegals arryvall, her to free, Lookt up with eyes full sad and hart full
sore;

Weening her lifes last howre then neare to
bee,

Sith no redemption nigh she did nor heare nor see.

XII

Then up she rose, and on her selfe did
 dight
 Most squalid garments, fit for such a day,
 And with dull countenance, and with dole-ful spright,
 She forth was brought in sorrowfull dis-
 may,
 For to receive the doome of her decay.
 But comming to the place, and finding
 there
 Sir Artegall, in battailous array Wayting his foe, it did her dead hart
 cheare,
 And new life to her lent, in midst of deadly
 feare.

XIII

Like as a tender rose in open plaine, That with untimely drought high withered
 was,
 And hung the head, soone as few drops of
 raine
 Thereon distill, and dew her daintie face, Gins to looke up, and with fresh wanted
 grace
 Dispreeds the glorie of her leaves gay; Such was Irenas countenance, such her
 ease,
 When Artegall she saw in that array, There wayting for the tyrant, till it was farre day.

XIV

Who came at length, with proud presumpteous gate,
 Into the field, as if he fearelesse were,
 All armed in a cote of yron plate,
 Of great defence to ward the deadly feare,
 And on his head a steele cap he did weare Of colour rustie browne, but sure and
 strong;
 And in his hand an huge polaxe did beare, Whose steale was yron studded, but not
 long,
 With which he wont to fight, to justifie his wrong.

XV

Of stature huge and hideous he was,
 Like to a giant for his monstrous height,
 And did in strength most sorts of men sur-
 pas,
 Ne ever any found his match in might;
 Thereto he had great skill in single fight:

His face was ugly and his countenance
 sterne,
 That could have frayd one with the very
 sight,
 And gaped like a gulfe when he did gerne, That whether man or monster one could searse discern.

XVI

Soone as he did within the listes appeare, With dreadfull looke he Artegall beheld, As if he would have daunted him with
 feare,
 And grinning griesly, did against him weld
 His deadly weapon, which in hand he held.
 But th' Elfin swayne, that oft had seene like sight,
 Was with his ghaftly count'nance nothing
 queld,
 But gan him streight to buckle to the fight,
 And cast his shield about, to be in readie
 plight.

XVII

The trumpets sound, and they together goe,
 With dreadfull terror and with fell intent;
 And their huge strokes full daungerously bestow,
 To doe most dammage where as most they
 ment.
 But with such force and furie violent The tyrant thundred his thicke blowes so
 fast,
 That through the yron walles their way they rent,
 And even to the vital parts they past, Ne ought could them endure, but all they cleft or brast.

XVIII

Which cruell outrage when as Artegall Did well avize, thenceforth with warie heed He shund his strokes, where ever they did
 fall,
 And way did give unto their gracelesse
 speed:
 As when a skilfull marriner doth reed A storme approaching, that doth perill
 threat,
 He will not bide the daunger of such
 dread,
 But strikes his sayles, and vereth his mainsheat,
 And lends unto it leave the emptie ayre to beat.

XIX

So did the Faerie knight himselfe abeare, And stouped oft, his head from shame to
shield;

No shame to stoupe, ones head more high to reare,

And, much to gaine, a litle for to yield;
So stoutest knights doen oftentimes in field.
But still the tyrant sternely at him layd,
And did his yron axe so nimble wield,
That many wounds into his flesh it made,
And with his burdenous blowes him sore did overlade.

XX

Yet when as fit advantage he did spy,
The whiles the cursed felon high did reare His cruell hand, to smite him mortally, Under his stroke he to him stepping neare, Right in the flanke him strooke with deadly dreare,

That the gore bloud, thence gushing grievously,

Did underneath him like a pond appeare,
And all his armour did with purple dye:
Thereat he brayed loud, and yelled dreadfully.

XXI

Yet the huge stroke, which he before intended,

Kept on his course, as he did it direct,
And with such monstrous poise adowne descended,

That seemed nought could him from death protect:

But he it well did ward with wise respect,
And twixt him and the blow his shield did
cast,

Which thereon seizing, tooke no great effect,

But byting deepe therein did sticke so fast,
That by no meanes it backe againe he forth could wrast.

XXII

Long while he tug'd and strove, to get it
out,

And all his powre applyed thereunto, That he therewith the knight drew all
about:

Nathlesse, for all that ever he could doe,
His axe he could not from his shield undoe.
Which Artegal perceiving, strooke no
more,

But loosing soone his shield, did it forgoe,
And whiles he combed was therewith so
sore,

He gau at him let drive more fiercely then
afore.

XXIII

So well he him pursew'd, that at the last He stroke him with Chrysaor on the hed, That with the souse thereof full sore
aghost,

He staggered to and fro in doubtfull sted.
Againe, whiles he him saw so ill bested, He did him smite with all his might and
maine,

That, falling, on his mother earth he fed: Whom when he saw prostrated on the
plaine,

He lightly reft his head, to ease him of his
payne.

XXIV

Which when the people round about him
saw,

They shouted all for joy of his successe, Glad to be quit from that proud tyrants
awe,

Which with strong powre did them long time oppresse;

And running all with greedie joyfulnessse
To faire Irena, at her feet did fall,
And her adored with due humblenesse,
As their true liege and princesse naturall;
And eke her champions glorie sounded over all.

XXV

Who streight her leading with meete majestie

Unto the pallace, where their kings did
rayne,

Did her therein establish peaceable,
And to her kingdomes seat restore agayne;
And all such persons as did late maintayne That tyrants part, with close or open ayde,
He sorely punished with heavie payne;
That in short space, whiles there with her he stayd,

Not one was left that durst her once have disobayd.

XXVI

During which time that he did there re-
maine,

His studie was true justice how to deale,

And day and night employ'd his busie paine
 How to reforme that ragged common-weale:
 And that same yron man, which could reveale
 All hidden crimes, through all that realme he sent,
 To search out those that usd to rob and steale,
 Or did rebell gainst lawfull government;
 On whom he did inflict most grievous punishment.

XXVII

But ere he could reforme it thoroughly,
 He through occasion called was away
 To Faerie court, that of necessity His course of justice he was forst to stay,
 And Talus to revoke from the right way, In which he was that realme for to re-
 dresse.
 But envies cloud still dimmeth vertues ray.
 So having freed Irena from distresse, He tooke his leave of her, there left in heavnesse.

XXVIII

Tho, as he backe returned from that land, And there arriv'd againe, whence forth he
 set,
 He had not passed farre upon the strand,
 When as two old ill favour'd hags he met,
 By the way side being together set;
 Two griesly creatures; and, to that their faces Most foule and filthie were, their garments
 yet,
 Being all rag'd and tatter'd, their disgraces Did much the more augment, and made most ugly cases.

XXIX

The one of them, that elder did appeare, With her dull eyes did seeme to looke askew,
 That her mis-shape much helpt; and her foule heare Hung loose and loathsomely: thereto her
 hew
 Was wan and leane, that all her teeth arew And all her bones might through her cheekes be red;
 Her lips were like raw leather, pale and blew,
 And as she spake, therewith she slavered; Yet spake she seldom, but thought more,
 the lesse she sed.

XXX

Her hands were foule and durtie, never washt
 In all her life, with long nayles over raught, Like puttocks clawes: with th' one of which she scracht
 Her cursed head, although it itched naught;
 The other held a snake with venime fraught,
 On which she fed and gnawed hungrily,
 As if that long she had not eaten ought;
 That round about her jawes one might desery
 The bloudie gore and poyson dropping lothsomely.

XXXI

Her name was Envie, knowen well thereby;
 Whose nature is to grieve and grudge at all That ever she sees doen prays-worthily, Whose sight to her is greatest crosse may
 fall,
 And vexeth so, that makes her eat her gall.
 For when she wanteth other thing to eat,
 She feedes on her owne maw unnaturall, And of her owne foule entrayles makes her
 meat;
 Meat fit for such a monsters monstrous dyeat.

XXXII

And if she hapt of any good to heare,
 That had to any happily betid, Then would she inly fret, and grieve, and
 teare
 Her flesh for felnesse, which she inward hid:
 But if she heard of ill that any did,
 Or harme that any had, then would she make Great cheare, like one unto a banquet bid;
 And in anothers losse great pleasure take,
 As she had got thereby, and gayned a great stake.

XXXIII

The other nothing better was then shее;
 Agreeing in bad will and cancred kynd,
 But in bad maner they did disagree:
 For what so Envie good or bad did fynd She did conceale, and murder her owne
 mynd;
 But this, what ever evill she conceived, Did spread abroad, and throw in th' opei
 wynd.
 Yet this in all her words might be perceived,
 That all she sought was mens good name to have bereaved.

XXXIV

For what soever good by any sayd Or doen she heard, she would streightwayes invent
 How to deprave, or slaunderously upbrayd,
 Or to misconstrue of a mans intent,
 And turne to ill the thing that well was ment.
 Therefore she used often to resort To common haunts, and companies frequent,
 To hearke what any one did good report, To blot the same with blame, or wrest in wicked sort.

XXXV

And if that any ill she heard of any,
 She would it eeke, and make much worse by telling,
 And take great joy to publish it to many,
 That every matter worse was for her melling.
 Her name was hight Detraction, and her dwelling Was neare to Envie, even her neighbour next;
 A wicked hag, and Envy selfe excelling In mischief: for her selfe she onely vext;
 But this same both her selfe and others eke perplext.

XXXVI

Her face was ugly, and her mouth distort, Foming with poyson round about her gils, In which her cursed tongue full sharpe and short Appear'd like aspis sting, that closely kills, Or cruelly does wound, whom so she wils:
 A distaffe in her other hand she had,
 Upon the which she litle spinnes, but spils,
 And faynes to weave false tales and leasings
 bad,
 To throw amongst the good, which others had disprad.

XXXVII

These two now had themselves combynd in
 one,
 And linckt together gainst Sir Artegal,
 For whom they wayted as his mortall fone, How they might make him into mischief
 fall,
 For freeing from their snares Irena thrall: Besides, unto themselves they gotten had A monster, which the Blatant Beast men
 call,

A dreadfull feend, of gods and men ydrad, Whom they by slights allur'd, and to their purpose lad.

XXXVIII

Such were these hags, and so unhandsome
 drest:
 Who when they nigh approching had espyde Sir Artegal, return'd from his late quest,
 They both arose, and at him loudly cryde, As it had bene two shepherds cures had seryde
 A ravenous wolfe amongst the scattered flocks.
 And Envie first, as she that first him eyde, Towardes him runs, and with rude flaring lockes
 About her eares, does beat her brest and forehead knockes.

XXXIX

Then from her mouth the gobbet she does
 take,
 The which whyleare she was so greedily Devouring, even that halfe-gnawen snake,
 And at him throws it most despightfully.
 The cursed serpent, though she hungrily Earst chawd thereon, yet was not all so dead,
 But that some life remayned secretly,
 And as he past afore withouten dread, Bit him behind, that long the marke was to be read.

XL

Then th' other comming neare, gan him
 revile
 And fouly rayle, with all she could invent; Saying that he had with unmanly guile
 And foule abusion both his honour blent, And that bright sword, the sword of Justice
 lent,
 Had stayned with reprochfull crueltie
 In guiltlesse blood of many an innocent:
 As for Grandtorto, him with treacherie And traynes having surpriz'd, he fouly did to die.

XLI

Thereto the Blatant Beast, by them set on,
 At him began aloud to barke and bay,
 With bitter rage and fell contention, That all the woods and rockes nigh to that
 way
 Began to quake and tremble with dismay,
 And all the aire rebellowed againe,

So dreadfully his hundred tongues did bray:
 And evermore those hags them selves did
 paine
 To sharpen him, and their owne cursed tongs did straine.

XLII

And still among, most bitter wordes they
 spake,
 Most shamefull, most unrighteous, most untrew,
 That they the mildest man alive would make Forget his patience, and yeeld vengeance
 dew
 To her, that so false sclaunders at him
 threw.
 And more to make them pierce and wound more deepe,
 She with the sting which in her vile tongue
 grew
 Did sharpen them, and in fresh poyson
 steepe:
 Yet he past on, and seem'd of them to take no keepe.

XLIII

But Talus, hearing her so lewdly raile,
 And speake so ill of him that well deserved, Would her have chastiz'd with his yron
 flaile,
 If her Sir Artegall had not preserved,
 And him forbidden, who his heast observed.
 So much the more at him still did she
 scold,
 And stones did cast; yet he for nought would swerve From his right course, but still the way did
 hold
 To Faery court, where what him fell shall else be told.

THE SIXTE BOOKE
 OF THE FAERIE QUEENE
 CONTAYNING
 THE LEGEND OF SIR CALIDORE OR OF COURTESIE

I

THE waies, through which my weary steps
 I gnyde,
 In this delightfull land of Faery,

Are so exceeding spacious and wyde,
 And sprinckled with such sweet variety
 Of all that pleasant is to eare or eye, That I, nigh ravisht with rare thoughts de-
 light,

My tedious travell doe forget thereby;
 And when I gin to feele decay of might,
 It strength to me supplies, and chears my dulled spright.

II

Such secret comfort and such heavenly pleasures,
 Ye sacred imps, that on Parnasso dwell,
 And there the keeping have of learnings
 treasures,
 Which doe all worldly riches farre excell,
 Into the mindes of mortall men doe well,
 And goodly fury into them infuse; Guyde ye my footing, and conduct me
 well
 In these strange waies, where never foote did use, Ne none can find, but who was taught them by the Muse.

III

Revele to me the sacred nursery Of Vertue, which with you doth there re-
 maine,
 Where it in silver bowre does hidden ly From view of men, and wicked worlds dis-
 daine;
 Since it at first was by the gods with paine Planted in earth, being deriv'd at furst From heavenly seedes of bounty soveraine, And by them long with carefull labour
 nurst,
 Till it to ripenesse grew, and forth to honour burst.

IV

Amongst them all growes not a fayrer
 flowre,
 Then is the bloosme of comely Courtesie, Which, though it on a lowly stalke doe
 bowre,
 Yet brancheth forth in brave nobilitie,
 And spreads it selfe through all civilitie:
 Of which though present age doe plenteous
 seeme,
 Yet, being matcht with plaine antiquitie, Ye will them all but fayned shoves esteeme, Which carry colours faire, that feeble eies misdeeme.

V

But in the triall of true Curtesie, Its now so farre from that which then it
was,
That it indeed is nought but forgerie, Fashion'd to please the eies of them that
pas,

Which see not perfect things but in a glas:
Yet is that glasse so gay that it can blynd
The wisest sight, to thinke gold that is bras.
But Vertues seat is deepe within the mynd,
And not in outward shows, but inward thoughts defynd.

VI

But where shall I in all antiquity So faire a patterne finde, where may be
seene

The goodly praise of princely Curtesie,
As in your selfe, O soveraine Lady Queene?
In whose pure minde, as in a mirrour sheene, It shows, and with her brightnesse doth inflame

The eyes of all which thereon fixed beene;
But meriteth indeede an higher name:
Yet so from low to high uplifted is your fame.

VII

Then pardon me, most dreaded Sovereaine, That from your selfe I doe this vertue bring,
And to your selfe doe it returne againe:
So from the ocean all rivers spring,
And tribute backe repay as to their king:
Right so from you all goodly vertues well Into the rest which round about you ring, Faire lords and ladies, which about you
dwell,
And doe adorne your court, where courtesies
excell.

CANTO I

Calidore saves from Malefort
A damzell used vylde: Doth vanquish Crudor, and doth make Briana wexe more mylde.

I

OF Court, it seemes, men Courtesie doe call,
For that it there most useth to abound;
And well beseemeth that in princes hall
That vertue should be plentifully found,
Which of all goodly manners is the ground,
And roote of evill conversation.

Right so in Faery court it did redound, Where curteous knights and ladies most did won
Of all on earth, and made a matchlesse paragon.

II

But mongst them all was none more courteous knight
Then Calidore, beloved over all:
In whom it seemes that gentlenesse of
spright
And manners mylde were planted naturall;
To which he adding comely guize withall, And gracious speach, did steale mens hearts
away.

Nathlesse thereto he was full stout and tall,
And well approv'd in batteilous affray, That him did much renowne, and far his fame display.

III

Ne was there knight, ne was there lady
found

In Faery court, but him did deare embrace For his faire usage and conditions sound,
The which in all mens liking gayned place,
And with the greatest purchast greatest
grace:

Which he could wisely use, and well apply,
To please the best, and th' evill to embase:
For he loathd leasing and base flattery, And loved simple truth and stedfast honesty.

IV

And now he was in travell on his way, Uppon an hard adventure sore bestad, Whenas by chauce he met uppou a day With Artegall, returning yet halfe sad From his late conquest which he gotten
had.

Who whenas each of other had a sight, They knew them selves, and both their persons rad:

When Calidore thus first: 'Haile, noblest
knight

Of all this day on ground that breatheen living spright!

V

'Now tell, if please you, of the good suc-
cesse
Which ye have had in your late enter-
prize.'

To whom Sir Artegall gan to expresse His whole exploite and valorous emprize,
 In order as it did to him arize.
 'Now, happy man!' sayd then Sir Calidore,
 'Which have, so goodly as ye can devise,
 Atchiev'd so hard a quest as few before;
 That shall you most renowned make for evermore.

VI

But where ye ended have, now I begin To tread an endlesse trace, withouten gnyde,
 Or good direction how to enter in,
 Or how to issue forth in waies untryde,
 In perils strange, in labours long and wide,
 In which although good fortune me befall, Yet shall it not by none be testifyde.'
 'What is that quest,' quoth then Sir Artegall,
 'That you into such perils presently doth call?'

VII

'The Blattant Beast,' quoth he, 'I doe
 pursew,
 And through the world incessantly doe
 chase,
 Till I him overtake, or else subdew:
 Yet know I not or how or in what place To find him out, yet still I forward trace.'
 'What is that Blattant Beast?' then he replide.
 'It is a monster bred of hellishe race,' Then answerd he, 'which often hath annoyd Good knights and ladies true, and many else destroyd.

VIII

'Of Cerberus whilome he was begot,
 And fell Chimæra in her darkesome den, Through fowle commixture of his filthy
 blot;
 Where he was fostred long in Stygian
 fen,
 Till he to perfect ripenesse grew, and then Into this wicked world he forth was sent,
 To be the plague and scourge of wretched
 men:
 Whom with vile tongue and venomous intent He sore doth wound, and bite, and cruelly torment.'

IX

'Then, since the Salvage Island I did
 leave,'
 Sayd Artegall, 'I such a beast did see,
 The which did seeme a thousand tongues to
 have,
 That all in spight and malice did agree, With which he bayd and loudly barked at
 mee,
 As if that he attonce would me devoure.
 But I, that knew my selfe from perill free, Did nought regard his malice nor his
 powre,
 But he the more his wicked poyson forth did poure.'

X

'That surely is that beast,' saide Calidore,
 'Which I pursue, of whom I am right
 glad
 To heare these tidings, which of none afore Through all my weary travell I have had:
 Yet now some hope your words unto me add.'
 'Now God you speed,' quoth then Sir
 Artegall,
 'And keepe your body from the daunger drad:
 For ye have much adoe to deale withall.' So both tooke goodly leave, and parted severall.

XI

Sir Calidore thence travelled not long, When as by chauce a comely squire he
 found,
 That thorough some more mighty enemies
 wrong
 Both hand and foote unto a tree was bound:
 Who, seeing him from farre, with piteous
 sound
 Of his shrill cries him called to his aide.
 To whom approching, in that painefull
 stound
 When he him saw, for no demaunds he staide,
 But first him losde, and afterwards thus to him saide:

XII

'Unhappy squire! what hard mishap thee
 brought
 Into this bay of perill and disgrace?
 What cruell hand thy wretched thraldome
 wrought,

And thee captvied in this shamefull
place ?'
To whom he answerd thus: 'My haplesse
case
Is not occasiond through my misdesert, But through misfortune, which did me abase Unto this shame, and my young hope subvert, Ere that I in her guilefull traines was well expert.

XIII

'Not farre from hence, uppon yond rocky hill,
Hard by a streight there stands a castle
strong,
Which doth observe a custome lewd and
ill,
And it hath long mayntaind with mighty
wrong:
For may no knight nor lady passe along That way, (and yet they needs must passe
that way,
By reason of the streight, and rocks
among,)
But they that ladies lockes doe shave away, And that knights berd for toll, which they for passage pay.'

XIV

'A shamefull use as ever I did heare,' Sayd Calidore, 'and to be overthrowne.
But by what meanes did they at first it
reare,
And for what cause ? tell, if thou have it
knowne.'
Sayd then that squire: 'The lady which doth owne
This castle is by name Briana hight;
Then which a prouder lady liveth none:
She long time hath deare lov'd a doughty
knight,
And sought to win his love by all the meanes she might.

XV

'His name is Crudor; who, through high
disdaine
And proud despight of his selfe pleasing
mynd,
Refused hath to yeeld her love againe, Untill a mantle she for him doe fynd,
With beards of knights and locks of ladies lynd.

Which to provide, she hath this castle dight,
And therein hath a seneschall assynd, Cald Maleffort, a man of mickle might,
Who execeutes her wicked will, with worse
despight.

XVI

'He this same day, as I that way did come With a faire damzell, my beloved deare, In execution of her lawlesse doome, Did set uppon us flying both for feare:
For little bootes against him hand to reare Me first he tooke, unhabile to withstond, And whiles he her pursued every where,
Till his returne unto this tree he bond: Ne wote I surely, whether her he yet have fond.'

XVII

Thus whiles they spake, they heard a rue-full shriek
Of one loud crying, which they streight way ghest
That it was she, the which for helpe did seeke.
Tho looking up unto the cry to lest,
They saw that earle from farre, with hand umblest Hayling that mayden by the yellow beare,
That all her garments from her snowy brest,
And from her head her lockes he nigh did
teare,
Ne would he spare for pitty, nor refraine for feare.

XVIII

Which Laynous sight when Calidore be-
held,
Eftsoones he loosd that squire, and so him
left,
With hearts dismay and inward colour
queld,
For to pursue that villaine, which had reft
That piteous spoile by so injurious theft.
Whom overtaking, loude to him he cryde:
'Leave, faytor, quickly that misgotten weft
To him that hath it better justfyde, And turne thee soone to him of whom thou art defyde.'

XIX

Who hearkning to that voice, him selfe upreard,
And seeing him so fiercely towardes make,

Against him stoutly ran, as nought afeard, But rather more enrag'd for those words
sake;

And with sterne count'naunce thus unto him spake:

'Art thou the caytive that defyest me,
And for this mayd, whose party thou doest
take,

Wilt give thy beard, though it but little
bee ?

Yet shall it not her lockes for raunsome fro me free.'

XX

With that he fiercely at him flew, and layd On hideous strokes with most importune
might,

That oft he made him stagger as unstayd,
And oft recuile to shunne his sharpe de-
spight.

But Calidore, that was well skild in fight, Him long forbore, and still his spirite spar'd,

Lying in waite, how him he damadge might.
But when he felt him shrinke, and come to
ward,

He greater grew, and gan to drive at him more hard.

XXI

Like as a water streame, whose swelling source

Shall drive a mill, within strong bancks is
pent,

And long restrayned of his ready course;
So soone as passage is unto him lent, Breakes forth, and makes his way more violent:

Such was the fury of Sir Calidore,
When once he felt his foeman to relent;
He fiercely him pursu'd, and pressed sore, Who as he still decayd, so he increased more.

XXII

The heavy burden of whose dreadfull
might

When as the carle no longer could sustaine, His heart gan faint, and streight he tooke his flight

Toward the castle, where, if need constraîne, His hope of refuge used to remaine.

Whom Calidore perceiving fast to flie, He him pursu'd and chaced through the
plaine,

That he for dread of death gan loude to erie

Unto the ward, to open to him hastilie.

XXIII

They from the wall him seeing so aghast, The gate soone opened to receive him in,
But Calidore did follow him so fast,

That even in the porch he him did win,
And cleft his head asunder to his chin.

The carkasse, tumbling downe within the
dore,

Did choke the entraunce with a lumpe of
sin,

That it could not be shut, whilest Calidore Did enter in, and slew the porter on the flore.

XXIV

With that the rest, the which the castle
kept,

About him flockt, and hard at him did lay;
But he them all from him full lightly swept,
As doth a steare, in heat of sommers day,

With his long taile the bryzes brush away.
Thence passing forth, into the hall he came,

Where of the lady selfe in sad dismay
He was ymett, who with uncomely shame Gan him salute, and fowle upbrayd with faulty blame.

XXV

'False traytor knight,' sayd she, 'no knight
at all,

But scorne of armes, that hast with guilty
hand

Murdred my men, and slaine my seneschall;
Now comest thou to rob my house unmand,

And spoile my selfe, that can not thee
withstand ?

Yet doubt thou not, but that some better
knight

Then thou, that shall thy treason understand,

Will it avenge, and pay thee with thy right:
And if none do, yet shame shal thee with shame requight.'

XXVI

Much was the knight abashed at that word;
Yet answerd thus: 'Not unto me the shame,
But to the shamefull doer it afford.

Bloud is no blemish; for it is no blame
To punish those that doe deserve the same;

But they that breake bands of civilitie,

And wicked customes make, those doe de-
fame
Both noble armes and gentle curtesie.
No greater shame to man then inhumanitie.

XXVII

‘Then doe your selfe, for dread of shame, forgoe
This evill manner which ye here maintaine,
And doe in stead thereof mild curt’sie showe
To all that passe. That shall you glory gaine More then his love, which thus ye seeke t’ obtaine.’
Wherewith all full of wrath, she thus re-
plyde:
‘Vile reereant! know that I doe much dis-
daine
Thy courteous lore, that doest my love de-
ride,
Who scornes thy ydle scoffe, and bids thee be defyde.’

XXVIII

‘To take defiaunce at a ladies word,’ Quoth he, ‘I hold it no indignity; But were he here, that would it with his sword
Abett, perhaps he mote it deare aby.’ ‘Cowherd,’ quoth she, ‘were not that thou wouldst fly Ere he doe come, he should be soone in
place.’
‘If I doe so,’ sayd he, ‘then liberty
I leave to you, for aye me to disgrace With all those shames that erst ye spake me to deface.’

XXIX

With that a dwarfe she cald to her in hast,
And taking from her hand a ring of gould,
A privy token which betweene them past, Bad him to flie with all the speed he could To Crudor, and desire him that he would Vouchsafe to reskue her against a knight, Who through strong powre had now her self in hould,
Having late slaine her seneschall in fight,
And all her people murdred with outrageous might.

XXX

The dwarfe his way did hast, and went all
night;
But Calidore did with her there abyde

The comming of that so much threatned
knight;
Where that discourteous dame with scornfull pryde
And fowle euntreaty him indignifyde,
That yron heart it hardly could sustaine:
Yet he, that could his wrath full wisely
guyde,
Did well endure her womanish disdaine, And did him selfe from fraile impatience refraine.

XXXI

The morrow next, before the lampe of light Above the earth upreard his flaming head, The dwarfe, which bore that message to her knight,
Brought aunswere backe, that ere he tasted bread
He would her succour, and alive or dead
Her foe deliver up into her hand:
Therefore he wild her doe away all dread;
And that of him she mote assured stand,
He sent to her his basenet, as a faithfull
band.

XXXII

Thereof full blyth the lady streight became,
And gan t’ augment her bitterness much
more:
Yet no whit more appalled for the same, Ne ought dismayed was Sir Calidore, But rather did more chearefull seeme there-
fore;
And having soone his armes about him dight,
Did issue forth, to meete his foe afore;
Where long he stayed not, when as a knight He spide come pricking on with al his powre and might.

XXXIII

Well weend he streight, that he should be the same Which tooke in hand her quarrell to main-
taine;
Ne stayd to aske if it were he by name, But coucht his speare, and ran at him
amaine.
They bene ymett in midst of the plaine,
With so fell fury and dispiteous forse, That neither could the others stroke sus-
taine,
But rudely rowld to ground both man and
horse,
Neither of other taking pittie nor remorse.

XXXIV

But Calidore arose againe full light, Whiles yet his foe lay fast in sencelesse
sound;

Yet would he not him hurt, although he
might:

For shame he weend a sleeping wight to
wound.

But when Briana saw that dreery stound, There where she stood upon the castle wall, She deem'd him sure to have bene dead on
ground,

And made such piteous mourning therewith-
all,

That from the battlements she ready seem'd to fall.

XXXV

Nathlesse at length him selfe he did upreare In lustlesse wise, as if against his will, Ere he had slept his fill, he wakened were,
And gan to stretch his limbs; which feeling ill

Of his late fall, a while he rested still:
But when he saw his foe before in vew, He shooke off luskishnesse, and courage chill

Kindling a fresh, gan battell to renew,
To prove if better foote then horsebacke would ensew.

XXXVI

There then began a fearefull cruell fray Betwixt them two, for maystery of might:
For both were wondrous practicke in that
play,

And passing well expert in single fight,
And both inflam'd with furious despight:
Which as it still encreast, so still increast Their cruell strokes and terrible affright;
Ne once for ruth their rigour they releast, Ne once to breath a while their angers tempest ceast.

XXXVII

Thus long they trac'd and traverst to and
fro,

And tryde all waies, how each mote entrance make

Into the life of his malignant foe; They hew'd their helmes, and plates asunder
brake,

As they had potshares bene; for nought mote slake

Their greedy vengeances, but goary blood;

That at the last like to a purple lake
Of bloody gore congeal'd about them stood, Which from their riven sides forth gushed like a flood.

XXXVIII

At length it chaunst that both their hands on hie

At once did heave, with all their powre and
might,

Thinking the utmost of their force to trie,
And prove the finall fortune of the fight:
But Calidore, that was more quicke of sight,
And nimbler handed then his enimie, Prevented him before his stroke could
light,

And on the helmet smote him formerlie, That made him stoupe to ground with meeke humilitie.

XXXIX

And ere he could recover foot againe,
He following that faire advantage fast, His stroke redoubled with such might and
maine,

That him upon the ground he groveling
cast;

And leaping to him light, would have un-
last

His helme, to make unto his vengeance way.
Who, seeing in what daunger he was plast, Cryde out: 'Ah mercie, sir! doe me not
slay,

But save my life, which lot before your foot doth lay.'

XL

With that his mortall hand a while he
stayd,

And having somewhat calm'd his wrathfull
heat

With goodly patience, thus he to him sayd:
'And is the boast of that proud ladies threat,
That menaced me from the field to beat, Now brought to this? By this now may ye learne,

Strangers no more so rudely to intreat,
But put away proud looke, and usage sterne,
The which shal nought to you but foule dishonor yearne.

XLI

'For nothing is more blamefull to a knight, That court'sie doth as well as armes pro-fesse,

How ever strong and fortunate in fight,
 Then the reproch of pride and cruelnesse.
 In vaine he seeketh others to suppress,
 Who hath not learnd him selfe first to sub-
 dew:
 All flesh is frayle, and full of ficklenesse, Subject to fortunes chance, still chaunging
 new;
 What haps to day to me to morrow may to you.

XLII

'Who will not mercie unto others shew, How can he mercy ever hope to have?
 To pay each with his owne is right and
 dew.
 Yet since ye mercie now doe need to crave,
 I will it graunt, your hopelesse life to save;
 With these conditions, which I will pro-
 pound:
 First, that ye better shall your selfe behave Unto all errant knights, whereso on ground; Next, that ye ladies ayde in every stead and stound.'

XLIII

The wretched man, that all this while did
 dwell
 In dread of death, his heasts did gladly
 heare,
 And promist to performe his precept well,
 And whatsoever else he would require.
 So suffring him to rise, he made him sweare By his owne sword, and by the crosse thereon,
 To take Briana for his loving fere, Withouten dowre or composition;
 But to release his former foule condition.

XLIV

All which accepting, and with faithfull oth Bynding himselfe most firmly to obey,
 He up arose, how ever liefe or loth,
 And swore to him true fealtie for aye.
 Then forth he cald from sorrowfull dismay
 The sad Briana, which all this beheld:
 Who comming forth yet full of late affray, Sir Calidore upheard, and to her teld All this accord, to which he Crudor had compeld.

XLV

Whereof she now more glad then sory earst, All overcome with infinite affect

For his exceeding courtesie, that pearst Her stubborne hart with inward deepe effect,
 Before his feet her selfe she did project,
 And him adoring as her lives deare lord,
 With all due thankes and dutifull respect, Her selfe acknowledg'd bound for that accord,
 By which he had to her both life and love restord.

XLVI

So all returning to the castle glad,
 Most joyfully she them did entertaine, Where goodly glee and feast to them she
 made,
 To shew her thankfull mind and meaning
 faine,
 By all the meanes she mote it best explaine:
 And after all, unto Sir Calidore
 She freely gave that castle for his paine,
 And her selfe bound to him for evermore;
 So wondrously now chaung'd from that she was afore.

XLVII

But Calidore himselfe would not retaine Nor land nor fee, for hyre of his good dedde, But gave them streight unto that squire
 againe,
 Whom from her seneschall he lately freed,
 And to his damzell, as their rightfull meed,
 For recompence of all their former wrong:
 There he remaind with them right well
 agreed,
 Till of his wounds he waxed hole and
 strong,
 And then to his first quest he passed forth along.

CANTO II

Calidore sees young Tristram slay
 A proud, discourteous knight:
 He makes him squire, and of him learnes His state and present plight.

I

WHAT vertue is so fitting for a knight,
 Or for a ladie whom a knight should love,
 As courtesie, to beare themselves aright
 To all of each degree, as doth behove?
 For whether they be placed high above, Or low beneath, yet ought they well to
 know

Their good, that none them rightly may reprove
 Of rudenesse, for not yeelding what they owe:
 Great skill it is such duties timely to bestow.

II

Thereto great helpe Dame Nature selfe
 doth lend:

For some so goodly grations are by kind,
 That every action doth them much commend,

And in the eyes of men great liking find;
 Which others, that have greater skill in
 mind,

Though they enforce themselves, cannot
 attaine.

For everie thing, to which one is inclin'd, Doth best become, and greatest grace doth
 gaine:

Yet praise likewise deserve good thewes, enforst with paine.

III

That well in courteous Calidore appeares, Whose every deed and word that he did
 say

Was like enchantment, that through both the eares

And both the eyes did steale the hart
 away.

He now againe is on his former way, To follow his first quest, when as he
 spyde

A tall young man from thence not farre
 away,

Fighting on foot, as well he him descryde, Against an armed knight, that did on horsebacke ryde.

IV

And them beside, a ladie faire he saw,
 Standing alone on foot, in foule array:

To whom himselfe he hastily did draw,
 To weet the cause of so uncomely fray,
 And to depart them, if so be he may.

But ere he came in place, that youth had
 kild

That armed knight, that low on ground he
 lay;

Which when he saw, his hart was inly
 child

With great amazement, and his thought with wonder filld.

V

Him stedfastly he markt, and saw to bee
 A goodly youth of amiable grace, Yet but a slender slip, that scarce did see Yet seventene yeares, but tall and faire of
 face,

That sure he deem'd him borne of noble
 race.

All in a woodmans jacket he was clad Of Lincolne greene, belayd with silver lace;

And on his head an hood with aglets sprad,
 And by his side his hunters horne he hanging had.

VI

Buskins he wore of costliest cordwayne, Pinckt upon gold, and paled part per part,
 As then the guize was for each gentle
 swayne;

In his right hand he held a trembling dart,
 Whose fellow he before had sent apart;
 And in his left he held a sharpe bore-
 speare,

With which he went to launch the salvage
 hart

Of many a lyon and of many a beare, That first unto his hand in chase did happen neare.

Whom Calidore a while well having vewed, At length bespake: 'What meanes this, gentle swaine?'

Why hath thy hand too bold it selfe embrewed

In blood of knight, the which by thee is
 slaine,

By thee no knight; which armes impugneth plaine?'

'Certes,' said he, 'loth were I to have broken

The law of armes; yet breake it should
 againe,

Rather then let my selfe of wight be stro-ken,

So long as these two armes were able to be wroken.

VIII

'For not I him, as this his ladie here May witness well, did offer first to wrong, Ne surely thus unarm'd I likely were;
 But he me first, through pride and puissance strong

Assayld, not knowing what to armes doth
long.'

Perdie, great blame,' then said Sir Calidore,

'For armed knight a wight unarm'd to
wrong.

But then aread, thou gentle chyld, wherefore

Betwixt you two began this strife and sterne uprore.'

IX

'That shall I sooth,' said he, 'to you declare.

I whose unryper yeares are yet unfit For thing of weight, or worke of greater
care,

Doe spend my dayes and bend my carelesse
wit

To salvage chace, where I thereon may hit In all this forrest and wyld wooddie raine:

Where, as this day I was enraunging it, I chaunst to meete this knight, who there lyes slaine,

Together with this ladie, passing on the plaine.

X

'The knight, as ye did see, on horsebacke
was,

And this his ladie, (that him ill became,)
On her faire feet by his horse side did pas Through thicke and thin, unfit for any
dame.

Yet not content, more to increase his
shame,

When so she lagged, as she needs mote so,
He with his speare, that was to him great
blame,

Would thumpe her forward, and inforce to
goe,

Weeping to him in vaine, and making piteous woe.

XI

'Which when I saw, as they me passed
by,

Much was I moved in indignant mind,
And gan to blame him for such cruelty Towards a ladie, whom with usage kind He rather should have taken up behind.

Wherewith he wroth, and full of proud dis-
daine,

Tooke in foule scorne, that I such fault did
find,

And me in lieu thereof revil'd againe, Threatning to chastize me, as doth t' a chyld pertaine.

XII

'Which I no lesse disdayning, backe returned

His scornefull taunts unto his teeth againe, That he streight way with haughtie chol-er burned,

And with his speare strooke me one stroke or twaine;

Which I enforst to beare, though to my
paine,

Cast to requite, and with a slender dart, Fellow of this I beare, throwne not in
vaine,

Strooke him, as seemeth, underneath the
hart,

That through the wound his spirit shortly did depart.'

XIII

Much did Sir Calidore admyre his speach Tempred so well, but more admyr'd the stroke

That through the mayles had made so strong a breach

Into his hart, and had so sternely wroke His wrath on him that first occasion broke.

Yet rested not, but further gan inquire Of that same ladie, whether what he spoke Were soothly so, and that th' unrighteous ire Of her owne knight had given him his owne due hire.

XIV

Of all which when as she could nought deny,
But cleard that stripling of th' imputed
blame,

Sayd then Sir Calidore : ' Neither will I Him charge with guilt, but rather doe quite elame:

For what he spake, for you he spake it,
dame;

And what he did, he did him selfe to save:
Against both which that knight wrought knightlesse shame.

For knights and all men this by nature have, Towards all womenkind them kindly to behave.

XV

' But sith that he is gone irrevocable, Please it you, ladie, to us to aread,

What cause could make him so dishonour-able,
To drive you so on foot, unfit to tread
And lackey by him, gainst all womanhead?'
'Certes, sir knight,' said she, 'full loth I
were
To rase a lyving blame against the dead:
But since it me concerns, my selfe to elere,
I will the truth discover, as it chaunst whylere.

XVI

'This day, as he and I together roade Upon our way, to which we weren bent,
We chaunst to come foreby a covert glade Within a wood, whereas a ladie gent Sate with a knight in joyous jolliment Of their franke loves, free from all gealous
spyes:
Faire was the ladie sure, that mote content
An hart not carried with too curious eyes,
And unto him did shew all lovely courtesyes.

XVII

'Whom when my knight did see so lovely
faire,
He indy gan her lover to envy, And wish that he part of his spoyle might share.
Whereto when as my presence he did spy
To be a let, he bad me by and by For to alight: but when as I was loth
My loves owne part to leave so suddenly, He with strong hand down from his steed me throw'th,
And with presumptuous powre against that knight streight go'th.

XVIII

'Unarm'd all was the knight, as then more
meete
For ladies service and for loves delight, Then fearing any foeman there to meete:
Whereof he taking oddes, streight bids him
dight
Himselfe to yeeld his love, or else to fight.
Wherat the other starting up dismayd, Yet boldly answer'd, as he rightly might,
To leave his love he should be ill apayd, In which he had good right gaynst all that it gainesayd.

XIX

'Yet since he was not presently in plight
Her to defend, or his to justifie,

He him requested, as he was a knight,
To lend him day his better right to trie, Or stay till he his armes, which were
thereby, Might lightly fetch. But he was fierce and
whot,
Ne time would give, nor any termes aby,
But at him flew, and with his speare him
smot;
From which to thinke to save himselfe it booted not.

XX

'Meane while his ladie, which this outrage
saw,
Whildest they together for the quarrey
strove,
Into the covert did her selfe withdraw,
And closely hid her selfe within the grove.
My knight hers soone, as seemes, to daunger drove
And left sore wounded: but when her he mist,
He woxe halfe mad, and in that rage gan
rove
And range through all the wood, where so he wist
She hidden was, and sought her so long as him list.

XXI

'But when as her he by no meanes could
find,
After long search and chauff, he turned backe
Unto the place where me he left behind:
There gan he me to curse and ban, for lacke
Of that faire bootie, and with bitter wracke To wreake on me the guilt of his owne
wrong.
Of all which I yet glad to beare the packe, Strove to appease him, and perswaded long:
But still his passion grew more violent and strong.

XXII

'Then as it were t'avenge his wrath on mee, When forward we should fare, he flat refused
To take me up (as this young man did see) Upon his steed, for no just cause accused,
But forst to trot on foot, and foule misused, Pouching me with the butt end of his
speare,
In vaine complayning to be so abused;

For he regarded neither playnt nor teare, But more enforst my paine, the more my plaints to heare.

XXIII

'So passed we, till this young man us met,
And being moov'd with pittie of my plight, Spake, as was meet, for ease of my regret:
Whereof befell what now is in your sight.'
'Now sure,' then said Sir Calidore, 'and
right

Me seemes, that him befell by his owne
fault:

Who ever thinkes through confidence of
might,

Or through support of count'nance proud and hault,

To wrong the weaker, oft falles in his owne assault.'

XXIV

Then turning backe unto that gentle boy,
Which had himselfe so stoutly well acquit;
Seeing his face so lovely sterne and coy,
And hearing th' answeres of his pregnant
wit,

He prayd it much, and much admyred it;
That sure he weend him borne of noble
blood,

With whom those graces did so goodly fit:
And when he long had him beholding stood, He burst into these words, as to him seemed
good:

XXV

'Faire gentle swayne, and yet as stout as
fayre,

That in these woods amongst the nymphs dost wonne,

Which daily may to thy sweete lookes re-
payre,

As they are wont unto Latonaes sonne,
After his chace on woodie Cynthus donne:
Well may I certes such an one thee read,
As by thy worth thou worthily hast wonne,
Or surely borne of some heroicke sead, That in thy face appeares and gracious goodlyhead.

XXVI

'But should it not displease thee it to tell, (Unless thou in these woods thy selfe conceale

For love amongst the woodie gods to dwell,)
I would thy selfe require thee to reveale,

For deare affection and unfayned zeale,
Which to thy noble personage I beare, And wish thee grow in worship and great weale.

For since the day that armes I first did
reare,

I never saw in any greater hope appeare.'

XXVII

To whom then thus the noble youth: 'May be,

Sir knight, that, by discovering my estate, Harne may arise unweeting unto me; Nathelesse, sith ye so courteous seemed
late,

To you I will not feare it to relate.

Then wote ye that I am a Briton borne,
Some of a king, how ever thorough fate Or fortune I my countrie have forlorne, And lost the crowne which should my head by right adorne.

XXVIII

'And Tristram is my name, the onely heire
Of good King Meliogras, which did rayne In Cornewale, till that he through lives despeire

Untimely dyde, before I did attaine Ripe yeares of reason, my right to main-
taine.

After whose death, his brother seeing mee
An infant, weake a kingdome to sustaine, Upon him tooke the roiall high degree, And sent me, where him list, instructed for
to bee.

XXIX

'The widow queene, my mother, which then
hight

Faire Emiline, conceiving then great feare Of my fraile safetie, resting in the might Of him that did the kingly scepter beare, Whose gealous dread induring not a peare Is wont to cut off all that doubt may breed, Thought best away me to remove somewhere

Into some forrein land, where as no need Of dreaded daunger might his doubtful humor feed.

XXX

'So taking counsell of a wise man red,
She was by him adviz'd to send me quight
Out of the countrie wherein I was bred,
The which the fertile Lionesse is hight,

Into the land of Faerie, where no wight Should weet of me, nor worke me any wrong.

To whose wise read she hearkning, sent me
streight

Into this land, where I have wond thus
long,

Since I was ten yeares old, now grown to stature strong.

XXXI

'All which my daies I have not lewdly
spent,

Nor spilt the blossome of my tender yeares
In ydlesse, but, as was convenient,

Have trayned bene with many noble feres In gentle thewes, and such like seemely leres.

Mongst which my most delight hath alwaies
been,

To hunt the salvage chace amongst my peres,

Of all that raungeth in the forrest greene;
Of which none is to me unknowne, that ev'r was seene.

XXXII

'Ne is there hauke which mantleth her on pearch,

Whether high trowing, or acoasting low,
But I the measure of her flight doe search,
And all her pray, and all her diet know.

Such be our joyes, which in these forrests
grow:

Onely the use of armes, which most I joy,
And fitteth most for noble swayne to know,
I have not tasted yet, yet past a boy,
And being now high time these strong joynts to imploy.

XXXIII

'Therefore, good sir, sith now occasion fit Doth fall, whose like hereafter seldome
may,

Let me this crave, unworthy though of it,
That ye will make me squire without de-
lay,

That from henceforth in batteilous array I may beare armes, and learne to use them
right;

The rather since that fortune hath this
day

Given to me the spoile of this dead knight, These goodly gilden armes, which I have won in fight.'

XXXIV

All which when well Sir Calidore had
heard,

Him much more now then earst he gan admire,

For the rare hope which in his yeares ap-
pear'd,

And thus replide: 'Faire chyld, the high
desire

To love of armes, which in you doth aspire,
I may not certes without blame denie;

But rather wish that some more noble hire (Though none more noble then is chevalrie) I had, you to reward with greater dignitie.'

XXXV

There him he causd to kneele, and made to swear

Faith to his knight, and truth to ladies all,
And never to be recreant, for feare

Of perill, or of ought that might befall:
So he him dubbed, and his squire did call.

Full glad and joyous then young Tristram
grew,

Like as a flowre, whose silken leaves small,
Long shut up in the bud from heavens vew, At length breakes forth, and brode displays his smyling hew.

XXXVI

Thus when they long had treated to and fro,
And Calidore betooke him to depart,

Chyld Tristram prayd that he with him might goe

On his adventure, vowing not to start,
But wayt on him in every place and part.

Whereat Sir Calidore did much delight,
And greatly joy'd at his so noble hart,

In hope he sure would prove a doughtie
knight:

Yet for the time this answer he to him behight:

XXXVII

'Glad would I surely be, thou courteous
squire,

To have thy presence in my present quest,
That mote thy kindled courage set on fire,

And flame forth honour in thy noble brest:
But I am bound by vow, which I profest

To my dread Sovereaine, when I it assayd, That in atchievement of her high behest

I should no creature joyne unto mine ayde; Forthy I may not graunt that ye so greatly prayde.

XXXVIII

'But since this ladie is all desolate,
 And needeth safegard now upon her way,
 Ye may doe well in this her needfull state
 To succour her from daunger of dismay;
 That thankfull guerdon may to you repay.'
 The noble ympe, of such new service fayne,
 It gladly did accept, as he did say.
 So taking courteous leave, they parted
 twayne,
 And Calidore forth passed to his former payne.

XXXIX

But Tristram, then despoyling that dead
 knight
 Of all those goodly implements of prayse, Long fed his greedie eyes with the faire
 sight
 Of the bright mettall, shyning like sunne
 rayes;
 Handling and turning them a thousand
 wayes.
 And after having them upon him dight,
 He toke that ladie, and her up did rayse Upon the steed of her owne late dead
 knight,
 So with her marched forth, as she did him behight.

XL

There to their fortune leave we them
 awhile,
 And turne we backe to good Sir Calidore; Who, ere he thence had traveild many a mile,
 Came to the place, whereas ye heard afore This knight, whom Tristram slew, had wounded sore
 Another knight in his despiteous pryde; There he that knight found lying on the
 flore,
 With many wounds full perilous and wyde, That all his garments and the grasse in vermeill dyde.

XLI

And there beside him sate upon the ground
 His wofull ladie, piteously complaying With loud laments that most unluckie
 stound,
 And her sad selfe with carefull hand constraying
 To wype his wounds, and ease their bitter payning.

Which sorie sight when Calidore did vew With heavie eyne, from teares uneach refrayning,
 His mightie hart their mournfull case can
 rew,
 And for their better comfort to them nigher
 drew.

XLII

Then speaking to the ladie, thus he sayd:
 'Ye dolefull dame, let not your griefe em-
 peach
 To tell what cruell hand hath thus arayd This knight unarm'd, with so unknighly breach
 Of armes, that if I yet him nigh may reach,
 I may avenge him of so foule despight.'
 The ladie, hearing his so courteous speach, Gan reare her eyes as to the chearefull light,
 And from her sory hart few heavie words forth sight:

XLIII

In which she shew'd, how that discourteous
 knight
 (Whom Tristram slew) them in that shadow found,
 Joying together in unblam'd delight,
 And him unarm'd, as now he lay on ground, Charg'd with his speare and mortally did
 wound,
 Withouten cause, but onely her to reave From him, to whom she was for ever
 bound:
 Yet when she fled into that covert greave, He, her not finding, both them thus nigh dead did leave.

XLIV

When Calidore this ruefull storie had Well understood, he gan of her demand, What manner wight he was, and how yelad, Which had this outrage wrought with wicked hand.
 She then, like as she best could understand, Him thus describ'd, to be of stature large,
 Clad all in gilden armes, with azure band Quartred athwart, and bearing in his targe A ladie on rough waves row'd in a sommer barge.

XLV

Then gan Sir Calidore to ghesse streight
 way,
 By manv signes which she described had,

That this was he whom Tristram earst did
slay,
And to her said: 'Dame, be no longer sad:
For he that hath your knight so ill bestad Is now him selfe in much more wretched
plight;
These eyes him saw upon the cold earth sprad,
The meede of his desert for that despight, Which to your selfe he wrought, and to your loved knight.

XLVI

'Therefore, faire lady, lay aside this grieft, Which ye have gathered to your gentle
hart,
For that displeasure; and thinke what re-
liefe
Were best devise for this your lovers smart, And how ye may him hence, and to what
part,
Convey to be recur'd.' She thankt him
deare,
Both for that newes he did to her impart,
And for the courteous care which he did
beare
Both to her love and to her selfe in that sad dreare.

XLVII

Yet could she not devise by any wit, How thence she might convey him to some
place.
For him to trouble she it thought unfit,
That was a straunger to her wretched case;
And him to beare, she thought it thing too
base.
Which when as he perceiv'd, he thus be-
spake:
'Faire lady, let it not you seeme disgrace,
To beare this burden on your dainty backe; My selfe will beare a part, coportion of your packe.'

XLVIII

So off he did his shield, and downeward
layd
Upon the ground, like to an hollow beare;
And powring balme, which he had long pur-vayd,
Into his wounds, him up thereon did reare,
And twixt them both with parted paines did
beare,
Twixt life and death, not knowing what was
donne.

Thence they him carried to a castle neare,
In which a worthy auncient knight did
wonne:
Where what ensu'd shall in next canto be begonne.

CANTO III

Calidore brings Priscilla home;
Pursues the Blatant Beast; Saves Serena, whilst Calepine
By Turpine is opprest.

I

TRUE is, that whilome that good poet sayd,
The gentle minde by gentle deeds is knowne:
For a man by nothing is so well bewrayd As by his manners, in which plaine is
showne
Of what degree and what race he is growne.
For seldome seene, a trotting stallion get An ambling colt, that is his proper owne:
So seldome seene, that one in basenesse set Doth noble courage shew, with courteous manners met.

II

But evermore contrary hath bene tryde,
That gentle bloud will gentle manners breed;
As well may be in Calidore descryde, By late ensample of that courteous deed Done to that wounded knight in his great
need,
Whom on his backe he bore, till he him
brought
Unto the castle where they had decreed.
There of the knight, the which that castle
ought,
To make abode that night he greatly was besought.

III

He was to weete a man of full ripe yeares, That in his youth had beene of mickle
might,
And borne great sway in armes amongst his
peares:
But now weake age had dimd his candle
light.
Yet was he courteous still to every wight,
And loved all that did to armes incline;
And was the father of that wounded knight, Whom Calidore thus carried on his chine;
And Aldus was his name, and his sonnes Aladine.

IV

Who, when he saw his sonne so ill bedight With bleeding wounds, brought home upon a beare

By a faire lady and a straunger knight,
Was inly touched with compassion deare,
And deare affection of so dolefull dreare,
That he these words burst forth: 'Ah, sory
boy!

Is this the hope that to my hoary heare Thou brings? aie me! is this the timely joy, Which I expected long, now turnd to sad annoy?

'Such is the weakenesse of all mortall hope;
So tickle is the state of earthly things,
That ere they come unto their aymed scope, They fall too short of our fraile reckonings,

And bring us bale and bitter sorrowings, In stead of comfort, which we should embrace:

This is the state of keasars and of kings.
Let none therefore, that is in meaner place, Too greatly grieve at any his unlucky case.'

VI

So well and wisely did that good old knight Temper his grieffe, and turned it to cheare, To cheare his guests, whom he had stayd that night,

And make their welcome to them well ap-
peare:

That to Sir Calidore was easie geare;
But that faire lady would be heard for
nought,

But sigh'd and sorrow'd for her lover deare,
And inly did afflict her pensive thought, With thinking to what case her name should now be brought.

VII

For she was daughter to a noble lord, Which dwelt thereby, who sought her to affy

To a great pere; but she did disaccord, Ne could her liking to his love apply, But lov'd this fresh young knight, who dwelt her ny,

The lusty Aladine, though meaner borne
And of lesse livelood and hability, Yet full of valour, the which did adorne His meannesse much, and make her th' others riches scorne.

VIII

So having both found fit occasion,
They met together in that luckelesse glade;
Where that proud knight in his presumption

The gentle Aladine did earst invade, Being unarm'd and set in secret shade.
Whereof she now bethinking, gan t' advize, How great a hazard she at earst had made
Of her good fame, and further gan devize, How she the blame might salve with coloured disguise.

IX

But Calidore with all good courtesie Fain'd her to frolicke, and to put away
The pensive fit of her melancholie;
And that old knight by all meanes did
assay

To make them both as merry as he may.
So they the evening past, till time of rest,
When Calidore in seemly good array Unto his bowre was brought, and, there undrest,

Did sleepe all night through weary travell of his quest.

X

But faire Priscilla (so that lady hight) Would to no bed, nor take no kindly
sleepe,

But by her wounded love did watch all
night,

And all the night for bitter anguish weepe,
And with her teares his wounds did wash and steepe.

So well she washt them, and so well she wacht him,

That of the deadly swound, in which full
deepe

He drenched was, she at the length dis-pacht him,

And drove away the stound which mortally attacht him.

XI

The morrow next, when day gan to up-
looke,

He also gan uplooke with drery eye,
Like one that out of deadly dreame awooke:
Where when he saw his faire Priscilla by,
He deeply sigh'd, and groaned inwardly, To thinke of this ill state in which she
stood,

To which she for his sake had weetingly

Now brought her selfe, and blam'd her noble blood:
For first, next after life, he tendered her
good.

XII

Which she perceiving, did with plenteous
teares

His care more then her owne compassionate, Forgetfull of her owne, to minde his feares:
So both conspiring, gan to intimate Each others griefe with zeale affectionate, And twixt them twaine with equall care to
cast,

How to save hole her hazarded estate;
For which the onely helpe now left them last Seem'd to be Calidore: all other helpes were past.

XIII

Him they did deeme, as sure to them he seemed,

A courteous knight, and full of faithfull
trust:

Therefore to him their cause they best esteemed

Whole to commit, and to his dealing just.
Earely, so soone as Titans beames forth
brust

Through the thicke clouds, in which they steeped lay

All night in darknesse, duld with yron rust, Calidore, rising up as fresh as day, Gan freshly him addresse unto his former way.

XIV

But first him seemed fit, that wounded
knight

To visite, after this nights perillous passe,
And to salute him, if he were in plight,
And eke that lady, his faire lovely lasse.

There he him found much better then he
was,

And moved speach to him of things of
course,

The anguish of his paine to overpasse:
Mongst which he namely did to him discourse

Of former daies mishap, his sorrowes wicked sourse.

XV

Of which occasion Aldine taking hold,
Gan breake to him the fortunes of his love,

And all his disadvantages to unfold;
That Calidore it dearly deepe did move.
In th' end, his kyndly courtesie to prove,
He him by all the bands of love besought,
And as it mote a faithfull friend behove, To safeconduct his love, and not for ought To leave, till to her fathers house he had her brought.

XVI

Sir Calidore his faith thereto did plight,
It to performe: so after little stay,
That she her selfe had to the journey dight,
He passed forth with her in faire array, Fearelesse, who ought did thinke or ought did say,

Sith his own thought he knew most cleare from wite.

So as they past together on their way,
He can devise this counter-cast of slight,
To give faire colour to that ladies cause in sight.

XVII

Streight to the carkasse of that knight he
went,

The cause of all this evill, who was slaine
The day before by just avengement Of noble Tristram, where it did remaine:
There he the necke thereof did cut in twaine, And tooke with him the head, the signe of
shame.

So forth he passed thorough that daies paine, Till to that ladies fathers house he came, Most pensive man, through feare, what of his childe became.

XVIII

There he arriving boldly, did present
The fearefull lady to her father deare, Most perfect pure, and guiltlesse innocent Of blame, as he did on his knighthood sweare, Since first he saw her, and did free from
feare

Of a discourteous knight, who her had reft,
And by outragious force away did beare:
Witness thereof he shew'd his head there
left,

And wretched life forlorne for vengement of his theft.

XIX

Most joyfull man her sire was, her to see,
And heare th' adventure of her late mis-
chance;

And thousand thanks to Calidore for fee
Of his large paines in her deliveraunce Did yeeld; ne lesse the lady did advance.
Thus having her restored trustily,
As he had vow'd, some small continuaunce
He there did make, and then most carefully Unto his first exploite he did him selfe apply.

XX

So as he was pursuing of his quest,
He chaunst to come whereas a jolly knight
In covert shade him selfe did safely rest,
To solace with his lady in delight:
His warlike armes he had from him undight;
For that him selfe he thought from daunger
free,
And far from envious eyes that mote him
spight.
And eke the lady was full faire to see,
And courteous withall, becomming her degreee.

XXI

To whom Sir Calidore approaching nye, Ere they were well aware of living wight, Them much abasht, but more him selfe
thereby,
That he so rudely did upon them light,
And troubled had their quiet loves delight.
Yet since it was his fortune, not his fault,
Him selfe thereof he labour'd to acquite,
And pardon crav'd for his so rash default, That he gainst courtesie so fowly did default.

XXII

With which his gentle words and goodly wit
He soone allayd that knights conceiv'd dis-
pleasure,
That he besought him downe by him to sit,
That they mote treat of things abroad at leasure;
And of adventures, which had in his measure
Of so long waies to him befallen late.
So downe he sate, and with delightfull
pleasure
His long adventures gan to him relate,
Which he endured had through daungerous debate.

XXIII

Of which whilest they discoursed both together,
The faire Serena (so his lady hight)

Allur'd with myldnesse of the gentle wether, And pleasaunce of the place, the which was
dight
With divers flowres distinct with rare de-
light, Wandred about the fields, as liking led Her wavering lust after her wandring sight,
To make a garland to adorne her hed, Without suspect of ill or daungers hidden dred.

XXIV

All sodainely out of the Forrest nere
The Blatant Beast forth rushing unaware, Caught her thus loosely wandring here and
there,
And in his wide great mouth away her bare, Crying aloud in vaine, to shew her sad mis-
fare
Unto the knights, and calling oft for ayde,
Who with the horrour of her haplesse care Hastily starting up, like men dismayde, Ran after fast to reskue the distressed mayde.

XXV

The Beast, with their pursuit incited more,
Into the wood was bearing her apace
For to have spoyled her, when Calidore, Who was more light of foote and swift in
chace,
Him overtooke in midst of his race:
And fiercely charging him with all his
might,
Forst to forgoe his pray there in the place,
And to betake him selfe to fearefull flight;
For he durst not abide with Calidore to fight.

XXVI

Who natheslesse, when he the lady saw There left on ground, though in full evil
plight,
Yet knowing that her knight now neare did
draw,
Staide not to succour her in that affright,
But follow'd fast the monster in his flight:
Through woods and hils he follow'd him so
fast,
That he nould let him breath nor gather
spright,
But forst him gape and gaspe, with dread aghasht,
As if his lungs and lites were nigh a sunder
brast.

XXVII

And now by this, Sir Calepine (so hight) Came to the place, where he his lady found In dolorous dismay and deadly plight, All in gore bloud there tumbled on the
ground,

Having both sides through grypt with griesly wound.

His weapons soone from him he threw away,
And stouping downe to her in dreary swound, Upreat'd her from the ground, whereon she
lay,

And in his tender armes her forced up to stay.

XXVIII

So well he did his busie paines apply,
That the faint sprite he did revoke againe
To her fraile mansion of mortality.

Then up he tooke her twixt his armes twaine,
And setting on his steede, her did sustaine With carefull hands, soft footing her be-
side,

Till to some place of rest they mote at-
taine,

Where she in safe assurance mote abide,
Till she recured were of those her woundes
wide.

XXIX

Now when as Phœbus with his fiery waine Unto his inne began to draw apace, Tho, waxing weary of that toylesome paine,
In travelling on foote so long a space, Not wont on foote with heavy armes to
trace,

Downe in a dale forby a rivers syde,
He chaunst to spie a faire and stately place,
To which he meant his weary steps to
guyde,

In hope there for his love some succour to provyde.

XXX

But comming to the rivers side he found That hardly passable on foote it was:
Therefore there still he stood as in a stound, Ne wist which way he through the foord mote pas.

Thus whilst he was in this distressed case, Devising what to doe, he nigh espyde
An armed knight approaching to the place,
With a faire lady lincked by his syde, The which themselves prepar'd thorough the foord to ride.

XXXI

Whom Calepine saluting (as became) Besought of courtesie, in that his neede, For safe conducting of his sickely dame Through that same perillous foord with better heede,

To take him up behinde upon his steed:
To whom that other did this taunt returne.
'Perdy, thou peasant knight, mightst rightly reed

Me then to be full base and evill borne, If I would beare behinde a burden of such scorene.

XXXII

'But as thou hast thy steed forlorne with
shame.

So fare on foote till thou another gayne,
And let thy lady likewise doe the same,
Or beare her on thy backe with pleasing
payne,

And prove thy manhood on the billowes
vayne.'

With which rude speach his lady much displeased,

Did him reprove, yet could him not re-
strayne,

And would on her owne palfrey him have eased,

For pittie of his dame, whom she saw so diseased.

XXXIII

Sir Calepine her thanckt, yet, inly wroth Against her knight, her gentlesse refused,
And carelesly into the river goth,
As in despite to be so fowle abused
Of a rude churle, whom often he accused Of fowle discourtesie, unfit for knight;
And strongly wading through the waves unused,

With speare in th' one hand, stayd him selfe upright,

With th' other staide his lady up with steddy might.

XXXIV

And all the while, that same discourteous
knight

Stood on the further bancke beholding him, At whose calamity, for more despite,
He laught, and mockt to see him like to swim.

But when as Calepine came to the brim,
And saw his carriage past that perill well,

Looking at that same carle with count'nance grim,
His heart with vengeance inwardly did
swell,
And forth at last did breake in speaches sharpe and fell:

XXXV

'Unknightly knight, the blemish of that
name,
And blot of all that armes upon them take,
Which is the badge of honour and of fame, Loe ! I defie thee, and here challenge make,
That thou for ever doe those armes forsake,
And be for ever held a recreant knight, Unlessse thou dare for thy deare ladies sake,
And for thine owne defence, on foote alight,
To justify thy fault gainst me in equall
fight.'

XXXVI

'The dastard, that did heare him selfe
defyde,
Seem'd not to weigh his threatfull words
at all,
But laught them out, as if his greater pryde Did scorne the challenge of so base a thrall:
Or had no courage, or else had no gall.
So much the more was Calepine offended,
That him to no revenge he forth could call,
But both his challenge and him selfe contemned,
Ne cared as a coward so to be condemned.

XXXVII

But he, nought weighing what he sayd or did,
Turned his steede about another way,
And with his lady to the castle rid,
Where was his won; ne did the other stay,
But after went directly as he may,
For his sicke charge some harbour there to
seeke;
Where he arriving with the fall of day, Drew to the gate, and there with prayers
meeke,
And myld entreaty, lodging did for her beseeke.

XXXVIII

But the rude porter, that no manners had,
Did shut the gate against him in his face,
And entraunce boldly unto him forbad.
Nathelesse the knight, now in so needy case, Gan him entreat even with submission base,

And humbly praid to let them in that night:
Who to him aunswer'd, that there was no
place
Of lodging fit for any errant knight, Unlessse that with his lord he formerly did
fight.

XXXIX

' Full loth am I,' quoth he, 'as now at earst, When day is spent, and rest us needeth most,
And that this lady, both whose sides are pearst
With wounds, is ready to forgo the ghost:
Ne would I gladly combate with mine host,
That should to me such curtesie afford,
Unlessse that I were thereunto enforst.
But yet aread to me, how hight thy lord, That doth thus strongly ward the castle of the ford.'

XL

' His name,' quoth he, 'if that thou list to
learne,
Is hight Sir Turpine, one of mickle might And manhood rare, but terrible and stearne In all assaies to every errant knight, Because of one that wrought him fowle
despight.'
' Ill seemes,' sayd he, 'if he so valiaunt be,
That he should be so sterne to stranger
wight:
For seldome yet did living creature see That curtesie and manhood ever disagree.

XLI

' But go thy waies to him, and fro me say,
That here is at his gate an errant knight, That house-rome craves, yet would be loth t' assay
The prooffe of battell, now in doubtfull night, Or curtesie with rudenesse to requite:
Yet if he needes will fight, crave leave till
morne,
And tell with all the lamentable plight
In which this lady languisheth forlorne, That pitty craves, as he of woman was yborne.'

XLII

The groome went streight way in, and to his lord Declar'd the message, which that knight did move;
Who sitting with his lady then at bord,
Not onely did not his demaund approve,

But both himselve reuil'd, and eke his love;
Albe his lady, that Blandina light, Him of ungentle usage did reprove, And earnestly entreated that they might Finde favour to be lodged there for that same night.

XLIII

Yet would he not perswaded be for ought,
Ne from his currish will a whit reclame.
Which answer when the grome returning
brought

To Calepine, his heart did inly flame With wrathfull fury for so foule a shame,
That he could not thereof avenged bee:
But most for pittie of his dearest dame, Whom now in deadly daunger he did see;
Yet had no meanes to comfort, nor procure her glee.

XLIV

But all in vaine; forwhy no remedy
He saw, the present mischiefe to redresse, But th' utmost end perforce for to aby, Which that nights fortune would for him addresse.

So downe he tooke his lady in distresse,
And layd her underneath a bush to sleepe, Cover'd with cold, and wrapt in wretched-
nesse, Whiles he him selfe all night did nought but weepe,
And wary watch about her for her safegard
keepe.

XLV

The morrow next, so soone as joyous day Did shew it selfe in sunny beames bedight, Serena full of dolorous dismay, Twixt darkenesse dread and hope of living
light, Uprear'd her head to see that chearefull
sight.

Then Calepine, how ever inly wroth,
And greedy to avenge that vile despight, Yet for the feeble ladies sake, full loth To make there lenger stay, forth on his journey goth.

XLVI

He goth on foote all armed by her side, Upstaying still her selfe uppon her steede, Being unhable else alone to ride;
So sore her sides, so much her wounds did bleede:

Till that at length, in his extreamest neede,
He chaunst far off an armed knight to spy, Pursuing him apace with greedy speede, Whom well he wist to be some enemy, That meant to make advantage of his misery.

XLVII

Wherefore he stayd, till that he nearer
drew,
To weet what issue would thereof betyde:
Tho, whenas he approched nigh in vew,
By certaine signes he plainely him descrived To be the man that with such scornefull
pryde
Had him abuse and shamed yesterday; Therefore misdoubting, least he should misgyde
His former malice to some new assay, He cast to keepe him selfe so safely as he may.

XLVIII

By this the other came in place likewise, And couching close his speare and all his
powre,
As bent to some malicious enterprise,
He bad him stand, t' abide the bitter stoure
Of his sore vengeance, or to make avoure Of the lewd words and deedes which he had done:
With that ran at him, as he would devoure His life attonce; who nought could do, but shun
The perill of his pride, or else be overrun.

XLIX

Yet he him still pursew'd from place to
place,
With full intent him cruelly to kill,
And like a wilde goate round about did
chace,
Flying the fury of his bloody will.
But his best succour and refuge was still Behinde his ladies backe, who to him cryde,
And called oft with prayers loud and shrill,
As ever he to lady was affyde, To spare her knight, and rest with reason pacifyde.

L

But he the more thereby enraged was,
And with more eager felnesse him pursew'd,
So that at length, after long weary chace, Having by chauce a close advantage vew'd,

He over raught him, having long eschew'd His violence in vaine, and with his spere Strooke through his shoulder, that the blood
 ensew'd

In great abundance, as a well it were,
That forth out of an hill fresh gushing did appere.

LI

Yet ceast he not for all that cruell wound,
But chaste him still, for all his ladies cry,
Not satisfyde till on the fatall ground
He saw his life powrd forth dispiteously:
The which was certes in great jeopardy, Had not a wondrous chaunce his reskue
 wrought,

And saved from his cruell villany:
Such chaunces oft exceed all humaine
 thought:

That in another canto shall to end be brought.

CANTO IV

Calepine by a salvage man From Turpine reskewed is;
And whylest an infant from a beare
He saves, his love doth misse.

I

LIKE as a ship with dreadfull storme long tost,

Having spent all her mastes and her ground-hold,

Now farre from harbour likely to be lost,
At last some fisher barke doth neare be-
 hold,

That giveth comfort to her courage cold:
Such was the state of this most courteous
 knight,

Being oppressed by that faytour bold,
That he remayned in most perilous plight,
And his sad ladie left in pitifull affright.

II

Till that by fortune, passing all foresight, A salvage man, which in those woods did
 wonne,

Drawne with that ladies loud and piteous shright,

Toward the same incessantly did ronue,
To understand what there was to be donne.
There he this most discourteous craven
 found,

As fiercely yet as when he first begonne

Chasing the gentle Calepine around, Ne sparing him the more for all his grievous wound.

III

The salvage man, that never till this houre Did taste of pittie, neither gentlesse knew, Seeing his sharpe assault and cruell stoure,
Was much emmoved at his perils vew,
That even his ruder hart began to rew,
And feele compassion of his evill plight, Against his foe that did him so pursew:
From whom he meant to free him, if he
 might,
And him avenge of that so villenous de-
 spight.

IV

Yet armes or weapon had he none to fight, Ne knew the use of warlike instruments, Save such as sudden rage him lent to smite.
But naked, without needfull vestiments To clad his corpse with meete habiliments, He cared not for dint of sword nor speere, No more then for the stroke of strawes or bents:

For from his mothers wombe, which him
 did beare,

He was invulnerable made by magicke leare.

V

He stayed not t' advize, which way were
 best

His foe t' assaile, or how himselfe to gard,
But with fierce fury and with force infest Upon him ran; who being well prepar'd,
His first assault full warily did ward, And with the push of his sharp-pointed
 speare

Full on the breast him strooke, so strong and hard

That forst him backe recoyle, and reele
 areare;

Yet in his bodie made no wound nor bloud appere.

VI

With that the wyld man more enraged
 grew,

Like to a tygre that hath mist his pray,
And with mad mood againe upon him
 flew,

Regarding neither speare, that mote him
 slay,

Nor his fierce steed, that mote him much
dismay:

The salvage nation doth all dread despize.
Tho on his shield he griple hold did lay,
And held the same so hard, that by no wize He could him force to loose, or leave his enterprize.

Long did he wrest and wring it to and fro,
And every way did try, but all in vaine:
For he would not his greedie grype forgoe, But hayld and puld with all his might and
maine,

That from his steed him nigh he drew
againe.

Who having now no use of his long speare, So nigh at hand, nor force his shield to
straine,

Both speare and shield, as things that needlesse were,

He quite forsooke, and fled himselfe away for feare.

VIII

But after him the wyld man ran apace,
And him pursewed with importune speed, (For he was swift as any bucke in chace)
And had he not in his extreamest need, Bene helped through the swiftnesse of his
steed,

He had him overtaken in his flight.

Who ever, as he saw him nigh succeed, Gan cry aloud with horrible affright,
And shrieked out, a thing uncomely for a knight.

IX

But when the salvage saw his labour vaine,
In following of him that fled so fast,
He wearie woxe, and backe return'd againe With speede unto the place whereas he last Had left that couple, nere their utmost
cast.

There he that knight full sorely bleeding
found,

And eke the ladie fearefully aghast,
Both for the perill of the present stound,
And also for the sharpnesse of her rankling wound.

X

For though she were right glad, so rid to bee From that vile lozell which her late offended,

Yet now no lesse encombrance she did see,
And perill, by this salvage man pretended; Gainst whom she saw no meanes to be defended,

By reason that her knight was wounded
sore.

Therefore her selfe she wholly recommended

To Gods sole grace, whom she did oft implore

To send her succour, being of all hope forlorel.

XI

But the wyld man, contrarie to her feare, Came to her creeping like a fawuing hound,
And by rude tokens made to her appeare His deepe compassion of her dolefull stound, Kissing his hands, and crouching to the
ground;

For other language had he none, nor speach,
But a soft murmure, and confused sound Of senselesse words, which Nature did him
teach,

T' expresse his passions, which his reason did empeach.

XII

And comming likewise to the wounded
knight,

When he beheld the streames of purple
blood

Yet flowing fresh, as moved with the sight, He made great mone after his salvage
mood,

And running streight into the thickest wood,
A certaine herbe from thence unto him
brought,

Whose vertue he by use well understood:
The juyce whereof into his wound he
wrought,

And stopt the bleeding straight, ere he it staunched thought.

XIII

Then taking up that recreants shield and
speare,

Which earst he left, he signes unto them
made,

With him to wend unto his wouning neare:
To which he easily did them perswade.

Farre in the Forrest, by a hollow glade, Covered with mossie shrubs, which spread-ding brode

Did underneath them make a gloomy shade;

Where foot of living creature never trode, Ne scarce wyld beasts durst come, there was this wights abode.

XIV

Thether he brought these unacquainted
 guests;
 To whom faire semblance, as he could, he shewed
 By signes, by lookes, and all his other gests.
 But the bare ground, with hoarie mosse bestrowed,
 Must be their bed, their pillow was unsowed, And the frutes of the forrest was their
 feast:
 For their bad stuard neither plough'd nor sowed,
 Ne fed on flesh, ne ever of wyld beast Did taste the bloud, obaying Natures first beheast.

XV

Yet howsoever base and meane it were,
 They tooke it well, and thanked God for
 all,
 Which had them freed from that deadly
 feare,
 And sav'd from being to that caytive thrall.
 Here they of force (as fortune now did fall) Compelled were themselves a while to rest, Glad of that easement, though it were but
 small;
 That having there their wounds awhile re-
 drest,
 They mote the abler be to passe unto the
 rest.

XVI

During which time, that wyld man did apply
 His best endeavour and his daily paine, In seeking all the woods both farre and nye For herbes to dresse their wounds; still seeming faine, When ought he did that did their lyking
 gaine.
 So as ere long he had that knightes wound Recured well, and made him whole againe:
 But that same ladies hurt no herbe he found Which could redresse, for it was inwardly unsound.

XVII

Now when as Calepine was woxen strong,
 Upon a day he cast abroad to wend,

To take the ayre and heare the thrushes
 song,
 Unarm'd, as fearing neither foe nor frend,
 And without sword his person to defend.
 There him befell, unlooked for before,
 An hard adventure with unhappie end,
 A cruell beare, the which an infant bore Betwixt his bloodie jawes, besprinkled all with gore.

XVIII

The litle babe did loudly srike and squall,
 And all the woods with piteous plaints did
 fill,
 As if his cry did meane for helpe to call To Calepine, whose eares those shriches
 shrill,
 Percing his hart, with pities point did thrill;
 That after him he ran with zealous haste,
 To rescue th' infant, ere he did him kill:
 Whom though he saw now somewhat over-
 past,
 Yet by the cry he follow'd, and pursewed
 fast.

XIX

Well then him chaunst his heavy armes to want,
 Whose burden mote empeach his needfull
 speed,
 And hinder him from libertie to pant:
 For having long time, as his daily weed, Them wont to weare, and wend on foot for
 need,
 Now wanting them he felt himsele so light,
 That like an hauke, which feeling her selfe
 freed
 From bels and jesses, which did let her flight, Him seem'd his feet did fly, and in their speed delight.

XX

So well he sped him, that the wearie beare Ere long he overtooke, and forst to stay,
 And without weapon him assaying neare, Compeld him soone the spoyle adowne to
 lay.
 Wherewith the beast, enrag'd to loose his
 pray,
 Upon him turned, and with greedie force
 And furie, to be crossed in his way, Gaping full wyde, did thinke without remorse
 To be aveng'd on him, and to devour his corse.

XXI

But the bold knight, no whit thereat dismayd,
 But catching up in hand a ragged stone,
 Which lay thereby (so Fortune him did ayde)
 Upon him ran, and thrust it all attone Into his gaping throte, that made him grone And gaspe for breath, that he nigh choked
 was,
 Being unable to digest that bone; Ne could it upward come, nor downward
 passe,
 Ne could he brooke the coldnesse of the stony masse.

XXII

Whom when as he thus combred did behold, Stryving in vaine that nigh his bowels brast,
 He with him closd, and laying mightie hold Upon his throte, did gripe his gorge so fast, That, wanting breath, him downe to ground he cast;
 And then oppressing him with urgent paine, Ere long enforst to breath his utmost blast, Gnashing his cruell teeth at him in vaine,
 And threatning his sharpe clawes, now wanting powre to straine.

XXIII

Then tooke he up betwixt his armes twaine
 The litle babe, sweet relickes of his pray;
 Whom pitying to heare so sore complaine,
 From his soft eyes the teares he wypt away,
 And from his face the filth that did it ray,
 And every litle limbe he searcht around,
 And every part that under sweathbands lay, Least that the beasts sharpe teeth had any
 wound
 Made in his tender flesh; but whole them all he found.

XXIV

So having all his bands againe uptyde, He with him thought backe to returne
 againe:
 But when he lookt about on every syde,
 To weet which way were best to entertaine, To bring him to the place where he would
 faine,
 He could no path nor tract of foot descry, Ne by inquirie learne, nor ghesse by ayme;
 For nought but woods and forrests farre and nye,
 That all about did close the compasse of his eye.

XXV

Much was he then encombred, ne could
 tell Which way to take: now west he went a
 while,
 Then north; then neither, but as fortune
 fell.
 So up and downe he wandred many a mile,
 With wearie travell and uncertaine toile, Yet nought the nearer to his journeyes end;
 And evermore his lovely litle spoile Crying for food did greatly him offend.
 So all that day in wandring vainely he did spend.

XXVI

At last, about the setting of the sunne, Him selfe out of the forest he did wynd,
 And by good fortune the plaine champion womne:
 Where looking all about, where he mote fynd
 Some place of succour to content his mynd,
 At length he heard under the forrests syde
 A voice, that seemed of some woman kynd Which to her selfe lamenting loudly cryde, And oft complayn'd of Fate, and Fortune oft defyde.

XXVII

To whom approaching, when as she perceived A stranger wight in place, her plaint she
 stayd,
 As if she doubted to have bene deceived,
 Or loth to let her sorrowes be bewrayd.
 Whom when as Calepine saw so dismayd, He to her drew, and with faire blandish-
 ment
 Her chearing up, thus gently to her sayd:
 'What be you, wofull dame, which thus lament?
 And for what cause declare, so mote ye not repent.'

XXVIII

To whom she thus: 'What need me, sir, to
 tell
 That which your selfe have earst ared so
 right?
 A wofull dame ye have me termed well;
 So much more wofull, as my wofull plight Cannot redressed be by living wight.'
 'Nathlesse,' quoth he, 'if need doe not you
 bynd,
 Doe it disclose, to ease your grieved spright:

Oftimes it haps, that sorrowes of the mynd Find remedie unsought, which seeking cannot fynd.'

XXIX

Then thus began the lamentable dame:
'Sith then ye needs will know the grieffe I
hoord,
I am th' unfortunate Matilde by name,
The wife of bold Sir Bruin, who is lord
Of all this land, late conquer'd by his sword
From a great gyant, called Cormoraunt; Whom he did overthrow by yonder foord,
And in three battailes did so deadly daunt,
That he dare not returne for all his daily
vaunt.

XXX

'So is my lord now seiz'd of all the land,
As in his fee, with peaceable estate,
And quietly doth hold it in his hand,
Ne any dares with him for it debate.
But to these happie fortunes cruell fate Hath joy'n'd one evill, which doth overthrow All these our joyes, and all our blisse abate;
And like in time to further ill to grow,
And all this land with endlesse losse to overflow.

XXXI

'For th' heavens, envying our prosperitie,
Have not vouchsaf't to graunt unto us twaine
The gladfull blessing of posteritie, Which we might see after our selves re-
maine
In th' heritage of our unhappie paine:
So that for want of heires it to defend,
All is in time like to returne againe
To that foule feend, who dayly doth attend To leape into the same after our lives end.

XXXII

'But most my lord is grieved herewithall, And makes exceeding mone, when he does
thinke
That all this land unto his foe shall fall, For which he long in vaine did sweat and
swinke,
That now the same he greatly doth for-thinke.
Yet was it sayd, there should to him a sonne Be gotten, not begotten, which should drinke
And dry up all the water which doth ronne In the next brooke, by whom that feend should be fordonne.

XXXIII

'Well hop't he then, when this was prophe-
side,
That from his sides some noble chyld should rise,
The which through fame should farre be magnifide,
And this proud gyant should with brave emprize Quite overthrow, who now ginnes to de-
spize
The good Sir Bruin, growing farre in yeaes; Who thinkes from me his sorrow all doth rise.
Lo! this my cause of grieffe to you ap-
peares;
For which I thus doe mourne, and poure forth ceaselesse teares.'

XXXIV

Which when he heard, he inly touched was With tender ruth for her unworthy grieffe,
And when he had devized of her case,
He gan in mind conceive a fit reliefe For all her paine, if please her make the priefe.
And having cheared her, thus said: 'Faire
dame,
In evils counsell is the comfort chiefe; Which though I be not wise enough to
frame,
Yet, as I well it meane, vouchsafe it without blame.

XXXV

'If that the cause of this your languish-
ment
Be lacke of children to supply your place, Lo! how good fortune doth to you present
This litle babe, of sweete and lovely face, And spotlesse spirit, in which ye may en-
chace
What ever formes ye list thereto apply, Being now soft and fit them to embrace;
Whether ye list him traine in chevalry,
Or nourse up in lore of learn'd philosophy.

XXXVI

'And certes it hath oftentimes bene seene, That of the like, whose linage was un-
knowne,
More brave and noble knights have rayسد
beene,
As their victorious deedes have often showen,

Being with fame through many nations blowen, Then those which have bene dandled in the lap.
Therefore some thought that those brave imps were sowen
Here by the gods, and fed with heavenly sap, That made them grow so high t' all honorable hap.'

XXXVII

The ladie, hearkning to his sensefull speach, Found nothing that he said unneet nor
geason,
Having oft seene it tryde, as he did teach.
Therefore inelyning to his goodly reason, Agreeing well both with the place and season,
She gladly did of that same babe accept,
As of her owne by liverey and seisin,
And having over it a litle wept, She bore it thence, and ever as her owne it kept.

XXXVIII

Right glad was Calepine to be so rid Of his young charge, whereof he skilled
nought:
Ne she lesse glad; for she so wisely did,
And with her husband under hand so
wrought,
That when that infant unto him she brought,
She made him thinke it surely was his owne,
And it in goodly thewes so well upbrought,
That it became a famous knight well knowne, And did right noble deedes, the which elswhere are showne.

XXXIX

But Calepine now being left alone
Under the greenwoods side in sorie plight, Withouten armes or steede to ride upon,
Or house to hide his head from heavens
spight,
Albe that dame, by all the meanes she might,
Him oft desired home with her to wend,
And offred him, his courtesie to requite, Both horse and armes, and what so else to
lend,
Yet he them all refusd, though thankd her as a frend;

XL

And for exceeding grieve which inly grew,
That he his love so lucklesse now had lost,

On the cold ground, maugre, himselve he
threw,
For fell despight, to be so sorely crost;
And there all night himselve in anguish tost, Vowing that never he in bed againe His limbes would rest, ne lig in ease em-
bost,
Till that his ladies sight he mote attaine, Or understand that she in safetie did re-
maine.

CANTO V

The salvage serves Serena well Till she Prince Arthure fynd;
Who her together with his squyre With th' hermit leaves behynd.

I

O WHAT an easie thing is to desery
The gentle blood, how ever it be wrapt In sad misfortunes foule deformity, And wretched sorrowes, which have often hapt!
For howsoever it may grow mis-shapt, Like this wyld man, being undisciplynd,
That to all vertue it may seeme unapt, Yet will it shew some sparkes of gentle
mynd,
And at the last breake forth in his owne proper kynd.

II

That plainely may in this wyld man be red,
Who, though he were still in this desert
wood, Mongst salvage beasts, both rudely borne
and bred,
Ne ever saw faire guize, ne learned good,
Yet shewd some token of his gentle blood
By gentle usage of that wretched dame.
For certes he was borne of noble blood, How ever by hard hap he hether came;
As ye may know, when time shall be to tell the same.

III

Who, when as now long time he lacked had The good Sir Calepine, that farre was
strayd,
Did wexe exceeding sorrowfull and sad,
As he of some misfortune were afrayd:
And leaving there this ladie all dismayd, Went forth streightway into the forrest
wyde,

To seeke if he perchance a sleepe were layd,
Or what so else were unto him betyde:
He sought him farre and neare, yet him no where he spyde.

IV

Tho, backe returning to that sorie dame,
He shewed semblant of exceeding mone, By speaking signes, as he them best could
frame;
Now wringing both his wretched hands in
one,
Now beating his hard head upon a stone,
That ruth it was to see him so lament.
By which she well perceiving what was done, Gan teare her hayre, and all her garments
rent,
And beat her breast, and piteously her selfe torment.

V

Upon the ground her selfe she fiercely
threw,
Regardlessse of her wounds, yet bleeding
rife,
That with their bloud did all the flore imbrew,
As if her breast new launcht with murdrous knife
Would streight dislodge the wretched wearie life.
There she long groveling and deepe gron-ing lay,
As if her vitall powers were at strife With stronger death, and feared their decay:
Such were this ladies pangs and dolorous assay.

VI

Whom when the salvage saw so sore dis-
trest,
He reared her up from the bloudie ground,
And sought, by all the meanes that he could best,
Her to recure out of that stony swound,
And staunch the bleeding of her dreary
wound.
Yet nould she be recomforted for nought, Ne cease her sorrow and impatient stound, But day and night did vex her carefull
thought,
And ever more and more her owne afflic-tion wrought.

VII

At length, when as no hope of his retourne She saw now left, she cast to leave the
place,
And wend abrode, though feeble and for-
lorne,
To seeke some comfort in that sorie case.
His steede, now strong through rest so long a space,
Well as she could, she got, and did bedight,
And being thereon mounted, forth did
pace,
Withouten guide, her to conduct aright, Or gard, her to defend from bold oppressors might.

VIII

Whom when her host saw readie to de-
part,
He would not suffer her alone to fare,
But gan himselfe addresse to take her part.
Those warlike armes, which Calepine whyl-
eare
Had left behind, he gan eftsoones prepare,
And put them all about himselfe unfit,
His shield, his helmet, and his curats bare;
But without sword upon his thigh to sit:
Sir Calepine himselfe away had hidden it.

IX

So forth they traveld, an uneven payre, That mote to all men seeme an uncouth
sight;
A salvage man matcht with a ladie fayre, That rather seem'd the conquest of his
might,
Gotten by spoyle, then purchaced aright.
But he did her attend most carefully, And faithfully did serve both day and
night,
Withouten thought of shame or villeny,
Ne ever shewed signe of foule disloyalty.

X

Upon a day, as on their way they went,
It chaunst some furniture about her steed
To be disordred by some accident:
Which to redresse, she did th' assistance
need
Of this her groome, which he by signes did
reede,
And streight his combrous armes aside did
lay Upon the ground, withouten doubt or
dreed,

And in his homely wize began to assay T' amend what was amisse, and put in right aray.

XI

Bout which whilest he was busied thus
 hard,

Lo where a knight together with his squire,
 All arm'd to point, came ryding thether-
 ward,

Which seemed by their portance and attire,
 To be two errant knights, that did inquire After adventures, where they mote them
 get.

Those were to weet (if that ye it require) Prince Arthur and young Timias, which met

By straunge occasion, that here needs forth be set.

XII

After that Timias had againe recured
 The favour of Belphebe, (as ye heard)
 And of her grace did stand againe assured,
 To happie blisse he was full high uprear'd, Nether of envy nor of change afear'd, Though many foes did him maligne there-
 fore,

And with unjust detraction him did beard;
 Yet he himselte so well and wisely bore,
 That in her souveraine lyking he dwelt ever-
 more.

XIII

But of them all which did his ruine seeke, Three mightie enemies did him most de-
 spight,

Three mightie ones, and cruell minded eeke, That him not onely sought by open might
 To overthrow, but to supplant by slight.

The first of them by name was cald Despetto,

Exceeding all the rest in powre and hight;
 The second, not so strong, but wise, Decetto;

The third, nor strong nor wise, but spight-fullest, Defetto.

XIV

Oftimes their sundry powres they did employ,

And severall deceipts, but all in vaine:
 For neither they by force could him destroy,

Ne yet entrap in treasons subtill traine.

Therefore conspiring all together plaine, They did their counsels now in one compound;

Where singled forces faile, conjoynd may
 gaine.

The Blatant Beast the fittest meanes they
 found,

To worke his utter shame, and throughly him confound.

XV

Upon a day, as they the time did waite, When he did raunge the wood for salvage
 game,

They sent that Blatant Beast to be a baite,
 To draw him from his deare beloved dame Unwares into the daunger of defame.

For well they wist that squire to be so
 bold,

That no one beast in forrest, wyld or tame, Met him in chase, but he it challenge would,
 And plucke the pray oftimes out of their greedy hould.

XVI

The hardy boy, as they devised had,
 Seeing the ugly monster passing by,
 Upon him set, of perill nought adrad, Ne skilfull of the uncouth jeopardy;
 And charged him so fierce and furiously,
 That, his great force unable to endure,
 He forced was to turne from him and fly:
 Yet, ere he fled, he with his tooth impure Him heedlesse bit, the whiles he was thereof secure.

XVII

Securely he did after him pursue, Thinking by speed to overtake his flight; Who through thicke woods and brakes and briers him drew,

To weary him the more, and waste his
 spight,

So that he now has almost spent his spright:
 Till that at length unto a woody glade He came, whose covert stopt his further
 sight;

There his three foes, shrowded in guilefull
 shade,

Out of their ambush broke, and gan him to invade.

XVIII

Sharpely they all attonce did him assaile, Burning with inward rancour and despight,

And heaped strokes did round about him
 haile
 With so huge force, that seemed nothing
 might Beare off their blowes from percing thorough quite.
 Yet he them all so warily did ward,
 That none of them in his soft flesh did bite,
 And all the while his backe for best safe-
 gard
 He lent against a tree, that backward onset bard.

XIX

Like a wyld bull, that, being at a bay,
 Is bayted of a mastiffe and a hound And a curre-dog, that doe him sharpe as-
 say
 On every side, and beat about him round;
 But most that curre, barking with bitter
 sownd,
 And creeping still behinde, doth him incomber,
 That in his chauffe he digs the trampled
 ground,
 And threats his horns, and bellowes like the thounder:
 So did that squire his foes disperse and drive asonder.

XX

Him well behoved so; for his three foes Sought to encompass him on every side,
 And dangerously did round about enclose.
 But most of all Defetto him annoyde, Creeping behinde him still to have de-stroyde;
 So did Decetto eke him circumvent;
 But stout Despetto, in his greater pryde, Did front him face to face against him
 bent:
 Yet he them all withstood, and often made relent.

XXI

Till that at length, nigh tyrd with former
 chace,
 And weary now with carefull keeping ward, He gan to shrinke, and somewhat to give
 place,
 Full like ere long to have escaped hard;
 When as unwares he in the forrest heard A trampling steede, that with his neighing
 fast
 Did warne his rider be upon his gard;

With noise whereof the squire, now nigh
 aghast, Revived was, and sad dispaire away did
 cast.

XXII

Eftsoones he spide a knight approaching nye, Who, seeing one in so great daunger set Mongst many foes, him selfe did faster hye,
 To reskue him, and his weake part abet,
 For pitty so to see him overset.
 Whom soone as his three enemies did vew, They fled, and fast into the wood did get:
 Him booted not to thinke them to pursew,
 The covert was so thicke, that did no passage shew.

XXIII

Then turning to that swaine, him well he
 knew
 To be his Timias, his owne true squire:
 Whereof exceeding glad, he to him drew,
 And him embracing twixt his armes entire,
 Him thus bespake: 'My lief, my lifes
 desire,
 Why have ye me alone thus long yleft?
 Tell me, what worlds despight, or heavens
 yre,
 Hath you thus long away from me bereft?
 Where have ye all this while bin wandring, where bene weft?'

XXIV

With that he sighed deepe for inward tyne:
 To whom the squire nought answered
 againe,
 But shedding few soft teares from tender
 eyne,
 His deare affect with silence did restraine,
 And shut up all his plaint in privy paine.
 There they awhile some gracious speaches
 spent,
 As to them seemed fit time to entertaine.
 After all which up to their steedes they
 went,
 And forth together rode, a comely complement.

XXV

So now they be arrived both in sight
 Of this wyld man, whom they full busie
 found
 About the sad Serena things to dight, With those brave armours lying on the
 ground,

That seem'd the spoile of some right well
renownd.
Which when that squire beheld, he to them
stept,
Thinking to take them from that hylding
hound:
But he it seeing, lightly to him leapt, And sternely with strong hand it from his handling kept.

XXVI

Gnashing his grinded teeth with griesly
looke,
And sparkling fire out of his furious eyne, Him with his fist unwares on th' head he
strooke,
That made him downe unto the earth en-
cline;
Whence soone upstarting, much he gan repine,
And laying hand upon his wrathfull blade, Thought therewithall forthwith him to have
slaine;
Who it perceiving, hand upon him layd, And greedily him griping, his avengement
stayd.

XXVII

With that aloude the faire Serena cryde Unto the knight, them to dispart in twaine:
Who to them stepping did them soone
divide,
And did from further violence restraine,
Albe the wyld-man hardly would refraine.
Then gan the Prince of her for to demand,
What and from whence she was, and by what
traine
She feil into that salvage villaines hand,
And whether free with him she now were,
or in band.

XXVIII

To whom she thus: 'I am, as now ye see,
The wretchedst dame, that live this day on
ground,
Who both in minde, the which most grieveth
me,
And body have receiv'd a mortall wound,
That hath me driven to this dreery stound.
I was erewhile the love of Calepine,
Who whether he alive be to be found, Or by some deadly chaunce be done to pine,
Since I him lately lost, uneach is to define.

XXIX

'In salvage forrest I him lost of late,
Where I had surely long ere this bene dead,
Or else remained in most wretched state,
Had not this wylde man in that wofull stead Kept and delivered me from deadly dread.
In such a salvage wight, of brutish kynd, Amongst wilde beastes in desert forrests
bred,
It is most straunge and wonderfull to fynd
So milde humanity and perfect gentle mynd.

XXX

'Let me therefore this favour for him finde, That ye will not your wrath upon him
wreake,
Sith he cannot expresse his simple minde, Ne yours conceive, ne but by tokens speake:
Small praise to prove your powre on wight so weake.'
With such faire words she did their heate
asswage,
And the strong course of their displeasure
breake,
That they to pittie turnd their former rage,
And each sought to supply the office of her page.

XXXI

So having all things well about her dight,
She on her way east forward to proceede, And they her forth conducted, where they
might Finde harbour fit to comfort her great neede.
For now her wounds corruption gan to breed;
And eke this squire, who likewise wounded
was
Of that same monster late, for lacke of
heed,
Now gan to faint, and further could not pas Through feeblenesse, which all his limbes oppressed has.

XXXII

So forth they rode together all in troupe, To seeke some place, the which mote yeeld some ease
To these sicke twaine, that now began to droupe:
And all the way the Prince sought to appease
The bitter anguish of their sharpe disease, By all the courteous meanes he could invent;

Somewhile with merry purpose fit to please,
And otherwhile with good encouragement,
To make them to endure the pains did them torment.

XXXIII

Mongst which, Serena did to him relate The foule discourtsies and unknighly
parts,

Which Turpine had unto her shewed late,
Without compassion of her cruell smarts, Although Blandina did with all her arts Him otherwise perswade, all that she
might;

Yet he of malice, without her desarts,
Not only her excluded late at night,
But also trayterously did wound her weary knight.

XXXIV

Wherewith the Prince sore moved, there avoud

That, soone as he returned backe againe,
He would avenge th' abuses of that proud And shamefull knight, of whom she did complaine.

This wize did they each other entertaine,
To passe the tedious travell of the way;
Till towards night they came unto a plaine,
By which a little hermitage there lay, Far from all neighbourhood, the which annoy it may.

XXXV

And nigh thereto a little chappell stooode, Which being all with yvy overspred, Deckt all the rooffe and shadowing the roode, Seem'd like a grove faire braunched over
hed:

Therein the hermite, which his life here led In streight observaunce of religious vow, Was wont his howres and holy things to bed;

And therein he likewise was praying now, Whenas these knights arriv'd, they wist not where nor how.

XXXVI

They stayd not there, but streight way in did pas.

Whom when the hermite present saw in
place,
From his devotion streight he troubled was;
Which breaking of, he toward them did
pace,

With stayed steps and grave beseeching
grace:

For well it seem'd that whilome he had
beene

Some goodly person, and of gentle race, That could his good to all, and well did
weene,

How each to entertaine with curt'sie well beseene.

XXXVII

And soothly it was sayd by common fame,
So long as age enabled him thereto,
That he had bene a man of mickle name, Renowned much in armes and derring doe:
But being aged now and weary to Of warres delight and worlds contentious
toyle,

The name of knighthood he did disavow, And hanging up his armes and warlike
spoyle,

From all this worlds incombraunce did himselve assoyle.

XXXVIII

He thence them led into his hermitage, Letting their steedes to graze upon the
greene:

Small was his house, and like a little cage, For his owne turne, yet inly neate and
elene,

Deckt with greene boughes and flowers gay
beseene.

Therein he them full faire did entertaine, Not with such forged showes, as fitter
beene

For courting fooles, that curtesies would
faire,

But with entire affection and appearance
plaine.

XXXIX

Yet was their fare but homely, such as hee Did use his feeble body to sustaine;

The which full gladly they did take in gree,
Such as it was, ne did of want complaine,
But being well suffiz'd, them rested faire.

But faire Serene all night could take no
rest,

Ne yet that gentle squire, for grievous
paine

Of their late woundes, the which the Blatant Beast

Had given them, whose grieffe through saffraunce sore increast.

XL

So all that night they past in great disease, Till that the morning, bringing earely light To guide mens labours, brought them also
 ease,
 And some asswagement of their painefull
 plight.
 Then up they rose, and gan them selves to
 dight Unto their journey; but that squire and
 dame
 So faint and feeble were, that they ne
 might Endure to travell, nor one foote to frame:
 Their hearts were sicke, their sides were sore, their fecte were lame.

XLI

Therefore the Prince, whom great affaires in mynd
 Would not permit to make there lenger
 stay,
 Was forced there to leave them both behynd,
 In that good hermits charge, whom he did
 pray
 To tend them well. So forth he went his
 way,
 And with him eke the salvage, that whyl-
 eare,
 Seeing his royall usage and array,
 Was greatly growne in love of that brave
 pere,
 Would needes depart, as shall declared be elsewhere.

CANTO VI

The hermite heales both squire and dame
 Of their sore maladies;
 He Turpine doth defeat, and shame
 For his late villanies.

I

No wound, which warlike hand of enemy Inflicts with dint of sword, so sore doth light As doth the poysnous sting, which infamy Infixeth in the name of noble wight:
 For by no art, nor any leaches might,
 It ever can recured be againe; Ne all the skill, which that immortal
 spright
 Of Podalyrius did in it retaine, Can remedy such hurts; such hurts are hellish paine.

II

Such were the wounds the which that Blatant Beast Made in the bodies of that squire and
 dame;
 And being such, were now much more in-
 creast,
 For want of taking heede unto the same,
 That now corrupt and curelesse they became.
 Howbe that carefull hermite did his best,
 With many kindes of medicines meete, to tame
 The poysnous humour, which did most infest Their ranckling wounds, and every day them duely drest.

III

For he right well in leaches craft was seene, And through the long experience of his
 dayes,
 Which had in many fortunes tossed beene,
 And past through many perillous assayes,
 He knew the diverse went of mortall wayes,
 And in the mindes of men had great insight;
 Which with sage counsell, when they went
 astray,
 He could enforme, and them reduce aright, And all the passions heale, which wound the weaker spright.

IV

For whylome he had bene a doughty
 knight,
 As any one that lived in his daies,
 And proved oft in many perillous fight,
 Of which he grace and glory wonne al-
 waies,
 And in all battels bore away the baies.
 But being now attacht with timely age,
 And weary of this worlds unquiet waies,
 He tooke him selfe unto this hermitage, In which he liv'd alone, like carelesse bird in cage.

V

One day, as he was searching of their wounds,
 He found that they had festred privily,
 And ranckling inward with unruly stounds,
 The inner parts now gan to putrify, That quite they seem'd past helpe of surgery,
 And rather needed to be disciplinde With holesome reede of sad sobriety,

'To rule the stubborne rage of passion
blinde:
Give salves to every sore, but counsell to the minde.

VI

So taking them apart into his cell,
He to that point fit speaches gan to frame,
As he the art of words knew wondrous
well,
And eke could doe, as well as say, the
same,
And thus he to them sayd: 'Faire daughter dame,
And you, faire sonne, which here thus long now lie
In piteous languor, since ye hither came,
In vaine of me ye hope for remedie,
And I likewise in vaine doe salves to you applie.

'For in your selfe your onely helpe doth lie, To heale your selves, and must proceed
alone
From your owne will to cure your maladie.
Who can him cure, that will be cur'd of
none?
If therefore health ye seeke, observe this
one.
First learne your outward sences to refraine
From things that stirre up fraile affection; Your eies, your eares, your tongue, your talke restraine From that they most affect, and in due termes containe.

VIII

'For from those outward sences, ill affected,
The seede of all this evill first doth spring,
Which at the first, before it had infected, Mote easie be suppress with little thing:
But being growen strong, it forth doth
bring Sorrow, and anguish, and impatient paine
In th' inner parts, and lastly, scattering Contagious poyson close through every
vaine,
It never rests, till it have wrought his finall bane.

IX

'For that beastes teeth, which wounded you tofore,
Are so exceeding venemous and keene,

Made all of rusty yron, ranckling sore, That where they bite, it booteth not to
weene
With salve, or antidote, or other mene, It ever to amend: ne marvaile ought;
For that same beast was bred of hellish
strene,
And long in darksome Stygian den up-
brought,
Begot of foule Echidna, as in bookes is taught.

'Echidna is a monster direfull dred, Whom gods doe hate, and heavens abhor to
see;
So hideous is her shape, so huge her hed,
That even the hellish fiends affrighted bee At sight thereof, and from her presence
flee:
Yet did her face and former parts professe
A faire young mayden, full of comely glee;
But all her hinder parts did plaine expresse A monstrous dragon, full of fearefull uglynesse.

XI

'To her the gods, for her so dreadfull face, In fearefull darkenesse, furthest from the
skie,
And from the earth, appointed have her
place
Mongst rocks and caves, where she enroll doth lie
In hideous horror and obscurity, Wasting the strength of her immortall age.
There did Typhaon with her company, Cruell Typhaon, whose tempestuous rage Make th' heavens tremble oft, and him with vowes asswage.

XII

'Of that commixtion they did then beget This hellish dog, that hight the Blatant Beast;
A wicked monster, that his tongue doth whet Gainst all, both good and bad, both most and least,
And poures his poysnous gall forth to infest
The noblest wights with notable defame:
Ne ever knight, that bore so lofty creast, Ne ever lady of so honest name, But he them spotted with reproch, or secrete shame.

XIII

'In vaine therefore it were, with medicine
To goe about to salve such kynd of sore,
That rather needes wise read and discipline, Then outward salves, that may augment it more.'

'Aye me!' said then Serena, sighing sore,
'What hope of helpe doth then for us remaine, If that no salves may us to health restore?'
'But sith we need good counsell,' sayd the swaine,
'Aread, good sire, some counsell, that may us sustaine.'

XIV

'The best,' sayd he, 'that I can you advise,
Is to avoide the occasion of the ill:
For when the cause, whence evill doth arise, Removed is, th' effect surceaseth still.
Abstaine from pleasure, and restraîne your will,
Subdue desire, and bridle loose delight, Use scanted diet, and forbear your fill,
Shun secresie, and talke in open sight:
So shall you soone repaire your present evill plight.'

XV

Thus having sayd, his sickely patients Did gladly hearken to his grave behest,
And kept so well his wise commaundements,
That in short space their malady was ceast,
And eke the biting of that harmefull beast Was throughly heal'd. Tho when they did perceave Their wounds recur'd, and forces reincreast,
Of that good hermite both they tooke their leave,
And went both on their way, ne ech would other leave:

XVI

But each the other vow'd t' accompany:
The lady, for that she was much in dred,
Now left alone in great extremity;
The squire, for that he courteous was indeed,
Would not her leave alone in her great need.
So both together traveld, till they met With a faire mayden clad in mourning weed,

Upon a mangy jade unmeetely set,
And a lewd foole her leading thorough dry and wet.

XVII

But by what meanes that shame to her befell,
And how thereof her selfe she did acquite,
I must a while forbear to you to tell;
Till that, as comes by course, I doe recite What fortune to the Briton Prince did lite, Pursuing that proud knight, the which whileare Wrought to Sir Calepine so foule despight;
And eke his lady, though she sickely were,
So lewdly had abusde, as ye did lately heare.

XVIII

The Prince, according to the former token, Which faire Serene to him delivered had,
Pursu'd him streight, in mynd to bene ywroken
Of all the vile demeane, and usage bad,
With which he had those two so ill bestad:
Ne wight with him on that adventure went,
But that wyld man, whom though he oft forbad, Yet for no bidding, nor for being shent,
Would he restrayned be from his attendement.

XIX

Arriving there, as did by chaunce befall, He found the gate wyde ope, and in he rode,
Ne stayd, till that he came into the hall:
Where soft dismounting like a weary lode,
Upon the ground with feeble feete he trode,
As he unable were for very neede
To move one foote, but there must make abode;
The whiles the salvage man did take his steede,
And in some stable neare did set him up to feede.

XX

Ere long to him a homely groome there came,
That in rude wise him asked, what he was,
That durst so boldly, without let or shame,
Into his lords forbidden hall to passe.
To whom the Prince, him fayning to embase, Mylde answer made, he was an errant knight,
The which was fall'n into this feeble case

Through many wounds, which lately he in
fight
Received had, and prayd to pittie his ill
plight.

XXI

But he, the more outrageous and bold, Sternely did bid him quickly thence avaunt,
Or deare aby, forwhy his lord of old Did hate all errant knights, which there did haunt,
Ne lodging would to any of them graunt;
And therefore lightly bad him packe away,
Not sparing him with bitter words to taunt;
And therewithall rude hand on him did
lay,
To thrust him out of dore doing his worst assay.

XXII

Which when the salvage, comming now in
place,
Beheld, eftsoones he all enraged grew,
And running straight upon that villaine
base,
Like a fell lion at him fiercely flew,
And with his teeth and nailes, in present
vew,
Him rudely rent, and all to peeces tore:
So miserably him all helpelesse slew, That with the noise, whilst he did loudly
rore,
The people of the house rose forth in great uprore.

XXIII

Who when on ground they saw their fellow
slaine,
And that same knight and salvage standing
by,
Upon them two they fell with might and
maine,
And on them layd so huge and horribly,
As if they would have slaine them presently.
But the bolde Prince defended him so well,
And their assault withstood so mightily,
That, maugre all their might, he did repell And beat them back, whilst many underneath him fell.

XXIV

Yet he them still so sharply did pursew, That few of them he left alive, which
fled,

Those evill tidings to their lord to shew.
Who hearing how his people badly sped, Came forth in hast: where when as wit:
the dead

He saw the ground all strow'd, and that same knight
And salvage with their bloud fresh steeming red,
He woxe nigh mad with wrath and fell de-
spight,
And with reprochfull words him thus bespake on hight:

XXV

'Art thou he, traytor, that with treason
vile
Hast slaine my men in this unmanly maner,
And now triumphest in the piteous spoile Of these poore folk, whose soules with black dishonour
And foule defame doe decke thy bloody baner?
The meede whereof shall shortly be thy
shame,
And wretched end, which still attendeth on
her.'
With that him selfe to battell he did frame; So did his forty yeomen, which there with him came.

XXVI

With dreadfull force they all did him assaile,
And round about with boystrous strokes
opresse,
That on his shield did rattle like to haile
In a great tempest; that, in such distresse, He wist not to which side him to addresse.
And evermore that craven cowherd knight
Was at his backe with heartlesse heedinesse, Wayting if he unwares him murther might:
For cowardize doth still in villany delight.

XXVII

Whereof whenas the Prince was well aware,
He to him turnd with furious intent,
And him against his powre gan to prepare;
Like a fierce bull, that being busie bent
To fight with many foes about him ment, Feeling some curre behinde his heeles to bite, Turnes him about with fell avengement; So likewise turnde the Prince upon the
knight,
And layd at him amaine with all his will
and might.

XXVIII

Who when he once his dreadfull strokes had tasted, Durst not the furie of his force abyde,
 But turn'd abacke, and to retyre him hasted Through the thicke prease, there thinking him to hyde.
 But when the Prince had once him plainly
 eyde,
 He foot by foot him followed alway, Ne would him suffer once to shrinke asyde,
 But joyning close, huge lode at him did lay:
 Who flying still did ward, and warding fly
 away.

XXIX

But when his foe he still so eger saw,
 Unto his heeles himselfe he did betake, Hoping unto some refuge to withdraw: Ne would the Prince him ever foot for-
 sake,
 Where so he went, but after him did make.
 He fled from roome to roome, from place to
 place,
 Whylest every joynt for dread of death did
 quake,
 Still looking after him that did him chace;
 That made him evermore increase his speedie pace.

XXX

At last he up into the chamber came,
 Whereas his love was sitting all alone, Wayting what tydings of her folke became.
 There did the Prince him overtake anone, Crying in vaine to her, him to bemone;
 And with his sword him on the head did smyte,
 That to the ground he fell in senselesse swone:
 Yet whether thwart or flatly it did lyte,
 The tempred steele did not into his brayne-pan byte.

XXXI

Which when the ladie saw, with great
 affright
 She starting up, began to shriek aloud, And with her garment covering him from
 sight,
 Seem'd under her protection him to shroud;
 And falling lowly at his feet, her bowd Upon her knee, intreating him for grace, And often him besought, and prayd, and
 vowd;

That, with the ruth of her so wretched
 case,
 He stayd his second strooke, and did his hand abase.

XXXII

Her weed she then withdrawing, did him discover,
 Who now come to himselfe, yet would not
 rize,
 But still did lie as dead, and quake, and quiver,
 That even the Prince his basenesse did de-
 spize,
 And eke his dame, him seeing in such
 guize,
 Gan him recomfort, and from ground to
 reare.
 Who rising up at last in ghastly wize,
 Like troubled ghost did dreadfully appeare, As one that had no life him left through former feare.

XXXIII

Whom when the Prince so deadly saw dis-
 mayd,
 He for such basenesse shamefully him shent,
 And with sharpe words did bitterly up-
 brayd:
 'Vile cowheard dogge, now doe I much repent,
 That ever I this life unto thee lent, Whereof thou, caytive, so unworthie art;
 That both thy love, for lacke of hardiment,
 And eke thy selfe, for want of manly hart,
 And eke all knights hast shamed with this knightlesse part.

XXXIV

'Yet further hast thou heaped shame to
 shame,
 And crime to crime, by this thy cowheard
 feare.
 For first it was to thee reprochfull blame, To erect this wicked custome, which I
 heare Gainst errant knights and ladies thou dost
 reare;
 Whom, when thou mayst, thou dost of arms despoile,
 Or of their upper garment which they weare: Yet dost thou not with manhood, but with
 guile, Maintaine this evill use, thy foes thereby to foile.

XXXV

'And lastly, in approvance of thy wrong
To shew such faintnesse and foule cowardize Is greatest shame: for oft it falles, that
strong

And valiant knights doe rashly enterprize, Either for fame, or else for exercize,
A wrongfull quarrell to maintaine by fight; Yet have, through prowesse and their brave
emprize,

Gotten great worship in this worldes sight:
For greater force there needs to maintaine wrong then right.

XXXVI

'Yet since thy life unto this ladie fayre
I given have, live in reproch and scorne; Ne ever armes, ne ever knighthood dare Hence to professe: for shame is to adorne
With so brave badges one so basely borne;
But onely breath, sith that I did forgive.'
So having from his craven bodie torne Those goodly armes, he them away did give,
And onely suffred him this wretched life to live.

XXXVII

There whilest he thus was setling things
above,

Atwene that ladie myld and recreant knight,
To whom his life he graunted for her love, He gan bethinke him, in what perilous
plight

He had behynd him left that salvage wight, Amongst so many foes, whom sure he
thought

By this quite slaine in so unequall fight: Therefore descending backe in haste, he
sought

If yet he were alive, or to destruction
brought.

XXXVIII

There he him found environed about With slaughtred bodies, which his hand had
slaine,

And laying yet a fresh, with courage stout,
Upon the rest that did alive remaine; Whom he likewise right sorely did con-
straine,

Like scattedd sheepe, to seeke for safetie,
After he gotten had with busie paine
Some of their weapons which thereby did lie, With which he layd about, and made them fast to flie.

XXXIX

Whom when the Prince so felly saw to rage, Approching to him neare, his hand he stayd, And sought, by making signes, him to as-
swage:

Who them perceiving, streight to him
obayd,

As to his lord, and downe his weapons layd,
As if he long had to his heasts bene trayned.
Thence he him brought away, and up con-
vayd

Into the chamber, where that dame remayned

With her unworthy knight, who ill him entertayned.

XL

Whom when the salvage saw from daunger
free,

Sitting beside his ladie there at ease,
He well remembered that the same was hee Which lately sought his lord for to dis-
please:

Tho all in rage, he on him streight did seaze,

As if he would in peeces him have rent;
And were not that the Prince did him ap-peaze,

He had not left one limbe of him unrent:
But streight he held his hand at his commandement.

XLI

Thus having all things well in peace or-dayned,

The Prince himselfe there all that night
did rest,

Where him Blandina fayrely entertayned, With all the courteous glee and goodly
feast

The which for him she could imagine best.
For well she knew the wayes to win good
will

Of every wight, that were not too infest, And how to please the minds of good and
ill,

Through tempering of her words and lookes by wondrous skill.

XLII

Yet were her words and lookes but false and fayned,

To some hid end to make more easie way, Or to allure such fondlings, whom she travned

Into her trap unto their owne decay: Thereto, when needed, she could weepe and
 pray,
 And when her listed, she could fawne and flatter;
 Now smyling smoothly, like to sommers
 day,
 Now glooming sadly, so to cloke her matter;
 Yet were her words but wynd, and all her teares but water.

XLIII

Whether such grace were given her by
 kynd,
 As women wont their guilefull wits to
 guyde,
 Or learn'd the art to please, I doe not fynd.
 This well I wote, that she so well applyde Her pleasing tongue, that soone she pacifyde
 The wrathfull Prince, and wrought her husbands peace.
 Who nathelless not therewith satisfyde,
 His rancorous despight did not release, Ne secretly from thought of fell revenge
 surceasse.

XLIV

For all that night, the whyles the Prince did rest
 In carelesse couch, not weeting what was
 ment,
 He watcht in close awayt with weapons
 prest,
 Willing to worke his villenous intent
 On him that had so shamefully him shent:
 Yet durst he not for very cowardize Effect the same, whylest all the night was
 spent.
 The morrow next the Prince did early rize,
 And passed forth, to follow his first enter-
 prize.

CANTO VII

Turpine is bafful; his two knights Doe gaine their treasons meed.
 Fayre Mirabellæes punishment
 For loves disdainde decreed.

I

LIKE as the gentle hart it selfe bewrayes
 In doing gentle deedes with franke delight, Even so the baser mind it selfe displays In cancred malice and revengefull spight.

For to maligne, t' envie, t' use shifting slight,
 Be arguments of a vile donghill mind,
 Which what it dare not doe by open might,
 To worke by wicked treason wayes doth
 find,
 By such discourteous deeds discovering his base kind.

II

That well appears in this discourteous
 knight,
 The coward Turpine, whereof now I treat;
 Who notwithstanding that in former fight
 He of the Prince his life received late, Yet in his mind malicious and ingrate
 He gan devize to be aveng'd anew For all that shame, which kindled inward
 hate.
 Therefore, so soone as he was out of vew, Himselfe in hast he arm'd, and did him fast pursew.

III

Well did he tract his steps, as he did
 ryde,
 Yet would not neare approach in daungers
 eye,
 But kept aloofe for dread to be deseryde, Untill fit time and place he mote espy, Where he mote worke him scath and villeny.
 At last he met two knights to him un-
 knowne,
 The which were armed both agreeably, And both combynd, what ever chaunce were blowne, Betwixt them to divide, and each to make his owne.

IV

To whom false Turpine comming courteously,
 To cloke the mischief which he inly ment, Gan to complaine of great discourtesie, Which a straunge knight, that neare afore him went,
 Had doen to him, and his deare ladie shent:
 Which if they would afford him ayde at
 need
 For to avenge, in time convenient, They should accomplish both a knightly
 deed,
 And for their paines obtaine of him a goodly meed.

V

The knights beleev'd that all he sayd was
trew,
And being fresh and full of youthly spright, Were glad to heare of that adventure new,
In which they mote make triall of their
might,
Which never yet they had approv'd in fight;
And eke desirous of the offred meed.
Said then the one of them: 'Where is that
wight,
The which hath doen to thee this wrongfull
deed,
That we may it avenge, and punish him with speed?'

VI

'He rides,' said Turpine, 'there not farre
afore,
With a wyld man soft footing by his syde,
That if ye list to haste a litle more,
Ye may him overtake in timely tyde.' Eftsoones they pricked forth with forward
pryde,
And ere that litle while they ridden had,
The gentle Prince not farre away they
spyde,
Ryding a softly pace with portance sad, Devizing of his love more then of daunger drad.

VII

Then one of them aloud unto him cryde, Bidding him turne againe, false traytour
knight,
Foule womanwronger, for he him defyde.
With that they both at once with equall
spight
Did bend their speares, and both with equall might Against him ran; but th' one did misse his
marke,
And being carried with his force forth-
right, Glaunst swiftly by; like to that heavenly sparke,
Which, glyding through the ayre, lights all the heavens darke.

VIII

But th' other, ayming better, did him smite Full in the shield, with so impetuous
powre,
That all his lance in peeces shivered quite,
And scattered all about, fell on the flowre.

But the stout Prince, with much more steddy stowre,
Full on his bever did him strike so sore,
That the cold steele, through piercing, did devowre
His vitall breath, and to the ground him
bore,
Where still he bathed lay in his owne bloody gore.

IX

As when a cast of faulcons make their
flight
At an hernesshaw, that lyes aloft on wing, The whyles they strike at him with heed-lesse might,
The warie foule his bill doth backward
wring;
On which the first, whose force her first doth bring,
Her selfe quite through the bodie doth en-
gore,
And falleth downe to ground like senselesse thing,
But th' other, not so swift as she before, Fayles of her souse, and passing by doth hurt no more.

By this the other, which was passed by,
Himselfe recovering, was return'd to fight;
Where when he saw his fellow lifelesse ly,
He much was daunted with so dismall sight;
Yet nought abating of his former spight, Let drive at him with so malicious mynd,
As if he would have passed through him
quight:
But the steele-head no stedfast hold could
fynd,
But glauncing by, deceiv'd him of that he desynd.

XI

Not so the Prince: for his well learned
speare
Tooke surer hould, and from his horses
backe
Above a launces length him forth did
beare,
And gainst the cold hard earth so sore him strake,
That all his bones in peeces nigh he brake.
Where seeing him so lie, he left his steed,
And to him leaping, vengeance thought to
take

Of him, for all his former follies meed, With flaming sword in hand his terror more to breed.

XII

The fearefull swayne, beholding death so
nie,

Cryde out aloud, for mercie, him to save;
In lieu whereof he would to him descrie Great treason to him meant, his life to reave.

The Prince soone hearkned, and his life forgave.

Then thus said he: 'There is a straunger
knight,

The which, for promise of great meed, us
drave

To this attempt, to wreake his hid despight, For that himselfe thereto did want sufficient might.'

XIII

The Prince much mused at such villenie, And said: 'Now sure ye well have earn'd your meed,

For th' one is dead, and th' other soone
shall die,

Unlesse to me thou hether bring with speed

The wretch that hyr'd you to this wicked
deed.'

He glad of life, and willing eke to wreake
The guilt on him which did this mischiefe
breed,

Swore by his sword, that neither day nor weeke

He would surceasse, but him, where so he were, would seeke.

XIV

So up he rose, and forth streight way he
went

Backe to the place where Turpine late he
lore:

There he him found in great astonishment,
To see him so bedight with bloodie gore And griesly wounds that him appalled
sore.

Yet thus at length he said: 'How now, sir
knight?

What meaneth this which here I see before?

How fortuneth this foule uncomely plight, So different from that which earst ye seem'd in sight?'

XV

'Perdie,' said he, 'in evill houre it fell,
That ever I for meed did undertake So hard a taske as life for hyre to sell;
The which I earst adventur'd for your sake.
Witnessse the wounds, and this wyde bloudie
lake,

Which ye may see yet all about me steeme.
Therefore now yeeld, as ye did promise
make,

My due reward, the which right well I
deeme

I yearned have, that life so dearely did re-deeme.'

XVI

'But where then is,' quoth he halfe wroth-
fully,

'Where is the bootie, which therefore I bought,

That cursed caytive, my strong enemy, That recreant knight, whose hated life I
sought?

And where is eke your friend, which halfe it ought?'

'He lyes,' said he, 'upon the cold bare
ground,

Slayne of that errant knight, with whom he fought;

Whom afterwards my selfe with many a
wound

Did slay againe, as ye may see there in the stound.'

XVII

Thereof false Turpin was full glad and
faine,

And needs with him streight to the place would ryde,

Where he himselfe might see his foeman
slaine;

For else his feare could not be satisfye.
So as they rode, he saw the way all dyde With streames of bloud; which tracting by the traile,

Ere long they came whereas in evill tyde
That other swayne, like ashes deadly pale, Lay in the lap of death, rewing his wretched bale.

XVIII

Much did the craven seeme to mone his
case,

That for his sake his deare life had for-
gone;

And him bewayling with affection base,
Did counterfeit kind pittie, where was none:
For wheres no courage, theres no ruth nor
mone.

Thence passing forth, not farre away he
found

Whereas the Prince himselfe lay all alone, Loosely displayd upon the grassie ground, Possessed of sweete sleepe, that luld him soft in swound.

XIX

Wearie of travell in his former fight,
He there in shade himselfe had layd to rest Having his armes and warlike things un-
dight,

Fearlesse of foes that mote his peace
molest;

The whyles his salvage page, that wont be
prest,

Was wandred in the wood another way,
To doe some thing, that seemed to him best,
The whyles his lord in silver slomber lay, Like to the evening starre adorn'd with deawy ray.

XX

Whom when as Turpin saw so loosely layd,
He weened well that he in deed was dead,
Like as that other knight to him had said:
But when he nigh approcht, he mote aread Plaine signes in him of life and livelihead.
Whereat much griev'd against that straunger knight,

That him too light of credence did mislead, He would have backe retyred from that
sight,

That was to him on earth the deadliest de-
spight.

XXI

But that same knight would not once let him start,

But plainly gan to him declare the case
Of all his mischiefe and late lucklesse
smart;

How both he and his fellow there in place Were vanquished, and put to foule dis-
grace,

And how that he, in lieu of life him lent,
Had vow'd unto the victor, him to trace And follow through the world, where so he
went,

Till that he him delivered to his punishment.

XXII

He, therewith much abashed and affrayd, Began to tremble every limbe and vaine;
And softly whispering him, entyrelly prayd T' advize him better then by such a traine Him to betray unto a straunger swaine:
Yet rather counsell'd him contrarywise, Sith he likewise did wrong by him sustaine, To joyne with him and vengeance to de-
vize,

Whylest time did offer meanes him sleeping to surprize.

XXIII

Nathelesse, for all his speach, the gentle
knight

Would not be tempted to such villenie, Regarding more his faith which he did
plight,

All were it to his mortall enemye,
Then to entrap him by false treacherie:
Great shame in lieges blood to be embrew'd.
Thus whylest they were debating diverslie,
The salvage forth out of the wood issew'd Backe to the place whereas his lord he sleeping vew'd.

XXIV

There when he saw those two so neare him
stand,

He doubted much what mote their meaning
bee,

And throwing downe his load out of his
hand,

To weet great store of forrest frute, which
hee

Had for his food late gathered from the tree,

Himselfe unto his weapon he betooke,
That was an oaken plant, which lately hee Rent by the root; which he so sternely
shooke,

That like an hazell wand it quivered and quooke.

XXV

Whereat the Prince awaking, when he spyde
The traytour Turpin with that other knight, He started up, and snatching neare his
syde

His trustie sword, the servant of his might,
Like a fell lyon leaped to him light,
And his left hand upon his collar layd.
Therewith the cowheard, deaded with af-
fright,

Fell flat to ground, ne word unto him sayd, But holding up his hands, with silence mercie prayd.

XXVI

But he so full of indignation was,
That to his prayer nought he would incline,

But as he lay upon the humbled gras,
His foot he set on his vile necke, in signe
Of servile yoke, that nobler harts repine.
Then, letting him arise like abject thrall,
He gan to him object his haynous crime,
And to revile, and rate, and recreant call,
And lastly to despoyle of knightly banner-
all.

XXVII

And after all, for greater infamie,
He by the heeles him hung upon a tree,
And baffuld so, that all which passed by The picture of his punishment might see,
And by the like ensample warned bee, How ever they through treason doe tres-
passe.

But turn we now backe to that ladie free, Whom late we left ryding upon an asse, Led by a carle and foole, which by her side did passe.

XXVIII

She was a ladie of great dignitic,
And lifted up to honorable place, Famous through all the land of Faerie, Though of meane parentage and kindred
base,
Yet deckt with wondrous giftes of Natures
grace,
That all men did her person much admire,
And praise the feature of her goodly face,
The beames whereof did kindle lovely fire In th' harts of many a knight, and many a gentle squire.

XXIX

But she thereof grew proud and insolent, That none she worthie thought to be her
fere,

But scornd them all, that love unto her
ment:

Yet was she lov'd of many a worthy pere;
Unworthy she to be belov'd so dere,
That could not weigh of worthinesse aright:
For beautie is more glorious bright and clere,

The more it is admir'd of many a wight,
And noblest she that served is of noblest knight.

XXX

But this coy damzell thought contrariwise, That such proud looks would make her prayed more;

And that the more she did all love despize,
The more would wretched lovers her adore.
What cared she, who sighed for her sore,
Or who did wayle or watch the wearie
night?

Let them that list their lucklesse lot deplore;

She was borne free, not bound to any wight,
And so would ever live, and love her owne delight.

XXXI

Through such her stubborne stifnesse and hard hart,

Many a wretch, for want of remedie,
Did languish long in lifeconsuming smart,
And at the last through dreary dolour die:
Whylest she, the ladie of her libertie, Did boast her beautie had such soveraine
might,

That with the onely twinkle of her eye, She could or save or spill whom she would
hight.

What could the gods doe more, but doe it more aright?

XXXII

But loe! the gods, that mortall follies vew, Did worthily revenge this maydens pride;
And nought regarding her so goodly hew, Did laugh at her, that many did deride, Whilest she did weepe, of no man mercifide.
For on a day, when Cupid kept his court,
As he is wont at each Saint Valentide, Unto the which all lovers doe resort, That of their loves successe they there may make report;

XXXIII

It fortun'd then, that when the roules were
red,

In which the names of all Loves folke were fyled,

That many there were missing, which were
ded,

Or kept in bands, or from their loves exyled,

Or by some other violence despoiled.
Which when as Cupid heard, he wexed
wroth,
And doubting to be wronged, or beguyled,
He bad his eyes to be umblindfold both,
That he might see his men, and muster them by oth.

XXXIV

Then found he many missing of his crew, Which wont doe suit and service to his
might;

Of whom what was becomen no man knew.
Therefore a jurie was impanel'd streight, T' enquire of them, whether by force, or sleight,

Or their owne guilt, they were away convayd.

To whom foule Infamie and fell Despight Gave evidence, that they were all betrayd, And murdred cruelly by a rebellious mayd.

XXXV

Fayre Mirabella was her name, whereby Of all those crymes she there indited
was:

All which when Cupid heard, he by and
by,

In great displeasure, wild a capias Should issue forth, t' attach that scornfull lasse.

The warrant straight was made, and there-
withall

A baylieffe errant forth in post did passe, Whom they by name there Portamore did
call;

He which doth summon lovers to Loves judgement hall.

XXXVI

The damzell was attacht, and shortly
brought

Unto the barre, whereas she was arrayned:
But she thereto nould plead, nor answer
ought,

Even for stubborne pride, which her restrayned.

So judgement past, as is by law ordayned
In cases like; which when at last she saw, Her stubborne hart, which love before dis-
dayned,

Gan stoupe, and falling downe with humble
awe,

Cryde mercie, to abate the extremitie of law.

XXXVII

The sonne of Venus, who is myld by kynd,
But where he is provokt with peevishnesse, Unto her prayers piteously enelynd,
And did the rigour of his doome repress;
Yet not so freely, but that nathelesse
He unto her a penance did impose, Which was, that through this worlds wyde wildernes

She wander should in companie of those,
Till she had sav'd so many loves as she did lose.

XXXVIII

So now she had bene wandring two whole
yeares

Throughout the world, in this uncomely
case,

Wasting her goodly hew in heavie teares,
And her good dayes in dolorous disgrace:
Yet had she not in all these two yeares
space

Saved but two, yet in two yeares before, Throgh her dispiteous pride, whilest love lackt place,

She had destroyed two and twenty more.
Aie me! how could her love make half amends therefore?

XXXIX

And now she was upon the weary way, When as the gentle squire, with faire Serene,

Met her in such misseeming foule array;
The whiles that mighty man did her de-
meane

With all the evill termes and cruell meane, That he could make; and eeke that angry
foole

Which follow'd her, with cursed hands uncleane

Whipping her horse, did with his smarting toole

Oft whip her dainty selfe, and much augment her doole.

XL

Ne ought it mote availe her to entreat
The one or th' other, better her to use:
For both so wilfull were and obstinate,
That all her piteous plaint they did refuse,
And rather did the more her beate and bruse.

But most the former villaine, which did
lead

Her tyreling jade, was bent her to abuse;
 Who, though she were with wearinesse nigh
 dead,
 Yet would not let her lite, nor rest a little stead.

XLI

For he was sterne and terrible by nature,
 And eeke of person huge and hideous, Exceeding much the measure of mans stature,

And rather like a gyant monstrous.
 For sooth he was descended of the hous
 Of those old gyants, which did warres dar-
 raine

Against the heaven in order battailous,
 And sib to great Orgolio, which was slaine By Arthure, when as Unas knight he did maintaine.

XLII

His lookes were dreadfull, and his fiery eies,

Like two great beacons, glared bright and
 wyde,

Glauncing askew, as if his enemies
 He scorned in his overweening pryde;
 And stalking stately like a crane, did stryde
 At every step upon the tiptoes hie;
 And all the way he went, on every syde
 He gaz'd about, and stared horrible, As if he with his lookes would all men terrifie.

XLIII

He wore no armour, ne for none did care,
 As no whit dreading any living wight;
 But in a jacket, quilted richly rare Upon checklaton, he was straungely dight;
 And on his head a roll of linnen plight,
 Like to the Mores of Malaber, he wore,
 With which his locks, as blacke as pitchy
 night,
 Were bound about, and voyded from before;
 And in his hand a mighty yron club he bore.

XLIV

This was Disdaine, who led that ladies
 horse
 Through thick and thin, through mountains and through plains, Compelling her, wher she would not, by
 force,
 Haling her palfrey by the hempen raines.

But that same foole, which most increast her paines, Was Scorne, who, having in his hand a whip,
 Her therewith yirks, and still when she complaines,
 The more he laughs, and does her closely quip,
 To see her sore lament, and bite her tender lip.

XLV

Whose cruell handling when that squire
 beheld,

And saw those villaines her so vildely use,

His gentle heart with indignation sweld,
 And could no lenger beare so great abuse,
 As such a lady so to beate and bruse;
 But to him stepping, such a stroke him
 lent,

That forst him th' halter from his hand to loose,

And maugre all his might, backe to releut:

Else had he surely there bene slaine, or fowly shent.

XLVI

The villaine, wroth for greeting him so
 sore,

Gathered him selfe together soone againe,
 And with his yron batton which he bore Let drive at him so dreadfully amaine,
 That for his safety he did him constraine To give him ground, and shift to every
 side,

Rather then once his burden to sustaine:
 For bootelesse thing him seemed, to abide So mighty blowes, or prove the puissaunce of his pride.

XLVII

Like as a mastiffe, having at a bay A salvage bull, whose cruell hornes doe
 threat

Desperate daunger, if he them assay, Traceth his ground, and round about doth
 beat,

To spy where he may some advauntage
 get,

The whiles the beast doth rage and loudly
 rore;

So did the squire, the whiles the carle did fret

And fume in his disdainfull mynd the
more,
And oftentimes by Turmagant and Ma-hound swore.

XLVIII

Nathelesse so sharply still he him pur-sewd,
That at advantage him at last he tooke, When his foote slipt (that slip he dearely rewd,)
And with his yron club to ground him
strooke;
Where still he lay, ne out of swoune awooke,
Till heavy hand the carle upon him layd,
And bound him fast: tho, when he up did
looke,
And saw him selfe captiv'd, he was dis-
mayd, Ne powre had to withstand, ne hope of any ayd.

XLIX

Then up he made him rise, and forward
fare,
Led in a rope, which both his hands did
bynd;
Ne ought that foole for pittie did him spare,
But with his whip him following belynd, Him often scourg'd, and forst his feete to
fynd:
And other whiles with bitter mockes and mowes
He would him scorne, that to his gentle
mynd
Was much more grievous then the others
blowes:
Words sharply wound, but greatest grieffe of scorning growes.

L

The faire Serena, when she saw him fall Under that villaines club, then surely
thought That slaine he was, or made a wretched
thrall,
And fled away with all the speede she mought,
To seeke for safety; which long time she
sought,
And past through many perils by the way, Ere she againe to Calepine was brought;
The which discourse as now I must delay, Till Mirabellæes fortunes I doe further say.

CANTO VIII

Prince Arthure overcomes Diadaine; Quites Mirabell from dreed; Serena, found of salvages,
By Calepine is freed.

I

YE gentle ladies, in whose souveraine powre Love hath the glory of his kingdome left,
And th' hearts of men, as your eternall dowre,
In yron chaines, of liberty bereft,
Delivered hath into your hands by gift;
Be well aware, how ye the same doe use,
That pride doe not to tyranny you lift;
Least, if men you of cruelty accuse, He from you take that chiefedome, which ye doe abuse.

II

And as ye soft and tender are by kynde, Adorn'd with goodly gifts of beauties grace,
So be ye soft and tender eeke in mynde;
But cruelty and hardnesse from you chace,
That all your other praises will deface, And from you turne the love of men to
hate.
Ensamble take of Mirabellæes case,
Who from the high degree of happy state Fell into wretched woes, which she repented
late.

III

Who after thraldome of the gentle squire,
Which she beheld with lamentable eye, Was touched with compassion entire,
And much lamented his calamity,
That for her sake fell into misery:
Which booted nought for prayers, nor for
threat
To hope for to release or mollify;
For aye the more that she did them entreat,
The more they him misust, and cruelly did beat.

IV

So as they forward on their way did pas,
Him still reviling and afflicting sore,
They met Prince Arthure with Sir Enias, (That was that courteous knight, whom he before Having subdew'd, yet did to life restore,) To whom as they approcht, they gan aug-
ment
Their cruelty, and him to punish more,

Scourging and haling him more vehement;
As if it them should grieve to see his punishment.

V

The squire him selfe, when as he saw his lord,

The witnesse of his wretchednesse, in place,
Was much asham'd, that with an hempen cord

He like a dog was led in captive case,
And did his head for bashfulnesse abase,
As loth to see, or to be seene at all:
Shame would be hid. But whenas Enias Beheld two such, of two such villaines thrall, His manly mynde was much emmoued therewithall;

VI

And to the Prince thus sayd: 'See you, sir knight,

The greatest shame that ever eye yet saw, Yond lady and her squire with foule despite Abusde, against all reason and all law, Without regard of pittie or of awe?

See how they doe that squire beat and revile!

See how they doe the lady hale and draw!
But if ye please to lend me leave a while,
I will them soone acquite, and both of blame assoile.'

VII

The Prince assented, and then he streight way

Dismounting light, his shield about him threw,

With which approaching, thus he gan to say:

'Abide, ye caytive treachetours untrew,
That have with treason thralld unto you These two, unworthy of your wretched bands;

And now your crime with cruelty pursew.
Abide, and from them lay your loathly hands;

Or else abide the death that hard before you stands.'

VIII

The villaine stayd not aunswer to invent,
But with his yron club preparing way,
His mindes sad message backe unto him sent;

The which descended with such dreadfull sway,

That seemed nought the course thereof could stay,

No more then lightening from the lofty sky:
Ne list the knight the powre thereof assay, Whose doome was death, but lightly slipping by,

Unwares defrauded his intended destiny.

IX

And to requite him with the like againe,
With his sharpe sword he fiercely at him flew,

And strooke so strongly, that the carle with paine

Saved him selfe, but that he there him slew:
Yet sav'd not so, but that the bloud it drew,
And gave his foe good hope of victory.

Who therewith flesht, upon him set anew,
And with the second stroke thought certainly

To have supplyde the first, and paid the usury.

X

But Fortune aunswerd not unto his call;
For as his hand was heaved up on hight,
The villaine met him in the middle fall,
And with his club bet backe his brondyron bright

So forcibly, that with his owne hands might Rebeaten backe upon him selfe againe,
He driven was to ground in selfe despight;
From whence ere he recovery could gaine,
He in his necke had set his foote with fell disdaine.

XI

With that the foole, which did that end awayte,

Came running in, and whilest on ground he lay,

Laide heavy hands on him, and held so strayte,

That downe he kept him with his scornefull sway,

So as he could not weld him any way.

The whiles that other villaine went about Him to have bound, and thrald without delay;

The whiles the foole did him revile and flout,

Threatning to yoke them two and tame their corage stout.

XII

As when a sturdy ploughman with his hynde
By strength have overthrowne a stubborne
steare,
They downe him hold, and fast with cords do
bynde,
Till they him force the buxome yoke to
beare:
So did these two this knight oft tug and
teare.
Which when the Prince beheld, there standing by,
He left his lofty steede to aide him neare,
And buckling soone him selfe, gan fiercely
fly Uppon that carle, to save his friend from jeopardy.

XIII

The villaine, leaving him unto his mate,
To be captiv'd and handled as he list, Himselfe address unto this new debate,
And with his club him all about so blist, That he which way to turne him scarcely
wist:
Sometimes aloft he layd, sometimes a low, Now here, now there, and oft him neare he mist;
So doubtfully, that hardly one could know Whether more wary were to give or ward the blow.

XIV

But yet the Prince so well enured was With such huge strokes, approved oft in
fight,
That way to them he gave forth right to
pas;
Ne would endure the daunger of their
might,
But wayt advantage, when they downe did
light.
At last the cayeive after long discourse, When all his strokes he saw avoyded quite,
Resolved in one t' assemble all his force,
And make one end of him without ruth or remorse.

XV

His dreadfull hand he heaved up aloft,
And with his dreadfull instrument of yre Thought sure have pownded him to powder
soft,
Or deepe emboweld in the earth entyre:

But Fortune did not with his will conspire;
For ere his stroke attayned his intent,
The noble childe, preventing his desire,
Under his club with wary boldnesse went,
And smote him on the knee, that never yet was bent.

XVI

It never yet was bent, ne bent it now, Albe the stroke so strong and puissant
were,
That seem'd a marble pillour it could bow;
But all that leg, which did his body beare, It crackt throughout (yet did no bloud ap-
peare)
So as it was unable to support
So huge a burden on such broken geare, But fell to ground, like to a lump of durt, Whence he assayd to rise, but could not for his hurt.

XVII

Eftsoones the Prince to him full nimbly
stept,
And least he should recover foote againe, His head meant from his shoulders to have swept.
Which when the lady saw, she cryde amaine:
'Stay, stay, sir knight, for love of God ab-staine
From that unwares ye weetlesse doe intend; Slay not that carle, though worthy to be
slaine:
For more on him doth then him selfe depend;
My life will by his death have lamentable end.'

XVIII

He staide his hand according her desire,
Yet nathemore him suffred to arize;
But still suppressing, gan of her inquire, What meaning mote those uncouth words comprize,
That in that villaines health her safety
lies:
That, were no might in man, nor heart in
knights,
Which durst her dreaded reskue enter-
prize,
Yet heavens them selves, that favour feeble rights,
Would for it selfe redresse, and punish such despights.

XIX

Then bursting forth in teares, which gushed
 fast
 Like many water streames, a while she
 stayd;
 Till the sharpe passion being overpast, Her tongue to her restord, then thus she
 sayd:
 'Nor heavens, nor men can me, most wretched mayd,
 Deliver from the doome of my desart, The which the God of Love hath on me
 layd,
 And damned to endure this direfull smart, For penance of my proud and hard rebellious hart.

XX

'In prime of youthly yeares, when first the
 flowre
 Of beauty gan to bud, and bloosme delight, And Nature me endu'd with plenteous
 dowre
 Of all her gifts, that pleasse each living
 sight,
 I was belov'd of many a gentle knight,
 And sude and sought with all the service
 dew:
 Full many a one for me deepe groand and
 sight,
 And to the dore of death for sorrow drew, Complaining out on me, that would not on them rew.

XXI

'But let them love that list, or live or die;
 Me list not die for any lovers doole:
 Ne list me leave my loved libertie,
 To pity him that list to play the foole:
 To love my selfe I learned had in schoole.
 Thus I triumphed long in lovers paine,
 And sitting carelesse on the scorers stoole, Did laugh at those that did lament and
 plaine:
 But all is now repayd with interest againe.

XXII

'For loe! the winged god, that woundeth
 harts, Causde me be called to accompt therefore,
 And for revengement of those wrongfull
 smarts,
 Which I to others did inflict afore, Addeem'd me to endure this penance sore;
 That in this wize, and this unmeete array,

With these two lewd companions, and no
 more,
 Disdaine and Scorne, I through the world should stray, Till I have sav'd so many, as I earst did slay.'

XXIII

'Certes,' sayd then the Prince, 'the god is just,
 That taketh vengeaunce of his peoples
 spoile.
 For were no law in love, but all that lust Might them oppresse, and painefully tur-moile,
 His kingdome would continue but a while.
 But tell me, lady, wherefore doe you beare
 This bottle thus before you with such toile,
 And eeke this wallet at your backe arreare, That for these carles to carry much more comely were?'

XXIV

'Here in this bottle,' sayd the sory mayd,
 'I put the teares of my contrition, Till to the brim I have it full defrayd:
 And in this bag, which I behinde me don,
 I put repentaunce for things past and gon.
 Yet is the bottle leake, and bag so torne
 That all which I put in fals out anon, And is behinde me trodden downe of
 Scorne,
 Who mocketh all my paine, and laughs the more I mourn.'

XXV

The infant hearkned wisely to her tale, And wondred much at Cupids judg'ment
 wise,
 That could so meekly make proud hearts avale,
 And wreake him selfe on them that him
 despise.
 Then suffred he Disdaine up to arise,
 Who was not able up him selfe to reare, By meanes his leg, through his late luckelesse prise,
 Was crackt in twaine, but by his foolish
 feare
 Was holpen up, who him supported standing neare.

XXVI

But being up, he lookt againe aloft,
 As if he never had received fall;

And with sterne eye-browes stared at him
oft,

As if he would have daunted him with all:
And standing on his tiptoes, to seeme tall, Downe on his golden feete he often gazed,
As if such pride the other could apall;
Who was so far from being ought amazed,
That he his lookes despised, and his boast dispraised.

XXVII

Then turning backe unto that captive
thrall,
Who all this while stood there beside them
bound,
Unwilling to be knowne, or seene at all,
He from those bands weend him to have unwound.
But when, approching neare, he plainly
found
It was his owne true groome, the gentle
squire,
He thereat wext exceedingly astound,
And him did oft embrace, and oft admire, Ne could with seeing satisfie his great desire.

XXVIII

Meane while the salvage man, when he be-
held
That huge great foole oppressing th' other
knight,
Whom with his weight unweldy downe he
held,
He flew upon him, like a greedy kight Unto some carrion offered to his sight, And downe him plucking, with his mayles and teeth
Gan him to hale, and teare, and scratch, and bite;
And from him taking his owne whip, therewith So sore him scourgeth, that the bloud downe followeth.

XXIX

And sure I weene, had not the ladies cry Procur'd the Prince his cruell hand to
stay,
He would with whipping him have done to
dye:
But being checkt, he did abstaine streight
way,
And let him rise. Then thus the Prince gan say:

'Now, lady, sith your fortunes thus dispose,

That, if ye list have liberty, ye may,
Unto your selfe I freely leave to chose, Whether I shall you leave, or from these villaines lose.'

XXX

'Ah! nay, sir knight,' sayd she, 'it may not be,
But that I needes must by all meanes fulfill
This penaunce, which enjoyned is to me,
Least unto me betide a greater ill; Yet no lesse thankes to you for your good
will.'
So humbly taking leave, she turnd aside:
But Arthure with the rest went onward
still
On his first quest, in which did him be-
tide
A great adventure, which did him from them devide.

XXXI

But first it falleth me by course to tell
Of faire Serena, who, as earst you heard, When first the gentle squire at variaunce
fell
With those two carles, fled fast away, afeard
Of villany to be to her inferd:
So fresh the image of her former dread,
Yet dwelling in her eye, to her appeard, That every foote did tremble, which did
tread,
And every body two, and two she foure did read.

XXXII

Through hils and dales, through bushes and through breres Long thus she fled, till that at last she
thought
Her selfe now past the perill of her feares.
Then looking round about, and seeing
nought
Which doubt of daunger to her offer
mought,
She from her palfrey lighted on the plaine, And sitting downe, her selfe a waile be-
thought
Of her long travell and turmoyling paine:
And often did of love, and oft of luck complane.

XXXIII

And evermore she blamed Calepine, The good Sir Calepine, her owne true
 knight,
 As th' onely author of her wofull tine:
 For being of his love to her so light,
 As her to leave in such a piteous plight.
 Yet never turtle truer to his make,
 Then he was tride unto his lady bright:
 Who all this while endured for her sake Great perill of his life, and restlesse paines did take.

XXXIV

Tho when as all her plaints she had dis-
 playd,
 And well disburdened her engrieved brest,
 Upon the grasse her selfe adowne she layd;
 Where, being tyrde with travell, and op-
 prest
 With sorrow, she betooke her selfe to rest.
 There whilst in Morpheus bosome safe she lay, Fearelesse of ought that mote her peace
 molest,
 False Fortune did her safety betray Unto a straunge mischaunce, that menac'd her decay.

XXXV

In these wylde deserts, where she now
 abode,
 There dwelt a salvage nation, which did
 live
 Of stealth and spoile, and making nightly rode
 Into their neighbours borders; ne did give Them selves to any trade, as for to drive The painefull plough, or cattell for to
 breed,
 Or by adventrous marchandize to thrive;
 But on the labours of poore men to feed,
 And serve their owne necessities with others need.

XXXVI

There to they usde one most accursed order,
 To eat the flesh of men, whom they mote fynde,
 And straungers to devoure, which on their border
 Were brought by error, or by wreckfull wynde:
 A monstrous cruelty gainst course of kynde.

They towards evening wandring every way,
 To seeke for booty, came by fortune blynde Whereas this lady, like a sheepe astray, Now drowned in the depth of sleepe all fearelesse lay.

XXXVII

Soone as they spide her, lord! what glad-full glee
 They made amongst them selves! but when her face
 Like the faire yvory shining they did see,
 Each gan his fellow solace and embrace, For joy of such good hap by heavenly
 grace.
 Then gan they to devize what course to
 take:
 Whether to slay her there upon the place,
 Or suffer her out of her sleepe to wake,
 And then her eate attonce, or many meales to make.

XXXVIII

The best advizement was, of bad, to let her Sleepe out her fill, without encombrment:
 For sleepe, they sayd, would make her bat-till better.
 Then, when she wakt, they all gave one
 consent,
 That since by grace of God she there was
 sent,
 Unto their god they would her sacrificze, Whose share, her guiltlesse bloud, they would present;
 But of her dainty flesh they did devize To make a common feast, and feed with gurmardize.

XXXIX

So round about her they them selves did
 place
 Upon the grasse, and diversely dispose,
 As each thought best to spend the lingring
 space.
 Some with their eyes the daintest morsels
 chose;
 Some praise her paps, some praise her lips and nose;
 Some whet their knives, and strip their elboes bare:
 The priest him selfe a garland doth compose
 Of finest flowres, and with full busie care
 His bloudy vessels wash, and holy fire prepare.

XL

The damzell wakes; then all attonce up-
start,
And round about her flocke, like many flies, Whooping and hallowing on every part,
As if they would have rent the brasen skies.
Which when she sees with ghastly griefful
eies,
Her heart does quake, and deadly pallid
hew Benumbes her cheekes: then out aloud she cries,
Where none is nigh to heare, that will her
rew,
And rends her golden locks, and snowy brests embrew.

XLI

But all bootes not: they hands upon her
lay;
And first they spoile her of her jewels
deare,
And afterwards of all her rich array;
The which amongst them they in peeces
teare,
And of the pray each one a part doth beare.
Now being naked, to their sordid eyes
The goodly treasures of Nature appeare:
Which as they view with lustfull fantasies, Each wisheth to him selfe, and to the rest envyes.

XLII

Her yvorie necke, her alablaster brest, Her paps, which like white silken pillowes
were,
For Love in soft delight thereon to rest;
Her tender sides, her bellie white and clere,
Which like an altar did it selfe uprere,
To offer sacrifice divine thereon;
Her goodly thighs, whose glorie did ap-
peare
Like a triumphall arch, and thereupon The spoiles of princes hang'd, which were in battel won.

XLIII

Those daintie parts, the dearlings of de-
light,
Which mote not be prophan'd of common
eyes,
Those villeins vew'd with loose lascivious
sight,
And closely tempted with their craftie
spyes;

And some of them gan mongst themselves
devize,
Thereof by force to take their beastly
pleasure:
But them the priest rebuking, did advize To dare not to pollute so sacred threas-ure, Vow'd to the gods: religion held even theeves in measure.

XLIV

So being stayd, they her from thence directed
Unto a litle grove not farre asyde,
In which an altar shortly they erected,
To slay her on. And now the eventyde His brode black wings had through the heavens wyde
By this dispred, that was the tyme or-dayned
For such a dismall deed, their guilt to
hyde:
Of few greene turfes an altar soone they fayned,
And deckt it all with flowres, which they nigh hand obtayned.

XLV

Tho, when as all things readie were aright,
The damzell was before the altar set,
Being already dead with fearefull fright.
To whom the priest with naked armes full net Approching nigh, and murderous knife well
whet,
Gan mutter close a certaine secret charme,
With other divelish ceremonies met:
Which doen, he gan aloft t' advance his
arme, Whereat they shouted all, and made a loud alarme.

XLVI

Then gan the bagpipes and the hornes to
shrill,
And shrieke aloud, that, with the peoples
voyce
Confused, did the ayre with terror fill,
And made the woud to tremble at the noyce:
The whyles she wayld, the more they did rejoyce.
Now mote ye understand that to this grove Sir Calepine, by chauce more then by choyce,

The selfe same evening fortune hether
drove,
As he to seeke Serena through the woods did rove.

XLVII

Long had he sought her, and through many a soyle

Had traveld still on foot in heavie armes, Ne ought was tyred with his endlesse toyle, Ne ought was feared of his certaine
harmes:

And now, all weetlesse of the wretched
stormes,

In which his love was lost, he slept full fast, Till, being waked with these loud alarmes,
He lightly started up like one aghast, And catching up his arms, streight to the noise forth past.

XLVIII

There by th' uncertaine glims of starry
night,

And by the twinkling of their sacred fire,
He mote perceive a litle dawning sight
Of all which there was doing in that quire:
Mongst whom a woman spoyld of all attire
He spyde, lamenting her unluckie strife, And groning sore from grieved hart entire;

Eftsoones he saw one with a naked knife Readie to launch her brest, and let out loved life.

XLIX

With that he thrusts into the thickest
throng,

And even as his right hand adowne descends,

He him preventing, layes on earth along,
And sacrificeth to th' infernall feends.

Then to the rest his wrathfull hand he bends,

Of whom he makes such havocke and such
hew,

That swarmes of damned soules to hell he sends:

The rest, that scape his sword and death
eschew,

Fly like a flocke of doves before a fauleons
vew.

L

From them returning to that ladie backe, Whom by the altar he doth sitting find,

Yet fearing death, and next to death the
lacke

Of clothes to cover what they ought by
kind,

He first her hands beginneth to unbind,
And then to question of her present woe,
And afterwards to cheare with speaches
kind.

But she, for nought that he could say or
doe,

One word durst speake, or answer him a whit thereto.

LI

So inward shame of her uncomely case She did conceive, through care of womanhood,

That though the night did cover her dis-
grace,

Yet she in so unwomanly a mood Would not bewray the state in which she
stood.

So all that night to him unknowen she
past.

But day, that doth discover bad and good, Ensewing, made her knowen to him at
last:

The end whereof Ile keepe untill another cast.

CANTO IX

Calidore hostes with Melibœ
And loves fayre Pastorell; Coridon envies him, yet he
For ill rewards him well.

I

Now turne againe my teme, thou jolly
swayne,

Backe to the furrow which I lately left;

I lately left a furrow, one or twayne,

Unplough'd, the which my coulter hath not cleft:

Yet seem'd the soyle both fayre and frute-full eft,

As I it past, that were too great a shame, That so rich frute should be from us be-
reft;

Besides the great dishonour and defame, Which should befall to Calidores immor-tall name.

II

Great travell hath the gentle Calidore And toyle endured, sith I left him last

Sewing the Blatant Beast, which I forbore To finish them, for other present hast.
 Full many pathes and perils he hath past, Through hils, through dales, through forests, and through plaines, In that same quest which fortune on him
 cast,
 Which he atchieved to his owne great
 gaines,
 Reaping eternall glorie of his restlesse paines.

III

So sharply he the monster did pursew,
 That day nor night he suffred him to rest, Ne rested he himselfe but natures dew,
 For dread of daunger, not to be redrest,
 If he for slouth forslackt so famous quest.
 Him first from court he to the citties coursed,
 And from the citties to the townes him
 prest,
 And from the townes into the countrie forsed,
 And from the country back to private farmes he scorsed.

IV

From thence into the open fields he fled, Whereas the heardes were keeping of their neat,
 And shepherds singing to their flockes, that fed,
 Layes of sweete love and youthes delight-full heat:
 Him thether eke for all his fearefull threat
 He followed fast, and chaced him so nie, That to the folds, where sheepe at night doe seat,
 And to the litle cots, where shepherds lie In winters wrathfull time, he forced him to flie.

V

There on a day, as he pursew'd the chace, He chaunst to spy a sort of shepheard groomes,
 Playing on pypes, and caroling apace, The whyles their beasts there in the budded broomes Beside them fed, and nipt the tender bloomes:
 For other worldly wealth they cared
 nought.
 To whom Sir Calidore yet sweating comes,

And them to tell him courteously be-
 sought,
 If such a beast they saw, which he had thether brought.

VI

They answer'd him that no such beast they
 saw,
 Nor any wicked feend that mote offend Their happie flockes, nor daunger to them
 draw:
 But if that such there were (as none they kend)
 They prayd High God them farre from them to send.
 Then one of them him seeing so to sweat,
 After his rusticke wise, that well he weend, Offred him drinke, to quench his thirstie
 heat,
 And if he hungry were, him offred eke to eat.

The knight was nothing nice, where was no need,
 And tooke their gentle offer: so adowne They prayd him sit, and gave him for to feed Such homely what as serves the simple
 clowne,
 That doth despise the dainties of the towne.
 Tho, having fed his fill, he there besyde Saw a faire damzell, which did weare a
 crowne
 Of sundry flowres, with silken ribbands
 tyde, Yelad in home-made greene that her owne hands had dyde.

VIII

Upon a litle hillocke she was placed Higher then all the rest, and round about Environ'd with a girland, goodly graced, Of lovely lasses, and them all without The lustie shepheard swaynes sate in a rout, The which did pype and sing her prayses
 dew,
 And oft rejoyce, and oft for wonder shout,
 As if some miracle of heavenly hew Were downe to them descended in that earthly vew.

IX

And soothly sure she was full fayre of face,
 And perfectly well shapt in every lim,

Which she did more augment with modest
 grace
 And comely carriage of her count'nance trim,
 That all the rest like lesser lamps did dim:
 Who, her admiring as some heavenly wight, Did for their sovaine goddesses her es-
 teeme,
 And caroling her name both day and night,
 The fayrest Pastorella her by name did hight.

X

Ne was there heard, ne was there shepheards swayne,
 But her did honour, and eke many a one Burnt in her love, and with sweet pleasing
 payne Full many a night for her did sigh and
 grone:
 But most of all the shepherd Coridon For her did languish, and his deare life
 spend;
 Yet neither she for him nor other none Did care a whit, ne any liking lend:
 Though meane her lot, yet higher did her mind ascend.

XI

Her whyles Sir Calidore there vewed well, And markt her rare demeanure, which him seemed
 So farre the meane of shepherds to ex-
 cell,
 As that he in his mind her worthy deemed To be a princes paragone esteemed,
 He was unwares surpris'd in subtile bands Of the Blynd Boy, ne thence could be redeemed
 By any skill out of his cruell hands, Caught like the bird which gazing still on others stands.

XII

So stood he still long gazing thereupon,
 Ne any will had thence to move away, Although his quest were farre afore him
 gon;
 But after he had fed, yet did he stay,
 And sate there still, untill the flying day Was farre forth spent, discoursing diversly Of sundry things, as fell, to worke delay;
 And evermore his speach he did apply To th' heards, but meant them to the damzels fantazy.

XIII

By this the moystie night approaching fast, Her deawy humour gan on th' earth to
 shed,
 That warn'd the shepherds to their homes to hast
 Their tender flocks, now being fully fed, For feare of wetting them before their
 bed;
 Then came to them a good old aged syre, Whose silver lockes bedeckt his beard and
 hed,
 With shepherds hooke in hand, and fit
 attyre,
 That wild the damzell rise; the day did now expyre.

XIV

He was, to weet, by common voice esteemed
 The father of the fayrest Pastorell, And of her selfe in very deede so deemed;
 Yet was not so, but, as old stories tell,
 Found her by fortune, which to him befell,
 In th' open fields an infant left alone,
 And taking up brought home, and nursed
 well
 As his owne chyld; for other he had none; That she in tract of time accompted was his owne.

XV

She at his bidding meekely did arise,
 And streight unto her litle focke did fare:
 Then all the rest about her rose likewise,
 And each his sundrie sheepe with severall
 care
 Gathered together, and them homeward
 bare: Whylest everie one with helping hands did
 strive Amongst themselves, and did their labours
 share,
 To helpe faire Pastorella home to drive Her fleecie focke; but Coridon most helpe did give.

XVI

But Melibœe (so hight that good old man)
 Now seeing Calidore left all alone,
 And night arrived hard at hand, began Him to invite unto his simple home; Which though it were a cottage clad with lome,
 And all things therein meane, yet better so

To lodge then in the salvage fields to rome.
The knight full gladly soone agreed thereto, Being his harts owne wish, and home with him did go.

XVII

There he was welcom'd of that honest
syre,
And of his aged beldame homely well;
Who him besought himselfe to disattyre,
And rest himselfe, till supper time befell;
By which home came the fayrest Pastorell, After her flocke she in their fold had tyde;
And, supper readie dight, they to it fell With small adoe, and nature satisfide, The which doth litle crave, contented to abyde.

XVIII

Tho when they had their hunger slaked
well,
And the fayre mayd the table ta'ne away,
The gentle knight, as he that did excell
In courtesie, and well could doe and say, For so great kindnesse as he found that
day
Gan greatly thanke his host and his good wife;
And drawing thence his speach another
way,
Gan highly to commend the happie life Which shepherds lead, without debate or bitter strife.

XIX

'How much,' sayd he, 'more happie is the
state,
In which ye, father, here doe dwell at ease, Leading a life so free and fortunate From all the tempests of these worldly seas,
Which tesse the rest in daungerous disease;
Where warres, and wreckes, and wicked ennitie
Doe them afflict, which no man can ap-
pease!
That certes I your happinesse envie,
And wish my lot were plast in such felici-tie.'

XX

'Surely, my sonne,' then answer'd he
again,
'If happie, then it is in this intent,

That, having small, yet doe I not com-
plaine
Of want, ne wish for more it to augment, But doe my selfe, with that I have, content;
So taught of nature, which doth litle need Of forreine helps to lifes due nourish-
ment:
The fields my food, my flocke my rayment
breed;
No better doe I weare, no better doe I feed.

XXI

'Therefore I doe not any one envy, Nor am envyde of any one therefore;
They that have much, feare much to loose
thereby,
And store of cares doth follow riches store.
The litle that I have growes dayly more Without my care, but onely to attend it; My lambes doe every yeare increase their score,
And my flockes father daily doth amend it.
What have I, but to praise th' Almighty, that doth send it ?

XXII

'To them that list, the worlds gay showes I
leave,
And to great ones such follies doe forgive,
Which oft through pride do their owne perill weave,
And through ambition downe themselves doe drive
To sad decay, that might contented live.
Me no such cares nor combrous thoughts
offend,
Ne once my minds unmoved quiet grieve,
But all the night in silver sleepe I spend,
And all the day, to what I list I doe attend.

XXIII

'Sometimes I hunt the fox, the vowed foe Unto my lambes, and him dislodge away; Sometime the fawne I practise from the doe,
Or from the goat her kidde how to convey;
Another while I baytes and nets display,
The birds to catch, or fishes to beguyle:
And when I wearie am, I downe doe lay My limbes in every shade, to rest from
toyle,
And drinke of every brooke, when thirst my throte doth boyle.

XXIV

'The time was once, in my first prime of
yeares,
When pride of youth forth pricked my
desire,
That I disdain'd amongst mine equall peares To follow sheepe, and shepherds base attire:
For further fortune then I would inquire,
And leaving home, to roiall court I sought;
Where I did sell my selfe for yearely hire,
And in the princes gardin daily wrought:
There I beheld such vaineesse, as I never thought.

XXV

'With sight whereof soone cloyd, and long deluded
With idle hopes, which them doe enter-
taine,
After I had ten yeares my selfe excluded From native home, and spent my youth in
vaine,
I gan my follies to my selfe to plaine,
And this sweet peace, whose lacke did then
appeare.
Tho backe returning to my sheepe againe, I from thenceforth have learn'd to love more deare
This lowly quiet life, which I inherite here.'

XXVI

Whylest thus he talkt, the knight with greedy eare
Hong still upon his melting mouth attent; Whose sensefull words empierst his hart so neare,
That he was rapt with double ravishment, Both of his speach, that wrought him great
content,
And also of the object of his vew,
On which his hungry eye was alwayes
bent;
That twixt his pleasing tongue and her faire hew
He lost himselfe, and like one halfe en-traunced grew.

XXVII

Yet to occasion meanes to worke his mind,
And to insinuate his harts desire, He thus replyde: 'Now surely, syre, I
find,
That all this worlds gay showes, which we admire

Be but vaine shadowes to this safe retyre
Of life, which here in lowlinesse ye lead, Fearelesse of foes, or Fortunes wrackfull
yre,
Which toseth states, and under foot doth
tread
The mightie ones, affrayd of every chaunges dread.

XXVIII

'That even I, which daily doe behold The glorie of the great, mongst whom I won,
And now have prov'd what happinesse ye
hold
In this small plot of your dominion, Now loath great lordship and ambition;
And wish the heavens so much had graced
mee,
As graunt me live in like condition;
Or that my fortunes might transposed bee From pitch of higher place unto this low degree.'

XXIX

'In vaine,' said then old Melibæ, 'doe
men
The heavens of their fortunes fault accuse, Sith they know best what is the best for them:
For they to each such fortune doe diffuse,
As they doe know each can most aptly use.
For not that which men covet most is
best,
Nor that thing worst which men do most refuse;
But fittest is, that all contented rest With that they hold: each hath his fortune in his brest.

XXX

'It is the mynd that maketh good or ill, That maketh wretch or happie, rich or poore:
For some, that hath abundance at his will,
Hath not enough, but wants in greatest
store;
And other, that hath litle, askes no more,
But in that litle is both rich and wise;
For wisdome is most riches; fooles therefore
They are, which fortunes doe by vowes de-
vize,
Sith each unto himselfe his life may fortunize.'

XXXI

'Since then in each mans self,' said Calidore,
 'It is, to fashion his owne lyfes estate, Give leave awchyle, good father, in this
 shore
 To rest my barecke, which hath bene beaten
 late
 With stormes of fortune and tempestuous
 fate,
 In seas of troubles and of toylesome paine, That, whether quite from them for to retrate
 I shall resolve, or backe to turne againe, I may here with your selfe some small repose obtaine.

XXXII

'Not that the burden of so bold a guest Shall chargefull be, or chaunge to you at
 all;
 For your meane food shall be my daily
 feast,
 And this your cabin both my bowre and
 hall.
 Besides, for recompence hereof, I shall You well reward, and golden guerdon give,
 That may perhaps you better much withall,
 And in this quiet make you safer live.' So forth he drew much gold, and toward him it drive.

XXXIII

But the good man, nought tempted with the offer
 Of his rich mould, did thrust it farre away,
 And thus bespake: 'Sir knight, your bounteous proffer
 Be farre fro me, to whom ye ill display That mucky masse, the cause of mens
 decay,
 That mote empaire my peace with daungers
 dread.
 But, if ye algates covet to assay This simple sort of life, that shepherds
 lead,
 Be it your owne: our rudenesse to your selfe aread.'

XXXIV

So there that night Sir Calidore did dwell, And long while after, whilst him list re-
 maine,
 Dayly beholding the faire Pastorell,
 And feeding on the bayt of his owne bane.
 During which time he did her entertaïne

With all kind courtesies he could invent;
 And every day, her companie to gaine, When to the field she went, he with her
 went:
 So for to quench his fire, he did it more augment.

XXXV

But she, that never had acquainted beene With such quaint usage, fit for queenes and kings,
 Ne ever had such knightly service seene, But, being bred under base shepherds
 wings,
 Had ever learn'd to love the lowly things, Did litle whit regard his courteous guize,
 But cared more for Colins carolings
 Then all that he could doe, or ever devize:
 His layes, his loves, his lookes she did them all despize.

XXXVI

Which Calidore perceiving, thought it best To chaunge the manner of his loftie looke;
 And doffing his bright armes, himselfe ad-
 drest
 In shepherds weed, and in his hand he
 tooke,
 In stead of steelehead speare, a shepherds hooke,
 That who had seene him then would have
 bethought
 On Phrygian Paris by Plexippus brooke,
 When he the love of fayre Oenone sought, What time the golden apple was unto him
 brought.

XXXVII

So being clad, unto the fields he went
 With the faire Pastorella every day,
 And kept her sheepe with diligent attent, Watching to drive the ravenous wolfe away, The whylest at pleasure she mote sport and
 play;
 And every evening helping them to fold:
 And otherwhiles, for need, he did assay In his strong hand their rugged teats to
 hold,
 And out of them to presse the milke: love so much could.

XXXVIII

Which seeing Coridon, who her likewise Long time had lov'd, and hop'd her love to
 gaine,

He much was troubled at that straungers
 guize,
 And many gealous thoughts conceiv'd in
 vaine,
 That this of all his labour and long paine Should reap the harvest, ere it ripened
 were;
 That made him scoule, and pout, and oft complaine
 Of Pastorell to all the shepheards there, That she did love a stranger swayne then him more dere.

XXXIX

And ever, when he came in companie Where Calidore was present, he would loure
 And byte his lip, and even for gealousie Was readie oft his owne hart to devoure, Impatient of any paramoure:
 Who on the other side did seeme so farre From malicing, or grudging his good
 houre,
 That all he could, he graced him with her, Ne ever shewed signe of rancour or of jarre.

XL

And oft, when Coridon unto her brought Or litle sparrows, stolen from their nest, Or wanton squirrels, in the woods farre
 sought,
 Or other daintie thing for her adrest, He would commend his guift, and make the best.
 Yet she no whit his presents did regard,
 Ne him could find to fancie in her brest:
 This newcome shepheard had his market mard.
 Old love is litle worth when new is more prefard.

XLI

One day when as the shepheard swaynes
 together
 Were met, to make their sports and merrie
 glee,
 As they are wont in faire sunshynie
 weather,
 The whiles their flockes in shadowes shrouded bee,
 They fell to daunce: then did they all agree, That Colin Clout should pipe, as one most
 fit;
 And Calidore should lead the ring, as hee

That most in Pastorellas grace did sit.
 Thereat frown'd Coridon, and his lip closely bit.

XLII

But Calidore, of courteous inclination, Tooke Coridon and set him in his place, That he should lead the daunce, as was his fashion;
 For Coridon could daunce, and trimly
 trace.
 And when as Pastorella, him to grace, Her flowry garlound tooke from her owne
 head,
 And plast on his, he did it soone displac,
 And did it put on Coridons in stead:
 Then Coridon woxe frolicke, that earst seemed dead.

XLIII

Another time, when as they did dispose To practise games, and maisteries to try,
 They for their judge did Pastorella chose;
 A garland was the meed of victory.
 There Coridon, forth stepping openly,
 Did challenge Calidore to wrestling game:
 For he, through long and perfect industry, Therein well practisd was, and in the same Thought sure t' avenge his grudge, and worke his foe great shame.

XLIV

But Calidore he greatly did mistake;
 For he was strong and mightily stiffe pight, That with one fall his necke he almost
 brake,
 And had he not upon him fallen light,
 His dearest joynt he sure had broken
 quight.
 Then was the oaken crowne by Pastorell Given to Calidore, as his due right;
 But he, that did in courtesie excell, Gave it to Coridon, and said he wonne it well.

XLV

Thus did the gentle knight himselve abcare Amongst that rusticke rout in all his deeds, That even they the which his rivals were Could not maligne him, but commend him needs:
 For courtesie amongst the rudest breeds Good will and favour. So it surely wrought With this faire mayd, and in her mynde the seeds

Of perfect love did sow, that last forth
brought
The fruite of joy and blisse, though long time dearely bought.

XLVI

Thus Calidore continu'd there long time,
To winne the love of the faire Pastorell;
Which having got, he used without crime Or blamefull blot, but menaged so well, That he, of all the rest which there did
dwell,

Was favoured, and to her grace commended.

But what straunge fortunes unto him be-
fell,

Ere he attain'd the point by him intended, Shall more conveniently in other place be ended.

CANTO X

Calidore sees the Graces daunce
To Colins melody:
The whiles his Pastorell is led Into captivity.

I

WHO now does follow the foule Blatant
Beast,

Whilest Calidore does follow that faire
mayd,

Unmyndfull of his vow, and high behest Which by the Faery Queene was on him
layd,

That he should never leave, nor be delayd From chacing him, till he had it attchieved?

But now entrapt of Love, which him betrayd,

He mindeth more how he may be relieved With grace from her whose love his heart hath sore engrieved.

II

That from henceforth he meanes no more to sew

His former quest, so full of toile and paine; Another quest, another game in vew

He hath, the guerdon of his love to gaine:
With whom he myndes for ever to remaine,

And set his rest amongst the rusticke sort,
Rather then hunt still after shadowes vaine

Of courtly favour, fed with light report Of every blaste, and saying alwaies in the port.

III

Ne certes mote he greatly blamed be,
From so high step to stoupe unto so low.
For who had tasted once (as oft did he)
The happy peace which there doth over-
flow,

And prov'd the perfect pleasures which doe grow

Amongst poore hyndes, in hils, in woods, in dales,

Would never more delight in painted show Of such false blisse, as there is set for stales,

T' entrap unwary fooles in their eternall bales.

For what hath all that goodly glorious gaze

Like to one sight which Calidore did vew?
The glauce whereof their dimmed eies would daze,

That never more they should endure the
shew

Of that sunne-shine, that makes them looke
askew.

Ne ought in all that world of beauties rare, (Save onely Glorianaes heavenly hew, To which what can compare?) can it compare;

The which, as commeth now by course, I will declare.

V

One day as he did rounge the fields abroad, Whilest his faire Pastorella was elsewhere, He chaunst to come, far from all peoples troad,

Unto a place, whose pleasaunce did appere To passe all others on the earth which
were:

For all that ever was by Natures skill Devised to worke delight was gathered
there,

And there by her were poured forth at fill,
As if, this to adorne, she all the rest did pill.

VI

It was an hill plaste in an open plaine, That round about was bordered with a
wood

Of matchlesse hight, that seem'd th' earth to disdaine;

In which all trees of honour stately stood,

And did all winter as in sommer bud, Spredding pavilions for the birds to bowre,
 Which in their lower braunches sung aloud;
 And in their tops the soring hauke did
 towre,
 Sitting like king of fowles in majesty and powre.

VII

And at the foote thereof, a gentle flud
 His silver waves did softly tumble downe, Unmard with ragged mosse or filthy mud; Ne mote wylde bestes, ne mote the ruder
 clowne
 Thereto approach, ne filth mote therein
 drowne:
 But nymphes and faeries by the bancks did sit,
 In the woods shade, which did the waters
 crowne,
 Keeping all noysome things away from it,
 And to the waters fall tuning their accents fit.

VIII

And on the top thereof a spacious plaine Did spred it selfe, to serve to all delight, Either to daunce, when they to daunce would faine,
 Or else to course about their bases light; Ne ought there wanted, which for pleasure
 might Desired be, or thence to banish bale:
 So pleasautly the hill with equall hight Did seeme to overlooke the lowly vale; Therefore it rightly cleeped was Mount Acidale.

IX

They say that Venus, when she did dispose Her selfe to pleasaunce, used to resort Unto this place, and therein to repose
 And rest her selfe, as in a gladsome port, Or with the Graces there to play and
 sport;
 That even her owne Cytheron, though in it
 She used most to keepe her royall court,
 And in her souveraine majesty to sit,
 She in regard hereof refusde and thought unfit.

X

Unto this place when as the Elfin knight Approcht, him seemed that the merry
 sound

Of a shrill pipe he playing heard on hight,
 And many feete fast thumping th' hollow
 ground,
 That through the woods their eccho did rebound.

He nigher drew, to weete what mote it be;
 There he a troupe of ladies dauncing found Full merrily, and making gladfull glee, And in the midst a shepheard piping he did see.

XI

He durst not enter into th' open greene,
 For dread of them unwares to be descryde, For breaking of their daunce, if he were
 seene;
 But in the covert of the wood did byde, Beholding all, yet of them unespyde.
 There he did see, that pleased much his
 sight,
 That even he him selfe his eyes envyde,
 An hundred naked maidens lilly white, All raunged in a ring, and dauncing in delight.

XII

All they without were raunged in a ring, And daunced round; but in the midst of them Three other ladies did both daunce and
 sing,
 The whilest the rest them round about did hemme,
 And like a girland did in compasse stemme:
 And in the midst of those same three was placed Another damzell, as a precious gemme Amidst a ring most richly well enchaced, That with her goodly presence all the rest much graced.

XIII

Looke how the crowne, which Ariadne wore Upon her ivory forehead that same day That Theseus her unto his bridale bore, When the bold Centaures made that bloody
 fray
 With the fierce Lapithes, which did them
 dismay,
 Being now placed in the firmament, Through the bright heaven doth her beams
 display,
 And is unto the starres an ornament, Which round about her move in order excellent:

XIV

Such was the beauty of this goodly band, Whose sundry parts were here too long to
tell:
But she that in the midst of them did
stand Seem'd all the rest in beauty to excell, Crownd with a rosie girlond, that right
well
Did her beseme. And ever, as the crew About her daunst, sweet flowres, that far did smell,
And fragrant odours they uppon her threw;
But most of all, those three did her with gifts endew.

XV

Those were the Graces, daughters of de-
light, Handmaides of Venus, which are wont to haunt Uppon this hill, and daunce there day and
night:
Those three to men all gifts of grace do
graunt,
And all that Venus in her selfe doth vaunt Is borrowed of them. But that faire one,
That in the midst was placed paravaunt, Was she to whom that shepheard pypt
alone,
That made him pipe so merrily, as never none.

XVI

She was, to weete, that jolly shepherds
lasse,
Which piped there unto that merry rout;
That jolly shepheard which there piped
was Poore Colin Clout (who knowes not Colin Clout ?)
He pypt apace, whilst they him daunst
about.
Pype, jolly shepheard, pype thou now
apace
Unto thy love, that made thee low to lout; Thy love is present there with thee in
place,
Thy love is there advaunst to be another Grace.

XVII

Much wondred Calidore at this straunge
sight,
Whose like before his eye had never seene

And standing long astonished in spright, And rapt with pleasaunce, wist not what to
weene;
Whether it were the traine of Beauties
Queene,
Or nymphes, or faeries, or enchaunted
show,
With which his eyes mote have deluded
beene.
Therefore resolving, what it was, to know,
Out of the wood he rose, and toward them did go.

XVIII

But soone as he appeared to their vew,
They vanisht all away out of his sight,
And cleane were gone, which way he never
knew;
All save the shepheard, who, for fell de-
spight
Of that displeasure, broke his bag-pipe
quight,
And made great mone for that unhappy
turne.
But Calidore, though no lesse sory wight
For that mishap, yet seeing him to mourne, Drew neare, that he the truth of all by him mote learne:

XIX

And first him greeting, thus unto him
spake:
'Haile, jolly shepheard, which thy joyous
dayes
Here ledest in this goodly merry make, Frequented of these gentle nymphes al-
wayes,
Which to thee flocke, to heare thy lovely
layes!
Tell me, what mote these dainty damzels
be,
Which here with thee doe make their pleasant playes?
Right happy thou, that mayst them freely
see:
But why, when I them saw, fled they away from me?'

XX

'Not I so happy,' answerd then that
swaine,
'As thou unhappy, which them thence didst chace, Whom by no meanes thou canst recall
againe;

For being gone, none can them bring in
place,
But whom they of them selves list so to
grace.'

'Right sorry I,' saide then Sir Calidore,
'That my ill fortune did them hence dis-
place.

But since things passed none may now re-
store,

Tell me, what were they all, whose lacke thee grieues so sore.'

XXI

The gan that shepheard thus for to dilate:

'Then wote thou shepheard, whatsoever
thou bee,

That all those ladies which thou sawest
late

Are Venus damzels, all within her fee,

But differing in honour and degree:

They all are Graces, which on her depend, Besides a thousand more, which ready bee Her to adorne, when so she forth doth
wend:

But those three in the midst doe chiefe on her attend.

XXII

'They are the daughters of sky-ruling
Jove,

By him begot of faire Eurynome,

The Oceans daughter, in this pleasant grove,

As he, this way comming from feastfull glee

Of Thetis wedding with Æacidee,

In sommers shade him selfe here rested weary.

The first of them light mylde Euphrosyne,

Next faire Aglaia, last Thalia merry:

Sweete goddesses all three, which me in mirth do cherry.

XXIII

'These three on men all gracious gifts bestow,

Which decke the body or adorne the mynde,

To make them lovely or well favoured
show,

As comely carriage, entertainment kynde, Sweete semblaunt, friendly offices that bynde,

And all the complements of curtesie:

They teach us, how to each degree and kynde

We should our selves demeane, to low, to
hie,

To friends, to foes; which skill men call civility.

XXIV

'Therefore they alwaies smoothly seeme to smile,

That we likewise should mylde and gentle
be,

And also naked are, that without guile Or false dissemblance all them plaine may see,

Simple and true, from covert malice free:
And eeke them selves so in their daunce they bore,

That two of them still froward seem'd to
bee,

But one still towards shew'd her selfe
afore;

That good should from us goe, then come, in greater store.

XXV

'Such were those goddesses which ye did
see;

But that fourth mayd, which there amidst them traced,

Who can aread what creature mote she bee, Whether a creature, or a goddesse graced

With heavenly gifts from heven first en-raced?

But what so sure she was, she worthy was To be the fourth with those three other placed:

Yet was she certes but a country lasse, Yet she all other country lasses farre did passe.

XXVI

'So farre as doth the daughter of the day
All other lesser lights in light excell,

So farre doth she in beautyfull array Above all other lasses beare the bell:

Ne lesse in vertue, that beseemes her well, Doth she exceede the rest of all her race;

For which the Graces, that here went to
dwell,

Have for more honor brought her to this
place,

And graced her so much to be another Grace.

XXVII

'Another Grace she well deserves to be,
In whom so many graces gathered are,

Excelling much the meane of her degree; Divine resemblaunce, beauty souveraine
 rare, Firme chastity, that spight ne blemish
 dare;
 All which she with such courtesie doth
 grace,
 That all her peres cannot with her compare,
 But quite are dimmed when she is in place.
 She made me often pipe, and now to pipe
 apace.

XXVIII

'Sunne of the world, great glory of the
 sky,
 That all the earth doest lighten with thy
 rayes,
 Great Gloriana, greatest Majesty, Pardon thy shepheard, mongst so many
 layes
 As he hath sung of thee in all his dayes,
 To make one minime of thy poore hand-
 mayd,
 And underneath thy feete to place her
 prayse,
 That, when thy glory shall be farre dis-
 playd
 To future age, of her this mention may be made.'

XXIX

When thus that shepheard ended had his
 speach,
 Sayd Calidore: 'Now sure it yrketh mee, That to thy blisse I made this luckelesse breach,
 As now the author of thy bale to be, Thus to bereave thy loves deare sight from thee:
 But, gentle shepheard, pardon thou my
 shame,
 Who rashly sought that which I mote not
 see.'
 Thus did the courteous knight excuse his
 blame,
 And to recomfort him all comely meanes did frame.

XXX

In such discourses they together spent Long time, as fit occasion forth them led;
 With which the knight him selfe did much
 content,
 And with delight his greedy fancy fed,

Both of his words, which he with reason
 red,
 And also of the place, whose pleasures rare
 With such regard his senses ravished, That thence he had no will away to fare, But wisht that with that shepheard he mote dwelling share.

XXXI

But that envenim'd sting, the which of yore
 His poysonous point deepe fixed in his hart Had left, now gan afresh to rancle sore,
 And to renew the rigour of his smart:
 Which to recure, no skill of leaches art Mote him availe, but to returne againe
 To his wounds worker, that with lovely dart Dinting his brest, had bred his restlesse
 paine,
 Like as the wounded whale to shore flies from the maine.

XXXII

So taking leave of that same gentle swaine,
 He backe returned to his rusticke wonne,
 Where his faire Pastorella did remaine:
 To whome, in sort as he at first begonme,
 He daily did apply him selfe to donne All dewfull service, voide of thoughts im-
 pure:
 Ne any paines ne perill did he shonne,
 By which he might her to his love allure,
 And liking in her yet untamed heart procure.

XXXIII

And evermore the shepheard Coridon, What ever thing he did her to aggrate, Did strive to match with strong contention,
 And all his paines did closely emulate;
 Whether it were to caroll, as they sate Keeping their sheepe, or games to exercize, Or to present her with their labours late;
 Through which if any grace chaunst to arize
 To him, the shepheard streight with jeal-ousie did frize.

XXXIV

One day as they all three together went To the greene wood, to gather strawberies, There chaunst to them a dangerous accident:
 A tigre forth out of the wood did rise,
 That with fell clawes full of fierce gour-mandize,

And greedy mouth, wide gaping like hell
gate,
Did runne at Pastorell her to surprize;
Whom she beholding, now all desolate Gan cry to them aloud, to helpe her all too late.

XXXV

Which Coridon first hearing, ran in hast
To reskue her, but when he saw the feend, Through cowherd feare he fled away as
fast,
Ne durst abide the daunger of the end;
His life he steemed dearer then his frend.
But Calidore soone comming to her ayde,
When he the beast saw ready now to rend His loves deare spoile, in which his heart was prayde,
He ran at him enraged, in stead of being frayde.

XXXVI

He had no weapon, but his shepheards
hooke,
To serve the vengeaunce of his wrathfull
will;
With which so sternely he the monster
strooke,
That to the ground astonished he fell; Whence ere he could recov'r, he did him
quell,
And hewing off his head, it presented Before the feete of the faire Pastorell; Who scarcely yet from former feare exempted,
A thousand times him thank't, that had her death prevented.

XXXVII

From that day forth she gan him to affect,
And daily more her favour to augment;
But Coridon for cowherdize reject, Fit to keepe sheepe, unfit for loves content:
The gentle heart scornes base disparage-
ment.
Yet Calidore did not despise him quight,
But usde him friendly for further intent, That by his fellowship he colour might Both his estate and love from skill of any
wight.

XXXVIII

So well he woo'd her, and so well he wrought her,
With humble service, and with daily sute,

That at the last unto his will he brought
her;
Which he so wisely well did prosecute,
That of his love he reapt the timely frute,
And joyed long in close felicity: Till Fortune, fraught with malice, blinde and brute,
That envies lovers long prosperity,
Blew up a bitter storme of foule adversity.

XXXIX

It fortun'd one day, when Calidore Was hunting in the woods (as was his trade)
A lawlesse people, Brigants hight of yore, That never usde to live by plough nor spade,
But fed on spoile and booty, which they
made Upon their neighbours which did nigh them border,
The dwelling of these shepheards did invade,
And spoyld their houses, and them selves did murder,
And drove away their flocks, with other much disorder.

XL

Amongst the rest, the which they then did
pray,
They spoyld old Melibee of all he had,
And all his people captive led away; Mongst which this lucklesse mayd away was lad,
Faire Pastorella, sorrowfull and sad,
Most sorrowfull, most sad, that ever sight, Now made the spoile of theeves and Brigants bad,
Which was the conquest of the gentlest
knight
That ever liv'd, and th' onely glory of his might.

XLI

With them also was taken Coridon,
And carried captive by those theeves away;
Who in the covert of the night, that none Mote them desery, nor reskue from their
pray,
Unto their dwelling did them close con-vay.
Their dwelling in a little island was, Covered with shrubby woods, in which no
way

Appeard for people in nor out to pas,
Nor any footing fynde for overgrogen gras.

XLII

For underneath the ground their way was
made,
Through hollow caves, that no man mote discover
For the thicke shrubs, which did them alwaies shade
From view of living wight, and covered over:
But darkenesse dred and daily night did hover Through all the inner parts, wherein they dwelt;
Ne lightned was with window, nor with lover,
But with continuall candlelight, which delt A doubtfull sense of things, not so well seene as felt.

XLIII

Hither those Brigants brought their present pray,
And kept them with continuall watch and
ward,
Meaning, so soone as they convenient may,
For slaves to sell them, for no small re-
ward,
To merchants, which them kept in bondage hard,
Or sold againe. Now when faire Pastorell Into this place was brought, and kept with
gard
Of griesly theeves, she thought her self in hell, Where with such damned fiends she should in darknesse dwell.

XLIV

But for to tell the dolefull dreriment, And pittifull complaints, which there she
made,
Where day and night she nought did but lament
Her wretched life, shut up in deadly shade, And waste her goodly beauty, which did
fade Like to a flowre that feeles no heate of sunne,
Which may her feeble leaves with comfort
glade —
But what befell her in that theevisch wonne
Will in an other canto better be begonne.

CANTO XI

The theeves fall out for Pastorell, Whilest Mellbee is slaine:
Her Calidore from them redeemes,
And bringeth backe againe.

I

THE joyes of love, if they should ever last,
Without affliction or disquietnesse, That worldly chaunces doe amongst them
cast,
Would be on earth too great a blessed-
nesse, Liker to heaven then mortall wretched-
nesse.
Therefore the winged god, to let men
weet
That here on earth is no sure happinesse, A thousand sowres hath tempred with one
sweet,
To make it seeme more deare and dainty,
as is meet.

II

Like as is now befallne to this faire mayd, Faire Pastorell, of whom is now my song, Who being now in dreadfull darknesse
layd,
Amongst those theeves, which her in bondage strong Detaynd, yet Fortune, not with all this
wrong
Contented, greater mischiefie on her threw,
And sorrowes heapt on her in greater
throng;
That who so heares her heavinesse would
rew
And pittie her sad plight, so chang'd from pleasaunt hew.

III

Whylest thus she in these hellish dens remayned,
Wrapped in wretched cares and hearts
unrest,
It so befell (as Fortune had ordayned)
That he which was their capitaine profest, And had the chiefe commaund of all the
rest,
One day as he did all his prisoners vew,
With lustfull eyes beheld that lovely guest, Faire Pastorella, whose sad mournfull
hew
Like the faire morning clad in misty fog did shew.

IV

At sight whereof his barbarous heart was fired,
And inly burnt with flames most raging
whot,
That her alone he for his part desired
Of all the other pray which they had got,
And her in mynde did to him selfe allot.
From that day forth he kyndnesse to her showed,
And sought her love by all the meanes he mote;
With looks, with words, with gifts he oft her wowed,
And mixed threats among, and much unto her vowed.

V

But all that ever he could doe or say Her constant mynd could not a whit re-
move,
Nor draw unto the lure of his lewd lay,
To graunt him favour or afford him love.
Yet ceast he not to sew, and all waies
prove,
By which he mote accomplish his request, Saying and doing all that mote behove;
Ne day nor night he suffred her to rest, But her all night did watch, and all the day molest.

VI

At last when him she so importune saw, Fearing least he at length the raines would lend
Unto his lust, and make his will his law, Sith in his powre she was to foe or frend,
She thought it best, for shadow, to pretend Some shew of favour, by him gracing
small,
That she thereby mote either freely wend,
Or at more ease continue there his thrall:
A little well is lent, that gaineth more withall.

VII

So from thenceforth, when love he to her
made,
With better tearmes she did him entertaime, Which gave him hope, and did him halfe perswade,
That he in time her joyaunce should ob-
taine.
But when she saw, through that small favours gaine,

That further then she willing was he prest, She found no meanes to barre him, but to
faine
A sodaine sicknesse, which her sore op-
prest,
And made unfit to serve his lawlesse minde behest.

VIII

By meanes whereof she would not him permit
Once to approach to her in privity, But onely mongst the rest by her to sit,
Mourning the rigour of her malady,
And seeking all things meete for remedy.
But she resolv'd no remedy to fynde, Nor better cheare to shew in misery, Till Fortune would her captive bonds un-
bynde:
Her sicknesse was not of the body, but the mynde.

IX

During which space that she thus sicke did
lie,
It chaunst a sort of merchants, which were wount
To skim those coastes, for bondmen there to buy,
And by such trafficke after gaines to hunt,
Arrived in this isle, though bare and blunt, T' inquire for slaves; where being readie
met
By some of these same theeves, at the instant brunt,
Were brought unto their captaine, who was set
By his faire patients side with sorrowfull regret.

X

To whom they shewed, how those marchants
were Arriv'd in place, their bondslaves for to buy, And therefore prayd that those same captives there Mote to them for their most commodity Be sold, and mongst them shared equally.
This their request the captaine much appalled;
Yet could he not their just demaund deny,
And willed streight the slaves should forth be called,
And sold for most advantage, not to be forestalled.

XI

Then forth the good old Melibœ was brought,
 And Coridon, with many other moe, Whom they before in diverse spoyles had caught:

All which he to the marchants sale did shoue.

Till some, which did the sundry prisoners
 knowe,

Gan to inquire for that faire shepherdesse, Which with the rest they tooke not long agoe,

And gan her forme and feature to expresse,
 The more t' augment her price through praise of comlinesse.

XII

To whom the captaine in full angry wize Made answeare, that the mayd of whom they spake

Was his owne purchase and his onely prize, With which none had to doe, ne ought par-
 take,

But he himselfe, which did that conquest
 make;

Litle for him to have one silly lasse:

Besides through sicknesse now so wan and
 weake,

That nothing meet in marchandise to passe.
 So shew'd them her, to prove how pale and weake she was.

XIII

The sight of whom, though now decayd and mard,

And eke but hardly seene by candle-light, Yet like a diamond of rich regard,

In doubtfull shadow of the darkesome
 night,

With starrie beames about her shining
 bright,

These marchants fixed eyes did so amaze, That what through wonder, and what through delight,

A while on her they greedily did gaze,
 And did her greatly like, and did her greatly praise.

XIV

At last when all the rest them offred were,
 And prises to them placed at their pleasure,

They all refused in regard of her, Ne ought would buy, how ever prisd with measure,

Withouten her, whose worth above all threasure

They did esteeme, and offred store of gold.
 But then the captaine, fraught with more displeasure,

Bad them be still, his love should not be
 sold:

The rest take if they would, he her to him would hold.

XV

Therewith some other of the chieftest theeves

Boldly him bad such injurie forbear;

For that same mayd, how ever it him grieues,

Should with the rest be sold before him
 theare,

To make the prises of the rest more deare.
 That with great rage he stoutly doth deny;

And fiercely drawing forth his blade, doth sweare,

That who so hardie hand on her doth lay,
 It dearely shall aby, and death for handsell pay.

XVI

Thus as they words amongst them multiply, They fall to strokes, the frute of too much talke,

And the mad steele about doth fiercely fly,
 Not sparing wight, ne leaving any balke, But making way for Death at large to
 walke:

Who, in the horror of the griesly night,
 In thousand dreadful shapes doth mongst them stalke,

And makes huge havocke, whiles the candlelight

Out quenched leaves no skill nor difference of wight.

XVII

Like as a sort of hungry dogs, ymet

About some carcase by the common way,

Doe fall together, stryving each to get

The greatest portion of the greedie pray;

All on confused heapes themselves assay,

And snatch, and byte, and rend, and tug,
 and teare,

That who them sees would wonder at their
 fray,

And who sees not would be affrayd to heare:
 Such was the conflict of those cruell Brig-ants there.

XVIII

But first of all, their captives they doe kill, Least they should joyne against the weaker
 side,
 Or rise against the remnant at their will:
 Old Melibœ is slaine, and him beside His aged wife, with many others wide;
 But Coridon, escaping craftily, Creepes forth of dores, whilst darknes him doth hide,
 And flies away as fast as he can hie, Ne stayeth leave to take, before his friends doe dye.

XIX

But Pastorella, wofull wretched elfe, Was by the captaine all this while defended, Who, minding more her safety then him-
 selfe,
 His target alwayes over her pretended;
 By meanes whereof, that mote not be amended,
 He at the length was slaine, and layd on
 ground,
 Yet holding fast twixt both his armes extended Fayre Pastorell, who with the selfe same
 wound Launcht through the arme, fell down with him in dreerie swound.

XX

There lay she covered with confused
 preasse
 Of carcases, which dying on her fell.
 Tho, when as he was dead, the fray gan
 ceasse,
 And each to other calling, did compell To stay their cruell hands from slaughter
 fell, Sith they that were the cause of all were
 gone.
 Thereto they all attonce agreed well,
 And lighting candles new, gan search
 anone,
 How many of their friends were slaine, how many fone.

XXI

Their captaine there they cruelly found
 kild,
 And in his armes the dreary dying mayd,
 Like a sweet angell twixt two clouds uphild:
 Her lovely light was dimmed and decayd,

With cloud of death upon her eyes dis-
 playd;
 Yet did the cloud make even that dimmed
 light Seeme much more lovely in that darknesse
 layd,
 And twixt the twinkling of her eye-lids
 bright
 To sparke out litle beames, like starres in foggie night.

XXII

But when they mov'd the carcases aside, They found that life did yet in her re-
 maine:
 Then all their helpes they busily applyde,
 To call the soule backe to her home
 againe;
 And wrought so well with labour and long
 paine,
 That they to life recovered her at last.
 Who sighing sore, as if her hart in twaine Had riven bene, and all her hart strings
 brast,
 With drearie drouping eyne lookt up like one aghast.

XXIII

There she beheld, that sore her griev'd to
 see,
 Her father and her friends about her lying,
 Her selfe sole left, a second spoyle to bee Of those that, having saved her from dying, Renew'd her death by timely death deny-
 ing.
 What now is left her but to wayle and
 weepe,
 Wringing her hands, and ruefully loud crying?
 Ne cared she her wound in teares to
 steepe,
 Albe with all their might those Brigants her did keepe.

XXIV

But when they saw her now reliv'd againe, They left her so, in charge of one the best Of many worst, who with unkind disdain
 And cruell rigour her did much molest; Scarse yeelding her due food, or timely
 rest,
 And scarsely suffering her infestred wound,
 That sore her payn'd, by any to be drest.

So leave we her in wretched thraldome
bound,
And turne we backe to Calidore, where we him found.

XXV

Who when he backe returned from the
wood,
And saw his shepherds cottage spoyled
quight,
And his love reft away, he wexed wood,
And halfe enraged at that ruefull sight,
That even his hart, for very fell despight,
And his owne flesh he readie was to teare:
He chaunft, he griev'd, he fretted, and he
sight,
And fared like a furious wyld beare, Whose whelpes are stolne away, she being otherwise.

XXVI

Ne wight he found, to whom he might
complaine,
Ne wight he found, of whom he might inquire;
That more increast the anguish of his
paine.
He sought the woods; but no man could see there:
He sought the plaines; but could no tydings
heare:
The woods did nought but eechoes vaine
rebound;
The playnes all waste and emptie did ap-
peare:
Where went the shepherds oft their pypes resound,
And feed an hundred flocks, there now not one he found.

XXVII

At last, as there he romed up and downe, He chaunst one comming towards him to spy,
That seem'd to be some sorie simple clowne, With ragged weedes, and lockes upstaring
hye,
As if he did from some late daunger fly,
And yet his feare did follow him be-
hynd:
Who as he unto him approched nye, He mote perceiue by signes which he did
fynd,
That Coridon it was, the silly shepherds hynd.

XXVIII

Tho to him running fast, he did not stay To greet him first, but askt, where were
the rest;
Where Pastorell? Who full of fresh dis-
may,
And gushing forth in teares, was so opprest, That he no word could speake, but smit his
brest,
And up to heaven his eyes fast streming
threw.
Whereat the knight amaz'd, yet did not rest,
But askt againe, what ment that ruffull hew: Where was his Pastorell? where all the other crew?

XXIX

'Ah, well away!' sayd he then sighing sore,
'That ever I did live, this day to see,
This dismall day, and was not dead before,
Before I saw faire Pastorella dye!'
'Die? out alas!' then Calidore did cry,
'How could the death dare ever her to quell?
But read, thou shepheard, read what destiny Or other dyrefull hap from heaven or hell Hath wrought this wicked deed: doe feare away, and tell.'

XXX

Tho, when the shepheard breathed had a whyle,
He thus began: 'Where shall I then commence
This wofull tale? or how those Brigants vyle,
With cruell rage and dreadfull violence Spoyld all our cots, and caried us from hence?
Or how faire Pastorell should have bene
sold
To marchants, but was sav'd with strong defence?
Or how those theeves, whilest one sought her to hold,
Fell all at ods, and fought through fury fierce and bold?'

XXXI

'In that same conflict (woe is me!) befell
This fatall chaunce, this dolefull accident, Whose heavy tydings now I have to tell.
First all the captives, which they here had
hent,
Were by them slaine by generall consent;
Old Melibœ and his good wife withall

These eyes saw die, and dearely did lament;
 But when the lot to Pastorell did fall,
 Their captaine long withstood, and did her death forstall.

XXXII

'But what could he gainst all them doe alone?
 It could not boot; needs mote she die at last:
 I onely scapt through great confusione
 Of cryes and clamors, which amongst them past,
 In dreadfull darknesse dreadfully aghast;
 That better were with them to have bene dead,
 Then here to see all desolate and wast, Despoyled of those joyes and jollyhead,
 Which with those gentle shepherds here I wont to lead.'

XXXIII

When Calidore these ruefull newes had raught, His hart quite deaded was with anguish great,
 And all his wits with doole were nigh distraught,
 That he his face, his head, his brest did beat,
 And death it selfe unto himselfe did threat; Oft cursing th' heavens, that so cruell were To her, whose name he often did repeat;
 And wishing oft, that he were present there,
 When she was slaine, or had bene to her succour nere.

XXXIV

But after grieffe awhile had had his course,
 And spent it selfe in mourning, he at last Began to mitigate his swelling sourse,
 And in his mind with better reason cast,
 How he might save her life, if life did last;
 Or if that dead, how he her death might wreake, Sith otherwise he could not mend thing past;
 Or if it to revenge he were too weake,
 Then for to die with her, and his lives threed to breake.

XXXV

Tho Coridon he prayd, sith he well knew
 The readie way unto that theevish wonne,
 To wend with him, and be his conduct trew Unto the place, to see what should be donne.
 But he, whose hart through feare was late fordonne,
 Would not for ought be drawne to former drede,
 But by all meanes the daunger knowne did shonne:
 Yet Calidore so well him wrought with meed,
 And faire bespoke with words, that he at last agreed.

XXXVI

So forth they goe together (God before) Both clad in shepherds weeds agreeably, And both with shepherds hookes: but Calidore Had, underneath, him armed privily.
 Tho, to the place when they approched nye,
 They chaunst, upon an hill not farre away,
 Some flockes of sheepe and shepherds to espy;
 To whom they both agreed to take their way,
 In hope there newes to learne, how they mote best assay.

XXXVII

There did they find, that which they did not feare,
 The selfe same flocks the which those theeves had reft
 From Melibœ and from themselves whyl-eare, And certaine of the theeves there by them left,
 The which for want of heards themselves then kept.
 Right well knew Coridon his owne late sheepe,
 And seeing them, for tender pittie wept:
 But when he saw the theeves which did them keepe,
 His hart gan fayle, albe he saw them all asleepe.

XXXVIII

But Calidore recomforting his grieffe, Though not his feare; for nought may feare disswade;

Him hardly forward drew, whereas the thiefe
Lay sleeping soundly in the bushes shade;
Whom Coridon him counsell'd to invade Now all unwares, and take the spoyle away;
But he, that in his mind had closely made A further purpose, would not so them slay, But gently waking them, gave them the time of day.

XXXIX

Tho sitting downe by them upon the greene,
Of sundrie things he purpose gan to faine;
That he by them might certaine tydings
weene
Of Pastorell, were she alive or slaine.
Mongst which the theeves them questioned
again, e
What mister men, and eke from whence
they were.
To whom they answer'd, as did appertaine, That they were poore heardgroomes, the which whylere Had from their maisters fled, and now sought hyre elsewhere.

XL

Whereof right glad they seem'd, and offer
made
To hyre them well, if they their flockes would keepe:
For they themselves were evill groomes, they sayd, Unwont with heards to watch, or pasture
sheepe,
But to forray the land, or scoure the deepe.
Thereto they soone agreed, and earnest
tooke,
To keepe their flockes for litle hyre and chepe;
For they for better hyre did shortly looke:
So there all day they bode, till light the sky forsooke.

XLI

Tho, when as towards darksome night it
drew,
Unto their hellish dens those theeves them
brought,
Where shortly they in great acquaintance
grew,
And all the secrets of their entrayles sought.
There did they find, contrarie to their
thought,
That Pastorell yet liv'd, but all the rest

Were dead, right so as Coridon had taught: Whereof they both full glad and blyth did
rest,
But chiefly Calidore, whom grieffe had most possest.

XLII

At length, when they occasion fittest found,
In dead of night, when all the theeves did
rest
After a late forray, and slept full sound, Sir Calidore him arm'd, as he thought best, Having of late by diligent inquest Provided him a sword of meanest sort:
With which he streight went to the captaines nest.
But Coridon durst not with him consort, Ne durst abide behind, for dread of worse effort.

XLIII

When to the cave they came, they found it fast:
But Calidore with huge resistlesse might
The dores assayled, and the locks upbrast.
With noyse whereof the theefe awaking
light,
Unto the entrance ran: where the bold
knight,
Encountring him, with small resistance
slew;
The whites faire Pastorell through great
affright
Was almost dead, misdoubting least of new Some uprore were like that which lately she did vew.

XLIV

But when as Calidore was comen in,
And gan aloud for Pastorell to call, Knowing his voice, although not heard long
sin,
She sudden was revived therewithall,
And wondrous joy felt in her spirits thrall:
Like him that being long in tempest tost, Looking each houre into deathes mouth to
fall,
At length espyes at hand the happie cost,
On which he safety hopes, that earst feard to be lost.

XLV

Her gentle hart, that now long season past Had never joyance felt, nor chearefull
thought,

Began some smacke of comfort new to tast, Like lyfull heat to nummed senses brought,
And life to feele, that long for death had
sought;

Ne lesse in hart rejoyced Calidore, When he her found, but, like to one distraught

And robd of reason, towards her him bore, A thousand times embrast, and kist a thousand more.

XLVI

But now by this, with noyse of late uprore,
The hue and cry was rayسد all about;
And all the Brigants, flocking in great store, Unto the cave gan preasse, nought having
dout

Of that was doen, and entred in a rout.
But Calidore in th' entry close did stand,
And entertayning them with courage stout, Still slew the formost that came first to
hand,

So long, till all the entry was with bodies
mand.

XLVII

Tho, when no more could nigh to him ap-
proch,
He breath'd his sword, and rested him till
day:

Which when he spyde upon the earth t' eneroch,
Through the dead carcasses he made his way, Mongst which he found a sword of better
say,

With which he forth went into th' open
light:

Where all the rest for him did readie stay,
And fierce assayling him, with all their
might

Gan all upon him lay: there gan a dreadfull fight.

XLVIII

How many flies in whottest sommers day Do seize upon some beast, whose flesh is
bare,

That all the place with swarmes do overlay,
And with their litle stings right felly fare;
So many theeves about him swarming are,
All which do him assayle on every side,
And sore oppresse, ne any him doth spare:
But he doth with his raging brond divide Their thickest troups, and round about him scattreth wide.

XLIX

Like as a lion mongst an heard of dere, Disperseth them to catch his choyssest pray;
So did he fly amongst them here and there,
And all that nere him came did hew and
slay,

Till he had strowd with bodies all the way;
That none his daunger daring to abide, Fled from his wrath, and did themselves couvay

Into their caves, their heads from death to
hide,

Ne any left, that victorie to him envide.

L

Then backe returning to his dearest deare, He her gan to recomfort, all he might,
With gladfull speaches and with lovely
cheare,

And forth her bringing to the joyous light, Whereof she long had lackt the wishfull
sight,

Deviz'd all goodly meanes, from her to drive

The sad remembrance of her wretched
plight.

So her unearth at last he did revive,
That long had lyen dead, and made againe alive.

LI

This doen, into those theevish dens he went,
And thence did all the spoyles and threasures take,

Which they from many long had robd and
rent,

But Fortune now the victors meed did make;
Of which the best he did his love betake;
And also all those flockes, which they before

Had reft from Melibœ and from his make,
He did them all to Coridon restore:
So drove them all away, and his love with him bore.

CANTO XII

Fayre Pastorella by great hap Her parents understands.
Calidore doth the Blatant Beast Subdew, and bynd in bands.

I

LIKE as a ship, that through the ocean wyde Directs her course unto one certaine cost,

Is met of many a counter winde and tyde, With which her winged speed is let and
crost,

And she her selfe in stormie surges tost;
Yet making many a borde, and many a bay, Still winneth way, ne hath her compasse
lost:

Right so it fares with me in this long way, Whose course is often stayd, yet never is astray.

II

For all that hetherto hath long delayd This gentle knight from sewing his first quest,

Though out of course, yet hath not bene mis-sayd,

To shew the courtesie by him profest Even unto the lowest and the least.
But now I come into my course againe,
To his atchievement of the Blatant Beast; Who all this while at will did range and
raine,

Whilst none was him to stop, nor none him to restraine.

III

Sir Calidore, when thus he now had raught Faire Pastorella from those Brigants powre, Unto the Castle of Beigard her brought, Whereof was lord the good Sir Bellamour;

Who whylome was, in his youthes freshest
flowre,

A lustie knight as ever wielded speare,
And had endured many a dreadfull stoure
In bloody battell for a ladie deare, The fayrest ladie then of all that living were.

IV

Her name was Claribell, whose father hight
The Lord of Many Ilands, farre renound For his great riches and his greater might.
He, through the wealth wherein he did
abound,

This daughter thought in wedlocke to have
bound

Unto the Prince of Picteland bordering
nere;

But she, whose sides before with secret
wound

Of love to Bellamoure empierced were,
By all meanes shund to match with any forrein fere.

And Bellamour againe so well her pleased,
With dayly service and attendance dew,
That of her love he was entyrelly seized, And closely did her wed, but knowne to few.

Which when her father understood, he grew In so great rage, that them in dougeon
deepe

Without compassion cruelly he threw;
Yet did so streightly them a sunder keepe, That neither could to company of th' other creepe.

VI

Nathlesse Sir Bellamour, whether through
grace

Or secret guifts, so with his keepers
wrought,

That to his love sometimes he came in
place,

Whereof her wombe, unwist to wight, was fraught,

And in dew time a mayden child forth
brought.

Which she streight way, for dread least, if her syre

Should know thereof, to slay he would have sought,

Delivered to her handmayd, that for hyre She should it cause be fostred under straunge attyre.

VII

The trustie damzell bearing it abroad
Into the emptie fields, where living wight Mote not bewray the secret of her lode,
She forth gan lay unto the open light
The litle babe, to take thereof a sight.

Whom whylest she did with watrie eyne
behold,

Upon the litle brest, like christall bright,
She mote perceiue a litle purple mold, That like a rose her silken leaves did fair unfold.

VIII

Well she it markt, and pittied the more,
Yet could not remedie her wretched case,
But, closing it againe like as before, Bedeaw'd with teares there left it in the
place:

Yet left not quite, but drew a litle space Behind the bushes, where she her did
hyde,

To weet what mortall hand, or heavens
 grace,
 Would for the wretched infants helpe pro-
 vyde,
 For which it loudly cald, and pittifully cryde.

IX

At length a shepheard, which there by did
 keepe
 His fleecie floeke upon the playnes around, Led with the infants cry, that loud did
 weepe,
 Came to the place; where when he wrapped
 found
 Th' abandond spoyle, he softly it unbound;
 And seeing there that did him pittie sore,
 He tooke it up, and in his mantle wound;
 So home unto his honest wife it bore, Who as her owne it nurst, and named evermore.

X

Thus long continu'd Claribell a thrall, And Bellamour in bands, till that her syre Departed life, and left unto them all.
 Then all the stormes of Fortunes former
 yre
 Were turnd, and they to freedome did retyre.
 Thenceforth they joy'd in happinesse together,
 And lived long in peace and love entyre, Without disquiet or dislike of ether, Till time that Calidore brought Pastorella thether.

XI

Both whom they goodly well did entertaine;
 For Bellamour knew Calidore right well,
 And loved for his prowesse, sith they twaine Long since had fought in field: als Clari-bell
 No lesse did tender the faire Pastorell, Seeing her weake and wan, through durance
 long.
 There they a while together thus did dwell In much delight, and many joyes among, Untill the damzell gan to wex more sound and strong.

XII

Tho gan Sir Calidore him to advize Of his first quest, which he had long for-
 lore,

Asham'd to thinke, how he that enter-
 prize,
 The which the Faery Queene had long
 afore Bequeath'd to him, forslacked had so sore;
 That much he feared, least reprochfull
 blame
 With foule dishonour him mote blot there-
 fore;
 Besides the losse of so much loos and fame,
 As through the world thereby should glorifie his name.

XIII

Therefore resolving to returne in hast Unto so great atchievement, he bethought
 To leave his love, now perill being past, With Claribell, whylest he that monster
 sought
 Throughout the world, and to destruction
 brought.
 So taking leave of his faire Pastorell, Whom to recomfort all the meanes he
 wrought,
 With thanks to Bellamour and Claribell, He went forth on his quest, and did that him befell.

XIV

But first, ere I doe his adventures tell In this exploite, me needeth to declare What did betide to the faire Pastorell, During his absence left in heavy care, Through daily mourning and nightly mis-
 fare:
 Yet did that auncient matrone all she might,
 To cherish her with all things choice and
 rare;
 And her owne handmayd, that Melissa
 hight,
 Appointed to attend her dewly day and night.

XV

Who in a morning, when this mayden faire
 Was dighting her, having her snowy brest
 As yet not laced, nor her golden haire Into their comely tresses dewly drest, Chaunst to espy upon her yvory chest
 The rosie marke, which she remembered
 well
 That litle infant had, which forth she kest,
 The daughter of her Lady Claribell, The which she bore the whiles in prison she did dwell.

XVI

Which well avizing, streight she gan to cast In her conceitfull mynd, that this faire
mayd

Was that same infant, which so long sith past She in the open fields had loosely layd
To fortunes spoile, unable it to ayd.
So, full of joy, streight forth she ran in hast Unto her mistresse, being halfe dismayd,
To tell her how the heavens had her graste,
To save her chyld, which in misfortunes mouth was plaste.

XVII

The sober mother, seeing such her mood, Yet knowing not what meant that sodaine thro, Askt her, how mote her words be understood,
And what the matter was, that mov'd her so.
'My lief, ' said she, 'ye know that long ygo, Whilist ye in durance dwelt, ye to me gave A little mayde, the which ye chylded tho;
The same againe if now ye list to have,
The same is yonder lady, whom High God did save.'

XVIII

Much was the lady troubled at that speach,
And gan to question streight how she it
knew.
'Most certaine markes,' sayd she, 'do me it teach,
For on her brest I with these eyes did vew
The litle purple rose which thereon grew, Whereof her name ye then to her did give.
Besides, her countenance and her likely
hew, Matched with equall yeares, do surely prieve
That yond same is your daughter sure, which yet doth live.'

XIX

The matrone stayd no lenger to enquire,
But forth in hast ran to the straunger mayd;
Whom catching greedily for great desire, Rent up her brest, and bosome open layd,
In which that rose she plainely saw displayd.
Then her embracing twixt her armes
twaine,
She long so held, and softly weeping sayd:
'And livest thou, my daughter, now againe?
And art thou yet alive, whom dead I long did faine?'

XX

The further asking her of sundry things,
And times comparing with their accidents,
She found at last by very certaine signes,
And speaking markes of passed monuments,
That this young mayd, whom chance to her presents,
Is her owne daughter, her owne infant
deare.
Tho, wondring long at those so straunge events,
A thousand times she her embraced nere, With many a joyfull kisse, and many a melting teare.

XXI

Who ever is the mother of one chyld, Which having thought long dead, she fyndes alive, Let her by prooffe of that which she hath fyld
In her owne breast, this mothers joy describe:
For other none such passion can contrive In perfect forme, as this good lady felt,
When she so faire a daughter saw survive,
As Pastorella was, that nigh she swelt For passing joy, which did all into pittie melt.

XXII

Thence running forth unto her loved lord,
She unto him recounted all that fell:
Who joyning joy with her in one accord, Acknowledg'd for his owne faire Pastorell.
There leave we them in joy, and let us tell Of Calidore, who, seeking all this while That monstrous beast by final force to quell,
Through every place, with restlesse paine and toile, Him follow'd by the tract of his outrageous spoile.

XXIII

Through all estates he found that he had
past,
In which he many massacres had left,
And to the clergy now was come at last;
In which such spoile, such havecke, and such theft
He wrought, that thence all goodnesse he bereft,
That endlesse were to tell. The Elfin knight,

Who now no place besides unsought had
left,
At length into a monastere did light, Where he him found despoyling all with maine and might.

XXIV

Into their cloysters now he broken had,
Through which the monckes he chaced here
and there,
And them pursu'd into their dortours sad,
And searched all their cels and secrets
neare;
In which what filth and ordure did appeare Were yrkesome to report; yet that foule
beast,
Nought sparing them, the more did tosse
and teare,
And ransacke all their dennes from most to
least,
Regarding nought religion, nor their holy heast.

XXV

From thence into the sacred church he broke,
And robd the chancell, and the deskes downe threw,
And altars fouled, and blasphemy spoke,
And th' images, for all their goodly hew, Did cast to ground, whilest none was them to rew;
So all confounded and disordered there.
But seeing Calidore, away he flew,
Knowing his fatall hand by former feare;
But he him fast pursuing, soone approached
neare

XXVI

Him in a narrow place he overtooke,
And fierce assailing forst him turne againe: Sternely he turnd againe, when he him
strooke
With his sharpe steele, and ran at him
amaine
With open mouth, that seemed to containe
A full good peeke within the utmost brim,
All set with yron teeth in raunges twaine,
That terrifide his foes, and armed him, Appearing like the mouth of Orcus grisly grim.

XXVII

And therein were a thousand tongs em-
pight,
Of sundry kindes, and sundry quality;

Some were of dogs, that barked day and
night,
And some of cats, that wrawling still did cry,
And some of beares, that groynd continually,
And some of tygres, that did seeme to gren And snar at all that ever passed by:
But most of them were tongues of mortall
men,
Which spake reprochfully, not caring where nor when.

XXVIII

And them amongst were mingled here and
there
The tongues of serpents with three forked stings,
That spat out poyson and gore bloody gere
At all that came within his ravenings, And spake licentious words and hatefull
things
Of good and bad alike, of low and hie;
Ne kesars spared he a whit, nor kings,
But either blotted them with infamie,
Or bit them with his banefull teeth of injury.

XXIX

But Calidore, thereof no whit afraid, Rencountred him with so impetuous might,
That th' outrage of his violence he stayd,
And bet abacke, threatning in vaine to bite,
And spitting forth the poyson of his spight,
That fomed all about his bloody jawes.
Tho, rearing up his former feete on high,
He rampt upon him with his ravenous
pawes,
As if he would have rent him with his cruell clawes.

XXX

But he right well aware, his rage to ward, Did cast his shield atweene, and there-
withall
Putting his puissaunce forth, pursu'd so
hard,
That backward he enforced him to fall,
And being downe, ere he new helpe could
call,
His shield he on him threw, and fast downe held,
Like as a bullocke, that in bloody stall Of butchers balefull hand to ground is
feld,
Is forcibly kept downe, till he be throughly
queld.

XXXI

Full cruelly the beast did rage and rore, To be downe held, and maystred so with
night,
That he gan fret and fome out bloody gore, Striving in vaine to rere him selfe upright.
For still the more he strove, the more the
knight
Did him suppress, and forcibly subdew;
That made him almost mad for fell de-
spight.
He grind, hee bit, he scratcht, he venim
threw,
And fared like a feend, right horrible in hew:

XXXII

Or like the hell-borne Hydra, which they
faine
That great Alcides whilome overthrew, After that he had labourd long in vaine
To erop his thousand heads, the which still new
Forth budded, and in greater number grew.
Such was the fury of this hellish beast, Whilst Calidore him under him downe
threw;
Who nathemore his heavy load releast, But aye the more he rag'd, the more his powre increast.

XXXIII

Tho when the beast saw he mote nought
availe
By force, he gan his hundred tongues apply,
And sharply at him to revile and raile,
With bitter termes of shamefull infamy;
Oft interlacing many a forged lie, Whose like he never once did speake, nor
heare,
Nor ever thought thing so unworthily: Yet did he nought, for all that, him for-
beare,
But strained him so streightly that he chokt him neare.

XXXIV

At last, when as he found his force to shrincke,
And rage to quaille, he tooke a muzzell strong
Of surest yron, made with many a lineke; Therewith he mured up his mouth along,
And therein shut up his blasphemous tong,
For never more defaming gentle knight,
Or unto lovely lady doing wrong:

And thereunto a great long chaine he tight, With which he drew him forth, even in his own despight.

XXXV

Like as whylome that strong Tirynthian
swaine
Brought forth with him the dreadfull dog
of hell,
Against his will fast bound in yron chaine,
And roring horribly, did him compell To see the hatefull sunne, that he might tell
To griesly Pluto what on earth was donne,
And to the other damned ghosts, which dwell For aye in darkenesse, which day light doth
shonne:
So led this knight his captiye with like conquest wonne.

XXXVI

Yet greatly did the beast repine at those Straunge bands, whose like till then he never bore,
Ne ever any durst till then impose,
And chauffed inly, seeing now no more Him liberty was left aloud to rore:
Yet durst he not draw backe, nor once
withstand
The proved powre of noble Calidore, But trembled underneath his mighty hand,
And like a fearefull dog him followed through the land.

XXXVII

Him through all Faery Land he follow'd so,
As if he learned had obedience long,
That all the people, where so he did go, Out of their townes did round about him
throng,
To see him leade that beast in bondage
strong,
And seeing it, much wondred at the sight;
And all such persons as he earst did wrong Rejoyced much to see his captiye plight, And much admyr'd the beast, but more admyr'd the knight.

XXXVIII

Thus was this monster, by the maystring
might
Of doughty Calidore, suppress and tamed, That never more he mote endammadg
wight
With his vile tongue, which many had de-famed.

And many causelesse caused to be blamed:
So did he eeke long after this remaine, Untill that, whether wicked fate so framed,
Or fault of men, he broke his yron chaine,
And got into the world at liberty againe.

XXXIX

Thenceforth more mischief and more seath he wrought

To mortall men, then he had done before; Ne ever could, by any, more be brought Into like bands, ne maystred any more:
Albe that long time after Calidore,
The good Sir Pelleas him tooke in hand,
And after him Sir Lamoracke of yore, And all his brethren borne in Britaine
land;
Yet none of them could ever bring him into band.

XL

So now he raungeth through the world
againe,
And rageth sore in each degree and state;

Ne any is, that may him now restraine,
He growen is so great and strong of late,
Barking and biting all that him doe bate, Albe they worthy blame, or cleare of crime:
Ne spareth he most learned wits to rate, Ne spareth he the gentle poets rime, But rends without regard of person or of time.

XLI

Ne may this homely verse, of many meanest, Hope to escape his venemous despite,
More then my former writs, all were they cleanest
From blamefull blot, and free from all that wite,
With which some wicked tongues did it backebite,
And bring into a mighty peres displeasure,
That never so deserved to endite.
Therefore do you, my rimes, keep better
measure,
And seeke to please, that now is counted wisemens threasure.

TWO CANTOS

MUTABILITIE

WHICH, BOTH FOR FORME AND MATTER, APPEARE TO BE PARCELL OF SOME FOL-LOWING BOOKE OF THE

UNDER THE LEGEND

CONSTANCIE

NEVER BEFORE IMPRINTED

CANTO VI

Proud Change (not pleas'd in mortall things Beneath the moone to raigne) Pretends, as well of gods as men,
To be the soveraine.

I

WHAT man that sees the ever-whirling whee
Of Change, the which all mortall things doth sway,
But that therby doth find, and plainly feele,

How Mutability in them doth play Her cruell sports, to many mens decay?
Which that to all may better yet appeare,
I will rehearse that whylome I heard say, How she at first her selfe began to reare Gainst all the gods, and th' empire sought from them to beare.

II

But first, here falleth fittest to unfold Her antique race and linage ancient,
As I have found it registred of old

In Faery Land mongst records permanent.
 She was, to weet, a daughter by descent Of those old Titans that did whylome
 strive
 With Saturnes sonne for heavens regiment; Whom though high Jove of kingdome did
 deprive,
 Yet many of their stemme long after did survive.

III

And many of them afterwards obtain'd Great power of Jove, and high authority:
 As Hecatè, in whose almighty hand
 He plac't all rule and principality,
 To be by her disposed diversly,
 To gods and men, as she them list divide;
 And drad Bellona, that doth sound on hie Warres and allarums unto nations wide, That makes both heaven and earth to tremble at her pride.

IV

So likewise did this Titanesse aspire, Rule and dominion to her selfe to gaine;
 That as a goddesse men might her admire,
 And heavenly honours yield, as to them
 twaine.
 And first, on earth she sought it to ob-
 taine;
 Where she such prooffe and sad examples
 shewed
 Of her great power, to many ones great
 paine,
 That not men onely (whom she soone sub-
 ded),
 But eke all other creatures, her bad doings rewed.

V

For she the face of earthly things so changed,
 That all which Nature had establish't first In good estate, and in meet order ranged,
 She did pervert, and all their statutes
 burst:
 And all the worlds faire frame (which none yet durst Of gods or men to alter or misguide) She alter'd quite, and made them all accurst
 That God had blest, and did at first provide
 In that still happy state for ever to abide.

VI

Ne shee the lawes of Nature onely brake,
 But eke of Justice, and of Policie;
 And wrong of right, and bad of good did
 make,
 And death for life exchanged foolishlie:
 Since which, all living wights have learn'd
 to die,
 And all this world is woxen daily worse.
 O pittious worke of Mutabilitie!
 By which we all are subject to that curse,
 And death, in stead of life, have suck'd from our nurse.

VII

And now, when all the earth she thus had
 brought
 To her behest, and thrall'd to her might,
 She gan to cast in her ambitious thought T' attempt the empire of the heavens hight, And Jove himselfe to shoulder from his
 right.
 And first, she past the region of the ayre,
 And of the fire, whose substance thin and slight
 Made no resistance, ne could her contraire, But ready passage to her pleasure did prepaire.

VIII

Thence to the circle of the Moone she clambe,
 Where Cynthia raignes in everlasting glory, To whose bright shining palace straight she
 came,
 All fairely deckt with heavens goodly story: Whose silver gates (by which there sate an hory
 Old aged sire, with hower-glasse in hand, Hight Tyme) she entred, were he liefie or sorry:
 Ne staide till she the highest stage had
 scand,
 Where Cynthia did sit, that never still did
 stand.

IX

Her sitting on an ivory throne shee found, Drawne of two steeds, th' one black, the other white, Environ'd with tenne thousand starres
 around,
 That duly her attended day and night;
 And by her side there ran her page, that
 hight

Vesper, whom we the evening-starre intend:
 That with his torche, still twinkling like twilight,
 Her lightened all the way where she should weend,
 And joy to weary wandring travellers did lend:

X

That when the hardy Titanesse beheld
 The goodly building of her palace bright, Made of the heavens substance, and up-held With thousand crystall pillars of huge height, Shee gan to burne in her ambitious spright,
 And t' envie her that in such glorie raigned.
 Eftsoones she cast by force and tortious might Her to displace, and to her selfe to have gained The kingdome of the night, and waters by her wained.

XI

Boldly she bid the goddesse downe descend,
 And let her selfe into that ivory throne;
 For shee her selfe more worthy thereof wend,
 And better able it to guide alone:
 Whether to men, whose fall she did be-mone,
 Or unto gods, whose state she did maligne,
 Or to th' infernall powers, her need give lone
 Of her faire light and bounty most benigne,
 Her selfe of all that rule shee deemed most condigne.

XII

But shee that had to her that soveraigne seat
 By highest Jove assign'd, therein to beare Nights burning lamp, regarded not her threat, Ne yielded ought for favour or for feare;
 But with sterne countenance and disdainfull cheare, Bending her horned browes, did put her back:
 And boldly blaming her for comming there, Bade her attonce from heavens coast to pack,
 Or at her perill bide the wrathfull thunders wrack.

XIII

Yet nathemore the Giantesse forbare:
 But boldly preacing-on, raught forth her hand
 To pluck her downe perforce from off her chaire;
 And there-with lifting up her golden wand, Threatned to strike her if she did withstand.
 Where-at the starres, which round about her blazed,
 And eke the Moones bright wagon, still did stand.
 All beeing with so bold attempt amazed,
 And on her uncouth habit and sterne looke still gazed.

XIV

Meane-while the lower world, which nothing knew Of all that chanced here, was darkned quite;
 And eke the heavens, and all the heavenly crew Of happy wights, now unpurvaide of light, Were much afraid, and wondred at that sight;
 Fearing least Chaos broken had his chaine,
 And brought againe on them eternall night:
 But chiefly Mercury, that next doth raigne, Ran forth in haste, unto the king of gods to plaine.

XV

All ran together with a great out-cry
 To Joves faire palace, fixt in heavens height;
 And beating at his gates full earnestly, Gan call to him aloud with all their might,
 To know what meant that suddaine lack of light.
 The father of the gods, when this he heard,
 Was troubled much at their so strange affright,
 Doubting least Typhon were againe up-rear'd, Or other his old foes, that once him sorely fear'd.

XVI

Eftsoones the sonne of Maia forth he sent Downe to the circle of the Moone, to knowe
 The cause of this so strange astonishment,
 And why shee did her wonted course for-slowe;
 And if that any were on earth belowe

That did with charmes or magick her
molest,
Him to attache, and downe to hell to throwe:
But, if from heaven it were, then to arrest
The author, and him bring before his presence prest.

XVII

The wingd-foot god so fast his plumes did
beat,
That soone he came where-as the Titanesse Was striving with faire Cynthia for her seat:
At whose strange sight and haughty hard-
nesse
He wondred much, and feared her no lesse.
Yet laying feare aside to doe his charge, At last he bade her (with bold stedfast-
nesse)
Ceasse to molest the Moone to walke at large,
Or come before high Jove, her dooings to discharge.

XVIII

And there-with-all, he on her shoulder laid His snaky-wreathed mace, whose awfull
power
Doth make both gods and hellish fiends affraid:
Where-at the Titanesse did sternely lower,
And stoutly answer'd, that in evill hower He from his Jove such message to her
brought,
To bid her leave faire Cynthias silver bower; Sith shee his Jove and him esteemed nought, No more then Cynthia's selfe; but all their kingdoms sought.

XIX

The heavens herald staid not to reply, But past away, his doings to relate Unto his lord; who now, in th' highest sky,
Was placed in his principall estate,
With all the gods about him congregat:
To whom when Hermes had his message
told,
It did them all exceedingly amate, Save Jove; who, changing nought his coun-t'nance bold,
Did unto them at length these speeches wise unfold:

XX

'Harken to mee awhile, yee heavenly powers:
Ye may remember since th' Earths cursed
seed Sought to assaile the heavens eternall towers,
And to us all exceeding feare did breed:
But how we then defeated all their deed, Yee all doe knowe, and them destroyed
quite;
Yet not so quite, but that there did succeed
An off-spring of their blood, which did alite Upon the fruitfull earth, which doth us yet despite.

XXI

'Of that bad seed is this bold woman bred,
That now with bold presumption doth aspire To thrust faire Phœbe from her silver bed, And eke our selves from heavens high empire,
If that her might were match to her desire:
Wherefore, it now behoves us to advise What way is best to drive her to retire;
Whether by open force or counsell wise, Areed, ye sonnes of God, as best ye can devise.'

XXII

So having said, he ceast; and with his brow (His black eye-brow, whose doomefull dreaded beek
Is wont to wield the world unto his vow, And even the highest powers of heaven to check) Made signe to them in their degrees to speake:
Who straight gan cast their counsell grave and wise.
Meane-while th' Earths daughter, thogh she nought did reck
Of Hermes message, yet gan now advise, What course were best to take in this hot bold emprize.

XXIII

Eftsoones she thus resolv'd; that whil'st the gods (After returne of Hermes embassie) Were troubled, and amongst themselves at ods,
Before they could new counsels re-allie,
To set upon them in that extasie;

And take what fortune time and place would
lend:
So forth she rose, and through the purest
sky
To Joves high palace straight cast to ascend, To prosecute her plot: good on-set boads good end.

XXIV

Shee there arriving, boldly in did pass; Where all the gods she found in counsell
close,
All quite unarm'd, as then their manner
was.

At sight of her they suddaine all arose,
In great amaze, ne wist what way to chose.
But Jove, all fearelesse, forc't them to aby;
And in his souveraine throne, gan straight dispose Himselfe more full of grace and majestie, That mote encheare his friends, and foes mote terrifie.

XXV

That when the haughty Titanesse beheld, All were she fraught with pride and impudence,
Yet with the sight thereof was almost queld;
And inly quaking, seem'd as reft of sense,
And voyd of speech in that drad audience;
Untill that Jove himselfe her selfe bespake: 'Speake, thou fraile woman, speake with confidence;
Whence art thou, and what doost thou here now make?
What idle errand hast thou, earths mansion to forsake?'

XXVI

Shee, halfe confused with his great commaund,
Yet gathering spirit of her natures pride, Him boldly answer'd thus to his demaund:
'I am a daughter, by the mothers side,
Of her that is grand-mother magnifide Of all the gods, great Earth, great Chaos
child:
But by the fathers (be it not envie)
I greater am in bloud (whereon I build) Then all the gods, though wrongfully from heaven exil'd.

XXVII

'For Titan (as ye all acknowledge must)
Was Saturnes elder brother by birth-right;

Both, sonnes of Uranus: but by unjust And guilefull meanes, through Corybantess slight,
The younger thrust the elder from his
right:
Since which thou, Jove, injuriously hast
held
The heavens rule from Titans sonnes by
might;
And them to hellish dungeons downe hast
feld:
Witnessse, ye heavens, the truth of all that I have told.'

XXVIII

Whil'st she thus spake, the gods, that gave good eare
To her bold words, and marked well her
grace,
Beeing of stature tall as any there
Of all the gods, and beautifull of face
As any of the goddesses in place, Stood all astonied; like a sort of steeres, Mongst whom some beast of strange and forraine race Unwares is chaunc't, far straying from his peeres:
So did their ghastly gaze bewray their hidden feares.

XXIX

Till, having pauz'd awhile, Jove thus be-
spake:
'Will never mortall thoughts cease to aspire,
In this bold sort, to heaven claime to
make,
And touch celestiall seates with earthly mire?
I would have thought that bold Procrustes
hire,
Or Typhons fall, or proud Ixions paine,
Or great Prometheus tasting of our ire, Would have suffiz'd the rest for to re-
straine,
And warn'd all men, by their example, to refraine:

XXX

'But now this off-scum of that cursed fry Dare to renew the like bold enterprize,
And challenge th' heritage of this our skie; Whom what should hinder, but that we likewise
Should handle as the rest of her allies,

And thunder-drive to hell?' With that, he shooke
 His nectar-deawed locks, with which the skyes
 And all the world beneath for terror quooke, And eft his burning levin-brond in hand he tooke.

XXXI

But, when he looked on her lovely face, In which faire beames of beauty did ap-
 peare,
 That could the greatest wrath soone turne to grace (Such sway doth beauty even in heaven
 beare)
 He staide his hand: and having chang'd his
 cheare,

He thus againe in milder wise began:
 'But ah! if gods should strive with flesh
 yfere,
 Then shortly should the progeny of man Be rooted out, if Jove should doe still what he can.

XXXII

'But thee, faire Titans child, I rather weene, Through some vaine error, or inducement
 light,
 To see that mortall eyes have never seene;
 Or through ensample of thy sisters might, Bellona, whose great glory thou doost
 spight,
 Since thou hast seene her dreadfull power belowe, Mongst wretched men, dismaide with her
 affright,
 To bandie crownes, and kingdomes to bestowe:
 And sure thy worth no lesse then hers doth seem to shoue.

XXXIII

'But wote thou this, thou hardy Titanesse, That not the worth of any living wight
 May challenge ought in heavens interesse; Much lesse the title of old Titans right:
 For we by conquest of our soveraine might,
 And by eternall doome of Fates decree, Have wonne the empire of the heavens
 bright;
 Which to ourselves we hold, and to whom wee Shall worthy deeme partakers of our blisse
 to bee.

XXXIV

'Then cease thy idle claime, thou foolish gerle,
 And seeke by grace and goodnesse to ob-
 taine
 That place from which by folly Titan fell;
 There-to thou maist perhaps, if so thou
 faine,
 Have Jove thy gracious lord and sover-aigne.'
 So having said, she thus to him replide:
 'Ceasse, Saturnes sonne, to seeke by proffers vaine
 Of idle hopes t' allure mee to thy side, For to betray my right, before I have it tride.

XXXV

'But thee, O Jove, no equall judge I deeme
 Of my desert, or of my dewfull right;
 That in thine owne behalfe maist partiall
 seeme:
 But to the highest him, that is behight Father of gods and men by equall might,
 To weet, the god of Nature, I appeale.' There-at Jove wexed wroth, and in his
 spright
 Did inly grudge, yet did it well conceale;
 And bade Dan Phœbus scribe her appellation seale.

XXXVI

Eftsoones the time and place appointed
 were,
 Where all, both heavenly powers and earthly
 wights,
 Before great Natures presence should ap-
 peare,
 For triall of their titles and best rights:
 That was, to weet, upon the highest heights Of Arlo-hill (Who knowes not Arlo-hill?)
 That is the highest head (in all mens sights)
 Of my old father Mole, whom shepheards quill Renowned hath with hymnes fit for a rurall skill.

XXXVII

And, were it not ill fitting for this file, To sing of hilles and woods, mongst warres and knights,
 I would abate the sternenesse of my stile, Mongst these sterne stounds to mingle soft delights;
 And tell how Arlo through Dianaes spights

(Being of old the best and fairest hill That was in all this holy-islands hights)
Was made the most unpleasant and most ill.
Meane while, O Clio, lend Calliope thy quill.

XXXVIII

Whylome, when Ireland florished in fame Of wealths and goodnesse, far above the
rest
Of all that beare the British Islands name, The gods then us'd (for pleasure and for rest)
Oft to resort there-to, when seem'd them
best:
But none of all there-in more pleasure
found Then Cynthia, that is soveraine queene profess
Of woods and forrests, which therein
abound,
Sprinkled with wholsom waters more then most on ground.

XXXIX

But mongst them all, as fittest for her
game,
Either for chace of beasts with hound or boawe,
Or for to shroude in shade from Phœbus
flame,
Or bathe in fountaines that doe freshly
flowe,
Or from high hilles, or from the dales be-
lowe,
She chose this Arlo; where shee did resort
With all her nymphes enraunged on a rowe, With whom the woody gods did oft consорт:
For with the nymphes the satyres love to play and sport.

XL

Amongst the which there was a nymph that hight Molanna, daughter of old Father Mole,
And sister unto Mulla, faire and bright, Unto whose bed false Bregog whylome stole,
That Shepheard Colin dearely did condole, And made her lucklesse loves well knowne
to be.
But this Molanna, were she not so shole,
Were no lesse faire and beautifull then shee:
Yet as she is, a fairer flood may no man
see.

XLI

For, first, she springs out of two marble rocks, On which a grove of oakes high-mounted
growes,
That as a girlond seemes to deck the locks Of som faire bride, brought forth with pompos shows
Out of her bowre, that many flowers strowes:
So, through the flowry dales she tumbling
downe,
Through many woods and shady coverts
flowes
(That on each side her silver channell crowne)
Till to the plaine she come, whose valleyes shee doth drowne.

XLII

In her sweet streames Diana used oft (After hersweatie chace and toilesome play)
To bathe her selfe; and after, on the soft And downy grasse, her dainty limbes to lay In covert shade, where none behold her
may:
For much she hated sight of living eye.
Foolish god Faunus, though full many a day
He saw her clad, yet longed foolishly To see her naked mongst her nymphes in privy.

XLIII

No way he found to compass his desire,
But to corrupt Molanna, this her maid,
Her to discover for some secret hire:
So her with flattering words he first assaid;
And after, pleasing gifts for her purvaid, Queene-apples, and red cherries from the tree,
With which he her allured and betraid,
To tell what time he might her lady see When she her selfe did bathe, that he might secret bee.

XLIV

There-to hee promist, if shee would him
pleasure
With this small boone, to quit her with a better;
To weet, that where-as shee had out of measure
Long lov'd the Fanchin, who by nought did set her,
That he would undertake for this to get her
To be his love, and of him liked well:

Besides all which, he vow'd to be her debter For many moe good turnes then he would
 tell;
 The least of which this little pleasure should excell.

XLV

The simple maid did yield to him anone;
 And eft him placed where he close might view

That never any saw, save onely one,
 Who, for his hire to so foole-hardy dew,
 Was of his hounds devour'd in hunters hew.
 Tho, as her manner was on sunny day, Diana, with her nymphes about her, drew To this sweet spring; where, doffing her array,
 She bath'd her lovely limbes, for Jove a likely pray.

XLVI

There Faunus saw that pleased much his
 eye,
 And made his hart to tickle in his brest, That, for great joy of some-what he did
 spy,
 He could him not containe in silent rest;
 But breaking forth in laughter, loud pro-fest
 His foolish thought. A foolish Fanne indeed,
 That couldst not hold thy selfe so hidden
 blest,
 But wouldest needs thine owne conceit areed!
 Babblers unworthy been of so divine a need.

XLVII

The goddesse, all abashed with that noise, In haste forth started from the guilty
 brooke;
 And running straight where-as she heard
 his voice,
 Enelos'd the bush about, and there him
 tooke,
 Like darred larke, not daring up to looke On her whose sight before so much he
 sought.
 Thence forth they drew him by the hornes, and shooke Nigh all to peeces, that they left him
 nought;
 And then into the open light they forth him brought.

XLVIII

Like as an huswife, that with busie care Thinks of her dairie to make wondrous
 gaine,
 Finding where-as some wicked beast un-ware
 That breakes into her dayr' house, there doth draine
 Her creaming pannes, and frustrate all her
 paine,
 Hath, in some snare or gin set close behind, Entrapped him, and caught into her traine, Then thinkes what punishment were best assign'd,
 And thousand deaths deviseth in her vengefull mind:

XLIX

So did Diana and her maydens all Use silly Faunus, now within their baile:
 They mocke and scorne him, and him foule miscall;
 Some by the nose him pluckt, some by the taile,
 And by his goatish beard some did him haile:
 Yet he (poore soule!) with patience all did
 beare;
 For nought against their wils might countervaile:
 Ne ought he said, what ever he did heare;
 But hanging downe his head, did like a mome appeare.

L

At length, when they had flouted him their
 fill,
 They gan to east what penaunce him to give.
 Some would have gelt him, but that same would spill
 The wood-gods breed, which must for ever
 live:
 Others would through the river him have
 drive,
 And ducked deepe; but that seem'd pen-anee light:
 But most agreed, and did this sentenee give,
 Him in deares skin to clad, and in that
 plight
 To hunt him with their hounds, him selfe save how hee might.

LI

But Cynthia's selfe, more angry then the
 rest,
 Thought not enough to punish him in sport,

And of her shame to make a gamesome jest;
But gan examine him in straighter sort,
Which of her nymphes, or other close consort,
Him thither brought, and her to him betraid.
He, much affeard, to her confessed short That 't was Molanna which her so bewraid.
Then all attonce their hands upon Molanna laid.

LII

But him (according as they had decreed) With a deeres-skin they covered, and then chast
With all their hounds, that after him did
speed;
But he, more speedy, from them fled more
fast
Then any deere: so sore him dread aghast.
They after follow'd all with shrill out-
cry,
Shouting as they the heavens would have
brast:
That all the woods and dales, where he did
flie, Did ring againe, and loud reeccho to the skie.

LIII

So they him follow'd till they weary were;
When, back returning to Molann' againe,
They, by commaundment of Diana, there Her whelm'd with stones. Yet Faunus (for her paine)
Of her beloved Fanchin did obtaine,
That her he would receive unto his bed.
So now her waves passe through a pleasant
plaine,
Till with the Fanchin she her selfe doe wed,
And (both combin'd) themselves in one faire river spred.

LIV

Nath'lesse, Diana, full of indignation, Thence-forth abandond her delicious brooke;
In whose sweet streame, before that bad occasion,
So much delight to bathe her limbes she
tooke:
Ne onely her, but also quite forsooke
All those faire forrests about Arlo hid,
And all that mountaine, which doth over-
looke

The richest champion that may else be rid,
And the faire Shure, in which are thousand salmons bred.

LV

Them all, and all that she so deare did
way, Thence-forth she left; and parting from the
place,
There-on an heavy haplesse curse did lay,
To weet, that wolves, where she was wont to space,
Should harbour'd be, and all those woods
deface,
And thieves should rob and spoile that coast around.
Since which, those woods, and all that goodly chase, Doth to this day with wolves and thieves
abound:
Which too-too true that lands in-dwellers since have found.

CANTO VII

Pealing from Jove to Natur's bar, Bold Alteration pleades Large evidence: but Nature soone Her righteous doome areads.

I

AH! whither doost thou now, thou greater Muse,
Me from these woods and pleasing forrests
bring?
And my fraile spirit (that dooth oft refuse This too high flight, unfit for her weake wing)
Lift up aloft, to tell of heavens king (Thy sovaine sire) his fortunate successe, And victory in bigger noates to sing,
Which he obtain'd against that Titanesse, That him of heavens empire sought to dis-possesse?

II

Yet sith I needs must follow thy behest, Doe thou my weaker wit with skill inspire, Fit for this turne; and in my feeble brest Kindle fresh sparks of that immortal fire Which learned minds inflameth with desire Of heavenly things: for who but thou
alone,
That art yborne of heaven and heavenly
sire,

Can tell things doen in heaven so long
ygone,
So farre past memory of man that may be knowne ?

III

Now, at the time that was before agreed,
The gods assembled all on Arlo hill;
As well those that are sprung of heavenly
seed,
As those that all the other world doe fill,
And rule both sea and land unto their will:
Onely th' infernall powers might not ap-
peare;
Aswell for horror of their count'naunce ill,
As for th' unruly fiends which they did
feare;
Yet Pluto and Proserpina were present
there.

IV

And thither also came all other creatures,
What-ever life or motion doe retaine, According to their sundry kinds of features;
That Arlo scarsly could them all containe;
So full they filled every hill and plaine:
And had not Natures sergeant (that is Order)
Them well disposed by his busie paine,
And raunged farre abroad in every border, They would have caused much confusion and disorder.

Then forth issewed (great goddesse) great Dame Nature,
With goodly port and gracious majesty,
Being far greater and more tall of stature
Then any of the gods or powers on hie:
Yet certes by her face and physnomy, Whether she man or woman inly were,
That could not any creature well desery:
For, with a veile that wimpled every where,
Her head and face was hid, that mote to none appeare.

VI

That, some doe say, was so by skill devized,
To hide the terror of her uncouth hew From mortall eyes, that should be sore agrized;
For that her face did like a lion shew,
That eye of wight could not indure to view:

But others tell that it so beautilous was,
And round about such beames of splendor
threw,
That it the sunne a thousand times did pass, Ne could be seene, but like an image in a glass.

VII

That well may seemen true: for well I
weene
That this same day, when she on Arlo sat, Her garment was so bright and wondrous
sheene,
That my fraile wit cannot devize to what It to compare, nor finde like stuffe to that:
As those three sacred saints, though else most wise, Yet on Mount Thabor quite their wits for-gat,
When they their glorious Lord in strange disguise Transfigur'd sawe; his garments so did daze their eyes.

VIII

In a fayre plaine upon an equall hill
She placed was in a pavilion;
Not such as craftes-men by their idle skill Are wont for princes states to fashion:
But th' Earth her self, of her owne motion,
Out of her fruitfull bosome made to growe
Most dainty trees, that, shooting up anon, Did seeme to bow their bloosming heads full lowe,
For homage unto her, and like a throne did
shew.

IX

So hard it is for any living wight
All her array and vestiments to tell, That old Dan Geffrey (in whose gentle
spright,
The pure well head of poesie did dwell)
In his Foules Parley durst not with it mel,
But it transferd to Alane, who he thought Had in his Plaint of Kinde describ'd it well:
Which who will read set forth so as it
ought,
Go seek he out that Alane where he may be sought.

And all the earth far underneath her feete Was dight with flowres, that voluntary grew

Out of the ground, and sent forth odours
sweet;
Tenne thousand mores of sundry sent and
hew,
That might delight the smell, or please the
view;
The which the nymphes from all the brooks
thereby
Had gathered, which they at her foot-stoole
threw;
That richer seem'd then any tapestry, That princes bowres adorne with painted imagery.

XI

And Mole himselfe, to honour her the
more,
Did deck himself in freshest faire attire,
And his high head, that seemeth alwaies
here
With hardned frosts of former winters ire,
He with an oaken girlound now did tire,
As if the love of some new nymph late sene
Had in him kindled youthfull fresh desire, And made him change his gray attire to
greene:
Ah, gentle Mole! such joyance hath thee well besene.

XII

Was never so great joyance since the day That all the gods whylome assembled were On Hæmus hill in their divine array,
To celebrate the solemne bridall cheare Twixt Peleus and Dame Thetis pointed
there;
Where Phæbus self, that god of poets
hight,
They say did sing the spousall hymne full cleere,
That all the gods were ravisht with delight
Of his celestiall song, and musicks wondrous might.

XIII

This great grandmother of all creatures
bred,
Great Nature, ever young yet full of eld, Still mooving, yet unmoved from her sted, Unscene of any, yet of all beheld,
Thus sitting in her throne, as I have teld, Before her came Dame Mutabilitie;
And being lowe before her presence feld,

With meek obaysance and humilitie, Thus gan her plaintif plea, with words to amplifie:

XIV

'To thee, O greatest goddesse, onely great,
An humble suppliant loe! I lowely fly, Seeking for right, which I of thee entreat,
Who right to all dost deale indifferently, Damning all wrong and tortious injurie, Which any of thy creatures doe to other (Oppressing them with power, unequally) Sith of them all thou art the equal mother, And knittest each to each, as brother unto brother.

XV

'To thee therefore of this same Jove I
plaine,
And of his fellow gods that faine to be,
That challenge to themselves the whole worlds raig;
Of which the greatest part is due to me,
And heaven it selfe by heritage in fee:
For heaven and earth I both alike do
deeme,
Sith heaven and earth are both alike to
thee;
And gods no more then men thou doest
esteeme:
For even the gods to thee, as men to gods, do seeme.

XVI

'Then weigh, O soveraigne goddesse, by what right
These gods do claime the worlds whole soverainty,
And that is onely dew unto thy might Arrogate to themselves ambitiously:
As for the gods owne principality, Which Jove usurpes unjustly, that to be My heritage, Jove's self cannot deny,
From my great grandsire Titan unto mee Deriv'd by dew descent; as is well knowen to thee.

XVII

'Yet mauger Jove, and all his gods beside,
I doe possesse the worlds most regiment;
As, if ye please it into parts divide,
And every parts inholders to convent, Shall to your eyes appeare incontinent.
And first, the Earth (great mother of us all)
That only seems unmov'd and permanent,

And unto Mutability not thrall, Yet is she chang'd in part, and eeke in generall.

XVIII

'For all that from her springs, and is ybredded,
How-ever fayre it flourish for a time,
Yet see we soone decay; and, being dead,
To turne again unto their earthly slime:
Yet, out of their decay and mortall crime,
We daily see new creatures to arize,
And of their winter spring another prime, Unlike in forme, and chang'd by strange
disguise;
So turne they still about, and change in restlesse wise.

XIX

'As for her tenants, that is, man and beasts,
The beasts we daily see massacred dy,
As thralls and vassals unto mens beheasts:
And men themselves doe change continually,
From youth to eld, from wealth to poverty,
From good to bad, from bad to worst of all:
Ne doe their bodies only flit and fly; But eeke their minds (which they immortall
call)
Still change and vary thoughts, as new occasions fall.

XX

'Ne is the water in more constant case; Whether those same on high, or these be-lowe.
For th' ocean moveth stil from place to place;
And every river still doth ebbe and flowe:
Ne any lake, that seems most still and slowe, Ne poole so small, that can his smoothnesse
holde,
When any winde doth under heaven blowe;
With which the clouds are also tost and
roll'd;
Now like great hills; and streight, like sluces, them unfold.

XXI

'So likewise are all watry living wights Still tost and turned with continuall change, Never abyding in their stedfast plights.
The fish, still floting, doe at randon range,
And never rest, but evermore exchange Their dwelling places, as the streames them carrie:
Ne have the watry foules a certaine grange

Wherein to rest, ne in one stead do tarry; But flitting still doe flie, and still their places vary.

XXII

'Next is the ayre: which who feeles not by sense (For of all sense it is the middle meane)
To flit still? and, with subtill influence Of his thin spirit, all creatures to main-
taine
In state of life? O weake life! that does leane
On thing so tickle as th' unsteady ayre; Which every howre is chang'd, and altred
cleane
With every blast that bloweth fowle or
faire:
The faire doth it prolong; the fowle doth it impaire.

XXIII

'Therein the changes infinite beholde, Which to her creatures every minute
chaunce:
Now, boyling hot: streight, friezing deadly
cold:
Now, faire sun-shine, that makes all skip and daunce:
Streight, bitter storms and balefull countenance,
That makes them all to shiver and to
shake:
Rayne, hayle, and snowe do pay them sad
penance,
And dreadfull thunder-claps (that make them quake)
With flames and flashing lights that thousand changes make.

XXIV

'Last is the fire: which, though it live for ever,
Ne can be quenched quite, yet, every day, Wee see his parts, so soone as they do
sever,
To lose their heat, and shortly to decay;
So makes himself his owne consuming
pray.
Ne any living creatures doth he breed.
But all that are of others bredd doth say,
And with their death his cruell life dooth
feed;
Nought leaving, but their barren ashes, without seed.

XXV

'Thus all these fower (the which the ground-work bee
Of all the world, and of all living wights)
To thousand sorts of change we subject
see:

Yet are they chang'd (by other wondrous slights)

Into themselves, and lose their native
mights:

The fire to aire, and th' ayre to water sheere,

And water into earth: yet water fights With fire, and aire with earth, approaching neere:

Yet all are in one body, and as one ap-
peare.

XXVI

'So in them all raignes Mutabilitie; How-ever these, that gods themselves do
call,

Of them doe claime the rule and sover-ainty:

As Vesta, of the fire æthereall;

Vulcan, of this, with us so usuall;

Ops, of the earth; and Juno, of the ayre;

Neptune, of seas; and nymphes, of rivers
all:

For all those rivers to me subject are;
And all the rest, which they usurp, be all my share.

XXVII

'Which to approven true, as I have told, Vouchsafe, O goddesse, to thy presence call The rest which doe the world in being
hold:

As times and seasons of the yeare that
fall:

Of all the which demand in generall,
Or judge thy selfe, by verdit of thine eye, Whether to me they are not subject all.'

Nature did yeeld thereto; and by-and-by, Bade Order call them all before her majesty.

XXVIII

So forth issew'd the seasons of the yeare:
First, lusty Spring, all dight in leaves of flowres

That freshly budded and new bloosmes did
beare

(In which a thousand birds had built their
bowres,

That sweetly sung, to call forth paramours):
And in his hand a javelin he did beare,
And on his head (as fit for warlike stoures)
A guilt engraven morion he did weare;
That, as some did him love, so others did him feare.

XXIX

Then came the jolly Sommer, being dight
In a thin silken cassock coloured greene,
That was unlyned all, to be more light:
And on his head a girlond well beseene He wore, from which, as he had chauffed
been,

The sweat did drop; and in his hand he bore
A boawe and shaftes, as he in forrest greene Had hunted late the libbard or the bore, And now would bathe his limbes, with labor heated sore.

XXX

Then came the Autumne, all in yellow clad,
As though he joyed in his plentious store, Laden with fruits that made him laugh, full glad

That he had banisht hunger, which to-fore
Had by the belly oft him pinched sore.

Upon his head a wreath, that was enrold
With eares of corne of every sort, he bore:
And in his hand a sickle he did holde, To reape the ripened fruits the which the earth had yold.

XXXI

Lastly came Winter, cloathed all in frize, Chattering his teeth for cold that did him
chill,

Whil'st on his hoary beard his breath did freese,

And the dull drops, that from his purpled bill

As from a limbeck did adown distill.
In his right hand a tipped staffe he held,
With which his feeble steps he stayed still:
For he was faint with cold, and weak with
eld;

That scarce his loosed limbes he hable was to weld.

XXXII

These, marching softly, thus in order went,
And after them the monthes all riding
came:

First, sturdy March, with brows full sternly
bent.

And armed strongly, rode upon a ram,
The same which over Hellespontus swam:
Yet in his hand a spade he also hent,
And in a bag all sorts of seeds ysame,
Which on the earth he strowed as he went,
And fild her womb with fruitfull hope of nourishment.

XXXIII

Next came fresh Aprill, full of lustyhed,
And wanton as a kid whose horne new buds:
Upon a bull he rode, the same which led Europa floting through th' Argolick fluds:
His hornes were gilden all with golden studs,
And garnished with garlonds goodly dight
Of all the fairest flowres and freshest buds Which th' earth brings forth, and wet he seem'd in sight
With waves, through which he waded for his loves delight.

XXXIV

Then came faire May, the fayrest mayd on
ground,
Deckt all with dainties of her seasons pryde,
And throwing flowres out of her lap around:
Upon two brethrens shoulders she did ride,
The twinnes of Leda; which on eyther side Supported her like to their souveraine queene.
Lord! how all creatures laught, when her they spide,
And leapt and daunc't as they had ravisht
beene!
And Cupid selfe about her fluttred all in greene.

XXXV

And after her came jolly June, arrayd
All in greene leaves, as he a player were;
Yet in his time he wrought as well as playd, That by his plough-yrons mote right well
appeare:
Upon a crab he rode, that him did beare With crooked crawling steps an uncouth
pase,
And backward yode, as bargemen wont to
fare
Bending their force contrary to their face, Like that ungracious crew which faines de-murest grace.

XXXVI

Then came hot July boyling like to fire
That all his garments he had cast away:

Upon a lyon raging yet with ire
He boldly rode, and made him to obey:
It was the beast that whylome did forray
The Nemaean Forrest, till th' Amphytrionide Him slew, and with his hide did him array:
Behinde his back a sithe, and by his side Under his belt he bore a sickle circling wide.

XXXVII

The sixt was August, being rich arrayd
In garment all of gold downe to the ground:
Yet rode he not, but led a lovely mayd Forth by the lilly hand, the which was
ground
With eares of corne, and full her hand was
found:
That was the righteous virgin which of old Liv'd here on earth, and plenty made
abound;
But, after wrong was lov'd and justice solde,
She left th' unrighteous world and was to heaven extold.

XXXVIII

Next him September marched eeke on foote; Yet was he heavy laden with the spoyle
Of harvests riches, which he made his boot,
And him enricht with bounty of the soyle:
In his one hand, as fit for harvests toyle,
He held a knife-hook; and in th' other hand A paire of waights, with which he did as-
soyle
Both more and lesse, where it in doubt did
stand,
And equall gave to each as justice duly seam'd.

XXXIX

Then came October full of merry glee:
For yet his noule was totty of the must,
Which he was treading in the wine-fats
see,
And of the joyous oyle, whose gentle gust Made him so frolicke and so full of lust:
Upon a dreadfull scorpion he did ride,
The same which by Dianaes doom unjust Slew great Orion: and eeke by his side He had his ploughing-share and coulter ready tyde.

XL

Next was November; he full grosse and fat,
As fed with lard, and that right well might
seeme;

For he had been a fattig hogs of late,
That yet his browes with sweat did reek and steem,
And yet the season was full sharp and breem;
In planting eeke he took no small delight.
Whereon he rode, not easie was to deeme;
For it a dreadfull centaure was in sight,
The seed of Saturne and faire Nais, Chiron
hight.

XLI

And after him came next the chill December:
Yet he, through merry feasting which he
made,
And great bonfires, did not the cold remember;
His Saviours birth his mind so much did
glad:
Upon a shaggy-bearded goat he rade,
The same wherewith Dan Jove in tender
yeares,
They say, was nourisht by th' Idæan mayd;
And in his hand a broad deepe boawle he
beares,
Of which he freely drinks an health to all his peeres.

XLII

Then came old January, wrapped well
In many weeds to keep the cold away;
Yet did he quake and quiver like to quell, And blowe his nayles to warme them if he
may:
For they were numbd with holding all the
day
An hatchet keene, with which he felled
wood,
And from the trees did lop the needlesse spray:
Upon an huge great earth-pot steane he
stood,
From whose wide mouth there flowed forth the Romane flood.

XLIII

And lastly came cold February, sitting In an old wagon, for he could not ride; Drawne of two fishes for the season fitting,
Which through the flood before did softly
slyde
And swim away: yet had he by his side His plough and harnessse fit to till the
ground,

And tooles to prune the trees, before the
pride
Of hasting Prime did make them burgein
round.
So past the twelve months forth, and their dew places found.

XLIV

And after these there came the Day and
Night,
Riding together both with equall pase, Th' one on a palfrey blacke, the other
white:
But Night had covered her uncomely face With a blacke veile, and held in hand a
mace,
On top whereof the moon and stars were
pight,
And Sleep and Darknesse round about did
trace:
But Day did beare, upon his scepters hight, The goodly sun, encompass all with beames
bright.

XLV

Then came the Howres, faire daughters of high Jove
And timely Night, the which were all en-dewed
With wondrous beauty fit to kindle love;
But they were virgins all, and love es-chewed,
That might forslack the charge to them fore-shewed
By mighty Jove; who did them porters
make Of heavens gate (whence all the gods issued)
Which they did dayly watch, and nightly wake
By even turnes, ne ever did their charge forsake.

XLVI

And after all came Life, and lastly Death:
Death with most grim and griesly visage
seene,
Yet is he nought but parting of the breath;
Ne ought to see, but like a shade to weene, Unbodied, unsoul'd, unheard, unseene:
But Life was like a faire young lusty boy,
Such as they faire Dan Cupid to have beene, Full of delightfull health and lively joy, Deckt all with flowres, and wings of gold fit to employ.

XLVII

When these were past, thus gan the Titan-
esse:

'Lo! mighty mother, now be judge, and
say

Whether in all thy creatures more or lesse Change doth not raign and beare the greatest sway:

For who sees not that Time on all doth
pray?

But times do change and move continually:
So nothing here long standeth in one stay:
Wherefore, this lower world who can deny But to be subject still to Mutabilitie?'

XLVIII

Then thus gan Jove: 'Right true it is, that these,

And all things else that under heaven dwell, Are chaung'd of Time, who doth them all disseise

Of being: but who is it (to me tell) That Time himselfe doth move and still compell

To keepe his course? Is not that namely wee,

Which poure that vertue from our heavenly
cell

That moves them all, and makes them changed be?

So them we gods doe rule, and in them also thee.'

XLIX

To whom thus Mutability: 'The things Which we see not how they are mov'd and swayd

Ye may attribute to your selves as kings, And say they by your secret powre are
made:

But what we see not, who shall us per-
swade?

But were they so, as ye them faine to be, Mov'd by your might, and ordred by your
ayde;

Yet what if I can prove, that even yee Your selves are likewise chang'd, and subject unto mee?

'And first, concerning her that is the first, Even you, faire Cynthia, whom so much ye
make

Joves dearest darling; she was bred and nurst

On Cynthus hill, whence she her name did
take:

Then is she mortall borne, how-so ye crake; Besides, her face and countenance every
day

We changed see, and sundry forms partake, Now hornd, now round, now bright, now brown and gray;

So that as changefull as the moone men use
to say.

LI

'Next Mercury, who though he lesse ap-
peare

To change his hew, and alwayes seeme as
one,

Yet he his course doth altar every yeare,
And is of late far out of order gone:

So Venus eeke, that goodly paragone, Though faire all night, yet is she darke all
day;

And Phœbus self, who lightsome is alone,
Yet is he oft eclipsed by the way,
And fills the darkned world with terror and dismay.

LII

'Now Mars, that valiant man, is changed
most:

For he some times so far runs out of square,
That he his way doth seem quite to have
lost,

And cleane without his usuall sphere to
fare;

That even these star-gazers stonish are At sight thereof, and damne their lying bookes:

So likewise grim Sir Saturne oft doth spare His sterne aspect, and calme his crabbed lookes:

So many turning cranks these have, so many crookes.

LIII

'But you, Dan Jove, that only constant are,
And king of all the rest, as ye do clame,
Are you not subject eeke to this misfare?
Then let me aske you this withouten blame:
Where were ye borne? Some say in Crete
by name,

Others in Thebes, and others other-where,
But wheresoever they comment the same,
They all consent that ye begotten were And borne here in this world, ne other can appare.

LIV

‘Then are ye mortall borne, and thrall to
me,
Unless the kingdome of the sky yee make Immortall and unchangeable to be:
Besides, that power and vertue which ye
spake,
That ye here worke, doth many changes
take,
And your owne natures change: for each of you,
That vertue have, or this or that to make,
Is cheekt and changed from his nature trew,
By others opposition or obliquid view.

LV

‘Besides, the sundry motions of your spheares,
So sundry waies and fashions as clerkes
faine,
Some in short space, and some in longer
yeares;
What is the same but alteration plaine?
Onely the starrie skie doth still remaine: Yet do the starres and signes therein still
move,
And even it self is mov’d, as wizards saine.
But all that moveth doth mutation love: Therefore both you and them to me I subject prove.

LVI

‘Then since within this wide great universe
Nothing doth firme and permanent appeare, But all things tost and turned by trans-
verse:
What then should let, but I aloft should
reare
My trophee, and from all the triumph
beare?
Now judge then (O thou greatest god-desse trew!)
According as thy selfe doest see and heare,
And unto me addoome that is my dew;
That is the rule of all, all being rul’d by you.’

LVII

So having ended, silence long enseeded;
Ne Nature to or fro spake for a space, But, with firme eyes affixt, the ground still viewed.
Meane while, all creatures, looking in her
face,

Expecting th’ end of this so doubtfull case, Did hang in long suspence what would en-
sew,
To whether side should fall the soveraigne
place:
At length, she, looking up with chearefull
view,
The silence brake, and gave her doome in speeches few:

LVIII

‘I well consider all that ye have sayd,
And find that all things stedfastnes doe hate And changed be: yet being rightly wayd, They are not changed from their first estate;
But by their change their being doe dilate:
And turning to themselves at length agaïne,
Doe worke their owne perfection so by fate: Then over them Change doth not rule and
raigne;
But they raigne over Change, and doe their states maintaine.

LIX

‘Cease therefore, daughter, further to aspire,
And thee content thus to be rul’d by me:
For thy decay thou seekst by thy desire:
But time shall come that all shall changed
bee,
And from thenceforth none no more change shall see.’
So was the Titaness put downe and whist, And Jove confirm’d in his imperiall see.
Then was that whole assembly quite dis-
mist,
And Natur’s selfe did vanish, whither no man wist.

THE VIII. CANTO, UNPERFITE

I

WHEN I bethinke me on that speech whyl-
eare
Of Mutability, and well it way, Me seemes, that though she all unworthy
were
Of the heav’ns rule, yet, very sooth to say,
In all things else she beares the greatest
sway:
Which makes me loath this state of life so tickle,

And love of things so vaine to cast away;
Whose flowring pride, so fading and so fickle, Short Time shall soon cut down with his consuming sickle.

II

Then gin I thinke on that which Nature
sayd,
Of that same time when no more change shall be,

But stedfast rest of all things, firmly
stayd
Upon the pillours of eternity,
That is contrayr to Mutabilitie:
For all that moveth doth in change de-
light:
But thence-forth all shall rest eternally With Him that is the God of Sabbaoth
hight:
O that great Sabbaoth God graunt me that Sabaoths sight!

DAPHNAIDA

AN ELEGIE UPON THE DEATH OF THE NOBLE AND VERTUOUS DOUGLAS HOWARD, DAUGHTER AND HEIRE OF HENRY LORD HOWARD, VISCOUNT BYNDON, AND WIFE OF ARTHURE GORGES ESQUIER

DEDICATED TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE THE LADY HELENA, MARQUESS OF NORTHAMPTON

BY ED. SP.

AT LONDON

PRINTED FOR WILLIAM PONSONBY, DWELLING IN PAULES CHURCHYARD AT THE SIGNE OF THE BISHOPS HEAD

1591

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE AND VERTUOUS LADY HELENA MAR-QUESSE OF NORTH-HAMPTON

I HAVE the rather presumed humbly to offer unto your Honour the dedication of this little poëme, for that the noble and vertuous gentlewoman of whom it is written was by match neere alied, and in affection greatly devoted unto your Ladiship. The occasion why I wrote the same was aswell the great good fame which I heard of her deceased, as the particular goodwill which I beare unto her husband Master Arthur Gorges, a lover of learning and vertue, whose house, as your Ladiship by mariage hath honoured, so doe I find the name of them by many notable records, to be of great antiquitie in this realme, and such as have ever borne themselves with honourable reputation to the world, and unspotted loyaltye to their prince and countrey: besides, so lineally are they descended from the Howards, as that the Lady Anne Howard, eldest daughter to John Duke of Norfolk, was wife to Sir Edmund, mother to Sir Edward, and grandmother to Sir William and Sir Thomas Gorges, Knightes. And therefore I doe assure my selfe that no due honour done to the White Lyon, but will be most gratefull to your Ladiship, whose husband and children do so neerely participate with the blood of that noble family. So in all dutie I recommende this pamphlet, and the good acceptance thereof, to your honourable favour and protection. London, this first of Januarie, 1591.

Your Honours humbly ever,

Ed. Sp.

[According to the usage of the sixteenth century in England, 'this first of Januarie, 1591,' subscribed to the dedicatory letter of Daphnaïda, would read in modern style, 1592; for the civil year did not begin till March 25. The compiler of a calendar might head his list of the months with January, for that was by long tradition the leader of the astronomical year; but a writer of letters would date according to the civil year. Yet it seems most unlikely that Spenser should have been in London in January, 1592. The patent for his pension, one main cause apparently of his long abode in England, had been finally issued in the preceding February; the preface of Complaints refers to him as already departed over sea, and since that volume was entered upon the Stationers' Register in December, 1590, it is likely to have been issued not more than a few months later; finally, the dedication of Colin Clout's Come Home Again is dated from Kilcolman 'the 27 of December, 1591' — only five days before 'this first of Januarie,' 1592. That particular clash of dates, to be sure, has

DAPHNAÏDA

WHAT ever man he be, whose heavie minde, With grieffe of mournfull great mishap
opprest,

Fit matter for his cares increase would finde:
Let reade the ruffull plaint herein exprest
Of one (I weene) the wofulst man alive, Even sad Aleyon, whose empierced brest Sharpe sorrowe did in thousand peeces rive.

But who so else in pleasure findeth sense,
Or in this wretched life dooth take delight, Let him be banisht farre away from hence: ¹⁰ Ne let the Sacred Sisters here be hight, Though they of sorrowe heavilie can sing;
For even their heavie song would breede
delight:

But here no tunes, save sobs and grones, shall ring.

In stead of them and their sweet harmonie, Let those three Fatal Sisters, whose sad
hands

Doo weave the direfull threds of destinie,
And in their wrath breake off the vitall bands, Approach hereto: and let the dreadful
queene

Of darkenes deepe come from the Stygian strands, ²⁰
And grisly ghosts, to heare this dolefull
teene.

been explained by a recent critic on the supposition that Colin Clout's Come Home Again celebrates before the fact a merely prospective return to Ireland, that, in other words, it was written in England and dated from Kilcolman only by way of fiction. On the whole, however, one can more easily believe that in dating the dedication of Daphnaïda Spenser followed the Continental usage, or that he or the printer blundered, that, in either case, the date is meant for New Year's, 1591, modern style, — especially since the lady whose death the poem records died in August, 1590.

Daphnaïda cannot pretend to greatness, yet few of Spenser's poems are more thoroughly characteristic. Conventional in mode, with hardly a note of full imaginative conviction, it is quietly and unfailingly harmonious. Its stanza, in which, by mere transposition of a line, he creates out of the orthodox rhyme royal a form of haunting cadence, almost as beautiful as the stanza of 'October,' would alone raise it high above the perfunctory.]

In gloomie evening, when the wearie sun
After his dayes long labour drew to rest,
And sweatie steedes, now having over-run
The compast skie, gan water in the west, I walkt abroad to breath the freshing
ayre

In open fields, whose flowring pride, opprest With early frosts, had lost their beautie
faire.

There came unto my minde a troublous
thought,

Which dayly dooth my weaker wit posse-sse, ³⁰

Ne lets it rest, untill it forth have brought Her long borne infant, fruit of heavynesse, Which she conceived hath through meditation

Of this worlds vainnesse and lifes wretched-
nesse,

That yet my soule it deeply doth empas-
sion.

So as I muzed on the miserie In which men live, and I of many most,
Most miserable man, I did espie Where towards me a sory wight did cost, Clad all in black, that mourning did bewray, ⁴⁰

And Jaakob staffe in hand devoutly crost, Like to some pilgrim come from farre
away.

His carelessse locks, uncombed and unshorne, Hlong long adowne, and bearde all overgrowne,

That well he seemd to be sum wight for-
lorne:

Downe to the earth his heavie eyes were
throwne

As loathing light; and ever as he went,
He sighed soft, and inly deepe did grone,
As if his heart in peeces would have rent.

Approaching nigh, his face I vewed nere, ⁵⁰
And by the semblant of his countenance Me seemd I had his person seene elsewhere, Most like Alecyon seeming at a glaunce; Alecyon he, the jollie shepheard swaine,
That wont full merrilie to pipe and daunce, And fill with pleasance every wood and
plaine.

Yet halfe in doubt because of his disguise,
I softlie sayd, 'Alecyon!' Therewithall
He lookt aside as in disdainfull wise, Yet stayed not: till I againe did call. ⁶⁰

Then turning back, he saide with hollow
sound,

'Who is it that dooth name me, wofull
thrall,
The wretchedst man that treades this day
on ground?'

'One whome like wofulnesse, impressed
deepe,

Hath made fit mate thy wretched case to
heare,

And given like cause with thee to waile and
weepe:

Griefe findes some ease by him that like does beare.

Then stay, Alecyon, gentle shepheard, stay, Quoth I, 'till thou have to my trustie eare Committed what thee dooth so ill apay.' ⁷⁰

'Cease, foolish man,' saide he halfe wroth-
fully,

'To seeke to heare that which cannot be
told:

For the huge anguish, which dooth multiply My dying paines, no tongue can well unfold:
Ne doo I care that any should bemone My hard mishap, or any weepe that would,
But seeke alone to weepe, and dye alone.'

'Then be it so,' quoth I, 'that thou art bent To die alone, unpitied, unplained;

Yet ere thou die, it were convenient ⁸⁰ To tell the cause which thee theretoo constrained,

Least that the world thee dead accuse of guilt,

And say, when thou of none shalt be maintained,

That thou for secret crime thy blood hast
spilt.'

'Who life does loath, and longs to bee unbound

From the strong shackles of fraile flesh,
quoth he,

'Nought cares at all what they that live on
ground

Deeme the occasion of his death to bee:
Rather desires to be forgotten quight,

Than question made of his calamitie; ⁹⁰ For harts deep sorrow hates both life and
light.

'Yet since so much thou seemst to rue my
griefe,

And carest for one that for himselfe cares
nought,

(Signe of thy love, though nought for my relieve:

For my reliefe exceedeth living thought.) I will to thee this heavie case relate.

Then harken well till it to ende be brought,
For never didst thou heare more haplesse
fate.

'Whilome I usde (as thou right well doest
know)

My little flocke on westerne downes to keepe, ¹⁰⁰

Not far from whence Sabrinaes streame
doth flow,

And flowrie bancks with silver liquor steepe: Nought carde I then for worldly change or
chaunce,

For all my joy was on my gentle sheepe,
And to my pype to caroll and to daunce.

'It there befell, as I the fields did range Fearelesse and free, a faire young Lionesse,

White as the native rose before the change Which Venus blood did in her leaves im-
presse,

I spied playing on the grassie playne ¹¹⁰ Her youthfull sports and kindlie wanton-
nesse,

That did all other beasts in beawtie staine.

' Much was I moved at so goodly sight, Whose like before mine eye had seldome
seene,

And gan to cast how I her compasse might,
And bring to hand, that yet had never beene:
So well I wrought with mildnes and with
paine,

That I her caught disporting on the grene,
And brought away fast bound with silver chaîne.

' And afterwards I handled her so fayre, ¹²⁰
That though by kind shee stout and salvage
were,

For being borne an annceint lions haire,
And of the race that all wild beastes do feare, Yet I her fram'd and wan so to my bent, That shee became so meeke and milde of
cheare
As the least lamb in all my flock that went.

' For shee in field, where ever I did wend, Would wend with me, and waite by me all
day:

And all the night that I in watch did spend,
If cause requir'd, or els in sleepe, if nay, ¹³⁰ Shee would all night by mee or watch or
sleepe;

And evermore when I did sleepe or play,
She of my flock would take full warie keepe.

' Safe then and safest were my sillie sheepe, Ne fear'd the wolfe, ne fear'd the wildest
beast,

All were I drown'd in carelesse quiet deepe:
My lovelie Lionesse without beheast
So carefull was for them and for my good,
That when I waked, neither most nor least I found miscaried or in plaine or wood. ¹⁴⁰

' Oft did the shepheards, which my hap did
heare,

And oft their lasses, which my luck envide, Daylie resort to me from farre and neare,
To see my Lyonesse, whose praises wide Were spred abroad; and when her worth-
nesse

Much greater than the rude report they
tri'de,

They her did praise, and my good fortune
blesse.

' Long thus I joyed in my happinesse, And well did hope my joy would have no
end:

But oh! fond man! that in worlds ficklenesse ¹⁵⁰

Reposedst hope, or weenedst her thy frend
That glories most in mortall miseries, And daylie doth her changefull counsels
bend,

To make new matter fit for tragedies!

' For whilest I was thus without dread or
dout,

A cruell Satyre with his murdrous dart, Greedie of mischiefe, ranging all about,
Gave her the fatall wound of deadly smart,
And reft fro me my sweete companion,
And reft fro me my love, my life, my hart:
My Lyonesse (ah, woe is mee!) is gon. ¹⁶⁰

' Out of the world thus was she reft awaie,
Out of the world, unworthie such a spoyle;
And borne to heaven, for heaven a fitter pray;
Much fitter than the lyon which with toyle Alcides slew, and fixt in firmament:

Her now I seek throughout this earthlie
soyle,
And seeking misse, and missing doe lament.'

Therewith he gan afresh to waile and weepe,
That I for pittie of his heavie plight ¹⁷⁰ Could not abstaine mine eyes with teares to
steepe:

But when I saw the anguish of his spright
Some deale alaid, I him bespake againe:
' Certes, Alcyon, painfull is thy plight,
That it in me breeds almost equall paine.

' Yet doth not my dull wit well understand The riddle of thy loved Lionesse;

For rare it seemes in reason to be skand, That man, who doth the whole worlds rule
possesse,

Should to a beast his noble hart embase, ¹⁸⁰
And be the vassall of his vassaesse:
Therefore more plaine aread this doubtfull
case.'

Then sighing sore, ' Daphne thou knewest,' quoth he;

' She now is dead': ne more endured to say,
But felo to ground for great extremitie;
That I, beholding it, with deepe dismay Was much appald, and lightly him uprear-
ing,

Revoked life, that would have fled away, All were my self through grieffe in deadly drearung.

Then gan I him to comfort all my best, 190
 And with milde counsaile strove to mitigate The stormie passion of his troubled brest:
 But he thereby was more empasseionate;
 As stubborne steed, that is with curb restrained,
 Becomes more fierce and fervent in his gate;
 And breaking foorth at last, thus dearmelie plained.

I

‘What man henceforth, that breatheth vi-tall ayre,
 Will honour Heaven, or heavenlie powers
 adore,
 Which so unjustlie doe their judgments
 share 199
 Mongst earthly wights, as to affliet so sore
 The innocent as those which do transgresse, And do not spare the best or fairest more Than worst or fowlest, but doe both op-
 presse?’

‘If this be right, why did they then create The world so fayre, sith fairenesse is neglected?
 Or whie be they themselves immaculate,
 If purest things be not by them respected?
 She faire, shee pure, most faire, most pure she was,
 Yet was by them as thing impure rejected:
 Yet shee in purenesse heaven it selfe did pas.

‘In purenesse and in all celestiaall grace, 211
 That men admire in goodlie womankind,
 She did excell, and seem’d of angels race,
 Living on earth like angell new divinde, Adorn’d with wisdome and with chastitie,
 And all the dowries of a noble mind,
 Which did her beautie much more beautifie.

‘No age hath bred (since fayre Astræa left The sinfull world) more vertue in a wight, And when she parted hence, with her she
 reft 220
 Great hope, and robd her race of bountie
 quight:
 Well may the shepheard lasses now lament,
 For dubble losse by her hath on them light,
 To loose both her and bounties ornament.

‘Ne let Elisa, royall shepheardesse,
 The praises of my parted love envy,
 For she hath praises in all plenteousnesse Powr’d upon her, like showers of Castaly,

By her own shepheard, Colin her owne shepherd, 229
 That her with heavenly hymnes doth deifie, Of rusticke muse full hardly to be betterd.

‘She is the rose, the glorie of the day,
 And mine the primrose in the lowly shade:
 Mine? ah, not mine! amisse I mine did say:
 Not mine, but His which mine awhile her
 made:
 Mine to be His, with Him to live for ay.
 O that so faire a flower so soone should fade,
 And through untimely tempest fall away!

‘She fell away in her first ages spring, Whil’st yet her leafe was greene, and fresh her rinde, 240
 And whil’st her braunch faire blossomes foorth did bring,
 She fell away against all course of kinde:
 For age to dye is right, but youth is wrong;
 She fel away like fruit blowne downe with
 winde:
 Weepe, shepheard, weepe, to make my undersong.

II

‘What hart so stony hard, but that would
 weepe,
 And poure foorth fountaines of incessant
 teares?
 What Timon, but would let compassion
 creepe
 Into his brest, and pierce his frosen eares?
 In stead of teares, whose brackish bitter
 well 250
 I wasted have, my heart blood dropping
 weares,
 To thinke to ground how that faire blossome
 fell.

‘Yet fell she not as one enforst to dye, Ne dyde with dread and grudging discon-
 tent,
 But as one toylde with travaile downe doth
 lye,
 So lay she downe, as if to sleepe she went,
 And close her eyes with carelesse quiet-
 nesse;
 The whites soft death away her spirit hent,
 And soule assoyld from sinfull fleshlinesse.

‘Yet ere that life her lodging did forsake.
 She, all resolv’d and ready to remove, 261 Calling to me (ay me!) this wise be-pake:

"Aleyon! ah, my first and latest love!
 Ah! why does my Aleyon weepe and
 mourne,
 And grieve my ghost, that ill mote him be-
 hove,
 As if to me had chanst some evill tourne?"

"I, since the messenger is come for mee That summons soules unto the bridale feast Of his great Lord, must needes depart from
 thee,
 And straight obay his soveraine behest: 270
 Why should Aleyon then so sore lament
 That I from miserie shall be releast, And freed from wretched long imprison-
 ment?"

"Our daies are full of dolor and disease,
 Our life afflicted with incessant paine,
 That nought on earth may lessen or appease.
 Why then should I desire here to remaine?
 Or why should he that loves me, sorie bee
 For my deliverance, or at all complaine My good to heare, and toward joyes to
 see? 280

"I goe, and long desired have to goe,
 I goe with gladnesse to my wished rest, Whereas no worlds sad care, nor wasting
 woe,
 May come their happie quiet to molest,
 But saints and angels in celestia l thrones Eternally Him praise that hath them blest;
 There shall I be amongst those blessed ones.

"Yet ere I goe, a pledge I leave with thee Of the late love, the which betwixt us
 past,
 My young Ambrosia; in lieu of mee 290 Love her: so shall our love for ever last.
 Thus, deare, adieu! whom I expect ere
 long."
 So having said, away she softly past; Weepe, shepherd, weepe, to make mine undersong.

III

"So oft as I record those piercing words, Which yet are deepe engraven in my brest, and those last deadly accents, which like swords
 Did wound my heart and rend my bleeding
 chest,
 With those sweet sugred speaches doo compare

The which my soule first conquerd and possesst,
 The first beginners of my endlesse care; 300

"And when those pallid cheekes and rshy
 hew,
 In which sad Death his pourtraicture had
 writ,
 And when those hollow eyes and deadly
 view,
 On which the clowde of ghastly night did
 sit,
 I match with that sweet smile and chearfull brow,
 Which all the world subdued unto it;
 How happie was I then, and wretched now!"

"How happie was I, when I saw her leade The shepherds daughters dauncing in a
 rownd! 310
 How trimly would she trace and softly
 tread
 The tender grasse, with rosie garland
 crownd!
 And when she list advance her heavenly
 voyce,
 Both Nymphs and Muses nigh she made
 astownd,
 And flocks and shepherds caused to re-joyce.

"But now, ye shepherd lasses, who shall
 lead
 Your wandring troupes, or sing your vire-
 layes?
 Or who shall dight your bowres, sith she is
 dead
 That was the lady of your holy dayes?
 Let now your blisse be turned into bale, 320
 And into plaints convert your joyous playes,
 And with the same fill every hill and dale.

"Let bagpipe never more be heard to shrill,
 That may allure the senses to delight;
 Ne ever shepherd sound his oaten quill Unto the many, that provoke them might To idle pleasanee: but let ghastlinesse
 And dreary horror dim the chearfull light,
 To make the image of true heavinesse.

"Let birds be silent on the naked spray, 330 And shady woods resound with dreadfull
 yells;
 Let streaming floods their hastie courses
 stay.

And parching droughth drie up the christall
wells;

Let th' earth be barren, and bring foorth no flowres,

And th' ayre be filld with noyse of dolefull knells,

And wandring spirits walke untimely
howres.

'And Nature, nurse of every living thing, Let rest her selfe from her long wearinesse.
And cease henceforth things kindly forth to bring,

But hideous mousters full of uglinesse; ³⁴⁰
For she it is that hath me done this wrong;
No nurse, but stepdame cruell mercilesse.
Weepe, shepheard, weepe, to make my undersong.

IV

'My litle flocke, whom earst I lov'd so
well,

And wont to feede with finest grasse that
grew,

Feede ye hencefoorth on bitter astrofell,
And stinking smallage, and unsaverie rew;

And when your mawes are with those weeds corrupted,

Be ye the pray of wolves: ne will I rew That with your carkasses wild beasts be glutted. ³⁵⁰

'Ne worse to you, my sillie sheepe, I pray, Ne sorer vengeance wish on you to fall Than to my selfe, for whose confusde
decay

To carelesse heavens I doo daylie call:
But heavens refuse to heare a wretches cry;
And cruell Death doth scorne to come at
call,

Or graunt his boone that most desires to
dye.

'The good and righteous he away doth take,
To plague th' unrighteous which alive re-
maine:

But the ungodly ones he doth forsake, ³⁶⁰
By living long to multiplie their paine:
Els surely death should be no punishment,
As the great Judge at first did it ordaine, But rather riddance from long languish-
ment.

'Therefore my Daphne they have tane away;
For worthie of a better place was she:

But me unworthie willed here to stay,
That with her lacke I might tormented be.
Sith then they so have ordred, I will pay Penance to her according their decree, ³⁷⁰
And to her ghost doo service day by day.

'For I will walke this wandring pilgrimage, Throughout the world from one to othert
end,

And in affliction wast my better age:
My bread shall be the anguish of my mind, My drink the teares which fro mine eyes do raine,

My bed the ground that hardest I may fynd:
So will I wilfully increase my paine.

'And she, my love that was, my saint that
is,

When she beholds from her celestiall throne ³⁸⁰

(In which shee joyeth in eternall blis)
My bitter penance, will my case bemone,
And pitie me that living thus doo die:
For heavenly spirits have compassion On mortall men, and rue their miserie.

'So when I have with sorrowe satisfide Th' importune Fates, which vengeance on me seeke,

And th' heavens with long languor paci-
fide.

She, for pure pitie of my sufferance meeke,
Will send for me; for which I daylie long, ³⁹⁰
And will till then my painfull penance eeke.
Weep, shepheard, weep, to make my under song.

V

'Hencefoorth I hate what ever Nature
made,

And in her workmanship no pleasure finde:
For they be all but vaine, and quickly fade, So soone as on them blowes the northern
winde;

They farrie not, but flit and fall away, Leaving behind them nought but grieve of
minde,

And mocking such as thinke they long will
stay.

'I hate the heaven, because it doth withhold ⁴⁰⁰

Me from my love, and eke my love from
me;

I hate the earth, because it is the mold

Of fleshly slime and fraile mortalitie;
I hate the fire, because to nought it flies,
I hate the ayre, because sighes of it be,
I hate the sea, because it teares supplies.

‘I hate the day, because it lendeth light To see all things, and not my love to see;
I hate the darknesse and the dreery night, Because they breed sad balefulness in
mee;

I hate all times, because all times doo fly
So fast away, and may not stayed bee, But as a speedie post that passeth by.

‘I hate to speake, my voyee is spent with crying:
I hate to heare, lowd plaints have duld mine eares:

I hate to tast, for food withholdes my dying:
I hate to see, mine eyes are dimd with
teares:

I hate to smell, no sweet on earth is left:
I hate to feele, my flesh is numbd with
feares:

So all my senses from me are bereft. 420

‘I hate all men, and shun all woman-
kinde;

The one, because as I they wretched are,
The other, for because I doo not finde My love with them, that wont to be their
starre:

And life I hate, because it will not last,
And death I hate, because it life doth
marre,

And all I hate, that is to come or past.

‘So all the world, and all in it I hate, Because it changeth ever too and fro,
And never standeth in one certaine state, 430
But still unstedfast round about doth goe, Like a mill wheele, in midst of miserie, Driven with streames of wretchednesse and
woe,

That dying lives, and living still does dye.

‘So doo I live, so doo I daylie die,
And pine away in selfe-consuming paine: Sith she that did my vitall powres sup-
plie,
And feeble spirits in their force maintaine, Is fetech fro me, why seeke I to prolong My wearie daies in dolor and disdain? 440 Weep, sheheard, weep, to make my under-song.

VI

‘Why doo I longer live in lifes despight,
And doo not dye then in despight of death?
Why doo I longer see this loathsome light,
And doo in darknesse not abridge my breath, Sith all my sorrow should have end thereby,
And cares finde quiet? Is it so unneath To leave this life, or dolorous to dye?

‘To live I finde it deadly dolorous; For life drawes care, and care continuall
woe: 450

Therefore to dye must needes be joyeous,
And wishfull thing this sad life to forgoe.
But I must stay; I may it not amend;
My Daphne hence departing bad me so;
She bad me stay, till she for me did send.

‘Yet, whilst I in this wretched vale doo
stay,

My wearie feete shall ever wandring be,
That still I may be readie on my way,
When as her messenger doth come for me:
Ne will I rest my feete for feeblenesse, 460 Ne will I rest my limmes for frailltie, Ne will I rest mine eyes for heavinesse.

‘But, as the mother of the gods, that sought For faire Euridyce, her daughter deere, Throughtout the world, with wofull heavie
thought,

So will I travell whilst I tarrie heere, Ne will I lodge, ne will I ever lin, Ne when as drouping Titan draweth neere
To loose his teeme, will I take up my inne.

‘Ne sleepe (the harbenger of wearie wights) 470

Shall ever lodge upon mine ey-lids more, Ne shall with rest refresh my fainting
sprights,
Nor failing force to former strength re-
store:

But I will wake and sorrow all the night With Philumene, my fortune to deplore, With Philumene, the partner of my plight.

‘And ever as I see the starres to fall,
And under ground to goe, to give them
light

Which dwell in darknes, I to minde will
call

How my faire starre (that shine on me so
bright) 480

Fell sodainly and faded under ground;

Since whose departure, day is turnd to night,
And night without a Venus starre is found.

‘ But soone as day doth shew his deawie
face,
And calls fourth men unto their toylsome
trade,

I will withdraw me to some darksome place,
Or some deepe cave, or solitarie shade;
There will I sigh and sorrow all day long,
And the huge burden of my cares unlade.
Weep, shepheard, weep, to make my under-song. 490

VII

‘ Hence fourth mine eyes shall never more behold
Faire thing on earth, ne feed on false de-
light

Of ought that framed is of mortall mould, Sith that my fairest flower is faded quight:
For all I see is vaine and transitorie, Ne will be helde in anie stedfast plight, But in a moment loose their grace and glorie.

‘ And ye, fond men, on Fortunes wheele that
ride,
Or in ought under heaven repose assurance,
Be it riches, beautie, or honors pride, 500
Be sure that they shall have no long endurance,

But ere ye be aware will flit away;
For nought of them is yours, but th’ onely usance
Of a small time, which none ascertainē may.

‘ And ye, true lovers, whom desastrous chance

Hath farre exiled from your ladies grace,
To mourne in sorrow and sad sufferance,
When ye doo heare me in that desert place Lamenting lowde my Daphnes elegie, Helpe me to wayle my miserable case, 510
And when life parts, vouchsafe to close mine
eye.

‘ And ye, more happie lovers, which enjoy
The presence of your dearest loves delight, When ye doo heare my sorrowfull annoy, Yet pittie me in your empassiond spright, And thinke that such mishap as chaunst to
me

May happen unto the most happiest wight;
For all mens states alike unstedfast be.

‘ And ye, my fellow shepherds, which do
feed

Your carelesse flocks on hils and open plaines, 520

With better fortune than did me succeed, Remember yet my undeserved paines;
And when ye heare that I am dead or slaine, Lament my lot, and tell your fellow swaines That sad Alcyon dyde in lifes disdaine.

‘ And ye, faire damsels, shepherds dere
delights,

That with your loves do their rude hearts
possesse,

When as my hearse shall happen to your sightes,

Vouchsafe to deck the same with cypresse;
And ever sprinkle brackish teares among,
In pitie of my undeserv’d distresse, 531
The which I, wretch, endured have thus long.

‘ And ye, poore pilgrims, that with restlesse
toyle

Wearie your selves in wandring desert
wayes,

Till that you come where ye your vowes
assoyle,

When passing by ye read these wofull layes On my grave written, rue my Daphnes
wrong,

And mourne for me that languish out my
dayes.

Cease, shepheard, cease, and end thy under-
song.’

Thus when he ended had his heavie
plaint, 540

The heaviest plaint that ever I heard sound, His cheekes wext pale, and sprights began to faint,

As if againe he would have fallen to ground;
Which when I saw, I (stepping to him light) Amooved him out of his stonie swound, And gan him to recomfort as I might.

But he no waie recomforted would be,
Nor suffer solace to approach him nie,

But casting up a sdeinfull eie at me,
That in his traunce I would not let him
lie, 550

Did rend his haire, and beat his blubbred
face,

As one disposed wilfullie to die,
That I sore griev’d to see his wretched case.

Tho when the pang was somewhat overpast,
 And the outrageous passion nigh appeased,
 I him desirde, sith daie was overcast And darke night fast approched, to be pleased
 To turne aside unto my cabinet,
 And staie with me, till he were better eased Of that strong stownd which him so sore
 beset. 560

But by no meanes I could him win thereto,
 Ne longer him intreate with me to staie,
 But without taking leave he fourth did goe With staggering pace and dismall lookes
 dismay,
 As if that Death he in the face had seene,
 Or hellish hags had met upon the way:
 But what of him became I cannot weene.

COLIN CLOUDS COME HOME AGAINE

BY ED. SPENCER

LONDON

PRINTED FOR WILLIAM PONSONBIE

1595

TO THE RIGHT WORTHY AND NOBLE KNIGHT SIR WALTER RALEIGH, CAPTAINE OF HER MAJESTIES GUARD, LORD WARDEIN OF THE STAN-NERIES, AND LIEUTENANT OF THE COUNTIE OF CORNWALL

SIR, that you may see that I am not alwaies ydle as yee thinke, though not greatly well occupied, nor altogether undu-titull, though not precisely officious, I make you present of this simple pastorall, unworthie of your higher conceipt for the meanesse of the stile, but agreeing with the truth in circumstance and matter. The which I humbly beseech you to accept in part of payment of the infinite debt in which I acknowledge my selfe bounden unto you, for your singular favours and sundrie good turnes shewed to me at my late being in England, and with your good countenance protect against the malice of evill mouthes, which are alwaies wide open to carpe at and misconstrue my simple meaning. I pray continually for your happinesse. From my house of Kilcolman, the 27 of December, 1591.

Yours ever humbly,
 Ed. Sp.

[Colin Clout's Come Home Again is the record of the poet's expedition to England with Raleigh in 1589 and of what he found there at court. It was obviously written not long after his return to Kilcolman and sent to his friend as soon as done. About four years later, probably by way of revision for the press, he made changes inspired by intervening events.

In a poem of such content, it was natural that he should adopt his old incognito of the Shepherd's Calendar and appear as Colin Clout.
 In that character, he would naturally need his old friend and interlocutor, Hobbinol, to start the dialogue, and when he came to the theme of court love-making, he could hardly fail to sing a palinode upon his old mistress Rosalind.
 They were set personages of the fiction. Yet

Colin Clout's Come Home Again owes little to the Calendar; for its art is essentially more direct. In the earlier poem whatever facts of personal experience and opinion are to be discerned we see dimly and ambiguously through a kind of luminous fog: love-story and satire are altogether baffling. In the later, the story is almost as clear as a chronicle, the satire almost as direct and vivid as that of 'Mother Hubbard's Tale.' Its pastoralism, indeed, is more a point of view than a set disguise, or, at least, the mask is worn lightly and removed at will. From the allegorical to the literal the style winds to and fro flexibly, according as the poet's memories take form. It is free, not run in moulds. Beside it the beauties of the Calendar seem almost academic.]

COLIN CLOUDS COME HOME
AGAINE

THE shepherds boy (best known by that name)

That after Tityrus first sung his lay, Laies of sweet love, without rebuke or blame,

Sate (as his custome was) upon a day,
Charming his oaten pipe unto his peres,
The shepheard swaines that did about him play:

Who all the while, with greedie listfull eares,

Did stand astonisht at his curious skill, Like hartlesse deare, dismayd with thunders sound.

At last when as he piped had his fill, ¹⁰
He rested him: and sitting then around, One of those groomes (a jolly groomee was he,

As ever piped on an oaten reed,
And lov'd this shepheard dearest in degree, Hight Hobbinol) gan thus to him areed.

'Colth, my liefe, my life, how great a losse

Had all the shepherds nation by thy lacke!
And I, poore swaine, of many, greatest crosse:

That, sith thy Muse first since thy turning backe

Was heard to sound as she was wont on hye, ²⁰

Hast made us all so blessed and so blythe.
Whilst thou wast hence, all dead in dole did lie:

The woods were heard to waile full many a sythe,

And all their birds with silence to complaine:

The fields with faded flowers did seem to mourne,

And all their flocks from feeding to refrain:

The running waters wept for thy returne,
And all their fish with languour did lament:

But now both woods and fields and floods revive,

Sith thou art come, their cause of meriment, ³⁰

That us, late dead, hast made againe alive.
But were it not too painfull to repeat

The passed fortunes, which to thee befell
In thy late voyage, we thee would entreat,

Now at thy leisure them to us to tell.'

To whom the shepheard gently answered thus:

'Hobbin, thou temptest me to that I covet.
For of good passed newly to diseus,
By dubble usurie doth twice renew it.

And since I saw that Angels blessed eie, ⁴⁰
Her worlds bright sun, her heavens fairest light,

My mind, full of my thoughts satietie, Doth feed on sweet contentment of that sight:

Since that same day in nought I take delight,

Ne feeling have in any earthly pleasure,
But in remembrance of that glorious bright,
My lifes sole blisse, my hearts eternall treasure.

Wake then, my pipe! my sleepee Muse, awake!

Till I have told her praises lasting long:
Hobbin desires, thou maist it not forsake. ⁵⁰ Harke then, ye jolly shepherds, to my song.'

With that they all gan throug about him neare,

With hungrie eares to heare his harmonie:
The whiles their flocks, devoyd of dangers feare,

Did round about them feed at libertie.

'One day,' quoth he, 'I sat (as was my trade)

Under the foote of Mole, that mountaine hore,

Keeping my sheepe amongst the cooly shade
Of the greene alders by the Mullaes shore.
There a straunge shepheard chaunst to find me out, ⁶⁰

Whether allured with my pipes delight, Whose pleasing sound yshrilled far about,
Or thither led by chaunce, I know not right:
Whom when I asked from what place he came,

And how he hight, himselfe he did yleepe
The Shepheard of the Ocean by name,
And said he came far from the main-sea deepe.

He, sitting me beside in that same shade, Provoked me to plaie some pleasant fit,
And when he heard the musicke which I made, ⁷⁰

He found himselfe full greatly pleasd at it:
Yet æmuling my pipe, he tooke in hond My pipe, before that æmuled of many,
And plaid theron; (for well that skil he cond)

Himselfe as skilfull in that art as any

He pip'd, I sung, and when he sung, I piped, By chaunge of turnes, each making other mery,

Neither envying other, nor envied,
So piped we, untill we both were weary.'

There interrupting him, a bonie swaine, so That Cuddy hight, him thus atweene be-
spake:

'And should it not thy readie course re-
straine,

I would request thee, Colin, for my sake,
To tell what thou didst sing, when he did plaie:

For well I weene it worth recounting was, Whether it were some hymne, or morall laie,

Or carol made to praise thy loved lasse.'

'Nor of my love, nor of my lasse,' quoth
he,

'I then did sing, as then occasion fell:

For love had me forlorne, forlorne of me, ⁹⁰
That made me in that desert chose to dwell.

But of my river Bregogs love I soong, Which to the shiny Mulla he did beare,
And yet doth beare, and ever will, so long As water doth within his baneks appeare.'

'Of fellowship,' said then that bony boy,
'Record to us that lovely lay againe:

The staie whereof shall nought these eares
annoy,

Who all that Colin makes do covet faine.'

'Heare then,' quoth he, 'the tenor of my tale, 100

In sort as I it to that shepheard told:

No leasing new, nor grandams fable stale, But auncient truth confirm'd with credence
old.

'Old Father Mole, (Mole hight that mountain gray

That walls the northside of Armulla dale)

He had a daughter fresh as floure of May,
Which gave that name unto that pleasant
vale;

Mulla, the daughter of old Mole, so hight The nymph, which of that water course has
charge,

That, springing out of Mole, doth run downe
right 110

To Buttevant, where spreading forth at large,

It giveth name unto that auncient cattie,

Which Kilnemmullah cleped is of old:

Whose ragged ruines breed great ruth and pittie

To travailers which it from far behold.

Full faine she lov'd, and was belov'd full
faine

Of her owne brother river, Bregog hight,
So hight because of this deceitfull traine Which he with Mulla wrought to win de-
light. 119

But her old sire, more carefull of her good,
And meaning her much better to preferre, Did thinke to match her with the neighbour
flood,

Which Allo hight, Broadwater called farre:
And wrought so well with his continuall
paine,

That he that river for his daughter wonne:
The dowre agreed, the day assigned plaine, The place appointed where it should be doone.

Nath'lesse the nymph her former liking
held;

For love will not be drawne, but must be ledde;

And Bregog did so well her fancie weld, ¹³⁰
That her good will he got her first to wedde.

But, for her father, sitting still on hie, Did warily still watch which way she went,
And eke from far observ'd, with jealous eie, Which way his course the wanton Bregog
bent,

Him to deceive, for all his watchfull ward,
The wily lover did devise this slight:

First into many parts his streame he shar'd,
That, whilst the one was watcht, the other
might

Passes unespide to meete her by the way; ¹⁴⁰
And then besides, those little streames so broken

He under ground so closely did convey,
That of their passage doth appeare no token,
Till they into the Mullaes water slide.

So secretly did he his love enjoy:

Yet not so secret, but it was descride,

And told her father by a shepherds boy.

Who, wondrous wroth for that so foule de-
spight,

In great avenge did roll downe from his hill

Huge mightie stones, the which encomber
might 150

His passage, and his water-courses spill.

So of a river, which he was of old,

He none was made, but scattred all to
nought,

And, lost among those rocks into him rold, Did lose his name: so deare his love he bought.'

Which having said, him Thestylis bespake:
 'Now by my life this was a mery lay, Worthie of Colin selfe, that did it make.
 But read now eke, of friendship I thee pray,
 What dittie did that other shepheard sing?
 For I do covet most the same to heare, ¹⁶¹
 As men use most to covet forreine thing.'
 'That shall I eke,' quoth he, 'to you declare.

His song was all a lamentable lay,
 Of great unkindnesse, and of usage hard,
 Of Cynthia, the Ladie of the Sea, Which from her presence faultlesse him
 debar'd.

And ever and anon, with singulfs rife,
 He cryed out, to make his undersong:
 "Ah! my loves queene, and goddesse of my life, ¹⁷⁰
 Who shall me pittie, when thou doest me
 wrong?"

Then gan a gentle bonylasse to speake, That Marin hight: 'Right well he sure did
 plaine,
 That could great Cynthiaes sore displeasure
 breake,
 And move to take him to her grace againe.
 But tell on further, Colin, as befell Twixt him and thee, that thee did hence dissuade.'

'When thus our pipes we both had wearied well,' Quoth he, 'and each an end of singing
 made,
 He gan to east great lyking to my lore, ¹⁸⁰
 And great dislyking to my lucklesse lot, That banisht had my selfe, like wight
 forlore,

Into that waste, where I was quite forgot.
 The which to leave, thenceforth he counsell'd
 mee, Unmeet for man in whom was ought regard-full,
 And wend with him, his Cynthia to see, Whose grace was great, and bounty most rewardfull:

Besides her peerlesse skill in making well,
 And all the ornaments of wondrous wit,
 Such as all womankynd did far excell, ¹⁹⁰
 Such as the world admyr'd and praised it:
 So what with hope of good, and hate of ill,
 He me perswaded forth with him to fare; Nought tooke I with me, but mine oaten
 quill:
 Small needments else need shepheard to prepare.

So to the sea we came; the sea? that is A world of waters heaped up on hie, Rolling like mountaines in wide wildernesses, Horrible, hideous, roaring with hoarse crie.'
 'And is the sea,' quoth Coridon, 'so fear-full?'

'Fearful much more,' quoth he, 'then hart can fear:
 Thousand wyld beasts with deep mouthes gaping direfull Therin stil wait poore passengers to teare.
 Who life doth loath, and longs death to
 behold,

Before he die, alreadie dead with feare,
 And yet would live with heart halfe stonie
 cold,

Let him to sea, and he shall see it there.
 And yet as ghastly dreadfull as it seemes, Bold men, presuming life for gaine to sell, Dare tempt that gulf, and in those wandring streames ²¹⁰
 Seek waies unknowne, waies leading down to hell.

For as we stood there waiting on the strond, Behold! an huge great vessell to us came,
 Dauncing upon the waters back to lound,
 As if it scor'd the danger of the same;
 Yet was it but a wooden frame and fraile, Glewed together with some subtile matter, Yet had it armes and wings, and head and taile.

And life to move it selfe upon the water.
 Strange thing, how bold and swift the monster was, ²²⁰
 That neither ear'd for wynd, nor haile, nor
 raine,
 Nor swelling waves, but thorough them did
 passe

So proudly that she made them roare againe!
 The same aboard us gently did receive,
 And without harme us farre away did beare,
 So farre that land, our mother, us did leave,
 And nought but sea and heaven to us ap-
 peare.

Then hartlesse quite and full of inward
 feare,
 That shepheard I besought to me to tell, Under what skie, or in what world we were, ²³⁰

In which I saw no living people dwell.
 Who me recomforting all that he might,
 Told me that that same was the regiment Of a great shepheardesse, that Cynthia
 hight,

His liege, his ladie, and his lifes regent.

"If then," quoth I, "a shepherdesse she
 bee,
 Where be the flockes and heards, which she doth keep?
 And where may I the hills and pastures
 see,
 On which she useth for to feed her sheepe?"
 "These be the hills," quoth he, "the surges lie, ²⁴⁰
 On which faire Cynthia her heards doth
 feed:
 Her heards be thousand fishes, with their frie,
 Which in the bosome of the billowes breed.
 Of them the shepherd which hath charge in chief Is Triton blowing loud his wreathed horne:
 At sound whereof, they all for their relief Wend too and fro at evening and at morne.
 And Proteus eke with him does drive his
 heard
 Of stinking seales and porcupises together, With hoary head and dewy dropping beard, ²⁵⁰
 Compelling them which way he list, and whether.
 And I among the rest, of many least,
 Have in the ocean charge to me assignd:
 Where I will live or die at her bebest, And serve and honour her with faithfull
 mind.
 Besides, an hundred nymphs, all heavenly
 borne,
 And of immortal race, doo still attend To wash faire Cynthiaes sheep, when they be shorne,
 And fold them up, when they have made an end.
 Those be the shepherds which my Cynthia serve ²⁶⁰
 At sea, beside a thousand moe at land:
 For land and sea my Cynthia doth deserve To have in her commandement at hand." Thereat I wondred much, till, wondring
 more
 And more, at length we land far off descryde:
 Which sight much gladed me; for much
 afore
 I feard least land we never should have
 eyde:
 Thereto our ship her course directly bent,
 As if the way she perfectly had knowne.
 We Lunday passe; by that same name is ment ²⁷⁰

An island which the first to west was
 showne.
 From thence another world of land we kend, Floting amid the sea in jeopardie, And round about with mightie white rocks hemd,
 Against the seas encroching crueltie.
 Those same, the shepherd told me, were the fields
 In which Dame Cynthia her landheard fed, Faire goodly fields, then which Armulla yields
 None fairer, nor more fruitfull to be red.
 The first to which we nigh approached was ²⁸⁰
 An high headland thrust far into the sea, Like to an horne, whereof the name it has,
 Yet seemed to be a goodly pleasant lea:
 There did a loftie mount at first us greet,
 Which did a stately heape of stones upreare,
 That seemd amid the surges for to fleet, Much greater then that frame which us did
 beare:
 There did our ship her fruitfull wombe unlade,
 And put us all ashore on Cynthias land.'
 'What land is that thou meanst,' then Cuddy sayd, ²⁹⁰
 'And is there other, then whereon we
 stand?'
 'Ah! Cuddy,' then quoth Colin, 'thous a fon,
 That hast not seene least part of Natures
 worke:
 Much more there is unkend then thou doest kon,
 And much more that does from mens knowledge lurke.
 For that same land much larger is then this,
 And other men and beasts and birds doth
 feed:
 There fruitfull corne, faire trees, fresh herb-age is,
 And all things else that living creatures
 need.
 Besides most goodly rivers there appeare, ³⁰⁰
 No whit inferiour to thy Funchins praise, Or unto Allo or to Mulla cleare: Nought hast thou, foolish boy, seene in thy daies.'
 'But if that land be there,' quoth he, 'as
 here,
 And is theyr heaven likewise there all one?
 And if like heaven, be heavenly graces there, Like as in this same world where we ³¹⁰
 wone?'

'Both heaven and heavenly graces do much more,'

Quoth he, 'as that same land then
this.

For there all happie peace and plenteous
store

Conspire in one to make contented blisse: ³¹⁰ No wayling there nor wretchednesse is
heard,

No bloodie issues nor no leprosies,
No griesly famine, nor no raging swerd,
No nightly bodrags, nor no hue and cries:

The shepheards there abroad may safely lie, On hills and downes, withouten dread or daunger:

No ravenous wolves the good mans hope destroy,

Nor outlawes fell affray the forest raunger.
There learned arts do flourish in great
honor,

And poets wits are had in peerlesse price: ³²⁰

Religion hath lay powre to rest upon her, Advancing vertue and suppressing vice.

For end, all good, all grace there freely
growes,

Had people grace it gratefully to use:
For God his gifts there plenteously bestowes, But gracelesse men them greatly do abuse.'

'But say on further,' then said Corylas,
'The rest of thine adventures, that betyded.'

'Foorth on our voyage we by land did passe,' ³³⁰

Quoth he, 'as that same shepheard still us gnyded,

Untill that we to Cynthiaes presence came:
Whose glorie, greater then my simple
thought,

I found much greater then the former fame;
Such greatnes I cannot compare to ought:

But if I her like ought on earth might read,
I would her lyken to a crowne of lillies,

Upon a virgin brydes adorned head, With roses dight and goolds and daffadillies;

Or like the cirelet of a turtle true, ³⁴⁰

In which all colours of the rainbow bee;
Or like faire Phebes garlond shining new,
In which all pure perfection one may see.

But vaine it is to thinke, by paragone
Of earthly things, to judge of things divine:

Her power, her mercy, and her wisdomes,
none

Can deeme, but who the Godhead can define.
Why then do I, base shepheard bold and
blind,

Presume the things so sacred to prophane?
More fit it is t'adore, with humble mind, ³⁵⁰

The image of the heavens in shape humane.'

With that Alexis broke his tale asunder, Saying: 'By wondring at thy Cynthiaes
praise,

Colin, thy selfe thou mak'st us more to
wonder,

And, her upraising, doest thy selfe upraise.
But let us heare what grace she shewed thee,

And how that shepheard strange thy cause advanced.'

'The Shepheard of the Ocean,' quoth he,
'Unto that Goddesse grace me first enhanced,

And to mine oaten pipe enclin'd her eare, ³⁶⁰ That she thenceforth therein gan take de-
light,

And it desir'd at timely houres to heare, All were my notes but rude and roughly
dight;

For not by measure of her owne great
mynd

And wondrous worth she mott my simple
song,

But joyd that country shepheard ought could fynd

Worth harkening to, amongst the learned
throng.'

'Why,' said Alexis then, 'what needeth
shee,

That is so great a shepheardesse her selfe
And hath so many shepheards in her fee, ³⁷⁰

To heare thee sing, a simple silly elfe?
Or be the shepheards which do serve her laesie,

That they list not their mery pipes applie?
Or be their pipes untunable and craesie,
That they cannot her honour worthylye?'

'Ah! nay,' said Colin, 'neither so, nor so-
For better shepheards be not under skie, Nor better hable, when they list to blow
Their pipes aloud, her name to glorifie.

There is good Harpalus, now woxen aged ³⁸⁰
In faithfull service of faire Cynthia: And there is Corydon, though meanly waged,

Yet hablest wit of most I know this day.
And there is sad Alcyon, bent to mourne, Though fit to frame an everlasting dittie, Whose gentle spright for Daphnes death doth tourn

Sweet layes of love to endlesse plaints of pittie.

Ah! pensive boy, pursue that brave con-ceipt,

In thy sweet Eglantine of Meriflure, Lift up thy notes unto their wonted
height, 390
That may thy Muse and mates to mirth allure.

There eke is Palin, worthie of great praise, Albe he envie at my rustieck quill:
And there is pleasing Alcon, could he raise His tunes from laies to matter of more skill.
And there is old Palemon, free from spight, Whose carefull pipe may make the hearer
rew:

Yet he himselfe may rewed be more right, That sung so long untill quite hoarse he
grew.

And there is Alabaster, throughly taught 400
In all this skill, though knowen yet to few, Yet, were he knowne to Cynthia as he
ought,

His Eliseis would be redde anew.
Who lives that can match that heroick song,
Which he hath of that mightie princesse
made?

O dreaded Dread, do not thy selfe that
wrong,

To let thy fame lie so in hidden shade:
But call it forth, O call him forth to thee,
To end thy glorie which he hath begun:
That when he finisht hath as it should be, 410
No braver poeme can be under sun.

Nor Po nor Tyburs swans so much renowned,

Nor all the brood of Greece so highly praised,

Can match that Muse when it with bayes is crowned,

And to the pitch of her perfection raised.

And there is a new shepherd late up sprung,
The which doth all afore him far surpass:
Appearing well in that well tuned song Which late he sung unto a scornfull lasse.

Yet doth his trembling Muse but lowly
flie, 420

As daring not too rashly mount on hight,
And doth her tender plumes as yet but trie In loves soft laies and looser thoughts de-
light.

Then rouze thy feathers quickly, Daniell, And to what course thou please thy selfe
advance:

But most, me seemes, thy accent will excell
In tragick plaints and passionate mischance.
And there that Shepherd of the Ocean is,
That spends his wit in loves consuming
smart:

Full sweetly tempred is that Muse of his, 430
That can empierce a princes mightie hart.
There also is (ah! no, he is not now)
But since I said he is, he quite is gone:
Amyntas quite is gone and lies full low, Having his Amaryllis left to mone.

Helpe, O ye shepherds, helpe ye all in this,
Helpe Amaryllis this her losse to mourne:
Her losse is yours, your losse Amyntas is, Amyntas, floure of shepherds pride for-
lorne.

He, whilest he lived, was the noblest swaine
That ever piped in an oaten quill: 441

Both did he other which could pipe main-
taine,

And eke could pipe himselfe with passing
skill.

And there, though last not least, is Aetion;
A gentler shepherd may no where be found;
Whose Muse, full of high thoughts invention,

Doth like himselfe heroically sound.

All these, and many others mo, remaine,
Now after Astrofell is dead and gone:
But while as Astrofell did live and raine, 450 Amongst all these was none his paragone.

All these do flourish in their sundry kynd,
And do their Cynthia immortall make:
Yet found I lyking in her royall mynd, Not for my skill, but for that shepherds
sake.'

Then spake a lovely lasse, hight Lucida:
'Shepherd, enough of shepherds thou hast
told,

Which favour thee and honour Cynthia:
But of so many nymphs which she doth hold
In her retinew, thou hast nothing sayd; 460 That seems, with none of them thou favor foundest,

Or art ingratefull to each gentle mayd, That none of all their due deserts resoundest.'

'Ah! far be it,' quoth Colin Clout, 'fro
me,

That I of gentle mayds should ill deserve:
For that my selfe I do professe to be Vassall to one, whom all my dayes I serve;
The beame of beautie sparkled from above,
The floure of vertue and pure chastitie, 469
The blossome of sweet joy and perfect love,
The pearle of peerlesse grace and modestie:
To her my thoughts I daily dedicate,
To her my heart I nightly martyrize:
To her my love I lowly do prostrate,
To her my life I wholly sacrifice:

My thought, my heart, my love, my life is
 shee,
 And I hers ever onely, ever one:
 One ever I all vowed hers to bee,
 One ever I, and others never none.
 Then thus Melissa said: 'Thrise happie
 mayd, 480
 Whom thou doest so enforce to deifie, That woods, and hills, and valleyes thou hast made Her name to echo unto heaven hie.
 But say, who else vouchsafed thee of grace?'
 'They all,' quoth he, 'me graced goodly
 well,
 That all I praise, but in the highest place,
 *Urania, sister unto Astrofell,
 In whose brave mynd, as in a golden cofer, All heavenly gifts and riches locked are;
 More rich then pearles of Ynde, or gold of Opher, 490
 And in her sex more wonderfull and rare.
 Ne lesse praise worthie I Theana read, Whose goodly beames, though they be over
 dight
 With mourning stole of carefull wydowhead, Yet through that darksome vale do glister
 bright.
 She is the well of bountie and brave mynd, Excelling most in glorie and great light:
 She is the ornament of womankind, And courts chief garlond with all vertues
 dight.
 Therefore great Cynthia her in chiefest
 grace 500
 Doth hold, and next unto her selfe advance, Well worthie of so honourable place,
 For her great worth and noble governance.
 Ne lesse praise worthie is her sister deare, Faire Marian, the Muses onely darling: Whose beautie shyneth as the morning
 cleare,
 With silver dew upon the roses pearling.
 Ne lesse praise worthie is Mansilia, Best knowne by bearing up great Cynthiaes
 traine:
 That same is she to whom Daphnida 510 Upon her neeces death I did complaine.
 She is the paterne of true womanhead,
 And onely mirrhor of feminitie:
 Worthie next after Cynthia to tread,
 As she is next her in nobilitie.
 Ne lesse praise worthie Galathea seemes, Then best of all that honourable crew, Faire Galathea, with bright shining beames Inflaming feeble eyes that her do view.

She there then waited upon Cynthia, 520
 Yet there is not her won, but here with us About the borders of our rich Coshma, Now made of Maa the nympf delicious.
 Ne lesse praiseworthy faire Neera is, Neera ours, not theirs, though there she be,
 For of the famous Shure the nympf she is,
 For high desert advaunst to that degree.
 She is the blosome of grace and curtesie, Adorned with all honourable parts:
 She is the braunch of true nobilitie, 530 Belov'd of high and low with faithfull
 hartes.
 Ne lesse praiseworthy Stella do I read, Though nought my praises of her needed
 arre,
 Whom verse of noblest shepheard lately
 dead
 Hath prais'd and rais'd above each other
 starre.
 Ne lesse praiseworthy are the sisters three,
 The honor of the noble familie
 Of which I meanest boast my selfe to be,
 And most that unto them I am so nie:
 Phyllis, Charillis, and sweet Amaryllis: 540 Phyllis the faire is eldest of the three;
 The next to her is bountifull Charillis;
 But th' youngest is the highest in degree.
 Phyllis, the floure of rare perfection, Faire spreading forth her leaves with fresh
 delight,
 That, with their beauties amorous reflexion, Bereave of sence each rash beholders sight.
 But sweet Charillis is the paragone Of peerlesse price, and ornament of praise, Admyr'd of all, yet envied of none, 550 Through the myld temperance of her goodly raies.
 Thrise happie do I hold thee, noble swaine,
 The which art of so rich a spoile possesst,
 And it embracing deare without disdaine, Hast sole possession in so chaste a brest.
 Of all the shepherds daughters which there
 bee,
 And yet there be the fairest under skie,
 Or that elsewhere I ever yet did see,
 A fairer nympf yet never saw mine eie:
 She is the pride and primrose of the rest, 560
 Made by the Maker selfe to be admired,
 And like a goodly beacon high adrest, That is with sparks of heavenlie beautie fired.
 But Amaryllis, whether fortunate,
 Or else unfortunate, may I aread?
 That freed is from Cupids yoke by fate,

Since which she doth new bands adventure
dread.
Shepherd, what ever thou hast heard to be In this or that prayd diversly apart, ⁵⁶⁹
In her thou maist them all assembled see,
And seald up in the threasure of her hart.
Ne thee lesse worthie, gentle Flavia,
For thy chaste life and vertue I esteeme:
Ne thee lesse worthie, curteous Candida,
For thy true love and loyaltie I deeme.
Besides yet many mo that Cynthia serve, Right noble nymphs, and high to be commended:
But if I all should praise as they deserve, This sun would faile me ere I halfe had ended.
Therefore in closure of a thankfull mynd ⁵⁸⁰
I deeme it best to hold eternally Their bounteous deeds and noble favours shrynd,
Then by discourse them to indignifie.
So having said, Aglaura him bespake:
'Colin, well worthie were those goodly favours
Bestowd on thee, that so of them doest
make,
And them requitest with thy thankfull labours.
But of great Cynthiaes goodnesse and high
grace
Finish the storie which thou hast begunne.'
'More eath,' quoth he, 'it is in such a case ⁵⁹⁰
How to begin, then know how to have
donne.
For everie gift and everie goodly meed, Which she on me bestowd, demaunds a
day;
And everie day in which she did a deed Demaunds a yeare it duly to display.
Her words were like a streame of honny fleeing,
The which doth softly trickle from the hive, Hable to melt the hearers heart unweeting,
And eke to make the dead againe alive.
Her deeds were like great clusters of ripe grapes, ⁶⁰⁰
Which load the branches of the fruitfull
vine,
Offering to fall into each mouth that gapes,
And fill the same with store of timely wine.
Her lookes were like beames of the morning sun,
Forth looking through the windowes of the east,

When first the fleecie cattell have begun
Upon the perled grasse to make their feast.
Her thoughts are like the fume of franck-incence,
Which from a golden censer forth doth rise,
And throwing forth sweet odours mounts fro thence ⁶¹⁰
In rolling globes up to the vaulted skies.
There she beholds, with high aspiring
thought,
The cradle of her owne creation, Emongst the seats of angels heavenly
wrought,
Much like an angell in all forme and fashion.'
'Colin,' said Cuddy then, 'thou hast forgot Thy selfe, me seemes, too much, to mount
so hie:
Such loftie flight base shepheard seemeth
not,
From flocks and fields to angels and to skie.'
'True,' answered he, 'but her great excellence ⁶²⁰
Lifts me above the measure of my might:
That, being fild with furious insolence,
I feele my selfe like one yrap in spright.
For when I thinke of her, as oft I ought,
Then want I words to speake it fitly forth:
And when I speake of her what I have
thought,
I cannot thinke according to her worth.
Yet will I thinke of her, yet will I speake,
So long as life my limbs doth hold together, And when as death these vitall bands shall breake, ⁶³⁰
Her name recorded I will leave for ever.
Her name in every tree I will endosse, That, as the trees do grow, her name may
grow:
And in the ground each where will it engrosse,
And fill with stones, that all men may it
know.
The speaking woods and murmuring waters
fall,
Her name Ile teach in knowen termes to
frame:
And eke my lambs, when for their dams they call,
Ile teach to call for Cynthia by name.
And long while after I am dead and rotten, Amongst the shepheards daughters dancing rownd, ⁶⁴⁰
My layes made of her shall not be forgotten.

But sung by them with flowry gyrlonds
crownd.

And ye, who so ye be, that shall survive,
When as ye heare her memory renewed,
Be witnessse of her bountie here alive,
Which she to Colin her poore shepheard shewed.'

Much was the whole assembly of those heards

Moov'd at his speech, so feelingly he spake,
And stood awhile astonisht at his words,⁶⁵⁰ Till Thestylis at last their silence brake, Saying: 'Why, Colin, since thou foundst such grace

With Cynthia and all her noble crew, Why didst thou ever leave that happie
place,

In which such wealth might unto thee ac-
crew;

And back returnedst to this barrein soyle,
Where cold and care and penury do dwell, Here to keep sheepe, with hunger and with
toyle?

Most wretched he, that is and cannot tell.'

'Happie indeed,' said Colin, 'I him hold, That may that blessed presence still enjoy,'⁶⁶¹

Of fortune and of envy uncomptrold, Which still are wont most happie states t'
annoy:

But I, by that which little while I proved,
Some part of those enormities did see,
The which in court continually hooved, And followd those which happie seemd to
bee.

Therefore I, silly man, whose former dayes Had in rude fields bene altogether spent, Durst not adventure such unknown wayes,⁶⁷⁰

Nor trust the guile of Fortunes blandish-
ment,

But rather chose back to my sheep to
tourne,

Whose utmost hardnesse I before had
tryde,

Then, having leard repentance late, to
mourne

Emongst those wretches which I there descryde.'

'Shepheard,' said Thestylis, 'it seemes of
spight

Thou speakest thus gainst their felicitie, Which thou enviest, rather then of right

That ought in them blameworthyie thou doest spie.'

'Cause have I none,' quoth he, 'of can-cred will⁶⁸⁰

To quite them ill, that me demaend so
well:

But selfe-regard of private good or ill Moves me of each, so as I found, to tell,
And eke to warne yong shepheards wandring wit,

Which, through report of that lives painted
blisse,

Abandon quiet home, to seeke for it,
And leave their lambes to losse, misled anisse.

For, sooth to say, it is no sort of life
For shepheard fit to lead in that same place, Where each one seeks with malice and with strife,⁶⁹⁰

To thrust downe other into foule disgrace, Himselfe to raise; and he doth soonest rise That best can handle his deceitfull wit In subtil shifts, and finest sleights devise, Either by slaundring his well deemed name,
Through leasings lewd and fained forgerie,
Or else by breeding him some blot of blame,
By creeping close into his secrecie;

To which him needs a guilefull hollow hart, Masked with faire dissembling curtesie,⁷⁰⁰
A filed toung furnisht with tearmes of art,
No art of schoole, but courtiers schoolery.
For arts of schoole have there small countenance,

Counted but toyes to busie ydle braines,
And there professors find small maintenance,

But to be instruments of others gaines.
Ne is there place for any gentle wit, Unlesse to please, it selfe it can applie:
But shouldred is, or out of doore quite shi,
As base, or blunt, unmeet for melodie.⁷¹⁰ For each mans worth is measured by his weid,

As harts by hornes, or asses by their eares:
Yet asses been not all whose eares exceed, Nor yet all harts, that hornes the highest beares.

For highest lookes have not the highest
mynd,

Nor haughtie words most full of highest thoughts:

But are like bladders blowen up with wynd,
That being priekt do vanish into noughts.
Even such is all their vaunted vanitie, Nought else but smoke, that fumeth soone
away;

Such is their glorie that in simple eie⁷²⁰

Seeme greatest, when their garments are most gay.

So they themselves for praise of fooles do sell,

And all their wealth for painting on a wall;
With price whereof they buy a golden bell, And purchase highest rowmes in bowre and
hall:

Whiles single Truth and simple Honestie Do wander up and downe despys'd of all;
Their plaine attire such glorious gallantry Disdaines so much, that none them in doth call.' ⁷³⁰

'Ah! Colin,' then said Hobbinol, 'the
blame

Which thou imputest is too generall,
As if not any gentle wit of name, Nor honest mynd might there be found at
all.

For well I wot, sith I my selfe was there, To wait on Lobbin (Lobbin well thou knew-est)

Full many worthie ones then waiting were,
As ever else in princes court thou vewest.
Of which among you many yet remaine, ⁷³⁹
Whose names I cannot readily now ghesse:
Those that poore sutors papers do retaine,
And those that skill of medicine professe,
And those that do to Cynthia expound
The ledde of straunge languages in charge:
For Cynthia doth in sciences abound,
And gives to their professors stipends large.
Therefore unjustly thou doest wyte them
all,

For that which thou mislikedst in a few.'

'Blame is,' quoth he, 'more blamelesse
generall,

Then that which private errours doth pur-sew: ⁷⁵⁰

For well I wot, that there amongst them
bee

Full many persons of right worthie parts, Both for report of spotlesse honestie,
And for profession of all learned arts, Whose praise hereby no whit impaired is, Though blame do light on those that faultie
bee;

For all the rest do most-what far amis,
And yet their owne misfaring will not see:
For either they be puffed up with pride, Or fraught with envie that their galls do swell, ⁷⁶⁰

Or they their dayes to ydlenesse divide, Or drowned lie in pleasures wastefull
well,

In which like moldwarps nousling still they lurke,

Unmyndfull of chiefe parts of manlinesse,
And do themselves, for want of other
worke,

Vaine votaries of laesie Love professe, Whose service high so basely they ensew, That Cupid selfe of them ashamed is,
And mustring all his men in Venus vew, Denies them quite for servitors of his.' ⁷⁷⁰

'And is Love then,' said Corylas, 'once
knowne

In court, and his sweet lore professed
there?

I weened sure he was our god alone,
And only woond in fields and forests here.'

'Not so,' quoth he, 'love most aboundeth there.

For all the walls and windows there are
writ

All full of love, and love, and love my
deare,

And all their talke and studie is of it.
Ne any there doth brave or valiant seeme, Unlesse that some gay mistresse badge he beares: ⁷⁸⁰

Ne any one himselve doth ought esteeme, Unlesse he swim in love up to the eares.
But they of Love and of his sacred lere, (As it should be) all otherwise devise,
Then we poore shepheards are accustomd
here,

And him do sue and serve all otherwise.
For with lewd speeches, and licentious
deeds,

His mightie mysteries they do prophane,
And use his ydle name to other needs,
And use his ydle name to other needs,
But as a complement for courting vaine. ⁷⁹⁰
So him they do not serve as they professe, But make him serve to them for sordid uses:

Ah! my dread lord, that doest liege hearts
possesse,

Avenge thy selfe on them for their abuses!
But we poore shepheards, whether rightly
so,

Or through our rudenesse into errour led,
Do make religion how we rashly go To serve that god, that is so greatly dred;
For him the greatest of the gods we deeme, Borne without syre or couples of one kynd, ⁸⁰⁰

For Venus selfe doth soly couples seeme, Both male and femalc through commixture joynd.

So pure and spotlesse Cupid forth she
brought,
And in the Gardens of Adonis nurst: Where growing he his owne perfection
wrought,
And shortly was of all the gods the first.
Then got he bow and shafts of gold and lead,
In which so fell and puissant he grew,
That Jove himselfe his powre began to
dread,
And taking up to heaven, him godded
new. 810
From thence he shootes his arrowes every where
Into the world, at randon as he will,
On us fraile men, his wretched vassals here,
Like as himselfe us pleaseth save or spill.
So we him worship, so we him adore
With humble hearts to heaven uplifted hie, That to true loves he may us evermore Preferre, and of their grace us dignifie: Ne is there shepheard, ne yet shepherds
swaine,
What ever feeds in forest or in field, 820
That dare with evil deed or leasing vaine Blaspeme his powre, or termes unworthie
yield.
'Shepheard, it seemes that some celestiaall
rage
Of love,' quoth Cuddy, 'is breath'd into thy breast,
That powreth forth these oracles so sage Of that high powre, wherewith thou art
possest.
But never wist I till this present day, Albe of Love I alwayes humbly deemed,
That he was such an one as thou doest say,
And so religiously to be esteemed. 830
Well may it seeme, by this thy deep insight, That of that god the priest thou shouldest
bee:
So well thou wot'st the mysterie of his
might,
As if his godhead thou didst present see.'
'Of Loves perfection perfectly to speake, Or of his nature rightly to define,
Indeed,' said Colin, 'passeth reasons reach,
And needs his priest t' expresse his powre
divine.
For long before the world he was ybore,
And bred above in Venus bosome deare: 840 For by his powre the world was made of
yore,
And all that therein wondrous doth ap-
peare.

For how should else things so far from attone,
And so great enemies as of them bee,
Be ever drawne together into one,
And taught in such accordance to agree?
Through him the cold began to covet heat,
And water fire; the light to mount on hie,
And th' heavie downe to peize; the hungry
t' eat,
And voydnesse to seeke full satietie. 850
So, being former foes, they wexed friends,
And gan by litle learne to love each other:
So being knit, they brought forth other kynds
Out of the fruitfull wombe of their great mother.
Then first gan heaven out of darknesse
dread
For to appeare, and brought forth chearfull day:
Next gan the earth to shew her naked
head,
Out of deep waters which her drown'd
alway.
And shortly after, everie living wight Crept forth like wormes out of her slimie
nature, 860
Soone as on them the suns life giving light Had powred kindly heat and formall feature:
Thenceforth they gan each one his like to
love,
And like himselfe desire for to beget:
The lyon chose his mate, the turtle dove
Her deare, the dolphin his owne dolphinet; But man, that had the sparke of reasons
might,
More then the rest to rule his passion,
Chose for his love the fairest in his sight,
Like as himselfe was fairest by creation.
For beautie is the bayt which with de-
light 871
Doth man allure for to enlarge his kynd, Beautie, the burning lamp of heavens light, Darting her beames into each feeble mynd:
Against whose powre, nor god nor man can
fynd
Defence, ne ward the daunger of the wound, But, being hurt, seeke to be medicynd Of her that first did stir that mortall
stownd.
Then do they cry and call to Love apace,
With praiers lowd importuning the skie, 880 Whence he them heares, and when he list shew grace,

Does graunt them grace that otherwise would die.

So Love is lord of all the world by right,
And rules the creatures by his powrfull saw;
All being made the vassalls of his might,
Through secret sence which therto doth them draw.

Thus ought all lovers of their lord to
deeme,

And with chaste heart to honor him alway:
But who so else doth otherwise esteeme,
Are outlawes, and his lore do disobay. 890
For their desire is base, and doth not merit
The name of love, but of disloyall lust: Ne mongst true lovers they shall place inherit,

But as exuls out of his court be thrust.'

So having said, Melissa spake at will:
'Colin, thou now full deeply hast divynd Of love and beantie, and with wondrous
skill

Hast Cupid selfe depainted in his kynd.
To thee are all true lovers greatly bound,
That doest their cause so mightily defend: 900

But most, all women are thy debtors found,
That doest their bountie still so much commend.'

'That ill,' said Hobbinol, 'they him
requite,

For having loved ever one most deare:
He is repayd with scorne and foule despite,

That yrkes each gentle heart which it doth
heare.'

'Indeed,' said Lucid, 'I have often heard Faire Rosalind of divers fowly blamed, For being to that swaine too cruell hard,
That her bright glorie else hath much defamed. 910

But who can tell what cause had that faire
mayd

To use him so that used her so well?
Or who with blame can justly her upbrayd, For loving not? for who can love com-
pell?

And sooth to say, it is foolhardie thing, Rashly to wyten creatures so divine,
For demigods they be, and first did spring From heaven, though graft in frailnesse feminine.

And well I wote that oft I heard it spoken, How one that fairest Helene did revile, 920 Through judgement of the gods, to been ywroken,

Lost both his eyes, and so remaynd long
while,

Till he recanted had his wicked rimes,
And made amends to her with treble praise: Beware therefore, ye groomes, I read betimes,

How rashly blame of Rosalind ye raise.'

'Ah! shepherds,' then said Colin, 'ye ne weet

How great a guilt upon your heads ye
draw,

To make so bold a doome, with words un-
meet,

Of thing celestial which ye never saw. 930
For she is not like as the other crew

Of shepherds daughters which emongst you bee,

But of divine regard and heavenly hew, Excelling all that ever ye did see.

Not then to her, that scorned thing so
base,

But to my selfe the blame, that lookt so
hie:

So hie her thoughts as she her selfe have
place,

And loath each lowly thing with loftie
eie.

Yet so much grace let her vouchsafe to grant

To simple swaine, sith her I may not love, Yet that I may her honour paravant, 941

And praise her worth, though far my wit
above.

Such grace shall be some guerdon for the
griefe

And long affliction which I have endured: Such grace sometimes shall give me some reliefe,

And ease of paine which cannot be re-cured.

And ye, my fellow shepherds, which do
see

And heare the languours of my too long dying,

Unto the world for ever witnesse bee,
That hers I die, nought to the world deny-
ing 950

This simple trophe of her great conquest.'

So having ended, he from ground did
rise,

And after him uprose eke all the rest:
All loth to part, but that the glooming
skies

Warnd them to draw their bleating flocks to rest.

ASTROPHEL

A PASTORALL ELEGIE UPON THE DEATH OF THE MOST NOBLE AND VALOROUS KNIGHT, SIR PHILIP SIDNEY

TO THE MOST BEAUTIFULL AND VERTUOUS LADIE, THE COUNTESS OF ESSEX

[Astrophel and the collection of obituary poems to which it serves as a kind of prologue were published in the same volume with Colin Clout's Come Home Again, in 1595. The dedication was to Sidney's widow, who in the spring of 1590 had become, by remarriage, the Countess of Essex. Sidney's sister, the Countess of Pembroke, presumably furnished that 'dolefull lay' which is set down to 'his sister that Clorinda hight.' The authors of the other poems, though undeclared, can, all but one, be traced by contemporary evidence — which need not be retailed here.

In 1595 most, if not all, of this poetry had been extant for several years: some of it had already seen print. The verses by the Countess of Pembroke would seem to be those referred to in 'The Ruins of Time,' which is of 1590: —

' who can better sing
Than thine owne sister, peerles ladie bright,
Which to thee sings with deep harts sorrowing, Sorrowing tempered with deare delight?'

The last line fits the lament of Clorinda exactly. Bryskett's poem, 'The Mourning Muse of Thestylis,' had been entered upon the Stationers' Register in August, 1587, and had perhaps in due course been published, though no copy of the issue has survived. Matthew Roydon's 'Elegy' and the two 'Epitaphs' had appeared in The Phoenix Nest of 1593, and are heard of earlier, Roydon's poem in 1589, Raleigh's in 1591. All the poems, except Astro- phel itself, may very well date from the twelve-month following Sidney's death in October, 1586.

Concerning Astrophel the only evidence is that of the dedication to 'The Ruins of Time.' 'Sithens my late cumming into England,' writes Spenser, 'some friends of mine, . . . knowing with howe straight bandes of duetie I was tied to him [i. e. Sidney] . . . have sought to revive them by upbraiding me, for that I have not shewed anie thankfull remembrance towards him or any of them [i. e. the Dudleys], but suffer their names to sleep in silence and forgetfulness. Whome chieflie to satisfie, or els to avoide that fowle blot of unthankfulnessse, I have conceived this small poeme.' At the time of writing thus, in 1590, Spenser cannot have already composed Astrophel. Yet he probably did compose it before his return to Ireland, for, once back there, he would be far removed from occasions to commemorate Sidney. What the occasion of this volume was we cannot know. Quite possibly he had little to do with originating the anthology or with dedicating it to the Countess of Essex: his part may have been only to supply a general prologue. One may note that for this he contented himself with the stanza-form of the Countess of Pembroke's elegy, a form which he had used in the Calendar and in such probably youthful work as 'The Tears of the Muses,' but which by 1590 his taste must surely have outgrown.]

SHEPHEARDS, that wont on pipes of oaten
reed
Oft times to plaine your loves concealed
smart,
And with your piteous layes have learnd
to breed
Compassion in a countrey lasses hart, Hearken, ye gentle shepherds, to my
song,
And place my dolefull plaint your plaints emong.

To you alone I sing this mournfull verse, The mournfulst verse that ever man heard
tell;
To you, whose softened hearts it may em-pierce
With dolours dart for death of Astrophel:
To you I sing, and to none other wight, For well I wot my rymes bene rudely
dight.

Yet as they been, if any nyceer wit Shall hap to heare, or covet them to
read,

Thinke he, that such are for such ones most
fit,
Made not to please the living but the dead.
And if in him found pity ever place,
Let him be moov'd to pity such a case.

A GENTLE shepherd borne in Arcady,
Of gentlest race that ever shepherd bore,
About the grassie bancks of Hæmony Did keepe his sheep, his litle stock and store.
Full carefully he kept them day and night,
In fairest fields; and Astrophel he hight.

Young Astrophel, the pride of shepherds
praise,
Young Astrophel, the rusticke lasses love,
Far passing all the pastors of his daies, In all that seemly shepherd might be-
hove: 10
In one thing onely fayling of the best,
That he was not so happie as the rest.

For from the time that first the nymph, his mother,
Him forth did bring, and taught her lambs to feed,
A scelder swaine, excelling far each other In comely shape, like her that did him breed,
He grew up fast in goodnesse and in grace, And doubly faire wox both in mynd and
face.

Which daily more and more he did aug-
ment,
With gentle usage and demeanure myld, 20
That all mens hearts with secret ravishment
He stole away, and weetingly beguyld.
Ne Spight it selfe, that all good things doth
spill,
Found ought in him that she could say was
ill.

His sports were faire, his joyance innocent, Sweet without sowre, and honny without
gall,
And he himselfe seemd made for meriment, Merily masking both in bowre and hall:
There was no pleasure nor delightfull play,
When Astrophel so ever was away. 30

For he could pipe, and daunce, and caroll
sweet,
Amongst the shepherds in their shearing
feast;

As somers larke that with her song doth greet
The dawning day forth comming from the East.
And layes of love he also could compose:
Thrise happie she whom he to praise did chose.

Full many maydens often did him woo Them to vouchsafe emongst his rimes to
name,
Or make for them, as he was wont to doo For her that did his heart with love in-
flame. 40
For which they promised to dight for him
Gay chapelets of flowers and gyrlonds trim.

And many a nymph both of the wood and
brooke,
Soone as his oaten pipe began to shrill, Both christall wells and shadie groves for-
sooke,
To heare the charmes of his enchanting
skill;
And brought him presents, flowers if it were prime,
Or mellow fruit if it were harvest time.

But he for none of them did care a whit, (Yet wood gods for them often sighed
sore,) 50
Ne for their gifts, unworthie of his wit, Yet not unworthie of the countries store.
For one alone he cared, for one he sight, His lifes desire, and his deare loves de-
light.

Stella the faire, the fairest star in skie,
As faire as Venus or the fairest faire, (A fairer star saw never living eie,) Shot her sharp pointed beames through purest aire.
Her he did love, her he alone did honor,
His thoughts, his rimes, his songs were all upon her. 60

To her he vowd the service of his daies,
On her he spent the riches of his wit:
For her he made hymnes of immortall
praise,
Of onely her he sung, he thought, he writ.
Her, and but her, of love he worthie
deemed;
For all the rest but litle he esteemed.

Ne her with ydle words alone he wowed,
 And verses vaine, (yet verses are not vaine)
 But with brave deeds, to her sole service vowed,
 And bold atchievements, her did enter-
 taine. 70
 For both in deeds and words he nourted
 was,
 Both wise and hardie (too hardie, alas !)

In wrestling nimble, and in renning swift, In shooting steddie, and in swimming
 strong:
 Well made to strike, to throw, to leape, to lift,
 And all the sports that shepherds are
 emong:
 In every one he vanquisht every one,
 He vanquisht all, and vanquisht was of
 none.

Besides, in hunting such felicitie,
 Or rather infelicitie, he found, 80
 That every field and forest far away He sought, where salvage beasts do most abound.
 No beast so salvage, but he could it kill;
 No chace so hard, but he therein had skill.

Such skill, matcht with such courage as he
 had,
 Did prick him forth with proud desire of
 praise,
 To seek abroad, of daunger nought y'drad, His mistresse name, and his owne fame, to raise.
 What need perill to be sought abroad,
 Since round about us it doth make abroad ? 90

It fortun'd, as he that perilous game
 In forreine soyle pursued far away, Into a forest wide and waste he came,
 Where store he heard to be of salvage pray.
 So wide a forest and so waste as this, Nor famous Ardeyn, nor fowle Arlo, is.

There his welwoven toyles and subtil traines
 He laid the brutish nation to enwrap:
 So well he wrought with practise and with
 paines,
 That he of them great troupes did soone
 entrap. 100
 Full happie man (misweening much) was
 hee,
 So rich a spoile within his power to see.

Eftsoones, all heedlesse of his dearest hale, Full greedily into the heard he thrust,
 To slaughter them, and worke their finall
 bale,
 Least that his toyle should of their troupes be Brust.
 Wide wounds amongst them many one he
 made,
 Now with his sharp borespear, now with his
 blade.

His care was all how he them all might kill,
 That none might scape (so partiall unto
 none): 110
 Ill mynd, so much to mynd anothers ill,
 As to become unmyndfull of his owne:
 But pardon that unto the cruell skies, That from himselfe to them withdrew his eies.

So as he rag'd amongst that beastly rout,
 A cruell beast of most accursed brood Upon him turnd (despeyre makes cowards stout)
 And, with fell tooth accustomed to blood, Launched his thigh with so mischievous
 might,
 That it both bone and muscles ryved
 quight. 120

So deadly was the dint and deep the wound,
 And so huge streames of blood thereout did
 flow,
 That he endured not the direfull stound, But on the cold deare earth himselfe did
 throw.
 The whiles the captive heard his nets did
 rend,
 And having none to let, to wood did wend.

Ah ! where were ye this while, his shepherd
 peares,
 To whom alive was nought so deare as hee ?
 And ye, faire mayds, the matches of his
 yeares,
 Which in his grace did boast you most to
 bee ? 130
 Ah ! where were ye, when he of you had
 need,
 To stop his wound, that wondrously did bleed ?

Ah, wretched boy, the shape of dreryhead,
 And sad ensample of mans suddain end !

Full litle faileth but thou shalt be dead, Unpitied, unplaynd, of foe or frend; Whilst none is nigh, thine eylids up to
 close,
 And kisse thy lips like faded leaves of rose.

A sort of shepherds, sewing of the chace,
 As they the forest raunged on a day, ¹⁴⁰
 By fate or fortune came unto the place, Where as the lucklesse boy yet bleeding lay; Yet bleeding lay, and yet would still have
 bled,
 Had not good hap those shepherds thether
 led.

They stopt his wound (too late to stop it
 was)
 And in their armes then softly did him
 reare:
 Tho (as he wild) unto his loved lasse,
 His dearest love, him dolefully did beare.
 The dolefulst beare that ever man did see Was Astrophel, but dearest unto mee. ¹⁵⁰

She, when she saw her love in such a plight, With crudled blood and filthie gore deformed,
 That wont to be with flowers and gyrlonds
 dight,
 And her deare favours dearly well adorned,
 Her face, the fairest face that eye mote see,
 She likewise did deforme like him to bee.

Her yellow locks, that shone so bright and
 long,
 As sunny beames in fairest somers day,
 She fiersly tore, and with outragious wrong
 From her red cheeks the roses rent away, ¹⁶⁰
 And her faire brest, the threasury of joy,
 She spoyld thereof, and filled with annoy.

His palled face, impictured with death,
 She bathed oft with teares and dried oft:
 And with sweet kisses suckt the wasting breath
 Out of his lips like lillies pale and soft:
 And oft she cald to him, who answerd
 nought,
 But onely by his lookes did tell his thought.

The rest of her impatient regret,
 And piteous mone the which she for him made, ¹⁷⁰
 No toong can tell, nor any forth can set,
 But he whose heart like sorrow did invade.

At last when paine his vitall powres had
 spent,
 His wasted life her weary lodge forwent.

Which when she saw, she staid not a whit,
 But after him did make untimely haste:
 Forthwith her ghost out of her corps did
 flit,
 And followed her make like turtle chaste;
 To prove that death their hearts cannot divide,
 Which living were in love so firmly tide.

The gods, which all things see, this same beheld, ¹⁸¹
 And pittying this paire of lovers trew, Transformed them, there lying on the field,
 Into one flowre that is both red and blew:
 It first growes red, and then to blew doth
 fade,
 Like Astrophel, which thereinto was made.

And in the midst thereof a star appeares,
 As fairly formd as any star in skyes, Resembling Stella in her freshest yeares, Forth darting beames of beautie from her eyes; ¹⁹⁰
 And all the day it standeth full of deow, Which is the teares that from her eyes did
 flow.

That hearbe, of some, Starlight is cald by
 name,
 Of others Penthia, though not so well:
 But thou, where ever thou doest finde the
 same,
 From this day forth do call it Astrophel:
 And when so ever thou it up doest take,
 Do pluck it softly for that shepherds
 sake.

Hereof when tydings far abroad did passe, The shepherds all which loved him full deare, ²⁰⁰
 And sure full deare of all he loved was, Did thether flock to see what they did
 heare.
 And when that pitteous spectacle they vewed,
 The same with bitter teares they all bedewed.

And every one did make exceeding mone, With inward anguish and great grieve op-
 prest:

And every one did weep and waile and
mone,
And meanes deviz'd to shew his sorrow
best:

That from that houre since first on grassie
greene
Shepherds kept sheep, was not like mourning seen. 210

But first his sister, that Clorinda hight, The gentlest shepherdesse that lives this
day,

And most resembling both in shape and
spright

Her brother deare, began this dolefull lay.
Which, least I marre the sweetnesste of the vearse,

In sort as she it sung I will rehearse.

[Verses presumably by the Countess of Pembroke.]

AY me! to whom shall I my ease complaine,
That may compassion my impatient grieffe?
Or where shall I unfold my inward paine,
That my eniven heart may find reliefe?
Shall I unto the heavenly powres it show?
Or unto earthly men that dwell below?

To heavens? Ah! they, alas! the authors
were,

And workers of my unremedied wo:
For they foresaw what to us happens here,
And they foresaw, yet suffred this be so. 10 From them comes good, from them comes also ill;

That which they made, who can them warne to spill?

To men? Ah! they, alas! like wretched
bee,

And subject to the heavens ordinance:
Bound to abide what ever they decree, Their best redresse is their best sufferance.

How then can they, like wretched, comfort
mee,

The which no lesse need comforted to bee?

Then to my selfe will I my sorrow mourne, Sith none alive like sorrowfull remains: 20
And to my selfe my plaints shall back re-
tourne,

To pay their usury with doubled paines.

The woods, the hills, the rivers shall resound
The mournfull accent of my sorrowes
ground.

Woods, hills, and rivers now are desolate, Sith he is gone the which them all did grace:
And all the fields do waile their widow estate, Sith death their fairest flowre did late deface.
The fairest flowre in field that ever grew Was Astrophel; that was, we all may rewe. 30

What cruell hand of cursed foe unknowne Hath cropt the stalke which bore so faire a flowre?

Untimely cropt, before it well were growne,
And cleane defaced in untimely howre.
Great losse to all that ever him did see,
Great losse to all, but greatest losse to mee!

Breake now your gyrlonds, O ye shepherds lasses,

Sith the faire flowre which them adornd is
gon:

The flowre which them adornd is gone to ashes;

Never againe let lasse put gyrlond on. 40
In stead of gyrlond, weare sad eypres nowe,
And bitter elder, broken from the bowe.

Ne ever sing the love-layes which he made;
Who ever made such layes of love as hee?
Ne ever read the riddles which he sayd Unto your selves, to make you mery glee.
Your mery glee is now laid all abed,
Your mery maker now, alas! is dead.

Death, the devourer of all worlds delight, Hath robbed you and reft fro me my joy: 50
Both you and me and all the world he quight Hath robd of joyance, and left sad annoy.
Joy of the world and shepherds pride was
hee:

Shepherds, hope never like againe to see.

Oh Death! that hast us of such riches reft, Tell us at least, what hast thou with it done?
What is become of him whose flowre here
left

Is but the shadow of his likeness gone?
Searse like the shadow of that which he was, Nought like, but that he like a shade did
pas. 60

But that immortall spirit, which was deekt
With all the dowries of celestiaall grace,

By sovaine choyce from th' hevenly quires select,
And lineally deriv'd from angels race,
O! what is now of it become, aread.
Ay me! can so divine a thing be dead?

Ah, no! it is not dead, ne can it die,
But lives for aie in blisfull Paradise:
Where like a new-borne babe it soft doth
lie,
In bed of lillies wrapt in tender wise, 70
And compass all about with roses sweet,
And daintie violets from head to feet.

There thousand birds, all of celestiaall brood,
To him do sweetly caroll day and night;
And with straunge notes, of him well under-
stood,

Lull him a sleep in angelick delight; Whilest in sweet dreame to him presented
bee
Immortall beauties, which no eye may see.

But he them sees, and takes exceeding pleasure
Of their divine aspects, appearing plaine, so
And kindling love in him above all measure, Sweet love, still joyous, never feeling paine.
For what so goodly forme he there doth see,
He may enjoy from jealous rancor free.

There liveth he in everlasting blis,
Sweet spirit, never fearing more to die:
Ne dreading harme from any foes of his,
Ne fearing salvage beasts more crueltie.
Whilest we here, wretches, waile his private lack,
And with vaine vows do often call him back. 90

But live thou there, still happie, happie
spirit,
And give us leave thee here thus to la-
ment:
Not thee that doest thy heavens joy inherit, But our owne selves that here in dole are drent.
Thus do we weep and waile, and wear our
eies,
Mourning in others our owne miseries.

WHICH when she ended had, another
swaine,
Of gentle wit and daintie sweet device,

Whom Astrophel full deare did enter-
taine, Whilest here he liv'd, and held in passing price, 220
Hight Thestylis, began his mournfull
tourne,
And made the Muses in his song to mourne.

And after him full many other moe,
As everie one in order lov'd him best, Gan dight themselves t' expresse their inward woe,
With dolefull layes unto the time address.
The which I here in order will rehearse, As fittest flowres to deck his mournfull hearse.

THE MOURNING MUSE OF THESTYLIS

[By Lodowick Bryskett.]

COME forth, ye Nymphes, come forth, forsake your watry bowres, Forsake your mossy caves, and help me to lament:
Help me to tune my dolefull notes to gurgling sound Of Liffies tumbling streames: come, let salt teares of ours Mix with his waters fresh. O come, let one consent Joyne us to mourne with wailfull plaints the deadly wound Which fatall clap hath made; decreed by higher powres;
The dreery day in which they have from us yrent
The noblest plant that might from East to West be found.
Mourne, mourn great Philips fall, mourn we his wofull end, 10 Whom spitefull Death hath pluct untimely from the tree, Whiles yet his yeares in flowre did promise worthie frute.
Ah! dreadful Mars, why didst thou not thy knight defend?
What wrathfull mood, what fault of ours hath moved thee
Of such a shining light to leave us destitute?
Thou with benigne aspect sometime didst us behold,

Thou hast in Britons valour tane delight of old,
 And with thy presence oft vouchsaft to attribute Fame and renowne to us for glorious martiall deeds.
 But now thy reful beemes have chill'd our harts with cold;
 Thou hast estrang'd thy self, and deignest not our land:
 Farre off to others now thy favour honour
 breeds,
 And high disdaine doth cause thee shun our elime (I feare.) For hadst thou not bene wroth, or that time neare at hand, Thou wouldst have heard the cry that wo-ful England made;
 Eke Zeland's piteous plaints and Hollands toren heare Would haply have appeas'd thy divine angry mynd.
 Thou shouldst have seen the trees refuse to yeeld their shade, And wailing to let fall the honor of their
 head,
 And birds in mournfull tunes lamenting in their kinde.
 Up from his tombe the mightie Corineus rose, Who cursing off the Fates that this mishap had bred,
 His hoary locks he tare, calling the heavens
 unkinde.
 The Thames was heard to roare, the Reyne and eke the Mose, The Schald, the Danow selfe this great mischance did rue,
 With torment and with grief; their fountains pure and cleere Were troubled, and with swelling flouds declar'd their woes.
 The Muses comfortles, the Nymphs with paled hue,
 The silvan gods likewise came running farre and neere,
 And all with teares bedewd, and eyes cast up on hie,
 'O help, O help, ye gods!' they ghastly gan to crie.
 'O change the cruell fate of this so rare
 a wight,
 And graunt that natures course may measure out his age!
 The beasts their foode forsooke, and trembling fearfully,

Each sought his cave or den, this cry did them so fright.
 Out from amid the waves, by storme then stirr'd to rage,
 This crie did cause to rise th' old father Ocean hoare,
 Who, grave with eld, and full of majestie
 in sight,
 Spake in this wise: 'Refrain,' quoth he,
 'your teares and plaints, Cease these your idle words, make vaine requests no more.
 No humble speech nor mone may move the fixed stint
 Of destinie or death: such is his will that paints
 The earth with colours fresh, the darkest skies with store Of starry lights: and though your teares a hart of flint Might tender make, yet nought herein they will prevaile.'
 Whiles thus he said, the noble knight, who gan to feele His vitall force to faint, and Death with cruell dint
 Of direfull dart his mortall bodie to assaile, With eyes lift up to heav'n, and courage franke as steele,
 With cheerfull face, where valour lively was exprest,
 But humble mynd, he said: 'O Lord, if ought this fraile And earthly carcasse have thy service sought t' advance;
 If my desire have bene still to relieve th'
 opprest;
 If, justice to maintaine, that valour I have
 spent Which thou me gav'st; or if henceforth I might advance Thy name, thy truth, then spare me (Lord) if thou think best; Forbeare these unripe yeares. But if thy will be bent,
 If that prefixed time be come which thou hast set,
 Through pure and fervent faith, I hope now to be plast
 In th' everlasting blis which with thy precious blood Thou purchase didst for us.' With that a sigh he fet,
 And straight a cloudie mist his sences overcast,

His lips waxt pale and wan, like damaske roses bud Cast from the stalke, or like in field to purple flowre, Which languisheth being shred by eulter as it past.
 A trembling chilly cold ran through their veines, which were
 With eies brimfull of teares to see his fatall howre;
 Whose blustering sighes at first their sorrow did declare;
 Next, murmuring ensude; at last they not forbear Plaine outcries, all against the heav'ns that enviously ^{So} Depriv'd us of a spright so perfect and so
 rare.
 The sun his lightsom beames did shrowd, and hide his face For grieft, whereby the earth feard night eternally:
 The mountaines eachwhere shooke, the rivers turn'd their streames, And th' aire gan winterlike to rage and fret apace:
 And grisly ghosts by night were seene, and fierie gleames Amid the clouds, with claps of thunder, that did seeme
 To rent the skies, and made both man and beast afeard.
 The birds of ill presage this lucklesse chance foretold, By dernfull noise, and dogs with howling made man deeme ⁹⁰
 Some mischief was at hand: for such they do esteeme
 As tokens of mishap, and so have done of old.
 Ah! that thou hadst but heard his lovely Stella plaine
 Her greevous losse, or seene her heavie mourning cheere, While she, with woe opprest, her sorrowes did unfold.
 Her haire hung lose neglect, about her shoulders twaine,
 And from those two bright starres, to him sometime so deere,
 Her heart sent drops of pearle, which fell in foyson downe Twixt lilly and the rose. She wroong her hands with paine,
 And piteously gan say: 'My true and faithfull pheere, 100

Alas, and woe is me! why should my fortune frowne
 On me thus frowardly, to rob me of my
 joy?
 What cruell envious hand hath taken thee
 away,
 And with thee my content, my comfort, and my stay?
 Thou onelie wast the ease of trouble and
 annoy,
 When they did me assaile, in thee my hopes did rest.
 Alas! what now is left but grief, that night and day
 Afflicts this wofull life, and with continuall
 rage
 Torments ten thousand waies my miserable brest?
 O greedie envious heav'n, what needed thee to have ¹¹⁰
 Enrich with such a jewell this unhappie age,
 To take it back againe so soone? Alas!
 when shall Mine eies see ought that may content them, since thy grave My onely treasure hides, the joyes of my poore hart?
 As here with thee on earth I liv'd, even so equall Methinkes it were with thee in heav'n I did
 abide:
 And as our troubles all we here on earth did part,
 So reason would that there of thy most happie state
 I had my share. Alas! if thou my trustie guide
 Were wont to be, how canst thou leave me thus alone ¹²⁰
 In darknesse and astray, weake, wearie, desolate, Plung'd in a world of woe, refusing for to
 take Me with thee to the place of rest where thou art gone?
 This said, she held her peace, for sorrow tide her toong;
 And instead of more words, seemd that her eies a lake
 Of teares had bene, they flow'd so plenteously thereof:
 And with her sobs and sighs th' aire round about her roong.
 If Venus, when she waild her deare Adonis slaine,

Ought moov'd in thy fiers hart compassion of her woe,
His noble sisters plaints, her sighes and teares emoug, ¹³⁰
Would sure have made thee milde, and inly rue her paine.
Aurora halfe so faire her selfe did never show, When from old Tithons bed shee weeping did arise.
The blinded archer-boy, like larke in showre of raine,
Sat bathing of his wings, and glad the time did spend Under those cristall drops which fell from her faire eies,
And at their brightest beames him proynd in lovely wise.
Yet sorie for her grief, which he could not amend,
The gentle boy gan wipe her eies, and clear those lights, Those lights through which his glory and his conquests shine. ¹⁴⁰
The Graces tuckt her hair, which hung like threds of gold, Along her yvorie brest, the treasure of delights.
All things with her to weep, it seemed, did encline,
The trees, the hills, the dales, the caves,
the stones so cold.
The aire did help them mourne, with dark clouds, raine, and mist, Forbearing many a day to cleare it selfe again; ¹⁵⁰
Which made them eftsoones feare the daies of Pirrha shold
Of creatures spoile the earth, their fatall threds untwist.
For Phœbus gladsome raies were wished for in vaine,
And with her quivering light Latonas daughter faire,
And Charles-waine eke refus'd to be the shipmans guide.
On Neptune warre was made by Aeolus and his traine,
Who, letting loose the winds, tost and tormented th' aire,
So that on ev'ry coast men shipwraek did
abide,
Or else were swallowed up in open sea with waves,
And such as came to shoare were beaten with despaire.

The Medwaies silver streames, that wont so still to slide,
Were troubled now and wrothe: whose hidden hollow caves Along his banks, with fog then shrowded from mans eye, Ay 'Phillip!' did resownd, aie 'Phillip!' they did crie. ¹⁶⁰ His nimphs were seen no more (though custom stil it craves) With haire spred to the wynd themselves to bath or sport, Or with the hooke or net, barefooted wantonly,
The pleasant daintie fish to entangle or deceive.
The shepherds left their wonted places of resort;
Their bagpipes now were still; their loving mery layes
Were quite forgot; and now their flocks men might perceive To wander and to straie, all carelesly neglect:
And in the stead of mirth and pleasure, nights and dayes Nought els was to be heard, but woes, complaints, and mone. ¹⁷⁰ But thou (O blessed soule) doest haply not respect These teares we shead, though full of loving pure affect,
Having affixt thine eyes on that most glorious throne,
Where full of majestie the High Creator reignes:
In whose bright shining face thy joyes are all complete;
Whose love kindles thy spright; where, happie alwaies one,
Thou liv'st in blis that earthly passion never staines;
Where from the purest spring the sacred nectar sweete Is thy continual drinke; where thou doest gather now
Of well employed life th' inestimable gaines.
There Venus on thee smiles, Apollo gives thee place, ¹⁸¹
And Mars in reverent wise doth to thy vertue bow,
And decks his fiery sphere, to do thee honour most.
In highest part whereof, thy valour for to
grace,

A chaire of gold he setts to thee, and there doth tell Thy noble acts arew, whereby even they that boast Themselves of auncient fame, as Pirrhus, Hanniball, Scipio, and Cæsar, with the rest that did
excell
In martiall prowesse, high thy glorie do admire.
All haile, therefore, O worthie Phillip immortall, ¹⁹⁰
The floure of Sydneys race, the honour of thy name!
Whose worthie praise to sing my Muses not aspire,
But sorrowfull and sad these teares to thee let fall, Yet wish their verses might so farre and wide thy fame Extend, that envies rage, nor time, might end the same.

A PASTORALL AEGLOGUE UPON THE DEATH OF SIR PHILLIP SIDNEY, KNIGHT, &c.

[By Lodowick Bryskett.]

LYCON. COLIN.

COLIN, well fits thy sad cheare this sad
stownd,
This wofull stownd, wherein all things
complaine
This great mishap, this greevous losse of owres.
Hear'st thou the Orown? how with hollow
sownd
He slides away, and murmuring doth plaine,
And seemes to say unto the fading flowres Along his bankes, unto the bared trees,
'Phyllisides is dead'? Up, jolly swaine, Thou that with skill canst tune a dolefull
lay,
Help him to mourn. My hart with grief doth freese, ¹⁰
Hoarse is my voice with crying, else a part Sure would I beare, though rude: but as I
may,
With sobs and sighes I second will thy
song,
And so expresse the sorrowes of my hart.
Colin. Ah, Lycon, Lycon! what need skill, to teach

A grieved mynd powre forth his plaints?
How long Hath the pore turtle gon to school (weenest thou)
To learne to mourne her lost make? No, no, each Creature by nature can tell how to waile.
Seest not these flocks, how sad they wander now? ²⁰
Seemeth their leaders bell their bleating tunes
In dolefull sound. Like him, not one doth faile
With hanging head to shew a heavie
cheare.
What bird (I pray thee) hast thou seen, that prunes Himselfe of late? Did any cheerfull note Come to thine eares, or gladsome sight ap-
peare
Unto thine eies, since that same fatall
howre?
Hath not the aire put on his mourning coat,
And testified his grief with flowing teares?
Sith, then, it seemeth each thing, to his powre, ³⁰
Doth us invite to make a sad consort, Come, let us joyne our mournfull song with theirs.
Griefe will endite, and sorrow will enforce Thy voice, and Echo will our words report.
Lycon. Though my rude rymes ill with thy verses frame,
That others farre excell, yet will I force
My selfe to answeere thee the best I can,
And honor my base words with his high
name.
But if my plaints annoy thee where thou sit
In secret shade or cave, vouchsafe (O Pan) To pardon me, and here this hard constraint ⁴¹
With patience while I sing, and pittie it.
And eke ye rural Muses, that do dwell
In these wilde woods, if ever piteous plaint
We did endite, or taught a wofull minde With words of pure affect his griefe to tell, Instruct me now. Now, Colin, then goe on,
And I will follow thee, though farre be-hinde.
Colin. Phyllisides is dead. O harmful
death,
O deadly harme! Unhappie Albion, ⁵⁰

When shalt thou see emoug thy shepheards
all,

Any so sage, so perfect? Whom weath Envie could touch for vertuous life and
skill;

Curteous, valiant, and liberrall.

Behold the sacred Pales, where with haire Untrust she sits, in shade of yonder hill,
And her faire face bent sadly downe, doth
send

A fload of teares to bathe the earth; and
there

Doth call the heav'ns despightfull, envious, Cruell his fate, that made so short an
end

Of that same life, well worthie to have
bene

Prolongd with many yeares, happie and famous.

The Nymphs and Oreades her round about Do sit lamenting on the grassie grene, And with shrill cries, beating their whitest
brests,

Accuse the direfull dart that Death sent out

To give the fatall stroke. The starres they
blame,

That deafe or carelesse seeme at their request.

The pleasant shade of stately groves they shun;

They leave their cristall springs, where they wont frame

Sweet bowres of myrtel twigs and lawrel
faire,

To sport themselves free from the scorching sun.

And now the hollow caves, where horror
darke

Doth dwell, whence banisht is the gladsome
aire,

They seeke; and there in mourning spend their time

With wailfull tunes, whiles wolves do howle and barke,

And seem to beare a bourdon to their
plaint.

Lycón. Phillisides is dead. O dolefull
ryme!

Why should my toong expresse thee? Who is left

Now to uphold thy hopes, when they do
faint,

Lycón unfortunate? What spitefull fate,
What lucklesse destinie, hath thee bereft

Of thy chief comfort, of thy ouely stay?
Where is become thy wonted happie state, (Alas!) wherein through many a hill and dale,

Through pleasant woods, and many an un-knowne way,

Along the banks of many silver streames, Thou with him yodest, and with him didst scale

The craggie rocks of th' Alpes and Appen-ine,

Still with the Muses sporting, while those
beames

Of vertue kindled in his noble brest,
Which after did so gloriously forth shine?

But (woe is me!) they now yquenched are All suddainly, and death hath them op-
prest.

Loe Father Neptune, with sad countenance, How he sits mourning on the strond now
bare,

Yonder, where th' Ocean with his rolling waves

The white feete washeth (wailing this mis-chance)

Of Dover cliffes. His sacred skirt about The sea-gods all are set; from their moist caves

All for his comfort gathered there they be.
The Thamis rich, the Humber rough and
stout,

The fruitfull Severne with the rest are come

To helpe their lord to mourne, and eke to
see

The dolefull sight, and sad pomp funerall Of the dead corps passing through his kingdome.

And all their heads, with cypres gyrlonds
crown'd,

With wofull shrikes salute him, great and small.

Eke wailfull Eccho, forgetting her deare Narcissus, their last accents doth resownd.

Colin. Phillisides is dead. O lucklesse
age,

O widow world! O brookes and fountains cleere,

O hills, O dales, O woods, that oft have rong

With his sweet caroling, which could as-swage

The fiercest wrath of tygre or of beare; Ye Silvans, Fawnes, and Satyres, that
emong

These thickets oft have daunst after his pipe; Ye Nymphs and Nayades with golden
heare,

That oft have left your purest cristall springs

To harken to his layes, that coulden wipe Away all grieffe and sorrow from your
harts: 121

Alas! who now is left that like him sings?
When shall you heare againe like harmonie?

So sweet a sounnd who to you now imparts?

Loe where engraved by his hand yet lives
The name of Stella, in yonder bay tree.

Happie name, happie tree! faire may you
grow,

And spread your sacred branch, which honor gives

To famous emperours, and poets crowne.
Unhappie flock, that wander scattred now, What marvell if through grief ye woxen
leane, 131

Forsake your food, and hang your heads
adowne?

For such a shepheard never shall you
guide,

Whose parting hath of weale bereft you cleane.

Lycon. Phillisides is dead. O happie
sprite,

That now in heav'n with blessed soules doest bide,

Looke down a while from where thou sitst
above,

And see how busie shepherds be to endite Sad songs of grief, their sorrowes to declare, 139

And gratefull memory of their kynd love.
Behold my selfe with Colin, gentle swaine, (Whose lerned muse thou cherisht most whyleare)

Where we, thy name recording, seeke to ease

The inward torment and tormenting paine,
That thy departure to us both hath bred;
Ne can each others sorrow yet appease.

Behold the fountains now left desolate, And withred grasse with cypres boughes bespred;

Behold these floures which on thy grave we strew;

Which, faded, shew the givers faded state, (Though eke they shew their fervent zeale and pure) 151

Whose onely comfort on thy welfare grew.
Whose praiers importune shall the heav'ns for ay,

That to thy ashes rest they may assure;
That learnedst shepherds honor may thy
name

With yeerly praises, and the Nymphs al-
way

Thy tomb may deck with fresh and sweetest flowres;

And that for ever may endure thy fame.

Colin. The sun (lo!) hastned hath his face to steep

In western waves; and th' aire with stormy showres 160

Warnes us to drive homewards our silly sheep.

Lycon, lett's rise, and take of them good keep.

Virtute summa: cætera fortuna.

L. B.

AN ELEGIE, OR FRIENDS PAS- SION, FOR HIS ASTROPHILL

WRITTEN UPON THE DEATH OF THE RIGHT HONOURABLE SIR PHILLIP SID-NEY, KNIGHT, LORD GOVERNOUR OF FLUSHING

[By Matthew Roydon.]

As then, no winde at all there blew,
No swelling cloude accloid the aire;
The skie, like glasse of watchet hew, Reflected Phæbus golden haire;

The garnisht tree no pendant stird,
No voice was heard of anie bird.

There might you see the burly beare,
The lion king, the elephant;
The maiden unicorne was there,

So was Acteons horned plant, 15
And what of wilde or tame are found Were coucht in order on the ground.

Alcides speckled poplar tree,
The palme that monarchs do obtaine,
With love juice staind, the mulberie,
The fruit that dewes the poets braine,
And Phillis philbert there away, Comparde with mirtle and the bay.

The tree that coffins doth adorne,
 With stately height threatning the skie, 20
 And for the bed of love forlorne, The blacke and dolefull ebonie, All in a circle compast were,
 Like to an amphitheater.

Upon the branches of those trees
 The aire winged people sat, Distinguished in od degrees,
 One sort is this, another that.
 Here Philomell, that knowes full well What force and wit in love doth dwell. 30

The skiebred egle, roiall bird, Percht there upon an oke above;
 The turtle by him never stird, Example of immortall love;
 The swan that sings about to dy, Leaving Meander, stood thereby.

And that which was of woonder most,
 The phenix left sweet Arabie,
 And on a cedar in this coast Built up her tombe of spieerie, 40
 As I conjecture by the same, Preparde to take her dying flame.

In midst and center of this plot,
 I saw one groveling on the grasse:
 A man or stone, I knew not that:
 No stone; of man the figure was,
 And yet I could not count him one,
 More than the image made of stone.

At length I might perceive him reare His bodie on his elbow end: 50 Earthly and pale with gastly cheare, Upon his knees he upward tend,
 Seeming like one in uncouth stound,
 To be ascending out the ground.

A grievous sigh forthwith he throwes,
 As might have torne the vitall strings;
 Then down his cheeks the teares so flows,
 As doth the streame of many springs.
 So thunder rends the cloud in twaine,
 And makes a passage for the raine. 60

Incontinent, with trembling sound
 He wofully gan to complaine;
 Such were the accents as might wound,
 And teare a diamond rocke in twaine:
 After his throbs did somewhat stay, Thus heavily he gan to say.

'O sunne,' said he, seeing the sunne,
 'On wretched me why dost thou shine?
 My star is false, my comfort done,
 Out is the apple of my eie: 70 Shine upon those possesse delight,
 And let me live in endless night.

'O griefe that liest upon my soule,
 As heavie as a mount of lead,
 The remnant of my life controll, Consort me quickly with the dead; Halfe of this hart, this sprite, and will,
 Di'de in the brest of Astrophill.

'And you, compassionate of my wo, Gentle birds, beasts, and shadie trees, 80
 I am assurde ye long to kno
 What be the sorrowes me agreev's; Listen ye then to that insu'th,
 And heare a tale of teares and ruthe.

'You knew — who knew not? — Astro-phill:
 (That I should live to say I knew,
 And have not in possession still!) Things knowne permit me to renew;
 Of him you know his merit such,
 I cannot say, you heare, too much. 90

'Within these woods of Arcadie He chiefe delight and pleasure tooke,
 And on the mountaine Parthenie, Upon the chrystall liquid brooke,
 The Muses met him ev'ry day, That taught him sing, to write, and
 say.

'When he descended downe the mount,
 His personage seemed most divine,
 A thousand graces one might count Upon his lovely cheerfull eie, 100
 To heare him speake and sweetly smile, You were in Paradise the while.

'A sweet attractive kinde of grace,
 A full assurance given by lookes, Continuall comfort in a face,
 The lineaments of Gospell bookes;
 I trowe that countenance cannot lie, Whose thoughts are legible in the eie.

'Was never eie, did see that face,
 Was never eare, did heare that tong, 110
 Was never minde, did minde his grace, That ever thought the travell long,

But eies, and eares, and ev'ry thought,
Were with his sweete perfections caught.

'O God, that such a worthy man,
In whom so rare desarts did raigne, Desired thus, must leave us than,
And we to wish for him in vaine!
O could the stars that bred that wit
In force no longer fixed sit?

'Then being fild with learned dew,
The Muses willed him to love;
That instrument can aptly shew
How finely our conceits will move:
As Bacchus opes dissembled harts, So Love sets out our better parts.

'Stella, a nymph within this wood,
Most rare and rich of heavenly blis,
The highest in his fancie stood,
And she could well demerite this:
Tis likely they acquainted soone;
He was a sun, and she a moone.

'Our Astrophill did Stella love;
O Stella, vaunt of Astrophill, Albeit thy graces gods may move,
Where wilt thou finde an Astrophill?
The rose and lillie have their prime,
And so hath beautie but a time.

'Although thy beautie do exceed,
In common sight of ev'ry eie, Yet in his poesies when we reede,
It is apparant more thereby:
He that hath love and judgement too Sees more than any other doo.

'Then Astrophill hath honord thee;
For when thy bodie is extinct, Thy graces shall eternall be,
And live by vertue of his inke;
For by his verses he doth give To short livde beautie aye to live.

'Above all others this is hee, Which erst approved in his song That love and honor might agree,
And that pure love will do no wrong.
Sweet saints! it is no siune nor blame,
To love a man of vertuous name.

'Did never love so sweetly breath
In any mortall brest before;

Did never Muse inspire beneath A poets braine with finer store:
He wrote of love with high conceit,
And beautie reard above her height.

'Then Pallas afterward attyrde Our Astrophill with her device, Whom in his armor heaven admyrde,
As of the nation of the skies;
He sparkled in his armes afarrs,
As he were dight with fierie starrs.

'The blaze whereof when Mars beheld, (An envious eie doth see afar)
"Such majestie," quoth he, "is seeld, Such majestie my mart may mar;
Perhaps this may a suter be,
To set Mars by his deitie."

'In this surmize he made with speede An iron cane, wherein he put The thunder that in cloudes do breede;
The flame and bolt together shut
With privie force burst out againe,
And so our Astrophill was slaine.'

His word, 'was slaine,' straightway did
move,
And Natures inward life strings twitch:
The skie immediately above
Was dimd with hideous clouds of pitch,
The wrastling winds from out the ground Fild all the aire with ratling sound.

The bending trees exprest a grone,
And sigh'd the sorrow of his fall,
The Forrest beasts made ruthfull mone,
The birds did tune their mourning call,
And Philomell for Astrophill Unto her notes annex a phill.

The turtle dove with tunes of ruthe Shewd feeling passion of his death;
Me thought she said, 'I tell thee truthe,
Was never he that drew in breath Unto his love more trustie found, Than he for whom our griefs abound.'

The swan, that was in presence heere, Began his funerall dirge to sing:
'Good things,' quoth he, 'may scarce appeere,
But passe away with speedie wing:
This mortall life as death is tride,
And death gives life,— and so he di'de.

The generall sorrow that was made Among the creatures of Kinde Fired the phoenix where she laide, Her ashes flying with the winde,
So as I might with reason see,
That such a phoenix nere should bee. 210

Haply the cinders, driven about,
May breede an offspring neere that kinde, But hardly a peere to that, I doubt;
It cannot sinke into my minde,
That under branches ere can bee
Of worth and value as the tree.

The egle markt with pearcing sight
The mournfull habite of the place,
And parted thence with mounting flight,
To signifie to Jove the ease, 220
What sorrow Nature doth sustaine For Astrophill by envie slaine.

And while I followed with mine eie
The flight the egle upward tooke, All things did vanish by and by,
And disappeared from my looke;
The trees, beasts, birds, and grove was
gone,
So was the friend that made this mone.

This spectacle had firmly wrought
A deepe compassion in my spright; 230
My molting hart issude, me thought,
In streames forth at mine eies aright:
And here my pen is first to shrinke,
My teares discollors so mine inke.

AN EPITAPH UPON THE RIGHT HONOURABLE SIR PHILLIP SIDNEY, KNIGHT: LORD GOV-ERNOR OF FLUSHING

[By Sir Walter Raleigh.]

To praise thy life, or waile thy worthe
death,
And want thy wit, thy wit high, pure, divine,
Is far beyond the powre of mortall line, Nor any one hath worth that draweth
breath.

Yet rich in zeale, though poore in learnings
lore,
And friendly care obscure in secret brest,

And love that envie in thy life suppress, Thy deere life done, and death, hath doubled
more.

And I, that in thy time and living state Did onely praise thy vertues in my
thought, 20
As one that seeld the rising sun hath
sought,
With words and teares now waile thy timelesse fate.

Drawne was thy race aright from princely
line, Nor lesse than such, (by gifts that Nature
gave,
The common mother that all creatures
have,) 20
Doth vertue shew, and princely linage
shine.

A king gave thee thy name; a kingly
minde,
That God thee gave, who found it now too deere
For this base world, and hath resumde it
neere,
To sit in skies, and sort with powres divine. 20

Kent thy birth daies, and Oxford held thy
youth;
The heavens made hast, and staid nor yeers nor time;
The fruits of age grew ripe in thy first
prime,
Thy will, thy words; thy words the seales of truth.

Great gifts and wisdom rare imployd thee
thence,
To treat from kings with those more great than kings, Such hope men had to lay the highest things
On thy wise youth, to be transported hence.

Whence to sharpe wars sweet honor did thee call,
Thy countries love, religion, and thy friends: 30
Of worthy men the marks, the lives, and
ends,
And her defence, for whom we labor all.

There didst thou vanquish shame and tedious age, Griefe, sorrow, sicknes, and base Fortunes
might:

Thy rising day saw never wofull night, But past with praise from of this worldly stage.

Back to the campe by thee that day was
brought,
First thine owne death, and after thy long
fame;
Teares to the soldiers, the proud Castilians
shame;
Vertue exprest, and honor truly taught. 40

What hath he lost, that such great grace hath woon?
Yoong yeeres for endles yeeres, and hope unsure Of Fortunes gifts for wealth that still shall
dure:
Oh happie race with so great praises run!

England doth hold thy lims, that bred the
same; Flaunders thy valure, where it last was tried;
The campe thy sorrow, where thy bodie died;
Thy friends, thy want; the world, thy ver-tues fame.

Nations thy wit, our mindes lay up thy
love;
Letters thy learning; thy losse, yeeres long to come; 50
In worthy harts sorrow hath made thy
tombe;
Thy soule and spright enrich the heavens
above.

Thy liberall hart imbalmd in gratefull
teares, Yoong sighs, sweet sighes, sage sighes, bewaile thy fall:
Envie her sting, and Spite hath left her
gall;
Malice her selfe a mourning garment
weares.

That day their Hanniball died, our Scipio
fell,
Scipio, Cicero, and Petrarch of our time.

Whose vertues, wounded by my worthlesse
rime,
Let angels speake, and heaven thy praises
tell. 60

ANOTHER OF THE SAME

[Ascribed by Charles Lamb, 'from internal testimony,' to Fulke Greville, Lord Brooke.]

SILENCE augmenteth grief, writing en-creaseth rage;
Stald are my thoughts, which lov'd, and lost,
the wonder of our age;
Yet quckned now with fire, though dead with frost ere now, Enrag'de I write, I know not what: dead, quick, I know not how.

Hard harted mindes relent, and Rigors teares abound,
And Envie strangely rues his end, in whom no fault she found; Knowledge her light hath lost, Valor hath slaine her knight, Sidney is dead, dead is my friend, dead is the worlds delight.

Place pensive wailes his fall, whose presence was her pride;
Time crieth out, 'My ebbe is come: his life was my spring tide;' 10 Fame mournes in that she lost the ground of her reports;
Ech living wight laments his lacke, and all in sundry sorts.

He was (wo worth that word!) to ech well thinking minde,
A spotlesse friend, a matchles man, whose vertue ever shinde, Declaring in his thoughts, his life, and that he writ, Highest conceits, longest foresights, and deepest works of wit.

He, onely like himselfe, was second unto
none,
Whose deth (though life) we rue, and wrong, and al in vain do mone; Their losse, not him, waile they that fill the world with cries; Death slue not him, but he made death his ladder to the skies. 20

Now sinke of sorrow I, who live, the more the wrong,
 Who wishing death, whom Deth denies, whose thred is al to long,
 Who tied to wretched life, who lookes for no reliefe, Must spend my ever dying daies in never ending grieffe.

Harts ease and onely I like parallels run
 on,
 Whose equall length keep equall bredth, and never meet in one;
 Yet for not wronging him, my thoughts, my sorrowes cell, Shall not run out, though leake they will,
 for liking him so well.

Farewell to you, my hopes, my wonted waking dreames, Farewell, sometimes enjoyed joy, eclipsed are thy beames,

30

Farewell selfe pleasing thoughts, which quietnes brings foorth, And farewel friendships sacred league, uniting minds of woorth.

And farewell mery hart, the gift of guilt-lesse mindes,
 And all sports which, for lives restore,
 varietie assignes;
 Let all that sweete is voyd; in me no mirth may dwell; Phillip, the cause of all this woe, my lives content, farewell!

Now Rime, the sonne of Rage, which art no kin to Skill,
 And endles Griefe, which deads my life, yet knowes not how to kill, Go seeke that haples tombe; which if ye hap to finde, Salute the stones that keep the lims that held so good a minde.

AMORETTI AND EPITHALAMION

WRITTEN NOT LONG SINCE BY EDMUNDE SPENSER

PRINTED FOR WILLIAM PONSONBY, 1595

TO THE RIGHT WORSHIPFULL SIR ROBERT NEEDHAM, KNIGHT

SIR, to gratulate your safe return from Ireland, I had nothing so readie, nor thought any thing so meete, as these sweete conceited sonets, the deede of that weldeserving gentleman, Maister Edmond Spenser: whose name sufficiently warranting the worthinesse of the work, I do more confidently presume to publish it in his absence, under your name, to whom (in my poore opinion) the patronage therof doth in some respectes properly appertaine. For, besides your judgement and delight in learned poesie, this gentle Muse, for her former perfection long wished for in Englande, nowe at length crossing the seas in your happy companye, (though to your selfe unknowne) seemeth to make choise of you, as meetest to give her deserved countenance, after her retourne: entertaime her, then, (right worshipfull) in sorte best be-seeming your gentle minde, and her merite, and take in worth my good will herein, who seeke no more, but to shew my selfe yours in all dutifull affection. W. P.

[The Amoretti and Epithalamion were entered upon the Stationers' Register, November 19, 1594, and published in 1595, perhaps somewhat earlier than Colin Clout's Come Home Again and Astrophel. The date of their composition is fixed, almost beyond dispute, by the inscription on the title page, 'written not long since;' for, according to line 267 of the Epithalamion, Spenser's wedding day was June 11, which the 'not long since' marks for 1594, and there being no reason to suppose any considerable gap between the Epithalamion and the Amoretti, sonnet lxxvii of the latter must refer to the previous New Year's, sonnet iv to New Year's, 1593. All minor indications of time confirm this hypothetical chronology.

The record of the courtship, indeed, is singularly convincing, altogether different from the unrealities of most of the sonnetteering of that day. In Delia, in Idea, in Diana, one may read for pages at a stretch with the sensation of being on a treeless plain: the ladies celebrated are as vague as pantheism; there is not a hint at real human relations in a life of every-day affairs. In the Amoretti, on the other hand, we are constantly within sight of fact, however trivial. The poet, accustomed, it seems, to easy conquests, makes definite advances too soon, and is ignominiously beaten back; he is chidden by a friend for not pushing on more vigorously with his Faery Queen, and pleads the distractions of his suit; at the close of a visit, when he should be departing, there comes up a violent storm of rain, and he knows not whether to stay or go, or he walks with his mistress upon the beach and writes her name in the sand, whereupon the waves wash it out. Behind the graceful banalities of fancy, the imitations of previous imitators of Petrarch, almost inevitable in an Elizabethan sonnet sequence, one may read the history of a genuine courtship as clearly as in a set of old letters. The suitor is a man of forty years; in the eyes of the world, apparently, not a brilliant match, for when the lady finally accepts him, friends accuse her of a mésalliance: she is slow to be won (the courtship is of more than a year), yields finally with some misgivings, retains her maidenly aloofness after betrothal. 'His heroine,' writes the most recent of the critics, 'is the wayward mistress, the "sweet warrior" of every sixteenth century sonneteer. But difference of view is inevitable as to whether she owe most to Petrarch's dolce guerrera, or to De Baif's belle ennemie, or to Desportes' douce adversaire.' Such 'difference of view' is surely needless. Whatever fancies the poet may have borrowed, he has not borrowed the temperament of his mistress: it may please him to mention little except her pride; but her pride is clearly her own. We read it in a dozen characteristic touches, — in her fear to lose her maidenly independence (lxv), in the 'too constant stiffnesse' which denies him the perquisites of an accepted lover (lxxxiii), in her flare of anger at the tale of a busybody (lxxxv). It is, moreover, matter of general note, excites resentment (v). She goes about with her head proudly erect and her eyes as proudly (though the poet chooses to call that 'humblesse') fixed upon the ground (xiii). In all these traits as the poet sets them down, there may indeed be fanciful exaggeration, and in the great marriage song it may please him to ignore them, but to deny their essential truth is surely to read the sonnets too sceptically. Even a Petrarchist may draw from the life, and Spenser, to an unpreoccupied eye, would seem to have done just that.

One can hardly leave the Amoretti without mention of the rhyme-scheme. In this the disconnected quatrains of the common Elizabethan, or Shakespearean, type of sonnet are linked after the manner of Marot, like the quatrains of 'April' and 'November.' Attempt has been made to prove that Spenser took this sonnet-form direct from a contemporary Scottish poet, Alexander Montgomery, who made use of it some years the earlier; but the argument is hardly convincing. For, given the common Elizabethan type, any two poets familiar with the linked quatrains of

G. W. SENIOR, TO THE AUTHOR

DARKE is the day, when Phœbus face is
shrowded,

And weaker sights may wander soone
astray:

But when they see his glorious raies unclouded,

With stedy steps they keepe the perfect
way:

So while this Muse in forraine landes doth
stay,

Invention weepes, and pens are cast aside,
The time, like night, depriv'd of chearefull
day,

And few do write, but ah! too soone may slide.

Then, hie thee home, that art our perfect
guide,

And with thy wit illustrate Englands fame, Dawnting thereby our neighboures aun-cient pride,

That do for poesie challendge cheefest name.
So we that live, and ages that succede, With great applausse thy learned works shall reede.

Ah! Colin, whether on the lowly plaine, Pyping to shepherds thy sweete rounde-
laies,

Marot, as both Montgomery and Spenser unquestionably were, might evolve the same variant form quite independently. Their invention has not survived in the practice of later poets; perhaps because, though nearly as exacting as the regular Italian type, it is less finely proportioned, less stately.

Concerning the Epithalamion and its exquisite emotional tone, full and serene, a critic may best be silent. As to the four small poems, commonly entitled 'epigrams,' which divide it from the Amoretti, they are casual experiments in a vein then very much worked in France, imitations of that late and minor Greek poetry which clusters in and about the Anthology. The second and third have parallels in Marot (Epigrammes lxiv and ciii); the fourth is one of the most popular fancies of the time, derived from a poem of the pseudo-Anacreon group, and translated or imitated by no less than eight contemporary Frenchmen, Ronsard (Odes, IV, 14) at their head. To an epigram of Philodemus (Anthologia Palatina, V, 123) we owe the twenty-first strophe of the Epithalamion itself.]

Or whether singing, in some lofty vaine, Heroick deedes of past or present daies,
Or whether in thy lovely mistris praise Thou list to exercise thy learned quill, Thy Muse hath got such grace, and power to please,

With rare invention, bewtifed by skill,
As who therein can ever joy their fill?
O therefore let that happy Muse proceede To clime the height of Vertues sacred hill, Where endles honor shall be made thy
meede:

Because no malice of succeeding daies
Can raise those records of thy lasting praise.
G. W. I.

I

HAPPY ye leaves! when as those lilly hands, Which hold my life in their dead doing
might,

Shall handle you, and hold in loves soft
bands,

Lyke captives trembling at the victors sight.
And happy lines! on which, with starry
light,

Those laming eyes will deigne sometimes to look,

And reade the sorrowes of my dying spright, Written with teares in harts close bleeding book.

And happy rymes ! bath'd in the sacred
 brooke
 Of Helicon, whence she derived is,
 When ye behold that angels blessed looke, My soules long lacked foode, my heavens
 blis.
 Leaves, lines, and rymes, seeke her to please
 alone,
 Whom if ye please, I care for other none.

II

Unquiet thought, whom at the first I bred Of th' inward bale of my love pined hart,
 And sithens have with sighes and sorrowes
 fed,
 Till greater then my wombe thou woxen
 art: Breake forth at length out of the inner
 part,
 In which thou lurkest lyke to vipers brood, And seeke some succour, both to ease my
 smart
 And also to sustayne thy selfe with food.
 But if in presence of that fayrest proud Thou chance to come, fall lowly at her feet;
 And with meeke humblesse and afflicted
 mood
 Pardon for thee, and grace for me intreat.
 Which if she graunt, then live, and my love cherish,
 If not, die soone, and I with thee will perish.

III

The soverayne beauty which I doo ad-
 myre, Witnesse the world how worthy to be prayzed;
 The light wherof hath kindled heavenly
 fyre
 In my fraile spirit, by her from basenesse rayسد:
 That being now with her huge brightnesse dazed,
 Base thing I can no more endure to view;
 But looking still on her, I stand amazed At wondrous sight of so celestiall hew.
 So when my toung would speak her praises
 dew,
 It stopped is with thoughts astonishment;
 And when my pen would write her titles
 true,
 It ravisht is with fancies wonderment.
 Yet in my hart I then both speake and write The wonder that my wit cannot endite.

IV

New Yeaere, forth looking out of Janus
 gate,
 Doth seeme to promise hope of new delight,
 And bidding th' old adieu, his passed date Bids all old thoughts to die in dumpish
 spright;
 And calling forth out of sad Winters night Fresh Love, that long hath slept in cheer-lesse bower,
 Wils him awake, and soone about him dight His wanton wings and darts of deadly power.
 For lusty Spring now in his timely howre Is ready to come forth, him to receive;
 And warnes the Earth with divers colord
 flowre
 To decke hir selfe, and her faire mantle weave.
 Then you, faire flowre, in whom fresh youth doth raine,
 Prepare your selfe new love to entertaine.

V

Rudely thou wrongest my deare harts
 desire,
 In finding fault with her too portly pride:
 The thing which I doo most in her admire
 Is of the world unworthy most envie.
 For in those lofty lookes is close implide Scorn of base things, and sdeigne of foule
 dishonor;
 Thretning rash eies which gaze on her so
 wide,
 That loosely they ne dare to looke upon
 her.
 Such pride is praise, such portlinesse is
 honor,
 That boldned innocence beares in hir eies,
 And her faire countenance, like a goodly banner, Spreds in defaunce of all enemies.
 Was never in this world ought worthy tride, Without some spark of such self-pleasing pride.

VI

Be nought dismayd that her unmoved mind
 Doth still persist in her rebellious pride:
 Such love, not lyke to lusts of baser kynd,
 The harder wonne, the firmer will abide.
 The durefull oake, whose sap is not yet dride,
 Is long ere it conceive the kindling fyre:
 But when it once doth burne, it doth divide

Great heat, and makes his flames to heaven aspire.

So hard it is to kindle new desire
In gentle brest, that shall endure for ever: Deepe is the wound that dints the parts entire

With chast affects, that naught but death can sever.

Then thinke not long in taking litle paine
To knit the knot that ever shall remaine.

VII

Fayre eyes, the myrroure of my mazed hart,
What wondrous vertue is contaynd in you,
The which both lyfe and death forth from you dart

Into the object of your mighty view?
For when ye mildly looke with lovely hew, Then is my soule with life and love inspired:

But when ye lowre, or looke on me askew,
Then doe I die, as one with lightning fyred.
But since that lyfe is more then death desyred,

Looke ever lovely, as becomes you best,
That your bright beams, of my weak eies
admyred,

May kindle living fire within my brest.
Such life should be the honor of your light, Such death the sad ensample of your might.

VIII

More then most faire, full of the living
fire

Kindled above unto the Maker neere:
No eies, but joyes, in which al powers con-
spire,

That to the world naught else be counted
deare:

Through your bright beams doth not the blinded guest

Shoot out his darts to base affections wound; But angels come, to lead fraile mindes to
rest

In chast desires, on heavenly beauty bound.
You frame my thoughts, and fashion me
within,

You stop my tounge, and teach my hart to
speake,

You calme the storme that passion did begin, Strong through your cause, but by your ver-tue weak.

Dark is the world where your light shined never;

Well is he borne that may behold you ever.

IX

Long-while I sought to what I might compare

Those powfull eies which lighten my dark spright;

Yet find I nought on earth to which I dare Resemble th' ymage of their goodly light.

Not to the sun; for they doo shine by night:
Nor to the moone; for they are changed never:

Nor to the starres; for they have purer
sight:

Nor to the fire; for they consume not ever:
Nor to the lightning; for they still persever:

Nor to the diamond; for they are more tender:

Nor unto christall; for nought may them
sever:

Nor unto glasse; such basenesse mought offend her.

Then to the Maker selfe they likest be, Whose light doth lighten all that here we see.

Unrighteous Lord of Love, what law is this,
That me thou makest thus tormented be,

The whiles she lordeth in licentious blisse
Of her freewill, scorning both thee and me?

See how the tyrannesse doth joy to see The huge massacres which her eyes do
make,

And humbled harts brings captive unto
thee,

That thou of them mayst mightie vengeance take!

But her proud hart doe thou a little shake,
And that high look, with which she doth comptroll

All this worlds pride, bow to a baser make,
And al her faults in thy black booke enroll:

That I may laugh at her in equall sort As she doth laugh at me, and makes my pain her sport.

XI

Dayly when I do seeke and sew for peace,
And hostages doe offer for my truth,

She, cruell Warriour, doth her selfe ad-
dresse

To battell, and the weary war renew'th:
Ne wilbe moov'd with reason or with rewth,

To graunt small respit to my restlesse toile;
But greedily her fell intent pursseweth,

Of my poore life to make unpitteid spoile.

Yet my poore life, all sorrowes to assoyle,
 I would her yield, her wrath to pacify:
 But then she seekes, with torment and tur-
 moyle,
 To force me live, and will not let me dy.
 All paine hath end, and every war hath
 peace;
 But mine no price nor prayer may surcease.

XII

One day I sought with her hart-thrilling eies
 To make a truce, and termes to entertaime, All fearlesse then of so false enimies, Which sought me to entrap in treasons
 traine.
 So as I then disarmed did remaine, A wicked ambush, which lay hidden long In the close covert of her guilefull eyen, Thence breaking forth, did thicke about me through.
 Too feeble I t' abide the brunt so strong, Was first to yeeld my selfe into their
 hands:
 Who me captiving streight with rigorous
 wrong,
 Have ever since me kept in cruell bands.
 So, ladie, now to you I doo complaine, Against your eies that justice I may gaine.

XIII

In that proud port which her so goodly graceth, Whiles her faire face she reares up to the
 skie,
 And to the ground her eie lids low embaseth,
 Most goodly temperature ye may desery:
 Myld humblesse mixt with awfull majesty.
 For looking on the earth, whence she was
 borne,
 Her minde remembreth her mortalitie:
 What so is fayrest shall to earth returne.
 But that some laffy countenance seemes to
 scorne
 Base thing, and thinke how she to heaven may clime, Treading downe earth as lothsome and for-
 lorne,
 That hinders heavenly thoughts with drossy
 slime.
 Yet lowly still vouchsafe to looke on me;
 Such lowlinesse shall make you lofty be.

XIV

Retourne agayne, my forces late dismayd, Unto the siege by you abandon'd quite.

Great shame it is to leave, like one afraid,
 So fayre a peece for one repulse so light.
 Gaynst such strong castles needeth greater
 might

Then those small forts which ye were wont belay:

Such haughty mynds, enur'd to hardy fight, Disdayne to yield unto the first assay.
 Bring therefore all the forces that ye may,
 And lay incessant battery to her heart; Playnts, prayers, vowes, ruth, sorrow, and
 dismay;

Those engius can the proudest love convert.
 And if those fayle, fall down and dy before
 her;

So dying live, and living do adore her.

XV

Ye tradefull merchants, that with weary
 toyle

Do seeke most pretious things to make your gain,

And both the Indias of their treasures
 spoile,

What needeth you to seeke so farre in
 vaine?

For loe! my love doth in her selfe containe All this worlds riches that may farre be
 found:

If saphyres, loe! her eies be saphyres
 plaine;

If rubies, loe! hir lips be rubies sound;

If pearles, hir teeth be pearles both pure and round;

If yvorie, her forehead yvory weene;

If gold, her locks are finest gold on ground;

If silver, her faire hands are silver sheene:

But that which fairest is but few behold,
 Her mind, adorn'd with vertues manifold.

XVI

One day as I unwarily did gaze

On those fayre eyes, my loves immortal
 light,

The whiles my stonisht hart stood in amaze, Through sweet illusion of her lookes de-
 light,

I mote perceive how, in her glauncing sight, Legions of loves with little wings did fly, Darting their deadly arrowes, fyry bright,
 At every rash beholder passing by.

One of those archers closely I did spy,

Ayming his arrow at my very hart:

When suddenly, with twinkle of her eye,

The damzell broke his misintended dart.

Had she not so doon, sure I had bene
slayne;
Yet as it was, I hardly scap't with paine.

XVII

The glorious pourtraict of that angels face,
Made to amaze weake mens confused skil,
And this worlds worthlesse glory to em-
base,

What pen, what pencill, can expresse her
fill ?

For though he colours could devise at will,
And eke his learned hand at pleasure guide, Least, trembling, it his workmanship should
spill,

Yet many wondrous things there are be-
side.

The sweet eye-glaunces, that like arrowes
glide,

The charming smiles, that rob sence from the hart,

The lovely pleasance, and the lofty pride, Cannot expressed be by any art.

A greater craftsmans hand thereto doth
neede,

That can expresse the life of things indeed.

XVIII

The rolling wheele, that runneth often
round,

The hardest steele in tract of time doth
teare:

And drizzling drops, that often doe redound,
The firmest flint doth in continuance weare:
Yet cannot I, with many a dropping teare
And long intreaty, soften her hard hart, That she will once vouchsafe my plaint to
heare,

Or looke with pittie on my payneful smart.
But when I pleade, she bids me play my
part,

And when I weep, she sayes teares are but water,

And when I sigh, she sayes I know the art, And when I waile, she turnes hir selfe to laughter.

So do I weepe, and wayle, and pleade in
vaine,

Whiles she as steele and flint doth still remayne.

XIX

The merry cuckow, messenger of Spring, His trumpet shrill hath thrise already sounded,

That warnes al lovers wayt upon their king,
Who now is comming forth with girland crouned.

With noyse whereof the quyre of byrds resounded

Their anthemes sweet, devized of Loves prays,

That all the woods theyr echoes back rebounded,

As if they knew the meaning of their layes.
But mongst them all which did Loves honor
rayse,

No word was heard of her that most it
ought,

But she his precept proudly disobayes,
And doth his ydle message set at nought.
Therefore, O Love, unlesse she turne to thee Ere cuckow end, let her a rebell be.

XX

In vaine I seeke and sew to her for grace, And doe myne humbled hart before her poure:

The whiles her foot she in my neeke doth
place,

And tread my life downe in the lowly floure.

And yet the lyon, that is lord of power,
And reigneth over every beast in field,

In his most pride disdeigneth to devoure
The silly lambe that to his might doth yield.

But she, more cruell and more salvage wyld,

Than either lyon or the lyonesse, Shames not to be with guiltlesse bloud de-
fyld,

But taketh glory in her cruellnesse.

Fayrer then fayrest, let none ever say That ye were blooded in a yeilded pray.

XXI

Was it the worke of Nature or of Art,
Which tempred so the feature of her face,
That pride and meeknesse, mixt by equal
part,

Doe both appeare t' adorne her beauties
grace ?

For with mild pleasance, which doth pride displace,

She to her love doth lookers eyes allure;
And with sterne countenance back again doth chace

Their looser lookes that stir up lustes impure.

With such strange termes her eyes she doth inure,

That with one looke she doth my life dismay,
 And with another doth it streight recure:
 Her smile me drawes, her frowne me drives away.
 Thus doth she traîne and teach me with her lookes:
 Such art of eyes I never read in bookes.

XXII

This holy season, fit to fast and pray,
 Men to devotion ought to be inclynd:
 Therefore, I lykewise, on so holy day,
 For my sweet saynt some service fit will find.

Her temple fayre is built within my mind,
 In which her glorious ymage placed is,
 On which my thoughts doo day and night attend, Lyke sacred priests that never thinke amisse.

There I to her, as th' author of my blisse,
 Will builde an altar to appease her yre;
 And on the same my hart will sacrificise, Burning in flames of pure and chast desyre:
 The which vouchsafe, O goddesse, to accept,
 Amongst thy deerest relicks to be kept.

XXIII

Penelope, for her Ulisses sake, Deviz'd a web her woovers to deceave,
 In which the worke that she all day did make,

The same at night she did againe unreave.
 Such subtil craft my damzell doth conceave,

Th' importune suit of my desire to shonne:
 For all that I in many dayes doo weave
 In one short houre I find by her undonne.
 So when I thinke to end that I begonne,
 I must begin and never bring to end:

For with one looke she spils that long I sponne,
 And with one word my whole years work doth rend.

Such labour like the spyders web I fynd, Whose fruitlesse worke is broken with least wynd.

XXIV

When I behold that beauties wonderment,
 And rare perfection of each goodly part,
 Of Natures skill the onely complement,
 I honor and admire the Makers art.
 But when I feele the bitter balefull smart

Which her fayre eyes unwares doe worke in mee,

That death out of theyr shiny beames doe dart,

I thinke that I a new Pandora see;
 Whom all the gods in counsell did agree, Into this sinfull world from heaven to send,
 That she to wicked men a scourge should be,

For all their faults with which they did offend.

But since ye are my scourge, I will intreat That for my faults ye will me gently beat.

XXV

How long shall this lyke dying lyfe endure,
 And know no end of her owne misery,
 But wast and weare away in termes unsure, Twixt feare and hope depending doubtfully?
 Yet better were attonce to let me die,
 And shew the last ensample of your pride,
 Then to torment me thus with cruelty,
 To prove your powre, which I too wel have tride.

But yet if in your hardned brest ye hide
 A close intent at last to shew me grace, Then all the woes and wrecks which I abide As means of blisse I gladly wil embrace, And wish that more and greater they might be,

That greater meede at last may turne to mee.

XXVI

Sweet is the rose, but growes upon a brere;
 Sweet is the junipere, but sharpe his bough;
 Sweet is the eglantine, but pricketh nere;
 Sweet is the firbloom, but his braunches rough;

Sweet is the cypresse, but his rynd is tough;
 Sweet is the nut, but bitter is his pill;
 Sweet is the broome-flowre, but yet sowre enough;

And sweet is moly, but his root is ill.
 So every sweet with soure is tempred still,
 That maketh it be coveted the more:
 For easie things, that may be got at will,
 Most sorts of men doe set but little store.
 Why then should I account of little paine,
 That endlesse pleasure shall unto me gaine?

XXVII

Faire proud! now tell me, why should faire be proud, Sith all worlds glorie is but drosse uncleane,

And in the shade of death it selfe shall shroud,
How ever now thereof ye little weene ?
That goodly idoll, now so gay besene, Shall doffe her fleshes borowd fayre attyre,
And be forgot as it had never beene,
That many now much worship and admire.
Ne any then shall after it inquire,
Ne any mention shall thereof remaine,
But what this verse, that never shall expyre, Shall to you purchas with her thankles paine.
Faire, be no lenger proud of that shall perish,
But that which shall you make immortall cherish.

XXVIII

The laurel leafe which you this day doe
weare
Gives me great hope of your relenting
mynd:
For since it is the badg which I doe beare, Ye, bearing it, doe seeme to me inclin'd.
The powre thereof, which ofte in me I find,
Let it lykewise your gentle brest inspire With sweet infusion, and put you in mind Of that proud mayd whom now those leaves
attyre.
Proud Daphne, scorning Phæbus lovely
fyre,
On the Thessalian shore from him did flie:
For which the gods, in their revengfull
yre,
Did her transforme into a laurell tree.
Then fly no more, fayre love, from Phebus
chace,
But in your brest his leafe and love embrace.

XXIX

See how the stubborne damzell doth deprave
My simple meaning with disdaynfull scorne, And by the bay which I unto her gave Accounts my self her captive quite for-
lorne.
The bay (quoth she) is of the victours borne, Yielded them by the vanquisht as theyr meeds,
And they therewith doe poetes heads adorne,
To sing the glory of their famous deedes.
But sith she will the conquest challeng
needs,
Let her accept me as her faithfull thrall,
That her great triumph, which my skill exceeds,
I may in trump of fame blaze over all.

Then would I decke her head with glorious bayer,
And fill the world with her victorious praysse.

XXX

My love is lyke to yse, and I to fyre; How comes it then that this her cold so
great
Is not dissolv'd through my so hot desyre, But harder growes the more I her intreat ?
Or how comes it that my exceeding heat
Is not delayd by her hart frosen cold, But that I burne much more in boyling
sweat,
And feele my flames augmented manifold ?
What more miraculous thing may be told,
That fire, which all things melts, should harden yse,
And yse, which is congeald with sencelesse
cold,
Should kindle fyre by wonderful devyse ?
Such is the powre of love in gentle mind,
That it can alter all the course of kynd.

XXXI

Ah ! why hath Nature to so hard a hart Given so goodly giftes of beauties grace, Whose pryde depraves each other better
part,
And all those pretious ornaments deface ?
Sith to all other beastes of bloody race
A dreadfull countenance she given hath,
That with theyr terrour al the rest may chace,
And warne to shun the daunger of theyr
wrath.
But my proud one doth worke the greater scath,
Through sweet allurement of her lovely
hew,
That she the better may in bloody bath
Of such poore thralls her cruell hands embrew.
But did she know how ill these two accord,
Such cruelty she would have soone abhord.

XXXII

The paynefull smith with force of fervent
heat
The hardest yron soone doth mollify;
That with his heavy sledge he can it beat,
And fashion to what he it list apply.
Yet cannot all these flames in which I fry Her hart, more harde then yron, soft a whit; Ne all the playnts and prayers with which I

Doe beat on th' andvyle of her stubberne
wit:

But still, the more she fervent sees my fit,
The more she frieseth in her wilfull pryde;
And harder growes, the harder she is smit,
With all the playnts which to her be ap-
plyde.

What then remains but I to ashes burne,
And she to stones at length all frosen turne ?

XXXIII

Great wrong I doe, I can it not deny,
To that most sacred empresse, my dear
dred,

Not finishing her Queene of Faëry,
That mote enlarge her living praises, dead.
But Lodwick, this of grace to me aread:
Do ye not thinck th' accomplishment of it Sufficient worke for one mans simple head,
All were it, as the rest, but rudely writ ?
How then should I, without another wit, Thinck ever to endure so tædious toyle, Sins that this one is tost with troublous fit
Of a proud love, that doth my spirite spoyle ?
Cease then, till she vouchsafe to grawnt me
rest,
Or lend you me another living brest.

XXXIV

Lyke as a ship, that through the ocean wyde By conduct of some star doth make her
way,

Whenas a storme hath dimd her trusty
guyde,

Out of her course doth wander far astray;
So I, whose star, that wont with her bright
ray

Me to direct, with cloudes is overcast, Doe wander now in darknesse and dismay,
Through hidden perils round about me plast.
Yet hope I well, that when this storme is
past,

My Helice, the lodestar of my lyfe,
Will shine again, and looke on me at last,
With lovely light to cleare my cloudy grief.
Till then I wander carefull comfortlesse, In secret sorrow and sad pensivenesse.

XXXV

My hungry eyes, through greedy covetize Still to behold the object of their paine,
With no contentment can themselves suffize,
But having pine, and having not complaine.
For lacking it, they cannot lyfe sustayne,
And having it, they gaze on it the more:

In their amazement lyke Narcissus vaine, Whose eyes him starv'd: so plenty makes me poore.

Yet are mine eyes so filled with the store Of that faire sight, that nothing else they
brooke,

But lothe the things which they did like before,

And can no more endure on them to looke.
All this worlds glory seemeth vayne to
me,

And all their showes but shadowes, saving
she.

XXXVI

Tell me, when shall these wearie woes have
end,

Or shall their ruthlesse torment never cease,
But al my dayes in pining languor spend,
Without hope of aswagement or release ?

Is there no meanes for me to purchae peace,
Or make agreement with her thrilling eyes:
But that their cruelty doth still increace,
And dayly more augment my miseryes ?
But when ye have shewed all extremityes,
Then thinke how litle glory ye have gayned By slaying him, whose lyfe though ye de-
spyse,

Mote have your life in honour long main-tayned.

But by his death, which some perhaps will
mone,

Ye shall condemned be of many a one.

XXXVII

What guyle is this, that those her golden tresses

She doth attyre under a net of gold,
And with sly skill so cunningly them dresses, That which is gold or heare may scarce be
told ?

Is it that mens frayle eyes, which gaze too
bold,

She may entangle in that golden snare,
And being caught, may craftily enfold Theyr weaker harts, which are not wel aware ?

Take heed therefore, myne eyes, how ye doe stare

Henceforth too rashly on that guilefull
net,

In which if ever ye entrapped are,
Out of her bands ye by no meanes shall get.
Fondnesse it were for any, being free,
To covet fetters, though they golden bee.

XXXVIII

Arion, when, through tempests cruel
wracke,

He forth was thrown into the greedy seas, Through the sweet musick which his harp
did make

Allur'd a dolphin him from death to ease.
But my rude musick, which was wont to please

Some dainty eares, cannot, with any skill,
The dreadfull tempest of her wrath appease, Nor move the dolphin from her stubborne
will;

But in her pride she dooth persever still,
All carelesse how my life for her decaye:
Yet with one word she can it save or spill.
To spill were pittie, but to save were prayse.
Chose rather to be prayd for dooing good, Then to be blam'd for spilling guiltlesse
blood.

XXXIX

Sweet smile, the daughter of the Queene of Love,

Expressing all thy mothers powrefull art,
With which she wunts to temper angry
Jove,

When all the gods he threats with thundring dart:

Sweet is thy vertue, as thy selfe sweet art.
For when on me thou shinedst late in sadnesse,

A melting pleasance ran through every
part,

And me revived with hart robbing glad-
nesse:

Whylest rapt with joy resembling heavenly madnes,

My soule was ravisht quite, as in a traunce,
And feeling thence no more her sorowes
sadnesse,

Fed on the fulnesse of that chearefull
glaunce.

More sweet than nectar, or ambrosiall meat, Seem'd every bit which thenceforth I did eat.

XL

Mark when she smiles with amiable cheare,
And tell me whereto can ye lyken it;

When on each eyelid sweetly doe appeare An hundred Graces as in shade to sit.

Lykest it seemeth, in my simple wit, Unto the fayre sunshine in somers day,

That, when a dreadfull storme away is flit,

Through the broad world doth spread his goodly ray:

At sight whereof, each bird that sits on spray,
And every beast that to his den was fled, Comes forth afresh out of their late dis-
may,

And to the light lift up theyr drouping hed.
So my storme beaten hart likewise is cheared

With that sunshine, when cloudy looks are cleared.

XLI

Is it her nature, or is it her will,
To be so cruell to an humbled foe ?

If nature, then she may it mend with skill,
If will, then she at will may will forgoe.

But if her nature and her wil be so,
That she will plague the man that loves her most,

And take delight t'encrease a wretches
woe,

Then all her natures goodly guifts are lost;
And that same glorious beauties ydle boast

Is but a bayt such wretches to beguile,
As, being long in her loves tempest tost,

She meanes at last to make her piteous
spoyle.

O fayrest fayre, let never it be named,
That so fayre beauty was so fowly shamed.

XLII

The love which me so cruelly tormenteth
So pleasing is in my extreamest paine,

That all the more my sorrow it augmenteth,
The more I love and doe embrace my bane.

Ne doe I wish (for wishing were but vaine)
To be acquit fro my continuall smart,

But joy, her thrall for ever to remayne,
And yield for pledge my poore captived hart;

The which, that it from her may never start,

Let her, yf please her, bynd with adamant
chayne,

And from all wandering loves, which mote pervart

His safe assurance, strongly it restrayne.
Onely let her abstaine from cruelty,

And doe me not before my time to dy.

XLIII

Shall I then silent be, or shall I speake ?
And if I speake, her wrath renew I shall:

And if I silent be, my hart will breake,
Or choked be with overflowing gall.

What tyranny is this, both my hart to
thrall,
And eke my toung with proud restraint to tie;
That nether I may speake nor thinke at all,
But like a stupid stock in silence die !
Yet I my hart with silence secretly Will teach to speak, and my just cause to plead,
And eke mine eies, with meek humility,
Love-learned letters to her eyes to read:
Which her deep wit, that true harts thought can spel, Wil soone conceive, and learne to construe
well.

XLIV

When those renoumed noble peres of Greece Through stubborn pride amongst themselves did jar, Forgetfull of the famous golden fleece, Then Orpheus with his harp they strife did bar.
But this continuall cruell civill warre,
The which my selfe against my selfe doe
make,
Whilest my weak powres of passions war-reid arre,
No skill can stint, nor reason can aslake.
But when in hand my tunelesse harp I take,
Then doe I more augment my foes despight,
And grieffe renew, and passions doe awake
To battaile, fresh against my selfe to fight.
Mongst whome the more I seeke to settle
peace,
The more I fynd their malice to increace.

XLV

Leave, lady, in your glasse of christall
clene
Your goodly selfe for evermore to vew,
And in my selfe, my inward selfe I meane, Most lively lyke behold your semblant
trew.
Within my hart, though hardly it can shew Thing so divine to vew of earthly eye,
The fayre idea of your celestiall hew
And every part remaines immortally:
And were it not that through your cruelty With sorrow dimmed and deformd it were,
The goodly ymage of your visnomy Clearer then christall would therein appere.
But if your selfe in me ye playne will see, Remove the cause by which your fayre beames darkned be.

XLVI

When my abodes prefixed time is spent, My cruell fayre streight bids me wend my
way:
But then from heaven most hideous stormes are sent,
As willing me against her will to stay.
Whom then shall I, or heaven or her, obey ?
The heavens know best what is the best for
me:
But as she will, whose will my life doth
sway,
My lower heaven, so it perforce must bee.
But ye high hevens, that all this sorowe
see,
Sith all your tempests cannot hold me backe, Aswage your stormes, or else both you and
she
Will both together me too sorely wrack.
Enough it is for one man to sustaine
The stormes which she alone on me doth raine.

XLVII

Trust not the treason of those smyling
lookes,
Untill ye have theyr guylefull traynes well
tryde:
For they are lyke but unto golden hookes,
That from the foolish fish theyr bayts do
hyde:
So she with flattring smyles weake harts doth guyle Unto her love, and tempte to theyr decay; Whome being caught, she kills with cruell
pryde,
And feeds at pleasure on the wretched pray.
Yet even whylst her bloody hands them
slay,
Her eyes looke lovely, and upon them smyle,
That they take pleasure in her cruell play.
And, dying, doe them selves of payne beguyle.
O mighty charm ! which makes men love theyr bane,
And thinck they dy with pleasure, live with payne.

XLVIII

Innocent paper, whom too cruell hand Did make the matter to avenge her yre, And ere she could thy cause wel under-
stand,
Did sacrificze unto the greedy fyre:

Well worthy thou to have found better
hyre
Then so bad end, for hereticks ordayned:
Yet heresy nor treason didst conspire, But plead thy maisters cause, unjustly
payned:
Whom she, all carelesse of his grieffe, con-strayned
To utter forth the anguish of his hart:
And would not heare, when he to her com-playned
The piteous passion of his dying smart.
Yet live for ever, though against her will,
And speake her good, though she requite it ill.

XLIX

Fayre cruell, why are ye so fierce and cruell?
Is it because your eyes have powre to kill?
Then know, that mercy is the Mighties jewell,
And greater glory thinke to save then spill.
But if it be your pleasure and proud will
To shew the powre of your imperious eyes, Then not on him that never thought you ill,
But bend your force against your enemyes.
Let them feele th' utmost of your cruelties,
And kill with looks, as cockatrices doo:
But him that at your footstoole humbled
lies,
With mercifull regard, give mercy too.
Such mercy shal you make admyred to be;
So shall you live by giving life to me.

L

Long languishing in double malady,
Of my harts wound and of my bodies greife,
There came to me a leach, that would apply Fit medicines for my bodies best reliefe.
Vayne man! (quod I) that hast but little priefe
In deep discovery of the myndes disease,
Is not the hart of all the body chiefe,
And rules the members as it selfe doth
please?
Then with some cordialls seeke first to ap-
pease
The inward languour of my wounded hart,
And then my body shall have shortly ease:
But such sweet cordialls passe physitions art.
Then, my lyfes leach, doe you your skill re-
veale,
And with one salve both hart and body
heale.

LI

Doe I not see that fayrest ymages Of hardest marble are of purpose made,
For that they should endure through many ages,
Ne let theyr famous monuments to fade?
Why then doe I, untrainde in lovers trade, Her hardnes blame, which I should more commend?
Sith never ought was excellent assayde, Which was not hard t' atchive and bring to
end:
Ne ought so hard, but he that would attend Mote soften it and to his will allure:
So doe I hope her stubborne hart to bend,
And that it then more stedfast will endure.
Onely my paines will be the more to get her:
But having her, my joy will be the greater.

LII

So oft as homeward I from her depart,
I go lyke one that, having lost the field,
Is prisoner led away with heavy hart, Despoyle of warlike armes and knowen
shield.
So doe I now my selfe a prisoner yeeld
To sorrow and to solitary paine:
From presence of my dearest deare exylde, Longwhile alone in languor to remaine.
There let no thought of joy, or pleasure
vaine,
Dare to approach, that may my solace breed;
But sudden dumps, and dreary sad dayne Of all worlds gladnesse, more my torment
feed.
So I her absens will my penance make,
That of her presens I my need may take.

LIII

The panther, knowing that his spotted hyde Doth please all beasts, but that his looks them fray,
Within a bush his dreadfull head doth hide,
To let them gaze, whylest he on them may
pray.
Right so my cruell fayre with me doth
play:
For with the goodly semblant of her hew
She doth allure me to mine owne decay,
And then no mercy will unto me shew.
Great shame it is, thing so divine in view,
Made for to be the worlds most ornament,
To make the bayte her gazers to embrew:
Good shames to be to ill an instrument:

But mercy doth with beautie best agree,
As in theyr Maker ye them best may see.

LIV

Of this worlds theatre in which we stay,
My love, lyke the spectator, ydly sits,
Beholding me, that all the pageants play, Disguysing diversly my troubled wits.
Sometimes I joy, when glad occasion fits,
And mask in myrth lyke to a comedy:
Soone after, when my joy to sorrow flits,
I waile, and make my woes a tragedy.
Yet she, beholding me with constant eye, Delights not in my merth, nor rues my smart:

But when I laugh, she mocks, and when I cry,
She laughes, and hardens evermore her hart.
What then can move her? If nor merth nor mone,
She is no woman, but a sencelesse stone.

LV

So oft as I her beauty doe behold,
And therewith doe her cruelty compare,
I marvaile of what substance was the mould
The which her made attonce so cruell faire.
Not earth; for her high thoughts more heavenly are:
Not water; for her love doth burne like
fyre:
Not ayre; for she is not so light or rare:
Not fyre; for she doth friese with faint
desire.

Then needs another element inquire, Whereof she mote be made; that is the
skye.

For to the heaven her haughty looks aspire,
And eke her mind is pure immortall hye.
Then sith to heaven ye lykened are the best,
Be lyke in mercy as in all the rest.

LVI

Fayre ye be sure, but cruell and unkind,
As is a tygre, that with greedinesse Hunts after bloud, when he by chance doth
find

A feeble beast, doth felly him oppresse.
Fayre be ye sure, but proud and pittilesse,
As is a storme, that all things doth prostrate,

Finding a tree alone all comfortlesse, Beats on it strongly, it to ruinate.
Fayre be ye sure, but hard and obstinate,
As is a rocke amidst the raging floods.

Gayast which a ship, of succour desolate, Doth suffer wreck both of her selfe and goods.

That ship, that tree, and that same beast am I, Whom ye doe wreck, doe ruine, and destroy.

LVII

Sweet warriour, when shall I have peace with you?

High time it is this warre now ended were:
Which I no lenger can endure to sue,
Ne your incessant battry more to beare.

So weake my powres, so sore my wounds
appeare,

That wonder is how I should live a jot, Seeing my hart through launched every where

With thousand arrowes which your eies have shot:

Yet shoot ye sharply still, and spare me
not,

But glory thinke to make these cruel stoures.

Ye cruell one! what glory can be got,
In slaying him that would live gladly yours?

Make peace therefore, and graunt me timely
grace,

That al my wounds wil heale in little space.

LVIII

By her that is most assured to her selfe

Weake is th' assurance that weake flesh re-poseth

In her owne powre, and scorneth others
ayde;

That soonest fals, when as she most supposeth

Her selfe assur'd, and is of nought affrayd.
All flesh is frayle, and all her strength un-
stayd,

Like a vaine bubble blowen up with ayre: Devouring tyme and changeful chance have prayd

Her glories pride, that none may it repayre.
Ne none so rich or wise, so strong or fayre,
But fayleth, trusting on his owne assurance:
And he that standeth on the hyghest stayre Fals lowest: for on earth nought hath endurance.

Why then doe ye, proud fayre, misdeeme so farre,

That to your selfe ye most assured arre?

LIX

Thrise happie she that is so well assured Unto her selfe, and settled so in hart,
 That nether will for better be allured, Ne feard with worse to any chaunce to
 start:

But, like a stedy ship, doth strongly part The raging waves, and keepes her course
 aright,

Ne ought for tempest doth from it depart,
 Ne ought for fayrer weathers false delight.
 Such selfe assurance need not feare the
 spight

Of grudging foes, ne favour seek of friends:
 But in the stay of her owne stedfast might,
 Nether to one her selfe nor other bends.

Most happy she that most assured doth
 rest;

But he most happy who such one loves best.

LX

They that in course of heavenly spheares are skild

To every planet point his sundry yeare,
 In which her circles voyage is fulfilld:
 As Mars in three score yeares doth run his spheare.

So since the winged god his planet cleare
 Began in me to move, one yeare is spent:
 The which doth longer unto me appeare,
 Then al those fourty which my life outwent.
 Then, by that count which lovers books invent,

The spheare of Cupid fourty yeares con-taines:

Which I have wasted in long languishment,
 That seemd the longer for my greater
 paines.

But let my loves fayre planet short her
 wayes

This yeare ensuing, or else short my dayes.

LXI

The glorious image of the Makers beantie, My soverayne saynt, the idoll of my thought, Dare not henceforth, above the bounds of dewtie,

T' accuse of pride, or rashly blame for ought.

For being, as she is, divinely wrought,
 And of the brood of angels hevenly borne,
 And with the crew of blessed saynts up-
 brought,

Each of which did her with theyr guifts
 adorne,

The bud of joy, the blossome of the morne,
 The beame of light, whom mortal eyes admyre,

What reason is it then but she should scorne Base things, that to her love too bold aspire?
 Such heavenly formes ought rather wor-shipt be,

Then dare be lov'd by men of meane degree.

LXII

The weary yeare his race now having run,
 The new begins his compast course anew:
 With shew of morning mylde he hath begun, Betokening peace and plenty to ensew.

So let us, which this change of weather
 vew,

Change eeke our mynds, and former lives
 amend;

The old yeares sinnes forepast let us eschew,
 And fly the faults with which we did offend.
 Then shall the new yeares joy forth freshly
 send

Into the glooming world his gladsome ray:
 And all these stormes, which now his beauty
 blend,

Shall turne to caulmes, and tymely cleare
 away.

So likewise, love, cheare you your heavy
 spright,

And change old yeares annoy to new delight.

LXIII

After long stormes and tempests sad assay, Which hardly I endured heretofore,
 In dread of death, and daungerous dismay,
 With which my silly barke was tossed sore,
 I doe at length descry the happy shore,
 In which I hope ere long for to arryve: Fayre soyle it seemes from far, and fraught with store

Of all that deare and daynty is alive.
 Most happy he that can at last atehyve
 The joyous safety of so sweet a rest; Whose least delight sufficeth to deprive Remembrance of all paines which him op-
 prest.

All paines are nothing in respect of this,
 All sorrowes short that gaine eternall blisse.

LXIV

Comming to kisse her lyps, (such grace I
 found)

Me seemd I smelt a gardin of sweet
 flowres,

That dainty odours from them threw
 around,
 For damzels fit to decke their lovers bowres.
 Her lips did smell lyke unto gillyflowers;
 Her ruddy cheekes lyke unto roses red;
 Hersnowy browes lyke budded bellamoures; Her lovely eyes lyke pincks but newly spread;
 Her goodly bosome lyke a strawberry bed;
 Her neck lyke to a bounch of cullambynes; Her brest lyke lillyes, ere they leaves be
 shed;
 Her nipples lyke yong blossomd jessemynes.
 Such fragrant flowres doe give most odor-ous smell,
 But her sweet odour did them all excell.

LXV

The doubt which ye misdeeme, fayre love,
 is vaine,
 That fondly feare to loose your liberty,
 When loosing one, two liberties ye gayne, And make him bond that bondage earst dyd
 fly.
 Sweet be the bands the which true love doth
 tye,
 Without constraynt or dread of any ill:
 The gentle birde feeles no captivity Within her cage, but sines and feeds her
 fill.
 There Pride dare not approach, nor Discord
 spill
 The league twixt them that loyal love hath
 bound:
 But simple Truth and mutuall Good Will Seekes with sweet peace to salve each others wound:
 There Fayth doth fearlesse dwell in brasen
 towre,
 And spotlesse Pleasure builds her sacred
 bowre.

LXVI

To all those happy blessings which ye have,
 With plenteous hand by heaven upon you thrown,
 This one disparagement they to you gave,
 That ye your love lent to so meane a one.
 Yee, whose high worths surpassing paragon Could not on earth have found one fit for mate,
 Ne but in heaven matchable to none,
 Why did ye stoup unto so lowly state?
 But ye thereby much greater glory gate,
 Then had ye sorted with a princes pere:

For now your light doth more it selfe dilate,
 And in my darknesse greater doth appeare.
 Yet since your light hath once enlumind me,
 With my reflex yours shall increased be.

LXVII

Lyke as a huntsman, after weary chace, Seeing the game from him escapt away,
 Sits downe to rest him in some shady place,
 With panting hounds beguiled of their pray:
 So, after long pursuit and vaine assay,
 When I all weary had the chace forsooke, The gentle deare returnd the selfe-same
 way,
 Thinking to quench her thirst at the next
 brooke.
 There she, beholding me with mylder looke, Sought not to fly, but fearlesse still did bide:
 Till I in hand her yet halfe trembling tooke,
 And with her owne goodwill hir fyrmely
 tyde.
 Strange thing, me seemd, to see a beast so wyld,
 So goodly wonne, with her owne will beguyld.

LXVIII

Most glorious Lord of lyfe, that on this
 day
 Didst make thy triumph over death and sin,
 And having harrowd hell, didst bring away Captivity thence captive, us to win:
 This joyous day, deare Lord, with joy begin,
 And grant that we, for whom thou diddest
 dye,
 Being with thy deare blood elene washt from sin,
 May live for ever in felicity:
 And that thy love we weighing worthily,
 May likewise love thee for the same againe;
 And for thy sake, that all lyke deare didst buy,
 With love may one another entertayne.
 So let us love, deare love, lyke as we ought:
 Love is the lesson which the Lord us taught.

LXIX

The famous warriors of the anticke world Used trophees to erect in stately wize,
 In which they would the records have enroll Of theyr great deeds and valarous emprize.
 What trophee then shall I most fit devise,
 In which I may record the memory Of my loves conquest, peerelesse beauties
 prise,

Adorn'd with honour, love, and chastity ?
 Even this verse, vowd to eternity,
 Shall be thereof immortall monument,
 And tell her prayse to all posterity, That may admire such worlds rare wonder-
 ment;
 The happy purchase of my glorious spoile, Gotten at last with labour and long toyle.

LXX

Fresh Spring, the herald of loves mighty king,

In whose cote-armour richly are displayd
 All sorts of flowers the which on earth do
 spring,

In goodly colours gloriously arrayd, Goe to my love, where she is careless layd, Yet in her winters bowre, not well awake;
 Tell her the joyous time wil not be staid, Unlesse she doe him by the forelock take:
 Bid her therefore her selfe soone ready
 make,

To wayt on Love amongst his lovely crew, Where every one that misseth then her make Shall be by him amearst with penance dew.
 Make hast therefore, sweet love, whilest it is prime;

For none can call againe the passed time.

LXXI

I joy to see how, in your drawn work,
 Your selfe unto the bee ye doe compare,
 And me unto the spyder, that doth lurke
 In close awayt to catch her unaware.
 Right so your selfe were caught in cunning
 snare

Of a deare foe, and thralld to his love:
 In whose streight bands ye now captived are So firmly, that ye never may remove.
 But as your worke is woven all about With woodbynd flowers and fragrant eglan-tine,

So sweet your prison you in time shall
 prove,

With many deare delights bedecked fyne:
 And all thensforth eternall peace shall see Betweene the spyder and the gentle bee.

LXXII

Oft when my spirit doth spred her bolder
 wings,

In mind to mount up to the purest sky, It down is weighd with thought of earthly
 things,

And clogd with burden of mortality:

Where, when that soverayne beauty it doth
 spy,

Resembling heavens glory in her light, Drawne with sweet pleasures bayt, it back doth fly,

And unto heaven forgets her former flight.
 There my fraile fancy, fed with full delight, Doth bath in blisse, and mantleth most at
 ease;

Ne thinks of other heaven, but how it might Her harts desire with most contentment
 please.

Hart need not wish none other happinesse,
 But here on earth to have such hevns blisse.

LXXIII

Being my selfe captvyed here in care, My hart, whom none with servile bands can ty,

But the fayre tresses of your golden hayre,
 Breaking his prison, forth to you doth fly.
 Like as a byrd, that in ones hand doth spy Desired food, to it doth make his flight, Even so my hart, that wont on your fayre
 eye

To feed his fill, flies backe unto your sight.
 Doe you him take, and in your bosome
 bright

Gently enage, that he may be your thrall: Perhaps he there may learne, with rare de-
 light,

To sing your name and prayses over all,
 That it hereafter may you not repent,
 Him lodging in your bosome to have lent.

LXXIV

Most happy letters! fram'd by skilfull
 trade,

With which that happy name was first de-
 synd,
 The which three times thrise happy hath me
 made,

With guifts of body, fortune, and of mind.
 The first my being to me gave by kind,
 From mothers womb deriv'd by dew descent:

The second is my soveraigne Queene most
 kind,

That honour and large richesse to me lent:
 The third, my love, my lives last ornament,
 By whom my spirit out of dust was raysed,
 To speake her prayse and glory excellent,
 Of all alive most worthy to be praysed.

Ye three Elizabeths, for ever live,
 That three such graces did unto me give.

LXXV

One day I wrote her name upon the strand,
But came the waves and washed it away:
Agayne I wrote it with a second hand, But came the tyde, and made my paynes
his pray.

Wayne man, sayd she, that doest in vaine
assay

A mortall thing so to immortalize!
For I my selve shall lyke to this decay,
And eek my name bee wyped out lykewize.
Not so (quod I) let baser things devize
To dy in dust, but you shall live by fame:
My verse your vertues rare shall eternize, And in the hevens wryte your glorious
name;

Where, whenas death shall all the world
subdew,

Our love shall live, and later life renew.

LXXVI

Fayre bosome, fraught with vertues richest tresure,

The neast of love, the lodging of delight,
The bowre of blisse, the paradice of pleasure,

The sacred harbour of that heavenly spright;
How was I ravisht with your lovely sight, And my frayle thoughts too rashly led astray!

Whiles diving deepe through amorous in-
sight,

On the sweet spoyle of beautie they did
pray,

And twixt her paps, like early fruit in May,
Whose harvest seemd to hasten now apace, They loosely did theyr wanton winges display,

And there to rest themselves did boldly
place.

Sweet thoughts, I envy your so happy
rest,

Which oft I wisht, yet never was so blest.

LXXVII

Was it a dreame, or did I see it playne?

A goodly table of pure yvory,

All spred with juncats fit to entertayne

The greatest prince with pompous roialty:

Mongst which, there in a silver dish did ly

Two golden apples of unvaled price,

Far passing those which Hercules came by,

Or those which Atalanta did entice;

Exceeding sweet, yet voyd of sinfull vice;

That many sought, yet none could ever taste;

Sweet fruit of pleasure, brought from Paradise

By Love himselve, and in his garden plaste.
Her brest that table was, so richly spredd;
My thoughts the guests, which would thereon have fedd.

LXXVIII

Lackyng my love, I go from place to place, Lyke a young fawne that late hath lost the
hynd,

And seeke each where, where last I sawe her face,

Whose ymage yet I carry fresh in mynd.
I seeke the fields with her late footing synd,
I seeke her bowre with her late presence deekt,

Yet nor in field nor bowre I her can fynd;
Yet field and bowre are full of her aspect.

But when myne eyes I therunto direct,
They ydly back returne to me agayne,
And when I hope to see theyr trew object,
I fynd my selfe but fed with fancies vayne.
Ceasse then, myne eyes, to seeke her selfe
to see,

And let my thoughts behold her selfe in
mee.

LXXIX

Men call you fayre, and you doe credit it,
For that your selfe ye dayly such doe see:
But the trew fayre, that is the gentle wit And vertuous mind, is much more praysd of me.

For all the rest, how ever fayre it be,
Shall turne to nought and loose that glorious hew:

But onely that is permanent, and free From frayle corruption, that doth flesh
ensew.

That is true beautie: that doth argue you To be divine, and borne of heavenly seed, Deriv'd from that fayre Spirit from whom al true

And perfect beauty did at first proceed.
He onely fayre, and what he fayre hath
made;

All other fayre, lyke flowres, untymely fade.

LXXX

After so long a race as I have run Through Faery Land, which those six books comple,

Give leave to rest me, being halfe fordonne,

And gather to my selfe new breath awhile.
 Then, as a steed refreshed after toyle,
 Out of my prison I will breake anew:
 And stoutly will that second worke assoyle,
 With strong endeavour and attention dew.
 Till then give leave to me, in pleasant mew To sport my muse, and sing my loves sweet
 praise:
 The contemplation of whose heavenly hew
 My spirit to an higher pitch will rayse.
 But let her prayes yet be low and meane, Fit for the handmayd of the Faery Queene.

LXXXI

Fayre is my love, when her fayre golden
 heares
 With the loose wynd ye waving chance to marke:
 Fayre, when the rose in her red cheekes ap-
 peares,
 Or in her eyes the fyre of love does sparke: Fayre, when her brest, lyke a rich laden
 barke
 With pretious merchandize, she forth doth
 lay:
 Fayre, when that cloud of pryde, which oft doth dark Her goodly light, with smiles she drives
 away.
 But fayrest she, when so she doth display
 The gate with pearles and rubyes richly
 dight,
 Through which her words so wise do make their way,
 To beare the message of her gentle spright.
 The rest be works of Natures wonderment,
 But this the worke of harts astonishment.

LXXXII

Joy of my life, full oft for loving you I blesse my lot, that was so lucky placed:
 But then the more your owne mishap I rew,
 That are so much by so meane love embased.
 For had the equall hevens so much you graded
 In this as in the rest, ye mote invent Som hevenly wit, whose verse could have en-chased
 Your glorious name in golden moniment.
 But since ye deignd so goodly to relent
 To me your thrall, in whom is little worth, That little that I am shall all be spent In setting your immortal prayes forth:
 Whose lofty argument, uplifting me,
 Shall lift you up unto an high degree.

LXXXIII

Let not one sparke of filthy lustfull fyre Breake out, that may her sacred peace
 molest;
 Ne one light glance of sensuall desyre Attempt to work her gentle mindes unrest:
 But pure affections bred in spotlesse brest, And modest thoughts breathd from wel tempred sprites, Goe visit her in her chast bowre of rest, Accompanyde with angelick delights.
 There fill your selfe with those most joyous
 sights,
 The which my selfe could never yet attayne:
 But speake no word to her of these sad plights,
 Which her too constant stiffenesse doth con-strayn.
 Onely behold her rare perfection,
 And blesse your fortunes fayre election.

LXXXIV

The world, that cannot deeme of worthy
 things,
 When I doe praise her, say I doe but flatter:
 So does the cuckow, when the mavis sings, Begin his witlesse note apace to clatter.
 But they that skill not of so heavenly matter,
 All that they know not, envy or admyre:
 Rather then envy, let them wonder at her,
 But not to deeme of her desert aspyre.
 Deepe in the closet of my parts entyre,
 Her worth is written with a golden quill:
 That me with heavenly fury doth inspire,
 And my glad mouth with her sweet prayes
 fill:
 Which when as Fame in her shrill trump shal thunder,
 Let the world chose to envy or to wonder.

LXXXV

Venemous tounge, tipt with vile adders sting,
 Of that selfe kynd with which the Furies
 fell Theyr snaky heads doe combe, from which a spring
 Of poisoned words and spitefull speeches
 well, Let all the plagues and horrid paines of
 hell
 Upon thee fall for thine accursed hyre, That with false forged lyes, which thou didst tel,
 In my true love did stirre up coles of yre;

The sparkes whereof let kindle thine own
 fyre,
 And catching hold on thine own wicked hed, Consume thee quite, that didst with guile conspire
 In my sweet peace such breaches to have
 bred.
 Shame be thy meed, and mischief thy re-
 ward,
 Due to thy selfe, that it for me prepard.

LXXXVI

Since I did leave the presence of my love,
 Many long weary dayes I have outworne,
 And many nights, that slowly seemd to move Theyr sad protract from evening untill
 morne.

For when as day the heaven doth adorne,
 I wish that night the noyous day would end:
 And when as night hath us of light forlorne,
 I wish that day would shortly reascend.
 Thus I the time with expectation spend,
 And faine my griefe with chaunges to be-
 guile,

That further seemes his terme still to extend,
 And maketh every minute seem a myle.
 So sorrow still doth seeme too long to last;
 But joyous houres doo fly away too fast.

LXXXVII

Since I have lackt the comfort of that light, The which was wont to lead my thoughts
 astray,

I wander as in darknesse of the night,
 Affrayd of every dangers least dismay.
 Ne ought I see, though in the clearest day, When others gaze upon theyr shadowes
 vayne,

But th' onely image of that heavenly ray, Whereof some glance doth in mine eie re-
 mayne.

Of which beholding the idæa playne,
 Through contemplation of my purest part,
 With light thereof I doe my selfe sustayne,
 And thereon feed my love-affamisht hart.
 But with such brightnesse whylest I fill my
 mind,

I starve my body, and mine eyes doe blynd.

LXXXVIII

Lyke as the culver on the bared bough Sits mourning for the absence of her mate,
 And in her songs sends many a wishfull vow
 For his returne, that seemes to linger late:
 So I alone, now left disconsolate,

Mourne to my selfe the absence of my love,
 And wandring here and there all desolate, Seek with my playnts to match that mournful dove:

Ne joy of ought that under heaven doth hove

Can comfort me, but her owne joyous sight, Whose sweet aspect both god and man can
 move,

In her unspotted pleasauns to delight.
 Dark is my day, whyles her fayre light I
 mis,

And dead my life that wants such lively blis.

I

IN youth, before I waxed old,
 The blynd boy, Venus baby,
 For want of cunning made me bold,
 In bitter hyve to grope for honny:
 But when he saw me stung and cry,
 He tooke his wings and away did fly.

II

As Diane hunted on a day,
 She chaunst to come where Cupid lay,
 His quiver by his head:
 One of his shafts she stole away,
 And one of hers did close convey Into the others stead:
 With that Love wounded my loves hart,
 But Diane beasts with Cupids dart.

III

I SAW, in secret to my dame
 How little Cupid humbly came,
 And sayd to her 'All hayle, my mother!'
 But when he saw me laugh, for shame
 His face with bashfull blood did flame, Not knowing Venus from the other.
 'Then, never blush, Cupid,' quoth I,
 'For many have err'd in this beauty.'

IV

UPON a day, as Love lay sweetly slumbring,
 All in his mothers lap,
 A gentle bee, with his loud trumpet murm'ring,
 About him flew by hap.
 Whereof when he was wakened with the noyse,
 And saw the beast so small:
 'Whats this,' quoth he, 'that gives so great a voyce,
 That wakens men withall?'

In angry wize he flies about,
And threatens all with corage stout. 10

To whom his mother closely smiling sayd, Twixt earnest and twixt game:
'See, thou thy selfe likewise art lyttle made,
If thou regard the same.
And yet thou suffrest neyther gods in
sky,

Nor men in earth to rest;
But when thou art disposed cruely, Theyr sleepe thou doost molest.
Then eyther change thy cruelty,
Or give lyke leave unto the fly.' 20

Nathlesse, the cruell boy, not so content, Would needs the fly pursue,
And in his hand, with heedlesse hardiment, Him caught for to subdue.
But when on it he hasty hand did lay,
The bee him stung therefore:
'Now out, alas,' he cryde, 'and welaway!
I wounded am full sore:
The fly, that I so much did scorne, Hath hurt me with his little horne.' 30

Unto his mother straight he weeping came,
And of his griefe complayned:
Who could not chose but laugh at his fond
game,
Though sad to see him pained.
'Think now,' quod she, 'my sonne, how great the smart
Of those whom thou dost wound:
Full many thou hast pricked to the hart,
That pitty never found:
Therefore, henceforth some pitty take,
When thou doest spoyle of lovers
make.' 40

She tooke him streight full pitiuously lament-
ing,
And wrapt him in her smock:
She wrapt him softly, all the while repent-
ing
That he the fly did mock.
She drest his wound, and it embaulmed wel With salve of soveraigne might:
And then she bath'd him in a dainty well,
The well of deare delight.
Who would not oft be stung as this,
To be so bath'd in Venus blis? 50

The wanton boy was shortly wel recured
Of that his malady:

But he, soone after, fresh againe enured
His former cruelty.
And since that time he wounded hath my selfe
With his sharpe dart of love:
And now forgets the cruell carelesse elfe His mothers heast to prove.
So now I languish, till he please My pining anguish to appease. 6c

EPITHALAMION

YE learned sisters, which have oftentimes Beene to me ayding, others to adorne, Whom ye thought worthy of your gracefull rymes,
That even the greatest did not greatly
scorne
To heare theyr names sung in your simple
layes,
But joyed in theyr praise;
And when ye list your owne mishaps to
mourne,
Which death, or love, or fortunes wreck did
rayse,
Your string could soone to sadder tenor
turne,
And teach the woods and waters to lament
Your dolefull dreriment: 11
Now lay those sorrowfull complaints aside, And having all your heads with girland
crownd,
Helpe me mine owne loves prayses to re-
sound;
Ne let the same of any be envie:
So Orpheus did for his owne bride:
So I unto my selfe alone will sing;
The woods shall to me answer, and my eecho ring.

Early, before the worlds light giving lampe
His golden beame upon the hils doth spred, Having disperst the nights unchearefull dampe, 21
Doe ye awake, and, with fresh lustyhed, Go to the bowre of my beloved love,
My truest turtle dove:
Bid her awake; for Hymen is awake, And long since ready forth his maske to
move,
With his bright tead that flames with many a flake,
And many a bachelor to waite on him,
In theyr fresh garments trim.

Bid her awake therefore, and soone her
dight, 30
For lo! the wished day is come at last,
That shall, for al the paynes and sorrowes
past,
Pay to her usury of long delight:
And whylest she doth her dight, Doe ye to her of joy and solace sing,
That all the woods may answer, and your
eecho ring.

Bring with you all the nymphes that you can heare,
Both of the rivers and the forrests greene,
And of the sea that neighbours to her neare, Al with gay girlands goodly wel beseene. 40
And let them also with them bring in hand Another gay girland,
For my fayre love, of lillyes and of roses, Bound truelove wize with a blew silke riband.
And let them make great store of bridale poses,
And let them eeke bring store of other flowers,
To deck the bridale bowers.
And let the ground whereas her foot shall
tread,
For feare the stones her tender foot should
wrong,
Be strewed with fragrant flowers all along,
And diaped lyke the discolored mead. 51
Which done, doe at her chamber dore awayt, For she will waken strayt;
The whiles doe ye this song unto her sing, The woods shall to you answer, and your
eecho ring.

Ye nymphes of Mulla, which with carefull
heed
The silver sealy trouts doe tend full well,
And greedy pikes which use therein to feed, (Those troutsand pikes all others dooexcell)
And ye likewise which keepe the rushy lake, Where none doo fishes take, 61 Bynd up the locks the which hang scatterd
light,
And in his waters, which your mirror make,
Behold your faces as the christall bright,
That when you come whereas my love doth
lie,
No blemish she may spie.
And eke ye lightfoot mayds which keepe the
dere
That on the hoary mountayne use to towre,

And the wyldde wolves, which seeke them to devoure,
With your steele darts doo chace from comming neer, 70
Be also present heere,
To helpe to decke her, and to help to sing,
That all the woods may answer, and your
eecho ring.

Wake now, my love, awake! for it is time:
The rosy Morne long since left Tithones bed,
All ready to her silver coche to clyme,
And Phæbus gins to shew his glorious hed.
Hark how the cheerefull birds do chaunt theyr laies,
And carroll of loves praise!
The merry larke hir mattins sings aloft, 80
The thrush replyes, the mavis descant
playes,
The ouzell shrills, the ruddock warbles soft,
So goodly all agree, with sweet consent,
To this dayes merriment.
Ah! my deere love, why doe ye sleepe thus
long,
When meeter were that ye should now
awake,
T' awayt the comming of your joyous make,
And hearken to the birds love-learned song,
The deawy leaves among?
For they of joy and pleasance to you sing,
That all the woods them answer, and theyr
eecho ring. 91

My love is now awake out of her dreame,
And her fayre eyes, like stars that dimmed
were
With darksome cloud, now shew theyr goodly beams
More bright then Hesperus his head doth rere.
Come now, ye damzels, daughters of delight, Helpe quickly her to dight.
But first come ye, fayre Houres, which were begot,
In Joves sweet paradise, of Day and Night,
Which doe the seasons of the year allot, 100
And al that ever in this world is fayre Do make and still repayre.
And ye three handmayds of the Cyprian
Queene,
The which doe still adorne her beauties
pride,
Helpe to adorne my beautifullest bride:
And as ye her array, still throw betweene
Some graces to be seene:

And as ye use to Venus, to her sing, The whiles the woods shal answer, and your echo ring.

Now is my love all ready forth to come: 110
Let all the virgins therefore well awayt, And ye fresh boyes, that tend upon her groomer, Prepare your selves, for he is comming
strayt.

Set all your things in seemely good aray,
Fit for so joyfull day,
The joyfult day that ever sunne did see.
Faire Sun, shew forth thy favourable ray,
And let thy lifull heat not fervent be,
For feare of burning her sunshyny face,
Her beauty to disgrace. 120

O fayrest Phœbus, father of the Muse,
If ever I did honour thee aright,
Or sing the thing that mote thy mind delight, Doe not thy servants simple boone refuse,
But let this day, let this one day be myne, Let all the rest be thine.
Then I thy soverayne praises loud wil sing, That all the woods shal answer, and their
echo ring.

Harke how the minstrels gin to shrill aloud
Their merry musick that resounds from far,
The pipe, the tabor, and the trembling croud,
That well agree withouten breach or jar. 132
But most of all the danczels doe delite,
When they their tymbrels smyte,
And thereunto doe daunce and carrol sweet,
That all the sences they doe ravish quite,
The whyles the boyes run up and downe the
street,

Crying aloud with strong confused noyce,
As if it were one voyce.
'Hymen, Iō Hymen, Hymen,' they do shout, That even to the heavens theyr shouting
shrill 141

Doth reach, and all the firmament doth fill;
To which the people, standing all about,
As in approvance doe thereto applaud,
And loud advance her laud,
And evermore they 'Hymen, Hymen' sing,
That all the woods them answer, and theyr
echo ring.

Loe! where she comes along with portly
pace,
Lyke Phœbe, from her chamber of the east, Arysing forth to run her mighty race, 150 Clad all in white, that seemes a virgin best.

So well it her besemes, that ye would weene
Some angell she had beene.

Her long loose yellow locks lyke golden
wyre,

Sprinkled with perle, and perling flowres
atweene,

Doe lyke a golden mantle her attyre,
And being crowned with a girland greene, Seeme lyke some mayden queene.

Her modest eyes, abashed to behold
So many gazers as on her do stare, 160 Upon the lowly ground affixed are;
Ne dare lift up her countenance too bold,
But blush to heare her praises sung so loud,
So farre from being proud.

Nathlesse doe ye still loud her praises sing,
That all the woods may answer, and your
echo ring.

Tell me, ye merchants daughters, did ye see So fayre a creature in your towne before, So sweet, so lovely, and so mild as she, Adorn'd with beautyes grace and vertues
store? 170

Her goodly eyes lyke saphyres shining
bright,

Her forehead yvory white,
Her cheekes lyke apples which the sun hath ruded,

Her lips lyke cheryes charming men to byte,

Her brest like to a bowle of creame uncrud-
ded,

Her paps lyke lyllies budded,
Her snowie necke lyke to a marble towre,
And all her body like a pallace fayre, Ascending uppe, with many a stately stayre,
To honors seat and chastities sweet bowre.

Why stand ye still, ye virgins, in amaze, 181
Upon her so to gaze,

Whiles ye forget your former lay to sing,
To which the woods did answer, and your
echo ring?

But if ye saw that which no eyes can see,
The inward beauty of her lively spright, Garnisht with heavenly gifts of high degree,

Much more then would ye wonder at that
sight,

And stand astonisht lyke to those which
red

Medusaes mazedful hed. 190
There dwels sweet Love, and constant Chastity,

Unspotted Fayth, and comely Womanhood, Regard of Honour, and mild Modesty; There Vertue raynes as queene in royal
 throne,

And giveth lawes alone,
 The which the base affections doe obay,
 And yeeld theyr services unto her will;
 Ne thought of thing uncomely ever may Thereto approach to tempt her mind to ill.
 Had ye once seene these her celestial threasures, 200

And unrevealed pleasures,
 Then would ye wonder, and her praynes sing, That al the woods should answer, and your
 echo ring.

Open the temple gates unto my love, Open them wide that she may enter in,
 And all the postes adorne as doth behove,
 And all the pillours deck with girlands trim,
 For to receive this saynt with honour dew,
 That commeth in to you. 209

With trembling steps and humble reverence,
 She commeth in before th' Almightyes vew:
 Of her, ye virgins, learne obedience,
 When so ye come into those holy places,
 To humble your proud faces.

Bring her up to th' high altar, that she may
 The sacred ceremonies there partake, The which do endlesse matrimony make;
 And let the roring organs loudly play
 The praises of the Lord in lively notes,
 The whiles with hollow throates 220
 The choristers the joyous antheme sing, That al the woods may answer, and their
 echo ring.

Behold, whiles she before the altar stands, Hearing the holy priest that to her speakes,
 And blesseth her with his two happy hands,
 How the red roses flush up in her cheekes,
 And the pure snow with goodly vermill stayne,

Like crimsin dyde in grayne:
 That even th' angels, which continually About the sacred altare doe remaine, 230 Forget their service and about her fly, Ofte peeping in her face, that seemes more
 fayre,

The more they on it stare.
 But her sad eyes, still fastened on the
 ground,

Are governed with goodly modesty,
 That suffers not one looke to glaunce awry,
 Which may let in a little thought unsound.

Why blush ye, love, to give to me your hand,
 The pledge of all our band?
 Sing, ye sweet angels, Alleluya sing, 240 That all the woods may answer, and your
 eecho ring.

Now al is done; bring home the bride againe, Bring home the triumph of our victory,
 Bring home with you the glory of her gaine,
 With joyance bring her and with jollity.
 Never had man more joyfull day then this,
 Whom heaven would heape with blis.
 Make feast therefore now all this live long
 day;

This day for ever to me holy is;
 Poure out the wine without restraint or stay, Poure not by cups, but by the belly full, 251 Poure out to all that wull, And sprinkle all the postes and wals with wine,

That they may sweat, and drunken be with-
 all.

Crowne ye God Bacchus with a coronall, And Hymen also crowne with wreathes of
 vine;

And let the Graces daunce unto the rest,
 For they can doo it best:
 The whiles the maydens doe theyr carroll
 sing,

To which the woods shal answer, and theyr
 eecho ring. 260

Ring ye the bells, ye yong men of the towne,
 And leave your wonted labors for this day:
 This day is holy; doe ye write it downe,
 That ye for ever it remember may.

This day the sunne is in his chiefest hight,
 With Barnaby the bright,
 From whence declining daily by degrees,
 He somewhat loseth of his heat and light,
 When once the Crab behind his back he sees.
 But for this time it ill ordained was, 270
 To chose the longest day in all the yeare, And shortest night, when longest fitter
 weare:

Yet never day so long, but late would passe.
 Ring ye the bells, to make it weare away,
 And benefiers make all day,
 And daunce about them, and about them
 sing:

That all the woods may answer, and your
 eecho ring.

Ah! when will this long weary day have end,
 And lende me leave to come unto my love?

How slowly do the houres their numbers
spend ! 280

How slowly does sad Time his feathers
move !

Hast thee, O fayrest planet, to thy home Within the westerne fome:

Thy tyred steedes long since have need of
rest.

Long though it be, at last I see it gloome,
And the bright evening star with golden
creast

Appeare out of the east.

Fayre childe of beauty, glorious lampe of
love,

That all the host of heaven in rankes doost
lead,

And guyddest lovers through the nightes
dread, 290

How chearefully thou lookest from above, And seemst to laugh atweene thy twinkling light,

As joying in the sight

Of these glad many, which for joy doe sing, That all the woods them answer, and their
echo ring !

Now cease, ye damsels, your delights fore-
past;

Enough is it that all the day was your:
Now day is doen, and night is nighting fast:
Now bring the bryde into the brydall houres.

The night is come, now soone her disaray, 300
And in her bed her lay;

Lay her in lillies and in violets,
And silken courteins over her display,
And odour sheetes, and Arras coverlets.
Behold how goodly my faire love does ly,
In proud humility !

Like unto Maia, when as Jove her tooke
In Tempe, lying on the flowry gras, Twixt sleepe and wake, after she weary was With bathing in the Acidalian brooke. 310

Now it is night, ye damsels may be gon,
And leave my love alone,
And leave likewise your former lay to sing:
The woods no more shal answer, nor your
echo ring.

Now welcome, night ! thou night so long expected,

That long daies labour doest at last defray,
And all my cares, which cruell Love collected,

Hast sumd in one, and cancelled for aye:

Spread thy broad wing over my love and me,
That no man may us see, 320

And in thy sable mantle us enwrap,
From feare of perrill and foule horror free.
Let no false treason seeke us to entrap, Nor any dread disquiet once annoy

The safety of our joy:

But let the night be calme and quietome, Without tempestuous storms or sad afray:
Lyke as when Jove with fayre Alemena lay,
When he begot the great Tirythian groome:
Or lyke as when he with thy selfe did lie,
And begot Majesty. 331

And let the mayds and yongmen cease to sing:

Ne let the woods them answer, nor theyr
eecho ring.

Let no lamenting cryes, nor dolefull teares, Be heard all night within, nor yet without:
Ne let false whispers, breeding hidden
feares,

Breake gentle sleepe with misconceived
dout.

Let no deluding dreames, nor dreadful sights,

Make sudden sad affrights;

Ne let house-fyres, nor lightnings helpelesse
harmes, 340

Ne let the Pouke, nor other evill sprights, Ne let mischivous witches with theyr
charmes,

Ne let hob goblins, names whose sense we see not,

Fray us with things that be not.

Let not the shrieck oule, nor the storke be
heard,

Nor the night raven that still deadly yels, Nor damned ghosts cald up with mighty spels,

Nor griesly vultures make us once affeard: Ne let th' unpleasant quyre of frogs still croking

Make us to wish theyr choking. 350

Let none of these theyr drery accents sing;
Ne let the woods them answer, nor theyr
eecho ring.

But let stil Silence trew night watches
keepe,

That sacred Peace may in assurance rayne, And tymely Sleep, when it is tyme to
sleepe,

May poure his limbs forth on your pleasant
playne,

The whiles an hundred little winged loves,
 Like divers feathered doves, Shall fly and flutter round about our bed,
 And in the secret darke, that none reproveth, Their prety stealthes shall worke, and snares shal spread ³⁶¹

To flch away sweet snatches of delight, Conceald through covert night.
 Ye sonnes of Venus, play your sports at will:
 For greedy Pleasure, carelesse of your toyes, Thinks more upon her paradise of joyes,
 Then what ye do, albe it good or ill.
 All night therefore attend your merry play,
 For it will soone be day:
 Now none doth hinder you, that say or sing, Ne will the woods now answer, nor your echo ring. ³⁷¹

Who is the same which at my window peepes?
 Or whose is that faire face that shines so
 bright?
 Is it not Cinthia, she that never sleepes,
 But walkes about high heaven al the night?
 O fayrest goddess, do thou not envy
 My love with me to spy:
 For thou likewise didst love, though now unthought,
 And for a fleece of woll, which privily
 The Latmian shephard once unto thee brought, ³⁸⁰
 His pleasures with thee wrought.
 Therefore to us be favorable now;
 And sith of womens labours thou hast
 charge,
 And generation goodly dost enlarge, Encline thy will t' effect our wishfull vow,
 And the chast wombe informe with timely
 seed,
 That may our comfort breed:
 Till which we cease our hopefull hap to sing, Ne let the woods us answeere, nor our echo
 ring.

And thou, great Juno, which with awful might ³⁹⁰
 The lawes of wedlock still dost patronize,
 And the religion of the faith first plight
 With sacred rites hast taught to solemnize, And eeke for comfort often called art

Of women in their smart, Eternally bind thou this lovely band,
 And all thy blessings unto us impart.
 And thou, glad Genius, in whose gentle hand
 The bridale bowre and geniall bed remaine, Without blemish or staine, ⁴⁰⁰
 And the sweet pleasures of theyr loves
 delight

With secret ayde doest succour and supply, Till they bring forth the fruitfull progeny, Send us the timely fruit of this same night.
 And thou, fayre Hebe, and thou, Hymen
 free,
 Grant that it may so be.
 Til which we cease your further prayse to
 sing,
 Ne any woods shal answer, nor your echo
 ring.

And ye high heavens, the temple of the gods, ⁴⁰⁹
 In which a thousand torches flaming bright Doe burne, that to us wretched earthly clods In dreadful darknesse lend desired light, And all ye powers which in the same re-
 mayne,
 More then we men can fayne, Poure out your blessing on us plentiously,
 And happy influence upon us raine,
 That we may raise a large posterity, Which from the earth, which they may long possesse
 With lasting happinesse, ⁴¹⁹
 Up to your haughty pallaces may mount,
 And for the guerdon of theyr glorious merit,
 May heavenly tabernacles there inherit,
 Of blessed saints for to increase the count.
 So let us rest, sweet love, in hope of this,
 And cease till then our tymely joyes to sing:
 The woods no more us answer, nor our echo
 ring.

Song, made in lieu of many ornaments With which my love should duly have bene dect,
 Which cutting off through hasty accidents,
 Ye would not stay your dew time to expect,
 But promist both to recompens, ⁴³¹
 Be unto her a godly ornament,
 And for short time an endlesse monument.

IMPRINTED BY P. S. FOR WILLIAM PONSONBY

FOWRE HYMNES

MADE BY

EDM. SPENSER

LONDON

PRINTED FOR WILLIAM PONSONBY

1596

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE AND MOST VERTUOUS LADIES, THE LADIE MARGARET COUNTESSE OF CUMBERLAND, AND THE LADIE MARIE COUNTESSE OF WARWICKE

HAVING, in the greener times of my youth, composed these former two hymnes in the praise of love and beautie, and finding that the same too much pleased those of like age and disposition, which, being too vehemently caried with that kind of affection, do rather sucke out poyson to their strong passion, then hony to their honest delight, I was moved by the one of you two most excellent Ladies, to call in the same. But being unable so to doe, by reason that many copies thereof were formerly scattered abroad, I resolved at least to amend, and by way of retraction to reforme them, making in stead of those two hymnes of earthly or naturall love and beautie, two others of heavenly and celestiaall. The which I doe dedicate joyntly unto you two honorable sisters, as to the most excellent and rare ornaments of all true love and beautie, both in the one and the other kinde, humbly beseeching you to vouchsafe the patronage of them, and to accept this my humble service, in lieu of the great graces and honourable favours which ye dayly shew unto me, untill such time as I may by better meanes yeeld you some more notable testimonie of my thankfull mind and dutifull devotion.

And even so I pray for your happinesse.
Greenwich, this first of September, 1596.

Your Honors most bounden ever in all humble service,
Ed. Sp.

[The noblewomen to whom this volume is dedicated were sisters, of the great Russell family. The Lady Margaret was that Countess of Cumberland to whom Daniel, a few years later, addressed the most noble of his poems. The Countess of Warwick (whose name was Anne, not Mary) was the widow of Leicester's brother, 'the good earl,' and, as such, had found mention in 'The Ruins of Time.'

The words of the dedication have been variously interpreted. The first pair of hymns, composed, we read, 'in the greener times of my youth,' (by which we are to understand, probably, the period of the Calendar and of 'Mother Hubbard's Tale') having 'too much pleased those of like age and disposition,' were apparently, in 1596, still popular: but one of the noble sisters, disapproving of them, would have them 'called in;' whereupon, 'being unable so to doe,' the poet 'resolved at least to amend and by way of retraction to reforme them, making, in stead of those two hymns of earthly or naturall love and beautie, two others of heavenly and celestiaall.' The difficulty is in the final clauses. Did the poet, besides composing the two later hymns, also reduce the earlier to inoffensiveness? or did he let these stand as originally written, and atone for them merely by composing their substitutes? At first, it would seem as if the second interpretation, though more in accord with the words of the letter, were impossible. For in the earlier hymns, as they are printed, there could surely be nothing to shock the most extravagant of prudes: besides, if the lady objected to them in their early form, why should the poet publish them in that form? Yet if, on the other hand, these hymns, as they are printed, be the result of expurgation, one does not see what the poet can have expurgated. Both are organically Platonic : there would seem to be no place in them, at any point, for matter even faintly licentious. Perhaps, however, it has been assumed too readily that the fault of these early hymns was of that kind. Dr. Grosart thinks that the sister who protested was the Countess of Warwick, for she is known to have inclined to Puritanism. If it was she, her protest may very well have been, not against immodesty, but against the very subject matter of these hymns, 'earthly or naturall love and beautie.' She may have reprobated them for sinful vanities, just as her nephew, Sidney, being on his death-bed, reprobated his own Arcadia and gave earnest orders for its destruction. In atonement for such a fault, Spenser might well issue the early hymns as they had been written, and let their vanity be foil to the earnestness of the later, composed to replace them. His repentance would then be that of the December eclogue : —

'I, that whilome wont to frame my pype Unto the shifting of the shepherds foote, Sike follies nowe have gathered as too ripe,
 And cast hem out as rotten and unsoote.
 The loser lasse [Rosalind] I cast to please nomore :
 One if I please [i. e. God], enough is me therefore.'

AN HYMNE IN HONOUR OF LOVE

LOVE, that long since hast to thy mighty
 powre

Perforce subdude my poore captived hart,
 And raging now therein with restlesse
 stowre,

Doest tyrannize in everie weaker part,
 Faine would I seeke to ease my bitter smart
 By any service I might do to thee, Or ought that else might to thee pleasing
 bee.

And now t' assuage the force of this new
 flame,

And make thee more propitious in my need,
 I meane to sing the praises of thy name, 10
 And thy victorious conquests to areed;
 By which thou madest many harts to bleed
 Of mighty victors, with wyde wounds embrewed,
 And by thy cruell darts to thee subdewed.

Onely I feare my wits, enfeebled late Through the sharpe sorrowes which thou hast me bred,

Should faint, and words should faile me to relate

The wondrous triumphs of thy great god-
 hed.

The later repentance certainly need not be taken as at all more serious than the earlier, need not be read as an example of 'the sensitive purity of the poet's nature.' In composing his first two hymns he had aimed to embody in verse some of those Neo-Platonic doctrines which were then so popular in Italy, best known to Englishmen, perhaps, in the fourth book of Castiglione's Courtier. His success had been the more brilliant in that he was first in England to occupy the field. Later, when the Countess of Warwick would have persuaded him that such vanities were unworthy of a 'sage and serious' poet, one can understand how he might acquiesce, and, without very real contrition for these youthful hymns, gratify her by others more in consonance with her convictions. For the Neo-Platonic modes of thought were as applicable to Christian doctrine as to theories of 'earthly or naturall love and beautie,' and a poet might be sincere in both uses, since neither would be understood literally and since both embodied the spirit of his most serious thought.]

But, if thou wouldst vouchsafe to over-
 spred

Me with the shadow of thy gentle wing, 20
 I should enabled be thy actes to sing.

Come then, O come, thou mightie God of
 Love,

Out of thy silver bowres and secret blisse,
 Where thou doest sit in Venus lap above, Bathing thy wings in her ambrosiall kisse, That sweeter farre then any nectar is;
 Come softly, and my feeble breast inspire

With gentle furie, kindled of thy fire.

And ye, sweet Muses, which have often proved

The piercing points of his avengefull darts, And ye, faire nymphs, which oftentimes have loved 31

The cruell worker of your kindly smart, Prepare your selves, and open wide your
 harts,

For to receive the triumph of your glorie, That made you merie oft, when ye were sorie.

And ye, faire blossomes of youths wanton
 breed,

Which in the conquests of your beautie
 bost,

Wherewith your lovers feeble eyes you feed, But sterve their harts, that needeth nour-ture most,

Prepare your selves to march amongst his host, ⁴⁰
And all the way this sacred hymne do sing,
Made in the honor of your soveraigne king.

GREAT God of might, that reignest in the
mynd,

And all the bodie to thy hest doest frame, Victor of gods, subduer of mankynd,
That doest the lions and fell tigers tame, Making their cruell rage thy scornefull
game,

And in their roring taking great delight,
Who can expresse the glorie of thy might ?

Or who alive can perfectly declare ⁵⁰
The wondrous cradle of thine infancie, When thy great mother Venus first thee
bare,

Begot of Plentie and of Penurie, Though elder then thine owne nativitie;
And yet a chyld, renewing still thy yeares,
And yet the eldest of the heavenly peares ?

For ere this worlds still moving mightie
masse

Out of great Chaos ugly prison crept, In which his goodly face long hidden was From heavens view, and in deepe darknesse kept, ⁶⁰

Love, that had now long time securely slept In Venus lap, unarmed then and naked, Gan reare his head, by Clotho being waked.

And taking to him wings of his owne heate, Kindled at first from heavens life-giving
fyre,

He gan to move out of his idle seate, Weakely at first, but after with desyre Lifted aloft, he gan to mount up hyre,
And like fresh eagle, make his hardie flight Through all that great wide wast, yet wanting light. ⁷⁰

Yet wanting light to guide his wandring
way,

His owne faire mother, for all creatures sake, Did lend him light from her owne goodly
ray:

Then through the world his way he gan to
take,
The world, that was not till he did it make,

Whose sundrie parts he from them selves did sever,
The which before had lyen confused ever.

The earth, the ayre, the water, and the fyre, Then gan to raunge them selves in huge array,

And with contrary forces to conspyre ⁸⁰
Each against other, by all meanes they may, Threatning their owne confusion and decay:
Ayre hated earth, and water hated fyre, Till Love relented their rebellious fyre.

He then them tooke, and tempering goodly
well

Their contrary dislikes with loved meanes, Did place them all in order, and compell To keepe them selves within their sundrie raines,

Together linkt with adamantyne chaines;
Yet so as that in every living wight ⁹⁰
They mixe themselves, and shew their kindly might.

So ever since they firmly have remained,
And duly well observed his bebest; Through which now all these things that are contained

Within this goodly cope, both most and
least,

Their being have, and dayly are increast Through secret sparks of his infused fyre, Which in the barraine cold he doth inspyre.

Thereby they all do live, and moved are To multiply the likenesse of their kynd, ¹⁰⁰ Whilst they seeke onely, without further
care,

To quench the flame which they in burning
fynd:

But man, that breathes a more immortall
mynd,

Not for lusts sake, but for eternitie, Seekes to enlarge his lasting progenie.

For having yet in his deducted spright Some sparks remaining of that heavenly
fyre,

He is enlumind with that goodly light, Unto like goodly semblant to aspyre:
Therefore in choice of love, he doth desyre That seemes on earth most heavenly, to embrace; ¹¹⁰

That same is Beautie, borne of heavenly race.

For sure, of all that in this mortall frame Contained is, nought more divine doth seeme, Or that resembleth more th' immortall
flame

Of heavenly light, then Beauties glorious
beame.

What wonder then, if with such rage extreme

Fraile men, whose eyes seek heavenly things
to see,

At sight thereof so much enravisht bee ?

Which well perceiving, that imperious boy Doth therewith tip his sharp poisoned
darts; 121

Which, glancing through the eyes with countenance coy,

Rest not till they have pierst the trembling
harts,

And kindled flame in all their inner parts, Which suckes the blood, and drinketh up the lyfe

Of carefull wretches with consuming grieffe.

Thenceforth they playne, and make ful piteous mone

Unto the author of their balefull bane;
The daies they waste, the nights they grieve and grone,

Their lives they loath, and heavens light
disdaine; 130

No light but that whose lampe doth yet
remaine

Fresh burning in the image of their eye,
They deigne to see, and seeing it still dye.

The whylst thou, tyrant Love, doest laugh and scorne

At their complaints, making their paine thy
play;

Whylest they lye languishing like thrals
forlorne,

The whyles thou doest triumph in their
decay,

And otherwhyles, their dying to delay,
Thou doest emmarble the proud hart of her, Whose love before their life they doe prefer. 140

So hast thou often done (ay me the more !)
 To me thy vassall, whose yet bleeding hart With thousand wounds thou mangled hast
so sore

That whole remaines scarce any little part;
Yet to augment the anguish of my smart,

Thou hast enfrosen her disdainefull brest,
That no one drop of pitie there doth rest.

Why then do I this honor unto thee,
Thus to ennoble thy victorious name, 149
Since thou doest shew no favour unto mee, Ne once move ruth in that rebellious dame, Somewhat to slacke the rigour of my flame?
Certes small glory doest thou winne hereby,
To let her live thus free, and me to dy.

But if thou be indeede, as men thee call,
The worlds great parent, the most kind preserver

Of living wights, the soveraine lord of all, How falles it then that with thy furious feruour

Thou doest afflict as well the not deseruer, As him that doeth thy lovely beasts de-
spize, 160

And on thy subjects most doest tyrannize ?

Yet herein eke thy glory seemeth more,
By so hard handling those which best thee
serve,

That ere thou doest them unto grace restore, Thou mayest well trie if they will ever swerve,

And mayest them make it better to deserve,
And having got it, may it more esteeme;

For things hard gotten men more dearly
deeme. 168

So hard those heavenly beauties be enfyred,
As things divine least passions doe impresse,
The more of stedfast myndes to be admyred:
The more they stayed be on stedfastnesse:
But baseborne myndes such lamps regard the lesse,

Which at first blowing take not hastie fyre;
Such fancies feele no love, but loose desyre.

For Love is lord of truth and loialtie, Lifting himselfe out of the lowly dust

On golden plumes up to the purest skie, Above the reach of loathly sinfull lust,

Whose base affect, through cowardly distrust 180

Of his weake wings, dare not to heaven fly,
But like a moldwarpe in the earth doth ly.

His dunghill thoughts, which do themselves enure

To dirtie drosse, no higher dare aspyre, Ne can his feeble earthly eyes endure

The flaming light of that celestiall fyre, Which kindleth love in generous desyre, And makes him mount above the native
 might
Of heavie earth, up to the heavens hight.

Such is the powre of that sweet passion, ¹⁹⁰
That it all sordid basenesse doth expell,
And the refyned mynd doth newly fashion Unto a fairer forme, which now doth dwell In his high thought, that would it selfe ex-
 cell;
Which he beholding still with constant
 sight,
Admires the mirrour of so heavenly light.

Whose image printing in his deepest wit,
He thereon feeds his hungrie fantasy, Still full, yet never satisfyde with it;
Like Tantale, that in store doth sterved ly,
So doth he pine in most satiety; ²⁰¹
For nought may quench his infinite desyre, Once kindled through that first conceived
 fyre.

Thereon his mynd affixed wholly is,
Ne thinks on ought, but how it to attaine;
His care, his joy, his hope is all on this,
That seemes in it all blisses to containe, In sight whereof all other blisse seemes
 vaine.

Thrise happie man, might he the same
 possesse,
He faines himselfe, and doth his fortune blesse. ²¹⁰

And though he do not win his wish to end, Yet thus farre happie he him selfe doth
 weene,
That heavens such happie grace did to him
 lend,
As thing on earth so heavenly to have seene, His harts enshrined saint, his heavens
 queene,
Fairer then fairest, in his fayning eye,
Whose sole aspect he counts felicitye.

Then forth he casts in his unquiet thought,
What he may do, her favour to obtaine; What brave exploit, what perill hardly wrought, ²²⁰
What puissant conquest, what adventurous
 paine,
May please her best, and grace unto him
 gaine:

He dreads no danger, nor misfortune feares;
His faith, his fortune, in his breast he beares.

Thou art his god, thou art his mightie guyde, Thou, being blind, letst him not see his
 feares,
But cariest him to that which he hath eyde, Through seas, through flames, through thousand swords and speares: Ne ought so strong that may his force with-
 stand,
With which thou arimest his resistlesse hand.

Witnesse Leander in the Euxine waves, ²³¹
And stout Æneas in the Trojane fyre, Achilles preassing through the Phrygian glaives,
And Orpheus daring to provoke the yre
Of damned fiends, to get his love retyre:
For both through heaven and hell thou makest way,
To win them worship which to thee obey.

And if by all these perils and these paynes
He may but purchase lyking in her eye, What heavens of joy then to himselfe he faynes! ²⁴⁰
Eftsoones he wypes quite out of memory
What ever ill before he did aby;
Had it bene death, yet would he die againe,
To live thus happie as her grace to gaine.

Yet when he hath found favour to his will,
He nathemore can so contented rest, But forceth further on, and striveth still T' approach more neare, till in her inmost
 brest
He may embosomd bee, and loved best;
And yet not best, but to be lov'd alone; ²⁵⁰
For love can not endure a paragone.

The feare whereof, O how doth it torment His troubled mynd with more then hellish
 paine!
And to his fayning fansie represent Sights never seene, and thousand shadowes
 vaine,
To breake his sleepe and waste his ydle
 braine;
Thou that hast never lov'd canst not beleeve Least part of th' evils which poore lovers grieve.

The gnawing envie, the hart-fretting feare,
The vaine surmizes, the distrustfull showes,

The false reports that flying tales doe beare, The doubts, the daungers, the delays, the woes, 262

The fayned friends, the unassured foes, With thousands more then any tongue can
tell,

Doe make a lovers life a wretches hell.

Yet is there one more cursed then they all,
That cancker worme, that monster Gelosie, Which eats the hart, and feedes upon the
gall,

Turning all loves delight to miserie,
Through feare of loosing his felicitie. 270

Ah, gods ! that ever ye that monster placed In gentle love, that all his joyes defaced !

By these, O Love, thou doest thy entrance
make

Unto thy heaven, and doest the more endeere Thy pleasures unto those which them par-
take,

As after stormes, when clouds begin to cleare,
The sunne more bright and glorious doth
appeare;

So thou thy folke, through paines of Purgatorie,

Dost beare unto thy blisse, and heavens
glorie.

There thou them placest in a paradize 280
Of all delight and joyous happie rest, Where they doe feede on nectar heavenly
wize,

With Hercules and Hebe, and the rest Of Venus dearlings, through her bountie
blest,

And lie like gods in yvorie beds arayd,
With rose and lillies over them displayd.

There with thy daughter Pleasure they doe
play

Their hurtlesse sports, without rebuke or
blame,

And in her snowy bosome boldly lay Their quiet heads, devoyd of guilty shame, After full joyance of their gentle game; 291

Then her they crowne their goddesses and their queene,

And decke with floures thy altars well be-
seene.

Ay me ! deare lord, that ever I might hope,
For all the paines and woes that I endure,
To come at length unto the wished scope

Of my desire, or might my selfe assure,
That happie port for ever to recure !
Then would I thinke these paines no paines
at all, 299
And all my woes to be but penance small.

Then would I sing of thine immortall praise An heavenly hymne, such as the angels sing,
And thy triumphant name then would I raise Bove all the gods, thee onely honoring,
My guide, my god, my victor, and my king:
Till then, dread lord, vouchsafe to take of me This simple song, thus fram'd in praise of
thee.

AN HYMNE IN HONOUR OF BEAUTIE

AH ! whither, Love, wilt thou now carrie
mee ?

What wotlesse fury dost thou now inspire Into my feeble breast, too full of thee ?

Whylest seeking to aslake thy raging fyre, Thou in me kindlest much more great de-
syre,

And up aloft above my strength doest rayse
The wondrous matter of my fyre to prayse.

That as I earst in praise of thine owne name,
So now in honour of thy mother deare,
An honourable hymne I eke should frame,
And with the brightnesse of her beautie
cleare, 11

The ravisht harts of gazefull men might
reare

To admiration of that heavenly light, From whence proceeds such soule en-chaunting might.

Therto do thou, great goddesses, Queene of Beauty,

Mother of Love, and of all worlds delight, Without whose soverayne grace and kindly dewty

Nothing on earth seemes fayre to fleshly
sight,

Doe thou vouchsafe with thy love-kindling
light

T' illuminate my dim and dulled eyne, 20
And beautifie this sacred hymne of thine.

That both to thee, to whom I meane it most,
And eke to her, whose faire immortall beame Hath darted fyre into my feeble ghost,

That now it wasted is with woes extreme,
It may so please that she at length will streame
Some dew of grace into my withered hart, After long sorrow and consuming smart.

WHAT time this worlds great workmaister did cast

To make al things such as we now behold, ³⁰
It seemes that he before his eyes had plast
A goodly paterne, to whose perfect mould He fashiond them as comely as he could,
That now so faire and seemely they ap-
 peare

As nought may be amended any wheare.

That wondrous paterne, wheresoere it bee, Whether in earth layd up in secret store,
Or else in heaven, that no man may it see With sinfull eyes, for feare it to deflore, Is perfect Beautie, which all men adore; ⁴⁰ Whose face and feature doth so much excell All mortal sence, that none the same may
 tell.

Thereof as every earthly thing partakes
Or more or lesse, by influence divine, So it more faire accordingly it makes,
And the grosse matter of this earthly myne,
Which clotheth it, thereafter doth refyne, Doing away the drosse which dims the
 light

Of that faire beame which therein is em-
 pight.

For through infusion of celestiall powre ⁵⁰
The duller earth it quickneth with delight,
And life-full spirits privily doth powre Through all the parts, that to the lookers
 sight

They seeme to please. That is thy souveraine
 might,

O Cyprian queene, which, flowing from the beame

Of thy bright starre, thou into them doest
 streame.

That is the thing which giveth pleasant
 grace

To all things faire, that kindleth lively
 fyre,

Light of thy lampe, which, shyning in the face, ⁵⁹

Thence to the soule darts amorous desyre;
And robs the harts of those which it admyre;

Therewith thou pointest thy sons poysned arrow,
That wounds the life, and wastes the inmost narrow.

How vainely then doe ydle wits invent That Beautie is nought else but mixture
 made

Of colours faire, and goodly temp'rament Of pure complexion, that shall quickly
 fade

And passe away, like to a sommers shade,
Or that it is but comely composition Of parts well measurd, with meet disposition! ⁷⁰

Hath white and red in it such wondrous
 powre,

That it can pierce through th' eyes unto the
 hart,

And therein stirre such rage and restlesse
 stowre,

As nought but death can stint his dolours
 smart?

Or can proportion of the outward part Move such affection in the inward mynd, That it can rob both sense, and reason
 blynd?

Why doe not then the blossomes of the field,
Which are arayd with much more orient hew, ⁷⁹

And to the sense most daintie odours yield, Worke like impression in the lookers vew?
Or why doe not faire pictures like powre
 shew,

In which oftimes we Nature see of Art Exceld, in perfect limming every part?

But ah! beleeve me, there is more then so,
That workes such wonders in the minds of
 men.

I, that have often prov'd, too well it know;
And who so list the like assayes to ken Shall find by tryall, and confesse it then, ⁸⁹
That Beautie is not, as fond men misdeeme, An outward shew of things that onely seeme.

For that same goodly hew of white and red,
With which the cheekes are sprinkled, shall
 decay,

And those sweete rosy leaves, so fairely
 spred

Upon the lips, shall fade and fall away
To that they were, even to corrupted claw.

That golden wyre, those sparekling stars so
bright
Shall turne to dust, and loose their goodly
light.

But that faire lampe, from whose celestiall
ray
That light proceedes which kindleth lovers
fire, 100
Shall never be extinguisht nor decay;
But when the vitall spirits doe expyre, Unto her native planet shall retyre;
For it is heavenly borne, and can not die,
Being a parcell of the purest skie.

For when the soule, the which derived was,
At first, out of that great immortal Spright,
By whom all live to love, whilome did pas Downe from the top of purest heavens hight,
To be embodied here, it then tooke light 110
And lively spirits from that fayrest starre, Which lights the world forth from his fire carre.

Which powre retayning still, or more or
lesse,
When she in fleshly seede is eft enaced, Through every part she doth the same im-
presse,
According as the heavens have her graced,
And frames her house, in which she will be placed,
Fit for her selfe, adorning it with spoyle Of th' heavenly riches which she robd ere-
while.

Thereof it comes that these faire soules, which have 120
The most resemblance of that heavenly
light,
Frame to themselves most beautifull and
brave
Their fleshly bowre, most fit for their de-
light,
And the grosse matter by a soveraine might Tempers so trim, that it may well be seene
A pallace fit for such a virgin queene.

So every spirit, as it is most pure,
And hath in it the more of heavenly light,
So it the fairer bodie doth procure To habit in, and it more fairely dight 130
With chearefull grace and amiable sight.
For of the soule the bodie forme doth take:
For soule is forme, and doth the bodie make.

Therefore, where ever that thou doest be-
hold A comely corpe, with beautie faire en-
dewed,
Know this for certaine, that the same doth
hold A beauteous soule, with faire conditions thewed,
Fit to receive the seede of vertue strewed.
For all that faire is, is by nature good; 135
That is a signe to know the gentle blood.

Yet oft it falles that many a gentle mynde Dwels in deformed tabernacle drownd, Either by chaunce, against the course of
kynd,
Or through unaptnesse in the substance
fownd,
Which it assumed of some stubbornne
grownd,
That will not yield unto her formes direction,
But is deform'd with some foule imperfection.

And oft it falles (ay me, the more to rew !)
That goodly Beautie, albe heavenly borne,
Is foule abusd, and that celestiall hew, 150 Which doth the world with her delight
adorne,
Made but the bait of sinne, and sinners
scorne;
Whilst every one doth seeke and sew to have it,
But every one doth seeke but to deprave it.

Yet nathemore is that faire Beauties blame,
But theirs that do abuse it unto ill:
Nothing so good, but that through guilty
shame
May be corrupt, and wrested unto will.
Nathelasse the soule is faire and beauteous
still,
How ever fleshes fault it filthy make: 160
For things immortall no corruption take.

But ye, faire dames, the worlds deare ornaments,
And lively images of heavens light, Let not your beames with such disparage-
ments
Be dimd, and your bright glorie darkned
quight,
But mindfull still of your first countries
sight,

Doe still preserve your first informed
 grace,
 Whose shadow yet shynes in your beauteous
 face.

Loath that foule blot, that hellish fierbrand, Disloial lust, faire Beauties foulest blame, That base affectiones, which your eares would bland, ¹⁷¹

Commend to you by loves abused name;
 But is indeede the bondslave of defame;
 Which will the garland of your glorie marre,
 And quench the light of your bright shyning
 starre.

But gentle love, that loiall is and trew,
 Will more illumine your resplendent ray,
 And adde more brightnesse to your goodly
 hew,

From light of his pure fire, which, by like
 way
 Kindled of yours, your likenesse doth display, ¹⁸⁰

Like as two mirroures, by opposd reflexion, Doe both expresse the faces first impression.

Therefore, to make your beautie more ap-
 peare,

It you behoves to love, and forth to lay
 That heavenly riches which in you ye beare, That men the more admyre their fountaine
 may;

For else what booteth that celestially ray,
 If it in darknesse be enshrined ever,
 That it of loving eyes be vewed never?

But in your choice of loves, this well advize,
 That likest to your selves ye them select, ¹⁹¹
 The which your forms first sourse may sympathize,

And with like beauties parts be inly deekt:
 For if you loosely love without respect,
 It is no love, but a discordant warre, Whose unlike parts amongst themselves do jarre.

For love is a celestially harmonie
 Of likely harts composd of starres concent, Which joyne together in sweete sympathie,
 To worke ech others joy and true content, Which they have harbourd since their first descent ²⁰¹

Out of their heavenly bowres, where they did see

And know ech other here belov'd to bee.

Then wrong it were that any other twaine Should in loves gentle band combyned bee,
 But those whom Heaven did at first ordaine,
 And made out of one mould the more t'
 agree:

For all that like the beautie which they see Streight do not love: for love is not so light, As streight to burne at first beholders sight.

But they which love indeede looke otherwise,
 With pure regard and spotlesse true intent, Drawing out of the object of their eyes ²¹³
 A more refyned forme, which they present Unto their mind, voide of all blemishment;
 Which it reducing to her first perfection, Beholdeth free from fleshes frayle infection.

And then conforming it unto the light,
 Which in it selfe it hath remaining still,
 Of that first sunne, yet sparkling in his sight,
 Thereof he fashions in his higher skill ²²¹ An heavenly beautie to his fancies will,
 And it embracing in his mind entyre, The mirroure of his owne thought doth ad-myre.

Which seeing now so inly faire to be,
 As outward it appeareth to the eye,
 And with his spirits proportion to agree,
 He thereon fixeth all his fantasie,
 And fully setteth his felicitie, Counting it fairer then it is indeede, ²³⁰
 And yet indeede her fairenesse doth exceede.

For lovers eyes more sharply sighted bee
 Then other mens, and in deare loves delight See more then any other eyes can see,
 Through mutuall receipt of beames bright,
 Which carrie privie message to the spright,
 And to their eyes that inmost faire display,
 As plaine as light discovers dawning day.

Therein they see, through amorous eye-glaunces,

Armies of Loves still flying too and fro, ²⁴⁰
 Which dart at them their litle fierie launces:
 Whom having wounded, backe againe they go, Carrying compassion to their lovely foe;
 Who, seeing her faire eyes so sharpe effect, Cures all their sorrowes with one sweete aspect.

In which how many wonders doe they reede
 To their concept, that others never see!

Now of her smiles, with which their soules they feede,
Like gods with nectar in their bankets free, Now of her lookes, which like to cordials bee; ²⁵⁰
But when her words embassade forth she sends,
Lord, how sweete musicke that unto them lends!

Sometimes upon her forehead they behold
A thousand graces masking in delight;
Sometimes within her eye-lids they unfold Ten thousand sweet belgards, which to their
sight
Doe seeme like twinkling starres in frostie
night;
But on her lips, like rosy buds in May,
So many millions of chaste pleasures play.

All those, O Cytherea, and thousands more Thy handmaidens be, which do on thee attend, ²⁶¹
To decke thy beautie with their dainties
store,
That may it more to mortall eyes commend,
And make it more admyr'd of foe and frend;
That in mens harts thou mayst thy throne enstall,
And spred thy lovely kingdome over all.

Then Iö, tryumph! O great Beauties Queene, Advance the banner of thy conquest hie, That all this world, the which thy vassals
beene,
May draw to thee, and with dew fealtie ²⁷⁰
Adore the powre of thy great majestie, Singing this hymne in honour of thy name, Compyld by me, which thy poore liegeman am.

In lieu whereof graunt, O great souveraine, That she, whose conquering beautie doth captive
My trembling hart in her eternall chaine, One drop of grace at length will to me give,
That I her bounden thrall by her may live,
And this same life, which first fro me she
reaved,
May owe to her, of whom I it received. ²⁸⁰

And you, faire Venus dearling, my deare
dread,
Fresh flowre of grace, great goddesse of my
life,

When your faire eyes these fearefull lines shal read,
Deigne to let fall one drop of dew reliefe,
That may recure my harts long pyning
griefe,
And shew what wondrous powre your beauty
hath,
That can restore a damned wight from death.

AN HYMNE OF HEAVENLY LOVE

LOVE, lift me up upon thy golden wings, From this base world unto thy heavens
hight,
Where I may see those admirable things Which there thou workest by thy souveraine
might,
Farre above feeble reach of earthly sight,
That I thereof an heavenly hymne may sing Unto the God of Love, high heavens king.

Many lewd layes (ah, woe is me the more!)
In praise of that mad fit which fooles call love, ⁹
I have in th' heat of youth made heretofore,
That in light wits did loose affection move.
But all those follies now I do reprove,
And turned have the tenor of my string,
The heavenly prayses of true love to sing.

And ye that wont with greedy vaine desire To reade my fault, and wondring at my
flame,
To warme your selves at my wide sparckling
fire, Sith now that heat is quenched, quench my
blame,
And in her ashes shrowd my dying shame:
For who my passed follies now pursewes, ²⁰ Beginnes his owne, and my old fault re-newes.

BEFORE this worlds great frame, in which al things
Are now containd, found any being place, Ere flitting Time could wag his eyas wings About that rightie bound, which doth embrace
The rolling spheres, and parts their houres by space,
That high eternall Powre, which now doth
move
In all these things, mov'd in it selfe by love

It lov'd it selfe, because it selfe was faire;
 (For faire is lov'd;) and of it selfe begot ³⁰
 Like to it selfe his eldest Sonne and Heire, Eternall, pure, and voide of sinfull blot,
 The firstling of his joy, in whom no jot
 Of loves dislike or pride was to be found, Whom he therefore with equall honour
 crownd.

With him he raignd, before all time prescribed,
 In endlesse glorie and immortall might,
 Together with that third from them derived,
 Most wise, most holy, most almightie
 Spright, Whose kingdoms throne no thought of earthly wight ⁴⁰
 Can comprehend, much lesse my trembling
 verse
 With equall words can hope it to reherse.

Yet, O most blessed Spirit, pure lampe of
 light,
 Eternall spring of grace and wisdomes trew, Vouchsafe to shed into my barren spright
 Some little drop of thy celestiall dew, That may my rymes with sweet infuse em-
 brew,
 And give me words equall unto my thought,
 To tell the marveiles by thy mercie wrought.

Yet being pregnant still with powrefull grace, ⁵⁰
 And full of fruitfull love, that loves to get Things like himselfe, and to enlarge his
 race,
 His second brood, though not in powre so
 great,
 Yet full of beautie, next he did beget,
 An infinite increase of angels bright,
 All glistring glorious in their Makers light.

To them the heavens illimitable hight (Not this round heaven, which we from hence behold, Adorn'd with thousand lamps of burning
 light,
 And with ten thousand gemmes of shyning gold) ⁶⁰
 He gave as their inheritance to hold,
 That they might serve him in eternall blis,
 And be partakers of those joyes of his.

There they in their trinall triplicities About him wait, and on his will depend,

Either with nimble wings to cut the skies,
 When he them on his messages doth send,
 Or on his owne dread presence to attend,
 Where they behold the glorie of his light, And caroll hymnes of love both day and night. ⁷⁰

Both day and night is unto them all one,
 For he his beames doth still to them extend,
 That darknesse there appeareth never none; Ne hath their day, ne hath their blisse an
 end,
 But there their termelesse time in pleasure
 spend;
 Ne ever should their happinesse decay,
 Had not they dar'd their Lord to disobay.

But pride, impatient of long resting peace,
 Did puffe them up with greedy bold ambition, That they gan cast their state how to increase ⁸⁰
 Above the fortune of their first condition, And sit in Gods owne seat without commission:
 The brightest angell, even the Child of
 Light,
 Drew millions more against their God to
 fight.

Th' Almighty, seeing their so bold assay, Kindled the flame of his consuming yre,
 And with his onely breath them blew away From heavens light, to which they did aspyre,
 To deepest hell, and lake of damned fyre;
 Where they in darknesse and dread horror dwell, ⁹⁰
 Hating the happie light from which they
 fell.

So that next off-spring of the Makers love,
 Next to himselfe in glorious degree, Degendering to hate, fell from above Through pride; (for pride and love may ill agree)
 And now of sinne to all ensample bee:
 How then can sinfull flesh it selfe assure,
 Sith purest angels fell to be impure?

But that Eternall Fount of love and grace, Still flowing forth his goodnesse unto all,
 Now seeing left a waste and emptie place In his wyde pallace, through those angels fall, ¹⁰⁰
 Cast to supply the same, and to enstall

A new unknowen colony therein, Whose root from earths base groundworke shold begin.

Therefore of elay, base, vile, and next to
nought,
Yet form'd by wondrous skill, and by his
might,

According to an heavenly patterne wrought, Which he had fashiond in his wise fore-
sight,

He man did make, and breathd a living
spright 110

Into his face most beautifull and fayre, Endewd with wisdomes riches, heavenly,
rare.

Such he him made, that he resemble might Himselfe, as mortall thing immortall could;
Him to be lord of every living wight
He made by love out of his owne like mould, In whom he might his mightie selfe be-
hould:

For love doth love the thing belov'd to see,
That like it selfe in lovely shape may bee.

But man, forgetfull of his Makers grace, 120
No lesse then angels, whom he did ensew, Fell from the hope of promist heavenly
place,

Into the mouth of death, to sinners dew,
And all his off-spring into thraldome
threw:

Where they for ever should in bonds re-
maine

Of never dead, yet ever dying paine.

Till that great Lord of Love, which him at first

Made of meere love, and after liked well, Seeing him lie like creature long accurst
In that deepe horror of despeyred hell, 130 Him, wretch, in doole would let no longer
dwell,

But cast out of that bondage to redeeme,
And pay the price, all were his debt extreme.

Out of the bosome of eternall blisse,
In which he reigned with his glorious Syre,
He downe descended, like a most demisse
And abject thrall, in fleshes fraile attyre, That he for him might pay sinnes deadly
hyre,

And him restore unto that happie state 139
In which he stood before his haplesse fate.

In flesh at first the guilt committed was,
Therefore in flesh it must be satisfyde:
Nor spirit, nor angell, though they mar
surpas,
Could make amends to God for mans mis-
gnyde,

But onely man himselfe, who selfe did slyde.
So, taking flesh of sacred virgins wombe, For mans deare sake he did a man become.

And that most blessed bodie, which was borne

Without all blemish or reprochfull blame,
He freely gave to be both rent and torne 150 Of cruell hands, who with despightfull
shame

Revyling him, that them most vile became,
At length him nayled on a gallow tree,
And slew the just by most unjust decree.

O huge and most unspeakeable impression Of loves deepe wound, that pierst the piteous
hart

Of that deare Lord with so entyre affection,
And sharply launching every inner part,
Dolours of death into his soule did dart;
Doing him die, that never it deserved, 160 To free his foes, that from his heast had swerved!

What hart can feele least touch of so sore
launch,

Or thought can think the depth of so deare
wound,

Whose bleeding sourse their streames yet never staunch,

But stil do flow, and freshly still redound,
To heale the sores of sinfull soules unsound,
And cense the guilt of that infected cryme,
Which was enrooted in all fleshly slyme?

O blessed Well of Love! O Floure of Grace!
O glorious Morning Starre! O Lampe of Light! 170

Most lively image of thy Fathers face, Eternall King of Glorie, Lord of Might, Meeke Lambe of God, before all worlds
behight,

How can we thee requite for all this good?
Or what can prize that thy most precious
blood?

Yet nought thou ask'st in lieu of all this
love,

But love of us, for gerdon of thy paine.

Ay me ! what can us lesse then that behove ?
 Had he required life of us againe, Had it beene wrong to aske his owne with
 gaine ? 180
 He gave us life, he it restored lost ;
 Then life were least, that us so litle cost.

But he our life hath left unto us free, Free that was thrall, and blessed that was
 band ;

Ne ought demaunds, but that we loving bee,
 As he himselve hath lov'd us afore hand,
 And bound therto with an eternall band,
 Him first to love, that us so dearely bought,
 And next, our brethren, to his image
 wrought.

Him first to love, great right and reason is,
 Who first to us our life and being gave ; 191
 And after, when we fared had amisse, Us wretches from the second death did save ;
 And last, the food of life, which now we have,
 Even himselve in his deare sacrament,
 To feede our hungry soules, unto us lent.

Then next, to love our brethren, that were
 made
 Of that selfe mould and that selfe Makers
 hand

That we, and to the same againe shall fade,
 Where they shall have like heritage of land,
 How ever here on higher steps we stand ;
 Which also were with selfe same price redeemed 202
 That we, how ever of us light esteemed.

And were they not, yet since that loving
 Lord
 Commaunded us to love them for his sake, Even for his sake, and for his sacred word,
 Which in his last bequest he to us spake, We should them love, and with their needs
 partake ;
 Knowing that whatsoere to them we give,
 We give to him, by whom we all doe live.

Such mercy he by his most holy reede 211 Unto us taught, and to approve it trew, Ensampld it by his most righteous deede, Shewing us mercie, miserable crew !
 That we the like should to the wretches
 shew,

And love our brethren ; thereby to approve How much himselve, that loved us, we love.

Then rouze thy selfe, O Earth, out of thy
 soyle,
 In which thou wallowest like to filthy swyne,
 And doest thy mynd in durty pleasures
 moyle, 220
 Unmindfull of that dearest Lord of thine ;
 Lift up to him thy heavie clouded eyne ;
 That thou his soveraine bountie mayst be-
 hold,
 And read through love his mercies manifold.

Beginne from first, where he enerdled was In simple cratch, wrapt in a wad of hay, Betweene the toylefull ox and humble asse,
 And in what rags, and in how base aray,
 The glory of our heavenly riches lay,
 When him the silly shepherds came to see, Whom greatest princes sought on lowest knee. 231

From thence reade on the storie of his life,
 His humble carriage, his unfaulty wayes, His cancred foes, his fights, his toyle, his
 strife,
 His paines, his povertie, his sharpe assayes Through which he past his miserable dayes, Offending none, and doing good to all,
 Yet being malist both of great and small.

And looke at last, how of most wretched
 wights
 He taken was, betrayd, and false accused ; How with most scornefull taunts, and fell
 despights, 241
 He was revyld, disgrast, and foule abused, How scourgd, how crownd, how buffeted, how brused ;
 And lastly, how twixt robbers crucifyde, With bitter wounds through hands, through feet, and syde.

Then let thy flinty hart, that feeles no paine, Empierced be with pittifull remorse,
 And let thy bowels bleede in every vaine,
 At sight of his most sacred heavenly corse,
 So torne and mangled with malicious forse, And let thy soule, whose sins his sorrows
 wrought, 251
 Melt into teares, and grone in grieved
 thought.

With sence whereof whilst so thy softened spirit
 Is inly toucht, and humbled with meeke zeale.

Through meditation of his endlesse merit,
Lift up thy mind to th' author of thy weale,
And to his souveraine mercie doe appeale; Learne him to love, that loved thee so
deare,
And in thy brest his blessed image beare.

With all thy hart, with all thy soule and mind, ²⁶⁰
Thou must him love, and his behests embrace;
All other loves, with which the world doth blind Weake fancies, and stirre up affections
base,
Thou must renounce, and utterly displace,
And give thy selfe unto him full and free, That full and freely gave himselfe to
thee.

Then shalt thou feele thy spirit so possesse,
And ravisht with devouring great desire Of his deare selfe, that shall thy feeble breast
Inflame with love, and set thee all on fire ²⁷⁰
With burning zeale, through every part entire,
That in no earthly thing thou shalt de-
light,
But in his sweet and amiable sight.

Thenceforth all worlds desire will in thee
dye,
And all earthes glorie, on which men do
gaze, Seeme durt and drosse in thy pure sighted
eye,
Compar'd to that celestiaall beauties blaze, Whose glorious beames all fleshly sense doth daze
With admiration of their passing light, Blinding the eyes and lumining the spright.

Then shall thy ravisht soule inspired bee ²⁸¹
With heavenly thoughts, farre above humane skil,
And thy bright radiant eyes shall plainly
see
Th' idee of his pure glorie present still Before thy face, that all thy spirits shall
fill
With sweete enragement of celestiaall
love,
Kindled through sight of those faire things
above.

AN HYMNE OF HEAVENLY BEAUTIE

RAPT with the rage of mine own ravisht
thought,
Through contemplation of those goodly
sights,
And glorious images in heaven wrought, Whose wondrous beauty, breathing sweet
delights,
Do kindle love in high conceipted sprights,
I faine to tell the things that I behold, But feele my wits to faile, and tongue to
fold.

Vouchsafe then, O Thou most Almighty
Spright,
From whom all guifts of wit and knowledge
flow,
To shed into my breast some sparkling light Of thine eternall truth, that I may show ¹¹
Some litle beames to mortall eyes below Of that immortall Beautie, there with
Thee,
Which in my weake distraughted mynd I
see.

That with the glorie of so goodly sight,
The hearts of men, which fondly here ad-
myre
Faire seeming shewes, and feed on vaine
delight,
Transported with celestiall desyre Of those faire formes, may lift themselves up hyer,
And learne to love with zealous humble dewty ²⁰
Th' Eternall Fountaine of that heavenly Beauty.

Beginning then below, with th' easie vew
Of this base world, subject to fleshly eye, From thence to mount aloft by order dew
To contemplation of th' immortall sky,
Of the soare fauleon so I learne to fly, That flags awhile her fluttering wings beneath,
Till she her selfe for stronger flight can
breath.

Then looke, who list thy gazefull eyes to feed
With sight of that is faire, looke on the frame ³⁰
Of this wyde universe, and therein reed

The endlesse kinds of creatures, which by
name
Thou canst not count, much lesse their natures aime:
All which are made with wondrous wise
respect,
And all with admirable beautie deckt.

First th' earth, on adamantine pillers founded,
Amid the sea, engirt with brasen bands;
Then th' aire, still flitting, but yet firmly bounded
On everie side with pyles of flaming brands, Never consum'd, nor quencht with mortall
hands;
And last, that mightie shining christall wall,⁴⁰ Wherewith he hath encompassed this All.

By view whereof, it plainly may appeare, That still as every thing doth upward
tend,
And further is from earth, so still more
cleare
And faire it growes, till to his perfect end Of purest Beautie it at last ascend: Ayre more then water, fire much more then
ayre,
And heaven then fire appeares more pure and fayre.

Looke thou no further, but affixe thine eye On that bright shyne round still moving masse,
The house of blessed gods, which men call⁵¹
skye,
All sowd with glistring stars more thicke then grasse, Whereof each other doth in brightnesse
passe;
But those two most, which, ruling night
and day,
As king and queene, the heavens empire
sway.

And tell me then, what hast thou ever seene
That to their beautie may compared bee?
Or can the sight that is most sharpe and
keene
Endure their captains flaming head to see?
How much lesse those, much higher in degree,
And so much fairer, and much more then⁶¹
these,
As these are fairer then the land and seas?

For farre above these heavens which here we see,
Be others farre exceeding these in light,
Not bounded, not corrupt, as these same bee,
But infinite in largenesse and in hight, Unmoving, uncorrupt, and spotlesse bright, That need no sunne t' illuminate their spheres,
But their owne native light farre passing theirs.⁷⁰

And as these heavens still by degrees arize, Untill they come to their first movers bound,
That in his mightie compasse doth comprize
And carrie all the rest with him around,
So those likewise doe by degrees redound,
And rise more faire, till they at last arive
To the most faire, where to they all do strive.

Faire is the heaven where happy soules have
place,
In full enjoyment of felicitie, Whence they doe still behold the glorious face⁸⁰
Of the Divine Eternall Majestie; More faire is that where those Ideas on hie Enraunged be, which Plato so admyred, And pure Intelligences from God inspyred.

Yet fairer is that heaven in which doe raine
The soveraine Powres and mightie Poten-
tates,
Which in their high protections doe containe
All mortall princes and imperiall states;
And fayrer yet whereas the royall Seates
And heavenly Dominations are set,⁹⁰
From whom all earthly governance is fet.

Yet farre more faire be those bright Cherubins,
Which all with golden wings are overlight,
And those eternall burning Seraphins,
Which from their faces dart out fierie light; Yet fairer then they both, and much more
bright,
Be th' Angels and Archangels, which attend
On Gods owne person, without rest or end.

These thus in faire each other farre excelling, As to the Highest they approach more neare,¹⁰⁰
Yet is that Highest farre beyond all telling, Fairer then all the rest which there appeare, Though all their beauties joynd together
were:

How then can mortall tongue hope to ex-
 presse
 The image of such endlesse perfectnesse ?

Cease then, my tongue, and lend unto my
 mynd

Leave to bethinke how great that Beautie is,
 Whose utmost parts so beautifull I fynd;
 How much more those essentiall parts of His,

His truth, his love, his wisdome, and his blis, ¹¹⁰

His grace, his doome, his mercy, and his
 might,

By which he lends us of himselfe a sight !

Those unto all he daily doth display,
 And shew himselfe in th' image of his grace, As in a looking glasse, through which he
 may

Be seene of all his creatures vile and base,
 That are unable else to see his face,

His glorious face, which glistereth else so
 bright,

That th' angels selves can not endure his
 sight.

But we fraile wights, whose sight cannot sustaine ¹²⁰

The suns bright beames, when he on us doth shyne,

But that their points rebutted backe againe
 Are dull, how can we see with feeble eyne

The glory of that Majestie Divine, In sight of whom both sun and moone are
 darke,

Compared to his least resplendent sparke ?

The meanes, therefore, which unto us is lent,
 Him to behold, is on his workes to looke,

Which he hath made in beauty excellent,
 And in the same, as in a brasen booke, ¹³⁰

To reade enregistred in every nooke His goodnesse, which his beautie doth declare,

For all thats good is beautifull and faire.

Thence gathering plumes of perfect speculation,

To impe the wings of thy high flying mynd, Mount up aloft, through heavenly contemplation,

From this darke world, whose damps the soule do blynd,

And like the native brood of eagles kynd,

On that bright Sunne of Glorie fixe thine
 eyes, Clear'd from grosse mists of fraile infirmities. ¹⁴⁰

Humbled with feare and awfull reverence, Before the footestoolle of his Majestie, Throw thy selfe downe with trembling innocence,

Ne dare looke up with corruptible eye On the dred face of that great Deity,

For feare lest, if he chauce to looke on
 thee,

Thou turne to nought, and quite confounded
 be.

But lowly fall before his mercie seate, Close covered with the Lambes integrity From the just wrath of his avengefull threate ¹⁵⁰

That sits upon the righteous throne on hy:
 His throne is built upon Eternity,

More firme and durable then steele or brasse Or the hard diamond, which them both doth passe.

His scepter is the rod of Righteousnesse,
 With which he bruseth all his foes to dust,
 And the great Dragon strongly doth re-
 presse,

Under the rigour of his judgement just;
 His seate is Truth, to which the faithfull
 trust;

From whence proceed her beames so pure and bright, ¹⁶⁰

That all about him sheddeth glorious light.

Light farre exceeding that bright blazing sparke,

Which darted is from Titans flaming head,
 That with his beames enlumineth the darke
 And dampish air, wherby al things are red:

Whose nature yet so much is marvelled Of mortall wits, that it doth much amaze
 The greatest wisards which thereon do gaze.

But that immortal light which there doth shine

Is many thousand times more bright, more cleare, ¹⁷⁰

More excellent, more glorious, more divine; Through which to God all mortall actions
 here,

And even the thoughts of men, do plaine
 appeare:

For from th' Eternall Truth it doth proceed, Through heavenly vertue, which her beames doe breed.

With the great glorie of that wondrous light
His throne is all encompassed around, And hid in his owne brightnesse from the
sight
Of all that looke thereon with eyes unsound:
And underneath his feet are to be found ¹⁸⁰ Thunder, and lightning, and tempestuous
fyre,
The instruments of his avenging yre.

There in his bosome Sapiencie doth sit,
The soveraine dearling of the Deity, Clad like a queene in royall robes, most fit For so great powre and peerelesse majesty,
And all with gemmes and jewels gorgeously Adorn'd, that brighter then the starres ap-
peare,
And make her native brightnes seem more
cleare.

And on her head a crowne of purest gold Is set, in signe of highest soverainty; ¹⁹¹
And in her hand a scepter she doth hold,
With which she rules the house of God on
hy,
And menageth the ever-moving sky,
And in the same these lower creatures all,
Subjected to her powre imperiall.

Both heaven and earth obey unto her will,
And all the creatures which they both con-
taine:
For of her fulnesse, which the world doth
fill,
They all partake, and do in state remaine,
As their great Maker did at first ordaine, ²⁰¹
Through observation of her high behest, By which they first were made, and still increast.

The fairenesse of her face no tongue can
tell;
For she the daughters of all wemens race,
And angels eke, in beautie doth excell, Sparkled on her from Gods owne glorious
face,
And more increast by her owne goodly
grace,
That it doth farre exceed all humane
thought,
Ne can on earth compared be to ought. ²¹⁰

Ne could that painter (had he lived yet)
Which pictured Venus with so curious quill That all posteritie admyred it, Have purtrayd this, for all his maistring
skill;
Ne she her selfe, had she remained still,
And were as faire as fabling wits do fayne, Could once come neare this Beauty soverayne.

But had those wits, the wonders of their
dayes,
Or that sweete Teian poet which did spend His plenteous vaine in setting forth her prayse, ²²⁰
Scene but a glims of this which I pretend, How wondrously would he her face commend,
Above that idole of his fayning thought,
That all the world shold with his rimes be fraught!

How then dare I, the novice of his art, Presume to picture so divine a wight, Or hope t' expresse her least perfections
part,
Whose beautie fills the heavens with her
light,
And darkes the earth with shadow of her
sight?
Ah! gentle Muse, thou art too weake and faint, ²³⁰
The pourtraict of so heavenly hew to paint.

Let angels, which her goodly face behold And see at will, her soveraigne praises
sing,
And those most sacred mysteries unfold
Of that faire love of mightie Heavens King.
Enough is me t' admyre so heavenly thing,
And being thus with her huge love possessd,
In th' only wonder of her selfe to rest.

But who so may, thrise happie man him hold Of all on earth, whom God so much doth grace, ²⁴⁰
And lets his owne Beloved to behold:
For in the view of her celestiall face
All joy, all blisse, all happinesse have place, Ne ought on earth can want unto the wight Who of her selfe can win the wishfull sight.

For she out of her secret threasury Plentie of riches forth on him will powre, Even heavenly riches, which there hidden ly

Within the closet of her chastest bowre, ²⁴⁹
 Th' eternall portion of her precious dowre, Which Mighty God hath given to her free,
 And to all those which thereof worthy
 bee.

None thereof worthy be, but those whom
 shee

Vouchsafeth to her presence to receive,
 And letteth them her lovely face to see, Wherof such wondrous pleasures they con-
 ceave,

And sweete contentment, that it doth be-reave

Their soule of sense, through infinite
 delight,
 And them transport from flesh into the
 spright.

In which they see such admirable things,
 As carries them into an extasy, ²⁶¹
 And heare such heavenly notes, and carol-
 ings

Of Gods high praise, that filles the brasen
 sky,

And feele such joy and pleasure inwardly, That maketh them all worldly cares forget,

And onely thinke on that before them
 set.

Ne from thenceforth doth any fleshly sense,
 Or idle thought of earthly things remaine;
 But all that earst seemd sweet seemes now offense,

And all that pleased earst now seemes to paine: ²⁷⁰

Their joy, their comfort, their desire, their
 gaine,

Is fixed all on that which now they see;
 All other sights but fayned shadowes bee.

And that faire lampe, which useth to enflame

The hearts of men with seife consuming
 fyre,

Thenceforth seemes fowle, and full of sin-full blame;

And all that pompe, to which proud minds
 aspyre

By name of honor, and so much desyre, Seemes to them basenesse, and all riches drosse, ²⁷⁹

And all mirth sadnesse, and all lucre losse.

So full their eyes are of that glorious sight,
 And senses fraught with such satietie, That in nought else on earth they can
 delight,

But in th' aspect of that felicitie, Which they have written in their inward ey;

On which they feed, and in their fastened
 mynd

All happie joy and full contentment fynd.

Ah! then, my hungry soule, which long hast
 fed

On idle fancies of thy foolish thought,
 And, with false Beauties flattering bait misled, ²⁹⁰

Hast after vaine deceitfull shadowes
 sought,

Which all are fled, and now have left thee
 nought

But late repentance, through thy follies
 prief;

Ah! ceasse to gaze on matter of thy grief.

And looke at last up to that Sovereaine
 Light,

From whose pure beams al perfect Beauty springs,

That kindleth love in every godly spright, Even the love of God, which loathing brings

Of this vile world and these gay seeming
 things;

With whose sweete pleasures being so possesst, ³⁰⁰

Thy straying thoughts henceforth for ever
 rest.

PROTHALAMION

A SPOUSALL VERSE MADE BY

EDM. SPENSER

IN HONOUR OF THE DOUBLE MARIAGE OF THE TWO HONORABLE & VERTUOUS LADIES, THE LADIE ELIZABETH AND THE LADIE KATHERINE SOMERSET, DAUGHTERS TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE EARLE OF WORCES-TER AND ESPOUSED TO THE TWO WORTHIE GENTLEMEN MASTER HENRY GILFORD, AND MASTER WILLIAM PETER, ESQUYERS

AT LONDON

1596

[The event celebrated in the Prothalamion must have occurred some time after the return of Essex from Cadiz in mid-August, 1596. It would seem to have been a ceremonial visit of the two prospective brides to Essex House, not long before their wedding. They evidently proceeded in barges by the river, probably upstream with the tide from the court at Greenwich, accompanied in the latter part of their route by swarms of those smaller craft which then thronged the main highway of London.

In this poem Spenser has refined upon the stanza-form which he invented for the Epithalamion. He has brought it to virtual uniformity of structure by discarding most of those small diversities of detail between strophe and strophe which, in the earlier poem, mark his first invention. To the late Professor Palgrave this revised form seemed the more delightfully and delicately cadenced. There will probably be those, however, for whom the frank irregularities of the first ode, more felt than distinctly observed, will have the greater charm, will seem not unlike those irregularities that enrich, without disturbing, the orderliness of certain great mediæval façades.

Unlike the stanza of the Faery Queen, these strophes have not found imitators, perhaps because few later poets have united fecundity and elaborateness of art so perfectly as Spenser. One may detect their influence upon Lycidas, but hardly more at large. Other poets of the time contented themselves with shorter or easier forms; and then came the bastard Pindaric ode, which for over a hundred years remained the type specially appropriated to larger lyric themes. In the later 'revivals' they were passed by.]

CALME was the day, and through the trembling ayre Sweete breathing Zephyrus did softly
play,
A gentle spirit, that lightly did delay Hot Titans beames, which then did glyster
fayre:
When I, whom sullein care, Through discontent of my long fruitlesse
stay
In princes court, and expectation vayne
Of idle hopes, which still doe fly away,

Like empty shaddowes, did afflict my brayne, Walkt forth to ease my payne 10
Along the shoare of silver streaming Themmes;
Whose ruty bancke, the which his river hemmes,
Was paynted all with variable flowers,
And all the meades adorud with daintie gemmes,
Fit to decke maydens bowres,
And crowne their paramours,

Against the brydale day, which is not long:

Sweete Themmes, runne softly, till I end my song.

There, in a meadow, by the rivers side,
A flocke of nymphes I chaunced to espy, 20
All lovely daughters of the flood thereby,
With goodly greenish locks all loose untyde,
As each had bene a bryde:
And each one had a little wicker basket,
Made of fine twigs entrayled curiously,
In which they gathered flowers to fill their flasket;

And with fine fingers cropt full feateously
The tender stalkes on hye.
Of every sort, which in that meadow grew,
They gathered some; the violet pallid blew,
The little dazie, that at evening closes, 31
The virgin lillie, and the primrose trew, With store of vermeil roses,
To decke their bridegromes posies

Against the brydale day, which was not long:

Sweete Themmes, runne softly, till I end my song.

With that I saw two swannes of goodly bewe Come softly swimming downe along the lee;

Two fairer birds I yet did never see:
The snow which doth the top of Pindus strew 40

Did never whiter shew, Nor Jove himselve, when he a swan would be

For love of Leda, whiter did appear:
Yet Leda was, they say, as white as he,
Yet not so white as these, nor nothing neare:
So purely white they were,
That even the gentle streame, the which them bare,

Seem'd foule to them, and bad his billowes spare

To wet their silken feathers, least they might

Soyle their fayre plumes with water not so fayre, 50

And marre their beauties bright,
That shone as heavens light,
Against their brydale day, which was not long:

Sweete Themmes, runne softly, till I end my song.

Eftsoones the nymphes, which now had flowers their fill,

Ran all in haste to see that silver brood,
As they came floating on the chrystal flood;
Whom when they sawe, they stood amazed still,

Their wondrous eyes to fill.

Them seem'd they never saw a sight so fayre, 60

Of fowles so lovely, that they sure did deeme

Them heavenly borne, or to be that same payre

Which through the skie draw Venus silver teeme;

For sure they did not seeme

To be begot of any earthly seede,

But rather angels or of angels breede:

Yet were they bred of Somers-heat, they say,

In sweetest season, when each flower and weede

The earth did fresh aray;

So fresh they seem'd as day, 70
Even as their brydale day, which was not long:

Sweete Themmes, runne softly, till I end my song.

Then forth they all out of their baskets drew

Great store of flowers, the honour of the field,

That to the sense did fragrant odours yeild,
All which upon those goodly birds they threw,

And all the waves did strew,

That like old Peneus waters they did seeme,

When downe along by pleasant Tempes shore,

Scattred with flowres, through Thessaly they streeme, 80

That they appeare, through lillies plenteous store,

Like a brydes chamber flore.

Two of those nymphes, meane while, two garlands bound

Of freshest flowres which in that mead they found,

The which presenting all in trim array,
Their snowie foreheads therewithall they crownd,

Whil'st one did sing this lay,

Prepar'd against that day,

Against their brydale day, which was not
long: Sweete Themmes, runne softly, till I end
my song. 90

'Ye gentle birdes, the worlds faire orna-
ment,
And heavens glorie, whom this happie bower

Doth leade unto your lovers blissfull bower, Joy may you have and gentle hearts content

Of your loves couplement:
And let faire Venus, that is Queene of
Love,

With her heart-quelling sonne upon you smile,

Whose smile, they say, hath vertue to remove

All loves dislike, and friendships faultie
guile

For ever to assoile. 100

Let endlesse peace your steadfast hearts accord,

And blessed plentie wait upon your bord;
And let your bed with pleasures chast
abound,

That fruitfull issue may to you afford,

Which may your foes confound,

And make your joyes redound,

Upon your brydale day, which is not long:

Sweete Themmes, run softlie, till I end
my song.'

So ended she; and all the rest around
To her redoubled that her undersong, 110 Which said, their bridale daye should not be long.

And gentle Eccho from the neighbour
ground

Their accents did resound.

So forth those joyous birdes did passe along, Adowne the lee, that to them murmurde
low,

As he would speake, but that he lackt a tong, Yeat did by signes his glad affection show, Making his streame run slow.

And all the foule which in his flood did
dwell

Gan flock about these twaine, that did ex-
cell 120

The rest so far as Cynthia doth shend
The lesser starres. So they, enraged well, Did on those two attend,
And their best service lend,

Against their wedding day, which was not
long: Sweete Themmes, run softly, till I end
my song.

At length they all to mery London came,
To mery London, my most kyndly nurse,
That to me gave this lifes first native sourse;
Though from another place I take my name,
An house of auncient fame. 131

There when they came, whereas those bricky towres,

The which on Themmes brode aged backe doe ryde,

Where now the studious lawyers have their
bowers,

There whylome went the Templer Knights
to byde,

Till they decayd through pride:

Next whereunto there standes a stately
place,

Where oft I gayned giftes and goodly grace Of that great lord which therein went to
dwell,

Whose want too well now feeles my freendles case: 140

But ah! here fits not well

Olde woes, but joyes to tell,

Against the bridale daye, which is not long:

Sweete Themmes, runne softly, till I end
my song.

Yet therein now doth lodge a noble peer,
Great Englands glory and the worlds wide
wonder,

Whose dreadfull name late through all Spaine did thunder,

And Hercules two pillors standing neere

Did make to quake and feare.

Faire branch of honor, flower of chevalrie, 150

That fillest England with thy triumphes
fame,

Joy have thou of thy noble victorie,

And endlesse happinesse of thine owne
name

That promiseth the same:

That through thy prowesse and victorious
armes

Thy country may be freed from forraine
harmes;

And great Elisaes glorious name may ring Through all the world, fil'd with thy wide
alarmes,

Which some brave Muse may sing

To ages following, 160
 Upon the brydale day, which is not long: Sweete Themmes, runne softly, till I end
 my song.

From those high towers this noble lord issuing,
 Like radiant Hesper when his golden hayre
 In th' ocean billowes he hath bathed fayre, Descended to the rivers open vewing,
 With a great traine ensuing.
 Above the rest were goodly to bee seene Two gentle knights of lovely face and feature,
 Beseming well the bower of anie queene, 170

With gifts of wit and ornaments of nature, Fit for so goodly stature:
 That like the twins of Jove they seem'd in
 sight,
 Which decke the bauldricke of the heavens
 bright.
 They two, forth pacing to the rivers side, Received those two faire brides, their loves delight,
 Which, at th' appointed tyde,
 Each one did make his bryde, Against their brydale day, which is not
 long: Sweete Themmes, runne softly, till I end
 my song. 180

COMMENDATORY SONNETS

[The first of these sonnets was probably no more than a friendly address, not meant for publication. The others were contributed, by way of compliment, to various books of the time.

II. The first of four sonnets prefixed to 'Nennio, or A Treatise of Nobility, etc. Written in Italian by that famous Doctor and worthy Knight, Sir John Baptista Nenna of Bari. Done into English by William Jones, Gent.' 1595.

III. The first of three sonnets prefixed to the 'Historie of George Castriot, surnamed Scanderbeg, King of Albanie: Containing his famous actes, etc. Newly translated out of French into English by Z. I. Gentleman.' 1596.

IV. The first of three sonnets and a huitain prefixed to 'The Commonwealth and Government of Venice. Written by the Cardinall Gaspar Contareno, and translated out of Italian into English by Lewes Lewkenor, Esquire.' 1599.]

HARVEY, the happy above happiest men I read: that, sitting like a looker-on Of this worldes stage, doest note with

The sharpe dislikes of each condition:
 And, as one carelesse of suspition, Ne fawnest for the favour of the great;
 Ne fearest foolish reprehension Of faulty men, which daunger to thee

Like a great lord of peerelesse liberty; Lifting the good up to high Honours

 Unto the type of true nobility,
 And not by painted shewes, and titles vaine Derived farre from famous auncestrie, Behold them both in their right visnomy Here truly pourtray'd as they ought to be,
 And striving both for termes of dignitie,

WHEREFORE doth vaine Antiquitie so vaunt Her ancient monuments of mightie peeres, And old heröes, which their world did daunt
 With their great deedes, and fild their childrens eares?
 Who, rapt with wonder of their famous

 Admire their statues, their colossoes great,
 Their rich triumphall arcks which they did
 raise,
 Their huge pyramids, which do heaven

 Lo! one, whom later age hath brought to Matchable to the greatest of those great:

Great both by name, and great in power

 And meriting a meere triumphant seate.

 Upreard her buildinges to the threatned

 And second Babel, tyrant of the West, Her ayry towers upraised much more high.
 But, with the weight of their own surque-

 They both are fallen, that all the earth did

 And buried now in their own ashes ly; Yet shewing by their heapes how great

 But in their place doth now a third appeare, Fayre Venice, flower of the last worlds

 But farre exceeds in policie of right.
 Yet not so fayre her buildinges to behold

APPENDIX

VERSES FROM THE THEATRE OF 1569

[It is only within the last decade that the history of Van der Noot's Theatre has been known in full. Since the accounts of it in the various standard biographies of Spenser, therefore, are more or less misleading, it may be given here in some detail. The facts are set forth at length in a Flemish monograph, published at Antwerp in 1889, 'Leven en Werken van Jonker Jan Van der Noot, door Ang. Vermeylen.' The author of this excellent study is not, however, to be held responsible for all the conclusions that are set down here.

In 1569 there was published in London a small book with a big title, which ran: 'A Theatre, wherein be represented as wel the miseries and calamities that follow the voluptuous worldlings as also the greates joyes and plesures which the faithfull do enjoy. An argument both profitable and delectable to all that sincerely love the Word of God. Devised by S. John vander Noodt.' The dedication bore the date of May 25. Its author was a Flemish refugee,—a wealthy patrician of Antwerp, who, becoming disastrously prominent among the Calvinists of his native city, had in 1567 fled from the Spanish authorities into England. There, in 1568, he had composed a bitter pamphlet against Rome, which he had put forth, first in Flemish, and then, toward the close of that year, in what was to all the more cultivated of his compatriots a second mother tongue, French. Some seven months later, desirous probably of securing the widest possible audience, he arranged for the translation of his book from French into English, a tongue of which he had no literary control. The title given above is that of this third edition.

The kernel of the book was poetry: first, a translation by Clément Marot of one of Petrarch's canzoni ('Standomi un giorno solo alla finestra') under the title of 'Des Visions de Pétrarque'; second, the Songe of Joachim Du Bellay, with the omission of sonnets vi, viii, xiii, and xiv; third, four sonnets of his own composition (for he was a poet of distinguished abilities) the matter of which was drawn from the Apocalypse. For the first edition of his book he had translated the French of Marot and Du Bellay into Flemish; for the second, he had, of course, let the French stand. Of his own sonnets he had made two versions, one Flemish and one French. Then there was a long prose commentary upon these various 'visions,' likewise of his own composition in the two tongues.

In the 1569 volume this commentary is given as 'translated out of French into Englishe by Theodore Roest.' In that part of it which refers to the visions of Petrarch we read, 'I [by implication, Roest] have out of the Brabants speache turned them into the Englishe tongue;' in that part which refers to the visions of Du Bellay, 'I have translated them out of Dutch into English:' concerning the translation of the Apocalypse sonnets, we are left to make our own inferences. Comparison of texts, however, shows clearly that the translator of all this poetry, rendered it, as the prose was rendered, direct from the French: what is said about 'the Brabants speache' and 'Dutch' is pure mystification. Furthermore, if these translations from Du Bellay and Petrarch be compared with 'The Visions of Bellay' (p. 125) and 'The Visions of Petrarch, formerly translated' (p. 128), which were published under Spenser's name in 1591, it becomes clear that the latter are not independent renderings of the same French originals, but a mere literary recast of the English verses of 1569. The irregular stanzas of the Petrarch series are reduced to formal sonnets, and so are the blank verse poems of the Bellay series. Such changes as have been made are purely with a view to this transformation. Since it is improbable that even in youth Spenser should thus carefully have made over the work of another man, a mere translator, and that, having done so, his recast should have survived to be published years later in his name, the inference seems to be clear that the verses in the Theatre of 1569 are his.

By way of counter-argument, it has been pointed out that, whereas the translation of 1569 is sound and accurate, the acknowledged work of Spenser in this field ('The Ruins of Rome' and the four sonnets that were omitted in the Theatre, but rendered in the later 'Visions of Bellay') is very loose, and reveals at times exceedingly imperfect acquaintance with French, acquaintance so imperfect that he cannot be thought capable of the excellent versions in the Theatre. To argue thus, however, is to forget, among other things, the conditions under which, in 1569, he may be presumed to have done his work. For the prose of the Theatre, Van der Noot had found a capable translator in Roest; but, he being apparently no versifier, it was necessary to find some one else for the poetry. If this assistant knew French well, so much the better; if he did not, he could be helped by his chief; in any case, his work would be super-vised, to secure accuracy. What was chiefly necessary was that he should be able to turn good English verse. For this 'job' whoever had charge of the book employed Spenser, then no more than a bright schoolboy, about to go up to the university. He was in no way a principal in the main undertaking; when the volume came out, therefore, it nowhere gave his name. He had done his work and received his pay: there was no need to acknowledge his services.]

EPIGRAMS

I

BEING one day at my window all alone,
So many strange things hapned me to see,
As much it grieveth me to thinke thereon.
At my right hande, a hinde appearde to me,
So faire as mought the greatest god delite:
Two egre dogs dyd hir pursue in chace,
Of whiche the one was black, the other white.
With deadly force, so in their cruell race
They pinchte the haunches of this gentle beast, That at the last, and in shorte time, I spied,
Under a rocke, where she (alas!) opprest,
Fell to the grounde, and there untimely dide.
Cruell death vanquishing so noble beautie Oft makes me waile so harde a destinie.

II

AFTER at sea a tall ship dyd appere, Made all of heben and white ivorie;
The sailes of golde, of silke the tackle were.
Milde was the winde, calme seemed the sea to
be:
The skie eche where did shew full bright and
faire.
With riche treasures this gay ship fraighted
was.
But sodaine storme did so turmoyle the aire,
And tumbled up the sea, that she, alas!
Strake on a rocke that under water lay.
O great misfortune! O great grieffe! I say, Thus in one moment to see lost and drownde
So great riches, as lyke can not be founde.

III

THEN heavenly branches did I see arise,
Out of a fresh and lusty laurell tree Amidde the yong grene wood. Of Paradise
Some noble plant I thought my selfe to see, Suche store of birdes therein yshrouded were,
Chaunting in shade their sundry melodie.
My sprites were ravisht with these pleasures
there.
While on this laurell fixed was mine eye,
The skie gan every where to overcast,
And darkned was the welkin all aboute;
When sodaine flash of heavens fire outbrast,
And rent this royall tree quite by the roote.
Which makes me much and ever to complaine,
For no such shadow shall be had againe.

IV

WITHIN this wood, out of the rocke did rise
A spring of water mildely romblyng downe, Whereto approached not in any wise
The homely shepherde, nor the ruder clowne, But many Muses, and the Nymphes withall, That sweetely in accorde did tune their voice

Unto the gentle sounding of the waters fall:
The sight wherof dyd make my heart re-joyce.
But while I toke herein my chiefe delight,
I sawe (alas!) the gaping earth devour
The spring, the place, and all cleane out of sight.
Whiche yet agreves my heart even to this houre.

V

I SAW a phœnix in the wood alone,
With purple wings and crest of golden hew;
Strange birde he was; wherby I thought anone,
That of some heavenly wight I had the vew:
Untill he came unto the broken tree
And to the spring that late devoured was.
What say I more? Eche thing at length we
see
Doth passe away: the phœnix there, alas!
Spying the tree destroyde, the water dride, Himselfe smote with his beake, as in dis-
daine,
And so forthwith in great despite he dide.
For pitie and love my heart yet burnes in paine.

VI

At last, so faire a ladie did I spie,
That in thinking on hir I burne and quake.
On herbes and floures she walked pensively, Milde, but yet love she proudly did forsake.
White seemed hir robes, yet woven so they
were,
As snowe and golde together had bene wrought.
Above the waste a darke cloude shrouded hir,
A stinging serpent by the heele hir caught;
Wherewith she languisht as the gathered floure;
And well assurde she mounted up to joy.
Alas! in earth so nothing doth endure,
But bitter grieffe, that dothe our hearts anoy.

VII

MY song, thus now in thy conclusions, Say boldly that these same six visions Do yelde unto thy lorde a sweete request, Ere it be long within the earth to rest.

SONETS

I

It was the time when rest, the gift of gods, Sweetely sliding into the eyes of men, Doth drowne in the forgetfulness of slepe
The carefull travailes of the painefull day:
Then did a ghost appeare before mine eyes On that great rivers banke that runnes by Rome,
And calling me then by my propre name,
He bade me upwarde unto heaven looke.
He cride to me, and 'Loe! (quod he) beholde

What under this great temple is containde, Loe! all is nought but flying vanitie.
So I, knowing the worldes unstedfastnesse, Sith onely God surmountes the force of tyme,
In God alone do stay my confidence.

II

ON hill, a frame an hundred cubites hie I sawe, an hundred pillers eke about,
All of fine diamant decking the front,
And fashiond were they all in Dorike wise.
Of bricke, ne yet of marble was the wall,
But shining christall, which from top to base
Out of deepe vaulte threw forth a thousand rayes Upon an hundred steps of purest golde.
Golde was the parget: and the sielyng eke Did shine all scaly with fine golden plates.
The floor was jaspis, and of emeraude, O worldes vainesesse! A sodein earthquake, loe!

Shaking the hill even from the bottome deepe, Threwe downe this building to the lowest stone.

III

THEN did appeare to me a sharped spire
Of diamant, ten feete eche way in square, Justly proportionde up unto his height,
So hie as mought an archer reache with sight.
Upon the top therof was set a pot Made of the mettall that we honour most.
And in this golden vessell couched were
The ashes of a mightie emperour.
Upon foure corners of the base there lay,
To beare the frame, foure great lions of golde:
A worthie tombe for such a worthie corps.
Alas! nought in this worlde but grieffe endures.
A sodaine tempest from the heaven, I saw,
With flashe stroke downe this noble monument.

IV

I SAW raise'd up on pillers of ivorie, Whereof the bases were of richest golde,
The chapters alabaster, christall frises,
The double front of a triumphall arke.
On eche side portraide was a victorie,
With golden wings in habite of a nymph,
And set on hie upon triumphing chaire
The auncient glorie of the Romane lordes.
The worke did shewe it selfe not wrought by
man,

But rather made by his owne skilfull hande
That forgeth thunder darts from Jove his sire.
Let me no more see faire thing under heaven, Sith I have seene so faire a thing as this,
With sodaine falling broken all to dust.

V

THEN I behelde the faire Dodonian tree, Upon seven hilles throw forth his gladsome
shade,
And conquerers bedecked with his leaves
Along the banks of the Italian streame.
There many auncient trophees were erect,
Many a spoile, and many goodly signes,
To shewe the greatnesse of the stately race,
That erst descended from the Trojan blond.
Ravisht I was to see so rare a thing,

When barbarous villaines, in disordred heape, Outraged the honour of these noble bowes.
I hearde the tronke to grone under the wedge.
And since I saw the roote in hie disdain Sende forth againe a twinne of forked trees.

VI

I SAW the birde that dares beholde the sunne, With feeble flight venture to mount to heaven:
By more and more she gan to trust hir wings; Still folowing th' example of hir damme.
I saw hir rise, and with a larger flight Surmount the toppes even of the hiest hilles, And pierce the cloudes, and with hir wings to reache

The place where is the temple of the gods.
There was she lost, and sodenly I saw Where tombling through the aire in lompe of
fire,
All flaming downe she fell upon the plaine.
I saw hir bodie turned all to dust,
And saw the foule that shunnes the cherefull
light

Out of hir ashes as a worme arise.

VII

THEN all astomd with this nightly ghost,
I saw an hideous body big and strong:
Long was his beard, and side did hang his hair,
A grisly forehed and Saturnelike face.
Leaning against the belly of a pot,
He shed a water, whose outgushing streame Ran flowing all along the creekie shoare Where once the Troyan duke with Turnus fought.

And at his feete a bitch wolfe did give sucke To two yong babes. In his right hand he bare
The tree of peace, in left the conquering palme, His head was garnisht with the laurel bow.
Then sodenly the palme and olive fell,
And faire greene laurel witherd up and dide.

VIII

HARD by a rivers side, a wailing nimphe, Folding hir armes with thousand sighs to heaven,

Did tune hir plaint to falling rivers sound, Renting hir faire visage and golden haire.
'Where is (quod she) this whilome honored
face?

Where is thy glory and the auncient praise,
Where all worldes hap was reposed, When erst of gods and man I worshippt was?
Alas! suffside it not that civile bate Made me the spoile and bootie of the world, But this new Hydra, mete to be assailde Even by an hundred such as Hercules, With seven springing heds of monstrous crimes,
So many Neroes and Calignulaes Must still bring forth to rule this croked shore?'

IX

UPON a hill I saw a kindled flame, Mounting like waves with triple point to heaven,
Which of incense of precious ceder tree
With balmelike odor did perfume the aire.
A bird all white, well fetherd on hir wings,

Hereout did flie up to the throne of gods,
 And singing with most pleasant melodie
 She climbed up to heaven in the smoke.
 Of this faire fire the faire dispersed rayes Threw forth abroad a thousand shining leames;
 When sodain dropping of a golden shoure Gan quench the glystering flame. O grevous change!

That which erstwhile so pleasaunt scent did yelde
 Of sulphure now did breathe corrupted smel.

x

I SAW a fresh spring rise out of a rocke, Clere as christall against the sunny beames,
 The bottome yellow like the shining land,
 That golden Pactol drives upon the plaine.
 It seemed that arte and nature strived to joyne
 There in one place all pleasures of the eye.
 There was to heare a noise alluring slepe Of many accordes more swete than mermaids
 song.

The seates and benches shone as ivorie;
 An hundred nymphes sate side by side about;
 When from nie hilles a naked rout of faunes
 With hideous cry assembled on the place, Which with their feete uncleane the water fouled,
 Threw down the seats, and drove the nimphs to flight.

xi

AT length, even at the time when Morpheus
 Most truly doth appeare unto our eyes, Wearie to see th' inconstance of the heavens,
 I saw the great Typhæus sister come.
 Hir head full bravely with a morian armed,
 In majestie she seemde to matche the gods.
 And on the shore, harde by a violent streame,
 She raise a trophee over all the worlde.
 An hundred vanquisht kings gronde at hir feete, Their armes in shamefull wise bounde at their backes.

While I was with so dreadfull sight afrayde,
 I saw the heavens warre against hir tho;
 And seing hir striken fall with clap of thunder, With so great noyse I start in sodaine wonder.

i

I SAW an ugly beast come from the sea, That seven heads, ten crounes, ten hornes did
 beare,

Having theron the vile blaspheming name.
 The cruell leopard she resembled much:
 Feete of a beare, a lions throte she had.
 The mightie Dragon gave to hir his power.
 One of hir heads yet there I did espie, Still freshly bleeding of a grievous wounde.
 One cride aloud. 'What one is like (quod he)
 'This honoured Dragon, or may him withstande?'
 And then came from the sea a savage beast, With Dragons speche, and shewde his force by
 fire,

With wondrous signes to make all wights adore
 The beast, in setting of hir image up.

ii

I SAW a woman sitting on a beast Before mine eyes, of orange colour hew:
 Horror and dreadfull name of blasphemie Filde hir with pride. And seven heads I saw;
 Ten hornes also the stately beast did beare.
 She seemde with glorie of the scarlet faire,
 And with fine perle and golde puft up in heart.
 The wine of hooredome in a cup she bare.
 The name of mysterie writ in hir face;
 The bloud of martyrs dere were hir delite.
 Most fierce and fell this woman seemde to me.
 An angell then descending downe from Heaven With thondring voice cride out aloud, and
 sayd,
 'Now for a truth great Babylon is fallen.'

iii

THEN might I see upon a white horse set
 The faithfull man with flaming countenance;
 His head did shine with crounes set therupon;
 The Worde of God made him a noble name.
 His precious robe I saw embroud with bloud.
 Then saw I from the heaven on horses white,
 A puissant armie come the selfe same way.
 Then cried a shining angell, as me thought, That birdes from aire descending downe on earth Should warre upon the kings, and eate their flesh.

Then did I see the beast and kings also Joynyn their force to slea the faithfull man.
 But this fierce hatefull beast and all hir traine Is pitillesse throwne downe in pit of fire.

iv

I SAW new Earth, new Heaven, sayde Saint John.

And loe! the sea (quod he) is now no more.
 The holy citie of the Lorde from hye Descendeth, garnisht as a loved spouse.
 A voice then sayde, 'Beholde the bright abode
 Of God and men. For he shall be their God, And all their teares he shall wipe cleane away.'
 Hir brightnesse greater was than can be founde.
 Square was this citie, and twelve gates it had.
 Eche gate was of an orient perfect pearle,
 The houses golde, the pavement precious stone.
 A lively streame, more cleere than christall is, Ranne through the mid, sprong from triumphant seat.
 There growes lifes fruite unto the Churches
 good.

THE ORIGINAL CONCLUSION TO BOOK III OF THE FAERY QUEEN

[The following stanzas are the original conclusion to Book III of the Faery Queen, as published in 1590. When Spenser came to push on with his tale, he decided that, for the sake of continuity, the reunion of Scudamour and Amoret had better be postponed. He therefore substituted the three stanzas that now conclude the book, and laid his first ending by, with the purpose, probably, of using it when the lovers should at last be brought together. This event falls at the close of canto ix of Book IV. There there is both room and need for some account of the meeting. It is more than likely that the poet meant to fit his stanzas to this new context, but, with typical carelessness, in the end left the gap unfilled.]

XLIII

At last she came unto the place, where late
She left Sir Scudamour in great distresse, Twixt dolour and despight halfe desperate Of his loves succour, of his owne redresse,
And of the hardie Britomarts successe:
There on the cold earth him now thrown she
found,
In wilfull anguish, and dead heavinesse,
And to him cald; whose voices knowne sound Soone as he heard, himself he reared light from ground.

XLIV

There did he see, that most on earth him joyd,
His dearest love, the comfort of his dayes, Whose too long absence him had sore annoyd,
And wearied his life with dull delayes:
Straight he upstart from the loathed layes,
And to her ran with hasty egernesse,
Like as a deare, that greedily embayes
In the coole soile, after long thirstinesse, Which he in chace endured hath, now nigh breathlesse.

XLV

Lightly he clipt her twixt his armes twaine,
And streightly did embrace her body bright,
Her body, late the prison of sad paine,
Now the sweet lodge of love and deare delight:
But she, faire lady, overcome quight
Of huge affection, did in pleasure melt,
And in sweete ravishment pourd out her spright:
No word they spake, nor earthly thing they felt,
But like two senceles stocks in long embrace-ment dwelt.

XLVI

Had ye them seene, ye would have surely
thought,
That they had bene that faire hermaphrodite, Which that rich Romane of white marble
wrought,
And in his costly bath causd to bee site:
So seemd those two, as growne together quite,
That Britomart, halfe envying their blesse,
Was much empassiond in her gentle sprite,
And to her selfe oft wisht like happinesse:
In vaine she wisht, that fate n'ould let her yet possesse.

XLVII

Thus doe those lovers with sweet countervayle
Each other of loves bitter fruit despoile.
But now my teme begins to faint and fayle,
All woxen weary of their journall toyle:
Therefore I will their sweatie yokes assoyle,
At this same furrowes end, till a new day:

And ye, faire swayns, after your long turmoyle, Now cease your worke, and at your pleasure
play:
Now cease your worke; tomorrow is an holy
day.

LETTERS FROM SPENSER TO GABRIEL HARVEY

[The following letters were printed in 1580, with others from Harvey to Spenser, in two independent volumes, each bearing the imprint of Bynneman. (1) 'Three proper and wittie familiar Letters: lately passed betwene two Universitie men: touching the earthquake in Aprill last, and our English reformed versifying.' (2) 'Two other very commendable Letters, of these same mens writing: both touching the foresaid artificiall versifying, and certain other particulars. More lately delivered unto the Printer.' The first of Spenser's letters appeared in the later volume; the second, together with the letter of Harvey from which an extract is here given, in the earlier.]

To the Worshipfull his very singular good friend, Maister G. H., Fellow of Trinitie Hall in Cambridge.

GOOD MASTER G.: I perceive by your most courteous and frendly letters your good will to be no lesse in deed than I alwayes esteemed. In recompence wherof, think, I beseech you, that I will spare neither speech, nor wryting, nor aught else, whensoever and wheresoever occasion shal be offered me: yea, I will not stay till it be offered, but will seeke it, in al that possibly I may. And that you may perceive how much your counsel in al things prevaileth to with me, and how altogether I am ruled and over-ruled thereby, I am now determined to alter mine owne former purpose, and to subscribe to your advizement: being notwithstanding resolved stil to abide your farther resolution. My principal doubts are these. First, I was minded for a while to have intermitted the uttering of my writings; leaste by over-much cloying their noble eares, I should gather a contempt of my self, or else seeme rather for to gaine and commoditie to doe it, for some sweetness that I have already tasted. Then also me seemeth the work too base for his excellent lordship, being made in honour of a private personage unknowne, which of some yl-willers might be upbraided, not to be so worthie as you knowe she is; or the matter not so weightie that it should be offered to so weightie a personage; or the like. The selfe former title stil liketh me well ynough, and your fine addition no lesse. If these and the like doubties maye be of importaunce in your seeming, to frustrate any parte of your advice, I beseeche you without the leaste selfe love of your own purpose, counsell me for the beste: and the rather doe it faithfullye and carefully, for that, in all things, I attribute so muche to your judgement that I am evermore content to adnihilate mine owne determinations, in respecte thereof. And indeede, for your selfe to, it sitteth with you 40 now to call your wits and senses together (which are alwaies at call) when occasion is so fairely offered of estimation and preferment. For, whiles the yron is hote, it is good striking, and minds of nobles varie, as their estates. Verum ne quid durius.

I pray you bethinke you well hereof, good Maister G., and forthwith write me those two or three special points and caveats for the nonce, De quibus in superioribus illis mellitissimis 50 longissimisq; litteris tuis. Your desire to heare of my late beeing with hir Majestie muste dye in it selfe. As for the two worthy gentlemen, Master Sidney and Master Dyer, they have me, I thanke them, in some use of familiarity: of whom and to whome what speache passeth for youre credite and estimation I leave your selfe to conceive, having alwayes so well conceived of my unfained affection and zeale towards you. And nowe they have 60 proclaimed in their ἀρεωπαγῶ a generall surceasing and silence of balde rymers, and also of the verie beste to: in steade whereof, they have, by authoritie of their whole senate, prescribed certaine lawes and rules of quantities of English sillables for English verse: having had thereof already great practise and drawn mee to their faction. Newe bookes I heare of none, but only of one, that writing a certaine booke called The Schoole of Abuse, and dedicating it to Maister 70 Sidney, was for hys labor scorned: if at leaste it be in the goodnesse of that nature to scorne. Suche follie is it, not to regarde aforehande the inclination and qualitie of him to whome wee dedicate oure bookes. Suche mighte I happily incurre, entituling My Slomber, and the other pamphlets, unto his honor. I meant them rather to Maister Dyer. But I am, of late, more in love wyth my Englishe versifying than with ryming: whyche I should have done long since, if I would then have followed your coun- 81 cell. Sed te solum jam tum suspicabar cum Aschamo sapere: nunc aulam video egregios alere poetas Anglicos. Maister E. K. hartily desireth to be commended unto your worshippe: of whome what accompte he maketh, youre selfe shall hereafter perceive by hys paynefull and dutifull verses of your selfe.

Thus muche was written at Westminster yesternight: but comming this morning, beeyng the sixteenth of October, to Mystresse Kerkes, to have it delivered to the carrier, I re- 92 ceived youre letter, sente me the laste weeke: whereby I perceive you otherwhiles continue your old exercise of versifying in English: whych glorie I had now thought shoulde have bene onely ours heere at London and the court.

Truste me, your verses I like passingly well, and envy your hidden paines in this kinde, or rather maligne and grudge at your selfe, that woulde not once imparte so muche to me. But once or twice, you make a breache in Mais- 103 ter Drants rules: quod tamen condonabimus tanto poetæ, tuæque ipsius maxime in his rebus autoritati. You shall see, when we meete in London, (whiche when it shall be, certifiye us,) howe fast I have followed after you in that course: beware, leaste in time I overtake you. Veruntamen te solum sequar, (ut sæpenumero sum professus,) nunquam sane assequar, dum vivam. And nowe requite I you with the like, not with the verie beste, but with the 113 verie shortest, namely with a few Iambickes. I dare warrant, they be precisely perfect for the feete (as you can easily judge) and varie not one inch from the rule. I will imparte yours to Maister Sidney and Maister Dyer, at my nexte going to the courte. I praye you, keepe mine close to your selfe, or your verie entire friendes, Maister Preston, Maister Still, and the reste. 121

Iambicum Trimeterum.

Unhappie Verse, the witnesse of my unhappie state,

Make thy selfe fluttring wings of thy fast flying

Thought, and fly forth unto my love, whersoever she be:

Whether lying reastlesse in heavy bedde, or else

Sitting so cheerelesse at the cheerfull boorde, or else

Playing alone carelesse on hir heavenlie virginals.

If in bed, tell hir, that my eyes can take no reste:

If at boorde, tell hir, that my mouth can eate no meate:

If at hir virginals, tel hir, I can heare no mirth. 130

Asked whye? say: Waking love suffereth no sleepe:

Say, that raging love dothe appall the weake stomacke:

Say, that lamenting love marreth the musickall.

Tell hir, that hir pleasures were wonte to lull me asleepe:

Tell hir, that hir beautie was wonte to feede mine eyes:

Tell hir, that hir sweete tongue was wonte to make me mirth.

Nowe doe I nightly waste, wanting my kindly reste:

Nowe doe I dayly starve, wanting my lively foode:

Nowe doe I alwayes dye, wanting thy timely mirth.

And if I waste, who will bewaile my heavy chauce? 140

And if I starve, who will record my cursed end?

And if I dye, who will saye: This was Inmerito?

I thought once agayne here to have made an end, with a heartie Vale, of the best fashion: but loe! an ylfavoured myschaunce. My last farewell, whereof I made great accompt, and much marvelled you should make no mention thereof, I am nowe tolde, (in the Divel's name,) was thorough one mans negligence quite forgotten, but should nowe undoubtedly have 150 beene sent, whether I hadde come or no. Seing it can now be no otherwise, I pray you take all together, wyth all their faultes: and nowe I hope you will vouchsafe mee an answeare of the largest size, or else I tell you true, you shall bee verry deepe in my debte: notwythstanding thys other sweete, but shorte letter, and fine, but fewe verses. But I woulde rather I might yet see youre owne good selfe, and receive a reciprocal farewell from your owne sweete 160 mouth.

I was minded also to have sent you some English verses, or rymes, for a farewell; but, by 282 my troth, I have no spare time in the world to thinke on such toys, that, you knowe, will demaund a freer head than mine is presently. I beseeche you by all your curtesies and graces, let me be answered ere I goe; which will be (I hope, I feare, I thinke) the next weeke, if I can be dispatched of my Lorde. I goe thither, as sent by him, and maintained most what of 290 him: and there am to employ my time, my body, my minde, to his Honours service. Thus, with many superhartie commendations and recom- mendations to your selfe, and all my friendes with you, I ende my last farewell, not thinking any more to write unto you before I goe: and withall committing to your faithfull credence the eternall memorie of our everlasting friend- ship, the inviolable memorie of our unspotted friendshippe, the sacred memorie of our 300 vowed friendship: which I beseech you continue with usuall writings, as you may, and of all things let me heare some newes from you: as gentle Master Sidney, I thanke his good worship, hath required of me, and so promised to doe againe. Qui monet, ut facias, quod jam facis, you knowe the rest. You may alwayes send them most safely to me by Mistresse Kerke, and by none other. So once againe, and yet once more, farewell most hartily, mine owne good Mas- 310 ter H., and love me, as I love you, and thinke upon poore Immerito, as he thinketh upon you.

Leycester House, this 5 [16?] of October, 1579.

Per mare, per terras, Vivus mortuusque, Tuus Immerito.

To my long approved and singular good frende, Master G. H.

GOOD MASTER H.: I doubt not but you have some great important matter in hande, which al this while restraineth your penne, and wonted readinesse in provoking me unto that wherein your selfe nowe faulte. If there bee any such thing in hatching, I pray you hartily, lette us knowe, before al the worlde see it. But if happily you dwell altogether in Justinians courte, and give your selfe to be devoured of secrete studies, as of all likelyhood you doe, yet at 10 least imparte some your olde or newe, Latine or Englishe, eloquent and gallant poesies to us, from whose eyes, you saye, you keepe in a manner nothing hidden. Little newes is here stirred: but that olde greate matter still depending. His Honoure never better. I thinke the earth- quake was also there wyth you (which I would gladly learne) as it was here with us; over- throwing divers old buildings and peeces of churches. Sure very strange to be hearde 20 of in these countries, and yet I heare some saye (I knowe not howe truely) that they have knowne the like before in their dayes. Sed quid vobis videtur magnis philosophis? I like your late Englishe hexameters so exceedingly well, that I also enure my penne sometime in that kinde: whyche I fynd, indeede, as I have heard you often defende in worde, neither so harde, nor so harsh, that it will easily and fairely yeelde it selfe to oure moother tongue. For the onely 30 or chiefest hardnesse, whych seemeth, is in the accent: whyche sometime gapeth, and as it were yawneth ilfavouredly, comming shorte of that it should, and sometime exceeding the measure of the number: as in carpenter, the middle sil- lable being used shorte in speache, when it shall be read long in verse, seemeth like a lame gosling, that draweth one legge after hir: and heaven, beeing used shorte as one sillable, when it is in verse, stretched out with a diastole, 40 is like a lame dogge that holdes up one legge. But it is to be wonne with custome, and rough words must be subdued with use. For why, a Gods name, may not we, as else the Greekes, have the kingdome of oure owne language, and measure our accents by the sounde, reserv- ing the quantitie to the verse? Loe! here I let you see my olde use of toying in rymes, turned into your artificial straightnesse of verse by this tetrasticon. I beseech you tell me your 50 faucie, without parcialitie.

See yee the blindfolded pretie god, that feathered archer,

Of lovers miseries which maketh his bloodie
game?

Wote ye why his moother with a veale hath covered his face?

Trust me, least he my loove happely chaunce to beholde.

Seeme they comparable to those two which I translated you ex tempore in bed, the last time we lay together in Westminster?

That which I eate, did I joy, and that which I greedily gorged :

As for those many goodly matters leaft I for others. 60

I would hartily wish, you would either send me the rules and precepts of arte which you observe in quantities, or else followe mine, that Master Philip Sidney gave me, being the very same which Master Drant devised, but enlarged with Master Sidneys own judgement, and augmented with my observations, that we might both accorde and agree in one: leaste we overthrowe one another, and be overthrowen of the rest. Truste me, you will hardly beleewe what 70 greate good liking and estimation Maister Dyer had of your Satyricall Verses, and I, since the viewe thereof, having before of my selfe had special liking of Englishe versifying, am even nowe aboute to give you some token, what and howe well therein I am able to doe: for, to tell you truth, I minde shortly, at convenient leysure, to sette forth a booke in this kinde, whyche I entitle Epithalamion Thamesis, whyche booke I dare undertake will be very so profitable for the knowledge, and rare for the invention and manner of handling. For in setting forth the marriage of the Thames, I shewe his first beginning, and offspring, and all the country that he passeth thorough, and also describe all the rivers throughout Englande, whyche came to this wedding, and their right names, and right passage, &c. A worke, beleewe me, of much labour: wherein, notwithstanding, Master Holinshed hath muche furthered and so advantaged me, who therein hath bestowed singular paines, in searching oute their firste heades and sourses, and also in tracing and dogging oute all their course, til they fall into the sea.

*O Tite, siquid ego,
Ecquid erit pretij?*

But of that more hereafter. Nowe, my Dreames and Dying Pellicane being fully finished (as I partely signified in my laste letters) and presently to bee imprinted, I wil in hande forthwith with my Faery Queene, whyche I praye you hartily send me with all expedition, and your frendly letters, and long expected judgement wythal, whyche let not be shorte, but in all pointes suche as you ordinarily use and I extraordinarily desire. Multum vale. Westminster. Quarto Nonas Aprilis, 1580. Sed, amabo te, meum Corculum tibi se ex animo commendat plurimum: jamdiu mirata, te nihil 110 ad literas suas responsi dedisse. Vide, quæso, ne id tibi capitale sit: mihi certe quidem erit, æque tibi hercle impune, ut opinor. Iterum vale, et quam volēs sæpe.

Yours alwayes to commaunde, IMMERITO.

Postscripte.

I take best my Dreames shoulde come forth alone, being growen by meanes of the Glosse (running continually in maner of a paraphrase) full as great as my Calendar. Therin be some 120 things excellently, and many things wittily, discoursed of E. K. and the pictures so singularly set forth and purtrayed, as if Michael Angelo were there, he could (I think) nor amende the beste, nor reprehende the worst. I knowe you woulde lyke them passing wel. Of my Stemmata Dudleiana, and especially of the sundry apostrophes therein, addressed you knowe to whome, muste more advisement be had, 129 than so lightly to sende them abroad: howbeit, trust me (though I doe never very well,) yet in my owne fancie, I never dyd better: Veruntamen te sequor solum: nunquam vero assequar.

Extract from Harvey's Reply.

But ever and ever, me thinkes your great Catoes Ecquid erit pretij, and our little Catoes Res age quæ prosunt, make suche a buzzing and ringing in my head, that I have little joy to animate and encourage either you or him [his small brother] to goe forward, unlesse ye might make account of some certaine ordinarie wages, or at the leastwise have your meate and drinke for your dayes workes. As for my selfe, howsoever I have toyed and trifled heretofore, I 10 am now taught, and I trust I shall shortly learne (no remedie, I must of meere necessitie give you over in the playne field) to employ my travayle and tyme wholly or chiefly on those studies and practizes that carrie, as they saye, meate in their mouth, having evermore their eye uppon the title De pane lucrando, and their hand uppon their halfpenny. For, I pray now, what saith Master Cuddie, alias you know who, in the tenth Æglogue of the foresaid famous new Calendar?

Piers, I have piped earst so long with payne,
That all myne oten reedes been rent and wore,
And my poore Muse hath spent her spared
store,

Yet little good hath got, and much lesse gayne.
Such pleasaunce makes the grasshopper so poore, And ligge so layde, when winter doth her strayne.

The dapper ditties, that I woont devise,
To feede youthes fancie, and the flocking fry,
Delighten much: what I the bett forthy? 30
They han the pleasure, I a selender prize.
I beate the bushe, the birdes to them doe flye, What good thereof to Cuddy can arise?

But Master Collin Cloute is not every body, and albeit his olde companions, Master Cuddy and Master Hobbinnoll, be as little beholding to their Mistresse Poetrie, as ever you wist, yet he peradventure, by the meanes of hir speciall favour, and some personall priviledge, may happely live by Dying Pellicanes, and purchase great 40 landes and lordshippes with the money, which his Calendar and Dreames have, and will affourde him. Extra jocum, I like your Dreames passingly well; and the rather, because they savour of that singular extraordinarie veine and invention, whiche I ever fancied moste, and in a manner admired onely in Lucian, Petrarche, Aretine, Pasquill, and all the most delicate and fine conceited Grecians and Italians: (for the Romanes to speake of are but verye ciphers in so this kinde:) whose chiefest endeavour and drifte was, to have nothing vulgare, but, in some respects or other, and especially in lively hyperbolicall amplifications, rare, quaint, and odde in every point, and, as a man woulde saye, a degree or two, at the leaste, above the reache and compasse of a common schollers capacitie. In whiche respects notwithstanding, as well for the singularitie of the manner as the divinitie of the matter, I hearde once a divine preferre 60 Saint Johns Revelation before al the veriest metaphysicall visions and jollyest conceited dreames or extasies that ever were devised by one or other, howe admirable or superexcellent soever they seemed otherwise to the worlde. And truely I am so confirmed in this opinion, that when I bethinke me of the verie notablest and moste wonderful propheticall or poetical vision that ever I read, or hearde, me seemeth the proportion is so unequall, that there hardly appeareth any semblance of comparison: no 71 more in a manner (specially for poets) than doth betweene the incomprehensible wisdome of God and the sensible wit of man. But what needeth this digression betweene you and me? I dare saye you will holde your selfe reasonably well satisfied, if your Dreames be but as well esteemed of in Englande as Petrarches Visions be in Italy: whiche, I assure you, is the very 79 worst I wish you. But see how I have the arte memorative at commaundement. In good faith, I had once again nigh forgotten your Faerie Queene: howbeit, by good chaunce, I have nowe sent hir home at the laste, neither in better nor worse case than I founde hir. And must you of necessitie have my judgement of hir in deede? To be plaine, I am voyde of al judgement, if your Nine Comædies, wherunto, in imitation of Herodotus, you give the names of the nine Muses, (and in one mans fansie not unworthily), 90 come not neerer Ariostoes comedies, eyther for the finenesse of plausible elocution, or the rarenesse of poetical invention, than that Elvish Queene doth to his Orlando Furioso, which, notwithstanding, you will needes seeme to emulate, and hope to overgo, as you flatly professed your self in one of your last letters. Besides that you know, it hath bene the usual practise of the most exquisite and odde wittes in all nations, and specially in Italie, rather to shewe 100 and advance themselves that way, than any other: as namely, those three notorious dyscoursing heads, Bibiena, Machiavel, and Aretine did, (to let Bembo and Ariosto passe,) with the great admiration and wonderment of the whole countrey: being, in deede, reputed matchable in all points, both for conceyt of witte, and eloquent decyphering of matters, either with Aristophanes and Menander in Greek, or with Plantus and Terence in Latin, or with any 110 other in any other tong. But I wil not stand greatly with you in your owne matters. If so be the Faerye Queene be fairer in your eie than the Nine Muses, and Hobgoblin runne away with the garland from Apollo, marke what I saye: and yet I will not say that I thought, but there an end for this once, and fare you well, till God or some good aungell putte you in a better minde.

A LIST OF REJECTED READINGS

For the various publications of Spenser the following texts have been adopted as standard:—

The Shepheardes Calender, 1579.
Complaints, 1591.
The Faerie Queene, I-III, 1596 (but with the spelling of 1590).
The Faerie Queene, IV-VI, 1596.
The Faerie Queene, VII (Cantos on Mutability), 1609.
Daphnaida, 1591.

Colin Clouts Come Home Again and Astrophel, 1595.
Amoretti and Epithalamion, 1595.
Foure Hymnes, 1596.
Prothalamion, 1596.
Van der Noot's Theatre, 1569.
Letters, 1580.

Whenever a reading given by these texts has been departed from, it is recorded in the following list, together with the substitute adopted. Other variants are ignored, except for incidental purposes; as are evident misprints (unless these have some glimmering of sense or the support of another editor) and (except occasionally) changes in punctuation. In each case, the first reading given is that which has been adopted, the second is that which has been rejected.

It should be remembered that different copies of the same edition not infrequently give different readings. It may well be, therefore, that the present list will be found to conflict here and there with others more authoritative. Such differences will hardly be of importance, except for bibliographical controversy.

 34 Glosse 38. a Dane. Old editions = the Dane, by confusion with next line.
 37 August 84. thy (1597): 1579 = my.
 37 104. curelesse. Collier's emendation for carelesse of old editions.
 41 September 145. yeed. 1579, 1591, 1597 = yeeld; 1611 = yead.
 43 Glosse 59. The dates are omitted in old editions; 1579 leaves a space for them.
 45 October 79. thy (1591, 1597): 1579 = the.
 45 97. Cud. (1591, 1597). In 1579 there is no indication of change in speaker.
 46 October Glosse 68. Arcadian. 1579 = Aradian; 1591, 1597, 1611 = Arabian.

COMPLAINTS

- 67 Ruines of Time 551. which (1611): 1591 = with.
 69 675. worldes. Old editions = worlds. Cf. Mother Hubberds Tale 87, Epithalamion 290.
 78 Tears of the Muses 600. living (1611): 1591 = loving.
 85 Virgils Gnat 406. fluttering (1611): 1591 = flattering, which is contradicted by folle them upbraydes.
 86 511. Rhætean (1611): 1591 = Rhetæan. The Latin is 'Rhætei litoris ora.' 87 575. billowes. Old editions = billowe, but the next line gives them.
 91 Mother Hubberds Tale 87. worldes (1611): 1591 = worlds. Cf. Ruines of Time 675, Epithalamion 290.
 94 308. winges. Old editions = wings. Cf. l. 87.
 98 648. at all. 1591 drops at.
 103 1025. lord. Old editions = lords.
 108 Ruines of Rome iv, 6. The old giants. 1591 = Th'oldgiants; 1611 = The giants old. In Spenser's text, the is often, before a vowel, contracted to th', when the metre unmistakably demands the full form. Cf. F. Q. Bk. V, c. iii, st. 11.
 111 xv, 14. To have become. 1591 = To become; 1611 (in attempted emendation of metre) Now to become. The French 'N'estre plus rien' suggests the reading adopted.

 111 xviii, 5. ornaments. Old editions = ornament. The French has 'ornements.' 114 xxx, 8. stackes (1611): 1591 = stalckes.
 118 Muopotmos 196. Dull (1611). Not in 1591.
 121 370. framde craftilie (1611): 1591 = did silyly frame.
 124 Visions of the Worlds Vanitie viii, 12. native (1611): 1591 = natures.
 125 The Visions of Bellay ii, 8. On. 1591 & 1611 = One.
 125 iv, 1. pillours. 1591 & 1611 = pillowes. 1569 = pillers.
 128 The Visions of Petrarch iii, 1. Then (1569): 1591 = The. The French original begins Après.
 129 vii, 1. behold. 1591, 1611 = beheld.

THE FAERIE QUEENE

- 136 A Letter of the Authors. Together with the Commendatory Verses and the Dedicatory Sonnets, this letter is placed, in 1590, at the close of the volume, for the reason that it was written while the work was in press, as the date 'January, 1589' (modern style 1590) denotes. In 1596, when the enlarged poem appeared in two volumes, the letter and the verses were left where they had been, at the close of the first. It has seemed better to follow modern usage by placing them at the outset.
 137 162. vi. Ephes. Old editions = v. Ephes.
 145 Bk. I, c. i, st. 4, l. 5 f. For the colon after throw the early editions give a comma, and for the comma after mournd a colon. The interchange adopted makes better sense. For the use of a colon between strictly correlative clauses, see c. iv, st. 16, where the early editions give one after call (l. 5).
 148 st. 28. passed (1590): 1596 = passeth.
 156 c. ii, st. 29. him thither (1590): 1596 drops him.
 157 st. 40. unweeing (1590): 1596 = unweening.
 163 c. iii, st. 34. spurd (1590): 1596 = spurnd.
 166 c. iv, st. 12. a queene (1590): 1596 drops a.
 166 st. 16. glitter and (1590): 1596 = glitter and.
 167 st. 20, l. 3. From (1590): 1596 = For.
 171 c. v, st. 1. did he (1590): 1596 drops he.
 176 st. 41. nigh weary (1590): 1596 = high weary.
 180 c. vi, st. 15. Or Bacchus (1590): 1596 = Of Bacchus.
 191 c. vii, st. 48. ye (1590): 1596 = you. A typical example of numerous variants in 1596. It is simply inconceivable that, having once written ye, Spenser should have substituted, deliberately, you, which half spoils the line.
 195 c. viii, st. 21. his forces (Church). Old editions = their forces.
 196 st. 27. equall eye (1590): 1596 = equall eyes. Cf. c. ix, st. 47.
 198 st. 41. and helmets (1590): 1596 drops and.

- PAGE
 198 st. 44. dislike. Old editions = delight, which spoils the obvious sense of the passage, and which was obviously caught from the preceding line. The substitute was suggested by Daniel's Delia liv: — 'Like as the lute delights or else dislikes, As is his art that plays upon the same, etc.' 201 c. ix, st. 18. as pledges (1590): 1596 = the pledges.
 206 st. 53. feeble (1590): 1596 = seely.
 209 c. x, st. 20. Dry-shod . . . tway. This line first appears in the folio of 1609.
 211 st. 36. Their gates (1609): 1590, 1596 = There gates. call in comers by. 1590, 1596 = call in comers by.
 213 st. 50. quoth she (1590): 1596 = quoth he.
 214 st. 52. Brings (1609): 1590, 1596 = Bring.
 215 st. 61. peaceably thy (1590): 1596 = peaceably to thy.
 215 st. 62. they' are (1590): 1596 drops they'.
 215 st. 64. doen nominate (1590): 1596 = doen then nominate.
 217 c. xi, st. 8. vaste (1590): 1596 = wast.
 220 st. 27. vaunt (1590): 1596 = daunt.
 221 st. 37. yelled (1609): 1590, 1596 = yelded.
 This and several other misprints have been recorded only because they are deliberately adopted by Dr. Grosart.
 223 st. 51. the deawy (1590): 1596 = her deawy.
 226 c. xii, st. 16. pleasure (1590): 1596 = pleasures.
 227 st. 21. that dawning day is drawing (1590): 1596 = the dawning day is dawning.
 227 st. 28. her (1590): 1596 = his.
 229 st. 40. His heart (1590): 1596 = Her heart.
 231 Bk. II, c. i, st. 8. with faire (1590): 1596 = with a faire.
 234 st. 31. handling (1590): 1596 = handing.
 236 st. 39. dolour (1590): 1596 = labour.
 236 st. 40. gore (1590): 1596 = gold.
 236 st. 44. avenging (1590): 1596 = revenging, a change that clogs the verse.
 238 st. 59. equall (1590): 1596 = evill.
 240 c. ii, st. 7. pray (Collier). Old editions = chace, caught from the line below.
 240 st. 9. whose (1590): 1596 = those.
 242 st. 21. cald (1590): 1596 = calth.

 246 c. iii, st. 4. glory he (1590): 1596 = glory vaine.
 246 st. 9. From that (1590): 1596 = For that.
 249 st. 28. sport. For rhyme. Old editions = play.

NOTES

The system of reference is that used in the Glossary. The numbers go in pairs, in which the first (of heavier type) stands for the page, the second for the line, stanza, or sonnet number on that page. Thus, 97, 570 = p. 97, line 570 (in Mother Hubberds Tale); 326, 6 = p. 326, stanza vi (in The Faerie Queene, Bk. III, c. 1); 730, 67 = p. 730, sonnet LXVII (in the Amoretti). Occasionally, where there is no number, the title is given in brief. Thus, 141, Grey = the sonnet to Lord Grey prefixed to The Faerie Queene (on p. 141). One exception is to be remarked: in notes upon The Faerie Queene or any of the sonnet series, the number of the stanza or sonnet which contains the word or passage commented upon is given in Roman numerals, instead of Arabic.

He had in mind to indicate the marriage of Poëana, and simply mistook her lover.

The equinoctial points were first fixed in the time of Hipparchus, since which time they have gone back nearly thirty degrees, which is the space occupied by each sign in the zodiac, so that the sun is now in the constellation Aries at the period of the year when he was formerly in Taurus, in Taurus when he was formerly in Gemini, etc.' (Hillard).
 503. vii. He is declyned : 'This refers to the diminution of the obliquity of the ecliptic, by which the sun recedes from the pole, and approaches the equator' (Hillard). Spenser or his printer has substituted thirty for thirteen.

- 509, xi. Who as they . . . A villaine to them came : Church suggests (for Who) Tho = Then; Morris prints When. But the construction with pleonastic who is very common in the poem. Cf. 541, 37 (l. 2), 583, 4 (l. 6), 187, 20 (l. 5), 186, 11 (l. 1).

- iii. In those passages of the Orlando Furioso (xxx, 84 ff., xxxii, 10 ff.) which Spenser imitates in this canto, Bradamante is awaiting Ruggiero at her home in the castle of Montalbano. It would be difficult to say where Spenser imagines Britomart to be. When she parts from Arthegall (Bk. IV, c. vi, st. 46) she joins Scudamour in his search for Amoret. She is present at their reunion (Bk. IV, c. ix), the last we hear of her till now. Now she is waiting for Arthegall — somewhere, in a castle, alone. It is part of the charm of Faery Land that we should not much care where she may be.

104. Old Father Mole. v. n. 665, 36.
- 108 ff. Mulla: the Awbeg, a stream which, rising to the north of Kilcolman in the Balla-

- houra Mountains, sweeps a wide course to the west and south and east past Buttevant (whose old name was Kilnemullah), till, to the south of Kilcolman, it joins the Bregoge, which flows down from the same mountains, in the north-east, to meet it. Between them they almost describe a rough circle about Kilcolman. After the junction, the Awbeg turns south and empties into the Blackwater, in Spenser's day commonly called Broadwater.
118. So hight, etc.: 'Bregog' is Irish for 'false, deceitful.'
- 689, 156. Thestylis: Spenser's friend in the Irish civil service, Lodowick Bryskett.
159. of friendship. v. n. 688, 96.
- 690, 245. Triton: This line supplied the conclusion to Wordsworth's famous sonnet 'The world is too much with us.' Craik suggests that Triton is meant for Howard of Effingham, Proteus (l. 248) for Hawkins.
274. mightie white rocks: Spenser attributes to the west coast the more celebrated cliffs of the south and east.
282. Like to an horne, etc.: Cornwall. Spenser and Raleigh sailed, probably from Cork, around Land's End, to Penzance or perhaps Plymouth.

340. the circlet of a turtle: the iridescent band about a dove's neck.
342. Phebes garland: the moon-rainbow.
351. humane: human.
366. fynd: invent. Cf. 302, 42.
380. There is, etc.: The reference of almost every pastoral name in this list has been disputed.
- Harpalus*: perhaps Thomas Sackville, Lord Buckhurst, author of the noble Induction to the Mirror for Magistrates. After the sonnet prefixed to the Faery Queen (p. 142), Spenser would hardly omit Buckhurst from the list, and his social eminence would naturally entitle him to first place. In 1591 he was fifty-five years old (for poetical purposes age began earlier in those days), and had served the Queen most actively in various distinguished offices for over twenty years.
382. Corydon: Fleay suggests Sir Edward Dyer, founder, with Sidney, of the Areopagus. Spenser could hardly omit him, and his eminence might well place him next to Buckhurst. 'Meanly waged,' then, would signify 'indifferently rewarded'—as by not being yet knighted, an honor which he did not receive till 1596.
384. Alcyon: Sir Arthur Gorges, for whom Daphnida was written. His verse, for the most part, has remained in manuscript.
- 692, 392. Palin: Thomas Challoner, a writer of pastorals (?).

416. a new shepherd: Samuel Daniel, who about 1590 became tutor to the son of the Countess of Pembroke, Spenser's friend and patroness. 'That well tuned song' is Delia, of which some sonnets appeared surreptitiously in 1591, the authorized edition in 1592. In 1592 appeared also The Complaint of Rosamond, alluded to in l. 427.
434. Amyntas: Ferdinando Stanley, Lord Strange, who in 1593 became fifth Earl of Derby and who died early in 1594. v. Amaryllis, l. 564 ff. and note.
444. Action: Formerly accepted as Shakespeare, but now more commonly as Michael Drayton, who in 1593 published Idea, Rowland's Sacrifice to the Nine Muses, inspired largely by the Shepherd's Calendar, also the Legend of Pierce Gaveston. Line 447 would then refer to his heroic pseudonym, Rowland.
449. Astrofell: Sidney.

560. primrose: the first or chief rose, the paragon.
- 564 ff. The husband of Alice Spencer (v. n. Amyntas, l. 434) died in 1594. She remained a widow till 1600, when she married Sir Thomas Egerton, the patron of Donne. It was in her honor that Milton composed his Arcades, about 1633.
- 694, 572. Flavia: not yet identified.
574. Candida: also unidentified.
580. closure: enclosure.
622. furious insolence: inspired ecstasy.
634. each where: everywhere. Cf. 214, 54.
- 695, 696. fained forgerie: false invention.

- 700, ASTROPHEL, 1. borne in Arcady : in allusion to Sidney's pastoral romance, the Arcadia.
22. weetingly : i. e. those who were beguiled were aware of the beguilement, and yet were beguiled.

- 728, LVIII. By her, etc. : This heading probably belongs to LIX, which is a retort to LVIII.
- 729, LX, 1-4. The planetary 'yeare' to which Spenser refers is apparently the period of 'restitution,' that during which a planet, leaving a given position with regard to the sun, will return to that same position ; the period, in other words, during which the revolutions of the planet in its epicycle and of the sun in its orbit will bring both back to the same relative position (of course, only approximate). For Mars, Ptolemy reckons this period at 79 years. Had Spenser, then, written 'four score,' he would have been exact enough for his purpose ; but at Kileolman he was not likely to have access to astronomical tables.

9. is woven all about : Most modern editions change about (the reading of all the early texts) to above, for the sake of rhyme; but the sense requires about. Morris conjectures 'is all about ywove.'
- LXXII, 10. mantleth. v. n. 594, 32.
- 732, LXXV, 1. the strand : the beach at Youghal (?)

- LXXVII, 6. unvalued : invaluable.

- contrasting the material heavens, which he chooses to call the house of the gods, with the immaterial heavens of the empyrean (l. 64 ff.), the peculiar abode of God. Such mingling of pagan and Christian elements is surely natural enough in a neo-Platonic poem.

A CATALOGUE OF PERSONS, PLACES, ANIMALS, AND THINGS CONCERNED IN OR CONNECTED WITH THE ACTION OF THE FAERY QUEEN
 ACCOMPANIED BY BRIEF ALLEGORICAL EXPLANATIONS

[This catalogue is not meant to include all heralds, men-at-arms, attendants, etc., who merely fill the back stage of the poem, nor all romance 'properties' used in the staging. Neither does it take account of the 'chronicle of Briton kings' in canto x of Book II, and similar passages. It is meant to include whoever and whatever in the story proper has a name, function, or definite meaning.

The allegorical explanations are necessarily short, scattering, and more or less incomplete. They cannot pretend to vie with connected and systematic schemes of interpretation.

Cambridge Editions

THE Cambridge Editions have hitherto been composed of complete one-volume editions of major English and American poets. The careful and scholarly editing attached to each volume has made the Cambridge name a byword in household and school libraries.

Now, after long consideration, the publishers have decided to add a number of prose writers to this imposing gallery of Cambridge poets. Each prose volume will contain the selected works of one man, chosen because his writings have had a continuing impact on present-day thinking. By the same token, contemporary writers will not be considered for this series, until there has been time for a later generation to test the value of what they wrote.

Outstanding scholars, with a demonstrated ability to write, will select and edit these editions with a comprehensive introduction and biographical sketch of each author. THE WORKS OF THOREAU, selected and edited by Henry Seidel Canby, is the first volume to be published. It sets the standard for each succeeding volume that will occupy a place on the Cambridge bookshelf.

Every volume will appear in a binding of attractive and enduring proportions, designed for the bookshelf rather than the pocket.

Spenser

Next to Shakespeare, Edmund Spenser was the supreme poet of Elizabethan England. Since Chaucer's time, England had produced no major writers. Spenser's Shepherd's Calendar, first published in 1579, proved that the English language could once again become a medium for great poetic expression.

The Cambridge Edition contains the complete poetic works of Edmund Spenser, including his monumental tribute to Queen Elizabeth, the Faerie Queene.
